Indeed I have been told by an officer of the American army, who is no stranger to Indian battles, that Walter Scott's description of the battle of "Beal Au Daine," from which I have ventured to make the above extract, would suit very well for that of any battle with the Indians, by changing a few names, and substituting plumes for bonnets, bayonets for spears, &c.

Be that as it may, the Indians on this occasion were again broken, routed, and forced to jump into the river. Many were killed on the bank, and many more in the stream. Our aged friend Cornplanter, chief of the Senecas, a young man, saved himself by swimming, as did several others.

After they had crossed the river, Brady was standing on the bank wiping his rifle—an Indian, exasperated at the unexpected defeat, and disgraceful retreat of his party, and supposing himself now safe from the well known and abhorred enemy of his race, commenced a species of conversation with him in broken English, which we call blackguarding—calling Brady and his men cowards, squaws, and the like;—and putting himself in such attitudes as he probably thought would be most expressive of his utter contempt of them. When the main army arrived, a canoe was manned, and Brady and a few men crossed to where the Indian had been seen. They found blood on the ground, and had followed it but a short distance till the Indian jumped up, struck his breast, and said, 'I am a man.' It was Brady's wish to take him prisoner, without doing him further harm. The Indian continuing to repeat, 'I am a man,'—'Yes,' said a Irishman who was along—'Be my sowl, you're a purty boy'—and Before Brady could arrest the blow, sunk his tomahawk into the Indian's brain."

CHAPTER LIII.

INDIANA IN THE WAR OF 1861—HISTORY OF REGIMENTS OR COMPANIES—ROSTER ROLLS—INDIANA IN THE MEXICAN WAR—INCIDENTS OF THE WAR OF 1814.

NOTE.—In preparing the roster of men in the War of the Rebellion, we have taken the best information we could get, not depending upon the records, but obtaining information from members of the companies now living. Finding it impossible to obtain dates of enlistment, we copy dates of muster, from Bates' History Pennsylvania Volunteers, and we are indebted to it for most of the dates of discharge and muster out. Where we differ with standard authorities in regard to what became of men, we take the statement of survivors, who vouch for the correctness of our statement. We have tried in the same manner to separate Indiana county names from companies partially recruited in the county. We have received communications from over one hundred, in reply to advertisements, yet we fear there are more who did not respond, and whose names do not appear on the rolls. There is no way to obtain the list except the plan we have pursued, and those companies have most complete report, whose surviving members helped us most. We have tried to give every man his just credit for service rendered, and where we fail, it is because we could not obtain the desired information. Thanks are due many of the officers and members of companies for assistance, amongst whom we are very much indebted to Capt. J. S. Nesbit, Capt. H. K. Sloan, Lieut. J. M. Sutton, Lieut. A. C. Braeghler, Capt. J. A. Cunningham, John Feit, J. J. Palmer, R. B. Carroll, John Ebey, W. R. Black, Esq., David S. Ake, Lieut. J. M. Bruce, W. S. Shields, M. D., also to A. S. Thompson, of Signal Corps.

38TH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—9TH RESERVES.

THIS regiment embraced a few Indiana county men, a roll of whom we give in the general list. Mr. Joseph F. Robinson tells us that the county was represented in the battles of Drainsville, Mechanicsville, Gaines Mill, Newmarket, Cross Roads, Malvern Hill, Bull Run (2d), South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Bristoe Station, and Mine Run, and the three veterans also were in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna and Bethesda, and subsequent campaigns of the war.

It is presumable that the men who passed through all of this service were wounded some time, but while our roll does not show it, we have the evidence of their service in the hard fought battles of the war, and while they have not sought honor or fame, are none the less deserving of the warmest gratitude of all good people. Some of the bravest and best of men fill "unknown" graves. All that was required of the soldier was to well perform the part assigned him, and the order of the General was of value only when enforced by the soldiers in the ranks, and the honor or fame of the one cannot be separated from the duty and bravery of the other, and around the transparent light of leadership of the General in chief let us weave a garland of duties and sufferings of the private soldier.

40TH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—11TH RESERVES.

Of this justly celebrated regiment, Indiana county furnished the men, officers and all, for companies B and E, over thirty men for Co. A, fifteen for Co. D, thirty-five or more for Co. I.

These were among the early companies formed in the county, and were made up largely of hardy sons of farmers and lumbermen.

The regiment was organized at Pittsburgh, Pa., Thomas F. Gallagher, Col.; James R. Porter, Lieut. Col., and Samuel M. Jackson, Major. Of these, Lieut. Col. Porter was of Indiana county, but he resigned before the regiment went into active service, and the county was not represented by a field officer until the appointment of Capt. D. S. Porter as Lieutenant Colonel in May, 1863.

On the 24th of July the regiment proceeded to Harrisburg, and were furnished arms by the State; reached Baltimore the next day, and Washington on the 26th; was mustered into the United States service 29th and 30th, and soon after went into camp at Tennallytown. The arms of the State were exchanged for those furnished by the Government, and camp duty, drill, and detail work on the defenses of Washington ensued.

In September the regiment had its initiation to the destructive features of the war in receiving a few shots from a rebel battery at Great Falls, on the Potomac.

During the stay at winter camp the men seemed anxious for the more active campaign work, and a friend visiting the regiment remarked it. Col. Gallagher is reported to have said to some of the men that, before the war closed, they would be fully as anxious to avoid a fight, and did say to the friend named, in substance, this: "I expect a severe war. You see here a thousand men; I think there will not five hundred of these return home." Prophetic words! and how true they were! At the reunion in 1879, the invitations to survivors did not exceed three hundred, and the death rate since the war is not large. The invitation included recruits of 1862–63 and '64, as well as original men.

Early in the spring of 1862, the regiment moved to the vicinity of Fairfax cemetery, having participated in the cold and weary marches in the rain in the first movement towards Manassas.

The reserve division was assigned to the first corps, and moved to Catlett's Station, and thence to Falmouth, then detached from its corps, ordered to the Peninsula and attached to General John Fitz Porter's corps, reaching the Chickahominy river on the 25th of June, where it was ordered on picket duty in immediate presence of the enemy; on the next day receiving fire from rebel batteries, while some portions of the Union line were hotly engaged in what is known as the battle of Mechanicsville, and covered the rear of its brigade in the retrograde movement that ensued. On the next day at Gaines' Mill the regiment, except company B,* Captain Porter, was hotly engaged, with orders to hold the line at all hazards, which they did until all but one regiment on both flanks had fallen back. Then too late for safety, it, with the New Jersey regiment, attempted to do so, but the rebels had them nearly surrounded, and by an impetuous charge encircled them so that a half hundred only escaped, the balance alive surrendering. To have attempted to fight it out would have been madness inexcusable. A weary march to Richmond in the night, and after being exhibited to the citizens of Richmond, the men were transferred to Sandy, Shadeless and Belle Isle until exchanged, and sent to join the army at Harrison's Landing.

In the meantime Captain Porter gathered the scattered men of the regiment, and with company B formed two companies, placing one under command of Lieutenant Hannibal K. Sloan, and these two companies represented the regiment in the battle at Charles City Cross Roads. They tell an incident of the night before the battle there; that they were instructed that a gap must be left for a rebel force to pass through, and that it did seem to pass directly through the Union line. This was most probably true, in the fact of passing by in the intricate winding of the roads near White Oak Swamp, the rebels may have passed round a detached force without discovering it. It is further stated that some of the Union men, not fully aware of the condition of affairs, came near discovering themselves to the enemy. These facts are from those whose who were on the ground.

The battle of Charles City Cross Roads was a terrible one for the remnant of the regiment. They went in with 106 muskets, and in the loss in wounded, killed and prisoners, came out with about fifty. Corporal Charles Shambaugh, of company B, captured a battle flag from the enemy, and Sergeant H. C. Howard had a lively bayonet fight.

The regiment, reduced in numbers by loss in dead, wounded, sick, and detail for guard at Craney Island Hospital was moved via Falmouth, Kelley's Ford and Warrenton to Gainesville, was attached again to McDowell's corps, and participated in the second Bull Run campaign, and on the 29th and 30th of August were hotly engaged with the enemy, on the evening of the 30th receiving a destructive fire from the enemy on the flank, were compelled to fall back. Many brave men fell. Lieutenant Coder, of company E, was wounded. The loss in the regiment was about seventy. The reserve corps now moved into Maryland under the command of General George G. Meade, and the next engagement of the regiment was at South Mountain, charging up those rough and ragged heights under a terrible fire from the well-posted enemy, with varied success and terrible loss. The attack ended in success, and the enemy was finally driven from the position in confusion. Colonel Gallagher was wounded; and of Indiana county officers, Captain Nat. Nesbit was mortally wounded, and Quartermaster H. A. Torrence severely wounded; Color Sergeant Hazlett, of company E, fell severely wounded. A few days later it was again engaged at the battle of Antietam. It's loss here was not so great as at some other battles, but it did the duty assigned it bravely and creditably. Thomas S. Moore, private of company B, mortally wounded, deserves special mention for bravery. After the battle of Antietam it lay for some time near Sharpsburg, Md., thence moved towards Fredericksburg, Va., suffering in the movement all the misery described in the sketch of other regiments on the same march, but was recruited in strength by the return of the detail from Craney Island hospital.

The crossing of the Rappahannock below Fredericksburg effected, on December 13th the reserves, under General Meade, attached to Reynold's corps, were sent forward on the left, and after suffering a severe fire from rebel batteries, were ordered to move forward on the enemy's works. By excellent manouvering under a deadly fire, the result desired seemed accomplished, the Eleventh having pushed forward to the enemy's reserve, finding them with arms stacked and completely surprised. The reserve men have always assumed that supports hurried forward at this critical time would have assured victory to the Union arms. Compelled to fall back, the Eleventh lost heavily. The rebel reserve force was hurried forward and a large proportion of the Eleventh were killed, wounded or taken prisoners. The regiment had done its work but too well for its own safety. Captain Coder is said to have gone into the engagement with thirty-one men of company E, and came out with only privates Fritz and Myers. Private Fritz afterwards carried the regimental colors. The loss to the already decimated regiment was over one hundred men. Privates William Connor, mortally wounded, and James H. Trimble, killed, are specially mentioned by Col. Porter for their bravery.

Before we note the further work of the regiment, we call attention to changes in Indiana county officers. In company B, Captain D. S. Porter was promoted to lieutenant-colonel; Lieutenant H. K. Sloan, promoted to captain; and the summer and fall campaign included the promotion of Archibald Stewart to first lieutenant, and John S. Sutor to second lieutenant. Sergeant McCandless had been promoted quarter-master sergeant; Davis, discharged; Fair, mortally wounded; Weaver, promoted to first lieutenant in 135th Pennsylvania Volunteers; Kuhns, killed; and H. C. Howard, promoted to first sergeant.

*Company B, though on fatigue duty, were under fire, and it was here that R. H. Fair, first sergeant, was mortally wounded, dying at Richmond a few days later.

In company D, Wm. C. Coleman, promoted to first sergeant.

In company E, Captain Nathaniel Nesbit had died of wounds, and Lieutenant Coder promoted to captain. Richard M. Birkman, now second lieutenant, was advanced to first lieutenant. J. P. R. Cummiskey had been commissioned second lieutenant, company D, 105th Pennsylvania Volunteers, was killed at Fair Oaks. Charles W. Herring was now first sergeant of company E.

In company I, David Berry had been promoted to second lieutenant.

These were deserved promotions and the survivors of company B speak in glowing terms of praise of Captain Sloan, not only for bravery as leader, but for sociability with the men of his command.

Having now anticipated the summer and fall campaign in the record of promotions, we return to note that in the latter part of the winter, and the spring of 1863, the regiment was assigned to duty within the defenses of Washington. The object of this transfer was the recuperation so much needed by the men, who were worn down by excessive duty at the front.

During the march into Maryland and Pennsylvania in June, 1863, the reserves again joined the army of the Potomac at Frederick, Maryland, and with it entered the terrible struggle on Pennsylvania soil. On July 2, to the left of Cemetery Hill, and near Little Round Top, the regiment became engaged, driving a largely superior force of rebels; finally charging down the slope to the right front of Little Round Top, supported by the brigade, and routed the enemy in their immediate front. The next day it was again called into the severe struggle with the foe, who this time chose to take the aggressive. The loss in the regiment was over forty men, among them, Lieut. Col. D. S. Porter, wounded.

In the subsequent movements to the Rappahannock, Rapidan, the retrograde to Centreville, and return to the vicinity of Culpepper again, the regiment was engaged at Bristoe Station, and at Rappahannock station, suffering but slight loss.

In the Mine Run campaign, the regiment became engaged at New Hope Church, suffering some loss, and in this short campaign, in common with others, endured intense suffering.

In the winter of 1863–4, the regiment encamped and did duty on the line of the Orange and Alexandria railroad, and while here Lieut. Col. Porter resigned.

Crossing the Rapidan on the night of May 3, 1864, the regiment entered the Wilderness, becoming engaged with the enemy on the evening of the 4th. The 7th Reserves were almost wholly captured, and the 11th barely escaped it, suffering serious loss in getting a junction formed with the Union lines. It participated in the engagements of the 5th and 6th, and again at Spottsylvania, 9th to 14th of May, private Wm. B. Elliott, of Co. B, capturing a battle flag of the enemy. At North Anna, it waded the river under a hot fire of shell from rebel batteries, and in the subsequent engagement, in a decoy movement to entice the rebels to advance and become subject to the fire of the massed and well posted reserve division, the 11th occupied the weak decoy line, and in the manouvering did creditable work, suffering considerable loss. Capt. Coder, of Co. E, now commanded the regiment, Col. Jackson having command of the brigade. With the hard fought battle of Bethesda church ended the term of service of the men, and they bid adieu to the service, honored for bravery and patriotic duty.

For meritorious duty, the President, in 1865, brevetted Lieut. Col. D. S. Porter, Colonel; Capt. H. K. Sloan, Major; Capt. Daniel R. Coder, Major; Lieut. Richard M. Birkman continuing in service with the 190th Pennsylvania Volunteers, was promoted to Captain of Co. A, June, 1864, and Brevet Major, April, 1865. Serg't Wm. C. Coleman was also commissioned 1st Lieutenant of Co. I, 190th P. V. The veterans and recruits were all transferred to the newly formed 190th regiment, and passed through the battles and duties of the closing campaigns of the war. Lieut. John S. Sutor was promoted to Captain of Co. K.

We deem it proper, in this connection to follow these men. The 190th and 191st regiments were formed of veterans and recruits of the Penna. Res. Vol. regiments, the 190th was composed of men of the 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th reserve regiments. After those whose terms of service had expired were gone, these hastily formed regiments were immediately sent to the front at Cold Harbor, and were engaged with the foe, and in the movement towards the James river were attacked, and had a severe fight at Charles City, lasting the entire day.

The imperfect company records of the 190th cause us to fail in obtaining the record of some members of the 11th transferred to it, and others were transferred to it while prisoners in rebel hands, and of these we learn some facts for which we refer to the company roster. Both of these regiments were engaged at Petersburg in the series of fights, June 15th to 30th, losing heavily. The loss in officers was especially severe. Almost the entire regiments were surrounded and captured at Weldon railroad, August 19, 1864, and suffered untold hardships during a captivity, lasting till the spring of 1865, and almost to the time of Lee's surrender.

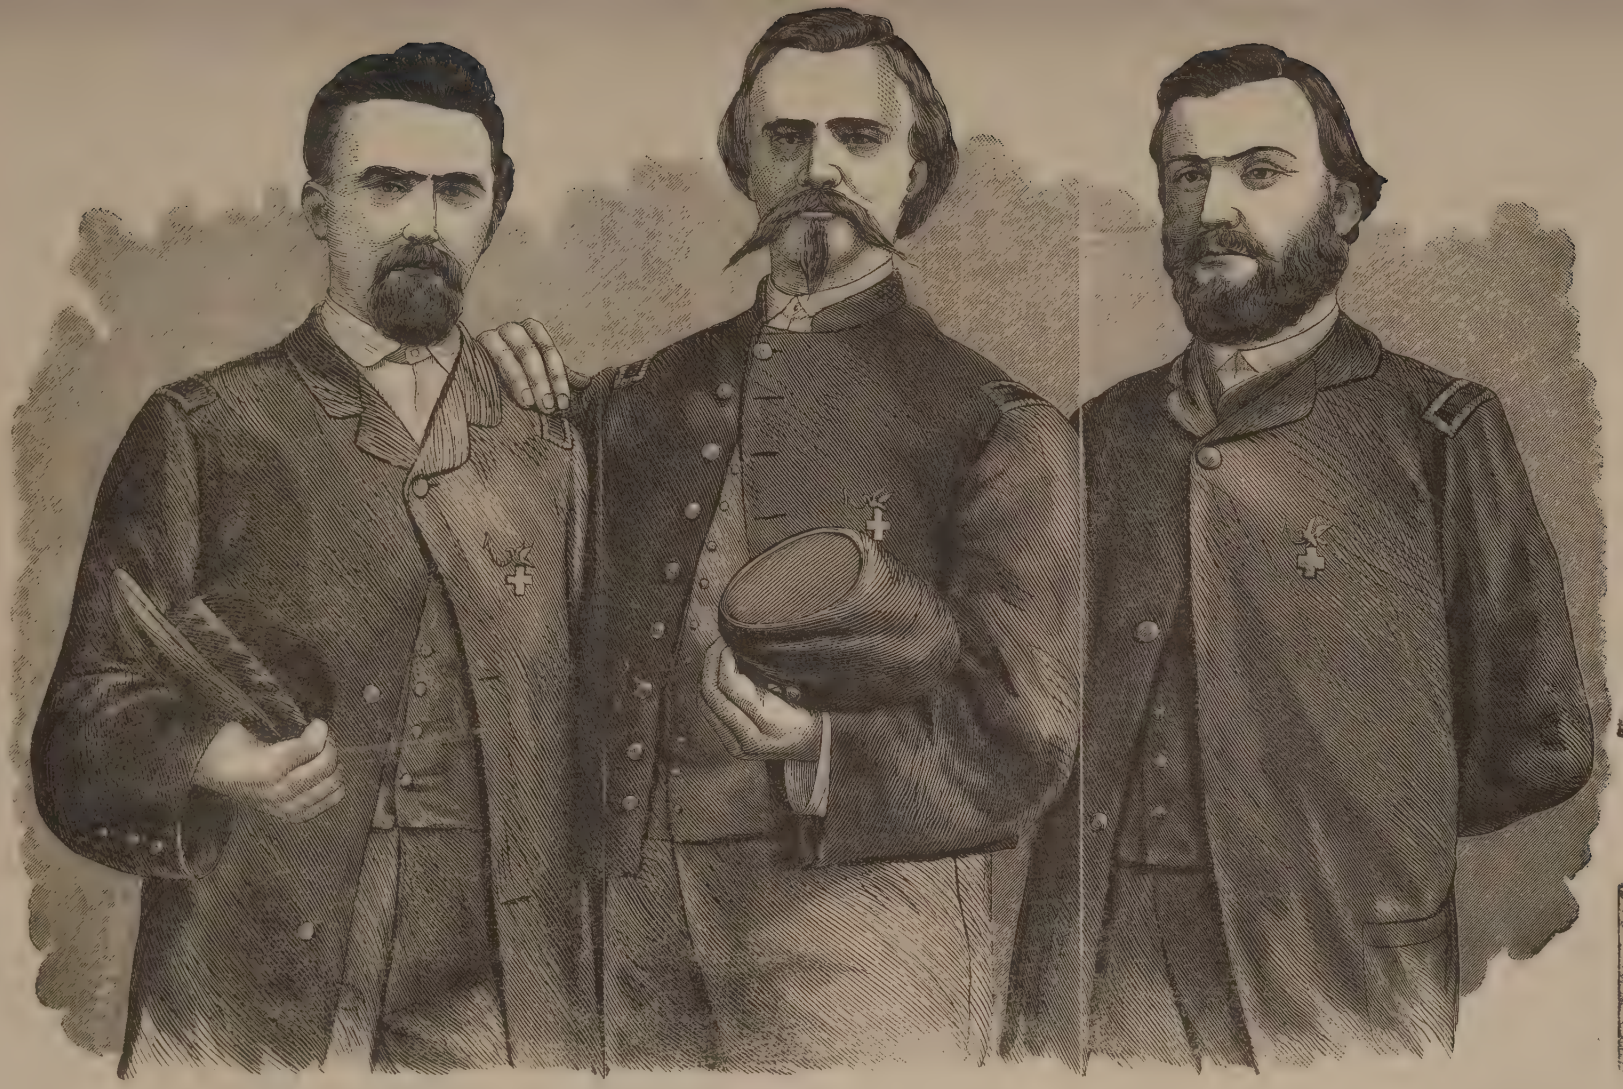
The few men left in the spring of 1865, gathered together from detached duty and elsewhere, participated in the final campaign at Hatcher's run, Graveley run and Five Forks, and were warmly engaged at the two last named places, and were moving forward, with detachments of "Bucktails" and others in the skirmish line on "double quick," when the order to cease firing was received, and they discovered the white flag, indicative of the surrender of General Lee.

41ST PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—12TH RESEVES.

This regiment was organized in July, 1861—one company was recruited in Indiana county by Capt. A. J. Bolar, assisted by the citizens of the village of Armagh. It was among the first companies recruited in the county for three years service. The regiment remained at Camp Curtin, till August 10th, where it was mustered into the United States service, and sent to Tennallytown, near Washington, where it was assigned to the third brigade of the reserves.* In October, the regiment was moved to the Virginia side of the Potomac, and went into winter quarters at Camp Peirpoint. December 20th, it participated in the engagement at Drainsville, Va., where for a considerable time the regiment was exposed to a severe fire from rebel batteries without being able to return the fire, a very trying position for veteran troops, and more so for men first under fire. The 12th was ordered to advance and take the battery in their front, but the rebels fled before the advance, leaving the field to the Union forces. The regiment passed through this introductory to battle experiences with the loss of only one man wounded.

In March, 1863, it was in the movement towards Manassas, they experienced all the discomforts of others in this event.† Omitting the routine duties of camp life, we next note that the 12th was detached from its brigade and ordered on guard of the Orange and Alexandria railroad. On the way to join the brigade, which in the meantime had moved to Falmouth, Va., the regiment was annoyed by Guerrillas, whose business almost always seemed to be to murder stragglers from the main body. Company C and Capt. Bolar's company H, were ordered to the

*Bates' History. †See notes of 16th P. V., on this.



Yours truly
F. M. Brown
1st Lieut Co. A. 61st P.V.

D. Crest
Capt - Co A 61st P.V.

I N Price
2d Lieut - Co "A" 61st P.V.

rear and burned the farm house, where the Guerrillas made their head-quarters, but the villians escaped before these companies reached the place. The reserve corps was now ordered to the Peninsula, to join McClellan, the 12th debarking at White House, Va., May 14th, 1863, and by the 18th, were on duty on advance picket at the Chickahominy river, and next day moved to Ellerson's Mills, on Beaver Dam creek. May 25th, it was sent on picket duty on the line from Meadow bridge, to Ellerson's Mills, remaining until next day, in the latter part of this time reporting every hour to headquarters the movements of the enemy in front. When called in it was assigned position on extreme left at the Mills. At three o'clock, the battle* opened, and the 12th held its position against all odds, hurling back each advance of the foe. During the night, the Union forces, except the 12th, were withdrawn, and it was to withdraw at daynight. The enemy discovering the condition, attacked again, the 12th becoming more desperately engaged, if possible, than on the day before, but retired in good order, leaving the rebels as their only trophy, the occupancy of the position. Tired and hungry, the regiment moved direct to the battle ground at Gaines' Mill, and were placed on the front, in support of Griffin's battery, which during the day they gallantly supported at desperate cost in blood and life, successfully repelling the charges on the battery—so this day, the 12th may be said to have fought two distinct battles, first at Mechanicsville and next at Gaines' Mill. The next day without food or water lt marched in guard of reserve artillery near eighteen miles. The reader will allow us the diversion here to say the assertion "no water" is literally true in regard to the whole army; men would march on, buoyed up by the hope of water somewhere ahead, to fing only stagnant pools in swamps in which were the bodies of dead horses. Men and horses suffered beyond any description for want of water to quench the feverish thirst.

We quote from Col. Taggart's report, "The White Oak creek which we crossed about noon, June 29th, was a complete quagmire, from the thousands of horses, teams and artillery which were continually passing, and water to drink was not to be had. Some of the men became almost delirious from thirst, and once, when I halted for rest for a few minutes, I discovered them drinking from a stagnant puddle in which was the putrid carcase of a dead horse. * * * I promised them good water at White Oak swamp, * * * but as we arrived there we found it utterly unfit to drink." At night they found good water in a small stream, the next day reddened by their blood, for the next day the battle of Charles City Cross Roads was fought. The Twelfth was divided in detachments, and separated some distance, also widely separate from the balance of the division. The rebels attacked in solid charge and in a few moments it was a hand to hand conflict, with one detachment, and it was compelled to fall back. The other detachment held its ground for a time, but the battery they were supporting, in its haste to get away, drove through their line in hot haste regardless of the men in its support trampling some of them underfoot in this mad dash to the rear. The regiment rallied in a body and continued in the fight till its close, that night moving to Malvern Hill. The reserve corps being almost out of ammunition (some portions averaging but three rounds to the man), was held in reserve mostly. Still it participated as reserve, and some portions were in close proximity to the terrible onslaught of the evening of the day.† Moving to Harrison's Landing and subsequently to south side of the James to guard against night attacks of rebel artillery, which on one or two occasions had annoyed the camps at the landing.

From the Peninsula the Twelfth was moved to Falmouth, Virginia, thence to Bull Run battle grounds where it did creditable work, the first day being moved frequently under fire without much opportunity of returning it, but on the second day not only served on skirmish line, and in the grand charge of the division, but late in the day were in line to receive and repel with terrible fire the charge of the rebels upon the Union left flank; afterwards moving to the support of troops on the right. Those in front at this point giving way, again the 12th was brought into action, holding its ground until ordered to fall back, and form in new position. It then marched into Maryland and occupied the centre of the line in storming the heights at South Mountain, and on the 16th and 17th of September engaged the enemy on the bloody field of Antietam, where its loss, especially in wounded, was heavy.

We next follow it to Fredericksburg, December 13th, where on the right of Lee's fortified position, the reserve corps made a desperate fight, turning the position of the enemy, and driving him from a portion of its works. Supports not being sent forward in time, the reserves were compelled reluctantly to leave the position taken at terrible cost of life.

The Reserve corps being much reduced in numbers, was ordered to the defenses at Washington where it remained until Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania, when it again joined the army of the Potomac. The 12th reached the battle ground at Gettysburg, July 2d, and was moved into position just as Gen. Sickles' corps was being forced back. Moving at once into position under fire from rebel sharpshooters the regiment hastily constructed cover of stone and such material as could be had, thus partly protecting it from the fire of the enemy.

At night it was moved into position on Round Top, and in the night constructed a stone wall for defensive breastworks, which it occupied most of the day, July 3d, not being pressed forward in the charges made towards the centre.

We next find the regiment engaged at Bristoe station, and again in the advance on Rappahannock station, thence moving forward with the army to Brandy station.

In the campaign against the rebel position at Mine run, it became engaged near New Hope church.

After the return from the Mine run campaign, it was again sent to guard the Orange and Alexandria railroad, where, on account of sneaking, cowardly and murderous Guerrillas, it was necessary to build block houses for the protection of its guards.

Returning to the army again it moved in the Wilderness campaign, being engaged at the Wilderness, Spottsylvania and Po river, near North Anna river and Bethesda church, the fight at Bethesda church occurring on the last day of its three years of service. In the meantime, Captain Bolar who had been wounded and taken prisoner at the Fredericksburg battle, had returned again and been promoted to Major of the regiment. Company H lost many good soldiers and citizens in killed, and others bear the marks of wounds on their bodies. We sum the battle record as follows: Drainsville, Mechanicsville, Gaines' Mill, Charles City Cross Roads, Malvern Hill, (slightly,) Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Bristoe station, Rappahannock station, Mine run, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Jericho Ford, and Bethesda church.

"Honor to the brave!"

FORTY-THIRD PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—FIRST LIGHT ARTILLERY—FOURTEENTH RESERVES.

Indiana county had thirty men in this regiment, one in battery A, three in F, the balance in battery G. Of those in battery G, five were detached for duty with 5th United States artillery, battery L, and were attached to Averill's cavalry division, participating in all the engagements, and many of the skirmishes beginning at Snicker's Gap, July 18, 1864.

William J. Fuller was killed at Winchester July 24, 1864; was struck by piece of shell on left breast, tearing away almost the entire side and shoulder; was still alive when last seen, but as it was the "skedaddle" from Winchester, he fell into the hands of the rebels, and without a doubt fills an unknown patriot's grave on the blood-stained plains of Winchester. The balance of the men of battery G, were never called into engagement, and the duties were the routine usual in fortifications, where for most of the time they were stationed, near Washington, D. C., Point of Rocks, and Maryland Heights, serving, armed with muskets, while at Point of Rocks, five months.

*At Mechanicsville. †See 61st P. V.

The three who served in battery F, were with Grant in the campaign of 1864, before Richmond and Petersburg, and Ricketts' battery being so well and favorably known in history and by fireside, we need no more than mention it.

The one in battery A, who lost his life, was a good soldier; he had his leg so mangled by a piece of shell as to cause amputation, which resulted in death. Our quotations are notes of Dr. W. S. Shields, of Marion, whose name appears in roll of battery G.

FORTY-SIXTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

The 46th Pennsylvania Volunters, after the enlistment of In-Indiana county men, whose names we give, soon moved to the western army, under the immediate command of General Joseph Hoooker, and in his 20th army corps. Skirmished with the enemy near Dalton, Tenn., and were in the line attacked by General Johnston at Resaca in his effort to break the Union lines. The regiment held its position and repelled the charge of the enemy. Under fire from the enemy, the regiment's temporary breastworks, which served as a partial protection, the regiment's loss was slight. In the days subsequent to this battle the regiment was in several skirmishes, as it was an almost continued skirmish on some part of the line, the principal ones in which the regiment was engaged being at Pumpkinvine creek and New Hope Church. It was in the repulse of General Hood's attack on Knipe's brigade at Culp's farm, inflicting severe loss upon the enemy. The loss in the regiment in this engagements was near fifty men, killed and wounded. It also participated in the fights at Dallas, Pine Knob, Kenesaw Mountain and Marietta, Captain Stolzenbach, of company C, in one of these engagement having his hand shot off. The 46th regiment occupied an exposed position at the battle of Peach Tree creek before Atlanta, suffering severe loss, making a successful charge upon the enemy's lines. It was among the first regiments into the city, suffering some loss in the capture of the place, the occupancy of which was still disputed by the enemy. It then marched northward, foraging for its supplies, until it reached Savannah. In the subsequent marches through North and South Carolina had some skirmishes with the enemy, with which its active work ceased.

55TH REGIMENT PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

The 55th regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers was recruited in the summer and fall of 1861 by Col. Richard White, under authority of Governor Curtin. The regiment was made up of companies from different sections of the State, Co. F, Capt. Nesbit, from Indiana county. In November, 1861, it left Camp Curtin for the field of action with 38 officers and 750 men. It was stationed at Fortress Monroe till December 8, 1861, when it was ordered to Port Royal, S. C., and from there to Hilton Head, doing general guard duty till February, 1862, when it was ordered to Edisto Island, where it served in detachments at various points, widely separated. While on this island an attack was made on Cos. E and F by a rebel force variously estimated, probably about 500 strong. Co. E retiring, the heat of the fight fell on Co. F. Lieut. McElheney and 11 men were captured in the commencement of the assault, and were brought up and exposed to the fire of their own men, a devilish act, only to be thought of by demons. Corporal Cunningham was killed when the others were captured. The remainder of the company checked the advance of the enemy, but were compelled to withdraw in the face of the largely superior force of rebels, losing everything at the post except their guns. In escaping some swam the river, while others improvised a ferry by making a raft of such material as could be got hold of, and formed a rope by fastening gun straps together. They still had to wade and swim nearly one mile in overflowed swamp, reaching the main body of the regiment with guns filled with mud, clothes covered with the same, some without hats, and in a pitiable plight every way. Lieut. McElheney was kept prisoner for one year.

October 21, 1862, the regiment was in the movement up Broad river, landing at Mackey's point under cover of gunboats. An advance was made on Pocotaligo bridge, the object of which seems to have been the destruction of part of the Charleston and Savannah railroad.

On the 22d they met and drove the enemy at Caston, and again at Frampton, driving the rebels across Pocotaligo bridge, which they burned in their retreat. A fight of several hours occurred here, the Union forces withdrawing when nearly out of ammunition, the rebels receiving support from Charleston and Savannah by trains every two hours. The 55th lost about 30 killed and wounded, Co. F. having but a slight proportion of the loss.

The regiment was next stationed at Beaufort, S. C., for more than a year, serving as heavy artillery in the forts and picketing Port Royal ferry ten miles away. Captain Nesbit was in command at Port Royal ferry for two or three months, having two guns and supports for the same.

January 1, 1864, the larger part of the regiment re-enlisted, and on their return from furlough brought recruits, increasing the regiment to near 1,500 men. In April it was was ordered to Gloucester Point, Va., where it joined the 10th army corps, and from thence to Bermuda Hundred, to operate against Richmond. While here, at one time, the regiment was armed with axes and put to work to fell timber in front of the works, with Captain Nesbit in command of the choppers. The rebels kept up a constant fire by artillery and sharpshooters, getting so hot the officer of the day ordered the men back within the works, when General Butler in person ordered them out again. They bravely returned to their work, and after the work of the day was over went on skirmish line on the front, remaining two or three days.

On the 9th of May Ames' division moved out and destroyed a portion of the Richmond and Petersburg railroad, the 55th regiment claiming to have been in this movement early as the 8th of May. In all the movements following this towards Petersburg, at Swift creek, in the change of direction towards Richmond, at Proctor's creek and Drury's Bluff, the regiment participated, fighting almost constantly from May 8th to 16th. At Proctor's creek, May 16th, the 55th held their ground firmly until nearly surrounded, when a forlorn hope charge was made by three companies of the regiment, led by Colonel White. They found the enemy too strong for them, and Colonel White having his horse shot under him, was taken prisoner with some of his men, in the effort to fall back, or rather fight out of their surroundings, the loss to the regiment in the eight days being fifteen officers and three hundred men—their colonel captured, lieutenant colonel wounded and captured, surgeon and adjutant captured. Captain Shearer then took command of the regiment, falling back to Bermuda Hundred.

May 20th the regiment was attacked when in support of the picket line, and here again held its position until the line on both sides fell back, and it had to fall back to escape capture. Lieutenant Adair and a portion of company F, were cut off from the regiment, and for two hours were supposed to be taken prisoners, but fought their way out before night.

The regiment was next in detached force sent to General Grant, before Richmond, then moving on Cold Harbor. It reached Cold Harbor June 1st, and immediately moved to the front, participating in the constant fight of days at that point.

On June 3d the regiment charged on the rebel works en masse, taking the first line of work and almost reached the second when the line gave way and the regiment was ordered to fall back. In the meantime Captain Shearer had fallen wounded, and Captain Nesbit assumed command.

When the order came to fall back it was mistaken by the regiment for order to lie down. A portion of the regiment, with Captain Nesbit, lay down immediately under the rebel works, and the portion that fell back was rallied by Captain Hill, who, in the face of a terrible fire from the enemy's line of works, took the flag of the regiment and mounting the line of works already taken, with it in his hand, called on his men to rally. The men in front with Nesbit were getting back in detachments, creeping back most of the way to escape the terrible fire they would have to suffer if they got upon their feet.

Captain Nesbit was wounded while getting his regiment to change position in the pits, exposing himself to the fire of the enemy in so doing. Captain Hill then took command. The 55th remained deployed in the pits as rear guard, while their division withdrew from the works a few days later, and when it withdrew, went via Pamunky, York, and James rivers to Point of Rocks, Va., and on the 15th was in an assault upon the enemy's works at Petersburg, some of which were taken with 16 guns and 300 prisoners; the loss on our side was about 600 men. Next morning the 55th was ordered forward as skirmishers; getting close up to the enemy's lines, the detachment under Lieutenant Adair using all their ammunition, and begged for more, holding their position for sometime with ammunition carried to them by the drummer boys in their caps. This is probably true with regard to the whole regiment, but it is not certain that all the regiment was on the skirmish line.

A day or two later the regiment was again ordered to charge the line, and in this charge lost severely, its loss being estimated at three officers and eighty men.

September 28th, in the night, the regiment crossed the James river and moved to support of troops that stormed Fort Harrison on the 29th, and in the afternoon was detailed to storm a portion of the enemy's works beyond, supported by other regiments. It advanced over a quarter of a mile of open ground on Chapin's farm, subject to a concentrated fire from the enemy's works, disabling so large a proportion of the already decimated ranks, they were compelled to fall back, leaving their dead and wounded in the hands of the enemy. Lieut. Adair and Capt. O'Neil fell mortally wounded; the loss in killed, wounded and missing was one-half of the force in the charge.

In December, by consolidation of the 10th and 18th army corps, the 55th was assigned to the 4th brigade, 1st division, 24th corps, and on December 10th was attacked feebly by rebel cavalry at Signal Hill. The regiment was under cover and easily repulsed the attack.

The latter part of March, 1865, the regiment crossed the James river and marched to Hatcher's Run, Virginia, and were on the skirmish line in the general advance of March 31st at that point, losing in killed and wounded about twenty men. It was next engaged in the charge on Fort Baldwin, being the first regiment to occupy it, suffering only slight loss. The term slight loss as we apply it to old regiments of the army of the Potomac and Virginia, to be fully understood the reader of their history must bear in mind that the number of men was small, the 55th at this time possibly did not have more than 200 effective men.

The regiment served in the closing movements, and afterwards in detachments under orders from Freedmen's Bureau till August 30, 1865.

Of Col. Richard White, whom we may claim for Indiana county, his men say of him he was a kind man, a good soldier, an excellent drill-officer, and a commander, who, at all hazards and without regard to popularity insisted upon his men getting good clothing, the best rations the Government could furnish; all they wanted in reason, that could be obtained.

COMPANY B, FIFTY-SIXTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

In response to the call for 300,000 men to serve for three years, or during the war, a company under the name of Blairsville Guards, led by Capt. Wm. McIntire, left the railroad depot at Blairsville, October 24th, 1861, for Camp Curtin, Harrisburg. Previous to this, two companies had gone from Blairsville and vicinity, and many citizens entertained the opinion that the community had been drained of its fighting material; so that this third effort to raise "more men," had less of enthusiasm in it than the former two, yet not less of the spirit of sincere devotion to the flag.

In about two months from the first signature, sixty men had expressed their willingness to go, and impatiently awaited the order to rendezvous. The day of departure drew on. From early dawn till the evening of October 23, squads of men were constantly arriving in town, and found entertainments in the homes of the hospitable citizens, or were lodged for the night at the hotels. By daylight next morning, the town was all astir, as busy hands and anxious hearts prepared the last article of comfort for the soldier, or crowded the streets to drown their suppressed sorrow in the excitement of the hour. At the request of Robert Hummil, Esq., the company assembled in the U. P. Church, for religious services, conducted by Rev's Wm. Connor and Geo. Hill—after which the line was formed in front of the drill-room, on Main street, and every man presented with a copy of the New Testament that desired it. From here they marched to the cars at the depot, where with tearful eye and struggling cheer, the farewell is given, and the "boys are off for the war." Fifty-four of the sixty men were accepted and mustered into the United States service—attached to the fifty-sixth regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, Col. S. A. Meredith commanding, and given the second position of honor, "Company B." During its stay in Camp Curtin, from time to time recruits arrived, until the company roll contained about eighty-five names. Wm. McIntire, of Saltsburg, was tendered the Captaincy, solely on account of supposed military knowledge acquired from service in the Mexican war. The entire labor of recruiting the company, was borne by J. A. Cunningham, and the necessary funds furnished by the firm in which he was partner.

March 8, 1862, the regiment left Camp Curtin for Washington City, encamping a short time on Meridian hill; thence moved to Fort Runnion. An earthwork was thrown up to protect Long Bridge. The few days spent here were fully occupied with practice on heavy artillery to the great dissatisfaction of the men. They insisted all the while that they did not come out to train seige guns under the very shadow of the Capitol, when the post of danger was in the front. In army parlance, "the company was spoiling for a fight."

April 4 found the regiment, with other troops, aboard of transports, steaming down the Potomac to Budd's ferry, on the Maryland side. April 24, it crossed to Acquia creek, Virginia, and was assigned to the duty of guarding the railroad from this point to Fredericksburg. This was not dangerous work, as the whiz of the rebel bullet never was heard, yet the deadlier malaria prostrated many of the men with sickness and laid numbers in the grave.

August 9th, the regiment was attached to the Second Brigade (Gen. Abner Doubleday's), First Division (Gen. King's), in the command of Gen. McDowell, forming part of the army of Virginia defending Washington City. Early in this month, the scattered forces of the army of Virginia centered at Cedar Mountain, where Gen. Pope gave battle to Stonewall Jackson.

King's division arrived too late to take part in this battle, which resulted in Jackson's withdrawing his forces in the direction of Gordonsville to unite with General Lee's army, now moving toward Washington. In turn Pope's army withdrew to the north bank of the Rappahannock, hotly pursued by the enemy. Here company B heard for the first time the shriek of rebel shell, and realized as never before the loss of individuality in war. Almost daily artillery duels were fought with the enemy, as our forces stubbornly resisted his advance in order that time might be gained for the army of the Potomac to free itself from the Peninsula and take position between the rebels and Washington.

August 28th the 56th regiment had its maiden battle. As King's division was marching along at the close of the day toward Centerville unconscious of danger, the first intimation of the presence of the enemy was a shower of shells from a masked battery to the left of the road. At the command of the general, "bring the van forward at a double quick," the insolent battery is stormed, the fire of concealed rebel infantry drawn and the almost hand to hand conflict opened. The strife is short, but terrible. The loss heavy on both sides on account of the closeness of the hostile lines. Fortunately for us night throws her friendly mantle over the bloody scene, and hides from view the weakness of our forces. The rebel guns cease firing first. Cheer after cheer rises from our ranks the "claim of victory," and the battle of Gainesville is ended.

The examination of prisoners showed that we had fallen in with Jackson's entire army, and the boldness with which we had accepted this challenge of battle led the enemy to think they were contending with Pope's main body. Our forces left the field during the night and daylight next morning found them at Manassas Junction, the experience of the night lingering like a bloody dream. The second Bull Run battle opened on this day (29th August), and the 56th regiment was called into action, as well as on the following day, to cover the retreat. From this until the end of the war our fortune was joined to that of the army of the Potomac, taking part in most of its battles, rejoicing in its victories and sharing in its defeats, so that we will not attempt a recital of the many marches of the 56th, its cheerful evenings around the camp fires or its awful visions of the dread battle field strewn with the slain, but will close this sketch with an extract from a letter of Brigadier General Cutter (commanding 1st division, 1st corps, at the battle of Gettysburg, Pa.), to Gov. Curtin. He says: It was my fortune to be in the advance on the morning of July 1st, 1863. When we come upon the ground in front of the enemy, Col. Hoffman's regiment (56th) got into position a moment sooner than the others, the enemy now advancing within easy musket range. The atmosphere being a little thick I took out my glass to examine the enemy. Being a few paces in the rear of Col. Hoffman, he turned to me and enquired, "Is that the enemy?" My reply was, "Yes." Turning to his men he commanded, "ready, right oblique, aim, fire!" and the battle of Gettysburg was opened. The fire was followed by other regiments instantly; still that battle on the soil of Pennsylvania was opened by her own sons, and it is just that it should become a matter of history. I desire to say to your Excellency that the 56th is one of the very best regiments in the service, and I hope that you will cause proper measures to be taken to give that regiment the credit which is its due, of having opened that memorable battle.

From the foregoing it will be seen that Indiana county's sons had part in the honor of opening the battle that hurled the proud rebel army south, never to return. Co. B went into this fight with two commissioned officers and twenty-four men. Let the list of killed and wounded answer whether they were faithful to duty or not.

We add, also, a list of the engagements that Co. B participated in during the war; also, a roll of the men that went from Indiana county, and their record, so far as it could be obtained from individual and other sources. (See company roll).

The 56th regiment Pa. Veteran Volunteers has participated in the following named battles of the army of the Potomac. Organization from year 1861; commencement, 1862, up to 1865.

Rappahannock Station, Va., August 23, 1862; Gen. Pope.
Sulphur Springs, Va., August 25, 1862; Gen. Pope.
Gainesville, Va., August 28, 1862; Gen. Pope.
Groveton, Va., August 29, 1862; Gen. Pope.
Manassas, Va., August 30 and 31, 1862; Gen. Pope.
South Mountain, Md., September 14, 1862; Gen. McClellan.
Antietam, Md., September 17, 1862; Gen. McClellan.
Union, Va., November 1, 2, 3, 4, 1862; Gen. McClellan.
Fredericksburg, Va., December 12, 13, 14, 15; Gen. Burnside.
Chancellorsville, Va., April 27, 28, 29, 30, 1863; Gen. Hooker.
Beverly Ford, Va., June 9, 1863; Gen. Hooker.
Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 2, 3, 4, 1863; Gen. Meade.
Mine Run, Va., November 27, 28, 29, 30, 1863; Gen. Meade.
Wilderness, Va., May 6, 7, 1864; Gen. Meade.
Laurel Hill, Va.. May 8, 9, 10, 1864; Gen. Meade.
Spottsylvania, Va., May 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 1864; Gen. Meade.
North Anna, Va., May 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 1864; Gen. Meade.
York River, Va., May 28, 1864; Gen. Meade.
Cold Harbor, Va., June 1, 2, 3, 4, 1864; Gen. Meade.
Petersburg, Va., June 17 to June 25, 1864; Gen. Meade.
Welden railroad, Va., August 18, 19, 20, 21, 1864; Gen. Meade.
Dabney's Mills, Va., February 5, 1865.
Boydtown plank road, February 6, 1865.
Squirrel Level, Va., February 7, 1865.
Hatcher's run, Va., February 10, 11, 1865.
Rowanty creek, Va., March 31, 1865.
Five Forks, Va., April 1, 1865.
Sutherland's, S. S. R. R., Va., April 2, 1865.
Surrender of General Lee, April 9, 1865.

HISTORY OF COMPANY A, SIXTY-FIRST PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

[From notes by J. M. Walker.]

This company was organized in July, 1861, by the union of two companies recruited for three months' service, one by John Pollock, in East Mahoning, North Mahoning, Montgomery and Canoe townships, the other by Jacob Creps, in Rayne, Green and East Mahoning; the two embracing the villages of Covode, Marchand, Georgeville, Richmond, Decker's Point, Taylorsville, Dixonville, Killeysburg, Kintersburg and Marion. The call for three years caused many to withdraw, and a union of the remnant of the two companies was effected at Decker's Point, and Marion from thenceforth became the general headquarters for recruiting, where the company was fully organized in July, 1861, by the election of Jacob Creps, Captain; John Pollock, 1st Lieutenant; G. W. Brady, 2d Lieutenant; Frank M. Brown, 1st Sergeant, and a full complement of minor officers. (See company roll, to which we also refer the reader for personal account of each).

The request of O. H. Rippey, of Pittsburgh, to join his regiment, was granted by a vote of the company. The citizens gathered at Marion in immense procession to accompany us to Indiana; the citizens of Kintersburg gave a free dinner, and those of Indiana free lodging for the night. We went by rail in box cars to Pittsburgh, and quartered in Camp Wilkins, and were mustered into the United States service August 21, 1861.

By order of the Secretary of War, about September 1, the partly filled regiment was ordered to the front, only three companies, viz., Creps', Gerard's, and Foulk's being full.

We were stopped at Harrisburg on the plea of "no transportation," and sent to Camp Curtin to await it. An effort was made to break up the regiment; Captain Foulk's company was bought off, and company A assigned to another regiment. Captains Creps and Gerard objected to the assignment, as well as to all offers for purchase, Company A insisting that Capt. Creps should sacredly keep its pledge to Col. Rippey. Then all cooking utensils were taken from us, and orders were issued to strip us of our uniform, which had been furnished by the State, the Post Commandant instructing the Post Quartermaster to give us no rations, except upon requisition in the name of his regiment, to which we had been assigned.

Anticipating trouble, we had sent our old clothing home, and of course retained the uniform. Capt. Creps furnished security for the government price of the rations until the matter could be settled, as it was in part by Col. Rippey, upon his arrival, agreeing that the state should have the credit of his regiment, and he, in consideration therefor, should have his regiment filled; an agreement, for some reason, never fulfilled by the state on its part. In consequence of this little unpleasantness, the companies not so fortunate in the matter of uniform suffered for want of clothing, men going on picket duty at Camp Advance, Va., without shirt or pants, being wrapped in blankets, secured around them with their gun straps, their own clothes being worn out building Fort Lyons, and the government not yet able to uniform and fully equip its army.

After those rejected in examination were sent home, and two transferred to Co. B, the company went to the front with 101 officers and men, going into camp south of Alexandria, Va., subject to orders of General Jamison, and spent the fall of 1861, alternating between drill and detail work on Fort Lyons, being moved, February 19, 1862, to Queen's farm, north of Washington, D. C., and attached to Graham's brigade, Buell's division, Key's (4th army corps).

Great anxiety prevailed on account of an order to disband all regiments not numbering 800 men. Col. Birney, in the interest of a Brigadier General's commission, agreed to allow four companies of his regiment to be transferred to the 61st, and this transfer also included the commissions of both the Lieutenant Colonel and Major for the regiment. Still further, to make matters smooth at Harrisburg, he required the post savings fund of the 61st. The signing of the order for this fund being refused by Capt. Creps, Acting Licutenant Colonel, closed finally all chance of promotion for him during the war, and he remained senior captain of the regiment for three years, often commanding the regiment, but the combined vote of the line officers was not sufficient to gain him promotion.

March 10, 1862, we marched to Prospect Hill, Va., on the way to Manassas, but learning that the rebels had evacuated their works, leaving only wooden guns, we turned our faces towards camp again, passing two days and nights near Chain Bridge, on short rations, clothes wet through, no shelter, fire would not burn, and we did not understand soldiering very well at that time, so that, to the company, it was one of the memorable events of the war.

March 26, 1862, we went on board the old rotten steamer, Wilson Small, arriving at Hampton, Va., on the evening of the next day. This was one of the perils of the service, and fair weather probably our only salvation. The steamer was so worthless, and overloaded, we had to so divide as to balance the vessel, the captain of it finally prohibited us moving around any, and cursed us when we tried to stretch out our cramped limbs, so we sat still, trusting the Lord for fair weather to reach Fortress Monroe. The crazy old boat sunk shortly after we landed, and we hoped it would never be resurrected from its watery grave.

The next stopping place for any length of time was at Warwick C. H., Va., April 6, where we were first fired on by rebel artillery, April 15th, and the occasional sing of the sharpshooter's bullet introduced us to that so prominent feature of warfare on the rebel side during the war, and they finally got so good range of our camp that we moved to a more sheltered place. Here we lived three days without rations, nine miles of corduroy road having to be built before we could be supplied. However, we could get fair drinking water by digging a hole eighteen inches deep, anywhere, but the offal of the camps was buried at about the same depth, and it required strong faith to accept the theory there advanced that a few inches of earth as a filter purified the water. The pickets of the 61st regiment were first into the rebel's deserted works on our front, May 4, 1862, our regiment taking its place in the line of march, reached Williamsburg too late to be engaged there, but was pushed forward on advance picket near New Kent C. H., March 14. We reached the Chickahominy river at Bottom's bridge, May 21, and companies A and H crossed—the first troops over—and picketed the front while the pioneer corps bridged the same.

On the 29th and 30th of May, we occupied a position at Fair Oaks station, the enemy in front, and an overflowing river, with the bridges swept away, in our rear. We were attacked, May 31, by a large force of rebels, and fought till our ammunition was spent, clubbing muskets and fighting. A skirmish line was pushed forward on our right flank and rear. Notes taken on the field places Co. A's loss in killed and wounded at 34. In the wounded list were Captain Creps, and Lieutenants Pollock and Brady, Lieutenant Pollock fighting hand to hand after being wounded. He died a few days afterward, and Indiana county lost a brave soldier and useful citizen. Capt. Creps being but slightly wounded, took command again next morning. General Key's report says of the regiment: "It fought with extraordinary bravery," and "the casualties in the 61st amount to 263, and are heavier than in any other regiment of Conch's division." * * * * "The 61st withdrew in detachments, some of which came again into action near my headquarters." The real loss of the regiment was 280.

Juue 27, 1862, companies A and H were ordered to establish a picket line on the left of Seven Pines, where we were attacked by the full battle line of the enemy. Being deployed in open ranks, we retired with but one man wounded and a few bullet holes in our clothes. For the first and only time during the war we were called cowards, and then by the Colonel of the 55th New York regiment, that ran away in a body at Fair Oaks a few days before, and now attempted to do what we had failed to do, but could not succeed, and a full brigade was ordered forward, which, with guns and shovels, fought and fortified alternately.

June 28, 1862, we moved in line of march in McClellan's retreat towards James river, encountering some rebel cavalry at Charles City Cross Roads, but soon routed them without any serious casualties in the company; and reached the James river on the 30th, returning to Malvern Hill in the evening. We moved in support of the batteries early on the morning of July 1st, losing one in the company, mortally wounded, and others slightly, in getting into position, where our protection was secured somewhat by lying in an old road worn in the sand a few inches lower than the surface ground on the side next the enemy. Here, for several hours, an almost continuous fire of shot and shell fell all around us, shells bursting but a few feet from our heads, and fragments falling beyond us. Case shot were little used then, and without them, it was impossible to dislodge us. Towards evening, with other troops, we made a flank movement down a muddy aud woody ravine on the right, at right angle with the batteries, creeping into position on our hands and knees, coming out on the flank of the rebels as they charged on our batteries, doing a work of carnage to their "close column" en masse troops that defies any description. But few of them were left to tell the tale. We remained on the field, meeting another weaker charge, and alternating with the batteries, lying down while they fired close over us, and charging while they ceased, until the field seemed completely deserted by the foe at 8 P. M. Our loss was comparatively small, Co. A's casualties not exceeding 8, and the regiment's loss 34. The bad aim of the enemy has credit for this, as nearly every volley they fired was too low, raising a cloud of dust twenty feet in front of us.

July 2, 1862, we moved to Harrison's Landing in deep mud, and stopped where we could neither sit nor lie down, but after several hours of suffering, got to a better place in the woods, and the sound of the pioneer's axe was heard. With the exception of one reconnoitre to Malvern Hill, and an occasional shell thrown from the south side of the James, we had quiet. At this point Capt. Creps, to relieve himself of an unpleasant duty, asked the company to elect a 2d Lieutenant, which resulted in the election of Isaac N. Price, a corporal, an action of which the company may well be proud, for none ever questioned his ability or bravery.

August 16, 1862, we left Harrison's Landing for Yorktown which we reached on the 20th, our knapsacks, sent by steamer on the 11th, reaching us on the 24th. We were detained at Yorktown, ostensibly to level down forts, but the boys will remember best the lobster, oyster and clam fishing.

August 28, we went on board the bark Metropolis, in tow of the City of Richmond, and started up the bay that night in a driving storm. Our bark very nearly ran the steamer down, which was also loaded with troops. The boys had got almost proof against cholera morbus, but didn't know how to flank seasickness, and were captured.

Off Occoquan creek we were ordered to "proceed to Alexandria," and from there we were ordered to the army near Fairfax C. H., arriving on the morning of September 2, where we learned of the disaster to our troops at Bull Run.

We were then ordered on the rear guard, retiring slowly to Alexandria; thence we went by steamer Kingston to Georgetown, crossing to the south side of the acqueduct bridge in the night. Next morning, September 4, recrossing at Chain Bridge, we marched to a point above Great Falls, where we were posted as guards along the river and crossings. (Two regiments, squad cavalry, two or three guns).

September 14, we moved via Rockville and South Mountain, reaching battle field at Antietam on the evening of September 17, and next morning, the front towards Sharpsburg, we skirmished with the enemy all day, losing some, wounded. We pushed forward past Sharpsburg on the morning of the 19th, and finding the enemy across the river there, we retraced our steps and moved up the river to Williamsport, where, in skirmish with the rebel rear guard, we lost John A. Work, killed. We then went into camp near Downsville, Md., and about this time, were transferred to the 6th army corps.

On October 19, we made a reconnoissance to Hancock, Md., marching in one day twenty-eight miles, returning to our old camp again. It was on this march we first met General Kilpatrick, then a Colonel, whose boyish face we were loth to believe was that of the dashing cavalryman of such notoriety.

October 31, we left Downsville and marched to Harper's Ferry, Va., thence down the Loudon Valley, and via Thoroughfare Gap to New Baltimore, Va., guarding trains, November 6 and 7, in a disagreeable snow storm. We remained at this point until we received the farewell visit of Gen. McClellan, when we moved forward again, reaching Belle Plains, Va., in the midst of a driving snow storm. December 5, we suffered intensely on the night of the 6th, our blankets not yet dry, freezing stiff where not directly in contact with our bodies.

December 12th, 1862—Crossed the Rappahannock below Fredericksburg and that and the next day lay under artillery fire, till quite late on the second day, when we moved to the front on the left, our movement opposed by artillery and desultory infantry fire, neither inflicting much loss. The next two days were spent in manouvering, and there could not have been much ground between the river and hills we were not marched over, the enemy sorely vexed, trying to keep range of us in all our movements. This was our share of the first Fredericksburg, but thousands fell elsewhere on the field in a vain endeavor to storm the rebel strongholds.

The next move was in the historical "mud march," fair at the start, but rain came in dashes, filling the sand and overflowing the streams—wagons sunk to the axles, and mules buried in mud and water. Yet company A was never caught straggling anywhere when moving towards the foe and reported in good shape, except muddy and wet, at the appointed camp near the United States ford, on the evening of the 20th of December. Many regiments were discouraged by this unfortunate march so soon after the terrible repulse at Fredericksburg, and it is doubtful whether they would have fought if called into action. The entire object of this march failing, the regiment returned to camp, and was transferred to "Light Division, 6th corps."

We then proceeded to make dug-outs in the hillside near Belle Plains, although under marching orders all the time, and fixed up the best we could for the winter. The survivors of the regiment yet wear the green cross of the light division, over the white one when wearing corps badge. During the winter, a bakery was built and we ate "soft bread" the first time in eleven months. Company A had received to this time twenty pairs of brothers; we name a few and refer you to company roll. J. A. and H. V. Stewart; L. and I. V. Brady; E. W. and R. W. Fairbank; I. N. and David Price; and of which but one remained to tell the tale at the close of the war, and he almost helpless.

On the night of April 28th, 1863, company A with others, carried the shallops or pontoon boats from the heights to Franklin's Crossing, one mile, and were to man the boats, row across, and drive the enemy's pickets from their pits. This order was countermanded on account of fatigue of the men. After many moves, we found ourselves at daylight Sunday morning, May 3d, in the City of Fredericksburg, preparing to charge the heights above it. The 61st to go out double quick, left in front, and form line by file left on the charge after getting across the canal on street bridge. Conflicting orders were given by the lieutenant in command of left company, doubling his men at the end of the bridge. In this double quick movement, the moving column ran into them, and for a few fatal seconds under a terrible fire of grape and canister, there was confusion. Capt. Creps, and Lieutenant Price of Company A, both ran forward, to assist in getting all right again, for all were anxious to get forward out of range of the artillery. The Captain got pushed off the bridge into the canal, wading out on the other side with his long boots full of mud and water, and took command of the regiment when Col. Spear fell.

This momentary delay righted, company A crossed and were over the enemy's works almost as soon as any of the troops, capturing most of the rebels in the works they scaled. The loss was reported at ninety-nine men in the regiment, seventy of whom must have fallen in that charge, but the fight continuing, in the effort to reach Hooker's force at Chancellorsville, more men being wounded, the actual loss of the charge cannot be given. On the evening of the 4th, in the effort to reach Bank's ford after a detour from the main force to hold Stonewall Jackson's force at bay at a certain point, the 61st was fired into by our own batteries, the first shell killing five men. Captain Creps ordered the regiment to seek cover in a stream bed in the mud and water, and ran forward in the face of the battery, three charges being fired before he reached and stopped its dreadful work. The remnant of the regiment crossed at Bank's ford. The light division was so cut up in the two days fight, that it was disbanded and the 61st assigned to the second division.

June 7, 1863, we once more crossed to south side of river and reconnoitred about the enemy's work, but no engagement ensued and we withdrew, Lee by this time moving northward, west of our entire fore. This was our third and last crossing of the Rappahannock near Fredericksburg.

June 14th, marched northward thirty-two hours without sleep, only reaching Dumfries in that time, being so often delayed; thence to Fairfax C. H., forming line of battle near Centreville; the enemy withdrawing we marched by Manassas to Bristoe Station, where, for five days, the small force there seemed to be entirely separated from all the army, and in suspense we awaited the sound of gun or arrival of mail. Leaving on the 26th, we made a forced march via Drainsville, Va., Edward's Ferry, Poolesville, Md., New Market and Mount Airy station, to a point near Manchester, Md., one day making thirty-six miles. We were ordered forward to join the forces at Gettysburg, on the evening of July 1st, but passed a sleepless night in getting fairly under way, and marched thirty-six miles July 2d, reaching the field before night and were immediately pushed forward in line of battle, after which, in dividing the second division, 6th corps, into details for weak points, our brigade was assigned to duty as flank guard to the right of Rock river, and while skirmishing was kept up all day along our line, our loss was slight. R. W. Dilts, of company A, was taken prisoner on skirmish line. We occupied a post of honor and usually a very dangerous one, but not so at Gettysburg, as there was no attempt made to turn either flank. The enemy falling back, we followed closely in an almost continuous skirmish with them on the road we went until we reached Waynesboro. After crossing Antietam creek, they made a decided stand, attempting several times to destroy the bridge in their rear. The good people of Waynesboro handed us food as we marched through their streets, aud encouraged us by their many deeds of kindness in the twenty-four hours we remained near their town.

For a few days more, ensued marches and skirmishes near Hagerstown and Funkstown, until the last squad of rebels were driven across the Potomac July 4th, when we marched via Harper's Ferry and down the Virginia valleys again. In the days subsequent to the Gettysburg battle, on the march we lost more men from sunstroke than wounded, the heat being our most terrible enemy.

July 23d we were attacked by a squad of rebel cavalry while we were guarding supply train near White Plains, Va. With occasional relief served as train guard to camp near Warrenton, Va. This was our long turn at this kind of duty, and the boys of company A did not admire it, preferring the battle line to managing mule trains and rebel guerrillas.

In camp, near White Sulphur Springs, the company was recruited very much by new men and return of sick and wounded, and had an inspection each Sunday, the Lord willing. One inspection here was by the colonel of the 7th Maine volunteers, a regular army officer, and he kept us standing in line three hours.

September 16th—Left Sulphur Springs, marching to Culpepper C. H., Va., and here turned out at "present arms" to receive our warm friends and comrades, the "Vermont brigade," as they returned from an expedition north to quell riots gotten up in behalf of, and to further the interest of Jefferson Davis, Esq. & Co. . Went on advance picket October 5th, at railroad bridge on the Rapidan, where for once, sharpshooting ceased, and we conversed with the enemy. Retired to Rappahannock Station night of October 10th, crossing the river, closely pressed by the enemy, but turned and recrossed the river in support of cavalry, which drove the enemy back beyond Brandy Station. At midnight of the 11th, they attacked us again, and we slowly retired, crossing the river again before daylight. Our march continued northward through the day and night, making three days and nights without rest or sleep, except that obtained under arms. We moved on in much the same style, serving in rear guard or on skirmish line, and marching alternately, without daring to unpack our knapsacks till we reached Gainesville, Va., October 19th. Resting one night, we about-faced and marched to New Baltimore, where we were moved to the front, where the cavalry fight had just ended, placed on skirmish line, but the enemy withdrew, and we were called in again and sent on like duty at Warrenton. This was probably the longest continued duty of this kind we ever did, and weary, hungry and without food, we reported to our brigade from which for several days we had been detached.

November 7th, 1863—Marched to Rappahannock Station; found rebels in some force on this side of the river. The company participated both in driving in their skirmish line, and in the subsequent charge upon the Fort, losing some wounded.

The rebels retreated to the Rapidan, and we went into camp near Brandy Station, and from that place moved on the Mine Run campaign, suffering more in three days than pen or words can ever tell. Crossing the Rapidan at Jacob's Ford (or mills), had a little brush with the enemy, where we seemed to be sent in support of a portion of 3d corps; then by movement to left, and thence to Mine Run, and in the night were formed for charge on the enemy's lines; but morning discovered to to us a frozen, icy stream, dams on it, a formidable abbattis beyond, which, with the severe cold, freezing to death of wounded pickets who had got hurt in crossing the stream, were sufficient to defer the charge. We formed in circles and ran continuous races to keep from freezing, getting no real rest day or night until we recrossed the Rapidan.

The latter part of February, and March 1st, 1864, were in reconnoitering party with Custer's Cavalry to Freeburg Mills; the cavalry pushing forward almost to Charlottesville.

During the winter, several members of company A, re-enlisted for the war, and the company received recruits enough to fill it up; Indiana county furnishing the men. The morale of the company was always good, and an inducement to friends to see that it was kept recruited with good men.

May 4th, 1864—We crossed the Rapidan, and on the 5th at noon, engaged the enemy in the Wilderness, and continued till night, driving them from their position and holding it. On the morning of the 6th, the fight was renewed without relief, ammunition being forwarded to the line. During the day were relieved from front and formed in reserve line. At sunset the rebels mustered their force for a charge, and in the dusk of evening pushed forward, flanking the 3d division, and thus compelling our brigade of 2d division to fall back and partly change front, which could not occur in that dense woods, without somewhat scattering our men, who soon rallied, and company A with others deployed, and this deployed line checked the advance of the rebels in the flank, our troops resting nearly on the old ground at 9 P. M. Company A's loss in the two days was heavy—among others Lieutenant Brown, mortally wounded.

On the night of May 8, in getting into position near Spottsylvania C. H., companies A and I ran into a rebel force trying to move to their rear in the open space between the lines, and a hand to hand fight ensued, in which Sergeant L. Brady was killed and several others wounded. The day and night of the 9th was subject to heavy artillery fire, one shot killing five men in the regiment.

May 10 was a day of continuous fighting, with a charge on the enemy's works in the evening, where our regiment captured a battery and a line of pits. Co. A's loss for the day was slight. The regiment rested on the 11th, dried their wet clothing, and prepared for the fatal 12th of May, when, in an effort to hold the ground thus far taken from the enemy, it was fought over repeatedly, each in turn having possession of the works, our regiment in one charge losing 90 men. Firing never ceased all day, and the regiment remained in the works over night and part of the 13th, and on the 14th we moved to the left of Spottsylvania, where, on Sunday, we had prayer instead of inspection. On the 17th, we moved back to the right, past Alsop farm and a little to the right of the old battle ground, and advanced on the enemy's line on the morning of the 18th, but retired under cover from the artillery fire, finding the enemy strongly fortified. Our regiment's loss here was 9 wounded and 1 killed. We immedately moved back to the left again, and then followed almost continuous active work—in skirmish May 26, then train guard, in skirmish on 28th, severe skirmish again beyond North Anna river, May 31. Being at this point on the extreme right, we became rear guard again to Cold Harbor, coming in too late to participate in the day's fight of June 1st, but we pushed to the front in the evening. The evening of June 3, we were in the general engagement along the line, but being covered by breastworks, our loss was slight. By June 5, the works were extended till the opposing forces were but a hundred yards apart, and in the continued rattle of musketry along the lines Lieut. Price was wounded. We have spoken of his bravery before, but let us record that here, when told his wound was so serious, he must go to the hospital, he cried with grief at being separated from his company. He gave his life for his country, and our flattering words affect him not. The regiment retired from the immediate front at Cold Harbor, June 6, the loss to that time in the campaign being, according to Bates' History Pennsylvania Volunteers, "in killed, wounded and missing, about 30 officers and 400 enlisted men."

The regiment now moved towards James river, crossing familiar grounds of the campaign of 1862, and on this march some of company A had no rest or sleep for three days and nights, except under arms by the wayside a few moments at a time. We crossed the James river with the rear of the supply train on the night of June 16th, reaching the vicinity of Petersburg on the 17th, weary and footsore, yet we moved to the front near Appomattox river. The next day we supported some colored troops that stormed the pits and small forts in our front, which we occupied under fire from skirmishers till midnight, June 21, when we moved a few miles to the left, where our skirmish line was left to expend all its ammunition, and fall back, losing considerable ground before support was got forward. While the regiment's loss was slight, we felt very severely the loss to the 4th Vermont, which was captured almost entire in the dense thicket in our front and near the Welden railroad. There was a feeling akin to brotherhood existing between the 61st and the "Vermont brigade."

June 29, hearing the sound of Wilson's guns in the rear of the enemy, we were pushed forward to Ream's Station but too late to help him. Captured a few rebels scattered in the woods, recaptured a few of Wilson's cavalrymen, buried some of his dead, gathered up some "contrabands" hid in the woods, and brought in some caissons abandoned by both sides, also tore up three or four miles of railroad track, burning the ties and heating and bending the rails.

July 9th, embarked at City Point and landed at Washington, D. C., July 11th, when we were told that the rebels were menacing the defenses of Washington, militiamen and citizens, holding them back. Flags and banners were flung to the breeze, kerchiefs waved by the ladies, and cheers from groups on side walks, as our veteran Sixth corps advance moved out of 7th street in our usual "arms at will," and "forced march" style, and soon occupied ground within the line of forts. On the 12th moved out and found the enemy in considerable force in front of Fort Stephens. The rebel outposts called to each other—"The army of the Potomac!" so loud as to be heard by our company. The fight was sharp, the loss to Co. A three killed, six wounded, and this loss considering our reduced numbers at this time, was heavy, for very few of the wounded in the summer's campaign had yet returned to the company. Horrace A. Ellis, of Co. A, 7th Wisconsin, in hospital recovering from wounds, got a gun and went into the battle by the side of his brothers Asaph and John, of whom John Ellis was killed.

In pursuit of the enemy we crossed the Potomac at White's ford, wading it—water some places to our belts—and at Leesburg, Va., found rebel guerrillas secreted in the houses. These murderers were the most contemptible of all men, and the annoyance to soldiers in the ranks, the fact that some of our commanders sacredly guarded their property with Union troops as we marched up and down the valleys, until circumstances compelled the scorching they afterwards got. Company A, or the 61st regiment rarely found a man of Union proclivities in these Virginia valleys. They were easily recognized if only suspected of being Union men, for the rebels drove off their stock. Finding the enemy's rear guard at Snicker's gap and Early safe in the Shenandoah valley, we retraced our steps to Leesburg, and thence to Fort Gaines, D. C., on July 23d.

July 26th, marched through Maryland to Harper's Ferry, Va., and after much manouvering, "making history," it was called then, the troops finally got to Frederickstown, Md. It could scarcely be called marching, for all seemed to finally get to doing about as they pleased, and army curses heaped upon the imaginable head of General Wright, who was generally far enough ahead to be out of danger. Men fell by scores from the effects of sun stroke, unable to march and not half ambulances enough to carry the sick; not over 100 men of our brigade stacked arms when halt was ordered at Frederick, Md., on the evening of July 30th. These were days of hardships that will never be forgotten while soldiers live to tell the story. The well founded complaints of the men finally wrested from the commanding officer an order respecting the subsequent marches, which being enforced by the men themselves made matters much better. The boys of the 61st will likely never forget the first morning's march after the order was issued, when the regulation hour by the order had come for breakfast, how they stopped in a field, when almost to a wood, the hour had come and they meant to enforce the order, and after that an aid came back to inform us of the hour.

August 3 we started for the Shenandoah valley again, coming up with a rebel force at Cedar Creek, Va., they having by this time got the harvest pretty well off in the valley, General Early being as good a harvester as the rebels ever had. Had quite a severe skirmish with the rebels here August 13th, driving them back to Strasburg, when it seemed about time for us to retrograde, and we reached Charlestown on the 18th.

August 21, 1864, the last day of the three-year service for the first 100 men of the company—we copy notes taken on the field: "We were much surprised this morning by the rebels coming down on our pickets on the pike and driving them back. Our regiment was chosen from our brigade to go to their support. Regiments followed each other till three from our brigade were on the line, and our regiment engaged with the enemy. Are losing a good many men. Lieutenant Price wounded again, we fear mortally. The regiment remains in the line at noon, and ammunition is being taken to it. We have lost four officers at noon. The regiment is being relieved at dark. Two more of company A wounded, but not forced to leave the field. Regiment's loss, four killed and eighteen wounded." At one o'clock on the morning of August 22, those whose term of enlistment had expired received orders to march from the line of battle, and the regiment was ordered back at daylight. Thus ended the three years of service. We remained with the company and regiment till September 3, when others time expired; and on that day, near Berryville, Va., we took leave of the regiment, company A about fifteen and probably seventy in the regiment. Were supplied with one hundred rounds of ammunition if need be to fight our way to Harper's Ferry. Were mustered out at Harrisburg September 7, and reached Indiana September 9, 1864.

The veterans and recruits, nearly all veterans in service now, retained the name and place in the battalion, receiving by consolidation the veterans of company H, few in number, and we would note here that company A was the only one in the regiment that kept recruited as the war progressed, consequently formed a large part in the battallion which was engaged in the fight at Opequan creek, September 19th. Was in the storming of Fisher's Hill September 22, and also in the engagement at Cedar creek October 19, 1864, "and for gallantry in this engagement was highly complimented by the commanding general."

It was then moved back to Petersburg, was recruited to the proportions of a regiment again by the addition of companies of one year men, and March 25, 1865, was in the attack and storming of the rebel's out works and in the front of the assault upon the main works at 4 o'clock next morning, in both cases successful. Pushing forward after the retreating forces, the regiment took during the day "Two rebel colors, a wagon train, fifty-two men, sixteen horses, and three brass twelve pounders with caissons."

On the morning of April 3, 1865, the regiment "fired its last shot at the enemy," and its active service ceased.

Many of the survivors of company A live in Indiana county, and we believe, without exception, are respectable and useful citizens. The name of Dr. George R. Lewis, of Indiana, Pa., belongs in this history. He served as surgeon of the regiment from September, 1863, to the close of the war, having been promoted from assistant surgeon of the 54th Pennsylvania Volunteers.

BATTLES AND PRINCIPAL SKIRMISHES.

Battles—Fair Oaks, Va., May 31, 1862; Malvern Hill, Va., July 1, 1862; Fredericksburg, Va., May 3 and 4, 1863; Wilderness, Va., May 5 and 6, 1864; Spottsylvania, Va., May 10 to 12, 1864; Cold Harbor, Va., June 1 to 5, 1864; Fort Stephens, D. C., July 12, 1864; Opequan creek, Va., September 19, 1864; Fisher's Hill, Va., September 22, 1864; Cedar creek, Va., October 19, 1864; Petersburg, March 25 and 26, 1865.

Skirmishes—Seven Pines, June 27, 1862; Charles City Cross Roads, June 29, 1862; Sharpsburg, Md., September 18, 1862; Williamsport, Md., September 20, 1862; Fredericksburg, Va., December 13, 1862; Gettysburg, Pa., July 3, 1863; White Plains, Va., July 23, 1863; Brandy station, October 11, 1863; near Jacob's ford, December, 1863; Spottsylvania, May 8, 1864; Spottsylvania, May 18, 1864; Po river, May 26, 1864; North Anna river, May 31, 1864; Petersburg, June 18, 1864; Weldon railroad, June 21, 1864; Cedar creek, August 13, 1864; Charlestown, Va., August 21, 1864; Cedar creek, August, 1864; Skirmish, April 3, 1865.

SIXTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT, PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was recruited under orders of the Secretary of War, authorizing J. F. Staunton to recruit a regiment. The larger part of this regiment was recruited in the eastern part of the State, with a portion from Westmoreland, Indiana, Jefferson, and Clarion counties.

The officers of the regiment were: J. F. Staunton, colonel; Horace B. Burnham, lieutenant-colonel; Harry White, major; John F. Young, adjutant, and Robert Barr, surgeon. The three last named all of Indiana county.

In April, 1862, it went into service at Annapolis, Md., doing duty as railroad guards; afterwards furnishing guards for camp parole. The number of men from Indiana county being small, Sergeant W. H. Fairbank was sent as recruiting officer to the county, where, under direction of Major Harry White, he recruited about 100 men, which were distributed in seven companies of the regiment.

In February, 1863, it moved to Harper's Ferry, thence to Berryville, Va., where it joined Milroy's force in the Shenandoah valley, after which, for a time, its duty was guard duty at the passes from the Shenandoah to the Virginia valleys, and twice reconnoitred as far as Upperville, Va. Towards the 1st of April, 1863, it was stationed at Berryville with the brigade to which it was attached from that time till June, engaged in the attempt to prevent the calvary raids of the rebels Jones, Imboden, and Mosby, who frequently attempted raids into Maryland and Pennsylvania.

General R. H. Milroy at this time commanded the force in the valley, consisting of about 10,000 men, under orders from General Schenck at Baltimore, as department commander.

The bulk of Lee's army quietly slipped away from the lines at Fredericksburg and moved northward. So well did he elude any vigilance there might have been on the part of General Hooker, that the first intimation General Milroy had of the movement, was the presence of rebel troops in large numbers pressing into the valley by the gaps connecting with the Virginia valleys. Even then he might have retreated, but it seems was loth to believe an extensive movement northward could be made without him being apprised of the fact by Hooker or Halleck.

At a signal from Winchester, the troops near Berryville started for that place, but found their way already occupied by the advance of the rebel force moving in rear of the position at Winchester. The 67th regiment made a detour to escape an attack, marching thirty miles to join Milroy, reaching him at ten o'clock, P. M. After a short rest it was ordered into the pits surrounding Star fort, one and a half miles northwest of Winchester. Advancing at noon to the relief of the 87th Pennsylvania Volunteers, in the suburbs of the town, they held that position under a hot fire till night, when it was ordered back to the fort.

General Milroy, finding his force surrounded, determined to strike some point in force and cut a way through. Spiking his guns, drowning his powder, and leaving his trains, he got his troops under way before daylight. Four miles out the Martinsburg road, he met the enemy in force. The 67th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and 6th Maryland, were deployed to the right, and were not in the charge. After awaiting orders for awhile and receiving none, they attempted a detour to the right to pass left flank of the enemy, but ran into a strong force where, in an unequal contest they fought gallantly but to no purpose. Being completely overpowered, they scattered, some of the officers and men escaping, but a large proportion were taken prisoners, among them Major Harry White; the 6th Maryland escaping in the meantime by a further detour to the right. Of the portion taken prisoners, the men were released in from two to three months, but their officers were detained about one year. Major Harry White, then a member of the State senate, and that body a tie on all questions of importance without his vote, was subjected to greater indignities; hardships were imposed upon him in prison, and bloodhounds put upon his track in an attempted escape. Those escaping reached Harper's Ferry and joined the remnant of Milroy's force, where the regiment was reorganized and assisted in fortifying Maryland Heights, and afterwards, when these fortifications were dismantled, guarded the removal of the ordnance to Washington, where they received the news of the victory to our arms at Gettysburg, and the fall of Vicksburg. The regiment then joined the army of the Potomac near Frederick, Md., and was assigned to duty with the third army corps.

On the 11th of October the paroled men now exchanged, joined the regiment, which then participated in the remaining movements of the fall campaign, going into winter quarters near Brandy station, Va. During the winter of 1863–4, most all eligible re-enlisted, and about 350 of them were furloughed in a body, taking their arms with them, the remainder being attached to the 138th Pennsylvania Volunteers, for duty until their return, serving in the campaign of the spring of 1864, in the Wilderness, before Spottsylvania, and in the march towards Richmond and Petersburg, thus passing through one of the most terrible campaigns of the war, in which a very few regiments served without heavy loss.

The veterans returned to Belle Plain, Va., at the expiration of furlough; remained on duty there a week, thence to Fredericksburg, and to Port Royal, where Col. Staunton was placed in command of the post, it being at that time a base of supplies. The next duty was at White House landing, in guard of Sheridan's supply train while he was on a raid in some force to Lynchburg, Va. While there they were attacked by rebel cavalry, June 13th, which did not make a direct assault upon them, but brought a battery to bear on their position. Under a severe fire from the battery and skirmishers they succeeded in removing the wagon train to the south side of the Pamunky. Sheridan's arrival just in time probably saved them another visit to rebel prison pens. On the 15th of June they started with the wagon train for the James river, and with the exception of a skirmish with rebel cavalry at White Oak swamp reached Petersburg, Va., without further trouble, where they were joined by the detachment serving with the 138th Pa. In the meantime the division to which the 67th belonged was transferred to the Sixth army corps and participated in the movement to the Weldon railroad in the attempt to reach and relieve Wilson's cavalry.

On the 6th of July the regiment shipped for Baltimore, Gen. Early then having again invaded Maryland; various delays hindered the regiment reaching Frederick with their division, but left the cars near Monocacy, marching to New Market, joined the division in its retreat from the field at Monocacy, where Gen. Ricketts had been overpowered by Early. Somebody was to blame for unnecessary delay between Baltimore and Monocacy or New Market, and Col. Staunton, in command of the three delayed regiments, was relieved of command.

Returning to Baltimore, the 67th quartered at the Relay House until it moved to join the 6th corps, when it participated in the marches up and down the valleys of Maryland and northern Virginia in the campaign of the summer, all of which availed little to the country, but was one of the hardships that the men cannot forget. Captain Barry commanded the regiment at this time. The command devolving upon Adjutant General Young, of Indiana county, in September, 1864.

The regiment was in the engagement of September 19th, at the crossing of Opequan Creek and taking of Winchester. Being on the extreme right of the 6th corps, and a space left between it and the left of the 19th corps, which was widened by the 19th not getting forward so rapidly as the 6th, the rebels interposed a force in the gap, striking the 67th on the flank when it was in the act of wheeling off a rebel battery already captured. Men are now living who remember having hold of the battery, trying to take it away by hand, when compelled to forsake it and run to prevent capture. The regiment soon rallied again and its 3d division was first to reach the heights at Winchester, from which it had tried to fight its way out one year before. The regiment's loss in this fight was heavy. The companies were mostly led by sergeants who served as captains, doing commissioned officer's work on sergeant's pay, not being able to get promotion on account of their superiors in prison, holding their rank, hence the usual incentive was lacking, loyalty alone governing their actions which deserve special attention.

At Fisher's Hill, September 22, 1864, the regiment pushed forward close under the enemy's works, sheltering as best they could until the flank charge was made by the 8th corps, when it joined in the general advance and storming of the rebel position, joining in the pursuit of the scattered foe, striking the rear guard at Harrisburg, where the regiment was sent on the skirmish line in the evening, but by morning the enemy had disappeared. Returning to Cedar creek, it was in camp, some of the men sleeping when the attack was made on our lines, October 19th. Yet the regiment formed as indeed the entire 6th corps, all of which formed as well as possible, and kept up a running fight until the arrival of Sheridan on the field, when in the general advance it fully maintained its credit, suffering considerable loss of men.

At the closing of the fall campaign, the regiment returned to Petersburg. Major Young resigning, the command devolved upon Capt. John C. Carpenter, of Indiana county. The regiment participated in the storming of the strongholds at Petersburg, the spring of 1865, and the subsequent movements against Lee's army—then moved towards Danville, N. C., where Gen. Johnston still had a strong rebel force—and with this, its active work ended. The regiment returned to Washington, and was mustered out July 14th, 1865.

In the months of March and April, 1865, one full company of one year men was enlisted in Indiana county, for the regiment, reaching it after its active service was over. The company was assigned as company B, taking the place of old company B, which had been consolidated with company E. It was a fine body of men, many of whom had seen service before, and all of whom enlisted during the days of the seige of Richmond and Petersburg, and deserve mention in connection with the regiment.

SEVENTY-FOURTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment, for the three years' service, was organized at Pittsburgh, and was composed entirely of Germans. In the fall of 1864, after the three-year men were discharged the regiment, composed of veterans and recruits, was assigned to duty in West Virginia, and seven new companies assigned to it of men who enlisted for one year. One of these which in Bates' History of Penn'a Volunteers is accredited to Indiana and Westmoreland counties, we find was recruited and organized in Indiana county—Captain Gawin A. McLain, Lieutenants John Kinter and John McWilliams, and was mustered into service March 11, 1865. Captain McLain was discharged May 8, and Lieutenant Kinter pro captain, and in the county it is best known as "Captain Kinter's company."

Another company accredited to Pittsburgh was largely made up of Indiana county men, the balance nearly all Jefferson county men—Captain John G. Wilson. Captain Wilson was discharged May 8, and Peter C. Spencer, of Indiana county, pro captain. Captain Spencer was formerly of the 105th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and P. E. Horn, second lieutenant, had served three years in the 61st Pennsylvania Volunteers. This company was mustered out March 1 to 15, 1865.

These companies served as guard on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, upon which raids had frequently been made by rebel guerrillas, remaining on duty in this capacity, or in guarding government supplies, as long as their services were needed, and were discharged August 29, 1865. We cannot think that the rebels would have done much injury to this road or its branches, except so far as it would be an injury at the expense of the government, but the guard was more for the purpose of securing safety to northern passengers and government stores being sent over the road.

SEVENTY-EIGHTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Companies A and D of this regiment were recruited in Indiana county, company A receiving a few men from Armstrong county, and company D a few from Cambria and Clearfield. The only representation on field or staff, however, was Adam Lowry, Quartermaster.

The regiment rendezvoused near Kittanning, Armstrong county, and William Sirwell, of Armstrong county, was elected Colonel.

When ordered to the front in October, 1861, it was attached to McCook's division, army of the Cumberland, and during its term of service was in the western army.

In the several camps at Nolin's Station, south of Nolin creek, Bacon creek, Mamfordsville and Green river, its duties were drill and preparation for future service. When the campaign of the spring of 1862 was commenced, the 78th was ordered to Nashville, Tennessee, and for a time guarded the railroad from Nashville to Columbia, and on the 1st of May, were ordered to garrison Palaski, Tenn. On the 12th of May, it joined in an expedition against the rebel cavalry, which escaped across the Tennessee river, and the regiment returned to its old quarters. Its next duty was to guard on the Tennessee and Alabama railroad, and next, rear guard to Buell's army in its northern movement to intercept the rebel General Bragg, who was moving into Kentucky; and during Buell's movement into Kentucky the regiment remained at Nashville, Tenn., besieged by rebel forces. It was frequently attacked, but repulsed the foe each time, and as it became necessary to scour the country for supplies for the hungry garrison, skirmishes were brought about by these aggressive movements. On the 26th of October, Gen. Rosencrans' forces reached Nashville, and the garrison could again hear from their comrades elsewhere. For a month more the regiment guarded Nashville, or did camp duty near, until the campaign against Bragg's rebel force was commenced.

At Stone river the regiment was hotly engaged, Negley's entire division fighting more than their numbers. Co. A lost heavily, and from Lieut. Braughler we learn that the slight loss in Co. D is accounted for by the position they occupied in the line. Being in a small ravine were more protected, men on both right and left more exposed to the fire of the enemy. The regiment was engaged in the fight part of two days, and did credit to itself and its leaders, losing in killed and wounded 190 men. After the battle the regiment did provost guard duty at Murfreesboro until the spring of 1863.

In June, 1863, the regiment participated in driving the rebels from Tallahoma, across the Cumberland mountains and across the Tennessee river, but without any serious engagement.

It was next in the movement across the Tennessee river, in August, and thence across the mountain range, encountering many difficulties, especially in getting down to Lookout valley when bridge building over gorges had to be done as they progressed.

After foraging supplies for itself and others in the valley it proceeded over Lookout mountain and Mission ridge into the Chickamauga valley. Here a detachment of the regiment was attacked and held a largely superior force in check until supports came up. In General Rosencrans withdrawal towards Chattanooga it became engaged September 19th and 20th. At Chattanooga for one month it was constantly annoyed by shot and shell from the enemy's batteries, finally participating in the struggle which drove the enemy from Lookout mountain, afterwards assisting in fortifying the heights on the mountain itself, their provisions being carried to them on pack mules.

In the campaign of 1864, it was engaged at Tunnel Hill, Buzzard Roost Gap, Reseca, Dallas, New Hope Church, and Kenesaw mountain; thence moved to Chattanooga and guarded railroad supply trains for the army. It was then first ordered to Tallahoma, and next to Athens, Alabama, but both orders countermanded, it again marched to Nashville. Assisting in the affray of the 27th at Pulaski, it again returned to Nashville, thence to Franklin and as mounted infantry served a short time under Gen. Rosseau in southern Tennessee, returning to Nashville a few days after its term of service expired. It was next ordered to Pennsylvania for muster out of service. Few regiments did so much of the same kind of duty, and in this sketch we have given but a faint outline of its various movements, and of the suffering from lack of food at Nashville and Chattanooga, or the suffering from effects of the southern climate they were called upon to endure. We would call attention to the death rate in these companies as indicated on the rolls, and note the fate of the McLaughlin family, large and apparently healthy men, "six-footers" the boys say, all four of whom died, victims to the climate.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRD PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This unfortunate regiment was recruited in the counties of Clarion, Butler, Armstrong, Allegheny and Indiana. Co. G was almost all from Indiana county. Enlisted in the fall of 1861 and winter of 1861 and '62, at a time when the Federal Government was hard pressed to arm and uniform its troops, the regiment suffered for want of proper clothing. Being sent to the front in the spring of 1862, its first service was in the miasmatic swamps of the Peninsula, and it experienced greater suffering than regiments more used to hardships by having wintered in camps at the front. It participated in the battle at Williamsburg, Va., during the rebels' retreat toward Richmond, and came out of the fight with credit; captured a rebel flag during the engagement, changing position under fire without a break, going on advance picket for the night after the close of the battle.

The regiment was among the first troops at Seven Pines, on the Richmond road, after crossing the Chickahominy river, and for a few days was engaged in constructing temporary breastworks. Part of the regiment was on picket in front of Seven Pines, May 31, 1862, when the enemy advanced in force on that point and Fair Oaks Station, and the regiment soon became engaged in support of the picket line, where it did creditable work, falling back slowly until, it is claimed, the Union guns, in attempting to get range of the rebel lines, fired into its ranks, when it scattered, falling back to the earth works, afterwards getting into the works in detachments, where they remained till night. This regiment, with others of Casey's division, fell into disrepute here, which, in the cooler judgment of survivors of the war, who have had eighteen years in which to reflect, may now be deemed unjust. Much was expected of Gen. Casey, and but little performed, but his men were not well drilled,—the enemy was in strong force, as was fully demonstrated by the bloody field of Fair Oaks—other regiments, not of Casey's division, failed later in the day, and we cannot help but believe that the plan all through the early part of the war, of fighting a brigade or a division at a time, was a fatal mistake. * * The loss in disabled and killed in the 103d was heavy, and speaks in their defense at this place. The regiment participated in the battle at Malvern Hill, and served on rear guard in the further retreat to Harrison's Landing.

Leaving the Peninsula at the same time with McClellan's army, by special order Wessel's brigade was sent to Norfolk, thus separating from the army of the Potomac. It was next moved to Suffolk, and assisted in fortifying the place; also, built winter quarters, which were left on December 5, 1862 when the brigade moved to Newbern, N. C., where it joined the forces under General Foster. A little later the regiment was in the movement toward the interior, having a slight skirmish at Southwest creek, and supported a battery in the attack upon Kingston.

The 103d regiment was then ordered to cross the swamp in front and charge the enemy's works. Getting through the swamp as best they could, in mud and water, under a heavy fire from the rebel batteries, the regiment formed on the opposite side and gallantly charged and captured the enemy's works in its front, capturing almost an entire regiment of infantry. Other regiments were hastily brought forward and the enemy driven from the entire field.

The regiment then returned to Newbern, and were stationed in barracks at Neuse river, where it remained for the winter.

In the spring of 1863, it was moved to Plymouth, N. C., on the Roanoke river, which place it assisted in fortifying, and afterwards occupied. The available force at that point being only about 1,600 men in the spring of 1864. The rebels in the meantime constructed the ram Albemarle, which was run past Plymouth in the night without discovery. It immediately attacked and destroyed the Union gunboats in the river, and then directed its fire on the little garrison. At the same time a land force of 7,000 to 8,000 men moved upon the works. The garrison fought through the day against hope, and on the next day, April 20th, was compelled to surrender. Then ensued suffering and starvation of which but few are now left to tell the tale.

Bates' History says: "The officers were immediately separated from the men, not again to be united, the latter being sent to Andersonville to starve, and die by scores; the former to Macon, Georgia, and subsequently those of the highest grade, including Colonel Lehman, to Charleston, S. C., where they were placed under the fire of the powerful Union batteries, then engaged in bombarding the city." The wounded were left in the hands of the enemy, most of whom died. Of about 400 men and officers of the 103d taken prisoners, 132 died at Andersonville, seven more at Florence, some by the way in transfer to the coast—others on the way to Camp Parole—others again at Camp Parole—while a very few reached home on furlough to eventually die of disease caused by starvation. Indiana county mourns her loved brave who were thus inhumanly put to death.

The proof is evident that we can be generous as well as brave, in the fact that the lives of these murderers were spared by a government representing the widows and orphans of the brave men whose lives were thus pitilessly crushed by concerted plan. When a brother fell by the enemy's bullet, we accepted it as the result of war, but when fiends like Wirtz were put in charge of our loved ones, with orders to starve them into a condition to unfit them for further service, before exchanging for well-fed rebel prisoners, and we see the evidence that he did his work so well, it adds poison to the dart already so keenly felt by the bereaved ones.

In preparing a roster of Indiana county soldiers, we notice the numbers of some of the graves are about 11,000, which indicates that just that many were starved to death before their turn came.

On June 25, 1865, eighty-one men were mustered out of service, the remainder of that regiment once numbering over 1,000 men. A few had been mustered out by expiration of term, but nearly all had re-enlisted for the war.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was recruited by Captaim Amor A. McKnight, of Jefferson county, under permission granted by the Secretary of War. Captain McKnight had served in three months' volunteers, as captain of company I, 8th regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers. The regiment was organized at Pittsburgh, Pa., September 9, 1861, then nine companies, of which B, G, H, and I were almost wholly from Jefferson county; C, Clarion county; D, Clearfield county; A, Jefferson and Indiana counties; F, Indiana county; and K, Indiana county; the first organization being a militia company, it was recruited to the required number from Westmoreland, Clearfield, and Jefferson. Company E was obtained from Col. Leasure's "Roundhead" regiment, after both regiments had gone to the front. This company was almost wholly from Westmoreland county.

During the winter of 1861–2, the regiment encamped south of Alexandria, Va., and the time was spent in drill and detail work on forts, with an occasional visit to the vicinity of Pohick church on picket duty, or in expectancy of meeting the foe, for frequent alarms were manifest on this portion of the line; a detachment of the 105th receiving and returning the fire of rebel pickets here on one occasion.

In March, 1862, the regiment moved by transport to the Peninsula, and suffered all that those miasmatic swamps produced of sickness, and many brave men fell victims to the climate.

During the siege of Yorktown, it was subjected frequently to fire from rebel batteries, and after the evacuation by the rebels, the regiment reached the battle line at Williamsburg, in time to relieve other worn out and weary engaged forces, and was the first to occupy the city, and its flag was triumphantly flung to the breeze on the court house.

It crossed the Chickahominy river May 23d, and moved to the Richmond and York River railroad, remaining till the 29th, when it was moved to the railroad bridge, but on the 31st, was pushed forward to the line of battle left of Fair Oaks Station, and front of Seven Pines. The seven companies first on the ground were ordered to charge upon the enemy, who now had possession of Casey's camp. Meeting the enemy at the edge of the camp, the 105th, on its portion of the line, drove the rebels back through the camp and into the woods beyond, but the right of the line being forced back, the regiment experienced difficulty in withdrawing, and waded out through the swamp. Companies A and I reaching the field a little later, were ordered into service on the left of the 57th P. V., holding their portion of the line until ordered to withdraw. Amongst others who fell was brave Lieut. Cummiskey, of Indiana. This battle, survivors tell us, was one of the most terrible of the war to this regiment. It was a day of losses to the Pennsylvania regiments, and we refer to the 23d, 61st, 63d, and others. In some histories of the war, the 105th scarcely get justice, but this may be accounted for by the manner in which written. In speaking of army corps, Keyes' corps suffered two-thirds of the loss, or 4,000 men out of a force of 12,000, while the general loss to Heintzelman's corps was not great, yet the 105th regiment sustained a loss as great as some regiments of Keyes' corps. Headley makes the loss to the 105th over 250 officers and men, but by comparing the best reports obtainable, we place the loss in killed, wounded and missing near 200. The regiment dearly earned its blood-bought laurels, but from this time to the end of the war, it never once flinched when called upon to meet the foe.

It was attacked again June 25th, when on picket duty, losing two killed and six wounded, and in the retreat to Harrison's Landing, participated in the engagement at White Oak swamp, but were not in the immediate front.

June 30th, they were engaged all day in the battle at Charles City Cross Roads, hotly engaged most of the afternoon, losing 56 in killed and wounded; and again at Malvern Hill, July 1, it lost one-half of the entire available force of the regiment in killed, wounded and missing, in that fierce and terrible battle, in which the bravery of our troops was equaled by the daring and terrible charges of the enemy. Yet our own arms were truly victorious, and the Union forces withdrew from the field the victors.

Resting at Harrison's Landing till August 14th, the regiment proceeded to Yorktown, thence to Alexandria, and on August 22d, to guard the railroad from Manassas to Catlett's Station. Portions of the regiment barely escaped capture. Companies E and K had but scarcely left Bristoe Station when Gen. Jackson's column reached it, capturing Capt. Consor and his company, (4). Companies E and K returning towards Bristoe to reconnoitre, ran into the rebel force, and the shrewdness of Sergeant Keiflim probably saved them from capture, for, when challenged, his reply, "First brigade of Kearney's division," was effective. The officers giving loud commands indicative of an advance of a full regiment, quietly ordered a retreat. The next day the regiment was in support of batteries. The morning light had discovered to them 10,000 of the enemy in battle array, which, members of Co. K say to us, was one of the grand sights of the war. The movements of the rebels could be distinctly seen, and the danger for the time seemed forgotten in the interest in the panorama. The next engagement was that of companies B and G, a detachment of the 87th N. Y. V., and a few pieces of artillery, when on guard at Manassas. Captain Craig and a portion of his command were captured after a brief struggle in the darkness of the night.

The entire regiment was brought into battle at Bull Run, August 29th, lying all day under a heavy artillery fire, until five o'clock P. M., when they were advanced to the front, stubbornly fighting, gaining and losing by turns, and were finally forced to retire. Still hopeful of ultimate success, it stopped at the railroad and renewed the fight. The rebels interposed a force rearward, causing confusion in the ranks for a time, but the regiment reformed in the face of all this, and a second retreat was ordered. The loss was great. Some who fell have never been accounted for, and are supposed to have yielded up their lives on this bloody field. It was still further engaged on the 30th, under artillery fire, a terrible ordeal for infantry. There seems nothing in war so despicable as to be subject to a destructive fire that cannot be returned for lack of range. Under cover of darkness a retreat was effected, and the next day the regiment went into position near Fairfax C. H., where it participated in the fight of the day, in a raging storm, at Chantilly, and deployed as skirmishers on the line at night.

The regiment was now withdrawn to the defenses at Washington for recuperation, and did not participate in the Maryland campaign.

After the Antietam battle, in the subsequent marches up and down the Virginia valleys, the regiment participated, and at the battle of Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862, it was moved forward to support the Pennsylvania reserves then engaged, but was too late to retrieve the disaster of the day to these noble regiments. It was moved forward in close proximity to the rebel works, and for forty-two hours lay exposed to the fire of the rebel sharpshooters and artillery, suffering a loss of three officers and eleven men. We stop here to note the fact that the rebels here positively refused to allow the wounded and dying to be removed under flag of truce, until many had died of exposure and lack of attendance. Excusers and apologists for the rebels have never given any valid reason for this, and here we began to realize how these southern demons proposed to conduct the war, this being but the beginning of hellish acts of cruelty and inhumanity, which survivors of the war can never fully condone; and what a striking contrast the tender care bestowed upon their dying left on the field at Antietam. After this the regiment had its share of the discomforts of the "Mud March," and for the winter encamped near Potomac creek, Va.

At Chancellorsville, May 1st, 1863, the regiment with its brigade, formed in battle line near Chancellor House, receiving a severe shelling, and next day went on skirmish line, and on the 3d of May, became hotly engaged with the foe, in the afternoon charging upon the works the 11th corps had hastily evacuated the day before. The first line was taken and held till the men were out of ammunition, when it fell back to Chancellor House. In leading the charge, Col. McNight fell—Capt. Kirk, of company F, of Indiana county, was killed instantly. The loss of officers and men was seventy-seven. After this battle, the Kearney badge of honor was conferred upon the commissioned officers, and those non-commissioned officers especially mentioned for bravery. Whether selecting a few in a regiment where all were brave, was wise or not we cannot judge, but we know that the recipients of the badge afterwards did honor to themselves, the donors, and their counties. Among those of Indiana county, the lot fell to Sergeant Robert Doty, afterwards killed at Gettysburg, Pa.; James Sylvis, promoted to 2d Lieutenant of company B, and George J. Reed, who died of wounds received in the Wilderness, Va. Of Jefferson county, among others we name Sergt. A. H. Mitchell who came home Captain of his company, and since the war has been for many years a resident of Indiana county.

At Gettysburg, on Pensylvania's soil, the regiment won new laurels, if such could add to its honor. It fought on the line of the Emmettsburg road, losing heavily, yet retiring in good order—the loss to the regiment being over one-half its number. Sergeant Doty, of company F., was killed in the early part of the engagement by a sharp-shooter (as supposed) while the regiment was in support of the skirmish line. During the engagement, Lieutenant McHenry, of company K, was wounded and disabled for further service. We would gladly mention others did space permit, but we quote Col. Craig, who said: "the one hundred and fifth never fought better than at Gettysburg," and this was great praise, for of the battle at Fair Oaks, Headley's History says: "Napoleon's veterans never stood firmer under a devastating fire." Following this battle, Gen. Sickles having lost a leg and disabled for service, the 2d and 3d corps were consolidated, and the 3d corps ceased as a distinctive organization.

After Lee was driven south, in the retrogade to Centreville, Va., the regiment became engaged with the rebel cavalry at Auburn, Va., September 13th, 1862. In the movement southward again, had a slight skirmish at Kelly's Ford, and a sharp one at Locust Grove; thence moved to Mine Run, and suffered the extreme cold and fatigue of that short but terrible campaign, and during the winter of 1863-4, nearly all the available force of the regiment re-enlisted for the war, and the regiment was furloughed in a body.

May 4th, 1864, it crossed the Rapidan, and entered upon the Wilderness campaign, passing over the field of Chancellorsville of one year before. They found the bones of their comrades exposed to the elements, for the rebels had never buried them, only throwing a little dirt or rubbish over the bodies where they lay, the skull of Capt. Kirk, protruding from his sepulchre, and some of his bones exposed to the air. His remains were recognized by distinctive marks. It is hard to write these things of "southern chivalry," but all manly virtues seemed to have left the breasts of leaders and followers, and even now, when cooler judgment should rule, many of them glory most in what was most to their shame. On the evening of the 5th of May, the regiment became engaged in the Wilderness, having a severe battle, losing the Colonel, badly wounded, and Lieut. Colonel, mortally wounded, and many brave officers of the line dead or wounded; among the latter we name Lieut. Wm. Kimple and James Sylvis. Again on the 6th, the regiment was moved front and participated in the terrible struggle of the day, where none could tell the turn of battle except by sound, and on the 7th, were in reconnoitering force, to ascertain the rebel position. The remnant of the 63d Pennsylvania volunteers, was now assigned to duty with the 105th, and on the 9th, at Potomac river, the regiment was severely shelled by the enemy, and afterwards, during the progress of the battle of days before Spottsylvania, was in the successful charge led by General Hancock on the enemy's works, Lieut. A. H. Mitchell, of company A, capturing the flag of the 18th North Carolina regiment; Corporal Kendig of company A, 63d, capturing the flag of another North Carolina regiment. The color bearer of 105th being disabled, Sergeant John W. Smith, of company F, was appointed color bearer, and was killed at Petersburg, a month later.

The regiment participated in the battles from May 9th to 18th, and in the subsequent movements reached the North Anna at Taylor's bridge, and charging on the enemy without firing, drove him, capturing some of the works, and held the position until night, thence by way of Hanovertown on the Pamunkey river, Salem Church, and Tolopotomy creek to Cold Harbor, taking position in general line at a point near the Mechanicsville road, and took part in the series of battles at Cold Harbor. It is told of Wm. W. Hazlett and Charles Gill, of Co. F, that during Hancock's charge of the rebel line they were taken prisoners. Being stripped of all except clothing they were ordered to the rear. Picking up guns in the rear somewhere they started for the Union lines, encountering a company of rebels between the two picket lines. By a little ruse on their part they succeeded in inducing the company to ground arms, and the two boys marched them prisoners to Gen. Hancock's headquarters. The General afterwards granted them a furlough of thirty-five days, but Gill in the meantime had been wounded and captured, his leg amputated, and could not take advantage of the merited favor. Hazlett was of Georgeville, Indiana county, and Gill of Meadville, Pa.

The 105th performed an active part in the battles before Petersburg, Va., June 16th to 30th, and we give the summing up of its losses in the summer campaign by quoting from the history of the 105th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers: "During the months of May and June the regiment lost three commissioned officers, killed, fifteen wounded and one missing; 61 enlisted men killed, 168 wounded and 20 missing; total 268. When they started in the campaign they had 331 guns and 21 officers; at this date, July 4th, they had 121 guns, the entire force. The list of killed did not include those who died after being sent to northern hospitals."

In July, 1864, by additions in recruits forwarded by Gov. Curtin, the regiment was enabled to hold its organization, and the 63d Penna. Vols, by its own choice, was consolidated with it in preference to all others, having served in the same brigade for three years, and as part of the regiment for the spring and summer. Thus the brave and reliable 63d ceased to exist as an independent organization.

We cannot follow the regiment in the arduous work and duties of the siege of Petersburg, more than to say it was frequently engaged with the enemy, in each instance keeping up its well earned reputation for bravery and efficiency.

In the closing campaign of the war at Hatcher's run and Sailor's creek it did excellent service in the battles, and in the capture of men, ordnance and supplies after the assault and victory at the latter place. By this time Wm. Kimple had by a series of promotions become captain of Co. F, and in like manner Milton W. Adair captain, and John M. Bruce 1st lieutenant of Co. K; all three of these men had enlisted as privates in 1861.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIFTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized and mustered for nine months' service in the latter part of August, 1862. James R. Porter, of Indiana county, was appointed colonel, and the staff officers partly from the three Indiana county companies A, D, and I, commanded by Captains Samuel T. Nicholson, John G. Wilson and John A. Kinter.

The term of service expired at a time when drilled and effective men were needed at the front, and were relieved of service when in the presence of the enemy which had twice defeated the Union forces in the attempt to effect a permanent lodgment south of the Rappahannock. A number of the men of the Indiana county companies, after a short visit to their homes, reenlisted in the regiment of three year men at the front, and we find their names in the 40th, 41st, 55th, 61st, 67th, 78th and 105th regiments; also in the 4th and 14th calvary; those remaining going into the 206th regiment for one year's service, or in the companies enlisted in 1865 for one year's service, or assigned to 67th and 74th regiments, and we find it almost impossible to glean out of all this list the remaining ones. We presume the same statement is true in regard to companies F and G from Westmoreland, and B from Jefferson counties, for most all of the list of regiments we named, received recruits largely from these counties.

The regiment was composed of excellent men, and with the patriotic spirit evidenced, no doubt desired to make a more effective record, but General Wadsworth, upon its arrival at Washington, assigned it to duty in detachments as provost guard, prison guard and kindred duties, till April, 1863, when it joined the forces on the Rappahannock near Fredericksburg, and was assigned to duty with first brigade, third division, first army corps.

April 29, 1863, the regiment had an introduction to genuine warfare in a sort of long range duel with sharpshooters on the opposite bank of the Rappahannock; by a brisk fire, preventing them from picking off our gunners at the batteries in position near the river. During the day the regiment lost some wounded. It remained in support of the batteries until ordered to join Hooker's force at Chancellorsville, where it participated losing a few men prisoners when on duty as skirmishers in front of its brigade, but did not become engaged.

This regiment did all duty required of it at any time, and many of the men afterwards served in the hard fought battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania C. H., Cold Harbor and Petersburg, in all of which some of the above named regiments were hotly engaged. Quite a number of crippled and disabled ones can refer to the 135th regiment as the preparatory school through which they passed.

COMPANY E, ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-EIGHTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This company was recruited in Indiana county by John F. Sutton, assisted by J. H. Benford, but was partly made up of men from Jefferson and Armstrong counties. Sutton had some military experience, having enlisted for three months' service in 19th Ohio volunteers, participating in the defeat of the rebels at Rich Mountain, West Va., and also in driving them from Beverly. He had also assisted in recruiting company G, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers. The company was fully organized, and mustered into service September 2, 1862, and assigned to 148th Pennsylvania volunteers, Colonel James A. Beaver, of Centre county. Charles Stewart, captain of the company, was wounded at Chancellorsville and resigned, Lieutenant John F. Sutton succeeding to the captaincy.

The three companies from Indiana, Jefferson, and Clarion, formed a very effective force in the regiment, and did work for which Pennsylvania's history gives no credit, but it is our business to write of Indiana county soldiers, and we therefore correct errors only as far as Indiana county men are concerned.

The first battle was at Chancellorsville May 1st, 2d, and 3d, 1863, a terrible initiation, but came out of that unfortunate battle with honors gained by bravery and duty; the loss in the regiment was one hundred and twenty-five killed and wounded.

We omit the routine of marches, which were similar to those already written in the 61st, 40th, and others, until we reach the field at Gettysburg July 2, 1863, where the 148th occupied a position in what was called the "Wheatfield" near "Round Top." Here for one hour the regiment was engaged in a deadly contest, and again on the 3d came into action in the general attack along the lines. No pen can describe the scene at Gettysburg—author and artist both have failed, and the name Gettysburg indicates daring, bravery, and slaughter we cannot portray.

In the advance down the valleys of Virginia again, the regiment participated in all movements of the second corps to which it was attached.

In October, during the retreat of the army of the Potomac to Drainsville, the 148th was in the engagement near Auburn Mills and Bristoe Station. Upon the advance again to south of the Rappahannock, it participated in the Mine Run campaign, one of short duration, but memorable on account of suffering.

May 3, 1854, the regiment crossed the Rapidan, stopping on the ground fought over just one year before, Lieut. James M. Sutton sleeping on the same spot upon which he had slept one year before. During the two first days in the Wilderness the regiment was not called into action on the front, acting only as supports to the troops engaged on the night of the 7th, within range of the enemy's rifles, and were finally pushed forward on the skirmish line. In the thicket of brush, which all so well remember, it was very difficult in some instances to tell friend from foe, and here Lieut. J. M. Sutton, with privates D. Sutton and Wm. M. Hallowell, were ordered to discover the position. Creeping forward on their hands and knees to find who were in front, they could distinctly hear the rebels talking. In further reconnoissance they discovered a line proving to be a New York regiment, also in trouble, having no connection on the right. The two then joined, forming a line and closing the gap. This incident is but one of many such that occurred in troops getting into position in the woods in midnight darkness. On the night of the 8th, the regiment, while on picket, got divided by a mistaken order none have ever been able to account for, and it again became the duty of Lieut. Sutton to discover their position. In the light of the great fire of the rebels' burning breastworks, it was a dangerous mission, and in the terrible rumbling noise of two moving armies, a difficult one. Halted at one point, whether by friend or foe he knew not, he promptly answered, giving the name of the regiment, when he found a detachment of a regiment, in command of a lieutenant, lost, and formed in hollow square, for protection from assault on any quarter. After much difficulty, all was righted, and the movement continued towards Po river. Such were the nights in the wilderness, never to be forgotten by the participants.

Crossing the Po river on the 9th, the 148th drove the force of the enemy from the hill beyond, suffering some loss, and on the 10th were in the terrible fight best known as Spottsylvania. The rebels drove in their skirmishers with serious loss, and the regiment was finally compelled to fall back on its brigade, having lost 200 officers and men. Lieut. James M. Sutton was wounded, losing a leg. Again in the terrible carnage of the 12th, the 148th was engaged, being in the successful charge of the morning upon the enemy's first line of works, and in the after struggle at the second line, losing 20 killed, and the usual proportion of wounded.

It then participated in the series of marches, skirmishes and battles on the line from the Wilderness to Petersburg; at Cold Harbor being in a charge on the enemy's works, which was successful at the time, but could not be held, the entire line falling back and fortifying another line. For a further history of this we refer to sketch of 55th Pa. Vols. The work of Pennsylvania regiments in the army of the Potomac is so inseparably connected, we ask the reader to read all, as though he read the history of one.

On the evening of June 16th the regiment, with others, was repulsed in a charge on the enemy's works at Petersburg, but the contest was kept up the 17th and 18th, until the enemy abandoned a portion of his works. From the 15th to the 30th, it was continuous duty and fight, and on the 27th of July, at Deep Bottom, north of the James river. Again, on August 25th, in a terrible engagement at Reams' Station, when the rebels made a desperate attack, compelling the division to fall back. Col. Beaver was here wounded for the third time, losing a leg, and Captain John F. Sutton commanded the regiment for some time at Fort Steadman.

The 148th were now armed with Spencer repeating rifles, Gen. Hancock designating the regiment for this special honor in its division.

On the 27th of October, a detachment of the 148th of 100 men were ordered to take a portion of the enemy's works, Captain Sutton was asked to command the storming party, but having just returned from two days' picket in the swamps, he could not run, having stood in the water of the swamps until his knees were stiffened. The work was undertaken by Capt. J. Z. Brown, a gallant officer. The enemy's works were scaled, and more men captured than there were men in the assault, including four commissioned officers. The enemy now moved forward on him, compelling him to retire.

We now quote from Bates' History Pa. Vols, correcting the quotation: "Upon the opening of the spring campaign of 1865, the regiment moved with the brigade on the 25th of March, and participated in the action at Hatcher's run, and on the 31st at Adams' farm. On the 2d of April it moved five miles through the enemy's lines, and came upon the South Side railroad at Sutherland's Station, the 1st division in advance, where the rebel forces were well posted and determined to stand. The second brigade led, supported by the fourth, and as it approached the enemy's well chosen position he opened a terrible fire which checked its advance, killing and wounding large numbers. Seeing the disaster Gen. Miles detached the 148th and deployed as skirmishers, he ordered it to advance. With Captain Sutton in command of the regiment,* it moved resolutely forward, and by a skilfully executed manouvre, flanked the enemy's works and opened a well directed and enfilading fire from the repeating rifles. Stunned by the suddenness and severity of the blow nearly an entire brigade threw down its arms and surrendered, Major Ulmer of the 4th North Carolina surrendering his sword and pistol to Captain Sutton.* On the following day Gen. Miles issued an order commending the gallant conduct of the regiment, announcing the result of the charge to be 700 prisoners, two pieces of artillery and two flags." Its last battle was at Farmville, April 7th, but it participated in all the closing movements of the campaign, including Lee's surrender.

At muster out, June 3d, 1865, Captain Sutton was the only officer with the regiment who had mustered into service with it in 1862, and he was commander of the regiment from March 28th, 1865, to the close of its duties.

We now close with its battle record, including skirmishes and assaults upon it by the foe, so far as we have been able to gather the record: Chancellorsville, May 1 to 3, 1863; Haymarket, July 25th, 1863; Gettysburg, Pa., July 2d and 3d, 1863; Auburn and Bristoe Station, October 14th, 1863; Kelly's ford, November 7, 1863; Mine run, November 30, 1863; Wilderness, May 4 to 7, 1864; Po river, and Spottsylvania, May 9 to 14, 1864; Cold Harbor, June 3 to 10, 1864; Petersburg, June 15 to 30, 1864; Deep Bottom, July 27, 1864; Reams' Station, August 25, 1864; second Deep Bottom, August 14 to 20, 1864; charge on works at Petersburg, October 27, 1864; Hatcher's run, Adams' run, Sutherland Station, and Farmville, March 21st to April 7, 1864; and Lee's surrender.

One hundred and thirty-seven men at muster out represented the old regiment, with a few more serving as commissioned officers not included in the count.

*Correction of Bates' account.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—FOURTEENTH CAVALRY.

There were probably more Indiana county men in this cavalry regiment than in any other one, and while it is a great task to write the work of an active cavalry regiment for three years of service, we try to note a few things in which Indiana county men participated, and prefer to let the boys tell their own story. To this date, 1879, there is a very incomplete record of the men of the this famous fighting regiment. In company K alone, we find the names of seven men in succession marked by Bates, "not accounted for," who were all killed, or died in the service. The death rate among Indiana county men, is not large however.

The larger part of the men of this county, went into service in 1862, at the time the regiment was organized, and passed through the most active service of the war.

In May, 1853, the regiment was attached to Averill's mounted force in West Virginia, and in detachments, served at Philippi, Beverly and Webster; and later, in a body at Philippi, had a sharp skirmish with rebels surrounding the post at Beverly, July 2d, forcing them to withdraw, and again at Huttonville, on the 4th. At this time the battle of Gettysburg, was reported in progress, and the cavalry division was ordered to join the cavalry of the Potomac. This was not accomplished till Lee's army was safely across the river into Virginia. In pushing forward in pursuit, the rebels were encountered near Martinsburg, on the 15th.

During the month of August, the regiment was in a continuous list of skirmishes and battles, at ane time near the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, fighting dismounted, repelled their infantry charges—in this alone losing eighty men.

In November, 1853, the regiment was in the Droop Mountain raid, and engaged the enemy, fighting on foot, and drove them from their position.

Again, December 8th, the regiment moved on the raid to the Virginia and Tennesse railroad, where heavy damage was inflicted by the destruction of railroad bridges, rebel stores, &c., and in the retreat occurred an incident, the survivors of the war frequently refer to as one of the memorable events of their service. At Jackson river, the 14th cavalry being in the rear with trains which it was almost impossible to move, got separated from the main force and were surrounded by the rebels. Under a flag of truce, a surrender was demanded, but the men carroled the train and set fire to it. The command swam the river and drew the guns with them across, cheered by the rebels, while crossing. While the Colonel seemed to be in a study what to do, walking back and forth with arms folded, waiting a further communication on terms of surrender, a private called from the ranks "death in preference to Libby prison!" which was echoed by a hundred voices, which decided the matter. Their ammunition was all drowned, so the order was given to sling their carbines and draw their sabres, and a break was made for freedom. We quote the words of one who was in this desperate charge: "We selected Jackson's cavalry, and broke for them—they thought they had us, and were so surprised they fled in every direction, and we fairly flew through; our pieces of artillery seemed to scarcely touch the ground as they went, and before the rebels recovered from their surprise, we were almost out of range." Prom the same soldier, we gain the information that at Craig's creek, the cold was so intense as to freeze their horses manes "stiff like a board," and we quote from Averill's report, "I was obliged to swim my command, and drag my artillery with ropes across Craig's creek seven times in twenty- four hours."

The 14th, in its retreat, encountered more frozen streams; their horses being smooth shod, they were compelled to walk most of the time for three days. A few, already crippled, tried to ride, and we know of some yet living, who were yet further injured by their horses falling with them. The loss to the regiment in this raid was about fifty. From Bates' History we quote: "In recognition of the great service which the command had performed, the War Department ordered the issue of a complete suit of clothing to each member of the command as a gift from the Government." From one of the men we quote: "Our shoes were worn out so much, our toes stuck out to the cold, and several had their feet frozen badly." Averill's official report says, "my command has marched, climbed, slidden, and swam three hundred and forty-five miles since the 8th inst."

During the winter of 1863–4, while supposed to be in winter quarters, having a general headquarters at Martinsburg, W. Va., it was kept on duty much of the time, and early in the spring of 1864, it moved forward in another raid upon the Virginia and Tennessee railroad. On May 10th, at Cove Gap, in a fight with the enemy, they lost fifty men killed and wounded, besides losses in minor skirmishes.

The regiment was next in the campaign under Gen. Hunter. As part of the regiment was engaged at New Market, and again at Piedmont, dismounting and charging earthworks when advantage was to be gained by it.

It participated in the fight at Lexington June 12th, and skirmished nearly all day June 13th, and again at Lynchburg ou the 15th. Again on the 17th at Liberty in a sharp fight of several hours, it succeeded in holding a large rebel force in check while the forces under Averill and Crook were retiring to the Kanawha. The loss here was about twenty-four, and the regiment suffered a further loss of eight men near Salem in a charge by Schoonmaker's brigade, to recover guns taken by an unexpected charge by Rosser's rebel cavalry.

We now pass to time of Early's raid into Maryland in July, when the 14th had part in the attack at Winchester, July 20th, which was successful, but a few days later the whole force was compelled to fall back to Hagerstown, Md. After the burning of Chambersburg, Pa., the 14th was in the chase of the rebels into West Virginia, and at Moorefield had a sharp fight, losing thirty-five men, in this fight having the satisfaction of completely routing the enemy.

Its next movements were in connection with the army under Sheridan in the valley, participating in all the movements, being highly complimented for gallantry, especially at Winchester, Cedar creek, Harrisonburg, Wier's cave and Front Royal.

The winter of 1864 and '65 was a disastrous one, the regiment losing heavily at both Millwood and Ashby's gap. We would be glad to add a complete battle record to this, but as it was an almost continuous list for two years over so great an area, we do not see that we can do justice to it, but we do know that while the children of the survivors live the heroic deeds of the 14th cavalry will be fireside stories to be remembered by the generation to come. Captain Duff, of Armstrong county, under whom the Indiana county boys mostly served, has a warm place in their hearts, and we have heard Lieut. McLaughlin of this county highly commended.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-SEVENTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized in the fall of 1862, for nine months' service, having company K credited to Indiana county recruited mostly in that portion of the county adjoining the Cambria county line, and there were also men of this county in other companies. Hugh J. Brady, of Indiana county, was appointed lieutenant colonel.

The more complete individual record of these men will be found in regiments in three year and one year service, and the history of them would in a measure be a repetition of accounts given of the men of the 135th regiment.

In December, 1862, the regiment was forwarded from Camp Curtin by way of Washington, D. C., to Newport News, and afterwards to Suffolk, reporting to Gen. Viele, on the east bank of Nansemond river, where it was put to work at clearing away the forest on the west bank of the river.

In January, 1863, while a strong reconnoissance was being made to the Blackwater, the 177th was left to guard the works at Suffolk and were attacked by a body of rebel cavalry. This occurrence caused a strict vigilance on the part of the men and Gen. Corcoran returning to the works in the night, attempting to pass without giving the countersign, "came near losing his life."* The general afterwards complimented them for good conduct. In March, 1863, it was sent to Norfolk, and ordered on duty at Deep creek with Colonel Wiestling, of 177th, in command of the post.* The duty here seems to have been as guard to prevent the carrying of mails to the south, as this business had been carried on much to the detriment of the Union army.

The 177th regiment has the credit of breaking up the mail routes, capturing a number of carriers, and considerable mail matter; also destroyed a large number of rebel boats in the river, engaged in a sort of piratical business and blocade running conveying goods to the south.

It was transferred to the army of Potomac, then in Maryland in July, 1863, and assigned to the 12th army corps, but before it was called upon to do duty in battle line, the enemy had retreated to Virginia again. Its term of service being almost expired, it did not move with the army into Virginia again, but remained on Maryland heights until ordered to Harrisburg, to be mustered out of service.

So far as we have been able to gather information, there were no deaths of Indiana county men, though the regiment suffered much from sickness, both at Suffolk and Deep creek.

The record shows a large percentage of desertions, nearly all from Harrisburg—these records may be unjust. The record would indicate that the men came home from Harrisburg, and failed to return until it had removed to the front, where they found difficulties in the way of reaching it again, and never reported.

TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Pittsburgh, Pa., September 8th, 1864, by the election of Hugh J. Brady, of Indiana county, colonel; John T. Fulton, of Westmoreland county, lieutenant colonel, and Josiah B. Ferguson, of Indiana county, major. Colonel Brady had considerable military experience, having served in the Mexican war—served as major of the 10th regiment Pennsylvania militia, in the emergency call of 1862—was lieutenant-colonel of the 177th regiment for nine month's service of 1862-3.

Companies A, C, D, F, G, H and I, were recruited in Indiana county, company B in Jefferson county, and E and K, in Westmoreland county.

Most all the field and line officers had seen service in other regiments, and the greater part of the men who served in the 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, nine month's service of 1862-3, now returned to service again in this regiment.

Proceeding to the front, it was attached to the 18th corps, near Bermuda Hundred, but soon after, moved to the north side of James river, and was assigned to duty with the engineer corps and built Fort Brady, north of Dutch Gap. In the latter part of October, it was assigned to the 3d brigade, 1st division, 10th corps, and went into winter quarters, its duties principally drill and routine camp duty.

*Bates' History.

Upon the re-organization of the army corps, the 206th was assigned to the 24th corps, and continued on duty with the army of the James, under General Ord.

When the spring campaign opened, the 206th was ordered to remain in camp, doing provost duty, and were thus partially prevented from participating in the historical events of the general assault upon the lines of the enemy; yet, upon the evacuation of Richmond, the 206th was the first to enter the city, a thing desired much by veterans in service long before. Some of the men composing the 206th, had participated in the Peninsular campaign under McClellan, when the most ardent desire was to enter Richmond in triumph.

For a time the regiment did provost duty in the city, and afterwards, for a short time, performed the same duty at Lynchburg. The record of the regiment is not a bloody one, and to the writer of this sketch, and probably many others, it is a relief to write or speak of at least one company or regiment whose bodies do not lie buried in southern soil.

The men did the duty assigned them, and in this stand on equality with their comrades in arms. The regiment had its place in the army, and is entitled to share in the honor that crowned the Union arms in the campaign of 1865. It lived to see the result thousands died to accomplish, and to be the first to fling to the breeze in the rebel capital, the stars and stripes of the Union.

MILITIA OF INDIANA COUNTY, 1861 TO 1865.

The militia organization of the county in 1861, were but few and not much interest manifested; but such as they were, they formed the basis of organization of some of the companies of men recruited in 1861 for three years' service.

In 1862, when General Lee, after defeating our armies at Bull Run, moved northward into Maryland, the southern counties of Pennsylvania were in danger of invasion, and Governor Curtin issued a call for the people to arm, (September 4, 1862,) and a little later issued a general order calling for volunteers to organize and arm for defense of the State, (September 10, 1862); immediately following this with a call for fifty thousand men, (September 11, 1862,) promising the men they should be held for service only for the emergency, and should be mustered out as soon as, in the opinion of the Executive, it would be prudent to do so.

The call was heralded throughout Indiana county, and so early as the 10th, the day the Governor called for actual enrollment of men, there were several companies ready to move. One company, Captain Lawrence S. Cautrell, Lieutenants John Hill and Joseph K. Conner, getting transportation, was assigned to the 10th regiment as company H. The other companies followed as fast as transportation could be procured, and by the 15th, four more companies were to the front, assigned to the 23d regiment, Colonel Weistling. These companies were company B, Captain Ephraim Davis, Lieutenants William B. Marshall and James E. Coultar. Company H, Captain Thomas R. McComb, Lieutenants Josiah Work and J. B. Hinds. Company I, Captain Samuel J. Craighead, Lieutenants Alexander Hazlett and Robert Anderson. Company K, Captain George E. Smith, Lieutenants John Gibson and Josiah M. Ansley. Hugh J. Brady, of North Mahoning township, was appointed major of this regiment.

Another company was recruited in the vicinity of Saltsburg, Captain, Hail Clark; Lieutenants, Andrew D. Ferguson and Wm. H. Junkins, but was not assigned to any regiment.

These companies, forming almost a regiment of men, were all gathered together in the interim between September 4th and 12th, eight days. There were men in some, if not all of these companies, who had already seen service in the early campaigns of the war, and while they were not called upon to contend with the foe in deadly strife, the uprising of an army in the space of a week in the state of Pennsylvania, had an encouraging effect upon the weary troops of the army of the Potomac, we judge equally disheartening to the rank and file of the Confederate forces beaten and driven back from the bloody field of Antietam.

These militia forces were disbanded upon the retreat of the invading foe, but their services to the State and Nation were not yet ended, as we shall see. Col. Weistling at once proceeded to organize a regiment, securing as many of the men of the 23d militia regiment as could go, and by the 20th of November, the organization of the 177th Pa. Vols. for nine months' service was effected. Major H. J. Brady, of Indiana county, as lieutenant colonel of the regiment, and of this we give history elsewhere. (See 177th Pa. Vols.)

In the spring of 1863, Lee, after repulsing our attacks upon his stronghold at Fredericksburg, planned a second invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania, the blow being most directly struck at Pennsylvania, and as introductory to the action of our citizens at this memorable time, we should recall the fact that much discontent was felt at the north, and opponents of the war were at work with a will, adding fuel to the fire of discontent, and disapproval of the war. Lee was several days in advance of the Union army, finding no considerable force in his way. Capturing a portion of Gen. Milroy's force at Winchester, and compelling the balance to seek safety in the works on Maryland Heights, opposite Harper's Ferry, he triumphantly marched into Pennsylvania. The small force in the way at all was that under General Couch, with headquarters at Harrisburg, Pa., and General Brooks' small force on the border of Western Pennsylvania, and extending to Ohio, The general Government seeing the danger, called for troops from the nearest states, asking of Pennsylvania 50,000 men. The people were disheartened by rebel successes south, and diversions in their favor north, and responded slowly, no considerable force of militia being organized until Lee's army, 100,000 strong, was on Pennsylvania soil, levying contributions of money and material upon its defenseless towns, asking the town of York, Pa., alone, for $100,000 in cash, and $28,000* were actually paid, besides food and clothing furnished.

Very few regiments from Pennsylvania were organized until the decisive battle at Gettysburg was fought, July 1st to 3d, yet we shall see that Indiana county "came to the front" with a will, for we find it had eight companies mustered into service as early as July 3d to 8th, and followed this with six more before July 23d. There was some dissatisfaction on the part of some of the troops on account of being mustered into United States service, and Governor Curtin, being called upon, assured the troops that they would be discharged as soon as the danger to the state was averted, and more than this, gave them the choice to elect to serve six months, or during the emergency. We do not learn that there was much demur among Indiana county men, the first companies all being sworn into United States service on the plighted word of Gov. Curtin that they wauld not be detained beyond the exigency calling them to arms.

The 54th regiment, Colonel Gallagher, of Westmoreland county, was mustered July 4th, with Thomas K. Weaver, of Indiana county, lieutenant-colonel. Company A, Captain Joseph K. Weaver, with Lieutenants John Hill and J. K. Anderson, was nearly all from Indiana county. Company D, Captain John H. Devers, Lieutenants Byron Porter and Josiah Henderson, all from Indiana county. Company E, Captain Nelson Henry, Lieutenants D. A. Ralston and James Patton, largely of Indiana county. Company H, Captain Rev. Samuel Henderson, Lieutenants Robert Smith and David M. Reed, all of Indiana county.

The 57th regiment was mustered in by companies July 3d to 8th, and organized by electing James R. Porter, of Indiana county, colonel. Company A, Captain William R. Ford, Lieutenants Robert A. Henderson, (provost adjutant), and Alexander Craig. Company C, Captain Hugh Wier, Lieutenants Jas. B. Sansom (editor Democrat) and James Fleming, (color company). Company E, Captain Joseph Pershing; Lieutenants, James P. McClelland and Hugh Pershing. Company F, Captain George E. Smith; Lieutenants, Robert N. McCombs and Wm. C. Gordon; all of Indiana county.

The next six companies were organized into an independent battalion, under John C. Lininger, of Indiana county, as lieutenant-colonel, including three other companies, the first, company B, under command of Charles McClain from Jefferson county, partly made up of Indiana county men; the second, company C, Captain William Neel; Lieutenants, Thomas K. Hastings and W. C. Brown; was made up very largely from Indiana county, the balance from Jefferson county; the third, company H, Captain Charles W. Whistler, mostly from Westmoreland county.

The other companies, A, D, E, F, G and I, we claim as Indiana county companies. Company A, Captain Thomas J. Moore, Lieutenants Daniel C. Davis and Marion M. Davis. Company D, Captain John W. Coleman, Lieutenants George W. Wilson and Wm. T. Jackson. Company E, Captain Wm. P. Altemus, Lieutenants Wm. W. Altemus and George R. Bolar. Company F, Captain Daniel Tincom, Lieutenants Samuel W. Campbell and O. S. McHenry. Company G, Captain Robert L. Ritchie, Lieutenants Benj. F. Speedy and David Latshaw. (In this company probably enough Westmoreland men to balance what we allow Jefferson county, in Captain Neel's company.) Company I, Lieutenant Wm. B. Marshall. This battalion was elected to serve for six months, and were so mustered into the United States service.

We will follow each in a brief description of their duties. The 54th and 57th regiments were both assigned to the command of Gen. T. H. Brooks, and rendezvoused in the neighborhood of Pittsburgh, Pa. The rebel cavalry leader, Gen. John H. Morgan, then on a raid through Indiana and Ohio, had by this time got so far north, as to make his escape somewhat doubtful, and the more so after Lee had been driven back defeated, into Virginia. The 54th, Colonel Gallagher, and 57th, Colonel Porter, were both moved down into Ohio, and posted at fords of the Ohio river, by some of which Morgan had hoped to make good his escape, the gunboats having effectually stopped him from crossing the river lower down, and he was also closely pursued by a land force under Gen's Shackelford and Hobson. Attempts to cross over were made at several points, and some 500 of his men had effected a crossing at different points on the river. These, with the loss of 600 in prisoners in the engagement at the ford above Pomeroy, had reduced his force very much, and made his chances for escape still less; and with the loss in prisoners at Belleville, left him with scarcely 1,000 men.

In the race for life, his scouts were constantly trying the passes to the fords, if possible to find a way of escape, but found the militia regiments so posted at each as to make it very hazardous to attempt even crossing. These regiments were rapidly moved from one ford to another by rail roads, making quicker time than the rebels on horses, and consequently were well posted at each ford in good time. At one point the 57th captured the scouts sent to examine the ford.

At Warrenton, it was feared Morgan would cross, but the 57th regiment by a quick movement of some three miles, reached the place, and being first on the ground, Colonel Porter so disposed his men that any force attempting a passage to the river, must have done so under a concentrated fire of the regiment, on a space where not over six abreast could have formed to charge the obstructed path. Morgan then tried the position othe 54th regiment, Colonel Gallagher, but found it impracticable also.

*Greeley's Am. Conflict.

The Ohio militia in the meantime were pressing the rebel chieftain closely, as also, Shackelford and Hobson in his rear. Being thus closely pursued and environed, he surrendered to General Shackelford, and the work and duties of the Pennsylvania regiments over, they were soon disbanded.

The independent battalion under Col. Lininger was retained in service over seven months, doing duty on railroad guard and at crossings on the upper Potomac river, with headquarters at Green Spring Run, West Virginia. It is to the credit of these hastily summoned together troops for state defense that there was a willingness to move out of the state when necessary for the welfare of the country, and there is no doubt but the militia force mustered at this time had a wholesome effect upon the general result, and had it been in the field promptly at the call of the President, might have added very materially to the amount of material captured from Lee in his retreat, for there was but a small force in the army of the Potomac in fit condition to follow and harass Gen. Lee in his retreat. Couch's militia, as well as Crooks', may have been laughed at as worthless, but we must not forget "what Washington, Gates and Jackson severally did with militia; but, though they had only been held in reserve, or set to guarding trains, their presence would have had a wholesome moral effect,"* and we do know they did good service in the campaign, those in the west rendering effectual help in the capture of Morgan and his troopers, and those in the east dispute every foot of advance of Lee's detached forces there, and on looking over the field we believe would have prevented the crossing of the Susquehanna, even if Lee had not ordered his detached force under Gen. Early to return to the main body for the struggle with the army of the Potomac at Gettysburg.

Many of the men in these Indiana county companies of 1863 had seen hard service before, having been discharged from regiments in the army of the Potomac for wounds received in action, and had now so far recovered as to be able for duty on a short term; others to whom this service was the beginning, enlisted in regiments that went to the front, and proved by their future service that they had soldierly qualifications.

MILITIA OF 1864.

There were two companies largely made up of Indiana county men. The first was mustered into service July, 1864, and disbanded in the latter part of November, 1864; Captain, J. G. Wilson; Lieutenants, Samuel McHenry and Peter C. Spencer, Captain Wilson and Lieut. Spencer afterwards recruiting a company for one year's service assigned to the 74th Pa. Volunteers, and Lieut. McHenry and others recruited a company for one year service, assigned to the 67th Pa. Volunteers.

The second company was mustered into service November 3, 1864, and served till August, 1865; Capt. Joseph K. Weaver; Lieutenants, Anthony Ewing and John W. Ellinger.

These did general guard duty whenever required, and were regularly mustered into United States service, Capt. Wilson's company doing duty on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

UNITED STATES SIGNAL CORPS.

During the months of January and February, 1864, there were enlisted in Indiana county, about fifty men for United States signal service for three years, under order No. 417 of the War Department. The men served in every department of the army from Virginia to Texas; those serving with the army of the Potomac, and middle division, being discharged in August, 1865; those in Texas serving longer.

The signal towers on the front were often shelled by rebel batteries, and the occupants had narrow escapes, and the position of the men an unenviable one. The tower at Point of Rocks, Va., was 125 feet high; one on James river 130 feet high; and one at Welden railroad 158 feet high. The one at Cobbs' hill, near Point of Rocks, Va., was arranged with windlass and a platform, raised or lowered by this means. At one time the men stepped on the platform a little too soon for the man at the windlass, and the crank slipping from his hand, the platform fell a distance of 100 feet, with A. S. Thompson and J. S. Wyncoop on it. The rains had swelled the woodwork of the hoisting apparatus so that at a distance of twenty or thirty feet from the ground, a friction ensued which so checked the force of the fall that they landed without any serious damage except the scare, from which they did not recover easily, finding it difficult for some time, for them to occupy the tower.

At the outpost station at Cedar creek, Va., October 19, 1864, when the rebels attacked and surprised Sheridan's force, but two out of the six signal men occupying the station escaped with their lives; one of the survivors was of this county.

THIRTY-EIGHTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—NINTH RESERVES.

Company C—Kirkpatrick, J. F., 2d lieutenant, wounded at Gaines' mill, Va.; resigned Nov. 25, '62. Carson, D. R., July 1, '61; killed at Bull run, Va., August 30, '62. Hart, W. B., July 1, '61; served three years. Daugherty, R. J., July 20, '61; died at Harrison's landing, Va., July, 1862. Portser, Israel, July 20, '61; served three years. Portser, Labanna, July 20, '61, corporal; served three years. Robinson, R. M., July 1, '61; discharged Jan. 25, '62. Stewart, Samuel, July 20, '61; wounded; served three years. Thompson, William E., May 1, '61; discharged Dec. 6, '61, Company F—Robinson, Joseph F., corporal, July 17, '61; veteran; served through the war. Young, Samuel C., corporal, July 6, '61; served three years. Chapman, Henry, private, July 9, '61; killed at Antietam, Md., *Sept. 17, '62. *Cline, David, July 6, '61; wounded at South Mountain, Md., and killed at Antietam Sept. 17, '62. Detwiler, William, July 17, '61; served three years. Long, William J., July 1, '61; served three years. Moore, Adam, July 6, '51; served three years. McPherson, Hiram A., July 15, '61, veteran, served through the war. McCormick, David B, July 7, '61; died at Smoketown, Md., October 7, '62. McKee, James, July 17, '61; died at Washington, D. C., August 31, '61. Painter, Ashford, July 6, '61; transferred to battery C, 5th U. S. artillery, Nov. '62. Painter, Linas, July 6, '61; transported to battery C, 5th U. S. artillery, Nov. '62. Smiley, David, July 13, '61, veteran; died while home on veteran furlough, Feb. '64.

FORTIETH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—ELEVENTH RESERVES.

Field and Staff.—James R. Porter, lieut. col. (See Co. B). Daniel S. Porter, lieut. col. (See Co. B), Hugh A. Torrance, quartermaster. (See Co. E).

Company A.—Books, Geo. W., June 25, 1861, corp'l, wounded, discharged Dec. 23, '62. Books, Sam'l, Sept. 19, '62, wounded; transferred to 190 P. V.; discharged June 1, 1865. Boring, Jacob S., July 11, 1861; vet.; trans. to 190th P. V.; discharged on surgeon's certificate Jan. 6, '65. Books, J. W., Sept. 19,62; disc'd by special order same year. Baringer, John R.; Sept. 19, '62; disch'd Jan. 5, '64. Baringer, Wm., June 25, '61; died Dec. 9, '61. Camp, John L., June 25, '61; killed at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, '62. Dumm, Thomas P., June 25, '61; disch'd April 8, '62. Davis, Benjamin, Sept. 19, '62; wounded; trans. to 190th P. V.; discharged Jan. 24, '65. Dunlap, William, Sept. 19, '62; transferred to 190th P. V. Helman, Lawrence, June 25, '61; mustered out with company. Helman, Daniel, June 25, '61; killed at Gaines' Mill, June 27, '62. McCreary, John O., June

*Horace Greeley.

*Bates says killed at Fredericksburg, Va.

25, '61; mustered out with company. McCreary, William, No. 1, Sept. 19, 1862; discharged March 3, 1863. McCreary, James S., June 25, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V.; absent, sick at muster out. McCreary, William, No. 2, Feb. 16, '64; captured; transferred to 190th P. V.; died at Florence, S. C., Nov. '64. Makin, John A., August 29, '62; transferred to 190th P. V.; discharged June 1, '65. Mardis, Jacob L., August 29, '62; transferred to 190th P. V.; captured; died at Andersonville prison pen, July, '64; burial record August 9, '64. Moore, Jno., June 25, '61; discharged March 20, '63. Moore, Camp, June 25. '61; discharged April 11, '62; died Sept. 11, '62; buried at Point Lookout, Maryland. Miller, William, June 25, '61; discharged Dec. 22, '62. McCreary, Joshua L., June 25, '61; died at Point Lookout, August 17, '62. Patrick, Dallas, Sept. 19, '62; transferred to 190th P. V.; prisoner from August 19, '64, to Feb. 28, '65; discharged June 6, '65. Powell, William K., June 25, '61; mustered out with the company. Rummell, James P., Sept. 19, '62; died at Wind Mill Point, Virginia, January 20, '63. Ruth, Leonidas, Sept. 19, '62; died at Belle Plain, Virginia, Nov. 6, '62. Ruth, Edmund S., Sept. 19, '62; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Smyers, Philip, Sept. 19, '62; transferred to 190th P. V.; discharged by general order June 1, '65. Shoepf, John, Sept. 22, '62; transferred to 190th P. V. Woodford, Andrew, June 25, '61; mustered out with the company. Woodford, Powers, June 25, '61; mustered out with the company. Wise, John, June 25, '61; died at Washington, Nov. 28, '61. Wareham, Henry H., June 25, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps, came home sick and died.

FORTIETH PENSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—ELEVENTH RESERVES.

Company B.—James R. Porter, captain, June 10, '61; promoted to lieutenant colonel July 2, '61; resigned October 24, '61. Daniel S. Porter, first lieutenat, June 10, '61; promoted captain July 2, '61; lieutenant colonel May. 14, '63; resigned March 10, '64; brevetted colonel March 13, '65; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 3, '63. Hannibal K. Sloan, second lieutenant, June 10, '61; promoted first lieutenant July 2, '61; captain August 17, '63; to brevet major March 13, '65; mustered out with company June 13, '64. Archibald Stewart, June 10, '61; promoted second lieutenant July 2, '61; to first lieutenant August 17, '63; wounded May 5, '64, and died of wounds May 20, '64. John S. Sutor, June 10, '61; promoted from sergeant to first sergeant; to second lieutenant September 22, '63; to brevet captain March 13, '65; transferred to 190th regiment Pa. V. May 31, '64. T. M. McCandless, first sergeant; June 10, '61; promoted quartermaster sergeant September 1, '61; mustered out at expiration of term. Ephraim Davis, June 10, '61; promoted from corporal to sergeant; discharged May 31, '62. Richard H. Fair, June 10, '61; promoted from sergeant May 1, '62; died July 14, '62, of wounds received at Gaines' Mill. Thomas R. Weaver, June 10, '61; promoted from sergeant July 15, '62, to second lieutenant 135th Pa. V. Dec. 16, '62. William D. Kuhns, June 10, '61; promoted from sergeant to first sergeant; wounded at Antietam Sept. 17, '62; killed at Fredericksburg Dec, 13, '62. Henderson C. Howard, June 10, '61; promoted from corporal to sergeant July 15, '62; to first sergeant Sept. 22, '63; wounded and prisoner at second Bull Run; mustered out with company June 13, '64, receiving three wounds; paroled. Jas. L. O'Neil, sergeant, June 10, '61; promoted to sergeant July 1, '61; prisoner at the Wilderness May 5, '64; never heard from. Sam'l McCutcheon, June 10, '61; promoted June 1, '62; dis. Dec. 18, '62. Benj. F. Laughlin, sergeant, June 10, '61; promoted from corporal to sergeant; wounded at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, '62; wounded at Wilderness, Va.; mustered out with company June 13, '64. John W. Humphrey, sergeant, June 10, '61; promoted to corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company; good record. Gawin A. McClain, sergeant, June 10, '61; promoted to corporal and sergeant; wounded at Bull Run August 30, '62; wounded at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, '62; mustered out with company. Michael O'Neil, sergeant, June 10, '62; died at Richmond, Va., Feb. 27, '65. John M. Johnston, corporal, June 10, '61; promoted to corporal; died at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 14, '62, of wounds received Dec. 13, '62. Wm. M. Cummins, corporal, June 10, '61; promoted to corporal; discharged Dec. 23, '61, for disability. Charles Shambaugh, corporal, June 10, '61; wounded at Bull Run, August 30, '62; leg amputated; captured a battle flag from the enemy at Charles City Cross Roads; discharged October 13, '62. George W. Stewart, corporal, June 10, '61; wounded at Antietam, Sept. 17, '62; discharged March 24, '63. Theodore Henderson, corporal, June 10, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, '62; transferred to veteran reserve corps, July 1, '63; promoted to corporal. James W. Howearth, wounded at Antietam, Sept. 17, '62; at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, '62, transferred to veteran reserve corps Sept. 1, '63. Constantine Morton, corporal, June 10, '61; wounded at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, '62; at Bull Run, August 29, '62; at Antietam, Sept. 17, '62; mustered out with company. Henry Prothero, corporal, June 10, '61; good record; mustered out with company. George Spaulding, corporal, June 10, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, Sept. 13, '62; promoted to corporal; prisoner May 5, '64, to Dec. 11, '64; discharged Dec. 17, '64. John M. Shields, corp'l, June 10, '61; pro'd to corp'l; good record; mustered out with comp'y. J. J. Oatman, corporal, June 10, '61; wounded: prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, '62; wounded at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, '62; at Gettysburg, July 2, '63; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. Daniel Laughner, musician, June 10, '61; promoted principal musician; discharged Dec. 12, '62. John F. McLain, musician, June 10, '61; appointed regimental postmaster. James N. Adams, private, June 10, '61; good record, mustered out with company. E. E. Allen, private, June 10, '61; promoted to corporal; prisoner May 30, '64, to Feb. 22, '65; discharged Feb. 28, '65. Joshua A. Allison, private, October 5, '62; wounded at Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Wm. Atkinson, private, June 10, '61; died at Georgetown, D. C., March 29, '62, of fever. Oscar Bush, private, June 10, '61; died at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, mustered out with company. A, F. Bartlebaugh, private, June 10, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads, Virginia. John Berger, private, June 10, '61; served in several battles and afterwards deserted. John R. Campbell, June 10, '61; mustered out with company. W. H. H. Coleman, June 10, '61; promoted commissary sergeant, mustered out with company. Thomas M. Coleman, June 10, '61; discharged February 3, '63, for disability. Samuel Carbough, June 10, '61; wounded and prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, wounded at Fredericksburg, and discharged April 6, '63. Harrison Conner, June 10, '61; wounded and prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, and discharged January 9, '63. Edwin Chesley, June 10, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, discharged May 7, '63. Jacob L. Craig, June 10, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, Va., transferred to veteran reserve corps. William A. Compton, September 19, '62; good record, transferred to 190th Pennsylvania volunteers, discharged by general order, June 1, '65. William Conner, June 10, '61; prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, Virginia, wounded at Fredericksburg, and died of wounds. Moses B. Charles, June 10, '61; killed at Gaines' mill, Virginia, June 27, '62. James Devlin, June 10, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, Virginia, mustered out with company. E. J. Devinney, June 10, '61; record good, mustered out with company. Hiram N. Dumm, June 10, '61; wounded at Gettysburg, mustered out with company. Johnston Davis, June 10, '61; teamster, mustered out with company. John R. Devlin, June 10, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, transferred to veteran reserve corps. James W. Davis, June 10, '61; wounded at Bull Run, and deserted from convalescent camp. Alexander G. Eakman, June 10, '61; wounded at Gettysburg, mustered out with

INTERIOR VIEW OF HETRICH BROTHERS DRUG STORE, INDIANA, PA.

WHOLESALE & RETAIL DRUGGISTS & STATIONERS

Physicians Prescriptions carefully compounded.

OLD COURT HOUSE AT INDIANA, BUILT IN 1807.

ASSOCIATED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, NOW UNITED PRESBYTERIAN FIRST CHURCH BUILT IN INDIANA IN 1827.

From a Scetch by R.C. Taylor.

company. William B. Elliott, June 10, '61; captured a battle flag at Spottsylvania, mustered out with company. William H. Empfield, June 10. '61; wounded at Bull Run, and discharged October 20, '62. David Fyock, June 10, '61; record good, mustered out with company. H. W. Fetterman, June 10, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, '62. J. T. Gibson, Feb. 23. '64; musician, trans. to 190th P. V., dis. by G. O. June 24, '65. James Glenn, June 10, '61; wounded and taken prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, and died at Richmond, Virginia, July 14, '62. John J. Gromley, Sept. 9, '62; transferred to 190th P. V. Joseph Huffman, June 10, '61; regimental butcher and served in three battles; mustered out with company. W. M. J. Harbison, June 10, '61; wounded at Bull Run and Wilderness, Virginia. Frank Harbison, June 10, '61; wounded at Bull Run and at Bethesda church, Virginia. Solomon Harman, June 10, '61; prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads; wounded, leg off; mustered out with company. William M. Hazlett, June 10, '61; wounded at Charles City Cross Roads; mustered out with company. Samuel B. Harrison, June 10, '61; discharged July 8, '62. William Hill, July 11, '61; wounded at Bull Run; discharged Jan. 12, '63. Thomas B. Hood, June 10, '61; discharged Jan. 29, '63, for disability. John L. Hall, June 10, '61; veteran, good record; transferred to 190th P. V. Samuel B. Hall, Jan. 7, '64; transferred to 190th P. V. David Hoover, Sept. 8, '61; good record; transferred to 190th P. V., captured; died at Salisbury, North Carolina, November 30, '64. Jethro W. Hill, June 10, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, '62. William Henry, June 10, '61; killed at Spottsylvania C. H., Virginia, May 8, '64. Henry C. Hazlett, June 10, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, '62. David Hauser, died at City Point, Virginia, July 4, '64. Geo. W. Johnson, discharged Dec. 26, '63. William T. Kinter, July 11, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps; discharged at expiration of term. William Kunkle, July 11, '61; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa.; transferred to veteran reserve corps. John G. Kimberlin, June 10, '61; wounded at South Mountain, Maryland, and died of wounds. George W. Lowman, June 10, '61; wounded at Bristoe station, Virginia, arm amputated; discharged February 15, '64. Allison Lowman, Sept. 19, '62; good record; transferred to 190th P. V.; discharged by general order, June 1, 1865; Jacob N. Layman, July 10, '61; wounded and captured at Charles City Cross Roads, Va.; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Samuel Lowman, June 10, '61; died from wounds received at Charles City Cross Roads, Virginia, June 30, '62 J. M. Laughrey, June 10, '61; died September 8, '62, of wounds received at Bull Run, Virginia, August 29, '62. Wm. Laughrey, June 10, '61; Killed at South Mountain, Md., Sept. 14, '62. Lewis, John, June 10, 61; wounded at Charles City Cross Roads, Va., and killed at Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, '62. Mack, W. H. H., June 10, '61; good record; mustered out with company. McCurdy, John G., June 10, 61; captured at Wilderness May 5, '64. McDonald, Wm. P., June 10, '61; prisoner May 5, '64, to Dec. 6, '64; mustered out with company. McHenry, Oliver S., June 10, '61; discharged June 21, '62. McCurdy, Samuel R., Sept. 8, '61; transferred from Co. D to Co. B; discharged June 4, '62. McKelvey, Thomas H., April 4, '62; discharged on surgeon's certificate. McGuire, Joseph H., July 10, '61; veteran; wounded and prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, Va.; transferred to 190th Pa. V. Mitchell, Robert M., July 12, 61; died at Washington, D. C., May 31, '62, of fever. Moore, Thomas S., June 10, '61; died Sept. 18, '62, of wounds received at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, '62. Powell, Henry, Aug. 29, '62; killed at Bristoe Station, Va., October 14, '63. Ray, Hugh, June 10, '61; discharged Jan. 7, '69, for disability. Ray, Samuel, July 10, '61; veteran; good record; transferred to 190th Pa. V.; prisoner May 3, '64, to April 15, '65; mustered out with company. Richardson, Wm., March 21, '62; veteran; transferred to 190th Pa. V. Smith, John L., June 10, '61; deserted Sept. 1862; returned March, 1863; mustered out with company. Shick, Samuel, June 10, '61; good record; mustered out with company. Stewart, John W., June 10, '61; discharged Dec. 5, '61. Sheffler, Uriah, June 10, '61; wounded at Charles City Cross Roads, Va., June 30, '62, and discharged Oct. 6, '62. Sherman, Robert F., June 10, '61; wounded at South Mountain, Md,, Sept. 14, '62, and discharged. Shadrach, William, June 10, '61; discharged May 6, '63, for disability. Smith, Marshall S., June 10, '61; promoted to sergeant major; mustered out with regiment. Smith, John A., July 11, '61; veteran; good record; transferred to 190th P. V.; mustered out with company. Stork, William, June 10, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Stephens, James, September 19, '62; wounded at Fredericksburg December 13, '62; transferred to 190th P. V. Henry Stuchel, July 11, '61; killed at South Mountain, Maryland, September 14, '62. George Trimble, June 10, '61; discharged Dec. 30, '62. William K. Thomas, June 10, '61; wounded at South Mountain, Maryland, September 14, '62, and at Fredericksburg, December 13, '62, transferred to veteran reserve corps. James H. Trimble, June 10, '61; killed at Fredericksburg, December 13, '62. John Wagner, June 10, '61; wounded at Charles City Cross Roads, arm amputated and discharged, date unknown. James Wineman, July 17, '61; wounded and prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, died at Richmond, Virginia, July 11, '62. Frank T. Young, June 10, '61; promoted 2d lieutenant company G, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, Nov. 5, '62, and mustered out at expiration of time, enlisted in U. S. regular army, served two years, returned to Indiana and died.

Company D—Wm. C. Coleman, 1st sergeant, Sept. 8, '61; veteran; promoted from private to corporal, to 1st sergeant; transferred to 190th P. V., and promoted to 1st lieutenant; served through the war; wounded three times. Peter Bedillion (or Bedilier),* July 16, '61; died Jan. 17, '62. James G. Devinney, private, Sept. 21, '61; discharged May 9, '62. Israel Gibson, March 17, '64; transferred to 190th P. V.; died in rebel prison. Mark Gilpatrick, March 17, '64; transferred to 190th P. V. Samuel F. Hazlett, Sept. 10, '61; discharged Nov. 21, '62. Joseph B. Hazlett, March 3, '62; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Oscar C. Hoyt, Sept. 21, '61; died in hospital. James H. McComb, Feb. 9, '64; transferred to 190th P. V.; taken prisoner and died. Wm. R. McNeal, Sept. 8, '61; died October 25, '62, of wounds received at second Bull Run. James Robertson, Feb. 16, '64; transferred to 190th P. V. Andrew Shauk, Sept. 8, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V.; mustered out with regiment. Wm. M. Shearer, Sept. 8, '61; discharged August 27, '62, and died. Thompson Smith,† Sept. 8, '61; discharged August 1, '62, and died. John Shauk, Feb. 26, '64; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. James (or John S.) Stanley, March 31, '64; transferred to 190th P. V.

Company E.—Nathaniel Nesbit, captain, June 21, '61; died September 21, '62, of wounds received at South Mountain, Maryland. Daniel R. Coder, 1st lieutenant, June 21, '61; promoted to captain, April 18, '63, to brevet major, March 13, '65, wounded at Bull Run, August 30, '62, mustered out with company, June 3, '67. Hugh A. Torrence, 2d lieutenant, June 21, '61; promoted regimental quartermaster, July 2, '61, brevet captain, March 13, '65, wounded at South Mountain, mustered out with regiment. Richard M. Biskman, 1st sergeant, June 21, '61; promoted to 2d lieutenant, May 13, '62, to 1st lieutenant, April 10, '63, transferred to 190th Pennsylvania volunteers, brevet major, April 9, '65, mustered out with the company. J. P. R. Cummisky, 1st sergeant, June 21, '61; promoted to 1st sergeant, promoted to 1st lieutenant company D, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, January 13, '62, killed at Fair Oaks, Virginia, May 31, '62. Charles W. Herring, sergeant, June 11, '62; promoted 1st sergeant, mustered out with company. James C. Marshall; sergeant, June 21, '61; died of wounds received in action. James L. Hazlett, sergeant, June 21, '61; wounded at South Mountain, Maryland, and died at home from effects of wounds. Theodore L. Marshall, sergeant, June 21, '61; promoted from corporal, wounded, discharged June 9, '63. John C. Doran, sergeant, June 21, '61; promoted from corporal, wounded at South Mountain, Maryland, mustered out with the company. Edward T. Means, sergeant, June 21, '61; promoted to sergeant, wounded at Fredericksburg, mustered out with the company, and died since from the effects of wounds. William H. H. Lyons, sergeant, June 21, '61; promoted corporal and sergeant, mustered out with company. John Uncapher, sergeant, June 21, '61; promoted to sergeant, mustered out with company. William H. H. Edricks, corporal, June 21, '61; wounded at Mechanicsville, Virginia, taken prisoner and died at Richmond, Virginia, January 9, '63. Robert S. McCall, corporal, June 21, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps. James A. Short, corporal, June 21, '61; promoted to corporal, died of wounds received at Gaines' mill, June 26, '62. Samuel Spires, corporal, June 21, '61; promoted corporal, discharged on sergeant's certificate. George K. Nesbit, corporal, June 21, '61; promoted to corporal, died October 14, '61. J. L. McFarland, corporal, June 21, '61; died from wounds received at Gaines' mill, June 27, '62. Robert McGuire, corporal, June 21, '61; died from wounds received at Gaines' mill, June 27, '62. John C. Rugh, corporal, September 9, '61; promoted to corporal, transferred to 190th Pennsylvania volunteers, June 1, '64. Samuel H. Coon, corporal, September 9, '61; promoted to corporal, transferred to 190th P. V., June 1, '64, discharged at expiration of time. James J. Fritz, corporal, June 21, '61; vet'n, capt'd at Wilderness, Va., transferred to 190th P. V., June 1, '64, wounded at Gettysburg. James W. McGinley, corporal, July 15, '61; mustered out with company. W. H. H. Bell, musician, June 21, '61; discharged February 5, '63. Robert B. Carrol, musician, July 15, '61; color bearer at South Mountain until relieved by Sergeant Hazlett; mustered out with company. John P. Bell, private, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. John Brinks, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. John C. Barkley, June 21, '61; discharged January 8, '63. T. H. Butterfield, September 21, '61; promoted to hospital steward November 1, '63. Jas. M. Brown, July 25, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, '62; Wm. Carlisle, June 21, '61; wounded at Wilderness, May 6, '64. J. M. Clawson, June 21, '61; disch'd May 17, '63. William Connor, September 22, '61; prisoner at Wilderness; transferred to 190th P. V. June 1, '64. Thompson Cramer, September 12, '62; wounded at Fredericksville; transferred to 190th P. V. June 1, '64. Thomas Carson, September 9, '61; killed at Gaines Mill, Virginia, June 27, '62. Robert W. Cathcart, June 21, '61; killed at South Mountain, Maryland, Sept. 14, '62. Alfred Canada, July 29, '61; died September 29, '62. Martin Doran, February 10, '62; discharged February 10, '63; re-enlisted in United States regular army; killed at Wilderness, Virginia. Gillis D. Dunlap, September 12, '62; wounded at Fredericksburg, Bristoe Station, and once afterward; transferred to 190th P. V. June 1, '64. Samuel W. Davis, June 21, '61; transferred to company I; discharged February 10, '63. William H. H. Doak, July 15, '61; died of wounds received at Gaines' Mill, Virginia. John Dunkle, September 12, '62; died of wounds, date unknown. Joseph W. Elder, July 15, '61; mustered out with company. John W. Ewing, teamster, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Joseph B. Eakman, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Henry Eshbaugh, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Jas. M. English, March 1, '62; discharged January 30, '63. Abram Eshelman, December 9, '63; transferred to 190th P. V. June 1, '64. Boyd E. Ewing, June 21, '61; died October 31, '61. William T. Ewing, June 21, '61; died May 16, '62. Sol. S. Edwards, June 21, '61; killed at Gaines' Mill, Virginia, June 27, '62. Aug. A. Ferguson, June 22, '61; transferred to 10th United States infantry. Scott M. Ferguson, June 21, '61; killed at South Mountain, Maryland, September 14, '62. William C. Foy, June 21, '61; died of wounds received at Fredericksburg, December 13, '62. Joshua L. Gray, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Joshua A. Groft, June 21, '61; wounded; discharged May 18, '63. George C. Gwinner, June 21, '61; discharged January 13, '63. James Gourley, June 21, '61; discharged November 24, '63. Samuel M. Garris, March 1, '62; wounded at Fredericksburg; discharged on surgeon's certificate. Robert Gordon, June 21, '61; discharged July 15, '63. David Griffin, September 12, '62; transferred to 190th P. V. June 1, '64; died in Andersonville prison. Lemuel C. Harold, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Nicholas P. Hughes, June 21, '61; discharged May 20, '63; Sal. Hatch, June 21, '61; killed at Gaines' Mill, June 27, '62. John D. Hart, September 9, '61; died of wounds received at Gaines' Mill, June 27, '62. Thos. J. Jenkins, June 21, '61; killed at Fredericksburg, Virginia, December 13, '62. Jacob Kimple, July 25, '61; wounded at Gaines' Mill and South Mountain; mustered out with company. Jacob Libengood, June 21, '61; wounded in action and discharged December 17, '62. George W. Miller, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Robert Makin, July 15, '61; mustered out with company. Alex. C. Miller, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Robert McKeen, June 21, '61; on detached service with artillery; mustered out with company. Thomas J. Moses, June 21, '61; prisoner May 5, '64, to February 27, '65. John C. Myers, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. James S. McGuire, June 21, '61; mustered out with company. Uriah Marsh, July 15, '61; mustered out with company. Jas. J. Marshall, July 15, '61; mustered out with company. Willian McPhilimy, July 25, '61; discharged Dec. 7, '61. A. W. McCullough, June 21, '61; (Lutheran minister now); discharged May 11, '62. Jas. S. Moorhead, July 29, '62; disch'd, date unknown. James E. Meanor, June 21, '61; discharged August 23, '62. G. R. McElhaney, July 15, '61; discharged February 2, '63. John N. McKelvey, June 21, '61; discharged October 16, '63. John N. Means, June 21, '61; discharge date unknown. Nelson McCormick, June 21, '61; discharged May 10, '63, Norman L. Moore, transferred to veteran reserve corps July, '63. Samuel A. McLain, June 21, '61; killed at Gaines' Mill, June 27, '62. G. M. McFarland, July 21, '61; killed at Gaines' Mill, June 27, '62. Louis McFarland, July 29, '61; killed at Gaines' Mill, June 27, '62. William H. Mangaw, June 21, '61; died March 21, '64, at Alexandria, Va. William S. Marshall, June 21, '61; died at Point Lookout, Md., September 14, '62. W. E. McCausland, June 21, '61; died July 8, '62, at Philadelphia, Pa. John McPhilimy, July 25, '61; killed at Fredericksburg December 13, '62. Andrew R. Mitchell, June 21, '61; wounded and prisoner at Fredericksburg, Va., December 13, '62; died at Richmond, Va., January 9, '63 Robert A. Park, June 21, '61; wounded at Antietam September 17, '62. Jacob Pehel, June 21, '61; discharged December 12, '61. Samuel Russell, September 12, '62; wounded at Fredericksburg; transferred to 190th P. V. June 1, '64. Archibald C. Rankin, February 20, '62; killed at Gaines' Mill June 27, '62. Cornelius B. Riddle, June 21, '61; killed at Fredericksburg December 13, '62. Daniel S. Spires, June 21, 61; mustered out with company. Harrison D. Sacket, February 24, '62; discharged September 16, '62. Samuel M. Shields, June 21, '61; wounded at South Mountain and discharged. James M. Shearer, Jan. 13, '62; discharged Jan. 19, '63. John W. Smith, September 9, '61; discharged Feb. 7, '63. James Simpson, June 21, '61, wounded at Fredericksburg; discharged March 24, '63. Oliver H. Scott, June 21, '61; wounded; transferred to veteran reserve corps, '63. John P. Snowden, June 21, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps, '63. Josiah Sloan, March 3, '62; transferred to 190th P. V. June 1, '64. James N. Simpson, June 21, '61; wounded at South Mountain Sept. 14, '62; died Sept. 24, '62. Robert P. Sutor, June 21,

*Accounts differ. †Bates has "Samuel F. Smith."

'61; died at Smoketown, Md., October 19, '62. Ira G. West, June 21, 61; was transferred to naval service. George Watkins, June 21, '61; died October 22, '61. Armstrong A. Wiley, June 21; killed at Fredericksburg December 13, '62.

Company I—David Berry, 2d lieutenant, June 17, '61; promoted 1st lieutenant April 10, '63; mustered out with company. Mitchel R. Brown, corporal, June 17, '61; killed at Fredericksburg, December 13, '62. Alexander Bruce, private, July 9, '61; prisoner May 10, '64; died in Andersonville prison pen, October 23, '64; grave 11,329. John Brandon, Sept. 10, '61; killed at Gaines' mills, June 27, '62. Washington Curry, July 29, '61; discharged August 30, '61. Francis Cruise, June 17, '61; absent without leave, Nov. 9, '62. Thomas K. Crusaw, Sept. 21, '61; discharged October 12, '62. Joseph. J. Davis, June 17, '61; sergent; promoted to 1st lieutenant of company E, 177th regiment P. V., Nov. 21, '62. Samuel W. Davis, June 21, '61; discharged Feb. 10, '63. Cyrus Eakman, June 17, '61; corporal; mustered out with company. John A. Flickinger, July 1, '61; transferred to U. S. regular army Nov. 9, '62; John Grumbling, July 1, '61; promoted to sergeant; transferred to veteran reserve corps, October 3, 63'; John A. Hill, June 17, '61; sergeant; promoted to sergeant major; killed at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, '62; Henry A. Harkins, June 17, '61; promoted corporal and sergeant; wounded and prisoner at Wilderness, May 65, '4, to Dec. 6, '64; discharged Dec. 12, '64. Joseph Henderson, June 17, 61'; mustered out with company. John A. Hendricks, June 17, '61; discharged Dec. 5, '62. William S. (or I.) Hamilton, June 17, '61; missing in action at Wilderness, May 5, 6'4; supposed to have died in Andersonville prison. William Hosack, Sept. 10, '61; captured at Wilderness; absent at muster out. David R. Jenkins, June 17, '61; corporal; discharged February 4, '63. Lemuel W. Jenkins, June 17, '61; corporal; mustered out with company. George Jones, February 2, '64; transferred to 190th P. V.; wounded at Wilderness; missing at muster out. John King, July 18, '61; absent without leave, August 25, '62. David Kinkaid, June 17, '61; sergeant; discharged February 10, '63; John L. Kuhn, July 9, '61; missing in action at Bethesda Church, May 30, '64. William Kelley, June 17, '61; killed at Gaines' mill, June 27, '62. Henry Mundorf, June 17, '61; killed at Bethesda Church, May 30, '64; Benjamin C. McDowell, February 3, '62; transferred to 190th P. V.; captured and died in Andersonville prison. James W. McMasters, June 17, '61; corporal; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Huston Munshower, August 24, '62; discharged January 2, '63; Peter Palmer, February 2, '64; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Absolom Palmer, January 2, '62; discharged June 4, '62. Thomas S. Rutherford, Sept. 17, '61; discharged June 9, '62. William Spires, June 17, '61; mustered out from hospital. Lawson Spires, June 17, '61; mustered out with company. Joseph Sides, June 17, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps. John Wilkins, July 1, '61; died at Alexandria, Va., October 27, '62.

SOLDIERS OF MEXICAN WAR.

William Matthews, Co. B, 2d Penn. Vols.; died in Mexico. Mathias Palmer, Co. B, 2d Penn. Vols.; died in Mexico, John L. Tincom, Co. B, 2d Penn. Vols.; promoted to drum major. Henry Schnetberg, corporal, Co. B. 2d Penn Vols.; now resident of Indiana county. Jacob Kuhn, Co. E, 2d Penn. Vols. Hugh J. Brady, Co. E, 2d Penn. Vols.; colonel of the 206th Penn. Vols. in the war of 1861–5. George Hutchison, Co. D. 2d Penn. Vols. Joseph Mardis, Co. D, 2d Penn Vols. Samuel D. Killen, Co. D. 2d Penn. Vols. David Buchanan, Co. D, 2d Penn. Vols. Samuel C. Moorhead, 2d Penn. Vols. William Campbell, 2d Penn. Vols.; died at home soon after the war. David Kuhns, 2d Penn. Vols.; killed at the gates of the City of Mexico. Kirtland Keely. John Shoef. William Todd. Simon Wise. Jas. Kelley, died in Mexico. William Hood, of Bairdstown, 2d Penn. Vols. Pliny Kelley, served in war of 1861–5 in California battalion, 2d Massachusetts cavalry.

FORTY-FIRST PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—TWELFTH RESERVES.

Company H—A. J. Bolar, captain, July 24, '61; promoted to major, July 8, '62, wounded and prisoner at Fredericksburg, discharged on account of wounds received in action, June 30, '64. Samuel M. Elder, captain, July 24, '61; promoted to 1st lieutenant, August 20, 61, to captain, July 8, '62, mustered out with company. James S. Kelly, 1st lieutenant, July 24, '61; resigned August 3, '63. William H. H. Kern, 1st lieutenant, July 24, '61; promoted to 1st lieutenant, July 8, '62, discharged April 28, '64. Thomas H. Dix, sergeant, July 24, '61; promoted to sergeant, wounded May 8, '64, mustered out with company. John Bills, sergeant, July 24, '61; promoted to corporal and sergeant, mustered out with company. James Irwin, sergeant, July 24, '61; promoted to sergeant, mustered out with company. John Evans, sergeant, July 24, '61; promoted to hospital steward, mustered out with regiment. M. T. Moorhead, sergeant, July 24, '61; discharged October 31, '62. W. R. Bracken, sergeant, July 24, '61; wounded and prisoner at Charles City Cross Roads, Va., died of wounds. John P. Griffith, sergeant, July 24, '61; promoted to sergeant, killed at Fredericksburg, December 13, '62. James D. Love, corporal, July 24, '61; wounded at Bull Run, prisoner from December 13, '62, to May 8, '63, mustered out with company. Andrew Kerr, corporal, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. John H. Brown, corporal, July 24, '61; promoted to corporal, mustered out with company. Samual H. McNutt, corporal July 24, '61; promoted to corporal, mustered out with company. Samuel Johnson, corporal, July 24, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps, mustered out at expiration of term. Samuel Cunningham, corporal, July 24, '61; wounded at Bull Run, and discharged, (attorney at Indiana, Pennsylvania.) John C. Lardin, corporal, July 24, '61; discharged December 13, '62. George W. Robertson, corporal, July 24, 61; wounded at Fredericksburg Dec. 13, '62, and dis'd. Henry W. L. Drips, musician, March 8, '62; trans. to 190th P. V. William Altemus, July 24, '61; wounded at Mechanicsville, Va., and discharged. William W. Altemus, July 24, '61; wounded at South Mountain and discharged. Franklin R. Barr, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. William Bracken, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Foster Bracken, July 24, '61; discharged June 20, '62. Thomas Barr, July 24. '61; discharged, date unknown. Enoch Benson, July 24, '61; died from wounds received at Antietam, September 17, '62. David W. Barkley, July 24, '61; killed at Fredericksburg December 13, '62. George C. Cribbs, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. John C. Cameron, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. William W. Campbell, July 24, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Timothy Connelly, July 24, '61; discharged October 15, '62. John J. Crossmire, July 24, '61; transferred to 51st regiment P. V. October 29, '61. John W. Campbell, July 24, '61; died August 22, '61. Thompson Dick, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Samuel W. Drips, July 24, '61; veteran, transferred to 190th P. V., commissioned captain—not mustered. Ezekiel Davis, February 25, '64; transferred to 190th Pa. V. Andrew J. Duncan, July 24, '61; died of wounds received at Fredericksburg, December 13, '62. Samuel W. Evans, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Robert C. Edelblute, February 25, '62; wounded at South Mountain and discharged. John C. Fulton, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Joseph Faloon, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Samuel J. Ferguson, July 24, '61; veteran, transferred to 190th P. V. Wm. Grumbling, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. David L. Ginter, October 16, '61; veteran, transferred to 190th P. V. Jedediah Grover, July 24, '61; discharged Dec. 28, '61. Wm. H. Gamble, July 24, '61; discharged Dec. 30, '61. J. Grumbling, July 24, '61; dis. Dec. 31, '62.

Alexander N. Hart, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. J. D. Hildebrand, July 24, '61; prisoner December 13, '62 to May 17, '63; wounded at Spottsylvania; mustered out with company. Joseph D. Henderson, July 24, '61; discharged December 5, '62. William M. Hadden, March 14, '62; discharged April 1, '63. Thomas Hogan, July 24, '61; served two years and deserted. William Junkins, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. John Lawson, July 24, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, Virginia; mustered out from hospital. James McDonald, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. M. McLaughlin, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Henry Merritts, July 24, '61; wounded May 8, '64; absent sick at muster out. Samuel McClaran, July 24, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. James McClune, veteran; transferred to 190th P. V.; came home sick and died. Joseph Mintzer, July 24, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Benjamin May, July 24, '61; discharged December 23, '61. Archibald Miller, July 24, '61; discharged October 15, '62. Wm. Mintzer, July 24, 1861, discharged April 12, 1863. George Merritts, July 24, 1861; discharged October 8, '62, (dead). Calvin Martin, June 15, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. William Myers, June 24, '61; promoted to sergeant major, to 1st lieutenant Co. I, to brevet captain March 13, '65; mustered out with company. Alexander R. McMullen, July 24, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, '62. Stotler Mintzer, March 4, '62; died July 6, '62, of wounds received at Charles City Cross Roads. George Martin, July 24, '61; killed at Spottsylvania C. H., Virginia; May 12, '64; Stewart Meredith, July 24, '61; died May 16, '64, of wounds received at Spottsylvania C. H., Virginia. William Makin, February 18, '62; killed at Bull Run, August 30, '62. Francis C. Overdorf, July 24, '61; discharged September 24, '61. Harvey Overdorf, July 24, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads. David C. Overdorf, July 24, 1861; killed at Antietam, Maryland, September 17, '62. Thomas Painter, July 24, '61; wounded at Antietam, September 17, '62, and discharged. Henry Painter, July 24, '61; transferred to 190th P. V. Archibald M. Rogers, July 24, '61; wounded at Bull Run; mustered out with company. Bennett Rhodes, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Jeremiah A. Rhodes, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. Alexander Ream, July 24, '61; discharged October 23, '62. William Ream, August 26, '62; transferred to 190th P. V. William Reckord, July 24, '61; killed at Wilderness, Virginia. Robert B. Stewart, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. William B. Somers, July 24, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg, December 13, '62; absent sick at muster out. David Simpson, July 24, '61; wounded at Fredericksburg and discharged. James S. Stewart, July 24, '61; wounded at Antietam, Maryland, and discharged. Edward Stephens, July 24, '61; discharged February 25, '62; Geo. W. Stouteagle, June 15, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Berd B. Sherman, July 24, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V.; died in Andersonville prison. Robert Stunkerd, July 24, '61; died at Georgetown, D. C., October 13, '64. Henry Shuman, March 19, '62; killed at South Mountain, Maryland, September 14, '62. Oliver Sproul, July 24, '61; killed at South Mountain, September 14, '62. John Swarts, July 24, '61; veteran; killed at Wilderness, Virginia. James F. Tomb, July 24, 1861; prisoner, December 13, 1862, to May 17, 1863; mustered out with company. James E. Thomas, yuly 24, '61; died at camp Pierrepont, Virginia, March 21, '62. Abel B. Wilson, July 24, '61; mustered out with company. John W. Williams, July 24, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Henry Waltermeyer, July 24, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Andrew Wolf, July 24, '61; veteran; transferred to 190th P. V. Joseph Williams, July 24, '61; wounded at Bull Run, August 30, '62, and discharged. William Waltemeyer, February 13, '64; transferred to 190th P. V.

FORTY-THIRD PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—FIRST LIGHT ARTILLERY—FOURTEENTH RESERVES.

Battery A, "Easton's."—Levi Adams, Feb. 17, '64; wounded, and died near Chapin's farm, Virginia, Sept. 30, '64.

Battery F, "Ricketts."—Charles F. Farren, February 22, '64; mustered out with battery; died since. John Myers, February 16, '64; mustered out with battery. William Wissinger, March 8, '64; mustered out with battery.

Battery G, "West's."—Thomas C. Baker, February 22, '64; Edward Boring, Feb. 16, '64; Reuben S. Boring, Feb. 16, '64; George S. Buchanan, Feb. 9, '64; Andrew Carney, Feb. 22, '64; James B. Elder, Feb. 17, '64; Frank R. Fleck, Feb. 24, '64; George Freck, Feb. 17, '64; Solomon Fulmer, Feb. 17, '64; mustered out with battery. William J. Fuller, Feb. 20, '64; veteran; on detached duty with 5th U. S. artillery, battery L; was killed at Winchester, Va., July 24, '64. James W. Hopkins, Feb. 24, '64; promoted to corporal; mustered out with battery. David Hancock, Feb. 25, '64; mustered out with battery. Cassius C. Harrison, Feb. 22, '64; mustered out May 23, '65. A. G. Kettering, March 5, '64; mustered out with battery. Isaac F. Kitner, Feb. 17, '64; mustered out with battery; died since. Daniel Long, Feb. 10, '62; Henry McDermitt, Feb. 9, '64; Wm. R, Myers, Feb. 18, '64; Josephus Osborn, Feb. 17, '64; Robert W. Rowe, Feb. 8, '64; mustered out with battery. W. S. Shields, Feb. 22, '64; mustered out with battery; was physician at Marion. John D. Snyder, Feb. 17, '64; Orlando Snyder, Feb. 25, '64; mustered out with battery. Daniel D. Smith, Feb. 24, '64; veteran; died at Harper's Ferry, June, '65. John A. Vanhorn, Feb. 24, '64; Andrew Wissinger, Feb. 24, '64; mustered out with battery.

FORTY-SIXTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

James T. Adair, August 4, '63; promoted to first lieutenant and assistant surgeon of 77th Pennsylvania Volunteers. John Barkey, July 13, '63; mustered out with regiment. John Ballentine, July 14 '63; mustered out with regiment. Joseph Clingenberger, July 30, '63; mustered out with regiment. Jas. Duncan, July 13, '63; discharged by general order May 26, '65. James Frederick, July 13, '63; mustered out with regiment. George Grove, July 13, '63; mustered out with regiment. Andrew Hancock, July 14, '63; mustered out with regiment. William Hancock, July 14, '63; mustered out with regiment. Armstrong Henderson, July 14, '63; mustered out with regiment. Adam (or Elijah) Hefner, August 11, '63; mustered out with regiment. George Kroft, July 14, '63; had feet frozen on picket duty; toes amputated. Dennis McSweeney, July 13, '63; wounded at Decard Station, Tenn.; mustered out with regiment. James (or John) McIntire, July 13, '63; served to June 20, '65. Matthew T. Rankin, July 13, '63; mustered out with regiment. William T. Smith, July 13, '63; promoted to corporal; mustered out with regiment. William Stivison, July 13, '63; mustered out with regiment. Robert K. Stuchel, July 13, '63; mustered out with regiment. J. Watt Smith, luly 14, '63; discharged by general order, June 8, 1865. Jacob Strong, February 27, '64; mustered out with regiment. Washington Wilhelm, July 13, '63; mustered out with regiment. James S. Nesbit, captain, December 4, '61; wounded at Cold Harbor, Virginia, discharged by special order, September 28, '64. John McElhany, 1st lieutenant, Sept 19, '61; captured at Edista Island, prisoner one year, resigned February 6, '63. William W. Stewart, 2d lieutenant, September 19, '61; promoted 1st lieutenant, March 26, '63, resigned September 30, '63. Blaney Adair, 1st sergeant, September 19, '61; promoted 2d lieutenant, March 11, '63, to 1st lieutenant, April 5, '64, to captain, September 19, '64, not mustered, killed at Chapins' farm, September 29, '64. R. E. McCrea, sergeant, enlisted October 14, '61; discharged September 6, '62. Matthew Longrey, sergeant, October 7, '61; promoted 1st sergeant, March 11, '63, com. captain, May 12, '65, not mustered, wounded in action, arm amputated. Jacob L. Shank, sergeant, September 30, '61; veteran, wounded at Cold Harbor, mustered out with company. John Kelly, sergeant, September 17, '61; tranferred to United States regular army. Samuel Moorhead, corporal, September 30, '61; veteran, promoted sergeant then com. sergeant, then 2d lieutenant, com. captain, March 21, '65, killed at Petersburg, April 2, '65. Wm. J. Petticord, corporal, September 30, '61; veteran, promoted sergeant, absent, sick at muster out. Curtis McCornish, corporal, September 30, '61; veteran, promoted sergeant, 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant, wounded at Cold Harbor Virginia, mustered out with company. Isaac Wike, September 19, '61; died at Beaufort, South Carolina, December 25, '62. William Cunningham, corporal, October 21, '61; killed at Edisto Island, South Carolina, March 29, 1862. John D. Glass, corporal, September 26, '61; veteran, promoted sergeant, mustered out with company. John Houston, corporal, September 26, '61; veteran, promoted com. sergeant, 2d lieutenant and 1st lieutenant, resigned March 19, '65. George W. Stoops, corporal, November 7, '61; discharged May, 1862. C. S. McCrea, musician, October 14, '61; veteran, mustered out with company. Mathias Altemus, private, April 8, '65; mustered out with company. Matthew Askim, October 24, '62; died in hospital. P. W. Pridenbach, February 11, '64; mustered out with company. Barnabus B. Black, February 20, '64; mustered out with company. Taylor Bryan, February 9, '64; discharged by G. O. May 13, '65. Joshua Brown, September 19, '61; transfer'd to U. S. reg. army. J. H. Bridenbach, Feb. 13, '64; transferred to veteran reserve corps; discharged August 28, '65. William Cummins, October 25, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. John S. Coy, October 14, '62; mustered out with company. Abraham S. Coy, October 9, '61; veteran; captured; mustered out with company. Samuel Campbell, October 15, '61; veteran; absent, sick at muster out. William Cochran, August 24, '62; wounded in action at Chapin's farm; mustered out from hospital. Robert Crytzer, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; captured; mustered out with company. William L. Craig, January 9, '65; mustered out from hospital. Westley Cameron, October 14, '61; transferred to U. S. regular army. Nicholas Cramer, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; killed at Petersburg, Va. Nicholas Cameron, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; captured; killed at Cold Harbor, June 3, '64. Daniel Clawson, Feb. 2, '64; wounded at Cold Harbor, June 3, '64, and died June 23, '64. Abraham D. Coy, June 8, '63; died in hospital. Ephraim Cramer, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; captured; died in Andersonville prison; grave, No. 9,134. John Craig, Sept. 19, '61; promoted corporal; wounded at Cold Harbor, Va.; mustered out with company; veteran. Anderson Carbaugh, Sept. 19, '61; promoted corporal; killed at Cold Harbor. Frank Davis, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. John W. Dick, Sept. 15, '62; discharged June 26, '63. Samuel D. Devlin, August 21, '62; wounded at Cold Harbor; discharged by general order, June 11, '65. Benjamin F. Devinney, February 11, '64; not on muster out roll. Thomas J. Davis, September 19, '61; promoted corporal; died at Fortress Monroe, November 27, '61. Joseph Everett, August 21, '62; wounded; discharged on surgeon's certificate. Samuel B. Eckman, February 10, '64; mortally wounded at Cold Harbor, Va., June 3, '64. Isaac Empfield, September 19, '61; died December 8, '63. John Fetterman, October 7, '61; veteran, wounded at Cold Harbor; mustered out with company. Andrew Farren, October 9, '61; captured at Edisto Island; on detached duty at muster-out. Noah Fisher, November 5, '61; captured; transferred to United States regular army. James Fowler, September 29, '61; discharged July 26, 1862, (by company roll book.) Moses Fry, February 9, '64; died near Petersburg, Va. Henry Fetterman, September 26, '61; died October 26, '63. Solomon Fetterman, October 27, '62; killed at Chapin's Farm, Va. John Foust, September 19, '61, veteran; promoted to corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company. Daniel George, October 25, '61, veteran; wounded at Petersburg; mustered out from hospital. John D. Glass, September 19, 61, veteran; mustered out with company. John H. Green, February 22, '64; mustered out with company. William R. George, October 24, '61, veteran; promoted corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company. Charles W. Gibson, August 24, '62; promoted to corporal; discharged by general order June 11, '65. A. Hendrickson, Feb. 15, '64; mustered out with company. George J. Hadden, February 10, '64; mustered out with company. Joseph Houston, February 24, '64; wounded at Petersburg and discharged from hospital. Thomas Hamilton, August 25, '62; killed at Petersburg. John Howearth, Sept. 30, '61, veteran; promoted to corporal; wounded at Drury's Bluff; mustered out with company. Eli Isenberg, February 18, '64; wounded at Cold Harbor; transferred to veteran reserve corps; discharged September 15, '65; was in the six months service of 1863. John Jacoby, February 10, '64; mustered out with company. J. T. Jamison, February 12, '64; discharged by general order, June 18, '65. Joshua Jones, February 6, '64; missing at Cold Harbor June 16, '64. William King, February 15, '64; mustered out with company. David S. Kerr, February 18, '64; wounded; mustered out with company. John Keller, August 8, '62; killed at Cold Harbor, June 3, '64. Samuel King, February 10, '64; mortally wounded at Cold Harbor, June 3, '64. Dominick Kennedy, Sept. 19, '61; veteran, promoted corporal; died at Saulsbury, S. C.; eaptured; company record says he was killed. William Lydick, September 30, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Andrew Lydick, October 7, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Jackson Lemon, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Noah Lohr, Feb. 12, '64; wounded at Cold Harbor and at Petersburg; leg amputated. John Lydick, September 30, '61; killed at Petersburg. David Long, March 28, '62; died at Hilton Head, Aug. 1, '62. Wm. H. Long, Sept. 30, '61; veteran; promoted corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company. John Montgomery, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Wm. McDermott, Feb. 13, '64; mustered out from hospital. Edward D. Murphy, Feb. 9, '64; Joseph Muller, Feb. 1, '64; William S. McClain, February 18, '64; William B. Myers, February 18, '64; Henry Myers, February 22, '64; mustered out with company. H. Munshower, February 10, '64; discharged by general order, May 15, '65. George Milliron, February 26, '64; discharged by general order, May 31, '65. John A. McGee, February 12, '64; veteran; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Stephen Marker, October 14, '61; veteran; killed at Chapin's farm, Va. David Myers, Sept. 30, '61; veteran; promoted to corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company, Nelson McCornish, August 24, '62; discharged by general order, June 11, '65. Robert E. McCrea, November 5, '61; discharged Sept. 6, '63. John Martin, Sept. 19, '61; promoted corporal; died at Fortress Monroe. Samuel Overdorff, October 25, '61; veteran; wounded at Petersburg; mustered out with company. Isaac Overdorff, October 28, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Alexander Ow, February 18, '64; mustered out with company. Frank Overdorff, February 13, '64; captured; discharged on surgeon's certificate. Harrison Overdorff, October 12, '61; veteran; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. Joseph Pittman, October 14, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Nathan S. Parson, October 7, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. William Powell, January 4, '65; mustered out with company. Wm. P. Patterson, Sept. 19, '61; prisoner four months; mustered out at expiration of term. Jacob Replogle, October 28, '62; mustered out with company. Josiah Risinger, October 14, '62; discharged by general order, June 2, '65. James H. Roberts, Sept. 27, '62; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Edward Roser, Sept. 19, '61; died March 16, '64. Joseph Reed, October 15, '61; veteran; killed at Petersburg, Va. Daniel Shank, October 24, '61; veteran; promoted corporal; mustered out with company. Jacob Shank, October 24, '61; veteran; wounded at Chapin's farm and Petersburg; mustered out with company. Thomas Simpson, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; John Steffy, October 9, '61; veteran; captured; Samuel R. Shank, October 27, '62; Tobias Stiles, Oct. 23, '62; Abraham Steffy, Feb. 20, '64; David Simpson, Feb. 19, '64; veteran; Frederick Sprankle, Feb. 18, '64; Josiah Stake, Feb. 18, '64; Louis W. Smith, Feb. 18, '64; Michael D. Sprowle, April 11, '65; wounded at Chapin's farm and Petersburg; mustered out with company. Jeremiah Stake, February 18, '64; wounded; discharged on surgeon's certificate. William A. Stewart, August 21, '62; discharged by general order, June 11, '65. Henry Strong, October 17, '62; wounded at Cold Harbor; discharged on surgeon's certificate. H. S. Swarts, February 22, '64; wounded; arm amputated. Isaac Slippy, October 31, '61; veteran; discharged on surgeon's certificate. Daniel Strong, Sept. 13, '62; discharged by general order, June 11, '65; Levi Shank, Sept. 13, '62; discharged by general order, June 11, '65. Wm. Stout, October 20, '62; died at Beaufort, S. C., Sept. 29, '63. David Snyder, February 19, '64; wounded at Petersburg and died from wounds received. John Strain, February 9, '64; killed at Chapin's Farm. John C. Smith, February 18, '64; promoted principal musician; mustered out with regiment. Alfred Slippy, September 19, '61; veteran; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. John Sebring, September 13, '62; promoted to corporal; killed at Cold Harbor. William W. Templeton, February 18, '64; mustered out with company. L. L. Thompson, November 5, '61; captured; tranferred to United States regular army. John L. Taylor, October 12, '61; veteran; promoted corporal, sergeant and second lieutenant; mustered out with company. George S. Willett, September 19, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Thomas C. Wilson, October 14, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Robert Wilson, Sept. 19, '61; veteran; mustered out with company. Thomas B. Wilson, Feb. 20, '64; mustered out with company. George Waltemire, Feb. 13, '64; mustered out from hospital. George Walters, October 21, '62; wounded in action and absent at muster-out. William W. Wolf, February 18, '64; mustered out with company. Samuel Wolf, April 11, '65; mustered out with company. David Waltemire, September 19, '61; discharged June 26, '63. James M. Watt, February 18, '64; discharged by general order, June 8, '65. James B. Work, February 18, '64; discharged on surgeon's certificate. George Wike, October 28, '62; discharged on surgeon's certificate, date unknown. Daniel Waltemire, October 9, '61; veteran; died of wounds received at Petersburg. Joseph C. Young, February 1, '64; mustered out with company.

FIFTY-SIXTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

*Company B.—Willard McIntire, captain; discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability, October 15, '62. Jesse A. Cunningham, first lieutenant; promoted to captain; discharged Nov. 6, '63, on surgeon's certificate of permanent disability. David Davis, second lieutenant; resigned May 18, '62. Samuel McCune, first sergeant; promoted to second lieutenant and first lieutenant; discharged March 4, '63. Thomas D. Cunningham, second sergeant; promoted from sergeant to second lieutenant and first lieutenant; discharged on account of wounds received in action, July 1, '63. Albert A. Kuhn, third sergeant; died from wounds received in action at second Bull Run, August 30, '62. Joseph P. Lintun, fourth sergeant; discharged November 11, '62, from wounds received August 28, at Gainesville, Va. James Speedy, fifth veteran; sergeant; killed in action at Hatcher's Run, February 7, '65. Privates—Alfred R. Anderson, wounded August 28, '62, at Gainesville; discharged on account of disability. Absalom Brown, transferred to brigade band; mustered with band. William Brown, wounded November 30, '63, at Mine run; discharged September 25, '64, at expiration of service. Joseph Blakely, wounded August 28, '62, at Gainesville; discharged on account of disability, October 14, '62. Archibald C. Brown, promoted to color sergeant December 1, '61; died at Washington March 30, '62. Samuel Bushman, discharged September 24, '64, by expiration of term of service. George Clark, died in camp hospital, near Fredericksburg, June 15, '62. Daniel S. Brush, veteran; wounded June 18, '64, at Petersburg (arm amputated); discharged February 22, '65. George Clawson, discharged January 7, '65, at York, Pa. James W. Compton, died at Findly hospital, Washington City, February 17, '63. Joseph J. Crate, discharged March 18, '63; disability. John W. Crusan, wounded in action at Gettysburg, July 1, 63; died August 10, '63, from wound. John E. Cunningham, wounded April 29, '63, at Chancellorsville; promoted first lieutenant; wounded June 8, '64, at York River Railroad; discharged October 24, '64, on account of wound. Samuel H. Charlton, transferred to veteran reserve corps; discharged on expiration of term of service. Harvey Dixon, died at hospital, Washington, D. C., March 33, '64. Anthony Earheart, wounded July 1, '63, at Gettysburg; discharged November 14, '64, on expiration of term of service. William H. Evans. Matthew H. Fails, wounded August 29, '62, at Bull Run; discharged February 9, '63, on surgeon's certificate. Henry Fox, wounded July 1, '63, at Gettysburg; discharged September 24, '64, on expiration of term of service. Sylvester G. Gettys, discharged on surgeon's certificate, January 28, '63. John D. Gordon, promoted to second lieutenant; killed at Gettysburg July 1, '63. Washington Hammil, died in hospital at Fredericksburg, June 29, '62. John F. Henderson, wounded July 1, '63, at Gettysburg; discharged May 5, '64, on surgeon's certificate of disability. Morgan R. Hunter, wounded April 29, '63, at Chancellorsville; discharged on expiration of term of service. Jacob Hicks, taken prisoner Aug. 28, '62; discharged February 23, '63. Geo. H. Johnston, promoted sergeant; wounded April 30, '63, at Chancellorsville; arm amputated; discharged July 20, '63. Richard Kelley, wounded August 29, '62, at Bull Run. James Kelley, wounded at Chancellorsville, April 29, '63; leg amputated at hip joint; discharged December 7, 63. Robert Kelley, killed at Gettysburg, July 1, '63. John Kerr, died April 4, '63, in hospital, at Washington City. James E. Lant, discharged November 1, '64, expiration of term of service. Christian Ling, wounded July 1, '63, at Gettysburg; died from wounds July 18, '63. George Marker, discharged May 19, '62, on account of disability. James S. Matson, wounded August 28, '62, at Gainesville; discharged February 20, '63, on account of disability. James A. Miller, discharged February 9, '63, on account of disability. James McCrea, wounded May 25, '64, at North Ann river, Va.; died from wound, May 26, '64. Hugh McFadden, killed at Weldon railroad, Va., August 18, '64. John Martin, discharged February 9, '63. James McFarlnd, discharged December 5, '62. Robert Miller, veteran; died in hospital December 30, '64, at Beverly, New Jersey. James M. Neil, discharged May 25, '62. William F. Patch, veteran; wounded at Laurel Hill, Va., May 10, '64; died from wound, May 26, '64, in Washington City. John C. Reid, killed at Bull Run, August 30, '62. William Richardson, discharged Sept. 28, '64, on account of expiration of service. Charles Seigfried, transferred to veteran reserve corps, October 24, '63. James S. Stimmel, died January 24, '62, in Blairsville. John W. Triece, wounded at South Mountain, Sept. 14, '62; died May 6, '64, at battle of Wilderness. John Walker, discharged December 5, '62, on account of disability. Richard Wallace, wounded Aug. 28, '62, at Gainesville, Va.; discharged March 6, '63, on account of wound. David Weir, discharged Feb. 4, '63, on account of disability. Hugh Wiley, discharged on expiration of term of service, October 28, '64. Lawrence Kesler, discharged in 1863. Theodore M. Carney, promoted drum major; mustered out with band, January 9, '65; veteran. Frederick C. Black. James Repine. Benjamin F. Earheart, wounded at Gettysburg, July 1, '63, on account of wound. The. A. Earhart, veteran, wounded Aug. 28, '62, at Gainesville, Va.; discharged March 2, '65. Jos. G. Marshall, discharged on expiration of term of service, Sept. 24, '64. Geo. Uncapher, mustered out at expiration of term of service, Sept. 24, '64. Robert Ewing, died July 25, '62, in hospital near Fredericksburg, Va. David L. McPhilemy, discharged March 25, '63, on account of disability. Wallace Elric, wounded July 1, '63, at Gettysburg, Pa., discharged September 25, '64, at expiration of term. George U. Reid, discharged June 4, '63, on surgeon's certificate of disability. James Lancy, wounded May 8, '64, at Laurel Hill, Va., died in hospital, May 9, 64, from wounds. John A. Black, promoted 2d lieutenant, 1st lieutenant, captain, major, lieut. colonel; wounded July 1, '63, at Gettysburg, Pa.; wounded at North Ann River, May 23, '64, discharged July 5, '65. Westley Brubaker, veteran; promoted sergeant May 5, '65, mustered out with regiment July 5, '65. William Clark, veteran, wounded June 18, '64, at Petersburg, Va., mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. Daniel W. Dougherty, veteran, promoted sergeant, 1st lieutenant, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. David Frew, veteran, taken prisoner July 1, '63, at Gettysburg, mustered out with regiment. Johnston Lawson, veteran; taken prisoner July 1, '63, at Gettysburg, taken again a Spottsylvania, and sent to Andersonville prison, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. Richard Neil, veteran; wounded August 28, at Gainesville, Va., mustered out with regiment, July 5, 65; veteran. Samuel Nesbit, veteran; wounded at York River railroad, May 25, '64, promoted sergeant, wounded at Hatcher's Run, Va., February 5, '65, mustered out with regiment July 5, '65. Henry O'Neil, veteran; promoted 1st sergeant; 2d lieutenant, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. John J. Rankin, veteran; wounded August 28, '62, at Gainsville, Va.; wounded May 9, '64, at Wilderness; promoted sergeant; 2d lieutenant, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. William H. Richardson, veteran; wounded at Bull Run, August 30, '62; wounded May 10, '61, at the Wilderness, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. Joshua Swartz, veteran; wounded at Laurel Hill, Va., May 10, '64, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. Stewart Trimble, veteran; wounded at Laurel Hill, Va., May 10, 64, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. Samuel McKisson, veteran; taken prisoner at Gainesville, Va., August 28, '62, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. John Z. Earheart, veteran; taken prisoner at Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, '63, wounded June 18, '64, at Petersburg, promoted color sergeant, October 10, '64, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65. John McClaran, veteran; wounded at Petersburg, Va., June 17, '64, mustered out with regiment, July 5, '65.

* All mustered as enlisted, September 25, 1861.

SIXTY-FIRST PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company A—George R. Lewis, surgeon; promoted from assistant-surgeon of 54th Pennsylvania volunteers, September 18, '63; mustered out with regiment June 28, '65. Jacob Creps, captain, wounded at Fair Oaks and Banksford; mustered out at expiration of term. John Pollock, first lieutenant, wounded at Fair Oaks and died at Portsmouth, Va. George W. Brady, second lieutenant, wounded at Fair Oaks and resigned. Frank M. Brown, first sergeant, promoted to first lieutenant; wounded in Wilderness and died of wounds. Frank Donahue, sergeant; wounded at Fredericksburg; mustered out at expiration of term. William L. Buchanan, sergeant, promoted first sergeant; wounded at Fort Stephens, arm amputated. B. F. Rowland, sergeant, wounded at Fair Oaks, prisoner three months, killed at Spottsylvania. A. T. Brewer, sergeant, wouneded at Fair Oaks; served three years. W. A. S. Work, corporal, wounded at Fair Oaks, mustered out at expiration of term. T. H. Brewer, corporal, wounded at Antietam and discharged. Wm. Weaver, corporal, wounded at Fair Oaks, and died of wounds. James M. Ayers, corporal, wounded in Wilderness, and mustered out at expiration of term. Andrew Pearce, corporal, wounded at Fair Oaks, and discharged. Lemuel Brady, corporal, wounded at Fair Oaks, promoted sergeant, wounded at Fredericksburg May 3, 1863; killed at Spottsylvania May 8, 1864; best tactician in the regiment; drill sergeant. Isaac N. Price, corporal, promoted second lieutenant; wounded at Cold Harbor, and mortally wounded at Charlestown, Va. last day of three years service. Israel Grey, corporal, promoted to sergeant; wounded at Fredericksburg May 3, 1863; wounded at Spottsylvania; promoted sergeant-major; mustered out expiration of term. J. M. Walker, musician, wounded at Malvern hill; mustered out at expiration of term. John Snyder, musician and regimental post master; mustered out at expiration of term. A. B. Allison, private, died near Alexandria, Va., Feb. 11, 1862. J. E. Allison, wounded at Fair Oaks, and at Wilderness May 6, 1864; mustered out expiration of term. Fulbert Alteband, wounded at Fredericksburg and transferred to veteran reserves corps. Thomas Anderson, wounded at Fair Oaks and discharged. John C. Armor, veteran; wounded at Wilderness; promoted commissary sergeant Sept. 4, 1864; served through the war. J. M. Brewer, wounded at Fair Oaks and discharged. C. M. Brewer, discharged June, 1862. Hugh Brady, wounded at Fair Oaks and discharged. Isaac V. Brady, wounded at Fair Oaks; killed at Wilderness May 6, 1864. Daniel H. Bee, wounded at Fort Stephens, D. C.; leg amputated. J. K. Black, veteran; served to close of war. Samuel Barr, died in hospital near Providence, R. I. Eli J. Campbell, wounded at Rappahannock station, mustered out at expiration of term. C. W. Cessna, killed at Fair Oaks May 31, 1862. J. M. Chambers, veteran, promoted sergeant, then first sergeant; served through the war. Zach. T. Chambers, veteran, promoted corporal and sergeant; served through the war. Robert Cravan, discharged 1862. Robert Craig, died near Alexandria, Va., Nov. 1862. J. L. Crawford, wounded at Fair Oaks and discharged. J. C. Cameron, discharged; date not known. Marion M. Davis, wounded at Fair Oaks and discharged. Abram Davis, veteran, wounded at Spottsylvania; promoted second lieutenant of company G, 1865; served through the war. E. D. Daymond, died April, 1862. Peter W. Dilts, promoted corporal; taken prisoner on skirmish line at Gettysburg, Pa.; mustered out at expiration of term. Wm. S. Derby, wounded at Malvern hill; mustered out at expiration of term. James Donahue, wounded at Fair Oaks and discharged. Orlando A. Ellis, veteran; wounded at Fair Oaks; prisoner three months; wounded at Fredericksburg May 3, 1863; wounded at Wilderness; arm amputated. Asaph A. Ellis, veteran, served through the war. William Donahue, wounded at Fair Oaks, died on the field. E. W. Fairbank, killed at Fair Oaks May 31, 1862. R. W. Fairbank, killed at Fort Stephens July 12, 1864. Perry E. Horn, wounded at Wilderness; mustered out at expiration of term; afterwards 2d lieutenant Co. B, 74th P. V., in one year's service. John Herbison, wounded at Spottsylvania and discharged. Alex. Harman, wounded at Wilderness and died of wounds at Philadelphia. Peter S. Justice, wounded at Spottsylvania and discharged. T. W. Kinter, wounded at Fair Oaks; never found or heard from. Wm. Johnston, cannot get record; mustered out from hospital. Robert Jamison, died near Alexandria, Va., Jan. 10, 1862. Peter Keel, promoted corporal; wounded, think at Fort Stephens. Thomas Lemon, wounded at Seven Pines taken prisoner at Savage Station; wounded at Spottsylvania, May 10, 1864, again May 12, and died at Fredericksburg, Va. Davis A. Lukehart, veteran, wounded at Fair Oaks and Fredericksburg, promoted corporal, wounded at Spottsylvania; promoted second lieutenant, first lieutenant and captain, serving to close of war. Frank L. Lydick, taken prisoner at Banks' ford, paroled, served three years. A. B. McQuown, killed at Fair Oaks. W. L. McQuown, discharged June, 1862. Alexander Moore, wounded at Fort Stephens, foot amputated, died, sent home; buried at Gilgal, Indiana county. Thomas Moore, wounded at Fair Oaks, mustered out at expiration of term. D. McCullough, discharged August, 1862. G. B. Mott, wounded at Fair Oaks, killed at Fredericksburg, May 3, 1863. Wm. H. Mott, veteran, wounded, promoted sergeant, served through the war. A. P. Neff, discharged June, 1862. Benj. Neal, killed at Fair Oaks. J. S. Neal, wounded at Fredericksburg, May 3, 1863, and transferred to veteran reserve corps. Hugh S. Pollock, wounded at Wilderness, mustered out at hospital. David Price, died at Point Lookout, Md., August, 1862. J. T. Pearce, wounded by accidental discharge of pistol in hands of comrade and discharged. John W. Row, transferred to Co. B, promoted sergeant; mustered out at expiration of term. David Riddle, wounded at Malvern Hill and died in hospital. Joseph Rager, veteran, wounded at Fair Oaks and at Spottsylvania, pro. corp'l. Luther Richards, wounded at Fair Oaks, promoted corporal; wounded at Spottsylvania. H. V. Stewart, wounded at Fair Oaks, promoted corporal, taken prisoner at Banks' Ford; paroled, killed at Wilderness, May 5, 1864. J. H. Stewart, veteran, wounded at Spottsylvania, killed at Petersburg. Wm. H. Stanley, wounded at Fort Stephens, mustered out at expiration of term. Henry Sylvis, killed at Fredericksburg, May 3, 1863. John Short, killed at Fair Oaks May 31, 1862. James Short, good record, mustered out at expiration of term. John R. Stumpf, wounded at Spottsylvania, mustered out from hospital. A. J. Stuchel, killed at Fredericksburg, May 3, 1863. William Smith, veteran; wounded at wilderness, absent at muster-out of regiment. J. A. Streams, promoted corporal, wounded at Spottsylvania, mustered out at expiration of term. James S. Smith, discharged August, 1862. Israel D. Spencer, veteran; wounded at Fair Oaks, first Cedar creek and Wilderness, discharged. Nathaniel S. Tozer, veteran; promoted to sergeant, served through the war. Thomas Tozer, discharged in the fall of 1861. Thomas C. Thompson, promoted corporal, wounded at Wilderness. John P. Thomas, detailed for work at regimental hospital, mustered out at expiration of term. Geo. R. Walker, transferred to Co. B, killed in Wilderness. Calvin J. Work, promoted corporal, killed at Spottsylvania. J. A. Work, killed at Williamsport, Md., September 20, 1862. Harvey J. Work, wounded at Fair Oaks and Fort Stephens; mustered out at expiration of term. Samuel Wissenger, mustered out at expiration of term. William Wissinger, wounded at Malvern Hill and discharged. George F. Weaver, wounded at Spottsylvania and discharged. Alexander Walker, wounded at Fair Oaks and discharged. Johnston Walker, wounded by accident and died in hospital. James T. Work, teamster; mustered out at expiration of term.

Company B—Wm. A. Allison, Aug. 22, '62; prom'd serg't of Co. F, November 1, '64. Christian Albright, July 14, '63; wounded at Cedar creek, September 19, '64. G. Aikens, July 14, '63; killed at Spottsylvania, May 12, '64. Joseph Burton, July 16, '63; wounded and taken prisoner at Spottsylvania. John H. Beckley, July 16, '63; served to close of war. D. B. Brewer, August, 1862; mustered out June 20, 1865. J. E. Brewer, August, 1862; wounded at Spottsylvania, discharged by G. O., June 3, 1865. J. H. Brown, August, 1862; wounded at Wilderness, discharged by special order, June 20, 1865. John S. Baker, February 15, 1865; discharged by G. O., June 15, 1865. Samuel Barnett, February, 1864; wounded at Wilderness, served to the close of the war. Philip Bowen, February 25, 1864; killed at Fort Stephens, July 12, 1864. John D. Brown, February 25, 1864; mustered out June 20, 1865. Samuel Brogan, October 31, 1864; mustered out with company. A. S. Crawford, August, 1862; discharged January, 1863. Peter F. Custer, February 18, 1864; mustered out with company. George Coy, March 3, 1865; mustered out with company. Joseph T. Dodson, September, 1862; mustered out June 20, 1865. George Duff, October 12, 1864; discharged by G. O. May 30, 1865. Andrew Dick, February 25, 1864; wounded at Spottsylvania, transferred to veteran reserve corps. John N. Dick, February 25, 1864; transferred to veteran reserve corps. John Ellis, February 25, 1864; killed at Ford Stephens, July 12, 1864. William Filmore, July 14, 1863; promoted to corporal, served to the close of the war. Samuel Gibson, February 25, 1864; mustered out with company. Charles Hart, February 25, 1864; died at Alexdria, June 11, 1864. Daniel Helman, February 2, 1864; wounded at Spottsylvania, trans'd to veteran reserve corps. Joseph Hoover, Feb. 25, '64; wounded at Wilderness, mus. out with Co. Alexander Howe, February 25, 1864; wounded at Wilderness; mustered out with company. Jacob K. Helman, February 2, 1864; wounded at Wilderness; discharged June 5, 1865. John Hazlett, March 3, 1865; mustered out with company. John Harper, November 26, 1862; wounded at Wilderness, May 5, 1864. William H. Hewitt, April 4, 1864; mustered out with company. Isaac S. Helman, February 19, 1864; promoted corporal; mustered out with company. Alexander Jamison, September 1, 1862; discharged June 20, 1865. James T. Jamison, February 25, 1864; missing at Spottsylvania. J. C. Johnston, February 25, 1864; wounded severely at Spottsylvania and discharged. John L. Kaufman, October 26, 1864; died at City Point, April 25, 1865. John R. Keel, August 21, 1862; discharged May 30, 1865. George A. Kurts, August 21, 1862; wounded at Wilderness and discharged. Irwin Lydick, February 25, 1864; wounded at Spottsylvania. Daniel Loughrey, February 15, 1865; mustered out with company. Josiah Lockard, February 23, 1864, missing at Spottsylvania, May 12, 1864. Nathaniel W. Lemon, Feb. 23, 1864, died March 8, 1865. Mratin Moot, August 21, 1862, killed at Wilderness. J. McPherson, September, 1862, wounded at first Cedar creek and Spottsylvania, discharged June 20, 1865. Samuel McMannus, February 25, 1864, wounded at Wilderness and died at Alexandria, June 1, 1864. John McCullough, February 25, '64; wounded at Spottsylvania, Virginia, discharged June 9, 1865. Amos A. Miller, Feb. 21, 1864, wounded at Wildernees. John C. Matthews, February 14, 1864, wounded at Cedar creek, promoted to sergeant and corporal, mustered out with company. S. W. McCoy, February 2, 1864, wounded at Fort Stephens, mustered out with company. Daniel Mock, February 2, 1864, mustered out with company. Jacob Mangus, September 2, 1864, discharged June 20, 1865. Samuel L. Myers, mustered out with company. N. S. North, August, 1862, wounded at Fredericksburg May 3, 1863, served to close of war. William Ober, February 14, 1864, promoted corporal, mustered out with company. F. M. Patterson, July 14, 1863, promoted sergeant company G, Nov. 1, 1864. Daniel Palmer, Feb. 15, 1865; mustered out with company. T. J. Postlethwait, Aug. 21, 1862; discharged June 20, 1865. Daniel Replogle, Jan. 25, 1864; died same year. Edward J. Robinson, Aug. 2, 1862; promoted sergeant Co. F, Nov. 1, 1864. Peter Stoy, Feb. 4, 1864; wounded October 19, 1864. S. Swartswalter, July 13, 1863; wounded at Spottsylvania and Petersburg. Christopher Stuchel, October, 1861; discharged August, 1862; became blind. John A. Stewart, July 21, 1862; wounded near Bank's ford, taken prisoner, lost one arm and part of other hand at Spottsylvania, May 12, '64; was in hands of rebels eight days. Jonathan Stahl, Feb. 3, 1864; wounded in Wilderness campaign. William B. Stahl, Jan. 29, 1864; wounded at Spottsylvania, promoted corporal, mustered out with company. Edward Smith, April 7, 1864; mustered out with company. William Smith, Feb. 13, 1864; veteran, wounded at wilderness and absent at muster out. John Titterington, Feb. 25, 1864; taken prisoner in Wilderness, health and mind both impaired by starvation in Andersonville prison pen. Aaron Titterington ton, Feb. 25, 1864; son of John, left at Cold Harbor sick, had permit for City Point in Ambulance; was lost. Robert Torrens, Sept. 1, 1864; discharged June 20, 1865. R. N. Work, Feb. '64; killed at Wilderness. J. M. Webster, October, 1861; absent without leave, Dec. 1862. John T. Warden, Sept. 10, 1862; promoted corporal, discharged June 20, 1865. Simeon B. Wigle, July 16, 1863; wounded at wilderness; mustered out with company. Simon Weaver, July 14, 1863, wounded at Spottsylvania; mustered out with company.

Note.—The veterans of Co. H. also served in Co. A from September 4, 1864, to the close of the war; they were excellent men. There may be a half dozen names in above list not of Indiana county. The names known to not be of the county are stricken out.

SEVENTY-FOURTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company B—Mustered March 1st to 15th, 1865, for one year's service. Peter C. Spencer, first lieutenant, promoted to captain; had served in the 105th P. V. Perry E. Horn, second lieutenant; had served in the 61st P. V. Ezra Neff, first sergeant; Jackson McMillen, sergeant; Daniel Good, corporal; William Harklerood, corporal. Privates—Samuel C. Brown, Alexander Colkitt, Wm. M. Colkitt, John W. Compton, Samuel Crawford, Frank Flickenger, John Gall (or Gaul), James M. Hadden, Luther Henneigh, Nelson T. Hicks, Charles M. Hicks, Samuel P. Hoover, Samuel M. Jordan, Samuel Knox, James Knox, D. M. McCullough, John C. Peffer, John C. Pifer, John Pearce, Peter Pearce, James B. Rankin, John Rankin, Henry Rater, George Simpson, Jacob Sink, James R. Shields, Adam Shields, Frederick Walker, John Walker, John M. Weston, Conrad Zener.

Company F—Mustered for one year's service March 1st to 6th, 1875; mustered out August 29th, 1865. Gawin A. McClain, captain, discharged May 8, 1865; (see company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserves.) John Kinter, captain, promoted from first lieutenant. John McWilliams, first lieutenant, promoted from second lieutenant. Matthew S. Ray, second lieutenant, promoted from first sergeant. John W. Shields, promoted first sergeant. Peter Freck, (or Freeh,) sergeant. Andrew J. Stumpf, sergeant. Thos. S. McClain, sergeant. Wm. H. Kinter, sergeant. William C, Dilts, sergeant. Alexander Walker, corporal, (61st P. V.) William P. Rowe, corporal. Samuel Wissinger, corporal. William Thompson, corporal. D. T. Faith, (105th P. V.) corporal. Harrison H. Shields, corporal. John G. Barr, corporal. Henry L. Kinter, musician. Henry K. Shields, musician. Privates—John S. Agey, Thomas Anderson, died at Beverly, W. Va., May 19, 1865, Samuel Bethel, Alexander Blue, Jonathan W. Brown, John Brown, of D, Wm. M. Butterbaugh, G. M. Butterbaugh, Jonathan Butterbaugh, Lewis Butterbaugh, Solomon Butterbaugh, James Baker, Thos. Baringer, John L. Baringer, David H. Brady, Samuel Clawson, Wm. Craig, Henry Craig, Wm. A. Conner, Wm. Degarmin, Samuel Donahue, Geo. Donahue, Jas. A. Dickey, Chas. W. Davison, Samuel M. Fails, Wm. Faith, John Faith, John W. Findley, Morton J. Fleming, Samuel Gibson, Robert Galbraith, Robert C. Hopkins, Albert Howe, Andrew Harman, George W. Hanna, John Hunter, William H. Harrison, Andrew Hoover, Joseph Johnson, Thomas A. Johnston, Archibald Kinter, Alexander Kimmel, John Lowman, Thomas C. Laughrey, John K. Lightcap, John S. Longwell, Samuel Munshower, H. Munshower, Henry M. Myers, David Myers, Isaac Myers, Abraham Moore, Robert M. Morris, John McQuown, Thomas H. McQuown, William McQuown, M. McGlaughlin, W. McGlaughlin, Jno. McCunn, Jas. McLeister, R. C. McGaughey, John McCoy, Alex. McMillen, James McMillen, H. K. McCallister, Andrew S. McCall, James W. McHenry, Frederick Pfieffer, William H. H. Price, died at Clarksburg, West Va., April 24, 1865, Augustus Pease, William M. Ray, Myers J. Rhodes, John J. Rowe, Daniel H. Rowe, Nicholas B. Short, David A. Short, John Shaffer, Hiram Stuchel, Silvester Swauger, Caleb Snyder, Henry Weiss,

SIXTY-FOURTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS, FOURTH CAVALRY.

Company C—Tobias Rosensteel, September 12, 1861, promoted second lieutenant December 14, 1864, first lieutenant July 1, 1865; not mustered; mustered out with company. Gillis B. Cribbs, February 27, 1864, veteran; mustered out with company. John G. Doty, February 10, 1864; mustered out with company. Robert Y. Elder, August 31, 1864; discharged by general order, May 15, 1865. William J. Henry, mustered out with company. Samuel Frederick, mustered out with company. John G. Frederick, February 3, 1864; mustered out with company. James Kilgore, February 17, 1864; mustered out with company. W. G. Miller, February 26, 1864; mustered out with company. Isaac Miller, February 24, 1864; mustered out with company. John McGuire, January 1, 1864, veteran, sergeant; mustered out with company. Nelson Miller, March 14, 1864; mustered out with company. James McKelvey, Feb. 28, 1864, veteran, corporal; mustered out with company. Jas. A. Miller, January 20, 1864; mustered out with company. John A. McNeil, February 29, 1864; mustered out with company. Elias Moore, September 17, 1864; discharged by general order May 15, 1865. Theodore Marshall, February 25, 1864, veteran; mustered out with company. John Rosborough, Feb. 16, 1864; mustered out with company. Daniel L. Rosenstell, February 11, 1864, veteran; mustered out with company. Jacob A. Scott, September 12, 1861; discharged on surgeon's certificate. Alex. Templeton, January 11, 1864, veteran; killed in action May 11, 1864.

Company D—John M. Black, February 26, 1864; mustered out with company. Benjamin Cabel, February 4, 1864; veteran, mustered out with company. Daniel F. Dick, February 26, 1864; wounded, died at Washington, D. C., May 16, 1865. Samuel H. Johnston, March 13, 1862; amount of service not known. J. N. Haskinson, September 16, 1861; mustered out at expiration of term. Isaac Johns, March 31, 1864; dis. by general order, March 8, 1865. Phillip Lichtenfelt, September 16, 1861; prisoner from October, 1863, to August, 1864, mustered out at expiration of term. John T. Lutz, February 26, 1864; killed in action, June 11, 1864. Isaac J. Robb, March 12, 1862; prisoner October, 1863, to August, 1864, mustered out at expiration of term. William J. Ray, February 15, 1864; mustered out with company. David A. Stephens, February 26, 1864; died in the service. Samuel Trimble, February 26, 1864; killed in action, June 26, 1864. Elijah Taylor, March 21, 1864; mustered out with company. David J. Wakefield, jr., February 24, 1864; mustered out with company. Henry C. Wakefield, February 24, 1864; mustered out with company.

Company E—Abraham S. Martin, August 16, 1861; sergeant, mustered out at expiration of term, and commissioned 2d lieutenant, 1st U. S. infantry, September, 1864. Mark Ray, February 26, 1864; mustered out with company. Nelson M. Thompson, Feb. 26, 1864; veteran, wounded at Deep Bottom, mustered out with company. Sylvester Thompson, February 22, 1865; mustered out with company.

SIXTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Harry White, October 31, 1861, major, prisoner from June 15, 1863, to Sept. 29, 1864, commissioned lieutenant colonel Oct. 31, 1864, colonel Jan. 28, 1865, not mustered, promoted to brevet brigadier general March 2, 1865, after discharge, Feb. 22, 1865. John C. Carpenter, May 8, 1862, second lieutenant company E, promoted captain company K February 3, 1863, captured, commissioned major May 1, 1865, lieutenant colonel May 15, 1865, but not mustered, mustered out June 7, 1865, expiration of term and afterwards mustered as colonel June 10, 1865, and again mustered out with the regiment July 14, 1865. John F. Young, March 15, 1862, commissioned major Oct. 31, 1864, not mustered, promoted brevet captain March 13, 1865, but had resigned March 12, 1865. Robert Barr, Nov. 8, 1861, surgeon, mustered out at expiration of term, promoted surgeon in chief of third brigade, third division, third corps, and to surgeon in chief of third division 6th army corps. William A. Rager, May 2, 1862, veteran, sergeant, promoted first lieutenant April 21, 1865, mustered out with regiment. George W. Sloan, April 10, 1863, promoted from private of company K to hospital steward, sergeant, promoted first lieutenant of company F May 16, 1865. William Keller, March 15, 1862, promoted from first sergeant to second lieutenant May 4, 1865, mustered out with the company July 14, 1865. Robert T. Cornwell, Sept. 16, 1862, captain company B, transferred to company I, mustered out Oct. 25, 1864. Alexander Adams, October, 1862, company G, discharged June 2, 1865. Robert Adams, Aug. 28, 1862, company F, promoted corporal, mustered out with company, J. R. Adams, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order June 20, 1865. Jonathan W. Ayers, Sept. 10, 1862, company E, died at Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25, 1862, burial record Nov. 17, 1862. W. R. Black, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, prisoner from June 15 to July 25, 1863, wounded at Sailor's creek, Va., April 6, 1865, leg amputated, commissioned first lieutenant, not mustered, mustered out from hospital. James Bash, 1862, old company B, was lost, thought to be killed, never heard from. Solomon Brown, Oct. 29, 1862, company K, promoted corporal, mustered out with company. Jacob Brown, Nov. 4, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. William Black, Nov. 4, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. Abram Bennett, Nov. 4, 1862, company K, captured, died in Andersonville prison August 20, 1864. John R. Bryan, August 28, 1862, company F, promoted corporal, discharged by general order June 20, 1865. David Barry, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged on surgeon's certificate April 3, 1865. Samuel A. Brown, Aug. 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order June 20, '65. William Buchanan, Feb. 23, 1865, company K, mustered out with company. Jacob C. Bash, Nov. 18, '64, company G, drafted in West Virginia, mustered out with company. John Barber, April 29, 1862, company E, discharged by general order June 20, 1865. John S. Colgan, Sept. 20, 1862, company E, wounded at Cedar Creek, transferred to veteran reserve corps. Samuel Clawson, company F, lost at Cold Harbor. Samuel W. Curry, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, discharged on surgeon's certificate Sept. 1863. John R. Carnahan, Oct. 29, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. James Crawford, Feb. 15, 1862, company E, veteran, mustered out with company. Elias Cramer, February 27, 1862, company E, veteran, mustered out with company. Thomas Dehaven, November 8, 1861, company G, died at Annapolis, Maryland, July 28, 1863. Robert Degarmin, April 5, 1862, company E, veteran, deserted after serving over three years. Thomas A Douglas, August 28, 1862, company F. discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. Jos. J. Duncan, October 29, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. Alexander Duncan, March 31, 1862, company E, veteran; discharged by special order, August 10, 1864. Jas. W. Davidson, company F, died at Berryville. Edward Degarmin, April 5, 1862, company E, veteran, deserted after serving over three years. John Ebey, March 12, 1862, company E, corporal, veteran, wounded at Cedar Creek Oct. 19, 1864, leg amputated. Levi Esch, Feb. 28, 1862, company E, veteran. Wm. H. Fairbank, March 12, 1862, 1st sergeant, company E, commissioned lieutenant, not mustered; recruiting officer for three months, mustered out at expiration of term. Hiram Ferrier, October 9, 1862, company G, discharged on surgeon's certificate Feb. 5, 1865. John Ferrier, August 28, 1862, company H, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. John S. Fleming, October 29, 1862, company K, wounded at Cedar Creek, October 19, 1864, mustered out with company. Henry Fisher, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order June 20, 1865. Geo. Fisher, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. Jacob Fisher, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. John Fry, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. Edward Fetterman, April 5, 1862, company E, mustered out at expiration of term. John Fetterman, April 5, 1862, company E, mustered out at expiration of term. Amos Graham, September 20, 1862, company E, transferred to veteran reserve corps. Robert Gamble, March 31, 1862, company E, transferred to invalid corps, killed by accident at Kingston, N. Y. James R. Gailey, August 28, 1862, company F, wounded April 5, 1865. Andrew C. Glass, February 6, 1862, company F, served three years. James W. Graham, September 10, 1862, company F; discharged by general order, June 20, '65. John Graham, November 4, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. Adam Grumbling, February 27, 1862, company E, veteran, promoted corporal, mustered out with company. John M. Hadden, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. Christopher Hill, April 5, 1862, company E, promoted corporal, veteran, mustered out with company. Abraham Hill, Feb. 25, 1862, company E, veteran, mustered out with company. Wm. H. Henry, March 12, 1862, company E, served nearly three years. Samuel Irwin, August 28, 1862, company F, promoted corporal, wounded at Winchester, Sept. 19, 1864, arm amputated. George W. Hill, April 5, 1862, company E, killed at Winchester, Va., Sept. 19, 1864. Leonard Huey, company F, killed in Shenandoah valley. Jacob Kookenbrod, Nov. 4, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. Westley Kinter, October, 1862, died in rebel prison. Benjamin Lloyd, Nov. 27, 1862, company K, captured, died at Andersonville Sept., 1864. John B. Lucas, August 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. William Long, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, died in Andersonville rebel prison. John Lance, Nov. 4, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. Johnson J. Miller, musician, Sept. 10, 1862, company G, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. David Mentzer, private, Nov. 4, 1862, company K, died Nov. 1864, burial record Nov. 28, 1863. John Miller, Nov. 4, 1862, company K, discharged on surgeon's certificate. William R. Miller, August 28, 1862, company H, wounded at Winchester, Va., discharged on surgeon's certificate May 11, 1865. Williiam R. Miller, Angust 28, 1862, company F, wounded in Shenandoah valley and died. William L. Mahan, Oct. 23, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. Israel Moore, Feb. 23, 1865, company K, mustered out with company. William J. Miller, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, absent without leave, Oct. 6, 1864. James Moore, Oct. 9, 1862, company K, discharged by general order, July 11, 1865. Marshall McDermott, Oct. 30, 1862, company K, wounded, mustered out with company. Daniel Miller, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, mustered out with company. Uriah Moore, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, mustered out with company. John C. Marcle, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, transferred to veteran reserve corps, discharged July 25, 1865. Amos S. Miller, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, discharged by general order, June 15, 1865. R. T. McConaughey, Oct. 9, 1862, company F, mustered out with company. Harman McAfoos, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, missing at Wilderness, May 6, 1864, never heard from. George Mechling, October 9, 1862, company G, died at Fairfax, Fairfax county, Virginia, August 25, 1863. James Mahan, August 28, 1862, Company F, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. Thomas McClure, Aug. 28, 1862, company F, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. Albert Miller, February 28, 1862, company E, veteran, promoted corporal, mustered out with company. James Murphy, Feb. 28, 1862, company E, veteran, promoted corporal, mustered out with company. Daniel Marker, March 31, 1862, company E, veteran, mustered out with company. James Michaels, March 29, 1862, company E, veteran, mustered out with company. John Michaels, August 28, 1862, company E, discharged by general order June 20, 1865. Samuel Mumman, September 20, 1862, company E, discharged by general order, June 20, 1865. William P. Miller, Aug. 28, 1862, company E, died at Annapolis, Md., September 18, 1862. John H. Nupp, October 9, 1862, Company G, killed at Wilderness, May 6, 1864. Henry Overderff, died at Annapolis. Daniel Orner, November 4, 1862, company K, promoted to corporal, mustered out with company. Reuben Overdorff, April 5, 1862, company E, discharged June 18, 1862. Robert Orr, October 9, 1862, company G, mustered out with company. Samuel D. Patterson, Aug. 28, 1862, Co. F, prisoner from June, 1864, to April, 1865, mustered out June 13, 1865. Moses Richie, March 12, 1862, company E, mustered out at expiration of term. John M. Rumbach, Oct 9, 1862, company H, mustered out with company. Amariah H. Reed, Oct. 9, 1862, company G, discharged by general order, June 26, 1865. Jacob Replogle, October 9, 1862, company G, transfered to veteran reserve corps April 1, 1865, discharged by general order, July 31, 1865. Charles M. Reinhart, August 4, 1862, company E, discharged by general order, May 18, 1865. Charles Riddle, 1862, first company B, taken prisoner, paroled, came home and died of fever. Clark D. Rowland, 1862, discharged, date unknown. Isaac Skiles, November 4, 1862, company K, mustered out with company. W. S. Swarts, March 24, 1862, old company B, discharged April 29, 1864. George W. Sutton, February 28, 1862, company E, veteran, mustered out with company. Jonas Sylvis, Sept. 20, '62, Co. E, transferred to veteran reserve corps. Jacob Sterner, Oct. 9, 62, G, died at home, June 16, 1864. James S. Strickler, Oct. 9, 1862, H, discharged on surgeon's certificate, 13, 1864. John W. Snyder, Aug. 28, 1862, F, discharged on surgeon's certificate, March, 1865. Sebastian Sickenberger, Aug. 28, 1862, F, dis. by general order, June 20, 1865. Thomas P. Stephens, Aug. 28, 1862, F, discharged by G. O., June 20, 1865. Jeremiah S. Sebring, Oct. 29, 1862, K, wounded, transferred to veteran reserve corps, then com. lieutenant in a colored regiment. John Sylvis, September 20, 1862, E, promoted sergeant, dis. by general order, June 20, 1865. John H. Shaffer, Feb. 24, 1862, E, veteran, promoted corporal, mustered out with company. Wm. H. Sterner, Sept. 20, 1862, E, promoted corporal, discharged by G. O., June 20, 1865. Adam Titterington, Oct. 29, 1862, K, mustered out with company. R. T. Templeton, Aug. 28, 1862, H, discharged by G. O., June 20, 1865. Geo. L. Vanhorn, Oct. 9, 1862, G, mustered out with company. Alexander P. Watson, Aug. 28, 1862, F, dis. by general order, June 20, '65. George W. Wilson, Nov. 4, '62, K, discharged by G. O., May 15, '65. Allen N. Work, Oct. 9, '62, G, died at home, Feb. 17, '64. Robert D. Williams, Aug. 18, '62, F, discharged by G. O., June 20, '65. W. N. Woolweaver, April 20, '62, E, mustered out at expiration of term. Franklin Wissinger, May 29, '62, E, transferred to veteran reserve corps, mustered out at expiration of term. Alexander Wilson, Nov. 4, '62, K, captured, died July 14, '64, at Richmond, of wounds received in action. John Warner, Feb. 4, '62, F, discharged 1862. William Young, Nov. 4, '62, K, promoted to com. sergeant, Aug. 31, '63.

Company B—One year enlistment. Samuel McHenry, captain; commissioned major June 14, 1865, not mustered. Nathan Z. Seitz, first lieutenant; commissioned captain June 14, 1865, not mustered. Dallas Sutton, second lieutenant; commissioned first lieutenant June, 14, 1865, not mustered. John T. Kinter, first sergeant; commissioned second lieutenant June 14, 1865, not mustered. John O'Neil, sergeant; Francis Latimer, sergeant; Joseph M. Bell, sergeant; George W. Duncan, sergeant; Nelson O'Neil, corporal; Thomas C. Lytle, corporal; Silas W. Work, corporal; John H. Fyock, corporal; Michael Donnelly, corporal; Archibald McGaughey, corporal; James L. Rhodes, corporal; died July 2, 1865; Alexander St. Clair, corporal; discharged June 19, 1865; Daniel D. Fitzhugh, corporal; Nathan C. Giddings, corporal; promoted to hospital steward. Privates—William Blose, Samuel D. Bell, Isaac Beck, Alexander Brown, William Boyles, Charles Boyles, Mathias Conrath, Washington Cook, Porter Clawson, Henry Cooper, Thomas Carpenter, John C. Crosby, Jacob M. Claudy, James E. Dickson, James Dixon, Marshall T. Dick, John O. Drawbaugh, James M. English, Daniel Fyock, George H. Fleming, Walter Gassate, John Goodermuth, John C. Harwick, Peter Henry, Charles Hibbard, J. H. Halderman, James P. Johnston, John H. Kimmel, Solomon Kile, David A. Keefauver, Samuel Lytle, William C. Lowry, William Lowry, Anthony Lowman, Jacob J. N. Lott, John Loughrey, David Mangus, Thos. Martin, William S. McHenry, Clinton D. McKee, George McComb, Wm. M. McCreery, died July 2, 1865, Jeremiah P. Nesbit, Richard Owens, David Pollock, Frederick Pfaff, John S. Plymer, died August 21, 1865, George Ray, Augustus Reed, Matthew Rankin, Robert A. Robertson, Hugh M. Reed, Jas. H. Stumpf, Wm. H. Smith, Madison A. Smith, M. B. Stodmiller, Samuel F. Speedy, George Stahl, Bennett W. Vanhorn, M. B. Wyncoop, Robert C. Wyncoop, Jacob R. Warner, Joseph M. Wilson, Wm. M. Wilson, Joseph C. Weamer, Henry Wentz, Daniel M. Zorger.

SEVENTY-EIGHTH PENNSLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Adam Lowry, quartermaster, October 18, 1861; died at Chattanooga, Tennessee, September 28, 1863.

*Company A—Except where other dates are given for recruits, this company was mustered into service October 12, 1861. William Cummings, captain, August 2, 1861; wounded at Stone River; promoted from 1st lieutenant; mustered out at expiration of term. David A. Rankin, veteran; promoted from corporal to sergeant, to second lieutenant, to captain; mustered out September 11, 1865. William R. Maize, 1st lieutenant, August 26, 1861; wounded at Stone River; mustered out at expiration of term; afterward lieutenant in United States regular army. John M. Fleming, 1st lieutenant, July 20, 1863; promoted from sergeant to 2d lieutenant, to 1st lieutenant; mustered out with company. Evan Lewis, 2d lieutenant; promoted from sergeant, mustered out at expiration of term. James M. Miller, 1st sergeant; mustered out at expiration of term. Samuel L. Smith, 1st sergeant; veteran; promoted to 1st sergeant, to 2d lieutenant; not mustered; mustered out with company. J. T. Gibson, sergeant; wounded at New Hope Church; discharged December 28, 1864. Samuel Fleming, sergeant; promoted from musician; mustered out at expiration of term. David Blue, sergeant; promoted from corporal; mustered out at expiration of term. James H. Robinson, sergeant, veteran; mustered out with company. John R. Stewart, sergeant, veteran; promoted from corporal; mustered out with company. William A. Miller, sergeant, veteran; promoted from corporal; mustered out with company. William Thomas, corporal; mustered out at expiration of term. George Adams, corporal; wounded in action; mustered out at expiration of term. Wm. Fleming, corporal; mustered out at expiration of term. John Stauffer, corp'l; pro. to corp'l; mustered out at expiration of term. Archibald McBrier, corporal; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. John Lukehart, corporal; veteran; mustered out with company. John Miller, corporal, September 20, 1862; transferred to veteran reserve corps, June, 1864. Geo. E. Foy, corporal; promoted to corporal; captured; died at Richmond, Nov. 19, '63. John M. Brown, transf'd to veteran reserve corps. John F. Rankin, mus'n; mustered out at expiration of term. Jackson Armstrong, private, August 28, '62; discharged by general order, June, 1865. John L. Adams; trans. to signal corps. Charles R. Aden; died at Chattanooga, Tenn., of wounds received at New Hope Church, Ga. Theodore J. Ballentine; mustered out at expiration of term. Nathaniel S. Bryan; mustered out at expiration of term. Andrew J. Belts; mustered out at expiration of term. Daniel Beyers; mustered out at expiration of term. James Buchanan; mustered out at expiration of term. John Bothel, March 2, '65; mustered out with company. Henry P. Brinker, March 14, '65; must'd out with company. Daniel Bothel; discharged March 21, '63. William W. Bell; discharged March 23, '63. George W. Brink, August 1, '64; discharged by general order, June, 19, '65. Leander Baylor; joined U. S. regular army, 4th cavalry, December 1, '62; wounded at Rome, Ga.; mustered out at expiration of term. George F. Currie; mustered out at expiration of term. John O. Campbell; mustered out with company. William Cochran; died of wounds received at Stone River, Tenn. John Conway, discharged June 28, '62. James Campbell, discharged March 23, '63. David Clowes, September 10, '62; discharged by general order, June 19, '65. James Carroll, died of wounds received at Stone River, Tenn. James Carnahan, August 28, '62; died at Stone River, Tenn., February 11, '63. Joseph M. Crooks, died at Louisville, Ky., January 5, '62. William H. Dickie, transferred to signal corps. John Devlin, died at Camp Negley, Ky., Dec. 4, '61. James R. Devlin, died at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 4, '62. Thos. M. Fleming, mustered out at expiration of term. Richard B. Fleming, Aug. 16, '64; dis. by gen'l order, June 19, '65. Clay D. Ferguson, March 31, '64; discharged by general order, June 19, 1864. William K. Gibson, wounded in action; mustered out at expiration of term. Andrew Gibson, March 31, '64; mustered out with company. Reuben George, March 28, '62; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. Martin Gable, March 31, '64; mustered out with company. Jas. A. Guthrie, wounded and died at Stone River, Tenn., Jan. 23, '63. James D. Guthrie, August 25, '62; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. James Hall, mustered out at expiration of term. Andrew J. Harman, March 31, '64; mustered out with company. John Hefflefinger, discharged Dec. 19, '62, and died at home soon after. George Helman, died at Louisville, Ky., Dec. 31, '61. Philip Harman, prisoner Sept. 20, '63, to Dec. 10, '64; discharged March 15, '65. John A. Hufhan, died at Nashville, Tenn., January 13, '64. Robert Jewett, mustered out at expiration of term. Porter Kelley, mustered out at expiration of term. R. B. Kilpatrick, mustered out at expiration of term. J. H. Kilpatrick, mustered out at expiration of term. Henry Kanouf, January 5, '64; transferred to veteran reserve corps and discharged October 4, 1865. Philip Kunkle, Sept. 10, '62; discharged by general order, June 19, '65. Thomas C. Kerr, killed at New Hope Church, Ga., May, 27, '64. Thompson Kelley, wounded at Stone River, Tenn., and died at Louisville, Ky., April 6, '63. Josiah Lewis, mustered out at expiration of term. Josiah P. Lewis, mustered out at expiration of term. Wm. T. Lewis, mustered out at expiration of term. John Lewis, Aug. 5, '62; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. Samuel Lewis, discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. Westley Lossen, transferred to United States signal corps. James Little, killed at New Hope Church, Georgia, May 27, 1864. John C. Lewis; died at Louisville, Ky., Dec. 15, 1863. Franklin Marlin; discharged Feb. 20, 1864. Scott M. Miller, Feb. 7, 1865; discharged by general order, May 29, 1865. Ebenezer Mahan, killed at New Hope Church, Ga., May 27, 1864. G. W. McGaughey, mustered out at expiration of term. Daniel McMillen, Sep. 10, 1862, mustered out with company. Eli McCall, Jan. 3, '62; mustered out at expiration of term. Eli McPherson, March 4, 1862; mustered out at expiration of term. Peter McSweeney, August 28, 1862; discharged by general order, May 27, 1865. R. H. McHenry, transferred to signal corps. *J. J. Palmer, mustered out at expiration of term. *Geo. C. Palmer, transferred to 4th U. S. cavalry, and died at New Orleans. David K. Rankin, mustered out at expiration of term. Israel Repine, mustered out at expiration of term. John Replogle, Feb. 1, 1864; veteran; mustered out with company. Wm. H. Ruffner, March 3, 1864; mustered out with company; now a resident of this county. Isaac Rowland, discharged June 28, 1863. John K. Stear, mustered out at expiration of term. John Shetler, mustered out at expiration of term. Charles C. Simpson, mustered out at expiration of term. Alex. K. Stewart, March 31, 1864; mustered out with company. Samuel Smith, Sept. 3, 1863; mustered out with company. Joseph Shields, discharged August 6, 1863. Christian Stewart, August 6, 1864; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. Peter Smail, Sept. 10, 1862; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. Peter Spencer, Sept. 15, 1864; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. John Shaffer, Sept. 14, 1864; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. John C. Shaffer, Sept. 14, 1864; discharged by general order, June 19, 1865. Wm. Sowers, March 21, 1865. *Jas. Thorn, August 19, 1862. Joseph Uncapher, mustered out at expiration of term. Abraham Wallace, March 28, 1864; veteran; discharged Sept. 19, 1864. Jeremiah Wagoner, died at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 27, 1862.

*The veterans and recruits were mustered out September 11, 1865.

Company D—Mustered in October 12, 1861, except where otherwise noted. Michael Forbes, captain; resigned January, 1863. Robert H. McCormick, first lieutenant; promoted captain April 16, 1863; served three years. William J. Nugent, second lieutenant; promoted first lieutenant April 16, 1863; served three years. A. C. Braughler, first sergeant; promoted second lieutenant April 16, 1863; served three years. John W. Ross, sergeant; promoted first sergeant April 16, 1863; served three years. Joseph L. Buterbaugh, sergeant; discharged June 9, 1862. Wm. W. Hamilton, sergeant; discharged Jan. 14, 1863. David Barkey, sergeant; transferred to veteran reserve corps Jan. 30, 1864. Lewis Z. Shaw, sergeant; died at Stone River, Tenn., May 29, 1863. Thompson M. Bell, sergeant; died at Stone River, Tenn., March 20, 1863. Jacob Durnmeyer, corporal; served three years. Cyrus Daugherty, corporal; served three years. Thomas T. Hill, corporal; served three years. Bartholomew Fleming, corporal; died at Murfreesboro, Tenn., May 1, 1863. Leonard A. Hallister, musician; served three years. David S. Ake, private; served three years. Jonathan Anderson, injured in service; discharged Jan. 20, 1863. Aaron Burnheimer, served three years. Samuel Bartlebaugh, served three years. Mathias Bartlebaugh, discharged April 29, '63; Jeremiah Cook, wounded at Stone River; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Albert Daugherty, served three years. Wm. Duncan, served three years. Wm. S. Douthett, Sept. 20, 1862; died at Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 25, 1863. John W. Dougherty, discharged for disability. Frederick Fuller, served three years. Francis S. Fairman, discharged Oct. 17, 1864. Samuel L. Fairman, died at Camp Wood, Ky., Jan. 2, 1862. Robert J. Fairman, Sept 20, 1862; wounded and died at Stone River, Tenn., April 7, 1863. John Fuller, died at Louisville, March 21, 1862. George Ginter, served three years. George Goss, died at Louisville, May 25, 1862. John Hudson, served three years. John C. Irwin, captured; died in Andersonville prison. Samuel Irwin, discharged June 8, 1863. Bethuel Johnson, discharged Oct. 28, 1862, at Nashville. Chas. B. Kerr, served three years. Andrew Kelley, died at Camp Hambright, Ky., Feb. 23, 1862. John Lancy, served three years. Christopher H. Lute, served three years. Alexander Lydick, tranferred to veteran reserve corps. Joseph M Lowry, promoted commissary sergeant; served three years. Archibald McLaughlin, died at Louisville, Ky., December, '61. Thomas McLaughlin, died at Camp Wood, Ky., June 24, '62. Harrison McLaughlin, died at Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 4, '63. Obadiah McLaughlin, died at Mumfords-

*These were step-sons of John Lucas, of Armstrong township, who also had five sons who served in the Union army, two of them wounded in service.

*James Thorn, a Tennessee lad twelve years old, enlisted in this Indiana county company; was very brave and daring; survivors of the company think the government commissioned him or gave him some appointment; after the war the rebels caught and hung him.

ville, Ky., March 4, '64. Franklin Nupp, served three years. Cyrus Nupp, served three years. Jacob C. Neff, wounded at Stone River; served three years. Austin Rankin, served three years. George W. Rowley, died at Camp Hambright, Ky., Feb. 22, '62. James Rowland, transferred to veteran reserve corps; discharged for disability. Samuel Stahl (1st), served three years. William Stiffler, served three years. John C. Stephens, served three years. John Shetler, discharged June 23, 1862. Samuel Stahl (2d), tranferred to United States regular army, December 1, '62, and was lost at Selma, Alabama. Samuel Stuchel, died at Louisville, Ky., Dec. 16, 1861. Jas. M. Thomas, served three years. Silas F. Templeton, served three years. J. A. Woolweaver, served three years. Jacob Wise, served three years. Banks Woodford, served three years. Robert M. Walker, served three years. Abraham B. Wike, transferred to veteran reserve corps, Dec. 12, 1863. John Yeager, Sept. 12, '62; died at Nashville, Tenn., February 1, '63.

Company G.—J. L. Myers, October 12, '61; served three years.

Men mustered for one year's service.—Co. F, Solomon Black, Jacob Clouse, Wm. W. Elder, Alex. L. Gaston, Samuel Groft, Jas. Kelley. Co. D, Taylor Potts. Co. H. Wm. Klingensmith. Co. G, Wm. A. Stuchel, Joseph Lydick, Scott Miller. Co. I, John Gordon. Co. C, Daniel Switzer. Co. G, J. A. Cessna, died in service; Henry Livengood.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRD REGIMENT PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company G—Mustered in January 10, 1862, except where otherwise noted. John Stuchel, captain, resigned April 15, 1863. James J. Morrow, captain, Dec. 1, 1861, veteran; promoted from 2d to 1st lieutenant, Jan. 1863, to captain July 1, 1863; mustered out with company. Wm. H. Irwin, 1st lieutenant, veteran, promoted to adjutant, Nov. 29, 1862; mustered out with company. Wm. C. Bell, 1st sergeant, veteran, promoted to 1st sergeant, commissioned 2d lieutenant; prisoner from April 20, 1864, to March 1, 1865; mustered out with company. Robert Whitacre, sergeant, veteran, promoted to sergeant; prisoner from April 20, 1864, to March 1, 1865; mustered out with company. Geo. Baker, sergeant, veteran; promoted to sergeant; prisoner from April 20, 1864, to March 1, 1865; mustered out with company. John Black, sergeant, veteran; promoted to sergeant; prisoner from April 20, 1864, to December 1, 1864; absent on furlough at muster out. Andrew Shankel, veteran, promoted to sergeant; prisoner from April 20, 1864, to December 1, 1864; absent on furlough at muster out. John Clark, sergeant, veteran, captured April 20, 1864; died at Florence, S. C., February 1, 1865. Joseph W. Pearce, sergeant; discharged, date unknown. Thomas Moore, Sept. 7, 1861; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Wm. J. Stuchel; discharged, date unknown. Wm. McGary, corporal, veteran; promoted to corporal; prisoner from April 20, 1864, to December 7, 1864. absent with leave at muster out. William Myers, discharged, date unknown. Samuel Barr, corporal; veteran; prisoner April 20, 1864; died at Andersonville, Georgia, July 7, 1864. Jacob Weaver, corporal, September 7, 1861; died, date unknown. Christopher Stuchel, corporal, died, (killed), date unknown. Samuel Spencer, died at Beaufort, N. C., Dec. 23, 1863. Henry K. Barrett, musician, died at Harrison's Landing, Va., July, 1862. Geo. W. Anthony, private; veteran; captured at Plymouth, N. C., April 20, 1864. John Adams, veteran; captured at Plymouth, N. C., April, 20, 1864. Jacob Anthony; discharged; date unknown. Geo. W. Brink; discharged; date unknown. John F. Bruner, Dec. 7, 1861; veteran; prisoner, April 20, 1864, to Dec. 7, 1864; absent on furlough at muster out. Frank Brothers, discharged; date unknown. Samuel Bagley, discharged; date unknown. Henry H. Bell, promoted to sergeant-major, Jan. 10, 1862; discharged on surgeon's certificate, 1862. Peter Barr, October 22, 1862; prisoner, April 20, 1864; died at Andersonville, Ga., Sept. 7, 1864. Geo. W. Bruner, veteran; prisoner, April 20, 1864 to Dec. 7, 1864; absent on furlough at muster out. William O. Black, veteran; prisoner, April 20, 1864; died at Andersonville, Ga., July 18, 1864. William Carson, veteran; prisoner, April 20, 1864 to Dec. 7, 1864; mustered out with company. James Dunlap, veteran; prisoner, April 20, 1864, to Feb. 26, 1865; absent on furlough at muster out. James Frederick, Dec. 1, '61; discharged on writ of habeas corpus, Jan. 3, '62. Geo. M. Fee, veteran; prisoner, April 20, '64; died at Andersonville, Ga., August 16, '64. Daniel Fee, died, date unknown. Geo. M. Gourley, veteran; prisoner, April 20, '64, to Dec. 7, '64; absent on furlough at muster out. Daniel Greek, mustered out at expiration of term. Washington Hazlett, discharged, date unknown. James Hopkins, discharged, date unknown. Thomas Jurat, mustered out at expiration of term. Isaac Kuhn, died at Beaufort, N. C., March 21, '64. David W. Lawrence. Thomas J. Laughlin, Sept. 7, '61; veteran; promoted to commissary sergeant; captured at Plymouth, N. C., April 20, '65; died on the way from Andersonville, Ga. to Florence, S. C. John Miller, veteran; prisoner, April 20, '64, to April 1, '65; discharged July 14, '65. Alexander Maul, discharged, date unknown. Robert Montgomery, discharged, date unknown. William McCullough, discharged, date unknown. Andrew McCullough, discharged, date unknown. William C. McCluskey, veteran; captured at Plymouth, N. C.; died at Florence, S. C., or on the way from Andersonville, Ga. Martin Neff, discharged, date unknown. George C. Peirce, discharged, date unknown. Moses T. Steel, veteran; prisoner April 10, '64, to Dec. 7, '64; absent on furlough at muster out. John Spencer, discharged, date unknown. Jesse C. Stephens, died June 28, '62. John M. Trimble, discharged, date unknown. Andrew Whitacre, Feb. 24, '64; mustered out with company. Jethro Warner, discharged, date unknown. John F. Weaver, veteran; prisoner April 20, '64; died at Florence, S. C., Jan. 25, '65. Henry Wyant, veteran; prisoner April 20, '64; died at Andersonville, June 15, '64. David White, died, date unknown.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company A—A. H. Mitchell, captain, Sept. 9, '61; resident of Indiana county since the war; promoted from sergeant to first sergeant, to first lieutenant, to captain May 7, '64; not mustered; wounded at Spottsylvania, and discharged for wounds received at Petersburg, June 16, '64; received Kearney badge for bravery. Jos. Cummiskey, sergeant, Sept. 9, '61, veteran; promoted to corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company. Westley P. Hoover, sergeant, Sept 9, '61; promoted corporal and sergeant; mustered out at expiration of term. Wm. J. Mogle, corporal, Sept. 8, '62; promoted to corporal; wounded at Petersburg, Va.; mustered out with company. John McHenry, corporal, Sept. 9, '61; veteran, promoted to corporal; wounded, mustered out with company. Henry Weaver, corporal; April 30, '62; veteran, promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. Henry Aul, private, Sept. 9, '61; teamster, veteran; mustered out with company. Hardman Altebrand, Sept. 9, '61; wounded at Gettysburg and Petersburg; mustered out at expiration of term. Sam'l W. Brewer, Sept. 9, '61, discharged Dec. 24, '61. Isaac Bowersock, Sept. 9, '61; veteran, killed in action Aug. '64, near Petersburg. John Chambers, Feb. 9, '64; mustered 18, out with company. Jonathan Chambers, Feb. 9, '64; killed in action Aug. 21, '64; buried at Petersburg, Va. John W. Cary, Sept. 9, '61; died at Philadelphia Aug. 15, '62. David Cochran, Sept. 9, '61; veteran, wounded at Gettysburg, Pa.; mustered out with company. John A. Dehaven, Sept. 9, '61; discharged June 22, '63. John Henneigh, Sept. 9, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Robert A. Jordan, Sept. 9, '61; veteran, mustered out with company. Robert M. Jordan, March 3, '64; wounded, and discharged on surgeon's certificate May 11, '65.

John Jordan, September 9, 1861; discharged January 22, 1863. John L. Mabon, Sept. 12, 61; discharged April 24, '62. James Mogle, Sept. 8, '62; wounded; discharged by general order, June 2, 1865. John Odell, August 2, 1864; mustered out with company. William Painter, Sept. 9, '61, veteran; wounded and captured at Boydtown Plank Road, Va.; mustered out with company. Henry Sutler, Sept. 9, '61, veteran; killed at Boydtown Plank Road, Va. Jacob Sutter, Sept. 8, '62, died Dec. 20, '62. Berry C. Smith, Feb. 6, '64; wounded at Wilderness; mustered out with company. Peter Walker, Septtember 9, '61; discharged January 12, '62; served a time in United States regular army. Philip Wining, Sept. 9, '61, veteran; wounded at Wilderness; transferred to veteran reserve corps.

Comnany G—Jacob Harshberger, October 25, '61; discharged March 27, '63. David Keller, August 28, '61, veteran; promoted corporal; mustered out with company. Perry Brink, October 25, '61; discharged January 19, '64. John Snyder, Oct. 25, '61; killed at Charles City Cross Roads, June 30, 1862.

Company D.—James Silvis, August 28, '61; promoted from sergeant to first sergeant, to second lieutenant July 1, '61; discharged August 6, 1864, received the Kearney badge for bravery. J. P. R. Cummiskey, first lieutenant; killed at Fair Oaks, Va.

Company I.—Mathias Manner, October 5, '61; promoted to sergeant; killed at Wilderness, May 5, 1864.

Company F—Rob't Kirk, captain, Sept. 9. '61; wounded at Fair Oaks and Bull Run; killed at Chancellorsville. Wm. Kimple, captain, Sept. 17, '61; promoted to corporal, sergeant, 1st sergeant, 2d lieutenant and captain; mustered out with company. David Ratcliff, 2d lieutenant, Oct. 25, '61; resigned Dec. 1861. Ogg Neil, 2d lieutenant, Feb. 19, 1862; veteran; promoted to corporal, sergeant, 1st sergeant, 2d lieutenant, June 8, '65. Wm. T. Stewart, 1st sergeant, September, 1861, veteran; promoted to corporal, sergeant, 1st sergeant; mustered out with company. Jacob L. Smith, 1st sergeant, Sept. 9, 1861; promoted from sergeant; killed at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863. Wm. W. Hazlett, sergeant, Sept. 17, 1861, veteran; promoted corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company. John M. Brewer, sergeant, Feb. 28, 1864, veteran; promoted to corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company. S. H. Pounds, sergeant, Feb. 17, 1862; promoted corporal and sergeant; wounded; mustered out with company. Robert Doty, sergeant, Sept. 9, 1861; promoted corporal and sergeant; killed at Gettysburg; received Kearney badge for bravery. John W. Smith, sergeant, Sept. 9, 1861, veteran; promoted corporal and sergeant; killed at Petersburg, June 18, 1864. Samuel Adamson, sergeant, Sept. 9, 1861; died May 20, 1863, of wounds received in action, Jonathan Brindle, sergeant, Oct. 25, 1861; wounded, transferred to veteran reserve corps. Joshua Pearce, corporal, Sept. 9, 1861; veteran; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. Joseph Taylor, corporal, Sept. 9, '61, veteran; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. Wm. H. Hazlett, corporal, Sept. 17, '61, veteran; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. John N. Means, corporal, Feb. 28, 1864; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. Ira F. Mott, corporal, Sept. 3, '61; veteran, promoted to corporal; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 5, '64. George R. Hall, corporal, Sept. 7, '61; veteran; discharged on surgeon's certificate, Oct. 12, 1864. Thomas Neil, corporal, Oct. 19, '61, veteran; wounded, discharged on surgeon's certificate March 4, 1865. Irwin R. Nicodemus, corporal, May 7, 1862; wounded; mustered out at expiration of term. John N. Vanhorn, corporal, Oct. 25, 1861; discharged February 6, 1863. Jonathan Ayers, Feb. 25, '64; missing in action at Boydtown Plank Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864. Jas. Aul, Oct. 25, 1861; transferred to veteran reserve corps; Wm. W. Brilhart, Feb. 10, 1864; wounded at Petersburg, Va.; mustered out with company. John H. Bush, February 28, 1864; and Jacob L. Bee, Feb. 11, 1864 wounded; absent sick at muster-out. Thomas Brickel, mustered out at expiration of term. Samuel Cochran, Sept. 9, '61; deserted and returned; discharged at expiration of term. Wm. A. Chambers, April 30, '62; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Wm. H. Dickson, February 14, '64; absent on furlough at muster-out. Jonathan Doty, Sept. 9, '61; mustered out at expiration of term. Chauncy A. Ellis, October 25, '61; good record; mustered out at expiration of term. John M. Fleming, Sept. 17, '61, veteran; mustered out with company. Samuel Fry, October 26, '61; wounded in action and discharged January 2, '63. John F. Fulmer, Sept. 9, '61; mustered out at expiration of term. Samuel D. Fulmer, Sept. 9, '61; wounded in action and discharged, Aug. 24, '64. Joseph Graham, February 23, '65; mustered out with company. George W. Hoover, October 25, '61; wounded in action and died at Fortress Monroe, June 4, '62. Benjamin B. Hall, Feb. 29, '64; captured and died at Andersonville, July 17, '64. James Hopkins, Sept. 9, '62; served one year and deserted. H. H. Hallowell, October 26, '61; served two years and deserted. Simon D. Hugus, Sept. 9, '61; discharged March 14, '62. John C. Hallowell, October 26, '61; discharged Nov 1, '62. Thomas M. Hawk, October 26, '61; discharged Dec. 24, '62. Samuel Hanna, Sept. 9, '61; transferred to 1st U. S. cavalry, January, '63. George K. Hoover, October 26, '61; transferred to veteran reserve corps, October '63; methodist minister in Illinois. Daniel Johnston, October 25, '61; killed at Bull Run, Aug. 29, '62. Robert J. Jewert, Feb. 16, '62, veteran; wounded in action and died at Washington, D. C., June 4, '64. Robert S. Loughrey, Feb. 24, '64; mustered out with company. Wm. C. Martin, Sept. 17, '61, veteran; died Jan. 6, '65. Geo. W. Maynard, Sept. 9, '61; missing in action at Wilderness, May 5, '64. Rob't McManus, Oct. '26, '61; died at Harrison's Landing, Va., July 10, '62. Wm. T. Neil, May 7, '62; discharged Aug. 6, '62. David R. Porter, Jan. 11, '64; died at Philadelphia, Feb. 13, '65. James R. Pounds, Oct. 25, '61; missing in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, '63, and never heard from. James W. Shaffer, March 19, '62; veteran; mustered out with company. George Shields, Sept. 8, '62; served four months, deserted and returned Nov. '64; mustered out with company. David Simpson, Feb. 14, '64; discharged by general order, June 27, '65. David L. Simpson, Sept. 9, '61; killed at Chancellorsville, Va. May 3, '63. Peter C. Spencer, Oct. 25, '61; discharged Dec. 31, '62; afterward 1st lieutenant of company B, 78th P. V., one year's service; promoted to captain. John Stewart, Oct. 25, '65; discharged Jan. 30, '63. David C. Simpson, Feb. 14, '64; discharged by general order, June 2, '65. Samuel W. Walker, Feb. 18, '64; mustered out with company. David Willard, Sept. 3, '61; veteran; killed at Wilderness, Va., May 5, '64. John P. Williamson, Oct. 26, '61; captured; died 1862. David K. Williams, Oct. 26, '62; transferred to veteran reserve corps.

Company K—Mustered in Oct. 23, 1862, except where otherwise noted. Henry Altman, captain; resigned Dec. 1, '61; recommissioned first lieutenant; resigned Jan. 15, '62. Samuel McHenry, jr., captain; promoted from sergeant to first sergeant, to second lieutenant, to captain March 26, '63; wounded at Chancellorsville, and discharged for wounds received at Gettysburg, July 2, '63. Milton W. Adair, captain, veteran; promoted to corporal, to sergeant, to first sergeant, to first lieutenant, to captain May 15, '65; wounded; mustered out with company. J. M. Bruce, first lieutenant, veteran; promoted to corporal, to sergeant, to first sergeant, to first lieutenant May 15, '65; wounded near Cold Harbor, May 30, '64; mustered out with company. Daniel S. Drum, second lieutenant; resigned Nov. 22, '61. Vincent A. Keiflin, first sergeant, veteran; promoted to sergeant, to first sergeant; died of wounds received at Gettysburg, Pa.; buried in Catholic cemetery, Indiana, Pa. John McGaughey, sergeant, veteran; promoted to sergeant; wounded at Fair Oaks, Va., Gettysburg, Pa., and Wilderness, Va.; mustered out with company. Robert T. Pattison, sergeant; killed at Fair Oaks, Va., May 31, '62. George J. Reed, sergeant, Dec.

31, '61; veteran, died Aug. 2, '64, of wounds received at Wilderness, Va.; received Kearney badge for bravery. John Shivler, corporal, veteran; promoted to corporal; wounded near Appomattox C. H., Va.; mustered out with company. Daniel Shomber, corporal, veteran; promoted to corporal; good record; mustered out with company. J. M. Torrence, corporal, veteran; promoted to corporal; wounded; mustered out with company. Calvin S. Adair, corporal, killed at Fair Oaks, Va., May 31, '62. Martin L. Smith, corporal; discharged on surgeon's certificate Feb. 14, '63. Wm. S. McLain, musician; discharged on writ of habeas corpus Sept. '62. Robert S. Beatty, private; discharged Dec. 26, '62. John C. Bothel, wounded at Fair Oaks, Va., May 31, '62; transferred to veteran reserve corps Sept. 10, '63. Zach. Chambers, discharged on writ of habeas corpus Feb 10, '62. Hugh C. Cravan, died at Camp Jameson, Va., Jan. 22, '62. Alpheus B. Clark, wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, '62, and discharged. James M. Cannon, mustered out at expiration of term. Martin Davis, Feb. 8, '64, died May 18, '64, of wounds received at Wilderness, Va. James K. Deemer, Oct. 23, '61, discharged Dec. 17, '62. David T. Faith, March 18, '62, discharged August 14, '62. Michael Faith, Oct. 23, '61, discharged March 19, '62. Frank Grimes, died May 21, '62, of wounds received at Chancellorsville, Va. Joel A. Ginter, discharged Feb. 6, 1863. Samuel T. Hays, discharged Aug. 9, '62. James Hall, wounded, transferred to veteran reserve corps. Solomon Keck, veteran, good record, mustered out with company. Jos. Klingenberger, discharged July 14, '62; (see 46th P. V). John Kelley, discharged Jan. 18, '62. Samuel A. Lydick, wounded at Bull Run August '62, and discharged. James McElhose, discharged June 14, '62. Geo. W. McHenry, wounded at Gettysburg, leg amputated. James H. Peelor, wounded at Fair Oaks, Va., May 31, '62, and discharged. James Pease, discharged Dec. 29, 1862. Samuel Rhoads, discharged October 22, '62. James S. Switzer, died at Yorktown, Va., April 1862. James J. Shields, died of wounds received at Fair Oaks, Virginia, May 31, '62. Marshall Shields, discharged August 9, '62. George J. Snyder, wounded at Fair Oaks, Va., May 31, '62, and discharged. John Swanger, transferred to veteran reserve corps Feb. '64. Henry Wining, discharged Jan. 29, '63.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIFTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—

Nine months' service.

James R. Porter, colonel, Aug. 26, 1862; mustered out with regiment. Jesse Thomas, com. sergeant, promoted from private, company I. John K. Anderson, quartermaster sergeant, promoted from musician, company D.

Company A—Mustered August 14, 1862. Mustered out, May 24, 1863. Samuel T. Nicholson, captain. Benjamin F. Speedy, first lieutenant. Robert L. Ritchie, second lieutenant. Elisha L. Devinney, first sergeant. J. Stewart Thompson, sergeant. H. H. McCreight, sergeant. John A. Dickey, sergeant. Mathias Drake, sergeant. Wm. D. Fleming, corporal. Theo. Stonrod, corporal. Samuel E. Couch, corporal. Samuel A. Shields, corporal. John A. Walker, corporal. John Wissinger, corporal. Wm. M. Cribbs, corporal. Wm. L. Johnston, corporal. Wm. S. McLain, musician. A. H. Armstrong, musician. Wm. A. Anderson. Wm. Armstrong, died March 7, 1863. Robert F. Armstrong, died December 17, 1862. Washington Allen, died December 12, 1862. Geo. Bothell, John Bell, William Barnett, John Bothell, Calvin Bartley, Wm. Beatty, Wm. Blakeley, Alex. Buterbaugh, died March 28, '63; Washington Cook, Gillis D. Cribbs, Jacob Cribbs, Samuel Cribbs, John A. Cribbs, Joseph S. Carr, Robert Connor, George H. Cribbs, Daniel Clawson, died October 3, 1862; John Downey, Alex. R. Davis, Wm. M. Dodds, John T. Drake, Martin Davis, D. F. Dickinson, John Davis, discharged on surgeon's certificate; died; buried at Washington, D. C.; Jos. S. Fry, Jacob Fry, Joseph Fry, Richard B. Fleming, Wm. S. Gibson. Wm. G. Hotham, Wm. Henderson, John W. Henderson, Findley Hall, David Hall, Geo. T. Hamilton, John M. Hosack, Geo. M. Hildebrand, Isaac Hefflefinger, Wm. Hanna, Alex. Irwin, John Isenberg, Robert Johnston, Joseph M. Johnston, discharged April 9, 1863; Henry Knauf, Michael Kunkle, Thos. C. Lytle, John M. Long, Henry Long, Michael Miller, Henry Myers, John H. Miller, Geo. McLaughlin, Wm. McIntire, Sam'l A. McNutt, Wm. McNeal, John R. McAdoo, Ross McCoy, Sam'l G. McCurdy, disch'd Mar. 6, 63; Nelson O'Neal, David Orts, Joseph Painter, Robert M. Reed, Mathias H. Reed, Jas. Rosborough, James G. Rankin, Daniel Rosensteel, Joseph C. Repine, Martin T. Smith, Samuel S. Smith, Samuel A. Smith, Charles Spare, Daniel Strasler, Jos. Sharp, David Steveson, James R. Spence, Nelson M. Thompson, (see 2d cav.); Lewis M. Thomas, James M. Thompson, John Titterington, (see 61st P. V.); John L. Thomas, John J. Taylor, discharged March 6, 1863; Andrew Wissinger, Alex. Weamer, Benj. Walker, Jas. W. Wiggins, discharged Jan. 8, 1863.

Company D—Mustered August 14, 1862; mustered out May 24, 1863. John G. Wilson, captain; Joseph K. Weaver, first lieutenant; Thomas J. Moore, second lieutenant; Shepherd M. Hawkins, first sergeant; Eli W. Brady, sergeant; Samuel L. Graham, sergeant; Clarence Hart, sergeant; Hugh M. Thomas, sergeant, discharged Nov. 6, 1862; Conrad Peiffer (or Piper), sergeant, promoted to sergeant; Alfred Murray, corporal; McLain Sutton, corporal; Daniel Rhea, corporal, Robert O. McGinty, corporal; Johnston E. Walter, corporal; John R. Brickley, corporal; George W. Lafferty, corporal; John M. Lemon, corporal; Albert H. Hess, musician; John A. Hunter, musician; John K. Anderson, musician; promoted to quartermaster sergeant. Privates—Joseph W. Adams, Isaac Akeright, John Aul, John P. Barber, William Bee, Charles Bender, Wm. G. Beatty, J. G. Buchanan, wounded at Chancellorsville; Solomon Conrath, William Colwell, William L. Craig, George W. Colkitt, David N. Conrath, D. A. Clawson, John C Cochran, died at Belle Plain, Va.; Augustus H. Darby, James Duncan, William F. Dexter, Emanuel Earhart, died at Belle Plain, Feb. 22, 1863; Theo. S. Fleming, Levi H. Fulton, James H. Frederick, Francis M. Fleck, Samuel Frampton, Martin V. Fry, discharged Nov. 5, 1862; Thomas M. Guthrie, Thomas A. Hopkins, Alexander Hughes, Robert C. Hopkins, Wm. M. Hamil, Andrew K. Hist, David Hilty, Andrew Horrell, Alexander Hopkins, discharged February 11, 1863; Jennings Hefflefinger, died November 5, 1862; Samuel V. Johns, John S. Johnston, Archer R. Jones, Reuben Kuhns, John Kelley, John B. Keely, Thos. G. Kelley, James W. Kelley, James M. Laughrey, Sampson Love, John W. Leasure, Daniel A. Laughrey, Abraham Leasure, Theo. S. Marshall, Elijah W. Moore, John C. Matthews, George Morrison, Robert McClanahan, Steele McGinity, Wm. A. McHenry, Oliver S. McHenry, James M. McKelvey, William H. McQuown, Wm. H. McCreery, Elisha B. McGara, Wm. M. McGaughey, Wm. K. McClellan, John C. McClellan, discharged Nov. 26, '62; John McWilliams, died Nov. 13, '62; Hugh R. Pollock, died at Indiana, Pa., on the way home from the army; David R. Pringle, David Pollock, Nelson McD. Piper, John J. Rodkey, Robert M. Ross, Daniel Replogle, John R. Robinson, Samuel Stahl, Robert A. Steel, Andrew J. Stumpf, John M. Stuchel, discharged Feb. 11, '63; Hiram Titterington, John A. Vanhorn, John S. Work, Robert H. Williams, James J. Work, Robert N. Work (see 61st Pa. V.), John A. Work, Phineas A. Work, Stewart J. Wyncoop, James T. Welsh.

Company I—Mustered August 15, 1862; mustered out May 24, 1863. John A. Kruter, captain; Wm. W. Adams, first lieutenant; George R. Bolar, second lieutenant; Samuel W. Campbell, first sergeant; Wm. R. Loughrey, sergeant; Sylvester, C. Thompson, sergeant; Christ. Grumbling, sergeant; John McElhoes, sergeant; promoted to sergeant; Peter Craig Kinter, sergeant; died October 18, 1862; John H. Miller, corporal; H. B. Campbell, corporal; James Dick, corporal; John Todd Kinter, corporal; Daniel Belford, corporal; Andrew M. Duncan, corporal; Samuel B. Harrison, corporal; Garvin S. Hise, corporal; Henry M. Kinter, musician; James M. Watt, musician. Privates—Isaac S. Alcorn, George Ballentine, Joshua Burkey, Samuel Bathurst, Leander Bush, James Bothel, Adam Black, Andrew Burkey, discharged Oct. 30, 1862; Wm. W. Campbell, Findley Campbell, Wm. W. Chrissman, Wm. Coho, Matthew Cochran, John C. Cochran, Findley Carney, John M. Campbell, Daniel Crissman, Abraham Crissman, John Dodson, James E. Dilts, Foster W. Davis, James Elder, discharged Dec. 30, 1861; Alexander Faloon, enlisted in 1865 again; Samuel Fleming, Peter Frech, Daniel Fitshons (or Fitshugh), William Fleming, Franklin Geesey, Samuel S. Hileman, Isaac S. Helman (see 61st P. V.), John Harman, Francis Herlinger, Lewis M. Johnston, John Kinter, Henry Kelley, Thomas Landers, John W. Lomison, David Mardis, Daniel Miller, John K. Myers, Matthew Markey, James Mahan, James Moose, Morris C. Moore, George W. Mitchell, Edward D. Murphy, John N. McCormick, Joseph McGaughey, Wm. H. McCallister, Hugh H. Pershing, Richard W. Porter, George Peffer, Isaac T. Pearce, discharged Nov. 24, 1862; George W. Reed, Matthew S. Ray, William Row, George W. Rhude, Mark Ray (see 4th cavalry), George Roush, Hiram Rager, discharged Nov. 24, 1862; Thomas C. Ramey, discharged Jan. 24, 1863; Harrison Spires, Abraham Smith, Peter Strausbaugh, Wm. A. Stiffey, Samuel E. Shrock, John C. Stuchel, Samuel D. Stiffey, David F. Stewart, Jacob Sensebaugh, Nat. W. Stewart, Henry Y. Steer, W. H. B. Sprankle, Alfred Shaffer, J. L. Strausbaugh, Wm. W. Stewart, James A. Stephens, Sam'l Trimble, Jesse Thomas, promoted to commissary sergeant; Samuel Wolf, Wm. T. Wilson, Thomas Wilson, John P. Wineman, Mathias Yaney.

NOTE.—Many of these men served in other regiments. A few of the men named may not have belonged to Indiana county. We find it impossible, without great labor, to separate the list. Those who re-enlisted in three year regiments will find their credit in them. We find the list of one year men in 67th, 74th 78th and 206th, which embraces most of them, and we give this list that those who served but nine months get their credit, and those who served more get this credit also.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-EIGHTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—Three years' service.

Company E—Mustered September 2, 1862. John F. Sutton, captain; promoted from first lieutenant, Nov. 15, '63; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., and Wilderness, Va.; mustered out with company. George Hamilton, second lieutenant; resigned June 1, '63; was in first three months service; served in navy one year. James M. Sutton, second lieutenant; color sergeant from August to November, '63; promoted to first sergeant, to second lieutenant Jan. 13, '64; wounded at Po river May 10, '64; leg amputated; discharged Nov. 8, '64. John L. Mabon, sergeant; veteran, promoted to corporal and sergeant; mustered out with company; William Byers, corporal; promoted to corporal; good soldier; mustered out with company. Robert P. Thompson, corporal; promoted to corporal; captured at Ream's Station, Va., and died at Salisbury, N. C., Dec. 8, '64. Joseph Hallowell, corporal; promoted to corporal; good soldier; mustered out with company. Matthew C. Allison, corporal; promoted to corporal; died May 19, '64, of wounds received at Spottsylvania May 12, '64. Isaiah L. Wells, corporal; promoted to corporal; died at Philadelphia Feb. 26, '63. James Bear, private, discharged June 30, '63; died soon after. John A. Cunningham, wounded in thigh, at Po River, May 10, '64. H. Clingenberger, discharged August 3, '63. James Aden, died at Morrisville, Va., August 17, '63. Thomas Garrett, wounded at Spottsylvania May 12, '64. George Groft, wounded at Gettysburg July 2, '63; discharged May 29, '65; John S. Harman, prisoner near Petersburg June 22, '64; mustered out with company. William M. Hallowell, good soldier; mustered out with company. Henry Horner, wounded at Gettysburg July 2, '63; transferred to veteran reserve corps. John Harman, died at Washington, D. C., August 17, '63. Lewis H. Irvin, died at Washington, D. C., Sept. 18, '64. Jacob Jamison, wounded at Spottsylvania, May 12, '64; arm amputated; discharged Oct. 7, '64. John Kunkle, died of wounds received at Gettysburg, July 2, '63. Thos. R. Lukehart, wounded at Gettysburg, July 2 '63; transferred to veteran reserve corps; discharged June 1, '65. David F. Lukehart, died at Washington, of wounds received at Po River, May 10, '64. William Landers, died at Point of Rocks, Va., of wounds received at Five Forks, Va., March 31, '62. John C. Moorhead, orderly at brigadier headquarters; mustered out with company. John Meekans, wounded at Cold Harbor, Va., June 3, '64; foot amputated; discharged May 29, '65. Thomas McElwee, wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, '63; mustered out with the company. William P. Oberlin, discharged by general order, June, 5, '65. Samuel Pilson, wounded at Po river, May 10, '64; discharged by general order, June 5, '65. William Pringle, died August 24, '64. Joseph Rising, prisoner at Petersburg, Va., October 27, '64; mustered out with company. John G. Rowland, captured at Reams Station, Va., died at Saulsbury, N. C., Feb. 1, '65. Malchiah Rhodes, Sep. 22, '62; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, '63; mustered out with company. Hezekiah C. Reed, transported to veteran reserve corps; discharged June 30, '65. John B. Shall, prisoner August 25, '64, to March 1, '65; discharged June 22, '65. Edward Sweeny, discharged May 29, '63. Joseph C. Speedy, wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, '63; discharged April 28, '64. Joseph L. Sutton, died at Falmouth, Va., May 25, '63. George D. Welsh, captured at Reams' Station, Va.; died at Saulsbury, N. C., Feb. 6, '65. Lewis A. Welsh, mustered out with company. Miles Wyncoop, mustered out with company. John S. Wyncoop, died at Fredericksburg, Va., of wounds received at Po river, May 10, '64. James K. Wells, wounded at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, '63; discharged Jan. 25, '64. John S. Weamer, died at Cockeysville, Md., Nov. 30, '62. Clark Whitacre, died at Alexandria, Va., by company record June 20, '63, state record July 7, '63, burial record June 28, '63.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—FOURTEENTH CAVALRY.

Company K.—J. B. McLaughlin, first lieutenant, Nov. 23, '62; promoted to corporal, sergeant, second lieutenant and to first lieutenant, June 8, '65; mustered out with company. J. A. Austed, Nov. 23, '62. Alex. H. Armstrong, Aug. 24, '64. Alex. Ballentine, Feb. 23, '64; mustered out with company. George Bothel, Feb. 23, '64. David C. Bothell, veteran; mustered out with company. Samuel W. Briggs, Nov. 14, '62; discharged by general order, June 6, '65. James M. Briggs, Nov. 23, '62; promoted to company quartermaster sergeant. John Byers, Feb. 23, '64; mustered out with company. James M. Chambers, Feb. 29, '64, wounded; discharged by general order, May 23, 1865. Jeremiah C. Cooper, Nov. 23, '62; drowned in the Potomac and buried at Mount Olive cemetery, Md. John Downey, Aug. 24, '64; discharged by general order, June 9, '65. John Feit, Nov. 23, '62; mustered out at expiration of term. Joseph S. Fry, Feb. 23, '64; promoted corporal; veteran; mustered out with company. Jacob Fry, reported for this regiment. Daniel A. George, Nov. 23, '62; killed at White Sulphur Springs, Va., August 26, '63. Andrew J. Harman, Nov. 23, '62. David Johnston, Nov. 23, '62; served a term as regimental commissary sergeant. James S. Kelly, sergeant; Nov. 23, '62. James M. Johnston, Feb. 23, '64; transferred to veteran reserve corps. Robert Johnston, Feb. 23, '64; veteran; mustered out with company. John A. Johnston, Nov. 23, 1862. Morrow Lytle, Nov. 23, '62; died in service. Robert Lytle, Nov. 23, '62. H. P. Lewis, Nov. 23, '62; promoted to corporal.

James M. Miller, Nov. 23, '62. Silas Miller, Nov. 23, '62. John Miller, Nov. 23, '62; died in service. William (or Wilson) Morrow, corporal. John W. Matthews, Nov. 23, '62. David Martin, is reported to be of this regiment. Benjamin F. McCreight, February 4, '64; mustered out with company. Wm. H. Repine, February 29, '64, mustered out with company. Henry F. Russell, March 3, '64; promoted to corporal; mustered out with company. Joseph Ross, Nov. 23, '62. Alex. M. Speedy, Nov. 23, '62; mustered out with company. Martin V. Smith, February 23, '64; veteran; mustered out with company. Uriah Sheffler, February 23, '64; veteran; mustered out with company. David Stivison, February 4, '64; killed at Winchester. Frank M. Smith, February 27, '64; mustered out with company. Thomas W. Thompson, Nov. 23, '62. Andrew Wissinger, February 23, '64; veteran; mustered out with company. Levi S. Wissenger, Nov. 23, '62, James A. Walker, August 24, '64.

TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS.

Hugh J. Brady, colonel; Josiah B. Ferguson, major; Jas. L. Crawford, adjutant; John Lowry, quartermaster; Hugh Brady, sergeant major; Jesse Thomas, quartermaster sergeant; Peter K. Jamison, commissary sergeant; John M. Shields, hospital steward.

Company A—Mustered for one year's service August 26, 1864. Mustered out June 26, 1865. Thomas J. Moore, captain. Robert Cravan, first lieutenant. John N. Vaughom, second lieutenant. John Smith Work, first sergeant, died at Point of Rocks, Va., Jan. 8, 1865. Robert J. Hopkins, promoted to first sergeant. Aaron W. Steele, promoted to sergeant. Conrad Peiffer, sergeant. Wm. H. Work, sergeant. Geo. Roush, promoted to sergeant. John W. Leasure, corporal. Jos. Ruffner, corporal. Daniel Snyder, promoted to corporal. Edward H. Ruffner, corporal. Daniel T. Baylor, corporal. Wm. Bee, promoted to corporal. Wm. Bowers, promoted to corporal. Edwin Chesley, promoted to corporal. Ephraim Lydick, corporal, died Nov. 11, 1864. Norman Park, musician. Frederick Smith, musician. Privates, Jacob Arthurs, George Arthurs, Thomas Arthurs, George S. A. Boyer, Jacob Boyer, John M. Bates, Leonard Bates, Wm. H. Bee, Jacob Bee, Geo. W. Bowers, Jacob C. Brilhart, Thomas Cravan, Benj. M. Campbell, died at Fortress Monroe, Va., Dec. 25, 1864; John Doty, Jas. C. Dilts, James Daugherty, S. L. Frampton, Joseph Fisher, Samuel R. Fisher, Harrison Friedly, Thomas Ferrier, Alex. Gorman, Geo. M. Grumley, Hugh Hopkins, George Hess, James Hazlett, Alfred A. Johnston, Joseph Kennan, Thomas Kerr, Geo. W. Livengood, Joshua Lydick, Wm. Lydick, Geo. Lewis, Andrew Lemrick, David C. Leasure, Joseph L. Langham, Frederick Mock, Martin Myers, Wm. McGara, J. A. McMannes, John McBrier, Samuel S. McCreary, John K. McElhose, Martin McMillen, John O'Harra, Harrison O'Harra, Andrew Pollock, John T. Park, Geo. W. Painter, Levid D. Palmer, died May 29, 1865; J. Oscar Richardson, Andrew H. Ruffner, David M. Ruffner, John Rowley, Augustus G. Rishel, R. Jewell Richardson, William H. Roush, died Feb. 11, 1865; Milton Shields, Clark G. Shields, David S. Smith, Andrew J. Smith, Ephraim Steffy, Samuel Snyder, John Snyder, Milton Stuchel, Tobias Snyder, Henry M. Thing, Daniel Thomas, Robert Trusal (or Truzel), Chas. H. White, Harman Waddle, Geo. W. Wright, David B. Work.

Company C—Mustered in for one year, August 27, 1864—mustered out June 26, 1865. William C. Brown, captain. Samuel W. Brewer, 1st lieutenant. James B. Hinds, 2d lieutenant. Charles W. Brewer, 1st sergeant. Andrew Pearce, sergeant. James E. Dilts, sergeant. Wm. L. McQuown, sergeant. David S. Downey, sergeant. John McHenry, corporal. Thos. H. Ewing, corporal. Abraham C. Pearce, corporal. Franklin Long, corporal. Patrick McGranner, corporal. John M. Hazlett, corporal. Joseph Shaffer, corporal. Thomas P. North, corporal. Privates—Robert B. Adams, Clark D. Allison, died at Point of Rocks, Va., October 4, 1864; David Black, Archibald S. Barclay, Samuel S. Beck, Joseph G. Baun, John Bennett, Isaac S. Bennett, Henry Bennett, John Bishop, William Barber, James Bruce, George Barrett, Michael Borts, died November 24, '64; Benjamin Baird, (on Clearfield county line); Alex. S. Crawford, Joseph Carey, Joseph Coy, Wm. C. Downey, John M. Dilts, Timothy T. Duck, Henry Defenderfer, Samuel Frampton, James Graham, George M. Gromley, David G. Gorman, Samuel S. Gamble, died Dec. 1, '64; George S. Heneigh, James Hanna, John Hickox, Robert C. Huey, Samuel C. Hazlett, Jno. Hill, Thomas Lunger, John Lunger, Obadiah Lockard, Robert Martin, Thad. C. Mogle, George Moot, Joseph Mauk (or Mock), Wm. H. McComb, Addison J. McComb, Coriden J. McComb, David W. McMillen, Isaiah McCullough, killed at Fort Brady, Va., October 8, '64; Abraham Nicodemus, Joseph P. North, Henry C. Peffer, W. P. Postlethwait, John F. Peiffer, David G. Peiffer, Samuel Pearce, John Rinn, Jacob Rish, William Riddle, James M. Rifenberick, George W. Shorthill, Joseph Shields, David Stiver, Daniel Stiver, John F. Smith, William Sutter, James Toy, James D. Taylor, William M. Urey, John Varner, William H. White, Alfred N. Walker, Sharp Wright, Porter Wright, John A. Winebark, Martin Winebark.

Company D—Mustered for one year, August 23 to Sept. 3, '64; mustered out June 26, '65. William C. Gordon, captain; Joseph Atkinson, first lieutenant; John H. Miller, second lieutenant; William C. Blakely, first sergeant; Robert T. McCrea, second sergeant; Mathew H. Fails, third sergeant; Nathaniel Davis, fourth sergeant; Edward McGuire, fifth sergeant; John C. Pattison, first corporal; William Ferguson, second corporal; Robert Thompson, third corporal; Henry Knee, fourth corporal; John Richardson, fifth corporal; William Ramsey, sixth corporal; Alex. R. Davis, seventh corporal; John Gibson, eighth corporal; Alex. Brown, principal musician; died Feb. 28, 1873; Robert H. Fulton, promoted to principal musician; Daniel Repine, musician; James Wilson, musician. Privates—Wm. C. Anderson, died Nov. 23, '64; Wm. A. Anderson, Charles D. Atkinson, James M. Altman, Albert W. Armstrong, John W. Bennett, Franklin Byers, David A. Brown, Joseph R. Brown, Richard A. Clawson, A. H. Calhoun, Lemuel L. Fair, Dan. M. Fair, Wm. H. Fink, James Goe, J. W. Harbison, David M. Henderson, Wm. J. Henderson, Josiah B. Huston, John F. Hartsock, Thomas J. Hill, George W. Hill, Peter Harkins, Joseph A. Johnston, William Johnston, Isaac S. Klingensmith, James Kier, John Kelly, Timothy C. Layton, John B. McIntire, John L. McIntire, Hugh J. McIntire, Hugh McIntire, jr., Alexander McCracken, George D. Miller, William Miller, John Miller, Hugh McGee, William McCabria, William McConnell, Robert McConnell, James M. Marshall, Solomon Mitchell, Thomas C. Maher, James Neil, David Nesbit, John A. Patterson, James E. Palmer, Charles Palmer, George Pease, Richard Porter, Charles M. Reed, Benjamin F. Reed, James Richardson, William J. Siegfried, Daniel Smith, William Smith, William Stewart, Porter Stilsel, John A. Aaron, Robert Scott, Lewis Spires, James M. Shannon James Thompson, John G. Thompson, Andrew L. Wiggins, John Walker, James Wilkins, died Nov. 29, 1864; Milton Wylie, died at Point of Rocks, Va. Dec. 24, 1864.

Company F—Mustered for one year, August 26 to Sept. 2, 1864; mustered out June 26, 1865. John A. Kinter, captain; Wm. W. Bell, first lieutenant, captured; discharged June 5, '65; Wm. T. Kinter, second lieutenant; William Duncan, first sergeant, promoted from private; Samuel B. Harrison, second sergeant, promoted from private; John Bothel, third sergeant, promoted to corporal and sergeant; D. J. Flickenger, fourth sergeant, promoted to corporal and sergeant; James E. Riddle, fifth sergeant, promoted from private; George Rank, first corporal; William Smith, second corporal, died March 12, '65, at Rock Hospital, Va., June 26, '65; Steel McGinty, [illegible] corporal; Mathew Harbison, third corporal; William Black, fourth corporal; William St. Clair, fifth corporal; James A. McCallister, sixth corporal; Byran McSweeney, seventh corporal; Solomon Conrath, eighth corporal; John P. H. Shields, musician; Thomas S. Thompson, musician. Privates—Nicholas Altimus, Ellis Adams, William Bracken, D. J. Broughler, Thomas D. Brady, William Barkey, William Beatty, died July 2, '65, at Camp Reynolds, Pittsburgh, the day he was discharged; Henry Barkey, Hugh Brady, promoted to sergeant-major; Henry K. Biss, Joseph Bell, Austin Cooper, Philander Churchhill, George W. Croyle, died Sept. 30, '64, at Point of Rocks, Va., Andrew Groft, Israel Conrath, Samuel Clark, Gawin Drummond, Westley Drummond, Andronicus Drummond, Joseph Donahue, David H. Dunmire, Jonathan Edwards, Albert Gonts, Sol. J. Hankison, James Hazlett, Alex. Hazlett, Daniel Heneigh, William Harbridge, David Hamilton, Samuel J. Hellman, P. K. Jamison, promoted to commissary sergeant; Robert Kelly, Moses Kanarr, Aaron Kanarr, John Dowry, promoted quartermaster sergeant; W. C. Little, John W. Lewis, Tobias Long, James Laney, David McCardle, Mathias Myers, Miles McSweeny, George Muller, J. D. McAfoose, George Mobly, William McGinity, William P. Meanor, Jeremiah Peterman, Jacob Peterman, James L. Park, William Ruffner, J. G. Stewart, Jacob S. Stuchell, George H. Snyder, Robert Smail, James Spence, William H. Shields, Georgian Slosson, Alfred Sterner, Samuel Stewart, wounded at Hatcher's Run, Va., April 1, '63, absent in hospital at muster out; William Shields, John M. Shields, promoted to hospital steward; Fred. Smith, transferred to company A; William Stuchell, died at White Hill, Pa., Oct. 31, '64; Robert M. Thomas, John H. Thomas, Jesse Thomas, promoted to quartermaster sergeant; Jefferson Wright, Henry Winecoop, Absalom Woodward, Shem White.

INDIANA COUNTY HISTORICAL-GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY INDIANA PENNA.

Company G.—Mustered August 20th to September 6th, 1864, for one year; mustered out June 26, 1865. Robert N. McComb, captain; John C. Lardin, first lieutenant; Daniel Ramey, second lieutenant; Marsh G. Sanders, first sergeant; Wilson Cramer, sergeant; Jacob P. Uber, sergeant; Samuel X. McClellan, sergeant; Morris C. Moore, sergeant; Wallace Skiles, corporal; Joseph W. Long, corporal; James A. Miller, corporal; William Shiles, corporal; Robert N. Elrick, corporal; Andrew McCleary, corporal; Thomas Daren, corporal, discharged by general order; Jas. G. Shields, corporal, disch'd May 26, '65; F. F. Marshall, corporal, discharged May 30, '65; Christ. G. Lose, corporal; J. F. Cunningham, musician; John F. Pearce, musician. Privates—Noah Byer, Dillman Caho, Samuel Carney, Henry Cay, Thos. W. Coleman, John K. Dick, Stephen Daymond, James R. Ewing, James Fleming, Samuel Fulkimore, Samuel Fisher, John Fry, William Frior, John Gifford, Isaac Griffith, John C. Goddard, Abram Hale, Robert M. Hazlett, Henry Hess, W. N. Hildebrand, Samuel Huey, George W. Henry, Robert John, James John, Henry A. Kinter, James Kelley, George A. Kanarr, Geo. W. Kelley, David B. Lute, Alexander Lytle, Calvin Lytle, Jas. J. Lawsen, Robert Lowry, Adam Lower, James M. Morrison, Robert P. Mears, Jacob Mardis, John McBroom, Andrew McQuistow, Robert McCurdy, James J. McAfoos, Matthew Oliver, David J. Palmer, Thomas W. Rhea, George Rish, Robert Reed, John C. Stuckel, Joseph Springer, Sol. D. Shaffer, Michael Stiles, David K. Stestle, Daniel Spicher, John W. Stewart, David K. Stiles, William C. Taylor, John Taylor, James Thompson, Wm. U. Thompson, Augustus Urius, James Williard, Andrew Wilson, David P. Weaver.

NOTE.—There are a few names in this company that may be of adjoining counties—not many.

*Company H—Mustered into service for 1 year, August 29 to 31, '64—mustered out June 26, '65. Joseph C. Greer, captain. William P. Altimus, 1st lieutenant. John W. McElheney, 2d lieutenant. William B. Hoskinson, 1st sergeant. Thomas B. Hood, sergeant. David Cunningham, sergeant. John Harris, sergeant. John A. Dickey, sergeant. David S. Altman, corp'l. Hugh C. McCullum, corporal. Thomas Dick, corporal. Joseph T. Brantlinger, corporal. Adam Sides, corporal. Thomas S. McKisson, corporal. John M. Campbell, corporal. Daniel Miller, jr., corporal. Privates—Samuel S. Amsbaugh, George F. Bowers, D. W. Brantlinger, John H. Bowers, William T. Calhoun, Samuel Calhoun, James Campbell, Samuel Cline, J. B. Cunningham, William Cummins, William H. Campbell, John H. Cline, William H. Cunningham, David L. Deyarmin, William T. Deyarmin, Andrew W. Evans, John S. Evans, John A. Findley, William Fleming, Findley Fetterman, Henry Fritz, George S. Gailey, George Grumbling, George Hileman, Joseph S. Kerr, Francis Killen, F. M. Lichtenfels, James F. Lowman, David Lowman, Alexander Morgan, John R. Mullen, Robert Mack, David Mack, John Mack, John H. Miller, Andrew Marsh, James S. Mullen, Jeremiah W. Mikesell, Samuel McNutt, John C. McNutt, Joseph McCracken, Patterson McAdoo, died January 12, '65, buried at City Point, Va.; Aaron Pennross, Samuel P. Palmer, Silas J. Penross, William Palmer, Dennis Pedicord, Edward P. Palmer, Henry Penrose, Elijah T. Penrose, Samuel Reed, Josiah B. Riffle, William Robinson, John Shaffer, Andrew Sharp, Adam J. Sides, William Stills, Michael Stormer, John E. Swarts, John St. Clair, George A. Wood, Henry H. Wood, John Wagner, George Walbock, Levi Walbock, Josiah Wolf, Jacob Wagner.

Company I—Mustered for one year's service, August 30 and 31, 1864. Mustered out, June 26, 1865. Josiah B. Ferguson, captain; promoted to major. Wm. W. Nesbit, first lieutenant; promoted to captain. Arthur T. Steams, first lieutenant; promoted from sergeant. Samuel J. Conrad, second lieutenant; promoted from first sergeant. George M. Stephens, first sergeant. James Fowler, sergeant. William H. H. Adams, sergeant. William A. Steffey, sergeant. Charles Walbach, sergeant. Matthew W. Lowman, corporal. Samuel Pittman, corporal. William H. Orr, corporal. J. M. Bartlebaugh, corporal. Oliver Reed, corporal. Alexander Stuchel, corporal. John Bennett, corporal. William W. Campbell, corporal. Privates, Ephraim Adams, Adam Altemus, Isaiah Bartlebaugh, A. L. Bartlebaugh, Frederick Boyer, Henderson Bracken, Samuel Bowers, Jacob Bowers, Levi R. Brallier, Abraham H. Brown, John M. Byers, died at Hampton, Va., Dec. 28, 1864; Wm. Cameron, Philip Cramer, Michael Cramer, Henry Cramer, Andrew J. Campbell, Dan. Conrad, Oliver Clark, E. H. Daugherty, (see 7th cav.); James Dias, Thos. C. Dias, Jacob Fyock, Geo. Farnwalt, John Fisher, John Fetterman, John D. Findley, John Frits, George W. Foulks, James B. Graham, W. H. H. George, Zach. T. Hatch, Nathaniel Hartman, Samuel Harbridge, Geo. Hess, Edward Irwin, John Irwin, Samuel E. James, Robert T. Kidd, Henry Keller, William Lower, Jacob Lydick, Jacob Mangus, William Mills, Emanuel Miller, William L. McFeeters, Ham. B. McFeeters, Patrick McVey, Jacob McDonald, James McCracken, Frank McKelvey, wounded at Petersburg, Va.; Sam'l A. McKelvey, Christ. C. McCornish, died February 27, 1865, at City Point, Va.; Jacob Overdorff, Zach. T. Overdorff, Isaac Overdorff, John Patterson, Henry Reynolds, John Reynolds, John H. Rogers, Nelson Stephens, Westley Stephens, Wm. A. Stephens, George Stewart, John Swank, wounded at Petersburg, Va.; Thos. Underwood, William Underwood.

*This company was almost all from Indiana county, and we have not been able to get the names from adjoining counties stricken out.

UNITED STATES SIGNAL SERVICE.

Thomas Bell, Rev. J. P. Barber, Linus L. Barber, Johnston Baird, E. L. Butterbaugh, Samuel Cribbs, John Cribbs, Christ. Carbaugh, David W. Davis, John C. Devinney, 19 months; Jas. G. Devinney, 19 months; James Dickson, Joseph Fry, 19 months; John S. Hastings, over 2 years; McCartney Hildebrand, Samuel Hazlett, Reuben Kuhns, Elliott M. Lydick, 18 months; Porter McClaran, 19 months; Jackson McMillen, William McAdoo, John McAdoo, Ross McCoy, (is now dead); Steele McGinity, Sidney Marlin, 2 years; Robert A. Park, Benjamin Park, J. A. Pearce, (Livermore); Thomas C. Ramey, R. M. Reed, 18 months; Thomas G. Rowe, 19 months; Henry Shambaugh, Edward Shambaugh, killed in service; R. G. Sutton, John Sutton, James M. Stewart, N. W. Stewart, David Shepherd, Archibald S. Stewart, had served in volunteers six months; died March 18, 1865, during Sherman's march; J. Wilson Thompson, Archy S. Thompson, James M. Thompson, George H. Warren, D. B. Weaver, James S. Wyncoop, Lucien J. Young, (now dead); James A. Yingling.

MISCELLANEOUS LIST.

W. P. Altman, first sergeant, company A, 19th U. S. infantry, three years. J. S. Amond, 1863; company G, 2d battallion, six months service. Henry Altman, 1862; company K, 177th P. V., nine months service. Thomas W. Anderson, 1862; captain of company K, 177th P. V., discharged for disability. W. W. Alsbach, December, 1861; sergeant company K, 84th P. V., discharged February 7, 1863. George W. Altman, April 3, 1862; company I, 55th P. V., died June 23, 1864, of wounds received at Cold Harbor, Va. Thomas Adams, 1861; company K, 84th P. V., died of wounds received at Port Republic, Va. David F. Brown, June 1, 1864; discharged May 3, 1865. Ralston J. Barr, March 17, 1864; 1st P. V., (old 11th), died at Point Lookout, Va., September 3, 1864. David Bagley, company C, 1st P. V. (old 11th), died of wounds received at Bethesda Church, Va. Zachariah Books, in three and nine months service. Washington Butler, September 23, 1864; naval service, discharged June 30, 1865. Albert C. Beatty, September 3, 1861; company C, 15th U. S. infantry, discharged September 1864. Edgar Beatty, September 3, 1861; company C, 15th U. S. infantry, died at Louisville, Ky., March 22, 1863. Joseph Brentlinger, 1862; company K, 177th P. V., nine months service. M. L. Bracken, 1862; second lieutenant of company K, 177th P. V., nine months service; promoted from first sergeant. J. M. Bartlebaugh, 1862; company K, 177th P. V., nine months service. Henry A. Burkhart, 1862; company E, 177th P. V., nine months service. George W. Burkhart, 1862; company E, 177th Pennsylvania volunteers, nine months service. Wilson Cusick, 1862, company E, 177th Pa. volunteers, nine months service. Arthur Casedy, July 4, 1861, company D, 62d Pa. volunteers; wounded at Gettysburg, July 2, 1863; arm amputated. John Clawson (or Cleuson), 1862, 177th Pa. volunteers; died March 6, 1863. Wm. Cunningham, 1862; second lieutenant, company E, 177th Pa. volunteers, nine months service. Elias E. Coffman, 1862; corporal, company E, 177th Pa. volunteers, nine months service. Joseph Chapman, 1862; company E, 177th Pa. volunteers, nine months service. Ritner Cramer, 1862; company E, 177th Pa. volunteers, nine months service. Porter Campbell, 1862; company K, 177th Pa. volunteers, nine months service. Ross Classen, 1862; corporal, company K, 177th Pa. volunteers, nine months service. B. F. Campbell, 1863; company E, 2d battalion, six months service. James G. Cogan, served in 37th Iowa volunteers three years. Craig Carney, 63d Pa. volunteers, transferred to 105th Pa. volunteers; served to close of war. Thomas Coleman, 16th United States infantry, three years. George W. Coleman, Dec. 7, '61; veteran, company K, 84th Pa. volunteers; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville; wounded at Petersburg. David Daugherty, June 1, 1864; 101st Pa. volunteers; discharged by general order, May 3, '65. Everett H. Daugherty, Dec. 16, 1861; 7th Pa. cavalry; discharged August, '63; nine months in 206th Pa. volunteers. William Dougherty, December 2, '61; veteran; company G, 101st Pa. volunteers; severely wounded in head at Plymouth, N. C., now resident of the county, and commissioner. John D. Elder, July 24, '61, company D 62d Pa.; promoted from first sergeant to second lieutenant; killed at Malvern Hill, July 1, '62. John Ferguson, 1862, company E, 177th P. V.; nine months' service. David Faloon, Feb., '65; served to June, '65, close of war. R. E. Finley, May 17, '64, company D, 1st Pa. Vols. (old 11th); mustered out with company. H. J. Fulmer, 2d Virginia cavalry, four years; resident of this county since the war. Samuel Faloon, nine months' service. F. E. Goodell, 60th Mass. Vols.; resident of Indiana county since the war. James Gorman, Dec. '61, company K, 84th Pa. Vols.; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va. G. W. Hood, 1863, six months' service. W. J. Hefflenfinger, 1862, company E, 177th P. V.; nine months' service. Bartholomew Hadden, 1862, company E, 167th P. V.; nine months' service. James Harbison, March 24, '64, company C, 1st Pa. Vols; wounded at Wilderness; prisoner at Weldon Railroad; died at Salisbury, N. C., Nov. 25, '64. Jacob S. Haines, October, '61, veteran; sergeant company M, second Pennsylvania cavalry; discharged June, '65. John H. Hill, August 29, '64; 88th Pennsylvania volunteers; discharged by general order June 10, '65. Henry Hargrave, Sept. 12, '61; Durell's independent battery D; served three years. Robert Harbridge, Dec. 7, '61; corporal company K, 84th Pennsylvania volunteers, veteran; mustered out June 29, '65. David B. Henry, Sept. 20, '61; corporal company I, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers; veteran, mustered out August 30,' 65. David Irwin, Co. B. 79 P. V., veteran; promoted first sergeant; served through the war; now resident of this county. Benjamin H Jamison, six months service, 1864. Samuel H. Johnston, in 4th cavalry short time, then assistant provost marshal for Indiana county. Henry Keller, company E, 177th Pennsylvania volunteers, first sergeant; nine months' service. David Kelley, '62, company E, 177th Pennsylvania volunteers; nine months service. Daniel Killen, 1862, captain company K, 177th Pennsylvania volunteers; nine months' service; promoted from first lieutenant. Clark Knott, about 1860; United States regular army; discharged 1879. Michael Keith, company I, 54th Pennsylvania volunteers. Adam Keith, January 1, '64; veteran company I, 54th Pennsylvania volunteers; mustered out with company. George J. Keller, on special provost duty in 21st district over two years. Jacob Kaharr, June 1, '64; 101st Pa. Vols.; discharged by general order May 3, '65. Moses Livingston, company E, 5th heavy artillery; Indiana county since the war. Noah Livingston, company E, 5th heavy artillery; Indiana county since the war. Nelson Laughrey, 1862, 177th P. V., 9 months' service. Alexander Lowman, '62, sergeant company K, 177th P. V., 9 months' service; promoted from corporal. James L. Lydick, 1861, company K, 84t P. V.; wounded at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; arm amputated. Robert L. Lydick, December 7, 1861; veteran; company K, 84th P. V.; wounded; transferred to veteran reserve corps, January 1865. Jacob S. Miller, December 21, 1861; company K, 84th P. V.; veteran; prisoner from October, 1864, to March, 1865. John Marks, December 5, 1861; company K, 84th P. V.; veteran; mustered out June 29, 1865. J. T. Mahan, 6 months' service, 1864. Samuel Mock, 1862; company E, 177th P. V.; 9 months' service. John Morton, 1862; company E, 177th P. V.; 9 months' service. Andrew Morton, 1862; company K, 177th P. V.; 9th months' service. Joseph Maloy, 1862; company E, 177th P. V.; 9 months' service. David Mack, 1862; company K, 177th P. V.; 9 months' service. Edward Milliken, 1st lieutenant company K, 177th P. V.; 9 months' service; promoted from 2d lieutenant. John S. McIntire, 1862; company K, 177th P. V.; 9 months' service. Adam Moore, July 6, 1861; company F, 38th regiment, 9th reserves, 3 years; mustered out at expiration of term. A. H. McWilliams, June 19, 1861; sergeant company B, 39th regiment, 10th reserves; served 3 years; now a resident of the county. William May, 15th U. S. infantry; now lieutenant. Robert A. McAdoo, June 1, 1864; 101 P. V.; discharged by general order, May 3, 1865. Samuel H. Moore, company G, 3d P. V.; 3 months' service; died at Harrisburg, Pa. William Moore, November 3, 1862; company K, 177th P. V.; 9 months. David McCurdy, October, 1861; corporal company M, 2d Pa. Cav.; discharged October, 1862. James A. McQuown, March 16, 1864; company C, 1st P. V. (old 11th); wounded at Wilderness, Virginia; discharged May 31, 1865. L. W. McHenry, March 16, 1864; company C, 1st P. V. (old 11th); wounded at Wilderness; captured August 19, 1864; died at Salisbury, North Carolina. William Miller, company C, 1st P. V. (supposition only); discharged for disability. Benjamin May, 15th U. S. infantry. William McClaran, chief clerk provost marshal's office, 21st district, Pa. James McCauley; in cavalry; badly wounded; wounded again on special duty for provost marshal, 21st district, Pennsylvania. Samuel McLaughlin, company K, 84th P. V.; discharged Mar. 9, '63. William McAfoos, '61, company I, 84th P. V.; discharged January 9, 1863. John Neal, 1862, company E, 177th, P. V.; nine months' service. David Orts, company A, 135th P. V.; nine months' service, and in 5th heavy artillery. Edward O'Neil, October, 4, 1864, 88th P. V.; promoted to corporal, mustered out with company. — Pollock, July 25, 1861, 62d P. V.; served three years, non-resident of this county. Theodore Pardee, 1861, company I, 84th P. V.; drowned at Hancock, Md. Joseph Rhea, 1862, company E, 177th P. V.; nine months' service. David Risinger, 1862, company E, 177th P. V.; nine months' service. Samuel Ray, 1866, 7th U. S. cavalry; promoted corporal; discharged in 1870. B. D. Rochester, 1863, company A, 2d battallion; six months' service. Augustus Row, commissioner of enrollment, 21st district, Pa., during the war. Robert L. Rodkey, December 7, 1861, company K, 84th P. V.; wounded and captured at Chancellorsville, Va., mustered out June 29, 1865. Samuel J. Rodkey, February 22, 1864, company K, 84th P. V.; mustered out June 29, 1865. J. A. C. Ruffner, corporal, company A, 1st battallion Pennsylvania cavalry; six months' service. George Snyder, 1862, company E, 177th P. V.; nine months' service. Arch'd A. Stewart, 1862, company E, 177th P. V.; nine months' service. Joseph H. Steele, 1862, company E, 177th P. V.; nine months' service. Allison Shields, March 17, 1864, company C, 1st P. V., (old 11th); captured August 19, 1864, died at Salisbury, N. C. Jacob Strassler, March 17, 1864, company C, 1st P. V. (old 11th); wounded at Wilderness, Va., captured August 19, 1864, died at Salisbury, N. C. James Speaker, P. R. V. C.; transferred to 190th P. V. George Syberts (or Sybert), July 6, 1861, company F, P. V.; wounded at Antietam, Maryland; discharged July 20, 1864. Henry Shankle, June 1, 1864, 101st P. V.; discharged by general order, May 3, 1865. John B. Shankle, December 7, 1861, company K, 84th P. V.; veteran; wounded at Wilderness and at Deep Bottom, Va.; died March 6, '65. Jno. A. Shankle, March 31, '64, company K, 84th P. V. A. Siebald, 40th P. V., 11th resv. died May 16, '64. R. J. Tomb, M. D., assistant surgeon 2d battalion, six months; surgeon of 193d Pennsylvania volunteers, and fall of 1864 and to close of war acting assistant surgeon United States regular army. B. B. Tiffany, 1st sergeant company E, 36th Massachusetts volunteers; resident of Indiana county since the war. John Teeter, company C, 84th Pennsylvania volunteers, now a resident of the county. John Wagoner, 1862; company K, 177th Pennsylvania volunteers, nine months' service. John C. Wakefield, 1862; company K, 177th Pennsylvania volunteers, nine months' service. James F. Wiley, December 17, 1863; veteran; 2d Pennsylvania cavalry; served to close of war. Samuel A. Walker, August 1, 1863; 13th Pennsylvania cavalry, served to close of war. John F. Weaver, March 31, 1864; company K, 84th Pennsylvania volunteers; mustered out June 29, 1865. John Woodward, 1861; company I, 84th Pennsylvania volunteers. Joseph J. Young, September 6, 1866; 7th U. S. cavalry; promoted to sergeant; wounded at Sheridan City, Kansas, in fight with Indians; served five years. Robert Young, 1863; six months' service. James T. Young, 1864; six months' service; Albert Young, 1862; 177th Pennsylvania volunteers; died at Suffolk, Va., January 21, 1863. Augustus Yuckenberg, 1862; company E, 177th Pennsylvania volunteers; nine months' service.

INDIANA IN THE MEXICAN WAR—SECOND REGIMENT PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEERS—MEXICAN WAR.

There were Indiana county men in at least three companies of this regiment. In company B, "American Highlanders," Captain John W. Geary, since major-general of volunteers and governor of Pennsylvania; in company D, Captain James Murray of Ebensburg; and in company E.

Captain Geary was elected lieutenant-colonel at Pittsburgh, and after the death of Colonel Roberts at Tuculaya, Mexico, was elected colonel of the regiment. This regiment did faithful service under General Scott.

At Vera Cruz and Cerro Gordo, the larger portion of the regiment was engaged, those not engaged having been detained on account of small-pox, and were not allowed to proceed with the regiment. These were assigned to duty as train guard, and an interesting incident of train guard work is related by the survivors. At Le Hoy Pass, (probably the same as Passo de Ovejos,) they were attacked by a strong force of Mexicans, and detached companies were ordered on skirmish line, driving the Mexicans five miles. It so happened that company B, 1st regiment, company B, 2d regiment, company B, dragoons, were all in the chase, and in an exceeding rough country; it was sometimes difficult to understand orders, so when company B was ordered to execute a movement all the company Bs were inclined to obey at one time, causing considerable confusion.

In the affray at Contreras the stronghold could not be reached without exposure to a destructive fire, except by a circuitous route up a ravine through chapparal and cactus; through this they went, often creeping to prevent their clothes being torn off by sharp thorns. Divested of all except their clothes and guns, they silently and cautiously crept through this supposed impassable approach, taking the garrison by surprise. It would seem that the Mexicans were surprised at all points, for instead of an enemy menacing their front at daylight, they too late discovered that the Americans had built a wagon road around the supposed impassable heights of Cerro Gordo. It was a night of terror preparing for the assault, but the battle of the morning lasted but seventeen minutes.

This regiment also participated in the terrible storming of the fortress at Chapultepec, and taking of the City of Mexico.

Several Indiana county men lost their lives during the Mexican war. Daniel Kuhns was killed at the gates of the City of Mexico, and James Kelley, William Matthews, and Mathias Palmer died there. Hugh J. Brady enlisted when only seventeen years old, and Pliny Kelly, a young and slender man, was refused twice, and going to Pittsburgh got accepted by the Duquesne Grays, and stood the service much better than stouter looking men; in the war of 1861 to 1865, he enlisted again in California. William Campbell came home worn down, and lived but a short time.

INCIDENTS OF THE WAR OF 1814.

[By Alexander McMullen, who, after the war, located in Center township. From Chambersburg Repository of 1820.]

During the late war, on or about the 20th of February, 1814, a draft was ordered by Simon Snyder, then Governor of this State.

*Colonel James Fenton was appointed to command the detachment, and Robert Bull, lieutenant colonel. My brother James being being of the first class in a company of militia, was drafted for six months. He was twenty-one years of age, and of a delicate constitution. It was thought by a council of the family and friends that it would not do for him to go. My father was at that time an advocate and partisan for the measures of government, and he then saw the evils of the war. I was about two years older, and more robust than my brother, and offered myself, to which my parents with some reluctance consented. There were two companies of drafts under command of Captains Samuel Gordon and Jacob Stake, and our company of volunteers, under Captain Samuel Dunn. These were all under command of Major James Wood. William McClelland, brigade inspector, was to furnish the tents and rations for these companies, but from some cause they were detained, and we remained there for three days, amid a continual scene of dissipation. The tents arriving, we commenced our march for Lake Erie on Monday, the 4th. On the 16th we arrived at Pittsburgh, and crossing the Allegheny river, encamped on the plains in view of that city. The Cumberland men coming the next day, encamped on Grant's hill. Here we received six dollars, for three months' pay in advance, from the State. The legislature had granted this in addition to the United States' pay making together, ten dollars a month. After a stay of three days, we commenced our march for Erie, then a small town, where we arrived after traveling through a deep snow, and swampy roads, for ten days, with no better beds than hemlock branches and an Indian blanket for a cover. We arrived in tolerable good health and fine spirits on the evening of the last day of March, and encamped on a hill east of the village, in view of Lake Erie. An old block house stood between us and the lake, and a new one nearly finished beside it, with four pieces of brass cannon, belonging to the state, making us safe from the enemy on that side. The Cumberland volunteers and the drafts from York and Adams arrived, and the regiment was organized into ten companies of one hundred men each. In a few days dissatisfaction began to appear in several companies, owing to the quality of the provisions. The flour was mouldy and the beef and pork unfit to be eaten.

*Colonel Fenton commanded for a time the drafted men from Westmoreland and Indiana counties. The incidents in this sketch apply also to the troops from the aforenamed counties.

Desertions began to be frequent, but being followed and brought back, were placed in the guard house, and generally punished by being marched in front of the regiment to the tune of Rogue's march.

About the 20th, Major Martin, with a battalion of regulars, took his station at the block houses. He was an officer of possessing appearance, but of intemperate habits. About this time he made a call on Fenton's regiment for volunteers to go with him to Put-in-Bay, to bring the shattered vessels of Perry's fleet, and a battalion of regulars, commanded by Colonel Campbell. He was furnished with about three hundred men, and set sail for Put-in-Bay in the fleet that had been anchored at Erie during the winter preceding. In about ten days they returned, in consequence of bad weather.

Our men, who had not been accustomed to nautical life, were glad to get their feet on solid ground once more. Campbell now took the command of the regulars, who were considerably reinforced, and in the course of a few days planned an expedition to Long Point, in Canada. He wanted as many volunteers from Fenton's regiment as he could get. Fenton agreed to go himself, and more than one half of his men. We embarked in the fleet in the evening, and set sail at dark. The weather was hazy, with very little wind, and the next morning we were still in sight, and not very far from the American shore. About eight o'clock the wind favored us, and towards sunset our fleet cast anchor at Long Point. The landing of the troops now commenced. A party of British light horsemen waited on the bank till the men came within a short distance of the shore, then fired a volley and galloped off. We remained on the shore of the lake during the night without any disturbance. The next morning a scouting party crossed a creek which emptied into the lake at this place, and had not proceeded far before they were fired upon by a party of Canadians. The fire was returned, and we took up the line of march for Dover, a small village about three miles from the lake. The situation of this village was pleasant, the houses generally frame, near a beautiful creek, with a fine log fulling mill, grist mill and saw mill. The inhabitants had principally left town on our approach. We were then placed in line of battle; the artillery in the centre, the regulars on the right, a reserve in the rear, and a company, I suppose of observation, some distance off. An order from Campbell, to set fire to the houses was now executed, by men detailed from all the companies. A scene of destruction and plunder now ensued which beggars all description. In a short time the houses, mills and barns were consumed, and a beautiful village, which the sun shone on in splendor that morning, was before two o'clock a heap of ruins. The women and children had remained in the village, and were permitted to carry out the valuable part of their movable property. A party of sailors, appointed to man the artillery, killed the hogs in the streets, and severing them in the middle, carried off the hind parts, while the head and shoulders were left in the street.

The line of march was now taken up the lake. The army halted about a mile from the lake, at the house of a respectable looking German, and as it had been ascertained that the British had no force of any consequence in that neighborhood, the men were permitted to stroll from the ranks. A short distance from this house was a pasture lot, in which grazed a fine English cow. Some of us who were farmers had a curiosity to examine this fine animal more closely. This drew a small group together, when a private of Gordon's company fired his musket and broke both her fore legs. The farmer and his family said nothing, afraid, I suppose, their own turn would come next, and the officers, taken up in examining some Canadian prisoners, paid but little attention to it.

The sun was setting as the troops were re-embarked, and shortly after dark we set sail, expecting to awake in the harbor of Erie; but judge of our surprise in the morning to find that we were not more than a mile from the Canadian shore, and four miles from where we started the evening before. The sails were lowered, the fleet stopped, and boats manned for the shore. A troop of horse formed on the shore appeared determined to oppose our landing, but the turning of a long thirty-two pounder on board the Porcupine gunboat, to bear on them, made them gallop off, without firing a gun. There was a grist mill and saw mill, to which our troops set fire. Orders were then given to re-embark, and the fleet set sail for Erie, where we arrived the next evening at dark, generally disgusted at the conduct of Campbell. When we came back to the camp we found that a number of men belonging to several companies had deserted, taking advantage of the absence of the officers. A short time after this a mutiny was set on foot by some designing men, who made the soldiers believe that the field officers and contractors were swindling them by buying up bad provisions at a low price, and that good could be bought if the officers wanted it. Another reason was, they had now been in the service nearly three months, and had received but the six dollars from the State, and as we expected in a few days to march to Buffalo, and be under the United States officers, they were told that unless they stood out for their rights then, there would be no use of doing it at Buffalo.

A paper was drawn up and signed by a number, who were resolved not to start without two months pay. The officers, for some reason, appeared very little concerned about it. The morning came to start for Buffalo. Preparations were made by those who were not in the conspiracy, to start and leave the mutineers, if they were too strong to be forced off. The mutineers had loaded their muskets, and had supplied themselves with cartridges, apparently determined not to strike a tent without money. The regiment had been formed, roll called, and wagons all ready to load. Orders were given to strike the tents. About one half were struck. The remainder stood, the owners beside them with loaded muskets. Col. Fenton began to remonstrate, but they treated all he said with indifference. The Adjutant, Thomas Doe, standing beside him, indignant at such conduct, wanted the Colonel to use force, but he declined, and at Doe's request, gave him leave to quell the disturbance. The first company, a finely uniformed company of Infantry from Carlisle, had been active in the mutiny, but their tents fell before the drawn sword of the Adjutant, and men who appeared determined to die on the spot, now shrunk like children before one man. The rest followed their example, and in less than an hour the leaders of the mutiny were placed in the block house in irons, and the regiment was on its way to Buffalo.

This march was a very pleasant one—the vegetation was coming on with great vigor, and the country was fast being settled by respectable and intelligent looking men from the Eastern States. After a march of eight days we arrived on the banks of the Buffalo creek, where we were met by a fine looking band of musicians, who escorted us to the village. This village had been burnt the winter before by the British and Indians. The inhabitants were generally living in sheds of frame and lined with rough boards, a temporary protection from the inclemency of the weather. West of town, and between it and the lake was the encampment of the grand army, said to be 2,500 strong. These were commanded by Major-General Jacob Brown. A regiment of artillery on the northeast. We encamped on the left of the regulars, in a piece of bushy ground which was soon cleared off, making it a beautiful spot with a fine spring, close to the encampment.

Regulations new to us, and very strict were now adopted. We arose at 4 o'clock, (reveille beat), and answered to our names. We had fifteen minutes to prepare for drill, which generally lasted one hour. Breakfast being over, the regiment was formed, roll again called, guards detailed, and the regiment dismissed for a short time. The sergeants' drill came next, which generally lasted till eleven o'clock. At two, the Adjutant-General drilled the regiment, which were then dismissed till nine, when the roll was again called and we retired to rest. The time passed away in this manner, constant exercise, wholesome provisions and strict discipline, soon made our regiment have another appearance.

On the evening of the third day of July, the regulars left their camp, and marched down to the Niagara river, crossed during the night, and surrounded Fort Erie, which surrendered the next day. There was but one battallion in the fort, and two companies of artillery. These were brought to Buffalo, and from thence to Greenbush, in the State of New York, escorted by Captain Alexander's company of infantry. We crossed on the 5th, some out of each company refused to go; and some of their comrades were detailed to bring them by force, which we found to be no easy matter, as they had taken possession of an old battery, and stood in their own defence. They were about eighty strong. A treaty was now commenced, and about twenty of them with their leader, agreed to come over, the rest we left, our commander wisely considering them of little consequence.

In the morning we marched for the Chippewa. The regulars had started the day before. About 2 o'clock we halted about two miles from the creek, where a large body of Indians of different tribes were preparing to go out on a scouting expedition. One of their chiefs, in a speech which for gesture and strength of lungs, I had never heard equalled, was preparing them for bloody deeds. Volunteers were now called for from Porter's brigade. The Indians had started towards a pine wood, back of the fields, where we then halted. Having lost my sleep the night before, I had, like a simpleton, lent my musket to Lieut. Dick, and laying down in a fence corner, fell fast asleep. In a few minutes the sharp crack of the Indians' rifles waked me. The noise increased by the quick discharges of cannon and musketry. I was so much confused that I scarce knew what I was doing. I ran to Maj. Wood, who was forming, and asked them what they were doing.

"Fighting!" was the answer. "Fall into ranks!"

I now felt my situation—without gun or cartridge box. I ran to the bank of the river, where a boat was lying, which had brought the baggage down the river, and solicited a gun, which after some difficulty I obtained, and soon joined our company. Just at this time I saw the Indians and some of the volunteers flying across the fields toward us. They had received a warmer reception than they had expected.

Shortly after they crossed into the woods they came on a party of Canadians (Indians) and militia, who fired on them. The fire was returned, and the Canadians fled towards the bridge, our volunteers in full pursuit. A number of the Canadian Indians and their militia lost their lives in this running fight. Approaching the bridge they met the British army. A retreat now commenced, with the Canadians and some British regulars in full pursuit. In this retreat, Robert McClelland, a very respectable man of our company lost his life. Almost all the companies of our regiment lost some men.

By the time the regiment came in view of the Chippewa creek, the battle was over and the British retreating across the bridge. A number of killed and wounded lay on the plains where the armies had fought. We marched past them towards the bridge, saluted every few minutes by the cannon balls from the British works at Chippewa, which to us militia was a new, but not a very pleasant sight.

After keeping us a considerable time formed in front, and exposed to the cannon of the British works, we were marched back to our camp. That evening we were joined by a company of Canadian volunteers, who had entered the service of the United States.

The next morning the dead of both armies were buried. The killed and wounded amounted to six or seven hundred, of which the greater part belonged to the British. Col. Robert Ball, second in command, Major Galloway and Captain White were taken prisoners, besides a number of privates.

About twelve o'clock, a number of men of different companies were detailed to take the prisoners, who were all wounded, up the Niagara, in boats to Buffalo. I was one of this party. The navigation of this stream, up the river, is very difficult and laborious. It was dark by the time we had got eight miles, and as we were very tired we landed opposite a house on the shore to rest till morning. The owner had left this when the army came down the river.

As some of the men were slightly hurt, and we in an enemy's country, a sentinel was sent to watch the boat. About midnight, my turn came. The moon gave but little light, and the prisoners and our men all laying quiet, when the sound of footsteps within a few paces, startled me. I turned hastily around, and saw a large Indian, who, when he saw my musket presented, called out, "don't shoot." He proved to be one of our own side, on his road to join the army.

The next day we arrived at Buffalo, where we were detained for eight days, when we returned to join the army, who were encamped at Queenstown, below the falls of Niagara.

The river at this town is narrow, and very deep, and an eddy of backwater renders it an easy place to land boats. The houses were large and handsome. Above the town was a steep hill called Queenstown mountain, on the top of which was a fort, where the volunteers and Indians were encamped. The New York volunteers having joined us we were formed into a brigade, commanded by General Peter B. Porter. After a march to the neighborhood of Fort George, where we remained two days, we returned to out former camp at Queenstown.

On our march up the river, when we came in view of Queenstown heights, we discovered a number of the Canadian militia, who had taken possession of our former encampment. On our approach they began to move off. We pursued them for some miles. Being on a flanking party with others, our route was principally through the woods. We returned in the evening with eight prisoners, most of them being officers.

Next day we marched to Chippewa and encamped. There was preparation making to march to Burlington Heights, but on the evening of the 25th of July, intelligence was brought that the enemy were in pursuit of us, and coming up the river below the falls. General Scott Moorhead, with his brigade, went to meet them, and gave them battle about three miles from the camp. The second brigade of regulars, under General Ripley, hastened to his support, and the contest became warm and bloody. The enemy's artillery being taken about the time we of Porter's brigade arrived on the battle ground, the enemy, reinforced, came down the hill directly in front of us. The brigade was just formed into line, when I heard the voice of Porter saying to us, "show yourselves men, and assist your brethren," when showers of musket balls came over our heads like a sweeping hail storm. We returned the fire from the whole line of the brigade. The firing was now kept up from both sides with great spirit, but it was soon evident that there was a great advantage on our side. The ground the British occupied was considerably elevated, which exposed them to the elevation that a musket will take in going any considerable distance, while their balls were passing high in the air over our heads. At length the call from the officers to cease firing and march forward was obeyed. I had twenty rounds of cartridges in my box when I went to the battle ground, and when the firing ceased, on examining my box, I found that the last was in my musket. Cartridges and flints were now hastily distributed along the line, and our brave brigade, blackened with powder, marched forward toward the top of the hill to drive the enemy from his position there. In our march we passed over the dead and dying, who were literally in heaps, especially where the British had stood during the battle.

When we arrived at the top of the hill, we came to a thicket where an old fence had been. Crossing this disordered the line considerably, and when through it, we found ourselves within a few rods of the British, who were strongly reinforced and turning to meet us. A deathlike silence for a few moments prevailed, and both armies stood still. One of the British officers asked in a hoarse voice, if we had surrendered. There was no answer to this question. He asked again. Lieutenant Dick told him that we never would surrender. The Canadian company on our right began to falter, and firing irregularly, the whole body fled back over the British fence, they complimenting us with a shower of musket balls.

A number were killed, and others were wounded in this tumultuous retreat. Running about fifteen or twenty rods we thought ourselves out of danger, and several of us, at the request of the officers, stopped and were formed into line.

Col. Nichols had joined us that evening with a regiment of regulars from Missouri, who had been kept as a reserve, who, by skillful manœvers, placed themselves between us and the British, and kept up a destructive fire on the British, who soon fell back and the firing ceased. A murmur ran through the ranks of the volunteer companies, who were contending for places in the rear, and the groans of dying was all that was heard for some minutes.

The shattered remains of the brigade being formed, we were marched to the right of the line, and near the edge of the precipice of the Niagara falls. The cannon that had been taken from the British was at this place. We were formed in order of battle.

This time to me was one of the most trying moments of my life. Being warm during the engagement, I had opened my vest and shirt collar, and now the night air chilled me—Death, the common lot of all mankind, is generally feared the nearer he approaches us. I felt my situation to be an awful one, and I did sincerely wish that the British army, who were on the hill in view of us, might not come down to commence the engagement again. The British army retiring, our company with others, were ordered to haul the cannon taken from the British, and tumble it over the precipice. We hauled one and sent it over the precipice into the river.

We then went back and were ordered to haul another, but tired out, and half dead for want of water, the most of our faces scorched with powder, we refused do any more, and our officers led us back to places in the line.

A retrogade march back to the camp now commenced, the volunteers in front and the regulars in the rear to cover the retreat. When we arrived at the camp, a number of men who had ran off from us during the engagement, came back, and wished to fall into ranks, but were ordered off by Lieut Patton, who now had command of the company. The next thing was to make a speech to us.

He began by saying that he was surprised at us for not standing our ground at the brush fence. If the whole brigade had fled (as they actually did) Gordon's company should have remained firm.

This was too much; we believing that we had done all that men could do, and this our thanks! We broke loose on him with a volley of insulting language. He, standing in front of us, with a smile, told us that we were dismissed, and might go to the river and get drunk on water.

I now learned that ten of our company were wounded. There was a number of men killed in every company except ours. Thomas Poe, adjutant of the regiment, was mortally wounded. He was my full cousin, a man of fine talents, a brave and meritorious officer, and treated us like brothers.

The next morning a scene of distress presented itself to my view, which I hope I may never witness again. I started early to see Thomas Poe, hearing that he was dying in a house at Chippewa, a short distance from our camp. Calling at several of the tents, as I passed along, nearly all of them contained one or more wounded men, their clothes covered with blood, and they suffering severely. John McClay, the quartermaster, was wounded by a musket ball, which cut him across the fore part of the head, and cracked his skull. He was lying on his back, his face in a gore of blood. The strange wild look, and deep groan he gave, just as I entered, drew a smile from me, so accustomed men become to blood, that they feel but little sympathy for their fellows.

Coming to the house at Chippewa, I found Thomas Poe lying on a blanket. He reached his hand to me and told me that he was mortally wounded; that he had but a few moments to live, and told me that he wished to be buried on the American side of the river.

The army was at this time on its march, and passed the house, going to attack the British. I had no wish to go with them, as I had become fully satisfied the previous day, and the officers telling me to stay and attend Poe. I stood in the door and with sorrow watched the shattered remains of only twenty-five out of the hundred that had left Franklin county, as with slow and melancholy steps they were returning to the scene of action. In a short time the whole body returned, as it was found that the British were strongly reinforced, and were preparing to attack us. Our troops had suffered severely the night before, especially one regiment that the evening before had paraded four hundred men, now had but eighty-eight. Added to this, Major General Brown, the commander, and Brigadier General Scott, who commanded the first brigade, were both wounded, and the provisions were also destroyed. Lieutenant Campbell, a number of the regulars and myself carried the wounded Thomas Poe to the crossing place. Boats were waiting here to take the wounded across the river. Carrying him nearly a mile across a plain, in the middle of the 25th of July, appeared to exaust what little strength he had left. I put him in a boat, in care of Lieutenant Dick and his waiter. He shook hands with me for the last time. He said to me in a weak voice, "Alexander, you will never see me again in this world." He expired in a few minutes. Thus fell one who had but few equals.

Landing the remaining part of the wounded now commenced, and there was at least forty two-horse wagons loaded with these unfortunate men. Their sufferings in this mode of conveyance appeared to be dreadful, and their groans distressing. I was now attacked with a high fever and violent head-ache, and had to give up my musket and knapsack and take a seat in the wagon, but the jolting almost deranged me. I then attempted to walk, but finding my strength failing, and being behind our regiment, I lay down in front of a house in despair, not caring what became of me. The regulars passing at this time one of their officers seeing me, assisted me to rise, and made one of his soldiers support me for a short distance. I then felt better, and able to walk without support. It was now dark. We came to a wash house opposite the village of Black Rock, and I went into it. The night was cloudy, and appearance of a storm. There were a number of stragglers from different companies and we all lay down on the floor, and I soon fell asleep, but an affray of the regulars with some men, soon ordered us out. He sent some of his men to conduct me to the meadow where our company was. He gave me my blanket, and I was compelled to lie down in a high fever, just as the rain began to come down in torrents. This, of all nights I had ever spent, was the most dreadful.

In the morning I found myself lying in the water two inches deep. I was so weak that I could scarcely walk. The day before, I had given my messmates my canteen, which was full of French brandy. My first thought was to get it, and determined to drink as much of it as I could, but fortunately for me, my comrades had disposed of it themselves.

I now went with company to Fort Erie. This was a small fort of sods, in which were several men at work, digging and carrying sods to raise the fort higher, and repair bastions.

My messmates insisted on me going across the river until I got better. An application was made to General Porter, and I crossed to the United States, after having been in Canada nearly two months.

I went to the hospital, and Lieutenant Dick, Peter Keefer, William Edwards and myself got a tent by ourselves. Some time passed, when the British crossed the river, and attacked a small body of Kentucky riflemen.

The main body being at Fort Erie, we left Buffalo and went about two miles to an Indian town, belonging to the Seneca Indians, who had removed to another about two miles from this, which also belonged to them. The situation of the first mentioned village was pleasant, the houses of one story, and in a straight line, about 16 feet square, with a porch in front the length of the house. A beautiful meadow, orchard, and small fields of wheat surrounded the village. There appeared to be about 12 acres of cleared land. The Indians had left this village a short time before, in consequence of some of their people catching the small-pox, they supposing that it belonged to the village, left it with all their furniture, and rush mats, which was their bedding.

Staying here one night and part of a day, we learned that the danger was over. The British, 1,100 strong, attempted to cross a small creek. The riflemen had thrown up a breastwork of logs within point blank shot of the ford, and being excellent marksmen and retired veterans, the British found it no easy matter to cross the creek, and after several ineffectual efforts, re-embarked, after having lost three hundred killed and wounded. The rifle regiment lost but few, being protected by their breastwork.

My companions now left me. The physician said my disease was Dumb Ague. I had a high fever through the night, but during the day was able to walk about though very weak.

The hospital was intended for the sick and wounded of Porter's brigade. The superintendent and his assistants were from the Pennsylvania regiment. I suppose there might have been sixty of us here generally, though I never saw the list. There was one who had charge of the medicine chest, and like all quacks, was, in his own opinion, an excellent physician. Dr. Mady, the surgeon of the Pennsylvania regiment, generally attended us once a day, examined the patients, and left his directions with the Irishman who gave each one his portion of medicine, but he soon began to enlarge, and took the liberty of differing from his employer, and as he distributed he gave what he thought would effect a cure. Going to him one morning for Peruvian bark, he felt my pulse and began to talk very gravely of giving me something else. I told him I would go by the directions of the physician. He insisted. I then told him that he knew nothing about medicine, was an imposter, &c. He said but little more, but in the course of the day let me know the consequences of my hasty expressions. I had still kept the tent after my companions had left me. This he ordered to be taken from me. As I did not choose to go into the sick room, he let me know that I might find lodgings where I pleased. I took quarters in the jail in Buffalo, which was used at that time as a store house.

The noise of repairing old muskets, firing, &c., at this place almost distracted me with the headache. Lieut. Dick procured boarding for me at the house of a respectable widow, named St. John, three miles from Buffalo. Her husband had died some years before, and left her five children to support. They had some property in Buffalo, where they had kept tavern, but during the preceding winter the British destroyed it all except one small frame house, which they left her. I received all the kindness I could ask. Our life was ecomomical in the highest degree, and I believe was a great means of restoring my health. In a few days I visited Buffalo and saw such of our company as were in the hospital. I had the company of Major Wood and Adjutant Kean, a New Yorker, and I soon began to feel at home.

CHAPTER LIV.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EARLY COMMISSIONERS' ORDERS—EARLY COURT RECORDS FROM THE VARIOUS OFFICES OF THE COURT HOUSE—WILL OF JAMES KELLY, SR.—THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD—LIST OF PENSIONERS IN COUNTY IN 1840—INDIANA COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY—REUNION OF THE 11TH PA. R. C.—MEETING OF OLD SETTLERS—THE PATENT OF THE TRACT WHICH INCLUDES THE CONRAD RICE FARM—DEED FROM REV. JOHN SMITH TO CONRAD RICE.

COMMISSIONERS' FIRST ORDER BOOK.

INDIANA County, November 10th, 1803. Issued an order to Thomas Allison, Michael Campbell and Joseph McCartney, for the sum of two hundred and thirty dollars and forty cents, being for running the boundary line, and ascertaining the centre of said county.

December 21st. To Nathan Johnston, for one dollar and fifty cents, for one day's service as a clerk last general election for Wheatfield district.

May 2d, 1804. Issued an order to William Clark, assessor for Wheatfield township, for the sum of twenty dollars.

3d. Issued an order to Robert Robinson, assessor for Armstrong township, for the sum of twenty dollars.

Also an order to Jacob Anthony, for fifteen days serving notices.

4th. Issued an order to Zachariah Leard, assessor for Conemaugh township, for the sum of twenty-six dollars.

20th. To William Williams and William Wilson, supervisors for Wheatfield township, for one hundred and twenty-two dollars and fifty-seven cents, in full of road tax on unseated lands, due and unpaid in said township for the present year.

20th. To Nathan Douthet and Thomas Reed, supervisors for the township of Conemaugh, for twenty-one dollars and twenty cents, in full for road tax on unseated land due and unpaid in said township for the year 1803.

September 20, 1805. To William Jack, James Parr and John Pumroy, Esqs., trustees of Indiana county, for their services for laying out the seat of justice in and for said county, $36.

THE OLDEN TIME.

[Extracts from the records of Commissioners of Indiana county, furnished by James Bailey.]

"Issued an order to James M. Riddle for $100.00, on account of his contract for receiving Deed from George Clymer, for the Town Land of Indiana." Jan. 28th, 1808.

"To Joseph Moorhead, Esq., coming to town for taking acknowledgement of letter of attorney from the commissioners to J. M. Riddle, for $1 00." June 28th, 1808.

"To James M. Riddle, for drafting Deed for sale of lots in Indiana town, for $10 00." May 18th, 1808.

"To James M. Riddle, for $25 00, in part of his contract for procuring a law confirming the town plan of Indiana, from which sales were made." Dec. 26th, 1808.

"To James M. Riddle, for $25 00 for procuring an Act of Assembly, confirming the town of Indiana, &c." May 3d, 1809.

"To John Huey, for $100 00 on account of his contract for Court House." May 6th, 1809.

"To John McElhose, for $15 00, the price of twelve hundred feet of poplar boards for the Commissioner's Office." May 25th, 1809.

"To Jacob Peelor, for $80 00, in part of his contract for making shingles for the Court House." June 13th, 1809.

"To John McAnulty, for $50 00, on account of his contract for furnishing brick for Public Buildings." July 5, 1809.

"To John Huey, for $200 00, in part payment of contract for Court House." Oct. 27th, 1809.

"To John Agey, for $141 62, in full for delivering scantling, lath and boards for Court House." Oct. 27th. 1809.

"To Jacob Peelor, for $6 86, for hewing 208 feet of timber for cupola of Court House." Oct. 26th, 1809.

On the organization of the county, James McLain was appointed by Governor McKean, to the office of prothonotary, clerk of the Sessions and Orphans' Court, and register and recorder, by commission dated at Lancaster, October 2d, 1806.

Thomas McCartney, was the first sheriff of the county. The first court was held in December, 1806. There being no court house, justice was dispensed in a log hotel erected by Peter Dutton, on the lot now occupied by Wilson & Sutton's warehouse, on Philadelphia street. Hon. John Young, of Greensburg, was the president, and Hon. James Smith and Hon. Charles Campbell, of Indiana county, were the associate judges.

George Armstrong, John B. Alexander, Samuel S. Harrison, James M. Riddle, Samuel Massey and Samuel Guthrie, Esq's, were sworn and admitted as attorneys.

The following named persons were in attendance as jurors:

Grand Jurors—James Marshall, foreman; Robert Walker, James Simpson, (miller), Joseph Moorhead, Esq., Robert Sutton, John Parks, William Trimble, Alexander Templeton, Geo. McIntire, Joseph Turner, James Jack, George McComb, William Loughry, sr., Joseph M. Cartney, Esq., William Bond, Matthew Wincoop, Robert Ligget, John McKee, Robert Robertson, James McKnight, Joseph Harbison, Alexander Thompson, Alexander Lytle, John Mathews, John Henderson, Thomas Boals and Jacob Hess.

Traverse Jurors—Alexander Ray, James Mahan, Richard Wilson, Peter Fair, Samuel Smith, Israel Thomas, Francis Boals, William Devinny, Esq., John Loughry, John Lowry, James McDonald, John White, John Bowers, Moses Curry, Peter Hoover, Meek Kelly, Jeremiah Brown, John Laughlin, Andrew Simpson, Francis Louther, Robert Nixon, Thomas Wakefield, Samuel Wallace, James Longstretch, William Parker, Joseph Hutchison, Thomas Reed, James Findley and Robert Ewing.

Each juror received two dollars for his services during the term.

The first Jury trial was in the Common Pleas, at June term, 1808, No. 3.

"Lessee of Moses Lower vs. Andrew Lower, and Esther Beard, tenants.

"Amicable ejectment for two messuages, two gardens, two orchards and one hundred and twenty acres of land, situate, lying and being in Armstrong township.

"Case continued upon a point reserved at trial."

"June 15, 1808—jury sworn; verdict for defendants.

"GUTHRIE.

"ALEXANDER & ARMSTRONG, for plaintiff.

"HARRISON & WEIGLEY, for defendants."

Laws of Congress—In Commission book No. 1, on page 5, are the following entries by the recorder:

"August 15, 1809. Received of the Secretary of State, U. S., laws, 2d session, 9th Congress, 10; laws, 1st session, 10th Congress, 10; laws of each session for Jefferson county, 2; laws of last session, 20; 8th vol. State laws, 1st edition, 3; tavern licenses, 30."

SHERIFFS' DEEDS.—The first acknowledgments entered are these: "Thomas McCartney, Esq. High Sheriff of Indiana county, appeared in open court on the fifteenth day of June, 1808, and acknowledged his deed to Joseph Weigley, Esq., of Greensburg, for a certain lot of ground situate in the town of Indiana, and county aforesaid, marked in the general plan of said town with the N. 65, (sixty-five), sold as the property of Samuel Young, on —— day of December, 1807, for the consideration of ninety dollars."

"Thomas McCartney, Esq., High Sheriff of Indiana county, appeared in open court on the fifteenth day of June, 1808, and acknowledged his deed to Joseph Weigley, Esq., of Greensburg, for a certain tract of land, situate in Wheatfield township, in said county of Indiana, containing three hundred acres, be the same more or less, adjoining Richard Williams' improvement, and William Campbell's land on the west, and lands of John McFarland on the south, sold as the property of Robert Weir, on the eighteenth day of March, 1808, for the consideration of ninety-one dollars."

THE FIRST DEED entered on the records is from Dr. Benjamin Say, of Philadelphia, to Michael Kenney, for a tract of land, east of "Perry's camp," containing two hundred and seventeen acres. Consideration, $433. Recorded Jan. 7, 1807.

THE FIRST WILL recorded is that of William Loughrey, proved 10th of March, 1807.

WOLF AND PANTHER SCALPS.—During the year 1807, there were paid out of the treasury for wolf and panther scalps, the sum of two hundred and thirty-two dollars, viz: for one panther, $8, and for twenty-eight wolves, $8 each.

PUBLIC PRINTING.—June 19, 1805, Jas. M. Snowden received for printing done for the county, $14.40. September 17, 1808, Wm. S. Graham received for printing, $64.50.

By Act of Assembly, approved the 12th of January, 1807, the Commissioners of Indiana county were authorized to levy and collect county taxes in Jefferson county for the years 1807 and 1808; and by a similar act, approved the 10th day of February, 1807, the said commissioners were directed to appoint assessors to levy county taxes for said years, in that part of the county lying north of the old purchase line, formerly a part of Lycoming county.

WILL OF JAMES KELLY, SR.

In the name of God, amen.

I, James Kelly, sen'r, being in my right senses and of a sound mind—thanks be to God for the same—but wishing to settle my temporal affairs, I do hereby bequeath and confirm unto Sara Kelly, my wife, all the household furniture, such as beds, bed clothes and the house furnishing, and all the horned cattle and sheep that is now in my possession at this time, to be at her own disposing, with the increase thereof, excepting one yoke of oxen, as also one sorrel mare and the colt which the mare now has, as also a sufficient and decent livelihood of the real estate, as long as she, the said Sara, liveth.

As also: I do hereby bequeath to my eldest son, Meek Kelly, one hundred acres of my real estate, including the improvement that is now made, provided there is two hundred acres in my claim; if not, he is to have and to hold one-half thereof, as also one yoke of oxen which is now on the place, as also a sorrel mare, one plow and irons, one axe, one mattock, and one set of horse gears.

As also: I do hereby bequeath to my second son, James Kelly, the remaining half of my real estate, adjoining Widow Hutchison and the heirs of William Lowry.

As also: I do hereby bequeath unto my third son, Abner Kelly, when he becomes of age, one hundred pounds in specie, fifty pounds to be paid to the said Abner by James Kelly, provided that if the said hundred pounds cannot be paid unto the said Abner without oppressing the said Meek and James, said Abner is to wait four years after he arrives to age for the payment of the same.

And I allow James Kelly to get the colt that my wife Sara's mare is with at this time; and also allow the young mare to be sold, as soon as executors see fit, and what is coming to me, from any person, be collected, and after my lawful debts are paid, the remainder, if any there be, I allow the same to be appropriated to the use of deeding the land.

And I appoint and empower said Sara Kelly, my wife, and Meek Kelly, my oldest son, my lawful executors.

JAMES KELLY.

Witnesses: Samuel Kelly, George Scott.

Dated October 17th, 1803. Proved in Westmoreland county June 18, 1804.

THE UNDER GROUND RAILROAD IN INDIANA COUNTY.

[By an Official.]

Although the subject of human slavery had occupied the minds of the people greatly hitherto, it was not until the year 1840 that public attention was called to the matter in this vicinity in a way to cause careful and considerate deliberation. About this period meetings commenced to be held in school houses to consider the evil, and it became a matter of discussion pro and con at public assemblages of the people. The agitation of the question of slavery met with the most determined opposition from many good people, and at the same time was arrayed in its favor those base elements of society always found upholding the wrong against the right. At the period alluded to, several meetings were held in what was known as McMullen's school house, in Centre township. Among the speakers who addressed these meetings in opposition to slavery, were Ephraim Carpenter, William Henry, James Moorhead, and Doctor Mitchell.

The seed sown by these pioneers of freedom, fell upon good ground and brought into the ranks of the "Abolitionists" such well-known and well-remembered men as Hon. Joseph Campbell, John Allison, sr., Alex. McMullen, John Lytle, John B. Allison, James Hamilton, John Adair, A. C. Hall, John Ewing, J. R. Smith, and many others more or less prominent at that day in that neighborhood. Meetings in other localities rapidly followed, and the ranks of the advocates of the oppressed was swelled by the addition of hundreds—John Graff, John Ewing, John Ellis, John and Alexander Sutor, being among the number. The Rev. David Blair then had congregations in Indiana, Conemaugh and West Lebanon, and his denunciations of the sin of slavery were constant, and the influence of his preaching was greatly felt in the accession of good men to the cause.

A paper published in Washington, D. C., entitled the New Era, was circulated extensively through the county, and its influence aided in extending the work and increasing the ardor of the opponents of slavery.

In a few years from the commencement of the agitation, there was no section of the county where the Abolitionists were not recognized as a power, and while the members of the party challenged debate on the subject and lost no opportunity of presenting their views, they at the same time were not slow to avail themselves of opportunities to give practical assistance to the objects of their solicitude. For this latter purpose, what was then known as the "Underground Railroad" was organized. A description of this will doubtless be interesting to many who were in life then, and cannot be devoid of interest to the generations which have succeeded, and to whom the workings of this road will be entirely new.

The fugitive slave law, enacted especially for the protection of slaveholders, imposed severe penalties upon any person known to give aid or comfort to the fleeing slave. Men of means and property were, in many instances, deterred by this law from openly giving aid to fugitives. Dr. Mitchell had been convicted of harboring runaways, and had been mulcted in such heavy damages and costs as to seriously embarrass him. The United States courts, whose jurisdiction extended over infractions of the fugitive slave law, were extremely pro-slavery, and to gain favor with the southern owners, were ready to bow to their behests, and the slave power was so far-reaching and wide-spread that to oppose it was to incur social ostracism and political death. The rulings of the courts, consequently, were often one-sided and partial, and it was mainly through fear of not obtaining justice that the Abolitionists organized the "Underground Railroad." Many of the slaves fleeing from bondage lived along the border counties of Virginia, and always traveling by night and guided by the north star, their route led them through this county on their way to Canada. Once on the shores of Canada the slave stood in no awe of his master; but this was not the case within the states or territories of the Union. In daylight the fugitives sought concealment in the thick woods or underbrush, and at night pursued his lonesome and toilsome journey toward the polar star, which to him was the beacon of hope and a ray of light which meant liberty.

The town of Indiana and the surrounding hills (then nearly all thickly wooded) was a great "depot" on the road. As soon as the presence of the fugitive was made known to the railway officials, he was taken in charge and piloted to the next station, and there delivered to the care of another "conductor," and so on until safely passed to the Canadian shore. The run-aways were furnished with food, and frequently with raiment, it being sometimes the case that they were destitute of garments. The pursuers were often close at hand, and in some instances were in the town before the train had started. Many hair-breadth escapes were made under such circumstances. One instance I recall to mind will illustrate this. At one time four or five stout negroes were discovered on Caldwell's (now Gomfer's) hill, in sight of town. They remained there one entire day, and at dark it was deemed desirable to have them removed to Hamilton's barn, a mile distant. This was safely accomplished. They were given much needed food, and after eating were secreted among the hay and straw to gain rest and sleep. About eleven o'clock that night the writer heard a faint tap at the door of his house, in Indiana. Upon opening the door and peering into the darkness, I discovered the form of old Sheriff James Taylor. Trembling and almost breathless he rushed into the house, closing the door in haste as though fearful of discovery. He informed me of the presence of the slaves at Hamilton's, and said they had scarcely crossed the pike when their pursuers—six or eight in number—came along; that the slave-hunters were now in town, and intended making a raid on Hamilton's barn before morning. He added that something must be done at once to save the fugitives; that he had property that if detected in assisting in their flight, the masters could secure, and that as I was possessed of little of this world's goods, I must get them out of danger. I aroused James M. Hart (now of Saltsburg), and taking a direction opposite from Hamilton's, to mislead any enemy who might be watching us, walked rapidly to the residence David Myers. At a gentle tap on his back window (a familiar signal to him), he quickly arose and piloted us through the woods and brush to "Jimmy" Hamilton's. Arousing him and informing him of the danger, we all repaired to the barn. Here the negroes were quickly wakened, and in a few minutes the "train" was under headway, "Conductor" Myers in charge, and passing laboriously but steadily through ravines and over rocks, fallen logs and other obstructions, was brought to a standstill at the house of Conductor Jacob Myers. Here they were safely secreted for several days, until the immediate danger was past. Then they were taken in charge by John Jones and the Sutors, and then by John Ewing, near Georgeville. From here, provided with food, &c., they once more set out on their journey, with the polar star as their guide. We afterwards learned that they arrived safely in Canada, and in all probability some of them are yet living to recount to their children their perilous escape from slavery. The conductors, I may add, all got home before daylight, and next morning resumed their usual avocations, the members of their families or neighbors knowing nothing of the work during the watches of the night. I may as well state that the slave-hunters were informed by some sympathizer that the negroes had been seen in the evening going in the direction of Hamilton's. At two o'clock next morning the barn was surrounded by the slave-catchers and carefully searched, but they were about thirty minutes too late. They were satisfied by their investigation that the negroes had been there.

They remained about the town and surrounding country for some time thereafter, continuing their search for the fugitives. They were kindly treated by the citizens, and appeared to be enjoying themselves very well; expressed a good opinion of the people, but said they were the most close-mouthed population they had ever seen—especially on the matter they were most interested in. They offered money for information, and counted down $200 to Samuel M. Jamison, their hotel-keeper's son, but their bribes or money availed nothing. When they announced their departure for Virginia, they were closely watched, and when well out of the county, the managers of the railroad so informed the conductors, and the train moved on with the result already stated.

At another time, five fugitives were secreted in a dense woods on the banks of Little Mahoning creek, near Georgeville. They were closely pursued, and their masters appeared in the locality, and had with them a large blood-hound. Ben. Warren had the runaways in charge. He became alarmed and took Thompson Hays, of Plumville, into his confidence. Hays, accompanied by his wife, secreted themselves in a clump of bushes, some eighty rods from where the negroes had crossed the road. In a little while, one of the slave-hunters, with the blood-hound, came along the road. When the dog came to the point where the negroes had crossed, he halted and gave evidence that he had got the scent. The case was desperate, but Hays was equal to the emergency. Bringing his rifle to his shoulder, he took careful aim, and shot the blood-hound down in his tracks. The slave-hunter was badly frightened, and fearing the same marksman would draw a bead on him, he put spurs to his horse and galloped rapidly back the road he had come. The hunt was not resumed, and the conductor got his train away safely.

These are mere recitals of hundreds of similar instances of the way the underground railroad was run in this county, and which only ceased operations with the removal of the cause which had brought it into existence.

Many of those engaged in this work of assisting fellow-beings in their flight to freedom, have gone to their long reward. Others of us still linger on the sands of time. Whatever may be the judgment of posterity, of our action in this matter, it should be tempered with the knowledge that we believed we were fully justified in assisting to liberty, human beings, with human instincts and immortal aspirations, and to whom liberty was as great a boon as to ourselves. We repudiated the doctrine that one man had a right to enchain in perpetual bondage and degradation his brother, and we only carried out our belief when we assisted to liberty and freedom, the flying fugitive.

A BRANCH OF THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD.

Robert Mitchell, jr., relates the following incident: "On a Sunday night in February, 1856, seven colored men came from Johnstown by the way of Mechanicsburg, where their pursuers had preceded them two hours, to our house at Diamondsville, to which they had been directed by a colored barber at Johnstown named Williams. They were nearly exhausted with their walk and as soon as possible they were provided with supper, and about midnight were put to bed in our store house. I awakened them about three o'clock in the morning and we started for Cherry Tree by the back road, by way of Hustenville and Pine Flat, reaching the village by daybreak, and thence proceeded toward George Acheson's in Clearfield county.

"The only person who observed us on the road was David Kinports of Cherry Tree, who saw us on the hill above the village. We got within half a mile of Acheson's by ten o'clock; so, leaving the slaves in the woods, I went to Acheson's home and informed him of the colored men's troubles. He at once went to the timber and took them to his house and gave them their breakfast. They went to bed and slept till four o'clock in the afternoon. He then started with them for a colored man's cabin, where they would be directed to Jason Kirk's house, who lived on the 'Grampian hills.'

"Meanwhile I started for home, and on the hill above Cherry Tree I met eleven men in hot pursuit of the slaves. I passed them, and at about a mile's distance, I met George Spalding, who had a letter for me, informing me of the close pursuit of the colored men.

"We turned and followed the party and noticed they had stopped at Gamble's mill and were about to put up for the night.

We hastened to Acheson's, reaching there about eleven o'clock at night, and informed him of the close chase. Without waiting fully to dress, he, with a loaf of bread under each arm, (and minus pantaloons), started for the negroes.

"When he reached the colored man's cabin, he took the slaves away to a dark wilderness, pine country, on Moss creek, a tributary of the Susquehanna, from whence, after remaining a week, they reached New York state in safety.

"I subsequently received a letter informing me of their safe arrival in Chatauqua county, N. Y.

"In the next morning, Spalding and myself apprised Gamble of how matters stood and he detained the pursuers as long as possible."

This is one of the many incidents which transpired on this branch of the Underground Railroad.

GEORGE ATCHESON

Was the great hero of the anti-slavery men in this section. Born in Ireland, he was there an Orangeman, and removed to eastern Pennsylvania, from whence, at an early date, he migrated to the Susquehanna valley, not far from the Cherry Tree, where he was among the earliest settlers.

He was over six feet in height, of strong build, with rugged features, and was a natural orator. For many years he was a pilot on the river, and he became a successful lumber merchant. He was passionately fond of the culture of fruit, and had his Orangeman's flowers, as well as the Irish hedge growing in his garden.

He attended all the principal anti-slavery meetings of his time, and could entertain for half an hour at a time such men as Giddings, Pillsbury, Garrison and others. He expended thousands of dollars, and being a man of great energy and determination, was regarded as the leader of the Abolitionists.

Personally he was regarded with great favor by the leaders of the pro-slavery party, and he returned their courtesies, while he never abated in his plans to hurry on to freedom all the slaves who came within his reach.

He was at first a Protestant Methodist, but became a Wesleyan Methodist after the agitation of the slavery question.

He died in 1878, over eighty-four years of age.

NAMES OF PENSIONERS IN INDIANA COUNTY IN 1840.*

Names of pensioners for Revolutionary or military services and their ages:

Blacklick township—Alexander Campbell, 86.

Brush Valley township—James Kelly, 71.

Blairsville borough—Zebulon Doty, 85; Mott Wilkinson, 75.

Conemaugh township—James Kane, 80; John Montgomery, 80.

Centre township—Joseph Moorhead, 72; James Huston, 82; Benjamin Williams, 65; John Ferguson, 76.

Green township—George Bowers, 82; Henry Kifers, 97.

Wheatfield township—Cornelius Hutcheson, 84.

Young township—John Ewing, sen., 75.

Armstrong township—Isaac Akeright, 56.

Washington township—James R. Bell, 46; John Jamieson, 67; Wm. McHenry, 70.

Mahoning township—John Leasure, 76; John Brady, 63; Isaiah Vanhorn, 80; Thomas Neil, 78; James Ewing, 73; Jas. Shields, 101; John Brady, 64.

Montgomery township—Wm. White, 84; Job Pearce, 88.

*From Census of 1840.

THE INDIANA COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

An association for the purpose of "promoting the science of agriculture and the improvement of the same" was organized on the 3d of January, 1855, and was incorporated October 1st, 1857, under the name of "The Indiana County Agricultural Society." At its organization the following persons were elected officers:

President, Hon. Thomas White; Vice Presidents, Wm. Coleman, H. M. Speedy, M. T. Work, William Evans, I. Campbell, S. P. Marshall, Adam Johnston, Esq.; Corresponding Secretary, Jonathan Rowe; Recording Secretary, Geo. Shryock; Librarian, J. H. Lichteberger; Managers, James Hood, David Ralston, John G. Coleman, R. H. Armstrong, J. T. Vanhorn, J. H. Johnston and James Bailey.

David Ralston and James Bailey having afterwards removed from the county, James Sutton and James Hays were appointed.

The following June, at a regular meeting of the society, it was decided that they should hold an agricultural fair the next fall. The following persons were appointed a committee to raise funds for the society. They promptly agreed to become responsible for the sum stated below:

East Mahoning, Moses T. Work, $25 00; Green, James Shields, $6 00; Washington, Thomas Gibson, $10 00; Conemaugh, John H. Hart, $10 00; Young, John H. Hart, $10 00; Blairsville, Wm. Maher, $10; Burrell, H. A. Thompson, $10 00; Brush Valley, R. B. Moorhead, $5 00; Indiana, Judge White, $10 00; S. Mahoning, Abram Davis, $10 00; White, A. T. Moorhead, $10 00; White, A. W. Kinnet, $10 00; Blacklick, William C. McCrae, $10 00; Cherryhill, William Evans, $10 00.

From this time there were annual exhibitions until the year 1859. In that year the managers decided there should be none "on account of the June frost," and again in 1864, on account of the troubled condition of the country, the annual exhibition was dispensed with.

The grounds of the society are located on the Saltsburg road, between the state agricultural farm and state normal school grounds and contain thirteen acres. At its inception six acres were purchased from James Sutton and buildings erected thereon for the accommodation of stock, &c. These were afterwards found to be insufficient and constant additions were made and the grounds (finally enlarged by the purchase of seven acres) were generally overhauled, the track enlarged to one and one-third mile course and we have the present complete, substantial and convenient fair ground. Its growth, prosperity and popularity have increased with its years. Its list of premiums has grown more complete from exhibion to exhibition. Its receipts have increased from a few hundred dollars to thousands, and it has come to be recognized as the social event of the year. The race course has been extended with the increased size of the grounds, but as the sentiment of the farmers of the county has always been against it, its use has been confined and it has received but little encouragement. The benefits which the farmers of Indiana county have derived from the exhibitions of the society are to be seen in their methods of farming and the results, and in the great and increasing improvement in their stock. Wherever the soil has been properly tilled we now see fine, fertile farms, their possessors having good buildings and thriving cattle. There remains much yet to be accomplished in the interest of agriculture in this county, before it stands high, as it should, among the agricultural counties of Pennsylvania.

The present officers of the society, are: President; Silas M. Clark. Vice-Presidents; George Dickie, James Hood, Jno. Carson, James Allison, A. B. McAdoo, Samuel McGarra. Treasurer, Coulter Wiggins. Recording Secretary, S. M. Jack. Corresponding Secretary, S. C. Thompson. Librarian, W. H. Clawson. Managers; Aaron Steel, Smith Wachof, Harry Bryan, Wm. C. Gordan, H. S. Thompson, Ellis Wissinger.

[From the Daily Blade, Indiana, Pa.]

FIRST REUNION—INDIANA COUNTY'S HONOR TO THE GALLANT ELEVENTH PENNSYLVANIA RESERVES—GRAND BANQUET AT NORMAL SCHOOL—LIST OF THE VETERANS.

Thursday, the 25th day of September, will never be forgotten by the citizens of Indiana county—will ever find a bright remembrance in the hearts of the old veterans of the gallant 11th Pennsylvania regiment and visitors who were present at the first reunion services at Indiana.

Early Thursday morning our street presented a lively appearance, houses were being decorated, flags flung to the breezes and arches and words of welcome greeting the eye on every side.

At the Kinter house crossing, a large arch had been erected. At court house square, arches were stretched across with appropriate mottoes, while at the American house crossing, fronting the depot, another large arch, with words "welcome 11th regiment P. R. V. C.," stretched across it, greeted your eye. We have not space to enter much into detail, suffice it to say, the decorations were tasteful and appropriate, and numerous enough to show that the patriotic hearts of Indiana's citizens still held in grateful esteem and veneration Her Soldier Boys.

Owing to the accident on Branch road, and the long detention of the train containing the band and the larger delegation of old veterans, the route of procession and various routine business had to be curtailed. When the shrill whistle of the locomotive was heard, the cheers that rent the air from the masses assembled were perfectly deafening. The procession was formed in the following order:

Gen. T. F. Gallagher, Chief Marshall.
Aids—Capts. A. H. Mitchell, J. S. Nesbit.
Committee of Reception.
Invited Guests.
Altoona City Band.
11 Regiment P. R. V. C. Commanded by General S. M. Jackson.
Co. "D," Capt. Wm. D. Wilson.
Co. "F," Lieut. A. C. Braughler.
West Indiana Fire Company.
Indiana Fire Company.
Soldiers and Citizens.

The route was from Depot down Philadelphia street to Sixth street; south to Church; east to Fifth street; north to Philadelphia; west to the Court House.

The procession was a very fine one, and was an interesting feature in the day's doings.

Here General White made the address of Welcome, which was responded to by Gen. T. F. Gallaher.

An adjournment for dinner was then made, and we know the boys must have appreciated this part of the programme as it was almost five o'clock, and some of them had not tasted food since early breakfast.

At 6:30 o'clock, the boys had reassembled again at the court house, where the meeting was called to order by the election of General T. F. Gallagher as chairman, Col. Jackson and Capt. Louden vice presidents, and Col. R. Litsinger and Major R. M. Birkman, secretaries. Then the reunion services proper were gone through with, which consisted first—Oration of the day, by Captain George W. Fleeger. This was truly a grand, noble, patriotic and flowery outburst of a gallant soldier, recounting the scenes and actions of the days agone, when the dark clouds of rebellion, blood and carnage were upon us. Captain Fleeger acquitted himself nobly in this effort, and was continually interrupted with storms of applause.

History of the 11th reserves, Col. Robert McCoy. As the hour fixed for banqueting had now almost approached, Col. McCoy was compelled to pass by page after page of his history, which called forth a motion to have the same published for the benefit of the survivors of the 11th, which was unanimously carried. This, we understand, will be done in a very short space of time.

Then Col Danks favored the boys, after repeated calls, with a song, which was rapturously received. The meeting then adjourned, and the procession was again formed in front of the court house, when, headed by the Altoona city band, they wended their way to the normal school, where the banquet was prepared for them by the ladies of Indiana.

The scene on reaching the normal grounds was really a beautiful one. Chinese lanterns lit up the long walks from the entrance gate fronting Second street to the steps of the building, and as the wind swayed the variegated lamps to and fro, the whole aspect was one of enchantment, and gave token of the good cheer within.

When the doors of the spacious dining room of the Normal school were thrown open, what a sight greeted the eyes of the gallant boys. The many gas jets, sparkling Chinese lights everywhere, handsome festoons dropping down in beautiful confusion over the well filled tables, flags, the names of all the engagements of importance which the regiment participated in placed along the walls—boquets, large ones, on all the tables—and charming ladies to attend the wants of the hungry humanity gathered there.

Indeed, the normal dining hall presented an appearance of enchantment on this memorable evening of the first reunion to the 11th reserves, and gazing around upon everything, one recalled to mind all the fairy tales and places of enchantment read of in early childhood.

The banquet set by the fair ladies of Indiana was superb, and they are certainly deserving of all praise for the manner they got up and managed this affair. We had intended printing the menu, but when we came to putting it together, we found we would have to take up the space of about a column alone, in this line. We will only say, therefore, that everything necessary to satisfy the wants of the inner man was there—not forgetting E. E. Allen's box of genuine hard tack, which was generously distributed all around the different tables. The ladies vied with each other in their attentions to the old soldiers and visiting comrades, and we will just here insert a remark we heard let drop from the lips of an old battle-scarred veteran—"that they had the darndest, (the old soldiers never—well, hardly ever swear, you know) finest, good looking and best hearted set of ladies in Indiana that he had ever seen or ran across." And "them's our sentiments, too," as the boys say.

After all had partaken heartily of the royal feast, the finishing point of the reunion ceremonies was gone through with by the following toasts being proposed and answered in the following order:

"Our Old Regiment"—Responded to by Col. S. M. Jackson, of Apollo, in a few well chosen and patriotic remarks.

"Our Regiment's Friends"—Responded to by Sheriff J. R. Smith, very feelingly and appropriately.

"The Pennsylvania Reserves"—Rev. J. Day Brownlee, of the 8th reserves, responded to this. Well, you all know the gentleman, and can form an idea of what he had to say, and he said it so nicely and feelingly, too.

Then Rev. Col. Danks, being vociferously called upon, recited the "Superiority of the Blue," and sang that glorious old song—"Glory Hallelujah," the audience all joining in the chorus.

"Our Educational Institutions, and especially the Normal School at Indiana"—Dr. French, of the normal. The Doctor made an elegant response, and was handsomely applauded on his conclusion.

"Our Dead Comrades"—Dirge, by the Altoona City Band.

"The Ministry of Peace"—Rev. Theo. Henderson, of Brookville. This was a very fine effort, and the speaker was greeted with great applause.

"The Press"—Responded to by M. J. Shannon.

"Our Comrades of the Army of the Potomac"—Col. Chill Hazzard. This was the gem of the evening—brim full of wit, spice and story. The Colonel made several "happy hits," and was roundly applauded when he concluded.

"To the ladies"—Response by Col. Robert McCoy. The Colonel paid a handsome tribute to the female sex, and concluded neatly by giving the ladies, who were instrumental in getting up the banquet and so handsomely entertaining the boys of the 11th, a very nice "send off."

Then the Altoona city band favored the audience with another choice selection, and the first reunion of the 11th Pennsylvania reserves was concluded.

This reunion will long be talked of in Indiana and immediate vicinity, and that our good people here will always cherish kind remembrances of the gallant old 11th regiment, and the 25th of September, 1879, the boys may be sure to count upon.

The members of the various committees of the reserves, notably the executive committee—Col. D. S. Porter, Maj. R. M. Birkman and Capt. H. K. Sloan—and the citizens' committee and our ladies, worked like beavers to make this reunion a success, which it was in every particular. Any one acquainted with the patriotism, spirit, enterprise and good will of the ladies of our place, knows that whatever they undertake proves successful, and in this affair they added new laurels to their already famous endeavors.

He who would cavil or find fault at any little omissions, or think they were not honored in an especial manner more than any one else, considering the arduous task devolving upon all of them in an affair of this kind, and the consequent hurry and bustle and worry of the committees, is not worthy of the name of a good citizen. It was impossible to entertain everyone, to extend invitations to all, and the good sense of our people understands all this.

We think, on the whole, Indiana can be proud of her first reunion, and we know the old vets. say it was boss, and that is all we care of knowing, so they were pleased.

That God, in His infinite mercy, may bless us all, unite us more closely together in peace and unity, and ever keep alive the fire of patriotism and love of country in us, is the heartfelt prayer of the editor of the Blade.

Below we give a list of the members of the organization present on Monday:

Company A.—Major Robert Litzinger, commanding. Thos. Jones, Thompson Carney, Dallas Patrick, John Scanlan, William Sechler, Benjamin Davis, Edgar Evans, Phillip Smyers, John Shoff, William Wagner, Thomas Dunn, Phillip Jones, John Maken, William Miller, Col. Robert Litzinger. This gentleman was the first captain of company A; was afterward captain of company C, and retired from service with the rank of major.

Company B.—Captain H. K. Sloan, commanding. Col. D. S. Porter, Edward Chesley, Samuel Shick, J. G. McCurdy, John Wagoner, James Stephens, John L. Hall, Uriah Sheffler, Harry Coleman, T. M. Coleman, B. F. Laughlin, Henry Prothero, Geo. Stewart, William Cummins, H. C. Howard, E. E. Allen, Thos. Hood, James W. Howearth, John Devlin, James Devlin, G. A. McClain, Rev. Theo. Henderson, Johnston Davis, E. J. Devinny, Chas. Shambaugh, Harry Conner, William Hill, John T. Gibson, Dr. J. J. Oatman, W. T. Kinter.

Company C.—Captain Samuel Louden, commanding. Capt. G. W. Fleeger, Lieut. John H. Sutton, John T. Kelly, M. Heckert, Geo. A. Black, Samuel Cook, J. W. Campbell, John H. Meeder, J. S. Campbell, Robert Krause, Samuel Miller, F. H. Monie, D. H. Russell, Thos. P. Lardin, George Rothmire, S. P. Shryock.

Company D—Lieutenant Wm. C. Coleman commanding. Jas. McClelland, Alex. Kennedy, James K. Moore, D. McDonald, J. B. Hazlett, S. T. Hazlett, E. Nixon, J. G. Devinney, D. W. Graham, G. W. Huselton, Joseph Robertson, L. W. Graham.

Company E—R. M. Birkman commanding. W. H. H. Lyons, John Uncapher, Robert Carroll, Wm. Conner, Thompson Cramer, Gillis Dunlap, John Ewing, Joseph Elder, Samuel Garris, Jacob Kimple, J. S. Moorhead, A. W. McCullough, Nelson McCormick, Jas. Meanor, Geo. Miller, John Rugh, Daniel Spires, James Simpson, J. W. Smith.

Company F—Lieut. W. F. Springer commanding. G. W. Kerner, T. B. Whaley, Jacob Prettyman, Joseph Marshall.

Company H—Capt. L. Johnston commanding. J. A. Fulton, M. C. Cauders, Jacob Earnest, Daniel Carr, Adam Huff, Mariam Carnahan, Samuel Crawford, John Emmitt.

Company I—Capt. E. Waugaman commanding. Lieutenant D. Berry, Lieutenant J. D. Walkinshaw, David Jenkins, Rob't Hammond, Jas. Robertson, Wm. McRobinson, J. A. Hendricks, Samuel Stogdon, Wm. Wagle, Daniel Harkins, Wm. Pike, C. Hashman, C. Eakman, T. C. Layton, Wm. Hosack, C. Cunningham, Thos. Graham, Geo. McCormick, Israel Watterman.

Company K—Benj. McClelland, P. A. Foster, J. P. Miller, E. Birk, John Ingle, Wm. Knapp.

Band—Sergeant Major Wm. Hughes commanding. Robert Davis, —— Smith, Alex. Wagle, J. B. Hunter, Jas. Daugherty.

MEETING OF THE OLD SETTLERS, JUNE 1ST, 1880.

[From a special to the Commercial-Gazette.]

This was a red letter day in this place. Early yesterday the citizens were surprised at the sound of delightful music from a brass band, and on looking out a band wagon with four horses was observed passing. A transparency bore the following: "We welcome the Pioneers to Coliforgie—Graff's band, of Marchand." After discoursing some excellent music, they drove up to the court house, where the old residents of Indiana county were registering their names prior to the meeting in the Presbyterian church fixed for two P. M. It was evident from the throng on the streets that the old folks throughout the county had responded to the call in vast numbers. At the appointed hour the church was densely packed with a venerable and dignified audience. The committee of arrangements had decorated the walls and the pulpits with the portraits of the early settlers of the county, and with a profusion of wreaths, boquets and potted flowers. To the right of the pulpit the brass band had a position and discoursed tunes of the olden times. The meeting was called to order by A. W. Taylor, Esq., who announced the vice presidents and secretaries. The chair called on the venerable Rev. David Blair, D. D., now ninety-four years of age, to lead in prayer. He then delivered an address of welcome, which was happily conceived in word and spirit. Rev. Dr. Hill, of Blairsville, responded in fitting terms—thanked God that so many of the fathers and mothers were yet spared to meet with them. His speech abounded with incidents of the history of the pioneers of this county. He spoke of the high state of morals and the decline of intemperance. At the close of his address, the chair requested the choir and audience to sing the 100th Psalm.

Rev. Dr. Donaldson, of Elders' Ridge, said that Robert Harbison, an elder of his church, could tell more of Indiana county than all others put together. He paid a glowing tribute to the farmer, saying that his occupation was most honorable. A. T. Moorehead, Major Nesbit and Joseph R. Smith came before the audience and sang the 23d Psalm in the manner of the olden time. Major Nesbitt gave his recollections of the privations of the early settlers, after which the meeting adjourned till 7:30.

The chair, on calling the meeting to order, said he learned that W. M. Gormly, of your city, and secretary of the "Old Residents' Association," was present, and invited him to come forward and address the meeting. On taking the stand Mr. Gormley extended the greetings of his association to the old residents of Indiana county, and assured them of the cordiality of sentiment of the Pittsburgh association. He then spoke at length of the operations and benefits of such organization in rescuing valuable history that would otherwise be lost. Interesting addresses were made by John Graff, of Blairsville, and Aaron Work. The meeting then adjourned after the benediction until 8:30 A. M. Wednesday, when it opened with prayer. An address was delivered by Thompson Hays. At the close of this speech five venerable gentlemen came forward and gave an exhibition of an old time singing school, with the old music books with patent or buckwheat notes, under the direction of Major Nesbitt, who sounded the key note and called out to his class, "sing." One old lady in the audience was affected to tears. The audience enjoyed it heartily. Thompson Moorehead read a paper on the early settlement of Indiana. Mr. McFarland spoke of his trials and that of his father and family when the country was a wilderness. On motion a permanent organization was effected and the following officers were then elected to serve the ensuing year:

President, A. W. Taylor; Vice Presidents, John Graff, A. T. Moorehead, Wm. Hamill, Joseph R. Smith, Lysander Barrett; Recording Secretary, H. A. Thompson; Corresponding Secretary, A. W. Kimmell; Treasurer, Peter Sutton.

On motion, the officers were constituted an executive committee. It was resolved that the organization be known as the "Indiana County Historical Society," and the meeting closed with the benediction. Capt. C. T. Arms has a corps of canvassers in this county securing data for an historical volume of Indiana county, all of which will be very opportune for the society. Over one hundred and fifty registered at the meeting whose ages were 70 years and upwards.

LIST OF PERSONS REGISTERED.

Daniel McFarland, Wm. Hoffman, Michael Garman, Wm. Johnston, Conrad Silvis, Wm. McMillen, James Johnston, John Byers, Codington Davis, Jacob Clingenberger, Jas. Moorhead, Lewis Snyder, Lysander Barrett, Daniel Munshower, H. A. Thompson, John Bruce, E. Robinson, John Mullen, Keziah Coal, Ann Mullen, John Aurentz, Christian Ortz, David Myers, Geo. Myers, Jacob Stump, James Saltsgiver, John Armstrong, Jacob Hill, Jacob Wyman, Samuel Robinson, Elizabeth Fleming, Rachel Bast, Alex. Graham, Samuel Highlands, Isaac Kinter, William Shankle, Abraham Dale, T. R. Luckhart, John Pilson, John Adair, James Lydick, John Gourley, Thos. Adams, Patrick Lydick, Ann E. Weir, Mary R. Moritz, (Thomas McKee, James Winslow, James Pantle, Isaac P. Carmalt, present residence, Jefferson county,) James Bailey, Geo. Beck, James Miller, George Whitesell, J. Y. McCartney, Mrs. Susanna Craig, James Lydick, Robert McFarland, Christopher Stuchell, Henry Faith, William Richardson, Thomas Price, Aaron Work, Elizabeth Faith, Elizabeth Brady, William Lydick, Patrick Lydick, T. W. Stephens, John Price, Mary M. Fair, George Reed, Monton Nibert, James McLain, John Daugherty, James M. Robinson, John Clawson, Michael Job, George Row, Daniel Wilson, Matthew Wilson, Henry Barnes, Mary C. Brown, William Hanna, Wm. B. Sutor, Wm. W. Laney, John Duncan, Samuel Good, John Fleming, Robert G. Hamil, James Hamil, Thomas Stuart, Jacob Weamer, James Kerr, Matthew Cresswell, David Spencer, George Kurtz, R. R. Shirley, Edward Nixon, Joseph Clingenberger, James J. Beatty, N. C. Coleman, Peter Kelly, John Magee, Samuel Stewart, Andrew Campbell, Lucinda Clawson, Thomas McGaughey, Aaron D. Tiger, Benjamin Walker, Robert Wiggins, Jacob S. Wissinger, John Lucas, Fred. Defenbaugh, John Henry, James Clark, Thompson Hays, Marroby Hays, Jacob Clark, Nathaniel Nesbit, Andrew Morrow, Isaac Hicks, Col. W. Moorhead (formerly of Indiana, but for some years past a resident of Pittsburgh), A. W. Moore, N. P. Turner, Alex. Fulton, Mary Bryan, James Lydick, Jos. Thompson, Thomas Watson, Margaret Walkinshaw, Rev. David Blair, Mary Rice, Eleanor Gibson, John Graff, Alex. Sutor, Jane Sutor, Maria C. Row, Dr. Marshall (of Blairsville), Rev. Dr. George Hill, Rev. D. Donaldson, John Graff, Dr. Robert Marshall, W. H. Blair, John Robertson, James McCreery, Samuel Elder, Joseph Anderson, John Prothero.

THE PATENT OF THE TRACT WHICH INCLUDES THE CONRAD RICE FARM—DEED FROM REV. JOHN SMITH TO CONRAD RICE.

[PATENT.]

THOMAS PENN AND JOHN PENN, Esqrs.

True and Absolute Proprietaries and Governors in Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania, and Counties of New Castle, Kent and Sussex upon Delaware, To all unto whom these Presents shall come, GREETING: Whereas in pursuance of a—dated the tenth day of December 1773 There was surveyed for John Smith a certain Tract of land called "Colforgie"—situate on the East Branch of Stoney run on each side of the Path leading from Frankstown to Kittaning including the Improvement made by Joseph McCartney in Westmoreland County Beginning at a marked white oak a corner of Tonas Galls land thence by the same and John Becks East two hundred & thirteen perches to a marked poplar thence by David Williamsons land south one hundred and sixty-three perches to a post thence by the land of James McClean West three hundred and Nineteen perches to a post and North one hundred perches to a marked white oak thence by William Browns land East one hundred and six perches to a marked Black oak and North sixty-three perches to the place of Beginning Containing two hundred and sixty-seven acres and a quarter and allowance of six acres per cent for Roads &c. Now at the Instance and Request of the said John Smith that we would be pleased to grant him a Confirmation of the same. Know Ye, that, in Consideration of the sum of Thirteen pounds seven shillings & three pence sterling in Lawful Money of Pennsylvania to our Use, paid by the said John Smith (the Receipt whereof we hereby acknowledge, and thereof do acquit and forever discharge the said John Smith—his heirs and Assigns by these presents) and of the yearly Quit Rent herein after mentioned and reserved. We Have given, granted, released and confirmed and by these Presents, for us our Heirs and successors, do give, grant, release and confirm unto the said John Smith—his Heirs, and Assigns, the said two hundred and sixty-seven acres & a quarter of Land as the same are now set forth, bounded and limited as aforesaid; With all Mines, Minerals, Quarries, Meadows, Marshes, Savannahs, Swamps, Cripples, Woods, Under-woods, Timber and Trees, Ways, Waters, Water-courses, Liberties, Profits, Commodities, Advantages, Hereditaments, and Appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining and lying within the Bounds and Limits aforesaid [Three full and clear fifth Parts of all Royal Mines, free from all Deductions and Reprisals for digging and refining the same; and also the one fifth Part of the Ore of all other Mines, delivered at the Pits Mouth only excepted, and hereby reserved] and also free Leave, Right, and Liberty to and for the said John Smith, his Heirs and Assigns, to hawk, hunt, fish and fowl, in and upon the hereby granted Land and Premises, or upon any Part thereof: TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the said Tract of Land and Premises hereby granted (except as before excepted) with their Appurtnances unto the said John Smith his Heirs and Assigns, to the only Use and Behoof of the said John Smith his Heirs and Assigns for ever. TO BE HOLDEN of us, our Heirs and Successors, Proprietaries of Pennsylvania, as of our Manor of Pittsburgh, in the County of Westmoreland aforesaid, in free and common Socage by Fealty only, in lieu of all other services, YIELDING AND PAYING there fore yearly unto us, our Heirs and Successors, at the Town of Pittsburgh in the said county, at or upon the first Day of March in every year, from the first Day of March last One penny Sterling, for every Acre of the same, or value thereof in Coin-Current, according as the Exchange shall then be between our said Province and the, City of London, to such Person or Persons as shall, from time to time, be appointed to receive the same. AND in case of Non-payment thereof, within ninety days next, after the same shall become due, that then it shall and may be lawful for us, our Heirs and Successors, our and their Receiver or Receivers, into and upon the hereby granted Land and Premises to re-enter, and the same to hold and possess, until the said Quit Rent and all the Arrears thereof, together with the Charges, accruing by means of such Non-Payment and Re-Entry be fully payed and discharged. WITNESS the said John Penn Governor of the said Province who as well in his own Right, as by Virtue of certain Powers and Authorities to him for this Purpose, Inter alia, granted by the said Thomas Penn hath hereunto set his hand and caused the Great Seal of the said Province to be hereunto affixed, in Philadelphia this Sixth Day of May in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Seventy five & in y^e^ 15th Year of the Reign of King George y^e^ Third over Great Britain, &c.

JOHN PENN.

Inrolled in the Rolls office for the Province of Pennsylvania in Patent
[SEAL] Book A. A Vol. 15 page 486.
Witness my Hand and Seal of office the 31st May 1775 Will. Parre, Rec'd.

Copied from the original "patent" or deed this 21st day of January, 1880. The spelling, punctuation, omissions, quotation marks and capitalization are all given, verbatim et literatim. The original is printed and written upon parchment, and is in a good state of preservation. In addition to the seal of the recorder attesting the enrollment, the large seal of the province is attached to the lower margin by a ribbon, after the fashion of sealing legal documents at that time. The reservation of "quit-rents," "royal mines," the holding "in free and common socage," &c., show that nearly all the clogs of the feudal system of tenures were fastened upon the soil of this State, and had they not been swept away by the Revolution our farmers, instead of being the absolute owners of the soil, would only be tenants to a landed aristocracy, and their condition would not be much better than that of the peasantry of Europe.

W. L. STEWART.

DEED.

This Indenture, made the first day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, between the Reverend John Smith of Bart Township Lancaster County and State of Penna. and Anna his wife of the one part, Conrad Rice of the same place Blacksmith, of the other part. Witnesseth that the said John Smith and Anna his wife for and in consideration of the sum of One Hundred and fifty pounds in gold or silver Penn. Currency to them or some of them in hand well and truly paid by the said Conrad Rice at and before the execution hereof, the receipt and payment whereof they and each of them do hereby acknowledge and thereof do acquit Release and forever Discharge the said Conrad Rice his heirs executors adm's and assigns by these Presents Have and each of them hath, Granted Bargained sold aliend enfeoffd Released and Confirmd and by these presents do and Each of them doth, Grant Bargain Sell Alien Enfeoff Release and Confirm unto the sd. Conrad Rice his heirs & assigns, all that Certain Plantation & tract of Land Situate and Being on the East Branch Stony run on each side of the path Leading from Frankstown to the Kittaning including the Improvement made by Joseph McCartney in Westmoreland County, Called, Colforgie—Begining at a marked white oak. A Corner of Jonas Galls Land thence by the same & John Peecks east two Hundred & thirteen perches to a marked Poplar thence by David Williamsons Land South one Hundred and sixty three perches to a post thence by the Land of James McClean West three Hundred and Nineteen perches to a post and North one Hundred perches to a marked white oak thence by William Browns Land East one Hundred & Six perches to a marked Black oak and North Sixty three perches to the Place of Beginning Containing two Hundred & Sixty Seven Acres & A Quarter & Allowance of Six Acres p'Cent for roads &c it being A tract of Land which the Honourable the proprietaries Thomas penn & John Penn Esqs of the province of Penna. by their patent or grant Dated the tenth day of December 1773 Granted & Conveyed unto John Smith in fee Simple Containing two Hundred & Sixty Seven Acres and a Quarter & Allowance of Six p Cent for Roads &c as by the sd. recited patent or Grant Recorded at Philadelphia. in patent Book A A vol. 15 page 486 Inrold 31st of May 1775; to which Refferance being had may appear, and we the sd. John Smith & Anna Smith do Sell Release Alien Enfeoff and Convey for us our heirs executors & assigns to the affores'd Conrad Rice, his heirs excrs, & assigns all & singular the Houses the out houses thereon erected all ways waters water courses woods Under wood trees fences gardens Orchards Leiberties priviledges, Advantages Hereditaments appurtenances whatsoever thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining & the Reversion & Revertions Remainder & Remainders rents Issues priviledges rents Issues & profits thereof. and also all the Estates right & title Interest, use trust property Possession Claim & Demand Whatsoever of them the said John Smith & Ann his wife & each & every of them at Law and in Equity or otherwise however of in to and of the same premises and every or any part thereof to have & to hold the sd. Describ'd plantation & tract of land Containing two Hundred and Sixty Seven Acres and a Quarter with allowance as afores'd hereditements & premises hereby Granted & Releas'd or mention'd or intended so to be with their rights members & appurtances unto the s'd Conrod Rice his heirs and assigns, to the only proper use Benefit & behoof of the s'd Conrod Rice his heirs and assigns forever. And the said John Smith & Ann his wife to hereby grant for themselves & their heirs that they the s'd John Smith and his heirs the s'd Describ'd plantation & tract of land hereditements & premises hereby granted & Released (or mention'd or intended so to be; with the appurtainences unto the s'd Conrod Rice his heirs & assigns against them the said John Smith & Ann his wife and their heirs & against all & every other person & persons whomsoever Lawfully claiming or to claim the same premises or any part thereof by from or under him them or any of them or any or Either of them Shall & will warrant & for ever defend by these presents and the s'd John Smith & Ann his wife for themselves and for their heirs Ex'rs & Adm'rs do Covenant promise and grant to and with the said Conrod Rice his heirs & assigns by these presents that they the s'd John Smith & Ann his wife & their heirs & all & every other person & persons whomsoever now having & Lawfully claiming or hereafter to have & Lawfully claim any Estate right title or Intrest whatsoever of in to or out of ye s'd Described plantation & tract of land and premises with the appurtances or any part thereof by from or under him them or any of them Shall & will from time to time and at all times hereafter upon the request & at the proper costs & Charges in law of the s'd Conrod Rice his heirs or assigns make do Execute & Acknowledge or cause & procure to be made done Executed & Acknowledged all and every such further & lawfull & Reasonable act & acts deed & Deeds Conveyances & assurances in the Law Whatsoever for the further Better more sure perfect & absolute Granting Conveying Assureing & Confirming the said Describ'd plantation and tract of land hereditements & premises hereby granted and Releas'd (or mentioned or Intended so to be) with the appurtainences unto the said Conrod Rice his heirs and assigns forever as by him or them or his or their Council Learn'd in Law shall be Lawfully and Reasonably advis'd or Devis'd and requir'd. In Witness Whereof the said parties to these presents their hands & seals have hereunto interchangeably set—

Sealed & Delivered in Presence of Martin Eckman Andrew Work } John Smith [Seal] Anna Smith [Seal]

Receiv'd on the day of the date of the above Indenture of and from the said Conrod Rice the full sum of One Hundred & fifty Pounds Specie of Penna. Being in full of the purchase money therein Specified as Witness my hand ——— ——John Smith.

Being present at Signing Andrew Work John Johnston }

Lancaster County to Wit Before me one of the Justices of the peace for said County Personally Appeard John Smith and Anna his Wife, the Grantors and acknowledg'd to the above & foregoing Indenture as their act and Deed and Desired that the same might be Recorded as such. She the said Anna Being of full age, and by me Seperate and apart from her said Husband Examind Declares that she did voluntarily and freely Without Coercion, Compulsion or Over persuasion of her said Husband Sign Seal and Deliver the Said Instrument of Writing, In Testimony whereof I have Hereunto set my hand and seal this

Andrew Work [Seal]

pennsylvania
Second district ss.

Before me John Joseph Henry esquire president of the courts of common pleas in and for the said second district of pennsylvania personally came John Johnston esquire who being duly sworn according to law doth depose & say that he knows the hand writing of John Smith above named & of Anna his wife & also of Andrew Work esquire one of the above witnesses and that he believes the names John Smith & Anna Smith are the proper hand writing of John Smith & Anna Smith the grantors and that the name Andrew Work subscribed as a witness is the proper hand writing of Andrew Work esquire & further deponent saith not. John Johnston.

Jn Jos Henry

Sworn & subscribed before me the 9th day of February 1796 }

Westmoreland County ss.

Entered in the office for Recording of Deeds in & for said County in Book No 2 page 368 & In Testimony of which I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said office this 22d Day of April A. D. 796

[Seal]

James Guthrie Record.

Copied from the original this 22d day of January, 1880. The spelling, capitalizing, &c., is given exactly as in the original, which is written upon parchment and is in a good state of preservation, the ink being but little faded. This instrument is indented, i. e., the upper edge or margin is cut into irregular points, somewhat like the teeth of a huge saw. Each party to a deed of this kind was furnished with a copy, and these irregularities or indentures corresponded in the different copies of the same instrument. "Formerly, when deeds were more concise, it was usual to write both parts on the same piece of parchment, with some word or letters of the alphabet written between them, through which the parchment was cut, either in a straight or indented line, in such a manner as to leave half the word on one part and half on the other."

W. L. Stewart.

CHAPTER LV.

THE BOROUGHS.

INDIANA.

Conrad Rice, the elder,* was a resident of Lancaster county, and a blacksmith by occupation. Being desirous of securing some land for agricultural purposes, west of the mountains, he purchased from a clergyman in the neighborhood named Smith, the right to one hundred and sixty acres, represented to be situated nine miles from Greensburg, at ten shillings per acre. In the spring of 1794, Rice and part of his family took their leave of Lancaster county, intending to make some improvements on their property during the summer, and return for the rest of the family in the ensuing autumn.

They brought with them a team, some farming implements, and a set of blacksmith tools. Having proceeded as far as "Nine-mile run," near the present village of Youngstown, Westmoreland county, they halted and began to search for the land described in the deed from Smith. Hon. William Findley, after careful examination, discovered that the land was situated near Two-lick creek, and advised Rice to look for it in that direction.

After a tedious search of several days, it was ascertained that the land embracing what was afterward the James P. Carter farm, adjoining the borough of Indiana, was that which Rice had purchased, and after tracing out the lines and taking a hasty view of the location, Rice commenced retracing his steps, with the intention of bringing on his family and team from Youngstown, and of proceeding at once to the erection of a cabin.

There were then no roads on this side of the Conemaugh river, and Rice returned to Campbell's mill, on Black-lick creek, by the same path that had guided him hither.

On arriving there, he met Captain Andrew Sharp, who was just about untying his boat, and starting on that disastrious trip described in another chapter. From the information he obtained, Rice deemed it unsafe to bring on his family immediately, and therefore removed with them to Ligonier valley, opposite the present village of Centreville, where they continued until the ensuing spring, the members who had been left in Lancaster county, having in the mean time rejoined them.

In the spring of 1795, Rice removed here and immediately commenced work. A temporary shelter was erected by setting up wooden forks, and crossing them with poles which were overlaid with bark to serve as a roof. About eight acres of land had been cleared some years before and a cabin built, but the occupants had been driven off by the Indians, and the cabin burned.

During the summer, a new cabin, 22x24 feet was erected, and some ground was cleared, but Rice's horses, four in number, dying, no fall grain was sown. In the early part of the winter, a yoke of oxen was purchased, and trained for plowing in the spring. A blacksmith shop was early erected, and the settlers all around came here to have their work done. A Mr. Barnett came even all the way from Port Barnett, (near the present site of Brookville, Jefferson county), having employed an Indian guide to point out to him the path, and bring him to Rice's. Small parties of Indians frequently passed the smith shop, going to or returning from Ligonier or Greensburg.

The country around the site of Indiana, was then thinly settled. On the farm now occupied by Gen. Harry White, was a small improvement, occupied by Timothy O'Neil. George Trimble, lived on what was subsequently the Stenard farm. The McLain farm had been improved by Gawin Adams. Fergus Moorhead lived on the Isaac Moorhead farm. Thomas Allison had made a small improvement on what was afterwards the Robert Allison property, on the Blairsville road. What was lately the Alexander Barclay land, had been opened out by James Kelly, and James Thompson was residing on the Clark B. Thompson property.

*Jonathan Row. Indiana Register.

Rice was never molested by the Indians, though small parties of them often prowled about the neighborhood. Each spring, for a number of years, he and his family went to the Crooked creek valley, to make maple sugar, where was one of the Indians' favorite hunting grounds, but met with no oppoition from them probably because the hunting season was then always over.

A party of Indians had one fall been very successful in hunting in this valley, and at the close of the season, hung up the stock of skins and venison that had been secured, to the limbs of the trees, beyond the reach of carniverous animals, intending to return for it in the course of the winter. Some white men strolling through the valley, discovered this valuable store of peltry and provisions, and not having the fear of the Indians before their eyes carried it off. The owners were of the Seneca tribe, whose great chief, the celebrated Cornplanter, was at that time, on friendly terms with the Governor of Pennsylvania. Having discovered the offenders, the injured party sought redress with the civil tribunal, and had them arrested, and tried in the "Quarter Sessions," at Greensburg, where they were convicted of the offense and sentenced to imprisoment.

Among the curious and exciting adventures that occurred was the following. Conrad Rice, the elder, was assisted in his shop by his two sons, Conrad and Philip, and also sometimes by a young man whom he had hired. The coal used in blacksmithing was brought from a bank on Two-lick, above what was afterwards known as McLain's mill. Philip and the young man above mentioned, one day went with two horses and a wagon to the bank for coal, the former carrying the rifle and the latter driving the team.

Having secured their load, Philip told his companion to proceed homeward with the team, whilst he would make a circuit through the woods, in search of game. He had gone but a short distance, when he espied a large buck near the creek. Raising his rifle and drawing a quick sight, he fired, severely wounding the game, which, however, ran up the hill, the blood streaming from the wound he had received. Philip quickly reloaded his rifle and pursued in the direction the buck had taken. Before he had gotten half way up the hill, he saw the buck returning toward him, at full speed, closely followed by an enormous black bear.

So intent was the one upon escape, and so bent the other upon success, that the two animals ran close to where Philip was standing, without perceiving him. Then Bruin seized the antlered veteran, and began to "pitch in," handling his huge paws with the dexterity of an accomplished boxer, when a well directed ball from Philip's rifle laid him sprawling beside his intended victim. The buck thus relieved gathered himself up and ran a short distance further down the hill, where he was finally dispatched. The two carcasses were now dragged to the wagon and placed on the load of coal, the driver having stopped his team on hearing the first report of Philip's rifle.

The dwelling house yet standing on the Carter farm was erected by the elder Rice in 1809, and his son Conrad brought the nails used in the building, from Water street, on the Juniata, now included in Huntingdon county.

THE SITE OF INDIANA.

The site of Indiana* was originally covered with a dense growth of scrubby oak, with here and there a cluster of hazel bushes, among which the fox and the catamount would conceal themselves from observation by day, and await the approach of night, when they would steal forth under its shades and commit extensive depredations. Here the bear made its lair, and the wolf dwelt in safety. The deer, disregarding the dwarfy oaks, skipped along at pleasure, and beneath their spreading branches, the hare gamboled unmolested. In the hollow of some solitary tree, the owl made her home, and from its leafless bough the hawk viewed the surrounding landscape.

It was a solitary spot, where even the rude son of the forest had not deigned to build his wigwam. But the time had arrived when the aspect was to be changed. A band of bold adventurers penetrated into the heart of the unbroken wild, and reared here the standard of civilization. Their progress was slow at first. Inconviences had to be suffered, dangers met, and difficulties overcome. Cut off from the great thoroughfares of the state, with a sparsely settled district of country around them, and remote from mills, factories, markets, and institutions of learning, their situation would not have been envied by men accustomed to live at ease, and less calculated for emergencies such as had daily to be encountered. Our village pioneers were in all respects equal to the task before them. They possessed resolute hearts and strong arms, and were deeply imbued with that spirit of enterprise which is one of the leading characteristics of the pioneer American. When Henry Shryock moved here with his family, there was no public road between the site of Indiana and Campbell's mills. Some of the settlers had opened a passage for wagons part of the way, beyond which it was difficult to proceed, and the progress of Shryock's team was necessarily slow. A public road was located from Indiana, in the direction of what was afterward Blairsville, in the ensuing summer, and opened out in the fall of 180 .

Leonard Shryock, then a mere lad, often spoke of the appearance of the "town" and its surroundings at the time of their arrival. His father drove the team to the high ground somewhere between the site of the Indiana house and the public buildings, and leaving the wagon, with the effects it contained, took the family to Conrad Rice's, where they remained several weeks, until their cabin, in what is now the southeast portion of the borough, was fitted to receive them. They resided there until the fall of 1805, by which time their domicil on Philadelphia street was completed. Removing his family and effects into the "new house," he opened out a tavern, entertaining strangers and selling the "ardent," the demand for the latter being very great.

Leonard, being the eldest son, was frequently sent into Greensburg, on horseback, to bring groceries and liquors, which were generally purhased from Simon Drum, then one of the principal merchants in that place. Shryock did a thriving business, and was soon compelled to enlarge his building, in order to accommodate his numerous customers. On the judicial organization of the county, the judges and lawyers generally boarded at his house, it being, at one time, regarded at home and abroad as the "fashionable headquarters of the town."

After several stores and mechanical callings were established, and there were all the evidences of a brisk trade, it must not be inferred that the site of the town was all cleared, for this was not fully accomplished till several years afterward. There are yet living pioneers who remember when the deer were still hovering around the place in large numbers. As an evidence of their boldness and indifference to the presence of man, Leonard Shryock used to relate that he saw at one time a dozen of various ages and sizes, pass in single file through the bushes over the rising ground where the residence of Silas M. Clark now stands. At another time, as he was hauling hay on a sled, in the winter, from a place several miles northeast of the village, his dogs started and ran down a large buck. The snow being deep and crusted, the buck broke through while the dogs kept on the surface. The pursued animal was caught near the sled, where Shryock finished him by means of a penknife, and then with the aid of a passer-by, placed the carcass on the load of hay and drove into town in triumph.

*Jonathan Row, in "Indiana Register," 1859.

Robert Coulter, coming here with his father in 1805, was as much disappointed as the man of earlier days, long celebrated in popular song as "Yankee Doodle, who could not see the town, because there were so many houses." Coulter's disappointment, however, was the reverse of his. He had been told that from the point where the residence of S. M. Clark is situated, he could have a full view of the town. His expectation was on tiptoe, and on arriving there and casting his eyes over the prospect spread before him, he saw long lines of stakes peering up through the bushes, designating the streets and alleys of the village that was to be, but the houses "were few and far between," and very unlike to what he had expected to see.

INDIANA.

By the act of 1803, providing for the organization of Indiana county for judicial purposes, William Jack, James Parr and John Pumroy were designated as trustees for the county and authorized to "receive proposals in writing from any person or persons for the granting and conveying of lands within a certain distance (four miles) from the centre of said county, for the purpose of erecting thereon the necessary public buildings."

The said trustees, "having received sundry propositions, after careful consideration, fixed upon the spot now occupied as the seat of justice, on condition that George Clymer should convey to the county two hundred and fifty acres of land, as proposed by him through his agent Alexander Craig."*†

Under an act passed the 25th day of March, 1805, "Charles Campbell, Randall Laughlin and John Wilson were appointed to survey two hundred and fifty acres of land, 'agreeably to the description given of the situation and boundary thereof, in a grant and obligation of Alexander Craig, for George Clymer, made by him to the Legislature for the county of Indiana,' and were further directed 'to lay out a lot not exceeding four acres, whereon the public buildings for Indiana county shall be erected, and the residue of said two hundred and fifty acres to be laid out into town lots and out lots, the proceeds arising from the sale thereof to be for the use and benefit of the county.'"

"In pursuance of said acts of assembly and of the arrangements entered into with the said George Clymer, the last named trustees caused two hundred and fifty acres of land to be surveyed out of a body of three thousand and fifty acres, then owned by Clymer; one hundred and thirty-four acres and twenty-two and six-tenths perches thereof, having been originally warranted in the name of John Beck; ninety-nine acres and sixty-nine perches in the name of James Gall; and sixteen acres and seventy-eight perches in the name of William Brown. All these were parts of larger tracts."

"On the 7th day of September, 1805, 'George Clymer, then of the city of Philadelphia, and Elizabeth his wife, in consideration of the promises and of the sum of five shillings, lawful money to them paid, did give, grant, and release and confirm to the said Charles Campbell, Randall Laughlin and John Wilson, their heirs and assigns, the aforesaid two hundred and fifty acres of land, in trust for the use of laying out a lot or lots whereon the public buildings for the county of Indiana shall be erected, and for laying out the remainder in town lots in the manner described by the said last mentioned act of assembly, and for the other uses and purposes contained in the same act.'"

The execution of the deed is attested by Ann Clymer and George Clymer, jr. The acknowledgement was taken on the 9th of September, 1805, by Thomas Smith, one of the judges of the Supreme Court of the state; and on the 25th of April, 1807, the deed was duly recorded in the proper office in this county.

An amusing error—which might have proved serious—was committed by the professional gentleman who had been employed to prepare the deed of conveyance from Clymer to the trustees. Taking the surveyor's draft as his guide, he went on to describe, by courses and distances, the tract of land intended to be conveyed; but the description given by him, happening to bear south from a certain point when the draft and survey bore north, all the other bearings were reversed, and the consequence was that the deed called for the land included in Rice's survey, instead of that owned by Clymer. The mistake was not discovered until the town lots had been laid off and deeds were being made to some of the purchasers. The town was all right on the ground, but all wrong according to the conveyance. Fortunately, Clymer's deed had not been recorded. It was therefore cancelled and a new one executed.

The trustees, having set apart the quantity of ground required for county buildings, laid off the residue of the tract into town lots and out lots, streets and alleys, the town lots numbering two hundred and twenty-five, and the out lots ninety-two.* †

Thomas Allison made the survey of the town. His son, Andrew Allison and James Allison carried the chain and placed the stakes, and James McLain assisted in keeping the notes. Along Church street they were obliged to cut a path through the thicket before running the line. By an entry on the books in the commissioners' office, it appears that Alexander Taylor also did some surveying. He probably laid off the out lots.

The sale of lots commenced on the 10th of December, 1805, by public outcry, and was continued on the 11th and 12th.

Another sale took place on the 29th and 30th of April, 1806, and a third on the 1st of July, 1807. The prices paid for lots ranged from $5.00 to $204.00. Some unsold lots were disposed of by the commissioners in 1809, and a small number of others were resold in 1812.

COUNTY JAIL.

The stone county jail was commenced in 1806, and completed in 1807; Rev. John Jamison was the contractor. The original draft was drawn by George Wier. The dimensions laid down are thirty-six feet by thirty; the lower story nine feet and the upper eight feet. James Mahan did the masonry, and Thomas Sutton the carpenter work. The court held its sittings in the

*"The fork of Two-lick and Yellow creeks, near the present site of Homer City, was a competitor for the honor of being the county seat. This site was not without its advantages, among which were its abundance of water, its water-power, and the near proximity of coal. But George Clymer, of Philadelphia, with a view of enhancing the value of his adjacent lands, offered the present site as a gift. This, with the beauty of the situation and the central position, turned the scales in its favor."—A. W. Taylor's address, 1876.

†Nov. 10, 1803, to Thomas Allison, Michael Campbell and Joseph McCartney, an order was issued for $230.40, for running the boundary line and ascertaining the centre of said county. —Commissioners' First Order Book.

*September 20, 1805. "To William Jack, James Parr and John Pumroy, Esqs., trustees of Indiana County, for their servis in laying out the seet of justice in and for said county, 36." (Commissioners' first order book.)

†"The main street, running east and west, was named "Philadelphia" street, in honor of the residence of George Clymer. He was further honored by naming the principal street, running north and south "Clymer" (now Sixth street). Originally the public grounds, where the court house stands, extended from Philadelphia street to Water street, and from Clymer street to Sutton alley, nearly three acres. The square upon which the Lutheran, Presbyterian and United Presbyterian churches stand, originally extended from Clymer street to Vine street, and from Church street to the southern limits of the town, embacing about two acres and a half. Unfortunately, many years ago building lots were sold off these public squares, to save the county a pittance of taxes; and thus was the beauty of the town marred and the comfort of the inhabitants impaired. This was worse than a crime—it was an unpardonable blunder. The proceeds of the sale of the town lots were applied to the erection of the county buildings, and thus the old court house (a most creditable building in its day) and the old jail were built without taxation, and without costing the people a farthing." (A. W. Taylor's address in 1876.)

upper jail rooms during several terms until the erection of the court house in 1808-9.*

Prior to the erection of this building, the sheriff, having some prisoners in charge, had a temporary jail constructed of hickory logs, the sides and floors being of the same material. The superstructure was about twenty feet square and was covered with clapboards. It stood on the public ground near the centre of the town. Conrad Rice assisted in hauling the logs for the "hickory jail."

For want of a more convenient and commodious building, the commissioners, during several years after the organization of the county, kept their office in the second story of Philip Rice's spring house, south of the town.

The first building† within the borough limits was erected near a fine spring by Henry Shryock, in the fall of 1805, and was the only building in the village at the sale of lots. It was a round log cabin and was situated about the centre of east Philadelphia street, between what was lately the J. J. Young lot on the north, and the Samuel Trimble lot on the south, about midway between fifth and fourth streets. It was kept as a public house during the first sale, and for several years following, two additions being made unto the first house. A little later, Samuel Young erected a cabin on Water street, on what was afterwards the Wm. H. Kerr lot, the logs of which were subsequently torn down and used in the construction of a house on Church street, afterwards owned by Thomas Rocket. About the same time, William Coulter erected a cabin, on what was afterwards called the "Crawford" lot, on Philadelphia street, and a few other rude houses were erected in the winter of 1805–6.

The first two houses of any importance, were the two-story hewed log, shingle roof tavern buildings of James Moorhead and Peter Sutton, erected in the spring of 1806. The former was located on the lot now occupied by Colonel D. T. Porter's residence, Philadelphia street, and the latter, on the site of the Wilson, Sutton & Co.'s store room, Philadelphia street.

The next building was the frame house of Sheriff Thomas McCartney, erected in 1806, on the present site of the Indiana house. There he made chairs and wheels, and subsequently kept a hotel. Afterwards, Charles Kenning built a public house on the John Denniston corner, now occupied by Loughry & Sutton. In 1807, James Moorhead built the log house on Philadelphia street, now occupied as a residence by Alexander T. Taylor.

In 1807, also, a building was erected for a carding machine, on Clymer, near Sixth street, this was afterwards used as a printing office, by James McCahan, and is now the residence of ex-sheriff, Joseph R. Smith.

The first man to sell goods, was Samuel Young, who, in 1806, had a small stock of goods in a log cabin, which was situated on the lot on Water street, afterwards occupied by John Magill's pottery. Mr. Young, before the founding of the village, had resided on the tract north of the place, now a part of the farm of Gen. Harry White.

The first regular merchant was John Denniston, in 1806. His store was a hewed log building, 16x18, which was situated on the lot on Philadelphia street, now occupied by the widow of John G. Coleman.

Later, and prior to 1810, were Robert Nixon, on what is now the bar-room in the west end of the "Kline House," and Thos. Sutton, on the lot now occupied by the widow of John Sutton.

The first blacksmith was Philip Rice, who resided on a farm adjacent to the village for several years, and whose shop, erected in 1806, was situated near the spring, not far from the residence of Silas M. Clark.

William W. Caldwell, opened in 1816, a blacksmith shop. The first wheel-right and chair maker was Thomas Mc-Cartney. James Campbell, was the first shoemaker prior to 1810. The first cabinet maker, was Samuel Douglass, who was the first jailer—he had his shop in the stone jail. After his death, his widow still retained the charge of the jail. She was succeeded by ——Ferguson.

Prior to 1810, the following were located in Indiana: Samuel Barr and John McAnulty, brickmakers—the latter made the brick for the first court house; John Ross and John Huey, carpenters; Wm. Lawson, the tanner, whose yard was situated on the southeast corner of Philadelphia and Fourth streets; David Gillespie, brick and stone mason; the latter's last work was the building of the brick house on Philadelphia street now occupied by Lawrence Keslar, jun.; John Lucas and William Lucas, tailors the former erected (1817 to 1819) the stone house on Philadelphia street now occupied by Hon. A. W. Taylor; the latter built the residence on the northeast corner of Philadelphia and Seventh streets; and William Douglass (a son of Samuel), watchmaker and clockmaker.

Jonathan French was the first physician, and James M. Riddle and Daniel Standard, who located here in 1807, were the first resident attorneys. The first located minister was Rev. John Galbraith, Presbyterian.

The first teacher was Henry Coleman, who taught in 1807 in a log house on Water street, now the property of Wm. Lewis. The scholars who attended this first school were, as well as can be remembered by A. T. Moorhead, sen.: Robert, Samuel and William Coulter, children of William Coulter; Polly Parks and A. T. Moorhead, of James Moorhead; Leonard, Parmelia, Ellen and one other daughter of Henry Shryock; James, Robert and Mary Young, of Samuel Young; Robert Barr, of Samuel Barr; and one or two children from the Peter Sutton family.

The first child born in the place was (1806) Sarah Parker, daughter of Joseph and Mary Parker nee Young. The second birth was that of William Moorhead, son of James Moorhead, born February 14, 1807, in the James Moorhead tavern.

The population at the close of 1806 was about fifty, and in 1810, about one hundred and twenty-five.

In 1819, when James Bailey arrived, the following persons conducted the business of the place: James Elliott, hotel-keeper in the McCartney frame building, on the site of the Indiana house; Charles Kenning, hotel-keeper in a log house on the site of the Laughry and Sutton storehouse; Leonard Shryock, hotel-keeper in the James Moorhead log house; John McAnulty, hotel-keeper in a log building on the northwest corner of Oak and Sixth streets, which was then opposite the northeast corner of the public square; William Shields, hotel-keeper in the Peter Sutton log house; John Denniston, merchant, in a frame building on the lot now occupied by the Deposit Bank; Robert Nixon and Thomas Sutton, merchants, in a two-story stone building, situated on the site of the Godfred Marshall and John Sutton lots on Philadelphia street. There were two warerooms—the former occupied the east, and the latter the west building.

The blacksmith and nail cutter was William W. Caldwell, on Water street, near the present residence of Judge Joseph Thompson. John St. Clair had a smith shop not far from the present livery stable of John Montgomery. The chairmaker was Joseph Thompson, (judge), and the wheelwright was Samuel Jamison. They were located in a two-story log building on Oak street, near McAnulty's hotel, one occupying the upper and the other the lower room.

The tanners were Abner Kelly, in a log building on the northeast corner of Philadelphia and Fourth streets, and Joshua

*"The Court House was built in 1808-9. John McNulty made the brick, John Matthews was the mason and bricklayer, and John Huey and John Ross were the carpenters The "Johns" bossed that job. Indiana was incorporated as a borough the 11th of March, 1816, John Taylor being the first burgess. Its growth has been gradual and substantial; its citizens generally thrifty. The present court house was completed in 1871 at a cost of $150,000. The population of the borough, including West Indiana, numbers about 3,000."—A. W. Taylor, 1876.

†A. T. Moorhead, sr.

Marlin, in a log building on the southwest corner of the same streets. The shoemaker was John Golden, in a log building on the present site of the Kinter house. The watchmaker and clockmaker was William Douglass. William Tinthoff was the painter. The carpenters were Alexander Stewart and Matthew Rankin. John Douglass was justice of the peace, and Samuel Douglass was the constable.

The attorneys were Daniel Stanard and James M. Kelly. Robert Mitchell and James M. Stewart were the physicians, and the ministry was represented by Rev. David Blair, Seceder, and Rev. John Reed, Presbyterian. There were no churches. The court house and a shed tent on the lot now occupied by the residence of Judge John P. Blair, were used for places of meetings on alternate Sabbaths.

The newspaper was The American, James McCahan editor and publisher. The sheet was "federal" in politics, though the county was democratic. The office was situated in the present residence of ex-sheriff J. R. Smith, on Sixth street.

The Indiana academy was taught by Rev. John Reed, aforenamed pastor, of the Presbyterian church.

The population was estimated at about two hundred. The houses were chiefly log structures, the only brick houses being those of James M. Kelly, now the residence of the widow of Judge White, Peter Sutton, on the lot now occupied by the I. O. O. F. hall, John Denniston, now occupied by Adler's clothing store, John Douglass, partly finished, now occupied by the Farmers' Bank, and Dr. Robert Mitchell, now occupied by Logan's grocery store.

[From the Pennsylvania Gazetteer, 1833.]

"Indiana post, borough and seat of justice, Indiana county, lat. 40° 38′ N., long. 2° 8′ W. from Washington City, distant about 157 miles W. of Harrisburg, 26 miles S. E. from Kittanning, and 35 N. E. from Greensburg.

"It lies on the line between Washington and Centre townships, and contains about sixty dwellings, a court house of brick, a prison of stone, commonly untenanted, eight stores, five taverns, one Lutheran, one Presbyterian, and one Seceder church, an academy of stone, 60x25, in which the languages and mathematics are taught, incorporated 28th March, 1816, and to which the state gave $2,000.

"The turnpike road from Ebensburg to Kittanning runs through the town. The town was laid out on a tract of 250 acres of land, granted for that purpose, by George Clymer, in 1805.

[From Harris' Directory, of 1837.]

INDIANA.

"Indiana, the seat of justice for Indiana county, is located on a beautiful plain, 15 miles nearly north of Blairsville, and 50 miles north of east of Pittsburgh. The county of Indiana is an agricultural one, having, beside the seat of justice, Blairsville, Armagh, Strongstown and Saltsburg in it.

Directory of Indiana.—Postmaster—James McKennan. Merchants—William Houston, Robert Nixon, Jonathan Ayres, John Patton, David Ralston, J. and J. Sutton, W. and J. Taylor. Druggists—Mitchell & Gettys, Woodroe Douglass. Attorneys at Law—Daniel Stanard, William Banks, John Myers, Augustus Drum, Joseph J. Young. Physicians—James M. Stanard, John Gettys, Robert Mitchell. Innkeepers—William Henry, William Clarke, Robert Nixon, W. W. Caldwell. Justices of the Peace—Fergus Cannon, Woodroe Douglass. Prothonotory—Thomas Laughlin. Register and Recorder—Woodroe Douglass. President Judge of the District—Hon. Thomas White.

THE EARLY HOTELS

Were in order: Henry Shryock, Peter Sutton, Jr., Jas. Moorhead, John McAnulty, Charles Kenning, Thomas McCartney, on the site of the Indiana house; Leonard Shryock, in the building now occupied by the "Farmers' Bank," erected by John Douglass, Peter Sutton, Jr., in what is now the "Kline House;" Chester O. Jones, in the Mitchell brick building on the site of the I. O. O. F. hall; W. W. Caldwell, 1820, in the brick now occupied by Michael Sweeney's "Black Horse tavern:" Robert Nixon, in the stone building formerly occupied by him as a store; George Selvers, in what is now the "Derr House," where he had had a brewery, and he simply added the hotel to the brewery; Wm. Crawford, in the old Joshua Marlin log mill; Bennett Wissell, in a brick building on the east side of Clymer (6th), between Church and Philadelphia streets; William McCracken, in what is now the "Kinter House," and John A. Jamison, in the Robert Whitby brick building, north side of Philadelphia, on the second lot west of Fourth street. These were all the early hotels according to A. T. Moorhead, Sr., and Dr. J. G. Caldwell.

THE INDIANA ACADEMY

Was incorporated by an act of the Legislature, approved March 28, 1814, in which act Rev. Joseph M. Henderson, Rev. John Jamison, James McComb, James Smith, Thomas Sharp, Robert Sutton, James McLain, Joseph Moorhead, Bleaney Adair, James M. Kelly, James McKnight, Daniel Stanard and John Denniston were named as trustees, to serve until others should be elected, as provided for in the said act.

The sum of $2,000 was appropriated on behalf of the commonwealth, to be drawn out of the state treasury whenever $1,000 in addition should have been raised by private subscription. One-half of said appropriation was to be invested in stocks and the interest thereof applied to the support of the academy; in pursuance of which provision, stock to that amount was purchased in the "Westmoreland Bank of Pennsylvania," seventy per cent. of which was finally lost by the failure of that institution. The remaining $1,000 appropriated was used in the erection of the building.

The trustees met at the court house on the 2d of May, 1814, and elected James M. Kelly, secretary, and James McKnight, treasurer, and on the 18th of June, 1814, James McLain was chosen president. The site of the academy (now the residence lot of Silas M. Clark) was subsequently purchased and an agreement entered into with John Henry and John Loughry for the erection of a stone building, which was completed in 1816, and one of the rooms thereof used for a common school.

On the 1st of June, 1818, the academy was opened under the direction of Rev. John Reid, for the reception of pupils wishing to study the higher branches, and from that time forward teachers were generally employed for regular sessions. In 1846, the trustees then in office entered into a contract with Henry Altman for the erection of a brick building, which was used till its abandonment as a seminary of learning, and had most of the time a large number of students. Many of the leading men of the county acted as teachers in this institution, and an impetus was given to the educational cause that the passing years have rather increased than retarded the interest.

BANKS.

There were no banks up to 1855. The early merchants, when going for goods, packed up their Spanish dollars in saddle-bags, mounted their horses and rode to Philadelphia. Long after this they still packed their money in their trunks, and in the stage crossed the mountains, with all their funds with them. Yet withal, robberies were very rare, and this personal care of baggage comparatively safe.

The First National Bank.—Its predecessor was the banking house of Hogue & Co., which Wm. C. Boyle managed (Hogue residing in Greensburg), and Sutton & Stewart, which was in operation from December 1, 1858, to January 2, 1864.

On the latter date the First National was organized, with a capital stock of two hundred thousand dollars, divided into two thousand shares of one hundred dollars each. The first officers were, president, James Sutton; cashier, Wm. C. Boyle, and directors, James Sutton, William Barks, John Sutton, Charles Gompers, Wm. M. Stewart, Thomas White and Alexander M. Stewart.

The primary stockholders were: James Sutton, William M. Stewart, Thomas White, Archibald Stewart, John Sutton, Jas. G. Caldwell, William Earl, Dubre Thomas, Alexander M. Stewwart, Margaret Blair, William Lewis, William Banks, Daniel Stanard, George W. Simpson, James G. McQuaide, Charles Gompers, John G. Coleman, Robert McChesney, John Prothero, Joseph Brown, Samuel McCartney, William Bothel, Andrew R. Sloan, Andrew W. Kimmell, James McMullen, William P. North, John North, Thomas Davis, James R. Porter, James W. McKennan and John H. Lichteberger.

The succession of presidents has been: William M. Stewart, Alexander M. Stewart, John Sutton and Silas M. Clark, 1879; of cashiers: E. H. Wilson, H. A. Thompson and W. J. Mitchell, 1879. The present directors are: Silas M. Clark, John Prothero, Samuel McCartney, J. G. Caldwell, Wm. Earl, Dubre Thomas and Daniel S. Porter. J. R. Daugherty, jr., is acting as teller.

The Indiana County Deposit Bank, was organized on the 4th of December, 1869. The original stockholders were: John Ralston, William Lytle, Robert M. Gibson, Dr. R. McChesney, A. M. Stewart, James P. Carter, Wm. M. Stewart, B. K. Jamison, Simeon Truby, Dr. J. K. Thompson, Isaac Empfield, E. H. Wilson, W. C. Getty, John A. Stewart, James S. Nesbit, N. Lohr, J. H. Kinter, S. P. Townsend, Harry White, Dubre Thomas, and Jacob Creps. The capital stock was $100,000, divided into one thousand shares of an hundred dollars each. The first officers were: president, W. M. Stewart; cashier, E. H. Wilson; directors, W. M. Stewart, Harry White, James P. Carter, John Ralston and R. McChesney, M. D.

The bank was incorporated on the 9th of September, 1873, and organized under the charter, on the 30th of December, 1873, with the same capital as at the first. In April, 1875, the stock was increased to $200,000.

The officers for 1879, are the same as first mentioned, excepting Dubre Thomas and R. M. Gibson, are directors in place of Carter and Ralston, and James M. Watt, is acting as teller.

The New York correspondent is the Third National Bank, and the Philadelphia, is the banking house of D. K. Jamison & Co.

The Farmers' Bank, Philadelphia street, Shryock building, was organized March 24, 1876, with a capital stock of $100,000. The first officers were: president, James A. McKnight; cashier, R. C. Taylor; directors, S. A. Johnston, Frederick Cameron, J. Marlin Walker, Calvin S. Fiscus, Israel Thomas and George H. Johnston.

The officers for 1879, are the same, with John B. Taylor, as assistant cashier. The board of directors have been changed, Cameron, Fiscus and George H. Johnson, retiring, and P. D. Fiscus, J. N. Banks and C. Hoffman, deceased, being added.

ROLL OF BOROUGH OFFICIALS SINCE INCORPORATION.

Borough of Indiana incorporated, the 11th day of March, 1816.

1816—Burgess, James McKnight, Esq. Council, Joshua Marlin, James McCahan, John Ross, Robert Nixon, John Denniston. Daniel Stanard, clerk. William Douglass, treasurer.

1817—Burgess, James McKnight, Esq. Council, Joshua Marlin, James McCahan, John Ross, John Denniston, Robert Nixon. Daniel Stanard, clerk.

1818—Burgess, Jas. M. Kelly. Council, William W. Caldwell, William Taylor, John Hervey, James M. Stewart, John Douglass. Hugh Brady, clerk.

1819—Burgess, John Taylor. Council, William Douglass, William Lucas, Thomas Sutton, Peter Sutton, jr., Leonard Shryock. William W. Brackinridge, Esq., clerk.

1820—Burgess, John Taylor, Esq. Council, James Moorhead, Abner Kelly, Charles Kenning, James Sharp, Robert M. Barkley. Ephraim Carpenter, clerk.

1821—Burgess, John Douglass. Council. John Ross, James M. Stewart, John McAnulty, Daniel Stanard, John Denniston. Ephraim Carpenter, Esq., clerk.

1822—Burgess, Robert Nixon. Council, Epraim Carpenter, Esq., Hugh Brady, Thomas White, Samuel Douglass, John Williamson. Robert Young, clerk.

1823—Burgess, Robert Nixon. Council, James M. Stewart, James McCahan, William Houston, Thomas Sutton, Daniel Stanard. Thomas White, clerk.

1824—Burgess, James McCahan. Council, Alexander Taylor, Thomas White, Ephraim Carpenter, Phillip Gallaher, William W. Caldwell. John Denniston, clerk.

1825—Burgess, James McCahan. Council, Alexander Taylor, William W. Caldwell, Philip Gallaher, Thomas Sutton, Thomas White. William Banks, Esq., clerk.

1826—Burgess, James McCahan. Council, John Denniston, Alexander Taylor, Thomas White, Ephraim Carpenter, Philip Gallaher. William Banks, Esq., clerk.

1827—Burgess, William Lucas, Esq. Council, Thos. White, Esq., John Denniston, Ephraim Carpenter, Woodroe Douglass, Robert Nixon. William Banks, clerk.

1828—Burgess, James Moorhead. Council, William Douglass, William Taylor, Philip Gallaher, Robert Nixon, William Lucas. William Banks, clerk.

1829—Burgess, James Moorhead. Council, William Douglass, William Taylor, Philip Gallaher, Robert Nixon, William Lucas. William Banks, clerk. No official record for this year; probabilities are the same council for 1828 were re-elected for this year.

1830—Burgess, William Banks, Esq. Council, Daniel Stenard, Esq., Thomas White, Esq., William Henry, William Taylor, Robert Johnston. J. Johnston, clerk. Hay scales erected this year.

1831—Burgess, James Thompson. Council, Henry Altman, Samuel Quest, John Weamer, Philip Youngblood, Francis Gompers. J. Johnston, clerk.

1832—Burgess, Fergus Cannon. Council, Joseph Thompson, Matthew Donavin, Henry Altman, James Stewart, Samuel C. Brown. J. Johnston, clerk.

1833.—Burgess, Fergus Cannon. Council, Matthew Rankin, Joseph Thompson, John Alcorn, Matthew Donavin, Philip Gallaher. William Banks, clerk.

1834.—Burgess, James Thomas. Council, John Boucher, Archibald Weir, Philip Youngblood, Fergus Cannon, Joshua Marlin. J. J. Young, clerk.

1835.—Burgess, James McKennan. Council, William Henry, John Boucher, Robert Crawford, Samuel C. Brown, Hugh M. Cannon. J. J. Young, clerk.

1836.—Burgess, Fergus Cannon. Council, John Patton, John Sutton, James C. Wilson, Henry Altman, Robert Nixon. Wm. Banks, clerk.

1837.—Burgess, Woodroe Douglass. Council, Leonard Shryock, James Clark, Robert Whitby, George W. Spotswood, Wm. Houston. William Banks, clerk.

1838.—Burgess, Woodroe Douglass. Council, Leonard Shryock, James Clark, Robert Whitby, George W. Spotswood, Wm. Houston. William Banks, clerk.

1839—Burgess, Daniel Stanard. Council, David Ralston, Lawrence Keslar, Henry Altman, Robert Whitby, Joseph J. Young. William Banks, clerk.

1840—Burgess, James McKennan. Council, James Sutton, James M. Sloan, David Ralston, Thomas White, Leonard Shryock. Fergus Cannon, clerk.

1841—Burgess, Woodroe Douglass. Council, John Weamer, Robert Whitby, William McCracken, Andrew C. Hall, William Moorhead. William M. Stewart, clerk.

1842—Burgess, Woodroe Douglass. Council, John Weamer, Robert Whitby, William McCracken, Andrew C. Hall, William Moorhead. William M. Stewart, clerk.

1843—Burgess, James M. Stewart. Council, William Taylor, John Prothero, William L. Fenton, Wm. Louman, Archibald Weir. A. W. Taylor, clerk.

1844—Burgess, Wm. McClaran. Council, Augustus Dunn, Lawrence Keslar, R. B. Moorhead, John J. Von, Adam Rowe. A. W. Taylor, clerk.

1845—Burgess, I. M. Watt. Council, J. A. Jamison, Daniel Stanard, Leon'd Shryock, Alex. Dickey, Sam'l J. Rankin. A. W. Taylor, clerk.

1846—Burgess, Samuel Moorhead. Council, Daniel Stanard, George W. Spotswood, G. P. Reed, Chas. B. Campbell, James M. Stewart, Alexander Taylor, clerk.

1847—Burgess, Chas. B. Campbell. Council, Daniel Stanard, Wm. H. Coleman, John H. Shryock, Bennet Whissel, James Mitchel. Alexander Taylor, clerk.

1848.—Burgess, Charles B. Campbell. Council, John Magee, John Switzer, James K. Bell, William Banks, James Todd. Alexander Taylor, Esq., clerk.

1849.—Burgess, Charles B. Campbell. Council, Wm. Henry, Wm. M. Stewart, James W. Johnston, Wm. Moorhead, Wm. C. Boyle. Alexander Taylor, clerk.

1850.—Burgess, J. M. Watt. Council, Wm. Banks, Jas. Todd, Wm. McCracken, John Magee, Adam Rowe. Alexander Taylor, clerk.

1851.—Burgess, James Sutton. Council, James M. Stewart, Daniel Stanard, Thomas St. Clair, Henry Altman, Joseph Moorhead. John Stanard, clerk.

1852.—Burgess, John Myers. Council, Augustus Drum, John H. Shryock, Wilson Long, Charles Gompers, John A. Jamison. John Stanard, clerk.

1853.—Burgess, James Todd. Council, Joseph Thompson, James Mitchell, Wm. Houston, Wm. Taylor, Peter Sutton. John Stanard, clerk.

1854—Burgess, James Todd. Council, Joseph Thompson, James Mitchell, Thomas White, William Houston, Peter Sutton. John Stanard, clerk.

1855—Burgess, William M. Stewart. Council, T. J. Coffey, J. A. Jamison, J. H. Lichteberger, F. M. Kinter, John Switzer. John Stanard, clerk.

1856—Burgess, E. P. Hildebrand. Council, J. A. Jamison, John H. Lichteberger, John Switzer, F. M. Kinter, T. J. Coffey. John Stanard, clerk.

July 13, 1856—S. A. Douglass, appointed clerk by reason of vacancy, by resignation of John Stanard.

1857—Burgess, James Sutton. Council, Adam Lowry, Robert Crawford, John B. Young, Henry Altman, John Sutton. Joseph M. Thompson, clerk.

1858—Burgess, James Sutton. Council, Adam Row, Robert C. Taylor, Samuel Rhoades, William Banks, William Earl. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1859—Burgess, John H. Lichteberger. Council, William Earl, A. W. Wilson, S. M. Clark, Joseph M. Thompson, Harry White. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1860—Burgess, F. M. Kinter. Council, T. M. McCandless, G. W. Bodenhamer, David Simmons, Harry White, John Lichteberger. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1861—Burgess, William H. Coleman. Council, William Banks, Silas M. Clark, Edward Nixon, J. Weamer, jr., William Earl. John F. Young, clerk.

1862—Burgess, Adam Row. Council, William Anderson, Isaac D. Houp, William Lewis, Andrew Stadtmiller, Charles Gompers. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1863—Burgess, A. W. Taylor. Council, William Earl, J. G. Caldwell, James Anderson, John G. Thompson, Lawrence Keslar. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

October 16, 1863—S. A. Douglass entered six months' U. S. service, and George Shryock was appointed to fill vacancy by reason thereof.

1864—Burgess, J. M. Watt. Council, James Turner, William C. Boyle, William Banks, William Louman, A. Moore. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1865—Burgess, George W. Bodenhamer. Council, Andrew Stadtmiller, Samuel Grove, William Row, Silas M. Clark, Jas. Turner. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1866—Burgess, T. S. Nesbit. Council, George Kline, R. A. Young, John Duncan, E. C. Jamison, J. W. Mahan. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1867—Burgess, J. S. Nesbit. Council, George Kline, John Duncan, R. A. Young, E. C. Jamison, J. W. Mahan. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1868—Burgess, J. G. Caldwell. Council, William Lewis, R. M. St. Clair, Samuel Setring, John Ewing, C. S. McCoy. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1869—Burgess, J. G. Caldwell. Council, A. Row, A. M. Stewart, Samuel Grove, John M. Ray, A. W. Wilson, A. C. Braughler. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

By Act of Assembly of March 12, 1869, number of council increased to six; the burgess to be elected for three years; two members for three years, two for two years, and two for one year, and annually thereafter two members for three years. At general election in October, 1869, James Turner was elected burgess for three years, by reason of change of spring election to fall.

1870—Burgess, James Turner. Council, A. Row, A. M. Stewart, Samuel Grove, John M. Ray, A. C. Braughler, H. K. Sloan. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1871—Burgess, James Turner. Council, A. Row, A. M. Stewart, A. C. Braughler, H. K. Sloan, E. P. Hildebrand, S. A. Smith. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1872.—Burgess, James Turner. Council, S. A. Smith, H. K. Sloan, A. C. Braughler, Wm. R. Black, George S. Christy, Jas. B. Sanson. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1873.—Burgess, James Turner. Council, James B. Sanson, Wm. R. Black, S. A. Smith, George S. Christy, John Wier, Geo. T. Hamilton. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

Nov. 8, 1873.—G. S. Christy elected burgess by the council to fill vacancy occasioned by resignation of James Turner.

1874.—Burgess, J. A. Smith. Council, J. B. Sanson, W. R. Black, John Weir, George T. Hamilton, Samuel Grove, Wolfgang Vogle. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1875.—Burgess, S. A. Smith. Council, J. B. Sanson, George T. Hamilton, Samuel Grove, Wolfgang Vogle, John Wier, M. F. Jamison. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1876.—Burgess, S. A. Smith. Council, J. B. Sanson, Samuel Grove, Wolfgang Vogle, M. F. Jamison, Wm. Duncan, George R. Lewis. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1877.—Burgess, M. F. Jamison. Council, J. B. Sanson, Geo. R. Lewis, Wm. Duncan, George S. Christy, H. K. Sloan, A. H. Apple. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1878—Burgess, M. F. Jamison. Council, H. K. Sloan, G. R. Lewis, Wm. Duncan, A. H. Apple, Laurence Keslar, jr., Wolfgang Vogle. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

1879—Burgess, M. F. Jamison. Council, H. K. Sloan, Laurence Keslar, jr., A. H. Apple, Wolfgang Vogle, John H. Heil, H. C. Howard. S. A. Douglass, clerk.

Roll of Borough Officials since Incorporation—Borough of West Indiana, Incorporated September 28, 1870.

1871—Burgess, James Clark, Esq. Council, H. A. Thompson, Patrick Burns, J. H. Cunningham, H. S. Thompson, J. S. G. Wine. J. S. G. Wine, clerk. H. A. Thompson, treasurer.

1872—Burgess, A. L. McClusky. Council, J. S. Hazlett, Robert Lowry, Charles U. Gessler, R. C. Calhoun, David Mullen, J. S. G. Wine. A. J. Hamilton, clerk. J. S. Hazlett, treasurer.

1873—Burgess, A. L. McClusky. Council, Robert Lowry, Chas. U. Gessler, R. C. Calhoun, J. S. G. Wine, Henry Keller, David Mullen. J. S. G. Wine, clerk. J. S. Hazlett, treasurer.

1874—Burgess, A. L. McClusky. Council, Peter Sutton, Robert Lowry, David Ellis, Henry Keller, H. A. Thompson, J. S. Hazlett. Coulter Wiggins, Clerk. J. S. Hazlett, treasurer.

1875—Burgess, John Sutor. Council, David Ellis, Peter Sutton, Thos. M. Black, H. A. Thompson, Robert Lowry, Henry Keller. Coulter Wiggins, clerk. Henry Keller, treasurer.

1876—Burgess, Griffith Ellis. Council, H. S. Thompson, B. F. McCluskey, David Ellis, Walter Younger. Robert Lowry, Peter Sutton. Coulter Wiggins, clerk. J. S. Hazlett, treasurer.

1877—Burgess, Griffith Ellis. Council, W. P. Younger, A. S. Cunningham, John McGaughey, John S. Hastings, H. S. Thompson, B. F. McClusky. Coulter Wiggins, clerk. B. F. McClusky, treasurer.

1878—Burgess, Griffith Ellis. Council, B. F. McClusky, W. P. Younger, A. S. Cunningham, John McGaughey, Joseph H. Hood, Henry Hall. J. A. C. Ruffner, clerk. B. F. McClusky, treasurer.

1879—Burgess, Griffith Ellis. Council, Henry Hall, W. P. Younger, Daniel Mullen, Coulter Wiggins, Joseph H. Hood, A. S. Cunningham. J. A. C. Ruffner, clerk. H. S. Thompson, treasurer.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINE.

The following will convey some idea of the business of the borough and its immediate surroundings. One steam paper-board mill, one steam flouring mill, one steam saw mill, panel, sash and window blind factory; one steam planing mill, one steam foundry, one horse-power foundry, two brick yards, two breweries, one distillery, one machine shop, three chair and cabinet maker shops, eight boot and shoemaker shops, five blacksmith shops, two tinware shops, three tailor and clothing shops, one gunsmith shop, three coach and wagonmaker shops, one cooper shop, three tanneries, two stone and marble works, four printing offices, two silversmiths, four saddleries, one hatter, one pottery, five milliners, eight stores and warehouses, six hotels, six groceries, two druggists, five physicians, one dentist, twenty-two attorneys, three justices of the peace, one banking house, five churches and three schools. The number of taxables was three hundred, and the aggregate population was about 1,500. Great faith in the future prosperity of the place was exhibited, and measures were taken to increase its advantages as the natural centre of trade of the county.

THE INDIANA BRANCH RAILROAD,

Extending from the Blairsville intersection to this borough, a distance of nineteen miles, was opened under the direction of the Pennsylvania company on the 5th of June, 1856.

At that time it consisted of a single track, had three bridges and seven intermediate stations, and employed two daily trains. Between what is received and is forwarded, (Indiana Register) in 1859, over forty-five tons of freight were handled. During 1858, over six thousand tickets were sold at this station.

PROGRESS.

"In the early days the mails were carried on horseback, arriving and departing at most once a week, interrupted often for weeks by high water or floating ice, and the want of bridges. Our merchants generally rode on horse-back to Philadelphia, a distance of 248 miles, to purchase their stock of merchandise. I remember well when Thomas Sutton, Esq., kept a horse chiefly for the purpose of going to Philadelphia to lay in his stock of goods. And I remember when my father went to Harrisburg to attend the session of the legislature, with his own horse and sleigh. It was not till the completion of the turnpike from Ebensburg to Kittanning, in 1822, that Indiana was favored with a stage coach and the arrival of the mail three times a week. The sound of the stage driver's horn, as he drove through the town, never failed to draw the inhabitants, old and young, to the front windows. The stage driver had unusual facilities for acquiring the news of the day, and was, therefore, a most important personage, admired by many and respected by all.

About twenty-two years ago, some of our prominent citizens conceived the idea of connecting Indiana by rail, with the Pennsylvania Central railroad. At the outset, the prospect of success was not flattering; but the county was canvassed for stock; the necessary amount of stock was subscribed, necessary legislation procured, the railroad directors were wrestled with, and the summer of 1856, the trains were running on the Indiana Branch railroad. This was a most important consummation for the convenience and prosperity, not only of the town but the county of Indiana."—A. W. Taylor's Address, 1876.

In 1879, the average shipments amounted to about six cars of merchandise and two of stock.

FIRST MILL.

The first mill in the vicinity of the town was the McKee (now C. Bly's) property. The first mill within the limits of the county seat was a horse mill situated within a two-story hewed log building, 40 feet square, which was located in front of what is now the tannery of Turner & Co., on Philadelphia street, on the east end. The mill was erected by Joshua Marlin, about 1821. The mill, according to several parties who witnessed its workings and are still living, was in active operation in dry weather, a short time prior to 1810. The farmers had not only to pay the toll, but also to furnish the horses for the power. For several years there were no bolting cloths, and corn, wheat or buckwheat were ground indiscriminately on the single run of country stone. Sometimes as many as fifty persons were waiting for their turn, and parties would be forced occasionally to wait for three or even four days before their turn would come. The mill even then was used as a sort of an inn, and gradually its business changed till it was kept as a hotel by William Crawford. Subsequently it was used as a private dwelling till 1878, when it was removed.

THE TANNERIES.

The first tannery in the county seat was erected by William Lawson, not long after the founding of the village, and at first had only three vats. He sold the property to Joshua Marlin, who, in 1835, disposed of his interest to James Clark, a justice of the peace of West Indiana, who removed it from its former position on the southwest corner of Philadelphia and Plum streets, (now Fourth,) to the opposite side of Fourth street, corner of Philadelphia, now occupied as an "ice park." In 1842, Mr. Clark sold the tannery to William Henry. The next proprietor was William Houston, who, after a few years, gave way to John G. Thompson, now an octogenarian, who was the last occupant.

The second tannery was erected by Major Abner Kelly on the northwest corner of Philadelphia and Fourth streets, in or about the year 1823. After an occupancy of several years, he disposed of the property to Robert Whitby, who managed its operation till 1844, since which time it has not been in use.

The next tannery was erected by Judge James McKennan in 1843, and is situated in the rear of Philadelphia street, in the "East End," and is occupied by Turner & Co. In 1843, the property was purchased by Charles B. Campbell, who, twelve years later, disposed of the property to John R. Campbell and

N. P. Turner. In 1865, Philip Marshall became the proprietor and conducted it only a few years. The tannery finally became the property of the estate of William Beck, deceased. In 1877, the tannery was reopened by N. P. Turner, who managed it till August, 1879, when the present firm of Turner & Co. assumed the business control. There are thirty-six outside and thirteen inside vats.

The next tannery was established in 1851 by James Clark, and was situated on the northwest corner of (Clymer now) Sixth and Water streets, and is now used by Isaac Beck for his carriage factory. In 1865, Mr. Clark sold the property to Mr. George Stadtmiller, who occupied it as a tannery for about six years, and was the last to use it for such purpose.

In 1858, a steam saw mill, erected several years prior by John H. Shryock, was sold to Hodgen and Morrow, who changed it into a steam tannery. In 1869, James Clark became the owner, who, after carrying it on for several years, sold the property to John Wettling. In the fall of 1872, while the latter owned it, the tannery was burned. Mr. Wettling disposed of the lot to C. U. Gessler, who, in company with his brother, E. Gessler, erected the present tannery on Philadelphia street, West Indiana. There are twenty-five inside and eighteeen outside vats. A fourteen-horse power engine and three men are employed. The capacity per annum is twenty-five hundred hides. The product is rough leather, generally shipped to eastern cities for a market.

PENN FLOURING MILLS, SALTSBURG STREET, WEST INDIANA, D. ELLIS & SON, PROPRIETORS.

The frame building was erected in 1855, by Sutton, Marshall & Co., for a planing mill, and managed as such till 1863, when it was enlarged, refitted and changed into a flouring mill. They were succeeded by Lowry & Lewis. In 1871, David Ellis purchased Lowry's interest, and three years later he also obtained the Lewis portion. There are four runs of stone with a productive capacity of one hundred barrels of flour in twenty-four hours, besides the usual corn grinding, &c. About six thousand dollars have been expended in remodeling the mills. A fifty horse-power engine is used, and the machinery, including the "patent process," is of approved manufacture.

These mills have taken the premium at the Highland Agricultural Society Fair, of Johnstown, and the premium at the late 1879, Indiana County Fair, for the best flour. In 1872, these mills ground thirty thousand bushels of custom wheat, besides, buckwheat, chop, &c.

A carding machine has been connected with the mill, from the third or fourth year of its construction.

EUREKA FLOURING MILLS, WEST INDIANA, NEAR R. R. STATION, HOWARD & EMIGH, PROPRIETORS.

These mills are in a frame building which was erected in 1875, by J. N. Hamilton, who was succeeded in the same by the Hamilton Brothers, and the present firm. They use a fifty horse-power engine, and have two runs of stone, producing in twenty-four hours, forty bushels of flour.

THE INDIANA FOUNDRY.

The first buildings were frame, and were erected on the south side of Philadelphia street, in 1853, by John Shryock and Robert Johnston, and are used at this time as ware-rooms, and finishing rooms. In 1856, the firm became Bailey & Shryock, who were succeeded by James Bailey, Burns, Convery & Crouse, and P. H. Burns. In 1870, the style of the proprietors was Burns & Turner, who erected the present brick foundry and machine shop on the north side of the street, directly opposite the former location, on Philadelphia street, West Indiana.

In January, 1871, Major Irwin McFarland, became connected with the business, and the firm was known as the Indiana Manufacturing Company. In 1872, McFarland & Turner, and in 1873, I. McFarland, succeeded to the management, the latter being the proprietor at this time.

In 1872, fifteen men were employed, and in 1879, only eigh tare at work. For the last three years, the works have been run to only half of their capacity. In the foundry the specialities are: the "Excelsior," "Heckendorn," "L. Green" and "McKesson Hillside" plows. In the machine shop, mills, machinery and steam engines are manufactured.

THE WILLIARD PLANING MILL, PHILADELPHIA STREET, WEST INDIANA.

The north portion of the two story frame building was erected in 1866, by Robert Williard, who dealt in worked lumber. He gradually extended the building to the present capacity, and introduced the necessary machinery for the manufacture of material for the builders' use. In 1877–78–79, the business was from $12,000 to $15,000 per annum. A. Dalzell, Lindsey & Co.'s, (of Pittsburgh,) twenty horse-power engine is used. Five men have been, and three are now employed.

THE JAMES R. DAUGHERTY PLANING MILL, PHILADELPHIA STREET, WEST INDIANA,

Was erected in 1856, by John H. Shryock. It was enlarged by Cochran, Ewing & Co., and the present proprietor is James R. Daugherty. A twenty horse-power engine is used, and five men are employed. In addition to the lines incidental to a planing mill, Mr. Daugherty has introduced the manufacture of coffins. This branch is meeting with success, and bids fair to become an important adjunct of trade. The machinery in this mill is of modern manufacture, and is equal to any and all demands, for either quantity or quality of products. This is a two story frame.

THE HASTINGS PLANING MILL, RAILROAD STREET, WEST INDIANA—TWO STORY FRAME BUILDING.

The central portion, 25x45, was erected by Sutor, Lowry & Repine, in 1866. They were succeeded by Lowry, Hastings & Co., who built the south addition; Sutor & Leach, who erected the north addition; Hastings & Leach, and John S. Hastings, who erected the eastern addition. The mill is now in dimensions, 40x113, and is supplied with a forty-five horse-power engine. From 1872 to 1874, twelve men were employed. In 1879, from seven to nine hands were at work.

THE INDIANA PAPER MILL, PHILADELPHIA ST., WEST INDIANA.

The first buildings were frame, and were erected in 1853 by a stock company, of which the leading members were Judge Thomas White, James Sutton, John Sutton, John P. Prothero and others. From the first a specialty was made of strawboard, and in the beginning the air-drying process was used.

For some years the mill was unsuccessful and the ownership changed, finally passing into the hands of Judge White and James Sutton, who placed the works on a paying basis, and changed a disastrous career into a prosperous period.

While in their possession the buildings were burned, and rebuilt as a frame structure. The next firm was Sutton (Jas.) & Allison (S. A). They introduced the steam drying machinery, and in 1867–8, remodeled the mill. In 1869 the style of the management became Sutton & McCartney (Samuel). The present firm is Sutton (John W.) and McCartney. They employ thirteen men, using three tons of straw per day and producing in the same time two tons of strawboard. They have two John Cooper (Mount Vernon, O.) engines of one hundred and twenty-five horse power, and three tubular boilers of one hundred and sixty horse power.

The present firm rebuilt the mill as a brick structure, with slate roof, making it, as far as possible, fire-proof. These expenditures, with additional machinery, &c., involved an outlay of $15,000.

The product of this mill has always been sold in New York city, Henry Lindenmeyer being the agent since 1853. It is a favorite brand in the market, owing to the strength of the fibre of the rye straw and the softness of the water used in its manufacture.

There are six acres of ground connected with this mill, on Philadelphia street, and all the conveniences of water, and reed buildings are used to afford desired facilities. We present the boring record of their main well (of which there are several, as well as ponds, to give a needful supply of pure soft water):

The diameter of this well is six inches. The record of boring shows: Clay, 12 feet; mud, 2 feet; black slate, 20 feet; white sandstone, 30 feet; black slate, 20 feet; black slate, 32 feet; black and white fire clay, 95 feet; white fire clay, 6 feet; and white sand rock, 3½ feet. The water rises to within 18 feet of the surface.

THE INDIANA GASLIGHT COMPANY, NORTH SIDE OF PHILADELPHIA STREET, EAST END.

The works were erected, and about two miles of pipe were laid in 1871 by J. H. Miller & Bro., of Uniontown, Pa., who sold the property in the same year to Samuel McCartney and Son, (G. P.), the present proprietors.

Since 1871, about one mile of pipes have been placed in the streets. The capacity of the gasometer is 12,000 cubic feet. The greatest consumption per day has been 12,000 cubic feet. The present consumption, October 1879, is 8,000 cubic feet. The rate to patrons is $2.25 per thousand.

THE WEST INDIANA PUBLIC SCHOOL BUILDING

Is a two-story brick structure, having four rooms, a vestibule and cupola. It was erected in 1870–71, and was furnished in approved style with the necessary furniture, &c. J. P. Leach was the architect. The entire cost of the building, grounds, &c., was $12,000. The average attendance is one hundred and fifty. Three teachers are employed, and a grade of scholarship is established, which hitherto has been successful in obtaining satisfactory results.

THE CHILL WHEEL AND PLOW COMPANY FOUNDRY AND MACHINE SHOP, WEST INDIANA.

The co-operative machine shop was built by McElhaney & Everett in 1868. They employed five men. They succumbed to the hard times and were succeeded in 1877 by R. A. Young, who employed four to six men in the business. His specialties were the "Young & Carroll Hay Elevator," the "Lytle Red Staff and Diamond Dresser," and five-horse-power engines.

The C. W. & P. Co. foundry was erected by P. H. Burns in 1872. At that time five men were employed. In 1874, P. H. Burns & Brother succeeded to the trade, and in time were forced to abandon the business. In 1878, the C. W. & P. Co., a limited partnership, purchased the property. Of this company, E. P. Hildebrand was the manager and six men were engaged. The specialties were "chill wheels" for pit wagons, or coal cars, "Uncle Sam" and "Rival" plows.

In October, 1879, the above named foundry and machine shop were united under the head of this article. Their buildings are frame structures situated on either side of the street. The management remains in the hands of Mr. Hildebrand. The specialties of either firm will still be manufactured by the new association, while the general products of a foundry or machine shop will be manufactured with dispatch.

HISTORY OF PALLADIUM LODGE NO. 346, I. O. OF O. F., INDIANA.

[By A. L. McCluskey.]

This lodge was chartered by the R. W. G. L. of Pennsylvania, by charter bearing date February 19th, A. D., 1849, on application made by the following brethren, members of the order, viz: James G. Caldwell, Charles Slaysman, John Hunter, Wm. B. Clark, David Peeler, Wm. C. Boyl, Thomas S. Searel, John H. Shryock, Wm. McCoy and A. R. Marlin, and formally opened by the G. L. officers, on the 23d of April, 1849, in a small room in the house then occupied by Wm. B. Clark, as a hotel, on Philadelphia street, in the borough of Indiana, by the election and installation of the following officers, viz: N. G., John H. Shryock; V. G., David Peeler; Secretary, Thos. S. Searel; Assistant Secretary, Wm. McCoy; Treasurer, Wm. C. Boyl, to serve during this and the ensuing term. At the date of the organization of this lodge, the opposition to secret societies was so strong here that when the brethren assembled to organize, they had to place an armed guard at the outer door in order to protect themselves from disturbance from without, but the opposition soon died away and one of the foremost men in the opposition was the third man initiated into the order. Since that time there has been organized in the county twelve lodges of the order, three lodges of Free Masons, four lodges Knights of Honor, five lodges Ancient Order United Workmen, five lodges Good Templars, three lodges Temple of Honor, two lodges Knights of Pythias, and one of Red Men.

Palladium lodge No. 346, I. O. of O. F., shortly after its organization leased a building on Philadelphia street in the borough of Indiana, owned by Dr. Robert Mitchell, and in a short time bought it; upon that lot they have since erected one of the best halls in the town, which is now occupied by the A. O. U. W., K. of H. and G. A. R.

A large majority of those now living have withdrawn from this lodge and have formed other lodges in this and other counties in this state, and some in other states of this Union, leaving the actual membership of the lodge on the 1st of October. 1879, at about seventy-five. The number of initiations, including charter members, is 335. The number of deaths is 44; balance now living, 291. The number of past grands is 53; two dead; balance living, 51. The property now owned by the lodge, real and personal, is worth about $7,000, and the lodge realizes from it in rents annually about $600. So that from a small beginning, they have become a pretty strong organization; they are self-sustaining, able to give relief when and where it is needed, bury the dead and educate the orphan.

INDIANA LODGE, NO. 313, F. & A. MASONS.

Chartered January 11th, 1858. Constituted April 7th, 1858, The charter members were: Robert Crawford, James Sloan, James G. Caldwell, James Johnston, John Eason, Harry White, James Bailey, W. B. Marshall, Robert Walkinshaw, Charles Swoyer, Thomas St. Clair, M. D., William Reed, M. D., William Crawford, and George W. Sedgwick.

The first officers were: W. Master, Harry White; S. Warden, W. B. Marshall; J. Warden, Robert Crawford; Secretary, George W. Sedgwick; Treasurer, James Bailey.

The Past Masters have been: Harry White, W. B. Marshall, James Turner, H. K. Sloan, D. S. Porter, W. B. Kline, James B. Samson, Irwin McFarland, and Wm. S. Daugherty.

The present officers are: W. Master, John B. Marshall; S. Warden, M. C. Watson; J. Warden, John W. Sutton; Secretary, W. B. Kline: Treasurer, John Carson.

THE KNIGHTS OF HONOR.*

Clymer Lodge, No. 28, Knights of Honor, was instituted at Indiana on the 12th day of August, 1874, with sixteen charter members. It was named in honor of Mr. George Clymer, the founder of Indiana. The number of the lodge, 28, indicates its early organization in the history of the order; and it has the honor of being the first lodge of the county instituted in the state of Pennsylvania. Sixty-nine persons, including the charter members, have, from time to time, been initiated in this lodge. The present membership is forty-nine. Of the missing members, two have died, four withdrew upon card, and fourteen have been suspended on account of the non-payment of dues and assessments, as required by the laws of the order. During the first year of its existence, the lodge made very little progress, mainly from want of knowledge amongst the people of its existence and purpose. At the end of the second year, however, the original membership had been almost doubled, and so, also, during the third year, the number was again doubled, so that, at the end of that time, after striking off the deaths, withdrawals and suspensions, there was left an active membership of fifty-five persons. The prevailing "hard times" of the past three years have prevented any increase of membership, for although new names have occasionally been added to the list of members, a still greater number, by reason of financial stress, have been obliged to sever their connection therewith.

*Geo. Row.

As a beneficiary organization, the Knights of Honor stand in the foremost rank, here and elsewhere. Clymer lodge, as permitted by the general laws of the order, provides for the payment of three dollars, weekly, to such members as may become sick or disabled. Under this provision prompt aid has frequently been rendered to those who had met with and were compelled to bear misfortune, and thereby averting much suffering which must, otherwise, have ensued. The lodge is, at this time, in a healthy and prosperous condition, having an active membership of excellent business men, and with a reserve fund of several hundred dollars in their treasury.

It is not the policy of the society to parade and advertise themselves, and thus hold out improper and unreasonable inducements to persons to join in with them. The organization rests upon sound and moral principles, as will be seen by the following brief synopsis of the objects and plans of the order:

The society of the Knights of Honor was founded in Louisville, on the 30th day of June, 1873, and its charter bears date the 1st of January, 1874, under the authority and in accordance with the laws of the state of Kentucky. The objects of the order are as follows:

1. To unite fraternally all acceptable men of every profession, business or occupation.

2. To give all moral and material aid in its power to members of the order, by holding moral, instructive and scientific lectures, by encouraging each other in business, and by assisting each other in obtaining employment.

3. To establish a benefit fund, from which a sum not to exceed $2,000 shall be paid at the death of each member, to his family, or be disposed of as he may direct.

4. To establish a fund for the relief of sick and distressed members.

5. To ameliorate the condition of humanity in every possible manner.

The corporate body is known as the Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, and has power to make its own constitution, rules of discipline, and general laws for the government of the order; to organize grand and subordinate lodges, in accordance with the laws of the order, which lodges, as organized, shall possess the powers conferred by the constitution, the said authority being vested in and granted by the supreme lodge. The routine work of the order is done in the subordinate lodges.

No person who is under 21 years, or over 55 years of age, can be admitted to membership, except applicants who are eligible as honorary members. Applicants must be male persons of good moral character, who believe in a Supreme Being, and are competent to earn a livelihood for themselves and their families. Persons over 21 years of age, not physically eligible, or over 55 years of age, and possessing all the other qualifications of membership may be admitted as honorary members.

Each member is required to pay weekly dues, as provided for in the by-laws. The moneys accruing from initiations, conferring degrees, dues, &c., are devoted to the payment of the current expenses of the lodges, and to provide a fund, out of which $3 a week may be paid to a sick or disabled brother who has maintained good standing in the order for six months.

All members who are between the ages of 21 and 45 years, at the time of receiving the third degree, in addition to the fees for membership and dues, also pay into the treasury the sum of $1; and those who are over 45 years of age at the time of admittance to the order (except honorary members) pay somewhat higher rates, according to their respective ages at the date of admission; which payments, so made, constitute what is known as the widows' and orphans' benefit fund, out of which the sum of $2,000 is paid by the order on the death of a full rate member, and $1,000 on the death of a half rate member.

ANCIENT ORDER OF UNITED WORKMEN*.

This organization, though classed as a secret society, is liberal and philanthropic in its purpose and practice, being moral, social and beneficiary in its character. Its object is to promote all classes and kinds of labor, mental and physical; to improve the moral, intellectual and social condition of its members; to inspire a due consideration and regard for the realities and responsibilities of life; and to hold lectures, discuss new inventions and improvements, and to encourage research in science, art, literature, &c. The society originated in Pennsylvania.

By virtue of a charter granted by the grand lodge of Pennsylvania (incorporated), Indiana lodge No. 21 A. O. U. W. was instituted on the 24th day of July, A. D. 1872, with fifteen members. Since its organization this lodge, in common with other similar societies, has made slow but steady progress. The aggregate number of persons who have been admitted to membership is sixty-six. There are now forty-five members in good standing; the composition of the lodge being from the best class of business men and citizens in the community. Only one death has occurred in the lodge since its organization.

At the time of the institution of Indiana lodge, there were in the state of Pennsylvania, two organizations which claimed the title of the order—one known as the incorporated body, the other as the unincorporated body. In January, 1873, the grand lodge of the incorporated body, at their annual meeting, held in Meadville, acting in response to suggestions by the unincorporated body, appointed a committee to meet a similar committee of the unincorporate body, for the purpose of consulting upon the propriety of the adoption of measures looking to the consolidation of the two bodies. Messrs. John Wise and Samuel A. Smith, were representatives from Indiana lodge at the grand lodge meeting at Meadville. Shortly thereafter, these two bodies were consolidated, and the organization has developed in strength and numbers, and has spread itself over many of the other states of the Union.

Qualified persons, over 21 and under 50 years of age, may become members of the order. In addition to the initiation fees and dues required to be paid, each member also pays into the beneficiary fund of the order, one dollar at the time of his initiation, and a like sum as often thereafter as assessments are laid to maintain said fund. Out of this beneficiary fund, the sum of $2,000 is paid, on the death of a member who is in good standing, to his heirs, or such person as he shall, in his certificate, designate to receive the same. And when, after payment of such benefices, the sum in the grand lodge treasury is reduced below $2,000, an assessment is made upon the subordinate lodges to the amount of one dollar for each member in good standing. By means of the very efficient system practiced, the grand lodge is enabled to promptly meet all the liabilities of the beneficiary fund. In this connection we may say, that it is highly creditable to the members of the order, in Pennsylvania and elsewhere, that, while acting under state jurisdiction, whereby their liability in this pecuniary beneficence is limited to such state jurisdiction, when the yellow fever scourge of 1878–9, swept over the southern states, and the organization there, and the supreme lodge were unable to meet all the requirements that fell so suddenly upon them, the subordinate lodges, generally, voted money out of their lodge funds, and members subscribed liberally in person to make up the sum due to the stricken families of the deceased brethren.

*George Row.

POST NUMBER 28, G. A. R., DEPARTMENT OF PENNSYLVANIA,

Was organized at Indiana, Pennsylvania, on the 28th day of June, A. D. 1878. At that time, Major W. W. Tyson, post department commander, mustered in the following charter members, viz: D. S. Porter, B. B. Tiffaney, D. F. Heasley, A. H. Mitchell, John T. Gibson, James B. Work, A. H. White, M. J. Shannon, J. J. Young, R. M. Birkman, James McGaughey, James M. Sutton, John H. Hill, E. D. Cherry, A. S. Thompson, E. E. Allen, George R. Lewis, T. C. Ramey and A. C. Broughler.

At this muster in, the following officers were elected to serve until January, 1879, viz: Commander, D. S. Perler; Senior Vice Commander, B. B. Tiffaney; Junior Vice Commader, W. R. Loughry; Chaplain, D. F. Heasley; Surgeon, Geo. R. Lewis; Adjutant, A. H. Mitchell; Officer of the Day, Jno. T. Gibson; Quartermaster, J. B. Work; Officer of the Guard, A. H. White; Sergeant Major, M. J. Shannon; Quartermaster Sergeant, J. J. Young.

At the meeting in December, 1878, the same officers were re-elected for the year 1879, except A. C. Broughler, who was elected quartermaster in place of J. B. Work; J. M. Sutton chaplain, in place of D. F. Heasley, and Joseph Fallon sergeant major, in place of M. J. Shannon.

At the meeting in December, 1879, the following officers were elected for the year 1880, viz: Commander, J. M. Sutton; Senior Vice Commander, T. M. Coleman; Junior Vice Commander, M. M. Minor; Adjutant, John H. Hill; Chaplain, Rev. C. T. Steck; Sergeant, Geo. R. Lewis; Officer of the Day, A. H. Mitchell; Quartermaster, A. C. Broughler; Officer of the Guard-Charles Shembough; Sergeant Major, J. M. Watt; Quartermaster Sergeant, J. J. Young. These officers were mustered in at the January meeting, by Major R. J. Irwin, A. D. C.

The post has a charitable fund amounting to about $200.00. During the past year, they have dispensed to needy soldiers, their widows and children, a considerable part of this sum. The post now numbers about seventy members, and is rapidly increasing. It is in a good financial condition. The best of feelings exist between the comrades. In the post, fraternity, charity and loyalty mingle together in their truest and best meaning. We meet as old soldiers, with no more secrets than we had in the army.

THE STATE NORMAL SCHOOL.

This magnificent structure had its inception in the discussion of the teachers' institutes, which met at Indiana in the years 1869 and 1871. Hence it may be called the creature of the teachers' institute.

Once resolved upon, the idea of a normal school at Indiana grew rapidly into reality. Subscription books were opened, and such success attended the efforts of its friends, that ere long the best site in the whole vicinity, overlooking the town, was purchased, plans were arranged, estimates made, contracts consummated, and building begun.

On May 17, 1875, the building was formally opened to the public as a state normal school, and provided with a corps of teachers second to none in the country—a lofty per-eminence which it has preserved, almost regardless of cost, to the present day.

The building, with its grounds, furniture and apparatus, is valued at $200,000, and is conceded to be the best of its kind in the United States. It is large, airy and commodious, suited for four hundred boarders, male and female, and nearly as many more day scholars.

The dimensions of the edifice may be best understood by conceiving of it as three buildings—one fifty feet wide by a hundred and fifty feet in length; and two others, each of which would be forty-five feet in width by a hundred and eighty feet in length, the whole blending into one building of beautiful proportions, and all four stories high above the basement. The basement story is nine feet in height, and the other four stories range from eleven and a half to fourteen feet between the floor and ceiling.

Its advantages embrace all the modern improvements, and are such as are to be found in no similar institution.

It is lighted throughout with gas, and heated with steam, thus securing the minimum of danger and work, and the maximum of time for exercise and study. The labor of carrying coal and ashes; of lighting two hundred fires and oil lamps, the multiple danger of fire, and the necessary dirt and dust consequent thereon, are thus wholly avoided. But even in case of possible fire from unforeseen causes, by means of huge pipes on every floor, and kept in constant readiness, the building can be instantaneously flooded with water.

Every floor of the immense edifice is provided with hot and cold water, bath rooms, lavatories and water closets. The laundry, bakery, cooking department, engine rooms and workshops are situated in the spacious basements. Above, and free to all, are to be found a reading room, with the daily and weekly journals, and monthly magazines; a reception room; a reference library; a gymnasium, for indoor physical culture; a chapel wiih a capacity of 1,000 persons, for public entertainments and exhibitions; and a book room, where all articles of stationery can be obtained, and text books either bought or hired at the lowest rates.

The students' rooms are completely furnished and the ladies' rooms carpeted.

Thus it may be seen that the normal college of Indiana, Pa., is a town complete within itself; and being surrounded with a twelve-acre campus, and a magnificent grove of large timber, with shady promenades, and croquet grounds, and a base ball field is furnished, with everything conducive to physical and mental development, or retired literary culture.

Unless so disposed, there is no necessity for going beyond the premises, by reason of inclement weather or other causes.

The climate is salubrious, being free from miasma and foul vapors—the breeders of fevers and disease.

The physical advantages, however, of the Indiana normal are but secondary to its educational. Its specialties are: 1. The preparation of teachers for the profession of teaching. 2. A business education whereby the student can step immediately from the normal into the bank or counting house or store fully equipped. 3. Preparation for college, or a complete classical course, comprising Latin, Greek, German and French. 4. A model school for practical instruction in the art of teaching, and 5. Artistic culture in music and drawing.

In connection with the above, two societies are in prosperous activity, which afford an excellent training school for composition and debate; and from which the performers are usually selected for the several entertainments and exhibitions of the term.

Religious services of an unsectarian character are observed daily in the institution; prayer meetings are held during the week, and Bible classes on Sunday, taught by the faculty. Students are expected to attend divine worship on Sunday, either at the churches of the town or in the normal chapel.

In the intercourse of the sexes the utmost decorum is required, without, however, oppressive interference, or the hindrance of that mutual influence which is deemed so beneficial in the co-education of the sexes. Hence, while a due degree of intercourse is allowed in daily recitations and amusements, the bounds of strictest propriety are never transgressed, and the dormitories are as completely separated and guarded as though they were two distinct buildings.

The total expenses, including board, fuel, light, washing, room, furniture and tuition, is $5 per week, and for those preparing to teach, $4.50.

Students agreeing to teach in the state for two years receive $50 at graduation.

The aggregate attendance of students during the last year was 483.

TRUSTEES AND FACULTY OF NORMAL SCHOOL, AT INDIANA, PA., SINCE ITS BEGINNING.

Opened May 17, 1875. Trustees elected by stockholders: John Sutton, Silas M. Clark, Wm. B. Marshall, Daniel S. Porter, Alex. M. Stewart, Wm. B. Hildebrand, Joseph R. Smith, Andrew W. Wilson, George S. Christy, James R. Daugherty, Irwin McFarland, George R. Lewis.

Trustees appointed by the state: Hon. Daniel J. Morrell, Johnstown; Hon. John K. Thompson, Brady; Gen. Thomas F. Gallagher, New Alexandria, Indiana county; Col. S. M. Jackson, Appollo; Hon. E. S. Golden, Kittanning; Hon. J. C. Clark, Greensburg.

Officers of board—John Sutton, president; Silas M. Clark, secretary; Peter Sutton, treasurer; W. B. Hildebrand, assistant-secretary. Faculty—Edmund B. Fairfield, D.D., L.L.D., principal; Hiram Collier, A.M., chemistry and physics; J. H. Young, A. M., languages; Thos. J. Chapman, A. M., English grammar and literature; David M. Sensenig, M. S., mathematics; A. H. Berlin, M. S., superintendent of model school; A. J. Bolar, A. M., mathemathics and English literature; Miss Jane E. Leonard, history and geography; Mrs. Anna M. Sensenig, English branches; Miss Grace Oviatt, penmanship, drawing and book-keeping; Mrs. M. S. Berlin, vocal music; Miss Maggie Lichteberger, instrumental music.

1876–7.—Trustees, by stockholders, same as 1875, except Jas. M. Stewart, vice A. M. Stewart; E. H. Wilson, vice Irwin McFarland. Trustees, by state, same as 1875. Officers of board—same as 1875. Faculty—D. M. Sensenig—principal pro. tem.; J. H. Young, A. M., languages; Jane E. Leonard, history, geography, rhetoric; S. C. Delap, B. S., natural science and mathematics; J, C. Sharpe, B. E., elocution; R. Willis Fair, B. E., English grammar; Anna M. Sensenig, M. E., English branches and mathematics; Mary A. Butler, M. E., superintendent model school; Anna E. Redifer, writing and drawing; Maggie Lichteberger, instrumental music.

1877–8.—Trustees, by stockholders, same as 1876, except Gen. Harry White, vice Geo. R. Christy. Trustees, by state, same as 1876, except Hon. A. H. Fulton, vice Gen. Thos. F. Gallagher. Officers of the board—Silas M. Clark, president; Wm. B. Hildebrand, secretary; Peter Sutton, treasurer. Faculty—same as 1876, except Mrs. M. Delap, M. E., English grammar.

1878–9.—Trustees, by stockholders—S. M. Clark, W. B. Marshall, A. W. Taylor, Sam. Wolf, A. W. Wilson, Jas. R. Smith, W. B. Hildebrand, J. M. Stewart, Harry White, J. R. Daugherty, E. H. Wilson, Geo. R. Lewis, all of Indiana, Pa. Trustees, by state—Hon. A. W. Kimmell, Indiana; Hon. A. H. Fulton, West Lebanon; Hon. E. S. Golden, Kittanning; Hon. J. C. Clark, Greensburg; R. A. Paul, Saltsburg; Col. S. M. Jackson, Apollo. Officers of board—S. M. Clark, president; W. B. Hildebrand, Secretary; J. W. Sutton, and now Thos. Sutton, Treasurer. Faculty—John H. French, L. L. D., principal; J. H. Young, language; Jane E. Leonard, preceptress, history, geography and rhetoric; R. W. Fair, B. S., mathematics and English grammar; John S. McKay, A. B., natural science; J. O. Smith, drawing, writing, book-keeping; Fannie Ells, elocution; Mary A. Butler, M. E., superintendent model school; Maggie Lichteberger, instructress music; Robert G. Sutton, vocal music.

THE PRESS AND PRINTING.

In tracing the developments of history in Indiana county, there is, perhaps, no subject which requires so deep and keen research as the early growth of the publishing business. Only here and there can be found single copies of newspapers of the earlier days—but not sufficient to indicate the tenor, progress and development of "the art preservative" amidst these surroundings. It, therefore, devolves upon the historian, how, as in many other circumstances, to rely upon all the recollections of the old people who are still able to recall incidents, "lang syne," in relation thereto. It is a well-attested fact, however, that newspaper publishing was begun in the county in, or about the year 1814. This first newspaper was called the American, and was published by James McCahan, "an energetic little Irishman,"* who had located in Indiana. The American was federalist in its political character. In 1815, the printing office was located on the lot where A. W. Taylor now resides. It was destroyed by fire, the first fire which occurred in the town. The paper was soon established on better footing than before, for "all the people, in accord with the spirit of the times, subscribed for the paper and gave it their patronage."†

In 1826, the American establishment was purchased by A. T. Moorhead, sr., and his father, James Moorhead, was installed as editor and publisher. The printing office, at that time, was located on Water street, in the building now owned and occupied by Michael Job. In the year 1826, the alleged abduction of Wm. Morgan by the masonic fraternity occurred at Batavia, N. Y., in consequence of which the most intense excitement was prevalent throughout the western parts of New York and Pennsylvania, and eastern Ohio; and a new political party sprung into existence under the name of anti-masons. James Moorhead at once gave adhesion to this party, and with all his energy as a man and publisher, sought to advance the policy and doctrines of the new party; and the American became an anti-masonic forwarder. The publication of the first democratic paper in the county was commenced in 1821, by Alexander Taylor and C. B. Wheelock, under the name of the Indiana and Jefferson Whig.‡ Subsequently, about 1826, John McCrea, who had served his apprenticeship in the office of the Whig, purchased the establishment, and continued the publication. Under the prevailing furore of anti-masonry, the Whig yielded its former political policy, and also espoused the cause of the new party. Some time thereafter, probably in the latter part of 1827, or early in 1828, the American was merged into the Whig, under McCreary, James Moorhead, the former publisher of the American, shortly thereafter removing to Ashtabula county, Ohio.

In 1832, Jno. Taylor purchased the Whig office from Jno. McCrea, and gave the paper the name of the Free Press, and conducted it in the interest of anti-masonry, and as the exponent of the progress and development of the county.

In 1833, or possibly in 1834, the Inquirer, a democratic journal, was commenced by Fergus Cannon. Its publication was continued for several years. It was printed in the room now used as an office in the "Kline house." This paper probably passed into the hands of Murphy & Woodward. Augustus Dunn, for a time, was the editor and writer, though his name did not appear as such in the paper.

*So-called by Josiah Copier. †Writing of A. W. Taylor. ‡Writing of A. W. Taylor.

In the spring of 1834, Wm. Moorhead one of the sons of Jas. Moorhead, made arrangements to purchase the Free Press office from John Taylor, and in the month of June of that year, the first number of the Indiana Register was issued. Mr. Moorhead proved an apt writer, and was a good printer, and he succeeded in building up his establishment in influence and pecuniary value. After five years of successful labor he sold out to Cochran & Lloyd. The purchasers failing to pay for the establishment, Mr. Moorhead, about two years after the sale, took it back, and associated his brother, Robert B. Moorhead, with him in the publication thereof. This partnership continued about three years, when William Moorhead sold out his half interest to John H. Lichteberger, in the spring of 1844. In the fall of 1846, Messrs. Moorhead & Lichteberger sold out to G. P. Row and Jas. W. Hill, who continued the publication of the Register, till 1852. Throughout all these changes, from 1834 to 1852, the Register was a consistent advocate of anti-masonry, until the extinguishment of that party, and thereafter of the policy and principles of the whig party.

On the 1st of April, 1852, the editorial management, and about the 1st of July, of the same year, the absolute possession and ownership of the Register establishment went into the hands of Jonathan Row. Mr. Row (as will be seen by reference to his biography elsewhere in this volume), had been a successful newspaper publisher in the counties of Westmoreland and Somerset. Having located in Indiana in the spring of 1852, he associated with him in his business, his second son S. B. Row, in whose name, for three years and five months, the business was conducted; though, during all the time, the editorial management and especially the political character of the paper, was controlled and exercised by Jonathan Row himself. In the fall of 1855, S. B. Row purchased the Raftsman's Journal office, at Clearfield, Pa., and severed his connection with the Indiana Register. Jonathan Row then took into partnership his son-in-law, H. B. Woods. This association continued only until May, 1856, when Mr. Woods retired, and Mr. Row continued, alone, the publication of his paper until, in 1859, failing health compelled him so relinquish all labor. Three of of his sons—George, Amos and Augustus—were then residing at home, and had, for a considerable time, conducted the mechanical affairs of the establishment; and to these young men Mr. Row rented his office. Toward the close of the year 1860, parties in Virginia (now West Virginia) opened correspondence with George Row, which resulted in George and Amos quitting the Register and removing to Virginia, when, about the first of February, 1861, they began the publication of a spirited journal, independent in politics, and uncompromisingly for the unity of the states.

The war of the Rebellion came on, and, after remaining in Virginia till all their money was spent, and the paper currency of the south being practically worthless—its value being about 40 per cent. on the dollar—George Row and Amos Row packed up their types and returned to Pennsylvania. From the first of the year 1861 till some time in 1862, H. B. Woods was associated with Augustus Row in the publication of The Indiana Register, Mr. Woods conducting the editorial department. During this period The Register lost prestige with the republicans of the county, on account of some published criticisms reflecting upon Hon. John Covode, and other trusted leaders of the party. The Messenger, at that time an independent journal, availed itself of the opportunity and came out straight for republicanism, and soon won confidence with the party as exponent of it principles. Abut this time Augustus Row received appointment as one of the officers of enrollment and draft of the Pennsylvania militia, in the congressional district composed of Indiana, Westmoreland and Fayette counties, and he subsequently quit the newspaper business, and The Register again reverted into the hands of George Row, who continued its publication some six years or more, until the establishment was sold, in the close of the year 1869, to R. M. Birkman. During the time that George Row published The Register, it maintained a firm hold upon the confidence of the people by its unqualified support of republican principles, and its free advocacy of every measure tending to advance the interests of the people.

In 1840, the liberty party, better known, perhaps, as the abolition party, had its rise. That a portion of mankind should be held in fetters by another portion of the human family, was repugnant to the feelings of philanthropic people everywhere. And now that the issue was brought forward in the politics of the country, James Moorhead, the old anti-mason warrior, again stepped forward in the interest of human rights and began the publication of The Clarion of Freedom in 1840. Most earnestly, in season and out of season, did Mr. Moorhead combat the doctrine of slavery, until, in 1854, when know-nothingism so abruptly sprung into the arena with giant force, he sold out to G. P. Reed and Robert Henry. The name and character of the paper was at once changed, and The True American, in the interest of know-nothingism, was issued. Shortly thereafter, Wm. McClaran took the place of Robert Henry, in the publication of The American. When Know-Nothingism expired, and the great republican party was organized, The True American fell into line as a republican journal. In 1866 it ceased, being merged in The Register.

In May, 1855, James Moorhead and his son, James W. Moorhead, commenced, at Indiana, the publication of The Independent as an educational and temperance journal. It was also strongly anti-slavery in its utterances, and it was announced, in the first issue, that. "if need be, it would oppose secret clandestine modes of promoting any cause, however good." It battled against know-nothingism and slavery with equal earnestness. On the 9th of January, 1857, the old veteran, Jas. Moorhead, died. J. W. Moorhead continued the publication for some time thereafter, and was succeeded, in a brief period, by his brother, Wm. Moorhead. Finally, however, in 1860, the office was sold to a committee of publication and removed to Blairsville.

THE PRESENT PRESS—THE INDIANA MESSENGER, MESSENGER BUILDING, NORTH SIXTH STREET,

Was established in 1856, by Joseph M. Thompson, Silas M. Clark and John F. Young, as a democratic paper, and during the presidential campaign of that year was an ardent supporter of James Buchanan, the democratic candidate. In the spring of 1857, Clark Wilson, of Clearfield county purchased the paper, and continued to conduct it in the interest of the same party till the summer of 1860, when he sold a half interest in the office to S. A. Smith.

Wilson being a democrat and Smith a republican, the paper dropped politics and became an independent sheet. Smith and Wilson issued the paper till 1862, when J. Willis Westlake, now of the Millersville normal school, purchased the interest of Wilson. The new firm then announced that the paper in the future would be conducted in the interests of the republican party. In 1865 Mr. Westlake was succeeded by ex-sheriff Joseph R. Smith, and the firm has been since that date J. R. Smith & Son. Under their management the paper prospered, and the circulation continued to increase from year to year, and now, at this writing, is over eighteen hundred.

THE INDIANA PROGRESS, NORTHEAST CORNER OF PHILADELPHIA AND SIXTH STREETS.

Wm. R. Boyer, in December, 1864, had commenced the publication of an independent paper, called the Blairsville New Era.

In December, 1866, Major R. M. Birkman purchased the office at sheriff's sale, and changed the name of the paper to the Blairsville Press.

After conducting it as an independent paper for a very brief time, he changed its tone to a decidedly republican sheet, and subsequently, in the month of January, 1870, removed the office to Indiana, where he consolidated it with the Register and American, and styled the new paper the Indiana Progress, the first number being issued on the 21st of that month. It has continued a republican paper. Its present circulation is sixteen hundred and twenty-five.

THE INDIANA TIMES, W. PHILADELPHIA STREET.

The initial number was issued on the 4th of September, 1878, by John Lowry and J. A. C. Rairigh. On the 13th of November following, Mr. Lowry became the sole proprietor. It has been a republican paper from the first. Its circulation is eight hundred and fifty.

THE INDIANA DEMOCRAT, CHURCH STREET.

This paper was issued on the 4th of May, 1862, by James B. Sansom, who for the preceding ten years had been the editor and publisher of the Fulton Democrat, of McConnellsburg, Fulton county, The first press used in the Indiana Democrat office was formerly in the Mountain Echo office of Johnstown, of which George Nelson Smith was the editor. On the first of November, 1869, John R. Donahue became the proprietor, and was succeeded on the 1st of May, 1871, by Mr. Sansom, who associated with him at that time his son Frank. The firm has since been J. B. Sansom & Son. The paper's name is significant of its politics. The present circulation is about twelve hundred.

THE INDIANA NATIONAL, PHILADELPHIA STREET,

Is now in its second volume, and as an organ of the national greenback party has reached a circulation of over nine hundred. Frank Smith, the present publisher, was the founder.

A few months after the formal organization of the greenback labor party in Indiana county, the members of that party exerted themselves to secure the establishment of a newspaper devoted to the exposition of their political views and opinions, and the first issue of the paper was made on September 20th, 1878. The intention then was to run the paper until the close of the campaign in the following November. But when the returns of that election came in and the astonishing results were announced, it was resolved that its publication should be continued, and the paper is now (January, 1880,) still in successful operation, with over one thousand subscribers and a fair advertising patronage.

The National was started as a six-column folio, but with the first issue in January, 1880, was increased to seven columns to the page. Its subscription price remains at the uniform price of $1.00 per year.

Its founder and present editor and proprietor is Frank M. Smith, for many years previously connected with the Indiana Messenger.

Printing, as an art, had not attained to any great degree in Indiana, prior to 1855. The extent to which it had been carried, was limited to the issuing of the several newspapers, and to the execution of a few small hand bills and the common forms of blanks used in the public offices. Some time in the year 1852, the first hand bill, of half the size of the Register newspaper—18 by 24 inches—was printed by George Row. A year or two later, by order of the supreme court, all cases carried up from the lower courts upon writs of error, were required to be submitted in printed briefs, and for several years thereafter, a share of this class of work was executed in the Register office, under the immediate supervision of L. B. Row, the briefs being then printed on foolscap paper. About that time, or soon thereafter, the Register employees also introduced "color" printing in their job work—a small handbill, in red and black, being the first produced. About 1857 or 1858, George Row, acting as foreman of the Register office, also undertook the printing of school programmes, and turned out a class of work equal to that executed in the city establishments, and not inferior to the best class of plain work of the present day. Mr. Row also undertook, about this time, the printing of small books, constitutions and by-laws for societies, and for several years printed the minutes of the Allegheny Evangelical Lutheran Synod, a book of probably one hundred 8vo. pages. This class of work was executed in good style,—indeed, was complimented by the members of synod as better than any previously done for them. A few years after the Indiana County Agricultural Society had become established, George Row further concluded that the printing of the "fair bills," which had previously been executed at Pittsburgh, might as well be done at home. He contracted with the managers to print them a satisfactory bill, in three colors, comprising the whole of the premium list, regulations, and necessary information for holding the fair. This bill was a double sheet, 36 by 50 inches. The next year, and for a number of years thereafter, Mr. Row had the printing of the "fair bills," and enlarged the size of it to 36 by 60 inches. This work was accorded the merit of equaling the same class of work done at the more pretentious offices of the larger towns and cities. Augustus Row, who had worked for about a year in a Pittsburgh job office, introduced the printing of business cards and commercial printing generally—such as bill heads, statements, envelopes, &c. Since then, here and elsewhere, the art of printing, has been largely developed; and at this time the printing offices in Indiana county are capable of doing first-class work in most departments of the business.

The first printing press used in Indiana was of the original "Ramage" pattern—with its large square frames, "bed" inlaid with stone, and "platen" of wood, held in place by strong cords. This was succeeded by a patent "Ramage" press, having a metallic bed and platen, with springs and other improvements. This press was still in use, to some extent, in the Register office in 1860, for jobbing. In March, 1855, Jonathan Row, having decided to enlarge the Register, it became necessary to procure a larger press than the patent "Ramage," and he purchased from L. Johnson & Co., of Philadelphia, a No. 4 Washington press, constituted of iron, and an excellent machine of its class, upon which the Register was printed until it passed into the hands of Mr. Birkman. The Times is now printed upon the same press. The Clarion of Freedom was printed upon an old Franklin press; and the same press was also used for printing the True American; but what has become of it is not known to the writer. The Messenger and Democrat were also printed upon iron hand presses, until within a few years past. Now, the Messenger, Progress and Democrat offices have each a large cylinder newspaper press, and first-class "jobbers." In the Messenger and Democrat offices these machines are run by steam power.

JOHN DENNISTON

Was born in "Denniston's town," or "New Alexandria," Westmoreland county, in 1786, and was the son of Samuel and Nancy Denniston. The former was a son of Alexander Denniston, who laid out the village of "Denniston's town," and for whom it was called "New Alexandria."

Samuel Denniston's children were: Samuel, d., m. to Rebecca Campbell, d.; John, d. in 1829, m. first in 1807 to Mary Campbell, d., daughter of General Charles Campbell, and second to Eliza Patton, d.; William, d., m. to Sarah Cooper, d.; Rachel Mary, d., m. to a Mr. Day, d.; and Nancy, d., m. to a Mr. Massey, d.

John Denniston located in Indiana in 1806, and opened a store at the county seat. Prior to this he had kept a small store at Gen. Campbell's mill's. His children were: Charlotte Clark, born in Indiana in 1808, m. first to John Patton, d., and second to William Banks, d.; Julia Ann, m. to James McKennan, d.; Jane, d.; Mary, m. to Thomas Parker; Margaret, d.; Elizabeth P., m. to John Royer; Martha, m. to Alex. Reynolds; Sarah, m. to Steel Blair; John, d., m. to Maria Milligan; and James, m. to Martha McNamara, d.

Mrs. Charlotte C. Banks' children, by first husband, were: Charlotte D., d., m. to Dr. Thomas St. Clair; John D., m. to Emily Campbell; and Mary, d., m. to Thomas B. Lloyd.

ALEXANDER TAYLOR.

He was of Scotch-Irish extraction, and came from Bedford county to Indiana county about the time of the establishment of the county seat. He was a surveyor by profession. He died in 1816. His first wife was Mary McKesson, and the second Margaret McFadden.

The children were: Robert, d., m. to Margaret Patton, d.; John, d. (surveyor general of the state), m. to Mary Wilson, d.; William, d., m. to Jane Wilson, d.; Alexander, d., (surveyor) m. to Sarah Cromwell; James, d., surveyor, and Matthew, d.

John Taylor's children were: A. W., attorney, m. to Elizabeth Ralston; Caroline, d., m. to Joseph J. F. Young, d.; James M., M. D., m. to Margaret Blair; and Washington, d.

The children of A. W., a son of John Taylor, were: Fannie, John, d.; Margaret, Mary, m. to S. S. Wilson; Carrie, Bessie and Bell.

The Children of William, a son of Alexander Taylor, were. James Knox, John, d.; Alexander, Mary J., m. to A. M. Stewart; Elizabeth, m. to John G. Coleman, d., and Sarah, d.

The children of Alexander, a son of Alexander Taylor, were. Robert Cromwell, banker, m. to Sarah J. Bell; Matthew, d., attorney, m. to Sarah H. Sill; Mary, d.; and William, d.

R. C.'s (a son of Alex. Taylor, jr.,) children were: Alexander, m. to Lydia Wettling; John, m. to Margaret Johnston, and Alice.

The only children of Matthew, a son of Alexander, jr., were: Rev. Francis M. S. Taylor (Protestant Episcopal), m. to Addie Seymour, daughter of John S. Seymour, a brother of Bishop Seymour; and Helen, d. in infancy.

JOHN M'ANULTY, JR.,

Was born in Franklin county, and served in the Revolutionary war. He was married to Isabella McLane, of Chambersburg, and with their goods and chattels on pack horses, they migrated to Indiana county.

Their children were: Michael, Margaret, m. to Philip Rice; Mary, m. to Daniel Stanard; Martha, m. to Peter Sutton, jr.; Patrick, drafted in the war of 1812, served his time in full, and came home; he re-enlisted, served his time in full, but never returned; Isabella, m. to Philip Sipher; John, m, to Rachel Templeton, and Anna.

THE CALDWELLS.

Wm. W. Caldwell, the father of Robert and Stephen Caldwell, was among the early settlers of Franklin county. He was a native of Ireland and located near Green Castle, in the aforenamed county. After Stephen grew to manhood he migrated to some of the southern states, and his career there was not known. Robert resided on the homestead of his father, on the Conococheaque creek. He had five sons, viz: John, James, William, George and Joseph; and four daughters, viz: Margaret, Agnes, Mary and Eliza.

On the 28th of October, 1782, James was married, and about 1785, moved to Westmoreland county, near "Wallace's Fort," which was situated near the "Broad Fording," on the Conemaugh. He brought his two children over the Allegheny mountains in what was called a creel, or a basket, on either side of a pack horse. He had six sons, viz: Robert, John, James, William W., Benjamin and Joseph; and three daughters, viz: Mary, Margaret and Isabel.

After James had left Franklin county his father removed to Short Creek, Ohio county, West Virginia, and built here a mill, remaining for some years. He afterward removed to Washington county and settled on Brush run, about seven miles from Cannonsburg. His sons William and Joseph came with him to Pennsylvania. John remained at the Short Creek settlement. George removed to the northeastern part of Ohio. Robert Caldwell and his sons were blacksmiths.

James' sons, with the exception of one, were blacksmiths. In 1826, James removed to a farm near Punxsutawney, Jefferson county, and subsequently located in the latter village, where he died on the 19th of December, 1836.

His fourth son, William Waddle Caldwell, left home and got married. About five years after this event, in April, 1816, he came to Indiana. He commenced blacksmithing on the northwest corner of Water street and Carpenter's alley. In the early part of 1817, he added the nail cutting business to his smith establishment. He manufactured all the cut nails that were used in Indiana, and parts of Westmoreland, Armstrong, Jefferson and Cambria counties.

The machine used was propelled by one person using the right hand on one lever, and the right foot on another lever. The left hand was occupied in manipulating the iron from which the nails were cut. The iron was called "nail iron," and was of different widths, according to the requisite sizes desired, such as shingle, clapboard, brads, lathing, etc. Two-inch shingle nails were sold for 37½ cents per pound; clapboard do., 25 cents; brads, 18 cents; lathing, 31 cents, etc.

Before cutting, the iron was brought to a red heat in the common blacksmith fire. After the nails were cooled, they were taken to a place to be headed. This was done with a spring vise, which was closed by the pressure of the right foot. Only one nail was inserted at a time. One stroke of the hammer on the nail made a brad; two more made a clapboard or weatherboarding nail.

The iron was procured at the different rolling mills in Huntingdon county, and hauled in wagons to Indiana county.

In 1820, he erected the house now known as the "Black Horse hotel," and moved his establishment to a shop on the same lot.

In 1828, he built an addition to his house, and in 1829, he abandoned his shop and engaged in hotel keeping, In 1837, he retired to private life. In 1842, he built a house on his farm adjoining the borough, and resided there till 1853. He returned to Indiana, where he died July 8, 1856, at the age of sixty-seven years.

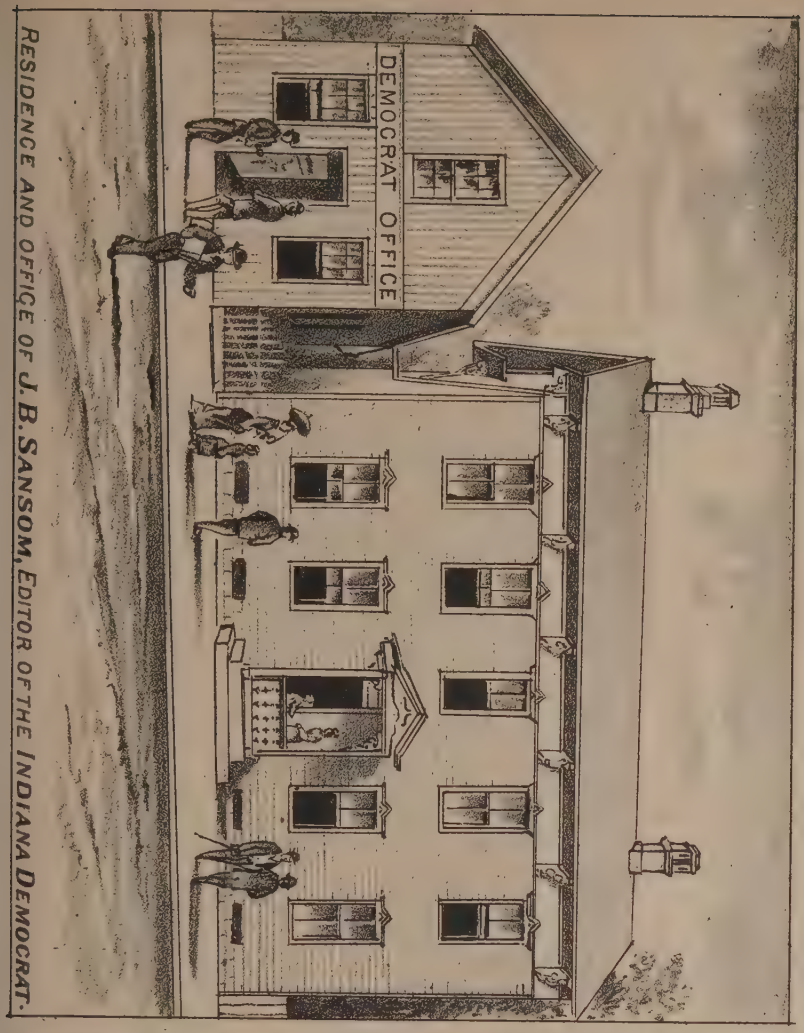
SAMUEL M'CARTNEY

Was born in 1818, on what is now the "State Experimental Farm," White township, and was a son of George and Nancy McCartney, nee Adams. The former was born in what is now Indiana county, in 1796, and a son of Samuel McCartney, a blacksmith, who made a settlement on the above tract at an early period, and had a blacksmith shop there not many years subsequent to the founding of the county seat.

Nancy Adams, the wife of George McCartney, was born on the farm now occupied by Garvin Adams McLain, White township, when the house was surrounded by hostile Indians. She died in 1877.

SAMUEL M'CARTNEY,

A pioneer, who lived near the present site of Indiana, was a native of eastern Pennsylvania, and was married to Nancy Young, a native of Maryland. They died in 1815, of what was then called "black fever." Their children were: George, m. to Nancy Adams; Samuel, m. to Betsy Hutchison; Jacob, m. first Martha Bracken, and second Margaret Shearer; Andrew,



RESIDENCE AND OFFICE OF J. B. SANSOM, EDITOR OF THE INDIANA DEMOCRAT.

RESIDENCE OF JOHN LOWRY, ESQ. EDITOR & PROPRIETOR OF THE INDIANA TIMES.

PROGRESS PRINTING OFFICE W. R. BLACK, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR, INDIANA, PA.

INDIANA MESSENGER J. R. SMITH & SON, EDITORS & PROPRIETORS INDIANA, PA.

d. when a young man; John Y., m. to Sarah Coleman; Martha, m. James Adams; Penelope, m. Garvin Adams; Elizabeth, m. to John Jackson; and Jane, m. to James Jackson.

John and Elizabeth Jackson's children were: Nancy Jane, m. to W. A. Coleman; Sarah T., m. to John Martin; Mary E. m. to Henry Owens; Martha M., m. to T. A. Cochran; Joseph Buffington, United Presbyterian minister of Elderton, now residing at Elderton; and Winfield Scott, d. in infancy.

WILLIAM SHIELDS,

(The father of the present William Shields, living on north Sixth street,) was born on the banks of "Yellow Breeches" creek, Cumberland county, on the 4th of July, 1784. In the following year, his parents loaded a few effects on pack horses, and started to find a home west of the Allegheny mountains. In crossing the mountains, our subject was placed in a creel; on the other end was put a large favorite cat and eight pounds of flax to balance him.

In descending the western slope, William became restless. His father took him out of the creel, and carried him in his arms for some distance in advance of the party. Calls of the father "to hurry up, come quick," aroused the remainder of the party. Crouched on the side of the path was a starved she panther, which disputed the right of way. The mother took her babe, while the father and another man of the party, stoned the panther to death.

They landed at Black-lick, and stopped with General Charles Campbell. Here other children were born, and among them were three brothers, Joseph, John and James.

William was married in 1805, to Margaret Reed, a descendant of the English family of Lord Richard Say. In 1811, Governor Simon Snyder, appointed him captain of militia, and later in the same year, as major of the 2d battallion, 13th regiment. In 1812, he was commissioned coroner of the county, and in 1814 lieutenant-colonel of the 2d brigade, 15th division of militia, composed of the counties of Allegheny, Armstrong, Indiana and Jefferson.

In 1814, he came to Indiana, and kept a public house, known as the "Rising Sun." The emblem of which on the sign-board was painted by Sylvester Tinthoff.

In 1828, he left Indiana, and leased lands of Dr. Robert Mitchell, four hundred acres of which James Walls offered him the deed for a double-cased English watch. Considering the taxes worth more than the lands, he refused to buy at that price. His children have since seen the same lands sell for forty and fifty dollars per acre.

At the time of his arrival, only a few houses were erected. That part known as "South Church street," was a barren waste, as well as the present village of west Indiana. On the north, all the present broad and well improved farms were known only as "Young's old fields."

Mr. Shields was one of the viewers of the clay pike running from Ebensburg, Cambria county, via Indiana to Kittanning, Armstrong county.

In 1827, a woodpecker, perched upon the top limbs of a poplar tree, still standing in all its original vigor, at the north base of "Vinegar hill," on the land of Mrs. Charlotte Banks—he said to his son, then only a child of seven years, "William, would you like to have that bird?" The child answered "yes." He brought his rifle to his shoulder, and before the report had ceased, the command was "to go and get it."

He often spoke of his son shooting many a deer, where the present big warehouse and depot grounds now are. He sometimes related the following incidents: "See you these black marks of powder around that eye? That was done by Philip Youngblood, on the night of June 15th, 1818. We were at what was known as the Rock lick, on the outside of Indiana. A deer came into the lick, and both were to shoot at once. He put his flint lock on my shoulder, and at the word 'fire,' my eye got it."

"In July, 1817, I was asked by a supposed friend to go with him to what was known as 'McHenry's deer-lick,' about a mile and a half from Indiana. I went, but his restlessness interfered with the watching, and I concluded to go home. We started, and he kept behind and would not come up. I thought his conduct strange, but never got an explanation till the following summer, when they were among the party in search of Shryock. His former companion made the remark, 'I am cursed hungry.' Without a moment's hesitation, Shields pulled from his haversack two biscuits and gave them to him. This act brought them alongside, and, laying his hand on Shields' shoulder, he said: 'William, you have killed me. I intended to kill you the night I took you to the McHenry deer lick; but God being stronger than the devil, you still live.'"

He was the father of thirteen children, seven of whom are still living. He died November 28, 1860.

HON. JOSEPH THOMPSON.

He was born in what is now Washington township, in 1797. His father, Hugh Thompson, came to what is now the Robert Thompson farm, in Rayne township, in 1796. There were then no settlers from that point as far north as Port Barnett. The Indians were numerous and peaceful, and Mr. Thompson would exchange flour and provisions for their skins and furs; the latter he would pack to Bedford or Chambersburg, and bring back commodities that were necessities in the settlement.

Hugh's father was Robert Thompson, a native of Ireland, who settled in Pennsylvania in 1783. He died in 1807 in this county, at the age of eighty-four. Hugh Thompson died about 1817, at the age of sixty. His wife was Martha Thompson, a daughter of James Thompson, of Westmoreland county. She died in 1841, at the age of seventy-seven.

Joseph learned the chair-making trade in Pittsburgh, serving from 1815 to 1818. He worked for Patrick Hayes, one of the pioneer chair makers of Indiana, for about a year, and then purchased the establishment, managing the same for over thirty years. For several years the cabinet business was attached to his chair shop. For several years he was in the hardware business, having, as different partners, Archibald Stewart, Jr., and John C. Thompson, his son. He acted as associate judge for five years, and in several borough positions, as treasurer, tax collector, &c. He was married in 1822, to Euphemia, daughter of Joseph and Jane Moorhead, nee McElhoes. She died in 1873, at the age of seventy-three.

Their children were: Jane, d.; Hugh Alexander, d.; Martha, d., m. to F. M. Kinter; Joseph M., m. to Belle Jameson; Harriet, m., 1866, to James M. Richey, d. in 1877, in his sixty-third year; Mary, m. to John M. Ray, and John, d.

Hugh Thompson's (the father) children were: Mary, d., m. to John Fenton, d.; Jane, d., m. to John B. Henderson, d.; Joseph, see above; James, d., m. to Ann Ayer; Robert, d., m. to Mary Leasure, d.; John, d., m. to Ellen Patton, d.; Wm. C. (b. in the John Thompson block house), m. to Harriet Ferguson, of Mansfield, Ohio; Hugh Alexander (prothonotary of Clarion county for six years; clerk in secretary of state's office under Governors Curtin and Geary), m. to Elizabeth Mulholland, and Samuel H., d. m. to Florana Stewart.

JOHN G. THOMPSON.

He was born in Conemaugh township, in 1798. His parents were Moses and Jane Thompson, nee Jamison. The latter was a daughter of John Jamison, and died in 1801, about twenty-three years of age. Moses Thompson's second wife was Nancy Coleman, who died in 1855, about seventy years of age. Moses Thompson's father was Robert Thompson, who settled in Conemaugh township in 1790. He died in 1802, at the age of seventy. His wife was Mary Gordon, who died in 1846, over ninety-five years of age.

John G. Thompson was married first in 1822, to Eliza Kincaid, of Somerset county, who died in 1827, about twenty-three years of age; and second, in 1831, to Jane E. Jamison. By the first union the children were: William and Edwin, deceased; by the second the children were: Julia Ann, m. to James McClellan; Emily J., Martha L., m. to James Mitchell; Jesse Jameson, d.; Harriet R., m. to Wm. C. Blakly; Maria L., m. to Alvius B. Clark; Nancy J., d.; Margaret, d.; Teresa Kossuth, and Ella, d.

Our subject was justice of the peace for fifteen years. He served in the 99th regiment Pennsylvania militia as captain seven, major seven, and colonel two years. For over fifty years he was engaged as a tanner.

JOHN MAGEE.—He was born in Lewiston, Pennsylvania, on the 30th of May, 1797. In 1818, his parents, Andrew and Rachel Magee nee Cochran, located in Black-lick township, and after a residence of six years therein, removed to Clarion county.

Our subject was a potter by trade, and was the second in the county seat as well as in the county, (Robert Painter, was the first.) He had worked seven years in Johnstown, and fifty-eight in this borough, and retired at the age of eighty. He made brick in Indiana, in the seasons of 1822–3–4. His earthen ware acquired considerable repute, but this in later years, was supplanted by stone ware, and Magee's pots, jars, &c., were as household words over a large section of country.

He was married in 1829, to Pauline Bullard, a daughter of Charles and Jane Bullard nee Chapman. She died in 1875, at the age of seventy-five. Their children were, Robert, Lucy, d., m. to Samuel Trimble; Rachel, m. to E. C. Jameson; John, William, d., and Mary, m. to Noah Lohr.

JAMES BAILEY, a son of Robert and Jane Bailey nee McKee, was born in Philadelphia on the 27th of March, 1801. His parents were natives of Ireland, and were married in Philadelphia. The former died in 1817, at the age of sixty-three. He was a carpenter by trade, and our subject worked at that calling for several years. In October, 1819, Mrs. Bailey, with her son James, removed to Indiana county, where she died in 1836, at the age of sixty-three.

The settler's first work was at Abraham Moore, sr's, in Washington township. In 1820, he removed to the Watson place, in Armstrong township, where he made salt and meat barrels, split-bottom chairs, etc. In 1829, he assisted in making the lock on the Pennsylvania canal, near Blairsville, and was afterwards engaged in working at his trade in Shelocta and other places. Subsequently for two years he peddled dry goods, notions, etc., in Indiana, Jefferson and Armstrong counties. In 1836, he was associated in the mercantile business with David Ralston, where Patton's restaurant is now situated, and afterwards clerked for Edward O'Neil, at the "Diamond" or Mitchell's mills. For two years, he had charge of a store, on the site of Hassinger's grocery establishment, for Jonathan Ayres.

From 1842 to 1846, he was a partner with James Sutton, and managed a store at Kellysburg, under the firm name of Bailey & Co. From 1847 to 1850, he also was a partner of Mr. Sutton, in a general store, at Greenville, and at the same time, was an agent for John Huffnagle.

In 1855, in company with Charles Gompers, he went to Philadelphia, and for eight months, took charge of the Ohio house, formerly kept by Fred. Hembold. In 1856, he purchased Robert Johnson's interest in the Enterprise foundry, (subsequently the Indiana foundry), John H. Shryock, being the other partner, and subsequently became the sole proprietor. He was also, for some time, a partner in the planing mill, now the property of J. R. Daugherty.

During the summer of 1861, he was engaged in boring for oil in Columbiana county, Ohio, and at that period, was a stockholder in some of the companies operating at McClintockville, and other points in the Venango county oil field. During the war, he purchased horses for the army, in Clarion, Jefferson, Armstrong and Indiana counties.

In 1868, he purchased the balance of the Rhodes' store stock, and disposed of it at regular sales. During his late career he has settled several estates, Carpenter, Miller and others; has acted as jury commissioner, and has led an active life.

During the summer and fall of 1879, he worked regularly at his old trade, making dry-houses, wheel-barrows, &c.

JAMES MILLER was born in the county Tyrone, Ireland, in 1791, and was a son of Moses and Catharine Miller nee Beatty.

In 1818, he came to Philadelphia, and in 1820, his wife, Nancy Allen, and two children, Catharine and Sarah, having joined him in the city, together they migrated to Armstrong township. His wife died in 1878, in her eighty-fifth year.

Their children were: Catharine, m. to Samuel St. Clair; Sarah, m. to Isaac St. Clair; Nancy, m. to John St. Clair; Mary A., m. to Wm. A. Stewart; Jane, m. to Christopher Boreland; Margaret, m. to John B. Peelor; Rebecca, m. to Thomas Hill, and Eliza, m. to Joseph Lowry.

Mr. Miller located in Indiana in 1858. He has been connected with the Presbyterian church for sixty-six years.

JAMES CLARK.—He was born in Plum Creek township, Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, in 1806. His parents were William and Sarah Clark nee Woodward. The former died in 1823, at the age of forty-five; the latter, in 1821, at the age of thirty-five. James Clark, the grandfather of our subject, was an officer in the Revolutionary army, and among the first settlers of Armstrong county. He had migrated to Westmoreland county about the time that Hannahstown was burned.

Our subject was married in 1831 to Ann Moorhead, a daughter of Fergus Moorhead. In 1835, he removed to Indiana county, and was engaged in the tannery business for about thirty-seven years. He has been a justice of the peace of the borough of West Indiana for seven years. His children were: Sarah E., m. to Dr. W. B. Stewart, d.; Silas M., m. to Clara Moorhead, a daughter of William Moorhead, of Indiana; William, d.; Fergus Scott, m. to Juliet McElhoes; James, d., m. to Laura Maxner, and Woodward, d.

Silas M. Clark, son of the above, was born in 1834. He was prepared for college at the Indiana academy, and graduated at Jefferson college in the class of 1852, having entered the junior class two-thirds advanced. He taught the academy for some years, read law with William M. Stewart, was admitted to the bar in 1857, and has been an active practitioner for twenty-two years.

At South Bend, Armstrong county, there was in the latter part of the last century a block house called "Clark's fort," or "Clark's station," so named after James Clark, the pioneer.

ALEXANDER THOMPSON MOORHEAD was born in what is now Homer City on the first of June, 1800. His parents were Alexander and Nancy Moorhead nee Thompson. She was a daughter of James Thompson, and was married to Mr. Moorhead on the 20th of August, 1799. Our subject's grandfather was Alexander Moorhead, a very early settler of this section, locating near the site of Homer City, in 1781. He died in Clarion county in his ninety-third year. The children of Alexander and Nancy Moorhead were: A. T., Mary Parks, d., m. to Wm. Bruce; Margaret, d., m. to Joseph Wallace, d.; William, m. to Susan Bodine, d.; Nancy Riddle, d., m. to Samuel Steel, d.; Joseph Washington, d., m. to Miss Brown; Robert Brown, d., m. to Rosanna Mowry; John Milton, d.; Charlotte, d., and Lavinia, d.

Our subject has been thrice married; first in 1821, to Mary Morrow McKee who died in 1836; second in 1837, to Jane H.

Hart, who died in 1858; and third in 1858, to Mrs. Nancy Wills, nee Moore. His children are: James McKee, d.; Joseph McCloud, m. to Margaret McFarland; Nancy A., m. to Robert Lowry; Alexander T., m. first to Mary J. Hutchinson, and second to Mrs. Margaret Rankin, nee Speedy; Mary J., m. to Joseph B. Adair, and Margaret T., d., m. to Stewart Thompson.

The children of Joseph McCloud Moorhead were: Wilson A., Steele L., Theodore P., Agnes M., Edith, Harry W. and Frank W.

The children of Alexander Thompson Moorhead, jr., were: H. H., Mary M. M., Charles W., Nettie, Fred, Edgar Thompson, Sadie Dales, William F., Albert Speedy, Evangeline M., A. Ralph, Frank and Bennie.

William Smith.—Among the first settlers of what is now Center township, was William Smith, grandfather to ex-sheriff Jos. R. Smith. In the year 1772 he located on a tract of land, which was afterwards owned by Jos. Clawson, and resided there for a number of years. When the Indians commenced their depredations in that vicinity he took his wife and child to Wallace's fort. He returned to his cabin to get his plow irons and other farming implements, and was there the very day that Laughlin, Campbell and others were captured and taken off by the Indians, not a mile away. After the hostile Indians had left he took his family back to his improvement, and shortly after was again driven away by the appearance of hostile Indians. This time he took shelter at Donohue's, above Blairsville. Being in constant dread of Indians, he returned to Conococheaque, in Franklin county, his original home. He took part in the Revolutionary struggle, serving in the Pennsylvania line. After the war returned to Indiana county and improved his lands. During his absence of seven years his cabin had not been disturbed. Here he resided until his death, which occurred in 1822. He left his fame to his two sons, William and James. His son James resided in the same township till the day of his death, which occurred in 1879, at the age of ninety-three. He is referred to elsewhere. William married Miss Annie Reed, and resided on the old homestead till 1829, when he located on a farm two miles southeast of the borough of Marion, and continued to reside there till his death, which occurred in in 1867, at the age of seventy-seven years. He was the father of fourteen children, six of whom are still living. In 1833 his entire family, except himself and his son Joseph R. Smith, were stricken down with a most malignant type of scarlet fever, and four of the children died in the space of two weeks. This was the first appearance of the disease in that portion of the county, and the neighbors were greatly alarmed, and it was with difficulty that sufficient assistance could be procured to bury the dead. When he first located in the northern part of the county, wild game was very abundant, and deer and wild turkeys were seen almost daily near the house. So plenty were they that it was with difficulty the growing crops were protected from their incursions. On one occasion his son John T. Smith and another young man went to the woods to cut some timber. When a short distance from the house, they discovered two large bucks with horns so interlaced as to prevent them from getting loose, and the young men despatched them with their axes. During the same year a pack of wolves entered the field near the house and attacked the calves therein, and were with difficulty driven away. On another occasion several bears visited a pile of corn stored near the barn, and destroyed a large quantity of it. In common with all the early settlers, he experienced many hardships. Of his children, four daughters and two sons still survive. One of the daughters is married to Alex. Hopkins, of Indiana; one to Peter Kinter, of Center township, and the other two, Mary and Helen, are still single. Of the sons, Jos. R. Smith is the only one residing in this state, his brother, John T. Smith, having located in Illinois many years ago. Joseph R. Smith was born in 1816, and after arriving at an age when he was able to work followed the occupation of farming and teaching school, until he was the age of twenty-five years, when he moved to the town of Indiana, where he followed teaming till March, 1848, when he was elected constable, and was re-elected for nine successive years. In 1851, while he held the office of constable, the counties of Westmoreland and Indiana were infested with a gang of most daring horse-thieves. They were a terror to the country, and their depredations extended from Pittsburgh to Elmira, New York. No man who owned a good horse in all the country between these two points felt safe. Having learned that one of the gang had been arrested in Pittsburgh, Mr. Smith visited him and finally got him to expose the ramifications of the thieves. Returning to Indiana, he went to work to ferret out the members of the gang, and through his efforts twenty-five of the ringleaders were captured at the different headquarters and sentenced to the penitentiary. One of their principal depots was in West Wheatfield township, near Armagh. But in less than a year the whole organization was broken up and the leaders serving the state, and that principally through the efforts of Mr. S. Some time after he retired from the office of constable he was appointed deputy sheriff, which position he held for two years, and in 1857 was elected sheriff of the county, which office he held for three years. Some time after this he was appointed to a position in the Philadelphia custom house, and in 1871 he was appointed assessor of internal revenue for the district composed of Indiana, Westmoreland and Fayette counties, and held the office until the duties of the assessors were transferred to the collectors. At the close of his term in the last mentioned office he joined his son, Samuel A. Smith, in the publication of the Indiana Messenger, which business he is still engaged in at this writing. was always a man of strong political convictions, and in early days was an enthusiastic abolitionist, and on more than one occasion piloted runaway slaves from one station to another on the "Underground Railroad," a branch of which passed through this county. He was one of the original republicans, and has adhered to that party ever since, and has always taken a deep interest in his success. The educational interests of the county have always received his warmest support, and he was one of the original projectors of the state normal school at this place, and has been one of the trustees ever since the organization of the board. Though suffering many hardships and being exposed to all kinds of weather in his younger days, he is still quite hale and hearty at this time, and more active than many men of his age.

William Anderson, M. D.—John Anderson, the father of Dr. Anderson, came from county Derry, Ireland, and located near Mathew's woolen factory, in what is now E. Wheatfield township, Indiana county, in the fall of 1817. He was a weaver and worker in all the departments of the manufacture of cloth. From his first location in the county he was connected with the above named mill, and after his first year's labors therein was made foreman.

In the spring of 1820 he removed to Taylorsville, having purchased a tract of land in its vicinity, and from that time to the date of his death, was engaged in farming. He served as justice of the peace for five years, and held the position of school director, and other offices of similar responsibility. He died on the 2d of October, 1876, his age numbering eighty-eight years and nine days. His wife was Margaret Thompson, whom he married in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1810. She died on the 15th of August, 1845, fifty-five years of age.

The children were Mary, b. in 1813, m. to Thomas Trimble; Jane, b. in 1816, d. in 1862, m. to Alexander Stephens; Margaret, b. in 1819, m. to Wm. Elwood; Nancy, b. in 1821, m. to

Wm. Mabon; Eliza, b. in 1823; William, b. in 1825, m. in 1855 to Jane McCracken of Indiana; Ann, b. in 1828, m. to Jacob L. Lydick; and Isabella, b. in 1831, d. in 1833.

Our subject was educated at the Blairsville and the Indiana academies, graduating from the latter in 1848. He read medicine with Dr. James M. Taylor, of Indiana, for two years, and graduated in 1852 from the Jefferson medical college of Philadelphia. In the session of 1868–9, he attended a supplementary course in the same institution. He has been a member of the county medical society since its organization in 1858, and was its first secretary, its second president, and has filled in turn its various offices, representing it at different times in the medical society of the state, of which he has been a permanent member since 1862, one of its vice-presidents in 1864 and the president in 1865. Since 1868 he has been a permanent member of the American medical association, and was a member of the international congress that met in Philadelphia in September, 1876. He has held no civil office, except that of school director and town councillor in the borough of Indiana.

WILLIAM EARL was born in Pittsburgh in 1819, and was a son of David and Mary Earl nee Cunningham. The former died in 1828, and the latter died in 1829. Our subject has worked at his trade as a tinner since 1835. He located in Indiana in 1841.

He was first married in 1844 to Sarah McNeel, and second to Jane McNeel. His children were. Elizabeth C., d.; Oliver C., m. to Annie Sweeny; John, d.; William Jr., m. to Emma Hildebrand, and George W.

He has served sixteen years as justice of the peace, and one term—1860–1—as county treasurer. He has been connected with the First National bank since its organization.

ANDREW W. KIMMELL was born in Westmoreland county in 1821, and was a son of Philip and Nancy Kimmell nee Flannigan. The former was a native of Westmoreland county, and the latter of Ireland. Philip was a son of Andrew Kimmell, who was an early settler of both what is now Westmoreland county and the south side of Centre township, Indiana county.

Our subject, at the age of eighteen, commenced to learn the tailor trade with Alexander Dickey, of Indiana, and at the end of his apprenticeship received sixteen dollars in money and four months' schooling. He taught school, worked at his trade, or other callings, as circumstances permitted. He served as a clerk in the Interior department at Washington from May, 1861, to November, 1866. During the exciting war period, he was a "constant and tried friend" of the wounded or sick soldier, whose sufferings he ever endeavored to mitigate. He was a member of the state house of representatives at the session of 1867, and from May, 1871, to December, 1874; and held a position in the custom house. His last public career was that of a member of the state house of representatives during the sessions of 1875 and '76. He has been twice married, first in 1845 to Amy C. McQuistu, d., and second in 1848, to Maria C., daughter of Conrad Rice, Sr. His children were: Sarah Melissa, d.; Myrtilla J., d.; Cynthia K., Albert W., John F., d.; Frank, d.; Mary, m. to W. H. Wood; Harry, in the U. S. navy; Edukin Charles, d., and Ellen Mary.

J. M. GUTHRIE, was born in Armstrong county, in 1833, and was a son of Samuel and Hannah Guthrie nee Speer. The former was a native of Armstrong county, his father James Guthrie, being among the very early settlers of what was afterwards that county.

In 1847, our subject went to Blairsville, where he was engaged as a clerk with his uncle, James Speer, a merchant. He studied surveying, and from 1852 to 1857, was engaged in the preliminary and construction surveys of the North Western, now West Pennsylvania railroad.

In 1858, he removed to Jacksonville, and was there engaged in merchandising for nine years. He erected the store room now occupied by Thomas & Neil, and also had within those years, stores at Clarksburg, West Lebanon and Elder's Ridge.

In 1867, he purchased the Mitchell's mills, Diamondville, and also managed a store there for one year. In 1868, he purchased the present location of his general store on Church street, West Indiana, having bought the general store and building of A. T. Moorhead & Co., who had erected the building and opened the store in the previous year. In 1868, in company with M. T. Moorhead, he opened a general store in Mechanicsburg, and conducted the same for two years. In 1869, he erected the building now occupied by G. H. Ogden, Homer City, and managed a general store therein for three years.

In 1879, he built, under the name of the St. Charles Improvement and Mining Company, the Homer mills, on the waters of Yellow creek, which have a capacity of twenty thousand feet of lumber per day. He is also operating two portable mills in Centre township, and is shipping thirty-two car loads of lumber per day. From Indiana alone, he has supplied over 50,000 railroad ties.

He has been twice married—first in 1860, to Jennie C., daughter of Samuel Wallace, of Blairsville, and second, to Anna W., daughter of Rev. Dr. Alexander Donaldson, of Elder's Ridge.

His children were: Speer W., William A., Nellie M., Murray Hamilton and Anna Donaldson.

J. S. G. WINE was born in Bucks county in 1827, was a son of William and Susannah Wine nee Buchamer, who were both born on the 4th of February, 1804. The former died in 1873; the latter is yet living. The father of William, John Wine, served five years in the Revolutionary war, and was a member of Washington's Life Guards. George, James and John, brothers of William, were soldiers in the war of 1812. The first was killed while serving on the Essex, off the coast of Valparaiso, South America.

William and his family settled in 1834 on what is now the Moses Johnston farm, Armstrong township. His only child was J. S. G., m. first to Fannie Kaufman, d., and second to Mary Garman. He served in the militia during the "Morgan raid."

His children were: William C., m. to Caroline Livingston; Nancy I., d.; Susannah Wilhelmina, d.; Rachel Elizabeth, d,, and Melinda Joanna.

WILLIAM ARTHUR, blacksmith, near the Penn mills, was born on the farm now owned by James Waddel, Green township, in 1822, and was a son of Philip and Annie Arthur nee Davis.

Their children were: William, m. to Eliza J. Lucas; Catharine, d.; Simon, d. in the regular army; Philip D., Elizabeth, m. to George W. Thomas, and Rachel, d. Our subject's only living child is Matilda.

MAJOR IRVIN MCFARLAND was born in Huntingdon county in 1823, and was a son of Robert and Nancy McFarland nee Donley, both of Scotch-Irish stock, who removed to Rose township, Jefferson county, in 1833.

Major McFarland has been a merchant, oil operator, lumberman, and a contractor. In 1868 he obtained the contract for building the Indiana court house, and completed the work in 1876. The contract price was $110,000. The amount actually paid, the original plans being changed, was $145,000.

In 1871, he became associated with the Indiana foundry, and since 1873, has been the sole proprietor.

REV. JOHN PORTCH, pastor of the Evangelical association of Indiana, was born in Camberwell, near London, England, in 1847. He was educated at a British school, and at Battersea college, and also served an apprenticeship at book-binding. He came to America in 1870, and studied theology in Talmadge's lay college, Brooklyn, New York.

His first ministry was on the Stark county, Ohio, circuit. He then removed to Jefferson county, Pa., and in 1875, to Indiana county.

John W. Books was born in Blair county in 1846, and was a son of Zachariah and Maria Books nee Clawson, who located in the county in 1850. His children were: John W., constable of borough, m. to Clara Repine; Harry, d.; Jennie, Clinton, Fannie, d., and Carrie, d.

Zachariah served in the 178th Pa. vols. for three years. John W. was in Co. K, 45th Pa. vols. for two years.

Our subject's children were: Mabel, Harry, d., and Mary.

E. P. Hildebrand was born in Adams county, in 1820, and was a son of William and Elizabeth Hildebrand nee Swigart. The former was a son of John Hildebrand. Our subject came to Indiana in 1849, and till 1860 was engaged in the drug business. He served as prothonotary for six years. Of late he has been the manager of the C. C. W. and P. works.

He was married in 1842, to Elizabeth Woods. His children were: Oliver E., d.; Laura L., married to Prof. J. H. Young; J. P., Harry W., m. to Elizabeth Farrington; Ida J., m. to Dr. J. M. Torrance; and Ella, m. to Thomas Sutton, attorney.

W. B. Hildebrand, a brother of E. P., was born in Adams county in 1825. He located in Indiana in 1853, and for three years was a clerk with his brother in the drug business. He has been engaged in the same trade at his present location on Philadelphia street, since 1856.

He was married in 1859, to Sarah McClaran. His children were: Thomas, Gertrude, Frank, Walter, Willie M., Walter Jackson (adopted), and Mary, d.

Col. Henry Altman was born on Altman's run, Indiana county in 1797, and was a son of Jacob Altman, an early settler of the county.

His children were: Henry, m. to Julia A. Sloan, and Jacob. Henry was a carpenter by trade. He was a colonel in the militia for thirty years. He entered the army as captain of Co. K, 105th Pa. vols., and served one and a half years, contracting a disease which caused his death in April, 1863, about three months after his return.

His children were: Lucinda, killed by the falling of the cupola of the Lutheran church in 1830; John S., d., editor of St. Paul, Minn., Herald; Wm. M. D., m. to Ann Campbell; Henry, m.; Esther, m. to Alexander McCullough; James Quigley, m. to Laura Pond; Julia, m. to Philip Deeds; Houston, Daniel S., m. to Emma Bair; Washington P., teacher seventeen years, county auditor three years, chief of police since 1877, m. to Ellen Glass, and Anna E.

William was surgeon of the 28th Pa. vols. and was promoted to Brigade surgeon, serving in all four years. He was on "Sherman's march to the sea." Henry was captain of Co. E, 1st N. Y. vols. Daniel S. was commissary sergeant of Co. E, 206th Pa. vols. for about one year. W. P. was first sergeant of Co. A, 19th U. S. infantry for three years and re-enlisted in same regiment. He was in seventeen battles and was wounded. He was on Gen. White's staff in Pa. militia for five years, holding the rank of major.

S. Myers, was born in what is now White township, in 1815, and was a son of David and Sarah Myers nee Becht, who settled in the county about 1812. Their children were: Elizabeth, George, m., first to Catharine Adams, d., and second, to Elizabeth Kinter; David, m. to Mary Evans; John, m., first to Mary Wiggins, d., and second, to a Miss Bartlett; Isaac, d.; Hannah, m. to Isaac Kinter; Samuel, m. first to Catharine Boucher, d., and second to Sarah Pease; Sarah, m. to Josiah Kinter; Jacob, m. to Martha Kinter, d.; Mary, m. to Conrad Rice, d., and Margaret, m. to Jacob Boucher.

Our subject has worked at the shoemaking trade in Indiana, since 1832, and is now the senior of the craft. His children were: Susannah, d.; Henry, Mary, M., d.; Selina, William, d.; Sarah, d.; Amanda, d.; Charles, d.; and Elizabeth. Henry and William were in the war of 1861.

Lawrence Keslar, came to Indiana in 1833. He was born in Alsace, Germany, in 1805. He was first married in 1834, to Eve Boucher, who died in 1857, and again in 1867, to Mrs. Margaret Beamer nee Milligan.

The children were: Elizabeth, d.; John, d.; Lawrence, jr., m., first to Ellen McGinnis, d., and second, to Lida C. McGinnis; Henry, d.; Virginia, m. to J. Wilson Thompson, and Mary E.

Our subject has been engaged in the merchant tailor trade, and clothing business since 1833. The store is located opposite the Lewis house, on Philadelphia street, the firm being of late years, L. Keslar & Son. (L., jr.)

George Beck, was born in Berks county, in the year 1802, and was a son of John and Mary Beck nee Hawk. The former was a native of Berks county. The family removed to Union, thence to Centre, thence to Clearfield, where they died at the age of seventy-eight, and were buried in the Luthersburg cemetery.

The children were: Jacob, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Kate, John, d.; Conrad, d.; Daniel, d.; George, m. to Susannah Bennett, d. in 1874, at the age of sixty-three; Louis, Margaret, m. to Frederick Syler; Susannah, d.; Henry, Isaac and William.

George's children were: Elizabeth, m. to Henry Miller; Margaret, m. to John Faith; Mary, m. to Andrew Miller; Martha, d. in 1859, m. to David Lute; John, d.; Catharine, d.; Susannah, d.; Rebecca Jane, m., first to William Landers, d., second, to Michael Miller, d., and third, to James McGinity; Christiana, Isaac, m. to Amanda E. Sheffler; Abraham, m. to Margaret Francis Marks, and Sarah Amanda, d.

Abraham's only child is Lawrence.

Our subject has been a blacksmith for fifty-nine years, fifty of which have been passed in Indiana county, and thirty at the county seat.

The children of Isaac and Amanda E. Beck, were: Edson Evart, Harry Jennings, and William George.

A. M. Stewart was born on the Stewart homestead, Armstrong township, in 1825, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Stewart, nee Armstrong. The former was a son of William and Margaret Stewart, nee Getty. (Gettysburg, Adams county, was named after the latter's uncle.) William was a native of Ireland, where he was born in 1760. He and his wife and one child, an infant, arrived in America about 1782. His first location was near Gettysburg, Adams county, removing in 1794 to the farm long occupied by his son, Archibald Stewart, in Armstrong township. He started a store about 1798 or 1799, which was probably the first in the county north of Armagh or Newport. He was succeeded by Archibald, his son. His children were: Archibald, d. in 1877, at the age of ninety-four, merchant till 1858 on the old homestead; John, d., m. to Elizabeth Armstrong, d.; William, d., m. first to a Miss Laird, d., and second to Rachel Robinson, d.; Martha, d., m. to Robert Pattison.

The children of John Stewart, a son of William, were: Wm. G., m. first to Mary C. Van Horn, d., and second to Arienne Comegist; Robert H., m. first to Rebecca Lewis, d., and second to Sarah Loughery; A. M., m. to Mary J. Taylor; Archibald W., first lieutenant company B., 11th Pa., died May 20, 1864, of wounds received in the "Seven Days battle;" James M., m. to Virginia Kelly, daughter of James Kelly, killed in the Mexican war; Flora Anna, d., m. to Samuel H. Thompson, d.; Elizabeth R., m. to Robert McQuilken; Leny Ann, m. to W. W. Hamilton; Maria, m. to W. A. Work; and Martha C., m. to Samuel S. Mabon.

SAMUEL SEBRING was born in Lycoming county in 1813, and was the son of William and Deborah Sebring, nee Tallman. The former came to the site of the McKeage grist mill, Cherry Tree, in 1826, and in that and the following year erected a frame grist mill, about twenty-six feet square. Here our subject acted as miller for several years.

In 1828, Mr. Sebring built a saw mill, and in 1833 he disposed of the property to the Newmans, removing in the same year to a farm about four and a half miles east of Indiana, well known as the Blockhouse tract.

He died in 1867, in his eighty-fourth year. His first wife (Deborah) died in 1838, in her forty-sixth year. His second wife was Sarah Fyock.

The children by the first marriage were: Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Mitchell; Henry, m. first to Maria Irwin, d., and second to Mrs. Sarah Heiner, nee Lockard; Eliza, m. to Wm. C. Boyle, d.; Sarah, m. to Wm. Crawford; Rachel, m. to John F. McClain, d.; Eleanor, m. to Wm. McHenry; William, d.; Deborah, m. to John Caldwell; Nancy, m. first to Wilson Long, d., and second to George Duncan; Martha, m. to James W. Mahan; Rebecca, m. to Thomas Byrne; Jeremiah T., m. to Sarah Grumbling; John T., d. at the battle of Cold Harbor, m. to Angeline Evans, and Isabella, d. Jeremiah T. was a lieutenant and afterwards a captain in a colored regiment during war of 1861.

Our subject located in Indiana in 1841. He is now serving his fifth term as justice of the peace.

WILLIAM C. BOYLE was born in Cambria county in 1820, and was a son of Philip and Mary Boyle nee Cantwell. He settled in Indiana county in 1840, where he was a merchant, proprietor of a flouring mill, justice of the peace for several years, and the first cashier of the first bank of the borough.

He died in 1866. His wife was Eliza Sebring, a daughter of William and Deborah Sebring.

Their children were: A. C., m. to Mary S. Drum, daughter of Hon. Augustus Drum. A. C. was admitted to the bar in 1864, having read law with Judge Thomas White, and was a partner with his preceptor and his son, Gen. Harry White; he is now serving on his third term as prothonotary; Sarah A., m. to Rev. W. H. H. McBride, M. E.; Mary A., m. to E. H. Wilson; Lizzie R., m. to Willard Leonard, and Laura, d.

MRS. JANE WATT was born in Huntingdon county in 1815, and was a daughter of John and Mary McKennan nee McCahan. Her parents having died when she was five years of age, she came to Indiana to reside with her sister Mary, the wife of Leonard Shryock. She was married in 1834 to Isaac M. Watt, who died in 1874, at the age of sixty-three. Mr. Watt served as county treasurer, register and recorder, associate judge and justice of the peace. He was a saddler by trade and carried on his shop at the same time he attended to his public duties.

Their children were: Martha, d.; Eliza C., m. to Andrew D. McClain; Mary J., m. to Thomas Stoutenburg; Isabella, m. to Dr. John Evans; Julia, m. to William Portser; James, m. to Nettie Jamison; Sarah, m. to Alexander St. Clair; Emma, m. to Anthony Ewing; Laura, Harry, Anna, m. to Martin V. B. Patterson, and Rilla, m. to George Rugh.

CONRAD WISSEL.—He was born in Bavaria, Germany, where he married, in 1829, Martha Frank. In 1840, they removed to Dauphin county, Pa. After remaining one year, they migrated to Perry county, and three years later, made their permanent home in Indiana county. He died on the 5th of July, 1878, about twenty-nine years of age.

Their children were: John A., m. to Anna Curran, one child, William Conrad; Anna Nary, m. first to Henry Young, d., and second to Clemence Hagg; Magdalena, m. to Thomas O'Brien, d.; Catharine, m. to G. Marshall; Henry C., m. to Kate White, and John N.

NATHANIEL P. TURNER.—His father, Joseph Turner, was born in Franklin county, Pa., and in 1794, migrated to this section, locating in the neighborhood of Campbell's mills. He was a wheelwright by trade, but later in life became a chair-maker. He served in several official capacities, as will be noted in the tables and early history of the county. His wife was Margaret Porter, whom he married in Washington county, Pa. He died near Jacksonville on the 17th of March, 1847, in the seventy-seventh year of his age.

Adam Turner, the father of Joseph, came to the county of Westmoreland before Hannahstown was burned, and after a few years, on account of the troubled condition of the frontier, returned to Franklin county.

Nathaniel was married in 1835 to Margaret C., a daughter of Major Michael and Elizabeth Campbell nee Ramsey. Major Campbell was a son of Gen. Charles Campbell. Miss Ramsay was a daughter of Maj. Jas. Ramsay, a native of Ireland, and who had settled on what is now the James Hood farm, White township, a short time after the Fergus Moorhead location. Owing to the Indian massacre in the neighborhood of his home, he retired to Franklin county.

J. C. JOHNSTON, son of Samuel H. Johnston, formerly a commissioner of this county. Our subject, when seventeen years old, by getting a permit from his father, then provost marshal, enlisted in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, February 25, 1864. At sunrise, morning of May 10, 1864, when on skirmish line near Spottsylvania, was struck by a piece of shell, which carried away part of the ear, the entire cheek and cheek bone, part of the lips and most all the teeth on left side. Lying all day on the field, in the evening Lieutenant Price sent four men to carry him back and bury him, but to use his own words, he says: "I was not the man they were looking for; by that time I could crawl around." Dr. George R. Lewis dressed the wounds, but no one thought he could live, yet to satisfy his own desire, he was sent to hospital at Fredericksburg in a supply wagon, no ambulances being at hand. The distance was sixteen miles, and he has said: "The only time I ever thought of death was in the wagon on a corduroy road." At the hospital he was told if he had any will to make, it must be done soon, but he says, "I thought I would not give up so soon. I had got over the trip in the wagon without dying, and did not think I was going to die at the hospital."

The Rev. John D. Knox, of Greenville, seeing the boy in the hospital, and supposing he must die, inquired of him, and learning he was of Indiana county, introduced himself, and after some other questions, asked if he should pray for him. He answered "No, but you may write a letter for me to father." This Mr. Knox did for him, and it was the first information Mr. Johnston received of the condition of his son. The boy soldier, not thinking of dying, and finding a man who wished to do something for him, answered Mr. Knox so promptly, suggesting the thing of most anxiety to him, that the words have never been forgotten, and Mr. Johnston now assures us the story is true. He is now county clerk of Harvey county, Kansas; his home on the farm four miles from Newton.

Since the war he has had the fleshy part of the neck drawn up over the wound, covering the exposed bones and mouth, the flesh grew in place, but the nerves are paralyzed. He suffers but little inconvenience, except in stooping, when the flow of blood to the head causes bleeding of the nose.

DANIEL WILLIAMS.—He migrated from Caernavon, Wales, to Ebensburg, Cambria county, Pa., and thence to Green town ship, Indiana county, where in 1829, he located at Mitchell's mills, or the "Diamond." His wife was Mary Waters, whom he married at Ebensburg. She was born in Wales, and came to America on the same ship that bore Mr. Williams.

He was a blacksmith by trade, and pursued this vocation for some years after his settlement in this county. He subsequently purchased a large tract of land at Pine Flat, and connected farming with his trade during his career in that vicinity. He died in 1865, at the age of fifty-six. He was an ardent anti-slavery citizen, and did all in his power to encourage the growth of abolitionism.

He served as school director and township examiner for some years, and was instrumental in founding Pine Flat academy.

His children were: Rachel, d.; John W., Daniel, d.; Evan, m. to Sarah Davis; Jane H., m. to Dr. J. W. Dinwiddie; Mary P.; Hannah, d.; Philip A., m. to Mary B. Nixon, daughter of Edward Nixon, and Gwennie.

Michael Sweeny, was born near the foot of Nitna mountain, Centre county, in 1806. His parents were George and Mary Sweeny nee Tolan, and were both of Irish birth.

The family removed to Green township, Indiana county, in May, 1815, where a tract of four hundred acres of land was purchased, at a dollar and a half per acre.

George Sweeny died in 1846, at the age of seventy-five, and his wife a few years later, at about the same age.

Michael was engaged in farming till 1871, when he removed to Indiana, and has since been in the hotel business.

He was married in 1832, to Catharine Weakland, of Cambria county. The children are, Charles W. (a partner of his father in the hotel), m. to Miranda McGauchey; Susanna, Mary B., Ellen, d.; Catharine, and Sarah J., m. to Anthony Markle.

J. R. Daugherty, born in Westmoreland county, in 1813, came to Saltsburg in 1831, to learn the trade of a carpenter and joiner. His parents were William and Mary Daugherty, both deceased. He was married in 1839, to Mary Ann, daughter of William Hart. His children were: Robert Johnson, who was a member of Co. C, 9th regiment Penna. vols., and died in the Seven Days fight, of exhaustion; William, m. to Martha Sansom; Martha, m. to John P. St. Clair; James, Frank, Annie, John and Silas Clark.

Mr. Daugherty has served as justice of the peace nine years, sheriff one year, and since 1868, has been the proprietor of the Coleman and Ewing planing mill, to which has been added of late the manufacture of coffins.

Rev. Nicholas G. Sharretts (pastor of the Lutheran church). On December 31st, 1836, closed the short but eminently useful earthly career of the above. He was born in Union county in 1802. He received his education at Dickinson college, and prepared himself for the ministry of the gospel under the care of Rev. G. J. Schmucker, at York, Pa.

Having afterwards visited the theological seminary at Gettysburg, he was honorably admitted a member of the Evangelical Lutheran synod and Ministerium of West Pennsylvania, convened at Berlin, Somerset county, in the fall of the year 1826. At this time he was appointed a missionary to visit the northwestern part of this state.

During his missionary labors in this county, he received a call from the congregations, amongst which he was afterwards so successful. He accepted the call and from the 1st of July, 1827, to his death, was connected with the Lutheran congregation as its pastor.

Rev. D. Simon was a son of Adam and Susannah Simon, nee Wohnsettler. He was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1849. He was educated at the common schools and at the Capital university of Columbus, Ohio, from which he graduated in the class of 1869. He then entered the theological seminary connected with the university, and graduated therefrom two years later. His pastoral charges have been at Lake, Stark county, Ohio; Washington Court-house, Fayette county, Ohio, and Indiana, the latter commencing with September, 1874.

He was married in 1871 to Clara, daughter of Abraham and Magdalena Levit nee Kuhns. For his charge (St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church) see another column.

Thomas Moritz was born in Philadelphia in 1830. His parents were George Jacob and Rebecca Moritz nee Heisch. The former died in Allegheny county in 1863, at the age of seventy-eight, and the latter, over eighty-two years of age, is residing in Indiana with her son-in-law, Rev. V. Klein. Thomas served two years as a printer apprentice, and then four and a half years in the harness business. He labored at that calling in Pittsburgh and Allegheny till 1857, when he removed to Indiana, and has pursued his vocation most of the time since that date.

He is one of the trustees and the secretary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church.

Henry Schnetberg was born in 1802, in the free city of Brennen, Germany. He came to this country, landing at Baltimore, in September, 1834. He enlisted in Captain John W. Geary's company, "American Highlanders," and served during the Mexican war as corporal in the company. In 1849 Gov. Johnston commissioned him captain of the "Allegheny Infantry," of Loretta, to which he had been elected by a vote of the company, and served five years and resigned. He came to this county in 1857. In the war of 1861–5, served in the militia of 1862, and was elected captain of a company of militia in 1863, for state defense. Part of the company not wishing to muster for United States service six months, the captain returned to Indiana to fully recruit his company for United States service, when the fragment of his company was assigned to other companies. The old soldier is now unfit for work, and does not get a pension. His wife, Mary Schnetburg, and only daughter and child, Barbara, are taking care of him. His love for American institutions exceeds that of many native-born citizens.

Henry Shryock was born in Hagerstown, Maryland, on the 12th of December, 1766. He removed to Westmoreland county. In 1790 he was married to Susanna Shryock, a distant relative. The following children were born to them: Eleanor, b. Dec. 1791, d. Dec. 24th, 1812; Leonard, b. June 9th, 1795; Elizabeth, m. to Ephraim Carpenter, b. Jan. 21, 1797, d. Jan. 24, 1859; Amelia, b. October, 1801, d. October, 1808, was the first person buried in the old Presbyterian church yard; George, b. 1805, d. Jan. 5th, 1874, at Oil City. Henry Shryock and family removed to Indiana in 1805, and was the first settler of Indiana borough. The loss of Shryock is noted in a former chapter. He afterward removed to Elderton, Armstrong county, and engaged in hotel keeping. He died at that place, Jan. 31, 1836, and was buried in the old Indiana Presbyterian grave yard, where his wife and daughters, Emelia and Eleanor, also sleep. Leonard, the oldest son of our subject, was married about 1821, to Mary McKennan. She died May 3d, 1822, leaving an infant son, John H. He afterward married Mrs. Isabella McConnell nee Woodward, widow of John McConnell. They had but one child, Isabella, born March 4th, 1826, who is yet living. Leonard died September 14th, 1860; his wife Feb. 24th, 1876, at the age of eighty-four. He and both his wives are buried in Oakland cemetery. George, second son of Henry Shryock, was married to Sarah Woods, who died leaving seven children, viz: Emma, Harry, Clara, Fullerton, Alice, John and Isabella. The latter died in Oil City, in 1872. Harry is married and lives in Independence, Kansas. The remainder of the family reside in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. George was for some years postmaster at Indiana, and also served as commissioners' clerk and commissioner. John H., son of Leonard Shryock, was born January 7th, 1822. He was married about 1843, to Rebecca Moorhead. They had five children, two of whom died in infancy. Martha died in Philadelphia, about 1860, Mrs. Shryock in Philadelphia, a few years later, and Henry at Indiana, in 1872. Mr. Shryock was for several years extensively engaged in manufacturing in West Indiana. He was the proprietor of a large saw mill, planing mill and foundry. He had, in 1857, a large contract from the general government for the manufacture of "Utah" wagons. He was a quartermaster during the rebellion. He had a stroke of paralysis some years before his death, which rendered him almost helpless. He died in Philadelphia on the 2d of March, 1876, and is buried with his wife, daughter Martha and son Henry in that city. Stacy B., his son, and only remaining member of the family, is married and resides in Philadelphia.

EPHRAIM CARPENTER.—He was born at Sharon, Vermont, on the 10th of August, 1788. His ancestors for many generations were New England people. His father, James Carpenter, was born at Coventry, Connecticut, April 4, 1763; his grandfather, James Carpenter, at the same place, April 15, 1740; and his great grandfather at the same place in 1709, being the first white child born in that town. The family records show the first settlement of the Carpenters at Rehoboth, Rhode Island, in 1636. Ephraim was the oldest of ten children, the names of his brothers and sisters being: William, Philena, James, Gideon, Austin, Alpheus, Eunice, Amos and Calvin. After receiving a suitable education, he "read law," was admitted to practice, and removed to Greensburg, Westmoreland county. He located in Indiana in 1819, and in the following year was married to Elizabeth Shryock. He served as district attorney for several years. Besides his acquirements as a lawyer, he was also a practical surveyor. His children were as follows, viz: Susan, b. July 28, 1821, m. to A. C. Hall, d. September 3, 1877; Philena, b. January 27, 1823, m. to Wm. H. Cochran, d., first located in Mount Vernon, O., now resides in St. Louis, Mo.; James, b. September 19, 1824, resides at Geneva, Allen county, Kansas; Henry, b. July 12, 1826, lives at Downeyville, Sierra county, California; Ellen, b. February 4, 1828, m. to a Mr. Weller, resides in Santa Clara county, California; Emma, b. April 1, 1830, m. to Mr. Cooley and resides near Iola, Allen county, Kansas; Austin, b. December 16, 1831, lives at Shawnee, Johnson county, Kansas; Leonard, b. January 26, 1834, resides at Logansport, Indiana; Ephraim, b. February 6, 1836, lives in Mt. Ayr, Ringgold county, Iowa; John, b. February 5, 1838, resides at Chanute, Kansas, and Elizabeth, b. December 28, 1841, m. to Alexander Elliott, resides at Huntingdon. Mrs. Carpenter died January 24, 1859, in her sixty-third year, and Mr. Carpenter, June 10, 1860, in his seventy-second year.

ANDREW CRAIG HALL was born in Indiana county, December 13, 1813. His father, William Hall, some time previous to 1800, purchased and settled upon the farm now owned by William Bratten, White township. He afterward removed to the district between Plum creek and Dutch run, in Washington township, where our subject was born. The latter's brothers and sisters were: Thomas, Samuel, William, Eliza, James, John and Esther. He learned the trade of a cabinet maker in Pittsburgh, and settled in Indiana, marrying Susan Carpenter, oldest daughter of Ephraim Carpenter, September 4, 1839. They were among the early members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Indiana. He was among the early advocates of temperance and anti-slavery in the days when it "tried men's souls" so to do. He served for some years as a justice of the peace, and died on the 30th of October, 1866. His wife died September 3, 1877. Their children were: Ephraim C., b. September 22, 1840; William F., b. September 1, 1841; Sarah E., b. November 14, 1842; James, b. July 25, 1844; Henry, b. June 2, 1848; Mary, b. January 2, 1850, and Charles W., b. April 27, 1857. The two younger brothers are the only male descendants of the Shryock, Carpenter and Hall families now residing in the county.

ROBERT NIXON, was born in county Fermanaugh, Ireland, in 1783, and was a son of Edward Nixon. The latter's wife was a Bracken. The former migrated in 1794, to the vicinity of Carlisle, Cumberland county, and in the next or the following year, removed to the Pigeon Creek settlement, in Washington county. In 1798, our subject came to Newport, (in what was afterwards Indiana county,) on Black-lick creek, where he clerked in a store for his second cousin, Robert Nixon, who had been a merchant there for some years. He purchased at the first sale some lots in Indiana, and in the following year removed to the county seat. He erected a story and half hewed log building on lot now occupied by the residence of A. T. Taylor, on the corner of Carpenter's alley and Philadelphia street, a short distance north of the building. In the upper half story he had his general store, and in the lower portion, his residence. The entrance to the store was by means of outside stairs. In 1811 or 1812, he removed to a room in the eastern part of the Sutton hotel, near the Kline house, and conducted his business there, while the stone building was being erected on the present Sutton and Marshall lots, on Philadelphia street. Of the eastern part of this building as heretofore noted, Robert Nixon, was the proprietor, and in it he kept his store. About 1830 or 1831, he changed this portion of the building into a hotel, and conducted it for several years. He died in 1850. His wife was Mrs. Mary Ayres nee Sutton, widow of Sylvanus Ayres, and daughter of Peter Sutton, jr. She died in 1851, about seventy years of age. Their children were: Edward, b. in Indiana, February 25th, 1807, m. to Phebe Birg Keely; George, d.; Mary, m. to Rev. Robert White, M. E.; James, d., m. to Sarah Cummins; and Robert, d. in childhood. Mrs. Nixon's children by her first husband, were: Jonathan Ayres, d., and Ann Ayres, m., first, to James Thompson, d., and second to Archibald Wier, d. Edward Nixon, was engaged in the mercantile business in Indiana, with the exception of four years, with his father, or on his own account, for over forty-six years. For four years, he had a lease of Sharp's mills, where Shelocta is now situated, and conducted the same and a store for that period. His children were; Robert H., m. to Lizzie Hawes; Fannie W., Emma T., Mary B., m. to P. A. Williams; and Virginia B., m. to Capt. John McCune.

PETER SUTTON.—Peter Sutton, Phebe, his wife, and their family migrated from Baskin Ridge, New Jersey, to the vicinity of Newport, on Black-lick, about 1790. Their children were: Peter, jr., m. to Martha McAnulty; Thomas, m. to Rebecca Loughry; Malachi, m. first to Rebecca Loughry, and second to Sallie Fisher; Garvin, m. to Jane Richardson; Mary, m. first to Sylvanus Ayers, and second to Robert Nixon; and Phebe, m. to William Harold, all of whom are deceased. The children of Peter, jr., were: John McAnulty, d.; Phebe, m. to John Sutor; Uriah, d.; Daniel Stanard, d., m. to Margaret Brewer; Isabella, m. to James A. Hamilton; Johnston, m. to Sarah Buchanan, d., and McLain, m. to Rebecca Doty. Thomas' (a son of Peter the pioneer) children were: James, d., m. to Sarah C. Stansberry; John, d., m. to Agnes M. Walker; William, d., m. to Ellen Loughry; Thomas, d., m. to Annie Mahan; Peter, m. to Jane Mechling; Robert, m. to Elizabeth Andrews; Rebecca, m. to Henry M. Moore, d; Phebe, m. to Abraham Moore, d.; and Margaret, m. to Samuel P. Johnston, d. The children of Malachi, a son of Peter Sutton, the pioneer, were: Peter, m. to Nancy Fisher; William, James, d., m. to Eliza

Doty, d.; Malachi, d., m. to a Miss Lichtenthaler; Garvin, d., m. to Jane Gilchrist; Phebe, d., m. to Wm. McClaren, d.; Esther, d., m. to Wm. Graham; and Mary, m. to John Moore, d. The children of Garvin, a son of Peter Sutton, the pioneer, were: Peter, Sylvanus, m. to Emma Moore; Phebe, m. to Geo. Hice, d.; Susannah, d., m. to Alexander Stewart, d.; Eliza, d., m. to Joseph Chapman, d.; Parmelia, d., m. to L. S. Waterman, d.; and John. For the children of Mary, a daughter of Peter Sutton, the pioneer, see the "Nixon notes."

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

R. C. Calhoun, agricultural implements, nursery and green house stock, Sixth street. He engaged in the business of selling machines in 1864, and is now the pioneer dealer. In 1864 there were only fifty mowers and reapers in the county. In 1879 there were eight hundred and five. His specialties are the "Buckeye" mower and reaper and the "Sweepstakes" thresher.

M. B. Kline, agricultural implement and seed warehouse, Philadelphia street, founded by Mr. Kline in 1878. Specialties, Kirby and Wheeler reapers and mowers and Empire threshers.

ARCHITECT.

J. P. Leach, architect and contractor, settled in the county in 1852. He built the J. P. Carter and John Sutton residences, the M. E. church, the Second Presbyterian church of Altoona, the Masonic hall and other prominent buildings in this section.

ATTORNEYS.

John R. Wilson, attorney, south side Philadelphia street.

S. A. Douglass, attorney, north side Philadelphia street, admitted to practice in 1858.

Coulter Wiggins, attorney, Philadelphia street.

J. N. Banks, attorney, Philadelphia street.

George W. Hood, attorney, Philadelphia street.

W. L. Stewart, attorney, Philadelphia street; admitted to practice in 1879.

Joseph M. Thompson, attorney, Philadelphia street.

John H. Hill, attorney, Philadelphia street; admitted to practice in 1875. He was born in Armstrong county in 1848. His parents, Daniel and Eliza Hill nee Trimble, located in Indiana county in 1854. He was educated at the Cherry Tree male and female college, and the Washington and Lee University, of Lexington, Va., graduating from the latter in 1875. He served in company K, 88th Penna. vols. for one year.

Capt. H. K. Sloan, attorney, South Sixth street. Born in 1838.

Gen. Harry White, born in county in 1834; attorney, Philadelphia street.

M. C. Watson, district attorney, Philadelphia street.

Frank Donahugh, attorney, Church street.

Silas M. Clark, born in county in 1834; attorney, North Sixth street.

A. W. Taylor, attorney, Philadelphia street.

D. Blair Taylor, attorney, Philadelphia street.

Samuel Cunningham, attorney, Philadelphia street.

J. A. C. Ruffner, attorney for commissioners, Philadelphia street.

W. R. Allison, born in county in 1844, attorney, court house.

Wm. R. Black, born in county in 1843, attorney, South Sixth street.

Col. Dan S. Porter, born in county, in 1854, attorney, Philadelphia street.

Thomas Sutton, born in county in 1839, attorney, Philadelphia street.

S. T. Jack, admitted to practice in 1879, North Sixth street.

BLACKSMITHS.

Alexander Littster, blacksmith, Daugherty alley, West Indiana. Migrated from Scotland to America in 1852, and to Indiana in 1854.

J. H. Miller, blacksmith, South Seventh street, started the shop in 1873.

Frank Treadenburg, blacksmith, southeast corner of Fifth and Water streets, born in Germany in 1817; came to America in 1849, and to Indiana in 1867.

Arthur Williams, blacksmith, near "Penn Flouring Mills."

J. J. Davis, coachsmith and general blacksmithing, Church street.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

Christy & Sharretts, boots, shoes, hats, caps, etc., North Sixth street, opposite the court house; business commenced 1872.

Noah Lohr, boots and shoes, Philadelphia street, opposite the court house. Settled in the county in 1859; engaged in present business in 1872; served in company F, 55th Pa. volunteers, about thirteen months, losing his left leg at Petersburg, June 18, 1864.

BOOT AND SHOE MAKERS.

John Malcolm, boot and shoe maker, Church street, corner Saltsburg road. He was a native of Scotland, and settled in Indiana in 1873. In 1874, became a partner with a Mr. Freet, who retired after one year.

G. B. Roof, boot and shoe maker, Railroad street, West Indiana; born in South Mahoning township in 1844, and a son of Frederick and Elizabeth Roof nee Kerr; served in company B, 9th Pa. cavalry for three years.

R. M. Crawford, (of Crawford & Criley,) boot and shoe makers, Water street, corner Carpenter's alley. Mr. Crawford was born in the borough in 1852, and has been in business since November 1878. Present firm was formed in August 1879.

BOOK STORE.

Henry Hall & Bro., books, stationery and notions, Philadelphia street. This house was established by the senior partner in 1866.

BROOM FACTORY.

W. N. Wilson, broom factory, North Fifth street. Established in 1876. Three men have been, and two are now employed. Broom corn is purchased in Pittsburgh. The product is generally sold in Indiana and adjoining counties.

BUTCHERS.

Fulmer & Paige.—E. S. Paige, H. J. Fulmer. Meat market west side second street, West Indiana, and Carpenter's alley, Indiana. The latter was started in 1875 and the former in 1878.

J. J. Young.—Meat market east of "Indiana House." In business since 1869. Born in county in 1845; served in Co. F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers for four years, and in Co. L, 7th United States cavalry for five years. He was wounded in the latter service.

A. R. Jewell.—Meat market North Fifth street.

John Wettling.—Meat market North Sixth street. In business since 1877. Settled in county in 1870. He was a native of Alsace, Germany, and migrated to America in 1828.

CARPENTERS OR CONTRACTORS.

Archibald T. Thompson, carpenter and contractor, West Indiana. He was born in the county in 1843. He served in the United States signal corps in 1864 and 1865.

D. Simmons, contractor, Philadelphia street. Located in the county in 1839.

JAMES FEATH, carpenter, Hastings' planing mill. Settled in county in 1868.

COLUMBUS MCCOY, carpenter, Hastings' planing mill. Settled in county in 1852.

JOSEPH FALOON, carpenter, Hastings' planing mill. Born in county in 1829.

C. S. MCCOY, carpenter.

CARRIAGE AND WAGON MAKERS.

J. R. CARNAHAN, Railroad street, West Indiana, carriage and wagon maker. Business established in 1877. Three men are now employed.

FRANCIS COST, wagon and carriage manufacturer, Fifth street. The building was erected by Wm. Row, in 1854. Cost succeeded in 1867. Nine hands were employed in 1867–8, and two are now engaged.

ISAAC BECK, carriage factory, North Sixth street. He has been ten years in the business, three of which being in the present location. He was born in the county, in 1848.

JACOB H. BOADENHAMER, carriage maker, Water street, established in 1864. Three men have been employed, but now (1879) only one hand is at work.

JOHN SWITZER, coach maker and threshing machine manufacturer, Carpenter's alley, near Church street. He settled in the county in 1840. He built the first threshing machine made in the borough.

CIVIL OFFICERS.

THEODORE COLEMAN, deputy prothonotary, since the fall of 1871.

W. S. DAUGHERTY, deputy sheriff, born in the county in 1848.

JOHN P. ST. CLAIR, commissioners' clerk, born in the county in 1848.

WM. DOUGHERTY, county commissioner; residence in upper Two-lick. Served in company G., 101st Pennsylvania volunteers, about four years. He was wounded at the battle of Plymouth, North Carolina.

CLOTHING.

P. V. BAKER & Co., Philadelphia clothing house, Philadelphia street. Business established in October, 1878.

L. KESLAR & SON, clothing, boots, shoes, &c., Philadelphia street.

VOGEL BROTHERS, merchant tailors, Sixth street.

N. ADLER, clothing and gent's furnishing goods, Philadelphia street. Commenced business in 1867, and located at present store in 1874.

E. A. PENNINGTON, Merchant tailor, Philadelphia street. Commenced business in 1878.

DRAYMAN.

T. B. HOOD, drayman, West Indiana street. Served in company B, 11th Pennsylvania R. C., and was wounded. Also in company H, 26th Pennsylvania volunteers, for about one year.

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, ETC.

LOUGHRY & SUTTON—(W. R. Loughry, Judge Peter Sutton)—Dry goods and clothing, corner Sixth and Philadelphia streets. This brick building was originally erected by John Denniston for a store house and dwelling. His successors were; McKennan & Mayes, Moorhead & Coleman, Kinter & Kimmell, John Weamer, George W. Weamer & Bro., Sutton & Lloyd, 1866, and Loughry & Sutton, 1869.

J. D. PATTON, dry goods, Philadelphia street. Business established in 1867.

WILSON, SUTTON & Co.—(A. W. Wilson, John W. Sutton, Harry Wilson)—Dry goods and clothing, Philadelphia street. This brick building stands on the site of the old Peter Sutton log hotel, erected in 1806. The store was founded by Thomas Sutton, about 1811, and was first situated in a log building on the lot now occupied by Mrs. M. A. Sutton, Philadelphia street. At his death his widow and John Sutton managed the business for several years. They were succeeded by James and John Sutton, who built in 1835 a one-story brick building (24x37) on the same lot. In 1842 the firm became Sutton (John) & Moore (Col. H. M.) They were succeeded by John Sutton, and in 1852 by Sutton & Wilson, A. W. The latter in 1844 had commenced with Sutton & Moore, and in 1847 had charge of a branch store at Mechanicsburg. In 1858 their present two-story brick (28x65) building was erected. In 1872 Mr. Sutton retired from the firm, and was succeeded by his son, John W., the house becoming Wilson & Sutton. In 1877, Harry Wilson, a son of the senior proprietor, became connected with the business, making the present style of the firm Wilson, Sutton & Co.

DRUGGISTS.

DR. GEORGE R. LEWIS, wholesale and retail druggist, Philadelphia street, opposite the court house. He commenced business in 1865, in company with Capt. J. S. Nesbit.

HETRICK BROTHERS, drugs, books, stationery, &c., Philadelphia street.

STEELE G. HARTMAN, "West Indiana drug store," Philadelphia street. Commenced business in 1876.

FURNITURE.

A. H. APPLE, furniture, wall paper and undertaking establishment, Philadelphia street. The first firm was Boadenhamer & Apple, which continued from 1850 to 1864. The succeeding firm of Apple & Thompson, were in business till 1877, since which date the present proprietor has been in charge. A furniture factory has been connected with this house almost all of the time from 1850. Seven men have been, and two are now employed.

H. S. THOMPSON, furniture and undertaking. Establishment South Sixth street.

HELLRIEGEL, HOOK & Co., furniture warehouse and factory, Water street. This establishment was commenced in 1869, by Hellriegel & Hook. The work was performed by hand, in the building now used as a wareroom and finishing room. The main factory was built in 1874, and is supplied with all the necessary machinery incidental to this business. A twenty horse-power engine and five men are employed. Eight hands were formerly engaged.

E. C. JAMISON, furniture wareroom and factory, Philadelphia street. Established in 1853. An eight horse-power engine and two men are employed.

HENRY STEVING, furniture and cabinet factory, Church street. Located at present place in 1858. He settled in the borough in 1849. He is assisted by his sons—J. F., an upholsterer, and H. H. a painter.

D. R. HARE, furniture and cabinet factory, and undertaking establishment, Carpenter's alley. Established in 1879.

GENERAL STORES.

J. A. JOHNSTON, general store, Church street. In business since 1878, in the old A. T. Moorhead stand.

P. D. FISCUS, general store, Philadelphia street. Commenced business in 1876.

INDIANA CO-OPERATIVE STORE, corner Sixth and Oak streets established in 1876. Present salesman, Wm. Simpson. The building was erected in 1870, by John L. Getty.

A. S. CUNNINGHAM, general store, Philadelphia street, West Indiana. Commenced business in 1867.

GROCERS.

A. C. BRAUGHLER, grocer and provision dealer, Philadelphia street. This store was commenced in 1866, by J. H. Brilhart, changing in 1867 to J. H. Brilhart & Bro., and in 1872 to the present style. Mr. Braughler was first a private, then a lieutenant in company D, 88th Pa. vols. for three years and three months.

James R. Logan, groceries and provisions, Philadelphia street. Commenced business in March, 1878.

J. H. Brilhart, groceries and provisions, North Sixth street. Present store established in 1877.

HARNESS DEALER.

Philip Marshall, harness and saddles, Philadelphia, corner Fifth street. Commenced in business in a log house which stood in the rear of the site of the brick building, on the corner above named, erected in 1863 by himself. Three men are now engaged. He is also a dealer in bark.

Godfrey Marshall, harness and saddles, Philadelphia street. Commenced business in 1866.

HARDWARE, &c.

J. C. Moorhead, hardware, implements, grain, lumber, &c., Church street. He started in the lumber business, and in 1872 and 1873 erected his present building, 40 by 60, and two stories in height.

Rombach & Laughlin, hardware, North Sixth street. Present firm commenced business in August, 1874.

HOTELS.

American House, Martin Earhart, proprietor, corner Philadelphia and Railroad streets. This hotel was formerly a private residence. In the summer of 1865, it was enlarged by Solomon Earhart, who added an additional story, and first opened it as a hotel, calling it the Continental. In the summer of 1876, the present proprietor became the owner. He added the rear wings, and changed the name to the American.

Indiana House, Mrs. E. O. Clements, proprietress since 1869, south-east corner Sixth and Philadelphia streets.

Kinter House, northeast corner Fifth and Philadelphia streets, John T. Thomas, proprietor since spring of 1879.

Lewis House, Philadelphia street, near Railroad station, Wm. Lewis, proprietor.

Kiefer House, Fifth street, Fr. Kiefer, proprietor.

Kline House, Philadelphia street, Alfred Fritz, proprietor since 1879. H. A. Altman, clerk; born in county in 1839.

West Indiana House, Philadelphia street, George Snyder, proprietor since 1875.

JEWELERS.

R. A. Young, watches, jewelry, clocks, &c., Philadelphia street. This house was founded in 1856, by R. Young & Son (R. A.), in a small room which is now a part of Keslar's clothing store. They were succeeded by R. A. Young, who removed to the room now occupied by James Anderson's restaurant, under the Lewis House. He removed subsequently to a building formerly occupied as the office of Dr. Thomas St. Clair, which then stood on the site of the Boadenhamer brick house. We next find him in the room now used by S. Cunningham as a law office. The firm became Young Brothers in 1868. J. H., now a professor in the normal school, becoming a member of the house. In 1870 they erected the brick store now occupied by Miner's jewelry establishment. On account of ill health the partnership was dissolved in 1877, and the stock was sold at public sale. In November, 1878, R. A. Young resumed business in the room formerly occupied as the office of the Hon. Thomas White.

M. M. Miner, jeweler, Young's building, Philadelphia street. Commenced business April 1, 1877.

B. Wehrle, Philadelphia street. He is a native of Germany, where he was born in 1809. He came to America in 1830, and to Indiana in 1840.

LIVERY STABLES.

Martin F. Jamison & Brother, livery stable, rear of Indiana House. Commenced business in 1861. In 1861 they purchased their present location of Wm. Moorhead.

John Montgomery, livery stable, Court-house alley. In the business since 1876.

Wm. Ewing, livery stable, alley rear of M. E. church.

John Nagle, livery stable, Sixth street.

LUMBERMAN.

J. H. Flude.

MARBLE WORKS.

Samuel Grove, proprietor marble and granite works, Philadelphia street. The first firm was Grove & Brother, John A. being associated in the business till October 6th, 1859. Their first location was in 1855, in a little wooden shed in the rear of Judge Blair's office; in 1858, they erected a small frame building on the lot now occupied by Gessler's confectionery. In 1863, he purchased his present property and built the front portion of his present establishment. In 1869, the rear extension was made, making the building in dimensions 16x75. Eight men have been and six are now employed. Mr. Grove can furnish any style or quality of work desired. Wm. Horner is connected as a cutter with this establishment.

MILLINERY AND NOTIONS.

Mrs. D. R. Hare, millinery and ladies' furnishing goods, Philadelphia street, commenced business in April, 1878.

Black & Roberts (W. R. Black, Miss E. C. Roberts), notions, millinery and fancy goods, North Sixth street, commenced business in 1877.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Wm. Carroll, inventor of the hay elevator, machine weighs forty pounds and elevates and carries a large load of hay in seven minutes. He settled in the county in 1844.

J. Miles Walker, salesman, born in county in 1842, connected with J. N. Bruce's establishment, Philadelphia street.

Thomas McCullough, painter, Philadelphia street, born in Westmoreland county, settled in Indiana county in 1853, served in company D, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry for four years.

E. E. Allen, R. A. Park, W. H. Wood, commercial travelers.

Conrad Kuhn, proprietor of brick yard, south of the borough of Indiana, near the railroad. Settled in the county in 1873, and in 1873 and 1874 employed twenty-two men and made a million of brick each year. In 1879, thirteen hands were engaged and 450,000 bricks were manufactured. There are twenty-five acres connected with the yard. With excellent clay and improved machinery, the bricks made by Mr. K. are not excelled for quality, and the productive facilities are equal to any and all demands.

PHOTOGRAPHERS.

Lingo & Clark, photographers, Philadelphia street. Their specialty is artistic photography.

B. B. Tiffany, picture rooms, Seventh street. His building was erected for the business in 1870.

PHYSICIANS.

A. F. Purington, M. D., Philadelphia street, West Indiana. Settled in borough in 1866. Born in Maine in 1836; educated at Maine Wesleyan seminary; attended Dartmouth (N. H.) medical college one session, and medical department Bowdoin college (Maine) two sessions, graduating from the latter in 1864. He served as an acting assistant surgeon in the eastern department during the late war.

R. BARR, M. D., Church street. Located in Indiana in 1859. He was a graduate of Jefferson medical college in 1854, and was the surgeon of the 67th Pennsylvania volunteers; surgeon in chief of the 3d brigade, 3d division, 3d army corps, and surgeon in chief of the 3d division, 6th army corps for over three years.

DR. WM. ANDERSON, see personal sketch.

DR. THOMAS ST. CLAIR, see sketch of St. Clairs.

DR. CHARLES ST. CLAIR, see sketch of physicians.

DR. CUNNINGHAM, see sketch of physicians.

DR. J. M. TORRENCE, see sketch of physicians.

DR. TAYLOR, see sketch of physicians.

DR. LEWIS, see sketch of physicians.

A. DE VOL, M. D., homœopathist, Philadelphia street. Located in county in 1875. He graduated in 1874 in the medical department of the university of Buffalo, New York.

RESTAURANTS.

A. S. PATTON, confectioner, ice cream and oyster restaurant, Philadelphia street. Settled in county in 1867.

JAMES ANDERSON, restaurant, confectioner and groceries, under Lewis House, Philadelphia street. Native of Huntingdon county. Thirteen years in the business. Settled in the borough in 1851.

INDIANA BRANCH RAILROAD OF P. R. R.

T. M. COLEMAN, agent since 1872.
J. R. MARSHALL, baggage master.
ARMOR MULLEN, brakesman.
G. W. PINKERTON, fireman.
D. A. J. HETRICK, engineer.

REAL ESTATE, PURCHASING AND COLLECTING AGENCY.

JOHN MCGAUGHEY, proprietor, Philadelphia street. Established in 1878. The first regular real estate office in Indiana.

SEWING MACHINES.

WM. EARL, jr., manager Singer Manufacturing Co.'s office, Philadelphia street. This sewing machine agency was first started in 1863. R. M. St. Clair was the first agent, who continued till 1873. Mr. Earl was for six years an agent, and since 1877 the manager of the office. Four men are now connected with the agency.

JOHN WEIR, Domestic Sewing Machine office, Philadelphia street, established in 1872. Two men are now employed at this office.

STONE MASON.

TERRENCE RICE, West Indiana. Settled in Indiana in 1859. Native of Ireland. Migrated to America in 1850.

STOVES, TINWARE, &C.

ROW & TAYLOR, stoves, house furnishing and tin ware, Philadelphia street. The present firm was founded in 1858, by James Turner, the first store being the room now occupied as the shoe shop of Samuel Myers. He erected the present ware-room of Row & Taylor, who succeeded him in 1873. Five men are now employed.

G. T. HAMILTON, stoves, tin ware, house furnishing goods, &c., Philadelphia street. He learned his trade with James Turner. He established his business in 1870. His first place of business was immediately east of Hall's book store, removing in a brief time to his present location, which formerly had been the residence of Silas M. Clark, attorney. Five men are now employed.

UNDERWRITERS.

CAPT. G. E. SMITH, general insurance agent, Water street, West Indiana. He located in the county in 1835.

H. S. THOMPSON, underwriter, Philadelphia street.

THE BIG WAREHOUSE,

Philadelphia street, corner of the railroad. A. M. Stewart & Co., hardware, groceries, lumber, grain, &c. Marshall & Kline, dry goods, carpets and notions. This two-story brick building was erected in 1853, by James Sutton, Peter Sutton, A. M. Stewart and W. B. Marshall, in an addition to the town of Indiana which was then a part of the Gompers' farm. The building was occupied till 1865 by Sutton, Marshall & Stewart as a general store. In that year A. M Stewart & Co. (J. M. Stewart) took charge of the hardware, grocery, lumber, grain, &c., and W. B. Marshall of the dry goods and notion lines. W. B. Kline became associated with Mr. Marshall in 1873.. G. F. Walker has been connected with A. M. Stewart in the "big warehouse" for ten years.

JAMES ST. CLAIR, warehouse and granery, Water street, West Indiana. This building was erected by John St. Clair in 1875. He was succeeded in 1876 by the present proprietor, who added the railway track facilities. The principal business is in grain and shingles.

The J. H. KINTER warehouse and granery, Water street, West Indiana, was erected in 1861, by J. P. Carter. He was succeeded by the Fiscus Brothers in 1870, and J. H. Kinter in 1875.

WHOLESALE.

C. U. GESSLER, wholesale and retail baker, confectioner and cigar manufacturer, Philadelphia street, near railroad station. Mr. G. has been in the former business since 1863, and in the latter since 1874. Five hands are employed in his factory and bakery. He served in Co. F, 6th Pennsylvania volunteers in the three months' service.

JOSEPH F. BARNES, wholesale produce dealer and jobber in salt, oil, nails, wrapping paper, flour, &c.

RECENT INDIANA IMPROVEMENTS.

The new store-room of Wilson, Sutton & Co., now being built on the site of the old "Carpenter mansion," will be thirty-three feet front and one hundred and thirteen feet deep. It is intended to be as convenient, commodious and ornamental as recent improvements in mercantile architecture will afford. The front will have two panes of French plate glass, twelve by eight feet, and will be supported by iron columns. The brick used in the front is the "Philadelphia pressed." The front will be trimmed with the Freeport gray sandstone, and will be surmounted with an ornamental iron cornice, supporting a flag-staff. It will be three stories in height, viz: fourteen, thirteen and twelve feet, or to the top of the cornice forty-five feet. Besides the glass front, there will be four large windows in the rear and an ornamental window of twelve feet opening in the stairway. A large skylight will be placed in the centre of the building. The architect, J. W. Drum, has taken special pains to make the front one of the finest in the state, and the proprietors will devote their energies and experience to make it the most convenient salesroom that it is possible to construct. The first floor is devoted to staple and fancy dry goods and notions; the second to men's clothing and carpets; and the third to blankets, yarns, &c. Domestics, oil cloths, willow-ware, etc., will be in the cellar. The packing room, warehouse, etc., will be in the old room adjoining.

W. B. Marshall is adding a new dry goods room on the west side of the "big warehouse."

R. A. Young, jeweler and optician, is re-occupying the old stand of Young Brothers, and has refitted and remodeled the store room.

The new Lutheran church is described in the church article

SHIPMENTS.

The shipments of stock from Indiana station of the Indiana Branch Railroad for 1879 were: Horses, 2,078; mules, 27; hogs, 11,593; cattle, 3,590; calves, 780; sheep, 21,590; live and dressed poultry, 300,000 lbs. There was also shipped: Of chestnuts, 2,000 bushels; wool, 75,000 lbs.; bark, 10,000 cords; shingles, 130 cars; butter and eggs, 1,000,000 lbs.

BLAIRSVILLE, BURRELL TOWNSHIP.

The first permanent settler in the vicinity of Blairsville was James Baird, on the farm where his son James was born, in 1792, opposite the borough, and on the hill above what is called "Bairdstown."

The latter informed the editor that his father laid the warrant which included the major portion of the site of Blairsville and disposed of it to James Campbell, of Franklin county, who, in connection with Andrew Brown, of Blacklick township, platted the town in July and August, 1818. They called the embryo village Blairsville, as the northern turnpike was then being made by a company, called the "Huntingdon, Cambria and Indiana Turnpike Road Company," with John Blair, of Huntingdon county, as president. Flaming placards were distributed throughout the surrounding counties, and the "advantages of Blairsville as an important business centre" were heralded in the newspapers of the counties contiguous to the pike. For several days prior to the sale, a large crowd was gathered at Andrew Brown's tavern (on the "Frankstown" road), which was then situated on the present site of Smith's Station, on the Indiana Branch Railroad, and the prospect of the rapid growth of the town was discussed with great earnestness.

THE SALE OF LOTS.*

"The sale of lots began early on the morning of November 11, 1818. Not a house, not a single cabin had been erected. The underbrush had been cut away in the ground designed for Market street, from the river up to the point where it is crossed by Walnut. The large oaks and hickories were still standing, and a beautiful sward of grass covered it from end to end. The underbrush which had been cut away from the street was thrown along its sides. Beyond this, all was an unbroken forest of giant trees, with a dense undergrowth of brush similar to that found in many parts of Chestnut ridge. A large part of the present common (east of the railroad) was covered with water. Not a road led into the place, with the exception of two or three narrow paths, along one of which the party came. The present "diamond" was the centre of attraction. There a large crowd had assembled, deeply interested in the intended business of the day. The first lot sold was that on the northwest corner of the "diamond." Thence they went toward the river, and thence up the other side of the street to the "diamond" again. Then the two blocks above were sold. Amos Lawrence was the crier, and the enthusiasm of bidders was up, and the lots went off rapidly. The lot on which the Jesse A. Cunningham store and residence is situated sold for seventy-two dollars."

FIRST HOUSES.

In order to give immediate growth to the village, the proprietors offered a town lot gratis to the party who should erect the first house. Isaac Green, on behalf of Hugh Richards, and James Rankin competed for this prize, and one day in March, 1819, two log houses had risen. Green's was the first, but Rankin's was only a couple of hours later. The former is still standing on Main street, immediately below the drug store of H. P. Shepley. The latter is situated on Campbell street, and is occupied by Mrs. Chapman. The next house was erected by John Cunningham, the first painter, chair-maker and spinning-wheel manufacturer. His house is still standing in the rear of J. A. Cunningham's, on Main street.

*Rev. Wm. Cunningham, in History of the Cunningham Family.

The first store was that of Jonathan Doty, in 1820, and the second, George Mulhollan, Jr., in 1821. The first tavern was opened in 1821 by Abner Willetts, on what is now the Watterson lot, corner of Market and Main streets. The second hotel was built by Dr. E. P. Emerson, on the lot now occupied by Ray's warehouse. Samuel McNulty was the first landlord. He in 1821–2 erected the "Exchange" hotel, changed in 1860 to the "Everett" house, and now remodeled as John Graff and Sons' mercantile establishment. This was a well kept and comfortably furnished hotel.

The first blacksmith was Thomas Lindsey. The first cooper was Samuel Eckels, who was also among the early tavern-keepers. The first doctor was E. P. Emerson. The first turner was Andrew McCombs. The first brick and stone mason was William Brown. The first postmaster was George Mulhollan, Jr. The first tailor was Smith McMillen. The first tinner was Abraham Richards. The first marriage was that of John Weir and Elizabeth Thompson. The first preaching was under a tree which stood opposite C. C. Davis' store; Rev. James Wakefield was the minister. The next was in Willett's bar-room. The first located ministers were: Revs. S. Dennis, B. Dorsey and Thomas Hudson—Methodist Episcopal. The first justice of the peace was Stewart Davis.

In addition to the above mentioned, other early settlers were: Andrew Brown, the proprietor, who had removed from the Frankstown road tavern; Aaron Devinney, an early blacksmith; Samuel Crow, an early tavern-keeper; Thomas Green, carpenter; John Peters, merchant; James Callen, James Cantwell, James Alexander, chair-maker; William Lytle, carpenter; Henry Keely, carpenter; John W. Brown, blacksmith; Patrick Slamon, John Ray, blacksmith; John Shrock, brick and stone mason; Robert Longwell, an early merchant and hotel-keeper; Daniel Short, brick and stone mason.

FIRST MILL.

In the outset the new comers went to the Wallace or the Campbell mill for their grinding. The first grist mill was erected in 1829, for a store and hotel, by Mark Graham—his brother, Arthur Graham, having the management. In 1831 it was changed into a grist mill. In 1832, J. N. Nesbitt managed a carding machine attached to it. In 1833 Noble and his brother Alexander purchased the property and ran both the grist mill and carding machine, as well as a large store, which would compare with the present mercantile houses of the borough. The mill had three runs of stone and was well patronized. It was destroyed by an explosion, which killed a boy. The old foundation can still be seen, about one hundred yards below the lower Graff store. The machinery, as far as it was suitable, was placed in what was called "the Shurick mill," which is still in operation. The third mill was the "Triece," now the "Evans & Co.'s" mill.

THE FIRST FERRY

Was located nearly below the site of the present bridge, and was first in operation in the spring of 1819. It is said that Isaac Green, Hugh Richards and James Raskin were the first owners, and in the fall of that year sold their boat and poles to John Mulhollan, who carried it on till the building of the new bridge afforded another avenue of travel. He received a goodly sum for his ferry privilege, and became largely interested in the new bridge.

THE OLD BRIDGE

Was erected in 1821-2, by the Conemaugh Bridge Company, James Moore being the contractor. The work was let on the 22d of October, 1821; the abutments were completed in September, 1822, and in November 22, the bridge was passable for wagons. The bridge, toll house, &c., were fully completed in September, 1823. The entire cost was $15,000, of which the state bore a portion. The bridge was an arch structure on the "Wormwag" plan, and was three hundred feet in length. It was said to have been, in 1822 and for some years later, "for a single span, the largest bridge in the United States."

The subscription books were opened on the 12th of June, 1821, and the first officers chosen on the 22d of October, 1821. The first officials were: President, Andrew Brown; treasurer, John Doty; managers, James Moorhead, Samuel Baird, Nathaniel Doty, John Bigham, John Anderson and R. P. Simmons. They in connection with the following were the incorporators and first stockholders: George Mulhollan, jr., C. Horrell, Abner Willetts, James Campbell, Samuel Kuhns, Charles Boyle, Kelly and Lytle, Moses Murphy, Abraham Herbach, Daniel Stanard, Nathaniel Doty, John Mulhollan, George Mulhollan, sr., Robert Rainey, James Craig, John Cunningham, James Elliott, Henry Keely, and James Moore.

The first toll house was on the west side of the river. The first gate keeper was William Clark. The second gate keeper was George McLane, who served from September 1, 1823, to April 1, 1824, at the rate of fifty dollars per annum. From November, 1822, to September, 1823, the amount of tolls were $1,569 30½. The first schedule of tolls was as follows:

"Foot passengers, 2 cents; six horses and wagon with four wheels, 75 cents; five horses and wagon with four wheels, 62 cents; four horses and wagon with four wheels, 50 cents; three horses and wagon with four wheels, 44 cents; two horses and wagon with four wheels, 37 cents; and one horse and wagon with four wheels, 31 cents." Pleasure carriages were taxed higher rates, as "four horses and wagon with four wheels, 75 cents," &c. Sleighs or sleds with four horses, 37½ cents, and other tolls to meet the number of horses. "Single horse with or without a rider, 6 cents; sheep or swine, 2 cents per head; cattle, 4 cents per head, and gig and one horse, 18 cents."

On the 31st of December, 1831, a dividend of fourteen per cent was declared. The bridge fell in the summer of 1874, and the present iron structure was constructed in the following season by the two counties whose domain it connects.

POSTMASTERS.

After Mulhollan, the postmasters were: John Devinney, Joseph Chapman, Daniel H. Barr, George S. Mendel, Wilson Knott, Lucy Knott, his daughter, Brice Henderson, Mrs. Mary Henderson, his widow, and Mrs. Elizabeth Alter.

OLD LOG SCHOOL HOUSE, TEACHERS, &C.

The old log school house was the first church, and is still standing near the old cemetery. In this, all the denominations held public worship, and here too, the first schools were held. This is said to have been erected in 1821 or 1822. The first teacher was Jesse M. Bishop, the second, Lyman S. Waterman, the third, Moses Davis, fourth, Martin Brainard, and the fifth, Dr. Miller.

The public school building was erected in 1837, and first occupied in 1838. Martin Brainard and nephew, were the male, and Miss Sarah Stansberry, and Miss Pollock, the female teachers.

The teachers for 1879, were: George W. Innes, principal, 4th grade or grammar, 68 pupils—in charge of school since 1876. 3d grade, Miss H. A. Boyle, 40 pupils—12 years. 2d grade, Miss Kate Walker, 60 pupils—six years, and 1st grade, Miss Annie Miller, 58 pupils—six years. Each room is divided into two divisions, virtually making eight grades.

MARKET HOUSE.

In 1829–30, a frame market house was erected in the middle of Spring street, near the site of the present market house. The brick town hall and market house were erected in 1857.

OTHER EARLY AND LEADING HOTELS, were: the house now occupied by John K. Henry, erected in 1829, and first conducted by Jacob Alter; the "Silver Maple," erected in 1831, by Silas Moore, and called the "Marker House;" the "O'Harra House," built in 1851, by James A. Love, and now used as a private dwelling, and the "Union House," now owned and conducted by George Wilkinson, which was also erected by Mr. Love.

THE FIRST STAGES reached Blairsville, in 1819, though no regular lines were placed on the pike till 1820, when the first mail reached Blairsville.

THE FIRST HACK LINE from Blairsville to Indiana, commenced on Monday, May 9, 1842. Samuel McNulty was the proprietor, and the stage ran three times and return, per week.

[From the Pennsylvania Gazetteer, 1833.]

Blairsville post and borough, Blacklick township on the Conemaugh river. The state canal passes through the town, and a turnpike road leads from it, west to Pittsburgh, and east to Ebensburg. Population in 1830, 957; taxables, 182. It is 189 miles northwest from Washington City, and 161 west from Harrisburg, and about 14 miles southwest of Indiana borough.

In 1827, this thriving village contained 501 inhabitants. Within two years from that time, four brick houses of public worship were erected, viz: a Presbyterian and a Methodist meeting house, an Episcopal church and a Catholic chapel, and preparations were made for building a German Lutheran church. There were in the village, in November, 1829, 47 brick, 72 frame, 47 log and 4 stone houses, and several brick buildings under way, and has a fair prospect of steady and rapid increase. There is a newspaper published in the town called the Blairsville Recorder.

The following statement of the number of passengers and vehicles which passed the bridge over the Conemaugh here in 1829, will give some, though imperfect, idea of the traveling in West Pennsylvania: Foot passengers, 12,527; single horses, 4,372; one-horse wagons, 374; two-horse wagons, 245; four-horse teams, 781; five-horse teams, 1,566; six-horse teams, 1,438; cattle, 497; sheep, 98; swine, 475. In addition to which, the stages crossed 730 times, and there were 325 yearly subscribers, who crossed back and forward, more or less, every day. There are here now probably 200 dwellings, 7 taverns, and 12 or 15 stores. The town was incorporated by act 25th of March, 1825.

[From Harris' Directory of 1837.]

"Blairsville is an incorporated town, pleasantly situated on the east bank of the Conemaugh. The Northern turnpike, from Pittsburgh to Harrisburg, passes through it, and the Pennsylvania canal passes along the bank of the Conemaugh river. A dam in the river just below the town, makes a good harbor, and slackwater navigation. It is about nine miles from Blairsville to the tunnel and Conemaugh aqueduct.

Blairsville is a healthy, business town, enjoying many advantages. It has at present a population of about 1200 inhabitants. A very considerable quantity of grain and country produce is sold here, as the surrounding country is very productive. One house, out of twelve engaged in the produce business, purchased over 13,000 lbs. of pork in one day during the season. Coal is very abundant here. It is forty-three miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

Blairsville has five churches—one Presbyterian, Rev. Thomas Davis, pastor; one Episcopal, vacant; one Lutheran, vacant; one Methodist Episcopal, vacant; one Catholic, Rev. Dr. Stillinger, pastor. It has three day schools taught by females, and two with male teachers; one large brick school-house for the public school system, which is not yet in operation, and three Sunday schools.

DIRECTORY OF BLAIRSVILLE.

Commission and forwarding houses—Mulhollan & Warren, John Graff & Co. Merchants—Culbertson & Thompson, Sloan & Coleman, John Grier, Mark Grier, John McCrea, Abraham Armel, John Thompson & Co., Lyon & Maher, Steel, Boyle & Co., S. McCune, Alexander Nesbit, H. & P. Graff, James Gilleland, Joseph Loughry & Son, Wm. McClarran & Co. Druggists—E. P. Emerson, M. D., J. C. Day, M. D. Attorneys at Law—Stewart Steel, R. B. McCabe, M. Brainard. Postmaster—John Devinny. Editors—Mathias & Brown, Blairsville Record. Justices of the Peace—Stewart Davis, Daniel H. Barr, Samuel Mathews. Steam engine factory—Silas Rigg. Iron foundry—Steel, Boyle & Co. Steam flouring mill, spinning, carding and cassinet factory—J. N. Nesbit. Steam carding and fulling mill—Daniel McGuire. Steam saw mill—John Peters. Two boat yards—Green and Root. Two brick yards—Campbell and Wynn. Steam flouring mill—Dr. E. P. Emerson. Silversmith—H. Boyd. Two gunsmiths—Ringle and Rugh. Tanneries—Wm. T. Smith, S. Mathews and H. McCaleb. Two cabinet makers—Johnston and McMasters. Two hatters—Bartley and Gilchrist. Grocery store—D. Short. Shoe store—John Devinny. Saddlers—Dodds, Latta and Kridler. Chair makers—Cunningham and Loughry. Carriage maker—J. Hiller. Coopers—Barr and Echols. Stone cutter—L. Hill. Innkeepers—S. McNulty, stage office, Perseverence line, daily; John Scott, Pioneer line, occasionally; William Barr and James Greer. Carpenters, 9; shoemakers, 6; tailors, 5; blacksmiths, 3; saddle-tree makers, 2; bricklayers, 5; stonemasons, 6; plasterers, 2; butchers, 4; mantua-makers and milliners, 3.

REV. J. A. STILLINGER, V. G.

He was born in Baltimore, Md., April 19, 1801. His father was born in York county, Pennsylvania, his grandfather in or near Philadelphia, and his great grandfather in Cologne, Prussia. The latter migrated to Pennsylvania during the proprietary of William Penn. He assisted in forming the congregation and building the little chapel of St. Joseph's on 4th street, Philadelphia. His mother was born in Baltimore, her father being born in France, and her mother in York county, Pennsylvania. He resided with his grandfather and grandmother, and was about three years old when they took him to themselves. In 1816, he was employed in a German printing office in Chambersburg, where he learned to read German by setting type. In 1817, he engaged in the printing office of Robert G. Harper, in Chambersburg, and remained three and a half years. In November, 1820, he entered the College of St. Mary's, Emmettsburg, Md., where he remained ten years. In November, 1830, he was ordained a priest, and his first mission was at the Mountain congregation and Liberty, remaining till November following, when he was appointed to the Church of St.'s Simon and Jude of Blairsville. He also attended to the Church of St. Vincent and all Westmoreland county, for many years. In 1834, Fayette, Greene and Washington counties were added to his charge. In 1832, the Bishop sent him to visit all the Catholic settlements as far north as the New York line. There was only three officiating priests in western Pennsylvania at that time.

After a vigorous ministry of forty-three years, this devoted disciple of the church was found dead, after celebrating the morning mass, September 19, 1843, in the sacristy of the church. A fit monument to his many years of service, is the wonderful growth of the church in western Pennsylvania, and to him, as a faithful missionary, much of the substantial growth of the period from 1840, to 1873, is due. His many virtues will never be forgotten by the people, not only of Blairsville, but of the county and the western portion of the state.

THE BLAIRSVILLE CEMETERY.

The original incorporators were: James Clark, John Graff, John Cunningham, John Hill, James Coad, David Fails, Samuel Mathews, John Bruce, R. B. McCabe, Joseph Rugg, E. Carlton, Washington Geer, George S. Mendel, Samuel McCune, Edward Dulty, J. G. Hammer, A. Matthias, Wilson Knott, George Cunningham, W. B. Brown, Martin L. Miller, S. Cassidy, John P. Ford, James Rutlidge, Joseph Torrence, W. T. Smith, Dennison Wilkinson and C. C. Davis.

The petition for the Cemetery Association, was presented at the June term 1853, of the Court of Common Pleas, and in the succeeding September term, was granted.

The first election was held on the 18th of October, subsequent, with the following result: President, James Clark; managers, John Graff, John Bruce, David Fails, James Rutlidge, Samuel Mathews and John Cunningham; treasurer, John Hill; secretary, R. B. McCabe.

The Cemetery grounds were located on the Alum bank hill, about half a mile east of the centre of the town. Six acres were purchased of Mr. Maher, the sum paid being one thousand dollars.

The present officers are: President, Samuel Ray; managers, John Hill, John Bruce, C. C. Davis, W. R. Truby, W. Geer and J. H. Walker; treasurer, Paul Graff; secretary, John P. Ford.

THE BLAIRSVILLE RECORD

Was established in 1827, by Messrs. Murray and McFarland, who were associated in its publication for several years. Afterward Thomas McFarland individually became its proprietor, and built a one story brick building for a printing office, on Spring street, near the market house.

In 1832 John Matthias removed from Phillipsburg, Centre county, to Blairsville, and became editor of the Record, Mr. McFarland still being its publisher and proprietor. Afterward a partnership was formed between them, under the style of McFarland & Matthias, which continued until the death of Mr. Farland, when his interest was purchased by Wm. B. Brown, and the publication of the paper was continued under the firm name of Matthias & Brown. During their term of business the office was removed to Main street, in the west end of the house at the corner of Main and Spring streets, then owned by William Maher, and about 1843 it was located in a brick building on the south side of Main street, below Walnut, then owned by Samuel Moorhead, Esq.

Mr. Matthias died in 1844, and the publication of the Record was continued by Mr. Brown for about a year, when the establishment was leased by Thomas A. Maguire, of Johnstown, who started a paper under the title of the Citizen. It was issued for a year or a shorter period.

In May, 1846, Richard B. McCabe and Robert B. Woodward leased the old Record establishment and inaugurated a new paper, entitling it The Apalachian. Throughout its whole career the Record had been a party paper, advocating and supporting the principles and measures of the democratic party. The Apalachian, under Mr. McCabe's editorial control, was published as an independent political journal, not being the organ of either of the two parties (the democratic and whig) then in existence, and objecting to both on account of their attitude on the slavery question. In 1848 it espoused the cause of the "free democratic or free soil" and supported its candidate, Martin Van Buren, for the presidency. The Apalachian was issued by Messrs. McCabe and Woodward for three years, and in May, 1849, Alfred Matthias (son of the former editor, John Matthias.) and William Caldwell became its publishers, under the style of Matthias & Caldwell, conducting it as an independent free-soil paper.

In 1854 the firm was dissolved, and the publication of the paper was continued by Alfred Matthias individually, who purchased the establishment, which had to this time belonged to William B. Brown and the estate of John Matthias. Mr. M. continued its issue till November, 1855, when he sold to Thomas S. Reed, who established the True American in its stead.

In the summer of 1855 the first steps were taken in Pennsylvania to organize the republican party, and the Apalachian having for years been opposing the extension of slavery and advocating the general principles upon which the republican party was afterwards founded, was one of the first newspapers in the state to advocate the formation of the new party.

Its editor, Alfred Matthias, was one of the signers of the call issued in August, 1855, for the mass convention which met in Pittsburgh September 5th, 1855, organized the republican party in the state and placed in nomination the first candidate of the party for a state office—Passmore Williamson for canal commissioner.

The press upon which the Record was printed from an early period in its history, if not from the beginning, was used for the printing of the Citizen and the Apalachian, until the latter ceased to exist, and long after presses of its style had generally gone out of use. It was manufactured by A. Ramage, of Philadelphia. Its frame was of solid mahogany, and the iron "platen" was only large enough to cover one page of the paper—two impressions being required to print one side of the sheet. This antiquated press, somewhat of a curiosity to those accustomed to the more modern printing machinery, is still in existence.

A paper called the Blairsville Republican was started about 1829, by a Mr. Andrews, and was published about a year and a half. With this exception, the Record was the only paper issued in Blairsville during the period of its existence.

For a period of two or three years prior to 1858 Blairsville was without a newspaper. Sometime in 1858, a John Loughery, of Greensburg, purchased a press and type of Jas. P. Barr, Esq., of Pittsburgh, and brought it to Blairsville for the purpose of publishing a paper. Being without means, a number of the democrats of the town contributed money, and Mr. Loughery commenced the publication of the Blairsville Record. It seems Mr. Barr was not paid for the press sold to Mr. Loughery. He brought suit for the amount due him, obtained a judgment, issued an execution, levied on the press and type, and it was sold at sheriff's sale, and was bought by William Maher, Esq. Whether Mr. Maher bought the press for or sold it to John Campbell, we are not advised, but Mr. Campbell became the owner. Some time during the month of February, 1859, James F. Campbell, a son of the owner of the press and type, became the editor and publisher of the Record. He conducted the paper until 1862, when Mr. J. Campbell sold the concern to James Steele, a son of Stewart Steele, Esq., of Blairsville. The paper was continued under the same name until 1864, when Mr. Steele removed the office to Ashland, Schuylkill county, Pa. Having bought out another office, the Record ceased to exist. The Record was always democratic in principle. During the time Mr. J. F. Campbell was editor of the Record, another paper was started by Thomas S. Reed, Esq., called the True American. This paper was opposite in politics to the Record, and for a time these editors made things quite lively in their columns. Mr. Reed's paper changed hands, the type and press becoming the property of a number of republicans, perhaps in 1859. The idea of changing the name of the paper to that of the Blairsville Journal, was adopted by the owners, and Dr. Gettys was installed as editor and publisher. He continued to issue the Journal until 1861, when it ceased to exist, and he removed his family to Mapleton, Pa. The press and type, as before stated, belonged to twelve republicans; among them were James Alexander, A. W. Taylor, W. M. Stewart, John Lichteberger, and others. The Record having ceased to exist in 1864, the town was again without a newspaper. The people were anxious that a newspaper should be published, and the want was keenly felt. Accordingly, on the 27th of April, 1865, the first number of the New Era was issued by W. R. Byers as editor, and the Blairsville Printing Company as publisher. The paper was independent in politics, and received a very fair patronage. About the 30th of July, 1866, Mr. Byers bought out the owners of the press and type, and became the sole owner. The size of the New Era through the first volume was 24 by 37, and with the commencement of volume II, the size was reduced to 22 by 32. The paper continued to be independent in politics until the issue of July 28, 1866, when it adopted the Republican principles, and placed at its mast-head the union republican ticket, and from that out labored in the interest of that party. The New Era was sold to R. M. Birkman in December, 1866, at which time he changed the name to that of the Blairsville Press, which he continued to publish until the office was removed to Indiana, and merged with the Register and American, and called the Indiana Progress. There seems to be a difference of opinion as to what became of the press and type of the True American. Some allege that it was moved to Latrobe, and others that it was sold as stated above, and was used by Dr. Gettys in the printing of the Journal. Which is correct, we do not pretend to decide. We know Mr. Reed did have an office here, and afterwards in Latrobe. Whether he had the same type and press, we do not certainly know.

THE BLAIRSVILLE LADIES' SEMINARY.

In January, 1851, there were only two female seminaries or academies in western Pennsylvania. These were situated in Pittsburgh and Washington. In the previous year there had been considerable talk of establishing a seminary of this character at some town in Westmoreland or Indiana county. Saltsburg, New Alexandria and other places were agitating the question, but it had not reached the point of taking the decisive steps which would guarantee a beginning. Meanwhile, Rev. Dr. George Hill of Blairsville, after some conversation with the members of his congregation and the friends of "higher education of young ladies," secured a house, made arrangements with Porter Turner and wife to board the pupils, if there should be any, obtained the co-operation of Miss Sarah Knott, afterward the wife of George S. Mendel, and Miss Cornelia Clark, now Mrs. Col. Campbell, of Altoona, as assistant teachers, and inserted an advertisement in the Presbyterian Advocate of March 5th, 1851, and other papers, which announced the commencement of a seminary for young ladies, in Blairsville, on the first Tuesday of May, 1851. The school opened as announced, with forty pupils.

After the first session, he made an effort to secure a permanent building, which would have the requisite accommodations for a school of this character. He foresaw the possibility of a flourishing school, provided that in its inception the foundation should be laid upon a substantial basis. He had able and experienced teachers at command, but the accommodations for the school were so meagre that he resolved to have a building appropriate for the purposes intended. With him to resolve, was to act. Without a subscription paper, or written bond or contract, he secured seven thousand dollars. He himself pledged five hundred dollars to the project, and the friends of the school, as they were approached on the subject, gave according to their means, John Graff, acted as treasurer, and the several sums were paid into his hands.

The brick main building was commenced in the winter of 1851-2, and was completed in time for the ensuing fall session, James McKee, of Jacksonville, was the supervising builder. The house is three stories in height and eighty by forty-four feet in dimensions. Its cost was about one thousand dollars in excess of the money already raised, but this was provided for amicably.

After having placed the school on a solid foundation, Dr. Hill retired and Rev. S. H. Shepley, A. M., assumed the charge in October, 1852. The latter added the south wing, fifty by forty-four feet, and two stories in height; an additional story was added by Rev. J. Jewett Parks, a later principal of the school. Under Mr. Shepley and wife, Mrs. P. P. Shepley, and the Misses Sherrard and Howes, the seminary increased in numbers and influence. It was his desire to make it the equal of Mount Holyoke and other noted New England schools. How well his labors were appreciated, the fruition of his hope gratified, we leave to the many graduates of the school to speak.

Mr. Shepley was succeeded in March, 1865, by Rev. J. R. Hughes; August, 1867, Rev. J. Jewett Parks, and August, 1878, Rev. T. R. Ewing.

The assistant teachers have been: the Misses Nancy Sherrard, Abbie Hawes, Emily Bennett, Mary Martin, Elizabeth M. Pond, Jane W. Baird, Elizabeth L. Clark, Annie Conwell, Julia R. McClusky, Marcia A. Cutler, Margaret McLaren, Sarah McLaughlin, Julia A. Parker, Harriet Hawes, Martha Hazlitt, Olive A. Baker, Emma A. Noyes, Anna S. Noyes, Harriet A. McFarren, Elizabeth C. Shepley, Julia A. Berry, Mary Martin, Catharine McFarren, Mary A. Homans, Jennie L. Atkinson, Marie D. Parks, Zilpha De Forrest, Mary Pellock, Mary R. Jenks, Hattie Corbett, Lizzie H. Dever, Mr. John W. Trabert, Helen U. Sturtevant and Ella Williams. Of these twelve were from the New England states, and the best results of "Eastern culture were added to the native judgment and good sense of the Pennsylvania workers."

The present teachers are: Rev. T. R. Ewing and Mrs. M. H. Ewing, principals; French and German, Prof. John W. Trabert; English branches and penmanship, Miss Ella Williams; English branches and calisthenics, Miss R. M. Gallaher; vocal and instrumental music, Miss Zilpha De Forrest; and drawing and painting, Miss Hattie A. Hill. The matron is Mrs. Mary P. Craig.

Including the class of 1878, there have been one hundred and eighty-one graduates. Over twelve hundred young ladies have attended full or partial courses of study. The attendance at the present time is about eighty.

Among the missionaries who were pupils of the seminary we find: Catharine C. McFarren, now of Bogota, South America; Martha Torrence, wife of Rev. T. F. Wallace, Bogota, South America; Elizabeth Culbertson, d., wife of Rev. Hunter Corbett, Cheefoo, China; and Hattie J. McCoy, Tullahasse, Indian Territory.

Among the teachers we find that Miss Abbie Hawes is now the wife of Rev. Dr. George Hill, and her sister, Harriet Hawes, is the librarian of Wellesly college, Wellesly, Mass. Miss Jane W. Baird is the wife of Rev. J. E. Pond, of Wisconsin; and Marcia A. Cutler is the wife of Rev. Dr. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton.

THE WATER WORKS.

In the fall of 1871, a company was formed to supply the place with water. In the following year it was found that the borough could not delegate its rights to a company of this character. So it proceeded to construct the works, which were commenced in April, 1872, and completed in 1873. Bonds were issued to the amount of $20,350. About two and a half miles of pipe were placed in the principal streets. The water is pumped from the Conemaugh at the foot of "Chestnut ridge," into a reservoir, sixty feet in diameter and eight feet in depth, five hundred feet from the river and two hundred and ten feet above the river at low water mark. For fire purposes, the average height of the reservoir above the streets is one hundred and sixteen feet.

The water taxes are from four to eight dollars for private families, fifteen dollars for hotels, and thirty dollars for mills. The annual revenue is $2,400, and the expense is $1,880. John P. Ford, who has been the superintendent for the last six years, says "that the water supply is ample for a population of six thousand." The water is pure and soft, and physicians assert that there are now less fevers than in the years prior to the construction of the water works.

THE ACADEMY.

In 1868, measures were taken by Revs. H. P. Shepley, A. M., and D. W. Collins, D. D., to found an academy for the "higher instruction" of young men. Six thousand four hundred dollars were raised in scholarships of $260 each, and a large and commodious two-story building, with three rooms above and a large room and vestibule below, was erected in 1869. Seventy-five pupils attended the first session in the fall of 1869.

First year, Principal, Dr. Collins; assistant, Rev. Shepley. Second, Principal, Dr. Collins; assistant, Rev. J. W. Swaney. Third, Principal, Dr. Collins; assistant, Wm. Bogle. Fourth, Mr. Eaton, principal, and wife, assistant. Fifth, Rev. N. R. Johnston, principal, and wife, assistant. Sixth, William A. Vis, principal, and sixth, Mr. Beatley, principal. Since September, 1876, Major A. J. Bolar has been in charge of the school. His assistants has been: 1876-7. William Neuraghan; 1877-8, Harry St. Clair and Austin Clark; 1878-9; D. M. Shedd and W. M. Turner. The number of pupils in attendance is sixty. The normal, classical and business departments are arranged to meet the demands of all young men who desire a thorough course of special studies.

THE ISABELLA FURNACE COMPANY'S COKE WORKS.

These extensive works are situated near the eastern terminus of the W. P. R. R. at Coketon, in Westmoreland county, just across the Conemaugh river from Blairsville, Indiana county, at a distance of sixty miles from the blast furnaces. At this point over 900 acres of coal and surface territory have been purchased.

The number of ovens at present built is 200, which are of the ordinary "bee hive" type, 13½ feet in diameter, and 7 feet from hearth to crown, built of fire brick laid in loam; 160 of these are disposed in a line along the side of an ancient bank of the river, and are bound together in front by a stone wall three feet thick, laid in mortar, with openings for the working doors, the sides of which are protected by iron frames. The upper surface of this wall is on a level with the top of the ovens. The side of the hill, which has been cut down vertically in order to prepare the foundation bed for the ovens, forms this back wall, and all the space around and between them, is filled with earth. When the ovens are working, the door is closed with a temporary brick wall. The yard in front of the ovens falls two feet in its width of forty feet. Its lower side is sustained by a retaining wall 2½ feet thick, in front of which and 8 feet below its upper surface, run the broad gauge coke tracks, two in number, which connect with the main road.

An immense amount of excavation and embankment was required in constructing the oven yard and the roadway for the coke tracks. It was endeavored, as far as possible, so to locate the line that the former should furnish sufficient material for the latter, and so successfully was this accomplished that no barrow pits were found necessary.

Owing to the intersection of the side hill by a ravine, it became necessary to separate the remaining forty ovens from the others. They were, therefore, placed in a line on the further side. The coke track, being brought across the ravine upon trestle-work, was continued along in front of the ovens, and to some distance beyond them, as a "spur" track.

On a terrace above the ovens, at nearly the summit of the bank, is a line of trestle-work, between the consecutive bents of which coal bins are constructed, capable of holding 150 bushels of coal. The coal is brought from the mines, about a mile distant, in small mine cars, holding about thirty bushels each, hauled by a light locomotive over a narrow gauge (36 inches) track, which is continued out over the trestle-work. The cars discharge their load at the bottom into the bins, which are provided with doors at the side opposite to the centre of the oven, from which the coal is led into the opening at the top of the ovens, as desired, by means of iron chutes. In this way all unnecessary handling of material is avoided. The narrow gauge railroad is a model of neatness in construction, and on its way to the mines passes over a bridge and trestle-work nearly forty feet from the ground. Upon the top of the hill, above the ovens, is a reservoir built of brick, 42 feet in diameter, and 6 feet deep, capable of holding 62,000 gallons, which is filled from the river by a large Cameron pump. On the bottom land below the ovens, a number of blocks of houses and a large store have been erected for the use of the miners and coke-burners, and already quite a respectable village, called Coketon, has sprung up in the vicinity.

The coal seam now worked is the Pittsburgh, or Connellsville, which is here over six feet thick, quite pure, and exceedingly soft and bituminous in its nature, containing thirty per cent. of volatile matter, and sixty per cent. of fixed carbon. It is intersected by two distinct planes of clearage, at right angles to each other, technically termed the line of the "butts" and the line of the "face." The bearing of the latter is here north, 72 degrees west (north 72° w.), or nearly perpendicular to the line of upheaval of the Allegheny chain. It had the same bearing at Connellsville, and at Innis' Station, at the mines of the Pennsylvania Gas Coal Company, bore north, 62 degrees west (N. 62° W.).

Each oven is charged with 125 bushels of coal, and yields 140 to 150 bushels of coke—the operation lasting 36 hours—100 ovens, or half the number, being discharged and recharged every day. The coke produced is very hard and compact, and steel gray in color, containing from ten to fifteen per cent. of ash. and closely resembling the Connellsville coke, which has been proved to contain an equal amount of ash. About 15,000 bushels of coke can be produced per day. This is brought to the furnaces, in cars of plate iron and of wood, holding from 600 to 650 bushels each. Car loads of this coke have been sent to Omaha and Salt Lake City for use in smelting works.

ISABELLA FURNACES.

Isabella Furnaces, Pittsburgh, situated on the north bank of the Allegheny river, some five miles distant from the city, contiguous to the main line of the Western Pennsylvania Railway, are owned by a company. The organization comprises, among others, the well known iron manufacturing firms of Graff, Bennett & Co., Spang, Chalfant & Co., Lewis Bailey, Dalzell & Co., the Olivers (of Lewis Oliver & Phillips), J. Painter & Sons, Wm. Smith and Benjamin Crowther. It was formed in 1871, and during the same year commenced building operations, being fully prepared to expend whatever was necessary to make the enterprise not only a success but a triumph. John W. Chalfant was made the financial manager, Benjamin Crowther the superintendent of construction.

In order to secure every possible improvement, the latter, although he had constructed several large furnaces west of the Alleghenies, made a tour of inspection through the United States and Great Britain, and from his observation and practical knowledge was enabled to erect the great works which have been so successfully operated. Without regard to primary expense, the economical production of metal was made the great consideration to be kept in view.

There are two stacks. The smaller was "blowed in" in June, 1872, and the greater in the following November. All the necessary buildings and appointments are of the finest description; and the enterprise, in all its ramifications, required an expenditure of $900,000. The height of each stack is seventy-five feet; the boshes are eighteen and twenty feet respectively. The capacity of the smaller stack is 10,928 cubic feet, and that of the larger is 12,914 cubic feet. The aggregate maximum production was estimated at 1,350 tons per week. For the week ending October 24th, 1874, the yield of the smaller furnace is stated at 651 $\frac{1000}{2240}$ tons, which is said to be the greatest production ever attained by any furnace of its size in the world. But even these figures have been surpassed; for the report of the superintendent for the week ending November 7th, 1874, gives the enormous amount of 702 $\frac{1220}{2240}$ tons. In 1879 the weekly production had increased to 780 tons, an increase scarcely hoped for when the hitherto unprecedented yield was considered.

The ores used are the finest grades of Champlain and Superior. Each stack is enclosed in a casing of plate iron, reaching within fifteen feet of the hearth, and resting upon an entablature supported by iron columns. A cast-iron water-box surrounds the hearth, to prevent the destruction of the wall by heat; and the slag is run into cooling moulds on a circulating table sunk in the floor. The furnaces stand sixty-four feet apart; the throat of each is surrounded by a charging platform, and these are connected by an iron bridge. The hoisting of materials is accomplished by a pneumatic lift in the rear of each stack.

The water supply is obtained from the Allegheny river, and is held in iron tanks elevated on pillars between the stacks. In the rear of the furnaces are situated the hot blast ovens, of which there are five for each furnace, although only four are used at a time, the remaining one being only in operation in case of accident or repairs to any of the others. The gases from the furnaces are taken off by means of a horizontal flue near the top, and are thence conveyed downwards and used to heat the boilers. By this means a saving of seventy-five tons of coal per week is effected. This economy in the manufacture of pig-iron has been entirely overlooked until recently. Immediately in the rear of the hot blast ovens, and on a level of ten feet lower, is the stock-house, a wooden building 240 feet long, seventy-five feet wide and thirty-two feet high, covered with corrugated iron on the side next to the furnace and having a slate roof. It is traversed by an elevated railway, and provided with bins for the reception of coke, ore and flux. As the premises embrace thirty-four acres of ground, there is ample space to spare for stock outside. Directly in front of the stacks, and facing the Allegheny river, is a casting-house, 79 feet long, 122 wide and 40 feet high. It is built entirely of stone and iron, and the roof is in two spans of 61 feet each, supported in the middle by a row of iron columns, by which the building is practically divided into two rooms.

To the left of this building stands the engine house, 97 feet long, 40 feet wide and 40½ feet high, built of brick and covered with a slate roof. It contains six vertical direct-acting engines, situated in a straight line, fourteen feet apart from centres, and working independently of each other. The blast cylinders, which work with puppet valves, have a diameter of 84 inches, and are directly over the engines, connected with the main line by branch pipes. The engines have each a cylinder of 35 inches, and four feet stroke; the diameter of the fly-wheel is 14 feet; the maximum speed is 19 revolutions per minute, giving 5,848 cubic feet of air.

The use of several engines of small size, in preference to a single large one, has been found to be attended with many advantages; the expense is less and the machinery is lighter; the blast is uniform, requires no regulator, and is produced without noise, while, in case of accident to one, it does not become necessary to stop the furnace. But four of the engines are used at the same time, and great economy is effected by applying the exhausted steam to raise the temperature of the water before it goes to the boilers.

The boiler-house is a brick building, 85 feet long, 75 feet wide and 35 feet high, with a roof of iron and slate. It contains twelve boilers, in batteries of four each. These are plain cylinders, 42 inches in diameter and 64 feet long. The chimney stack is of plate iron, 10½ feet in diameter and 112 feet high. The company manufactures its own coke, having 200 ovens in Westmoreland county, where it owns 900 acres of coal territory.

The rolling stock consists of 166 flat cars, 53 coke cars and 2 locomotive engines. Connected with the furnaces are a car repair shop, measuring 105 feet by 32 feet, and a blacksmith shop, 32 feet by 40 feet. There is also on the premises a chemical laboratory for the analysis of materials. Conducted in the most liberal spirit, the expenditure in connection with the enterprise has been very great. Nothing that experience could suggest or money obtain was omitted. Recording as they do the greatest production of pig-metal ever effected in the world, these furnaces hold an important position in the pig-iron trade of the United States. At the present writing the company is preparing to erect another stack, and make further improvements, involving an outlay of $100,000.

PRESBYTERIAN SUNDAY SCHOOL BLAIRSVILLE.

The early history of the Presbyterian Sunday School, Blairsville, seems to be closely connected with that of the Union Sunday School, which was long held in the old log school house formerly occupied by the colored people as a house of worship. The testimony of the few early people who remain with us today, fixes it beyond a doubt, that the leading spirits who labored so faithfully at its commencement, and the majority of those who shared in the advantages of the Union Sunday School, were in full sympathy with the faith and practice of the Presbyterian church. In fact, I cannot but feel that our beloved Sundy School is the lineal successor of the Union Sunday School—the depositary of its archives and heir of its glory. With such feelings it has been no small pleasure with which your historian has examined the records at his disposal, scanty though they be.

The earliest account I have been able to find, is a roll of the first class of boys and girls, for the quarter commencing May 4, 1823.

First Class, Boys.—Amos Davis, James Brown, James Smith, John Smith, John Reynolds, Washington Geer, Samuel Kuntz.

First Class, Girls.—Eunice Davis, Harriet Brown, Thankful Geer, Eleanor Banks, Deborah Eccles, Nancy Moorhead, Mary Alexander, Catharine Alexander.

Of these, Washington Geer and Eunice Davis, (Mrs. Black), are still living among us. Others have moved away or are not living. From a paper of August 5th, same year, we find: Wm. G. Williams, superintendent; A. Brown, B. Crisman, C. Russell, teachers.

Although we have had no access to earlier records, it seems probable for various reasons, that the school was in operation at least two years previous, which would make this the fiftieth anniversary of our Sunday School, as our pastor stated in his memorial sermon.

It is proper to state that as no reference is any where made in the papers at hand to West Union, we have not tried to appropriate them to any Sunday School which may have possibly been held there, before the occupancy of our church building. The impression of several whom I have consulted, is that no Sunday School was held at West Union, or at least that the towns-folk took no part there.

The Union Sunday school from the beginning seems to have been carried on with energy and success. As several denominations were represented, we find from August, 1823, till April 11th, 1824, three superintendents: Wm. G. Williams, Jonathan Kurtz and John Cunningham; nine male teachers, viz: John Peters, Episcopalian; Lyman S. Waterman, Methodist; James Johnston, Methodist; Samuel Morehead, Presbyterian; Benjamin Chrisman, Presbyterian; A. Brown, Caleb Russell, Presbyterian; Wm. Lytle, Presbyterian; Wm. Brown, Methodist; and ten female teachers, viz: Mrs. Davis, Mary Cunningham, Presbyterian; Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Simmons, first Methodist ever in Blairsville.; Ann Eccles, Maria Keely, Methodist; Maria Thompson, Presbyterian; Rachel Cunningham, Presbyterian; Mrs. Wier, Presbyterian; Caroline Willis, Lutheran. It does not appear that there were as many classes as teachers, for we seldom find reference to more than eight classes. Several old papers contain evidence that the superintendents each took his turn in conducting the exercises, and that there were for several years, two teachers for each class, the work being performed alternately. This, as the exercises consisted principally in recitation of verses of scripture, hymns and quotations from the catechism, may easily have been the case, without causing the confusion which now exists wherever classes are afflicted with temporary or unpunctual teachers. It has been suggested, however, by an old lady, who was then a scholar, that there was at an earlier time a scarcity of teachers; hence the memoranda which give the names of superintendents and teachers for each Sabbath, a month in advance. Classes were usually styled first, second, third and fourth, male or female, and when they afterwards became too large, first and second section or division was added to the name. But in 1823 or '24 there were three mixed classes:

Single Letters—John Dee, Catharine Banks, Bridget Reed.

Double Letters—James Russell, Mary Kurtz, Elizabeth Kurts, (Mrs. Devinny.)

Spelling.—Charles McAnulty, Thomas Reed, Morgan Banks, (Dr. Banks), Susannah Lindsay, Elizabeth Jones, Elizabeth Moorhead, Eliza Devinney, Phebe Keeley, and two others.

The teachers' roll for 1826 and 1827, two copies of which exist, make John Barber, John Cunningham and Samuel Moorhead, superintendents, and John Peters, W. G. Davis, J. N. Nesbett, Henry Keeley, Lydia Kurtz, Mary Cunningham and Deborah Eccles, teachers.

It is interesting to notice that the roll was kept, every one being marked when present, by having the day of the month set opposite the name. Tardy teachers were marked late, and, when any sent a substitute, it was so recorded. During the years of 1824, '25, '26, '27, '28 and '29, we find among the scholars, the names of Chester C. Davis, his brothers and sisters, Mr. John Kuntz, two of his sisters, and other residents of Blairsville.

The original idea of our Sunday School, seems to have been that God's Holy Word must be known in order for it to become a lamp and a light. Hence the earliest and most persistent efforts were made for the committing to memory of Scripture verse, Psalms and Hymns, and the Catechism. A system of rewards was devised as early as 1824, and a close account kept with each scholar, showing the number of verses learned, and tickets bestowed. A settlement day was held at the close of each quarter year. Six tickets appear to have entitled the holder to three cents. Some times the money value of the tickets was given in little books. If a little girl held five tickets, she was entitled to 2½ cents and received two cents, while the half cent was carefully credited on the next account. The class rolls from 1823 till 1829, contain abundant evidence that a good work was done in memorizing divine truth. Nancy Moorhead, in 1823, recited 767 verses Scripture and 193 verses hymns—960 verses in twelve Sabbaths, one of which she did not attend school, an average of eighty verses a week.

A sister of Mr. Joseph Henderson, one of the Presbyterian elders, is said to have committed the whole of the four gospels to memory. The girls generally did the best, but occasionally a boy distinguished himself. During the three months commencing January 27, 1827, Washington McCartney, of the class taught by Wm. G. Davis and J. N. Nesbitt, was present every Sabbath, and recited verses of scripture as follows: 72, 108, 130, 145, 85, 258, 108, 215, 135, 312, 159, 138, making a total of 1,865, or 155 verses per Sabbath.

It is impossible to determine just when the Union Sabbath school became distinctively Presbyterian. In a report of the Presbyterian Sabbath school made by a former superintendent, J. A. Cunningham, the reorganization is given as 1828. If the exact date of the occupancy of the present meeting house were known, it migh help us. There seems some probability that it was used before the time given in the church records, viz: 1831. A lady, now living, states that Rev. Thomas Davis preached a funeral sermon in it the last of February or first of March, 1830, on the death of Mary Crow.

The first Sabbath of March, 1830, Judge Cunningham commenced a regular record, which has been continued, with but little interruption, on the same plan till the present time. There were present that day 63 scholars and 10 teachers. During the year 1830, there were in all 150 names on the roll of scholars. The first fifty are lost. This roll was continued till April, 1843, when James S. Guthrie, a son of Samuel Guthrie, a farmer of Indiana county, is registered as scholar No. 335. For nearly twelve years, or until December, 1842, the minutes are very satisfactory, showing the careful superintendence of Judge Cunningham, and the number of teachers and pupils present each day, with many little items of interest. For four years we find only irregular entries in a disused roll book. Since 1846 regular minutes appear, except for 1853 and the four years preceding August, 1860. During these years, Captain Smith, H. A. Thompson, Jacob Zimmers, H. P, Shepley, Sam'l Ray and Captain J. A. Cunningham have been acting superintendents. Among the librarians, the earliest name is J. Noble Nesbitt. After him come Nelson Loughery, and in later times, William R. Ford, Benton Dulley, Samuel Cunningham, Capt. J. A. Cunningham, John Alexander, R. M. Birkman, Lyman Ray and Jacob Zimmers.

For twenty years there are no lists of teachers or scholars. A few class books give us familiar names of the last ten years. Records of conversions, deaths and removals are scarcely to be found. Here and there along the scanty records are many incidents recorded which show the spirit which animated our scholars: "April, 1830—The Shorter Catechism was attended to according to a standing rule." "A good girl, Elizabeth Mulhollan, left school for some time." "January 16, 1831.—Heavy snow storm since Friday evening. Mary Cunningham, only female pupil present."

A report to the Sabbath School Union gives: August, 1831, 175 names on roll, 97 of them regular scholars. December, 1835—Two Bible classes, male and female, were formed, with 17 scholars—afterwards 20.

These classes continued for seven years, when it appears that Mrs. Cunningham taught the female class in the afternoon.

We first notice the observance of monthly concert of prayer, November, 1841. December, 1848, some of the library books were stolen and the desks broken open. A few weeks afterward they were found under Mr. Barnes' foundry. Eight celebrations of 4th of July, five celebrations of Christmas, and one celebration of New Year, were held at the church from 1835 to 1852.

August 12, 1860, we find that the names of officers and teachers were as follows: H. A. Thompson, superintendent; Jacob Zimmers secretary; Mrs. Elder, Mrs. Dr. Marshall, Miss Simpson, Miss Riggs, Miss Latham, Samuel Ray, Wm. R. Ford, —— Alexander, Mr. Lang, E. G. Stitt, Mathew George, teachers.

The singing was for many years confined to the little hymn book, but in 1861 the superintendent (Jacob Zimmers) says: "We have introduced a new singing book (S. S. Bell) which interests the children wonderfully, and which appears to create a deeper interest in the school." Benevolence always had a place in our school. March 17th, 1861, an orphan boy from Northumberland, Charles Wildisie, passed through on his way to Dayton, Ohio. On the presentation of a prize Bible he had received for good conduct in another Sabbath school, we gave him a present of $3.34. For a long time a heathen scholar was supported by our school. The interest in missions was very low, and on January 8, 1862, after some discussion it was decided to devote the accumulated contributions of the children to the purchase of a new library. Nov. 2, 1862, there were present fifty-four scholars and twelve teachers, contribution 12 cents. A letter from the A. S. S. Union plead strongly for help and a special collection appointed for the next Sabbath which resulted in $1.65.

Steady progress in the next five years in the attainment of a missionary spirit, justified the organization of the present missionary society in January, 1867, with its meetings every two months. During the two months preceding its organization the collection amounted to only $4.35, while at the first meeting of the society, two months later, the reports from the several classes, most of whom kept their own books of deposit, amounted to $16.17, nearly four times as much as under the old system.

MECHANICS' LODGE NO. 166, K. OF H.,

Was instituted April 29, 1876, but owing to the fact of the commission of the deputy having expired before this date, it was necessary, in order to legalize the lodge, that it be re-instituted, which was done on the 5th day of June, 1876, by Supreme Dictator, J. A. Ege. The lodge commenced with 22 charter members. The first officers were: P. D., W. R. Boyers; V. D., G. W. Clawson; Chaplain, A. D. Ferguson; Reporter, David Taylor; Treasurer, John A. Still; Sentinel,———; D., David Simpson; Asst. D., John Richardson; Guide, S. Stratton; F. Rep., H. Hildebrand; Guardian, S. H. Seigfried; Rep. to G. L., W. R. Boyers; Trustees, G. W. Clawson, H. McNulty, J. F. Frey.

The order being new in this vicinity, and there being a number of secret societies in the town, it at first did not meet with much favor. In spite of the opposition, however, it commenced to grow, and by the 20th of May, 1878, there were on the Roll book, the names of 44 members. In April, 1879, a new lodge was chartered, which caused the withdrawal of 18 members from 1877, to July, 1879. No new members were taken in, but since July, 1879, the lodge has again commenced to grow, and the roll shows 27 members in good standing. It never was in a more flourishing and healthy condition. Petitions for membership are read nearly every lodge meeting night, which is every Monday night. The meetings are held in Truby's Hall, on Main street. The present officers are: P. D., Dr. M. L. Miller; V. D., W. H Healy; Chaplain, G. M. Green; Reporter, W. R. Boyers; Treasurer, John A. Still; Sentinel, David Simpson; D., Henry F. Rugg; Asst. D., Wm. Still; Guide, Lewis C. George; F. Rep., David Taylor; Guardian, John S. Skinner; Rep. to G. L., W. R. Boyers; Trustees, George W. Clawson, W. H. Healy and John Richardson; Medical Examiner, Dr. M. L. Miller.

NAOMI LODGE NO. 12, K. & L. OF H.

In January, 1878, a petition containing 24 names, was forwarded to the Supreme Protector of Kuights and Ladies of Honor, then residing in St. Louis, Mo., asking for a charter for a lodge of this order, to be instituted in Blairsville. The Supreme Protector, E. J. Williamson, having heard the prayer of the petitioners, granted the request, and commissioned W. R. Boyers, Esq., of Blairsville, deputy Supreme Protector, and authorized him to initiate the new lodge. Accordingly, on the night of the 17th of January, 1878, Naomi Lodge No. 12, K. & L. of H., was instituted, having on the roll twelve Knights and twelve Ladies. This was the first lodge of the degree instituted in the State of Pennsylvania, and it may be said that Jewel No. 1, of Pennsylvania, is held by a Lady of this lodge, being the first issued by the Supreme Lodge of the State.

The officers for the first term were: Protector, H. Hildebrand; Vice Pro., S. H. Seigfried; Sec., W. R. Boyers; F. Sec., Henry F. Rugg; Treas., J. W. Hughes; Chaplain, David Simpson; Guide, Mrs. M. Shepherd; Guardian, Mrs. H. Seigfried; Sent., V. Kerr; Trustees, D. Simpson, V. Kerr and William Vorlage. The meetings of the lodge were held every alternate Thursday night. The principles of the order are the same as the K. of H., with the exception that ladies are admitted and the death benefit is $1,000, while in the K. of H. it is $2,000.

BLAIRSVILLE COUNCIL NO. 306, O. U. A. MECHANICS

Was instituted by State Councillor John Server, January 6, 1873, with eighteen charter members. The first officers were: Councillor, C. C. Davis; V. C., P. R. Oakes; Secretary, W. R. Boyers; Treasurer, Martin Black; F. Secretary, James Hope; inductor, G. W. Clawson; examiner, H. McNulty; inside pro., C. Clawson; outside pro., Thos. Duffy. The Council suspended work in March, 1874, and on the 22d of February, 1876, resumed, having a membership of 82. In 1876, after the K. of H. were instituted, the council concluded to suspend, since which time it has been without meetings, though it still holds its charter.

A. F. AND A. M.

In the month of May, 1864, a petition to the R. W. G. L. of A. F. and A. M. of Pennsylvania was gotten up by a few, and after the requisite number of names had been signed, it was forwarded to the grand master, asking that a dispensation might be issued for a lodge to be established in Blairsville. The petition was not acted on until the spring of 1865, and during the month of June, 1865, information was received that a dispensation and charter had been granted, and in the possession of D. D. G. M. Edward S. Golden, of Kittanning. The necessary steps were accordingly taken looking to the early instituting of the lodge. On the 25th day of July, A. D. 1865, E. S. Golden, the D. D. G. M., made his official visit, and Acacia Lodge No. 355 was instituted in due and regular form. The first officers of the lodge were: W. M., Joseph G. Hammer; S. W., Jesse A. Cunningham; J. W., Robert D. Walkinshaw; secretary, W. R. Boyers; treasurer, John Cunningham; chaplain, John S. Wakefield; master of ceremonies, Jas. F. Elder; tyler, Matthias Ringle. The names of the deacons and stewards we have not at hand. If we remember correctly, there were twelve signers to the petition. Since that time a number have been made, and among the deaths may be noted, Worshipful Master J. G. Hammer, which took place October 7, 1865, and was buried with the ceremonies of the order October 9, 1865. The lodge is still in existence. Yet there are but few of the old members left, some having died and others left the country.

Saladin Lodge No. 346, K. of P. was instituted in March, 1872. A list of the names of the first officers cannot be given. The lodge ceased to work in 1879.

Western Star Council No. 137, Jr. O. U. A. M. was instituted in May, 1873. Having surrendered its charter in 1874, and returning the books, no list of its officers can be furnished.

Champiola Tribe No. 162, I. O. R. M., was instituted by Great Sachems J. A. Moss and A. Baker, of Philadelphia, on the 21st day of October, 1872. The first officers were: Sachem, W. R. Boyers; Senior Sagamore, W. H. Healy; Junior Sagamore, R. S. Davis; Keeper of R., S. L. Muford; Keeper of Wampum, S. Conwell; Prophet, C. C. Davis. The tribe is defunct.

Active Lodge No. 1601, K. of H. was instituted May 9, 1879. The officers for the first term were as follows: P. D., C. B. Street; D., R. S. Davis; V. D., J. S. Campbell; Ass't D., J. C. McKelvey; Chaplain, W. Davis; Reporter, S. Lyon; F. Rep., C. Rugg; Treasurer, P. Graff. As to the remaining officers, our informant cannot name them. The lodge meets every Tuesday night in hall in Graff's building in the diamond.

S.S. Simon and Jude Beneficial Society was organized May 15, 1875. The first officers were: President, Peter Creighton; V. Pres., W. B. Conway; Sec., Jas. M. Harvey; Treas., Adam Walsmith; Chief Marshal, E. Cassiday; Stewards, Bernard Layton, S. J. Platt and J. C. Doran. The meetings are held in Library Hall on the third Friday of every month.

BLAIRSVILLE OFFICIAL TABLE.

Blairsville was incorporated March 25, 1825. The first election was on the first Monday of May, 1825. Regular election, third Friday in March.

1825—Burgess, John Cunningham.

1826—Burgess, John Cunningham.

1827—Burgess, Aaron Devinny.

1828—Burgess, Wm. G. Davis; assistant burgess, Joseph McMasters. Council, David Mahon, George Grier, Benjamin Crussman, Samuel Mathews, Henry Keely, Samuel McAnulty.

1829—Burgess, R. B. McCabe; assistant burgess, Jos. Loughrey. Council, Henry Kratzer, W. G. Davis, Henry Keely, Geo. Grier, Samuel Matthews, Samuel McNulty.

1830—Burgess, George Grier; assistant burgess, Thos. Johnston. Council, Samuel McNulty, Samuel Duffield, Henry Kratzer, Wm. G. Davis, Wm. Brown.

1831—Burgess, J. N. Nesbitt; assistant burgess, John McCrea. Council, Wm. Brown, H. Jack, A. Westfall, Samuel Duffield, Wm. Brown, Joseph Thompson.

1832—Burgess, John McCrea; assistant burgess, Alexander Nesbet. Council, Henry Jack, Samuel Duffield, A. Westfall, Thos. McFarland, Samuel Sharar, Peter Graff.

1833—Burgess, Daniel H. Barr; assistant burgess, John W. Brown. Council. H. Jack, A. Westfall, P. Graff, S. Sharer, John Thompson, jr., Benjamin Loughrey.

1834—Burgess, Thomas Boyle; assistant burgess, Mark Grier. Council, S. Sharar, P. Graff, John Thompson, B. Loughry, Stewart Davis, Stewart Steel.

1835—Burgess, Thomas Boyle; assistant burgess, John Mikesell. Council, Samuel Sharar, Stewart Davis, Stewart Steel, Ben. Loughry, John Thompson, Henry Beighel.

1836—Burgess, John Bruce; assistant burgess, Wm. Pike. Council, Stewart Davis, Stewart Steel, L. S. Waterman, Henry Beigel, John McConaughy, Robert Bartley.

1837—Burgess, Wm. T. Smith; assistant burgess, Samuel Mathews. Council, Wm. McClaren, J. C. Day, L. S. Waterman, Robert Bartley, John McConaughy, Henry Beitgel.

1838—Burgess, Samuel Steel; assistant burgess, John McClure. Council, H. A. Thompson, James Gilliland, Robert Bartley, Wm. McClaran, J. C. Day, John McConaughy.

1839—Burgess, Moses Culbertson; assistant burgess, Joseph Chapman. Council, James Gilliland, J. C. Day, H. A. Thompson, John Graff, Samuel Mathews, Wm. McClaren.

1840—Burgess, Moses Culbertson; assistant burgess, Joseph Chapman. Council, Samuel Mathews, John Graff, James Gilliland, James Geer, M. L. Miller, John Thompson, jr.

1841—Burgess, Stewart Davis; assistant burgess, A. R. Chapman. Council, Henry Kuhn, John Dodds, James Geer, M. L. Miller, John Graff, Samuel Mathews.

1842—Burgess, A. R. Chapman; assistant burgess, Geo. McLane. Council, John Campbell, W. B. Brown. M. L. Miller, Henry Kuhn, James Geer, John Dodds.

1843—Burgess, A. R. Chapman; assistant burgess, Smith McMillen. Council, James Geer, Henry Kuhn, John Campbell, Wm. B. Brown, Lucius Hull, Dennison Wilkinson.

1844—Burgess, James C. Day; assistant burgess, S. McMillen. Council, Solomon Cassidy, Samuel Ray, John Campbell, Lucius Hull, Dennison Wilkinson, W. B. Brown.

1845—Burgess, J. C. Day; assistant burgess, Geo. Wilkinson. Council, Martin Black, Wm. T. Smith, John P. Ford, A. M. Turner, Dennison Wilkinson, Samuel Ray.

1846—Burgess, R. Bartley; assistant burgess, H. Kuhn. Council, J. P. Ford, S. Ray, Martin Black, Wm. T. Smith, Luther Martin, G. S. Mendel.

1847—Burgess, R. H. Woodward; assistant burgess, ———. Council, W. T. Smith, Martin Black, G. S. Mendel, Luther Martin, R. J. Marshall, Archibald Davis.

1848—Burgess, A. Alters. Council, G. S. Mendel, R. J. Marshall, A. Davis, J. S. Watterson, John Devinny, Luther Martin.

1849—Burgess, John Graff. Council, J. M. Harker, C. C. Davis, J. L. Watterson, Dr. R. J. Marshall, John Devinny, Archibald Davis.

1850—Burgess, Daniel H. Barr; assistant burgess, Samuel Ray. Council, William Maher, David Fails, John Graff, C. C. Davis, J. S. Watterson, John Devinny.

1851—Burgess, Robert Bartley; assistant burgess, Matthew Graff. Council, John Devinny, David Davis, Wm. Maher, David Fails, C. C. Davis, John Graff.

1852—Burgess, W. T. Smith; assistaut burgess, Edward Dully. Council, S. McAnulty, Samuel Mathews, John Devinny, John Graff, David Fails, Wm. Maher.

1853—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, Dennison Wilkinson. Council, James Clark, David Davis, Samuel Mathews, Wm. Maher, John Devinney, S. McAnulty.

1854—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, Alfred Mathias. Council, James Clark, John Devinny, David Davis, S. McAnulty, Wm. Maher.

1855—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, Luther Martin. Council, Edward Cunningham, James Clarke, John Graff, John Devinny, David Davis, John Cunningham.

1856—Burgess, Archibald Davis. Council, John Devinny, David Davis, John Cunningham, John Graff, Joseph Rugg, John Hill.

1857—Burgess, C. C. Davis; assistant burgess, David Taylor, Council, Samuel Dixon, A. M. Shields, John Hill, John Graff, Joseph Rugg, John Cunningham.

1858—Burgess, John P. Ford; assistant burgess, John Richason. Council, Wm. McCormick, W. R. Speer, A. M. Shields, Joseph Rugg, Samuel Dixon, John Hill.

1859—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, John Richason. Council, Wm. R. Speer, Wm. McCormick, David Fails, Jno. G. Kurtz, A. M. Shields, Samuel Cunningham.

1860—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, Mathias Ringle. Coucil, Stewart Steel, Wm. Ford, Wm. McCormick, Samuel Cunningham, David Fails, W. R. Speer.

1861—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, J. A. Cunningham. Council, Samuel Cunnningham, David Fails, W. R. Speer, Wm. Ford, John Bruce, Patrick Maher.

1862—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, John Tyson. Council, Patrick Maher, John Hill, John Bruce, Mathias Ringle, D. Laney, Wm. Ford.

1863—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, Wm. Pike. Council, John Bruce, John Campbell, Patrick Maher, John G. Long, Mathias Ringle, Wm. R. Speer.

1864—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, Wm. Pike. Council, M. L. Miller, John Bruce, Mathias Ringle, J. G. Long, W. R. Speer, John Campbell.

1865—Burgess, Edward Dully. Council, Archibald Davis, Wm. Ransom, M. L. Miller, A. H. Baker, John Alexander, John Campbell.

1866—Burgess, Edward Dully. Council, J. A. Cunningham, J. F. Elder, A. H. Baker, Wm. Ransom, Archibald Davis, M. L. Miller.

1867—Burgess, Edward Dully. Council, Archibald Davis, A. H. Baker, James F. Elder, Wm. Ransom, Robert Bartley, S. Cunningham.

1868—Burgess, Edward Dully; assistant burgess, J. J. Chapman. Council, David Davis, Wm. Ransom, H. P. Shepley, R. Bartley, James Elder, A. Davis.

1869—Burgess, J. I. Chapman; assistant burgess, John Long. Council, Columbus Bell, Philip Stiffey, R. Bartley, H. P. Shepley, Wm. Ransom, David Davis.

1870—Burgess, J. I. Chapman; assistant burgess, W. G. Triece. Council, Tobias Hammer, J. M. Hosack, G. H. Johnson, Wm. Ransom, D. Davis, Philip Stiffey.

1871—Burgess, John G. Long; assistant burgess, Wm. G. Triece. Council, John W. Hughes, M. D., Tobias Hammers, Philip Stiffey, J. M. Hosack, R. S. Davis, G. H. Johnson.

1872—Burgess, W. G. Triece; assistant burgess, M. B. Altman. Council, Philip Stiffey, David Davis, J. W. Hughes, J. M. Hosack, Tobias Hammers, R. S. Davis.

1873—Burgess, W. G. Triece; assistant burgess, D. S. Stiffey. Council, P. Stiffey, J. A. Cunningham, Samuel Ray, David Davis, J. W. Hughes, R. S. Davis.

1874—Burgess, W. G. Triece. Council, Samuel Ray, David Davis, J. A. Cunningham, Philip Stiffey, Benjamin Beatty, John G. Alexander.

1875—Burgess, W. G. Triece. Council, Samuel Ray, George Wilkinson, David Davis, J. W. Hughes, B. F. Beatty, J. A. Cunningham.

1876—Burgess, W. G. Triece. Council, J. W. Hughes, Geo. Wilkinson, David Davis, Patrick Maher, B. F. Beatty, James Shields.

1877—Burgess, J. W. Hughes. Council, W. R. Truby, T. D. Cunningham, Geo. Wilkinson, James Shields, Patrick Maher, George W. Hill.

1878—Burgess, David Taylor. Council, W. R. Truby, T. D. Cunningham, James Shields, George Wilkinson, Patrick Maher, J. W. Hughes.

THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Was chartered by act of assembly, approved February 9, 1853. It extended from Blairsville, in Indiana county, down the valley of the Conemaugh and Kiskiminetas rivers, through Indiana and Westmoreland counties, to Freeport, in Armstrong county. At this point it left the Allegheny and ascended the Big Buffalo to Rough run; thence up rough run to head waters of Coal run; thence down Coal run to Butler, and thence through Butler and Lawrence counties to New Castle, where it connected with the Cleveland and Mahoning railroad, the intention being to form a continuous railroad route, without break of gauge to Chicago, St. Louis and the west. At that time there was a break of gauge of 1½ inches on all roads in Ohio.

The Northwestern Railroad Company, after grading that part of the road from Blairsville to Allegheny Junction and completing the masonry, failed and was sold out at Philadelphia, in May, 1859, and purchased by a committee of the bondholders, These bondholders reorganized as the Western Pennsylvania Railroad Company, under a charter approved March 22, 1860. The work of completing the road was begun in the spring of 1863. The track was laid each way from Blairsville west and Allegheny Junction east.

Passenger trains were put on in the fall of 1864, and run from each end. The high bridge over Wolford run was finished in 1865, and through trains immediately put on, running between Blairsville and the Allegheny Valley railroad at the mouth of the Kiskiminetas river. The bridge over the Allegheny river was completed in 1865. That part of the road from Freeport to Allegheny City was completed in the fall of 1866 and trains began to run through from Blairsville to Allegheny city at once. The branch to Butler was completed in 1871. The first train ran from Blairsville to Saltsburg, Edward Pitcairn, now train-master on the Pittsburgh division of the P. R. R., being the conductor.

THE PENNSYLVANIA CANAL,

From the mouth of the Kiskimnetas down the Allegheny to Pittsburgh, was located in 1826, by Nathan L. Roberts, engineer, and was placed under contract the same year, and water let into same in 1828, after the completion of the dock over the Allegheny river and the Kiskiminetas feeder up to Leechburg and the dam at that place.

In May, 1827, Nathan L. Roberts, George T. Olmstead and Alonzo Livermore were appointed to locate the canal from the mouth of the Kiskiminetas to Blairsville. Mr. Roberts located twenty miles and was then transferred to the Portage, Mr. Olmstead finished this location to Blairsville. Olmstead's location was afterwards modified by Livermore, who introduced the viaduct and tunnels seven miles below Blairsville, thereby cutting off the bend in the river, which Olmstead followed. The location of Roberts of the first twenty miles was approved June 2, 1827. Livermore's location of the balance was approved September 10, 1827, and the canal was put under contract in the fall of 1827. Water was let into the canal in 1829.

March 29, 1830, the location of the canal from Blairsville to Johnstown was approved by the board, and the construction of the canal authorized. The canal was contracted for and in course of construction in the summer of 1830. In the winter of 1830–31 the tunnel below Blairsville was partially arched.

In November, 1838, a feeder was contracted for and put under course of construction, extending from the canal at the mouth of the Kiskiminetas to Kittanning, but the work was shortly afterwards stopped. The old portage road and tunnel was put under contract May 28, 1831, so that the tunnel below Blairsville must be some four years the older and one of the first, if not the first, in this country.

James Clarke was first appointed canal commissioner June 2, 1827, and continued in office until February 29, 1836. January 23, 1839, Mr. Clarke was appointed to fill a vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Thaddeus Stevens. February 14, 1839, Mr. Clarke was re-appointed, and continued in office until February 12, 1840. The act of 18th April, 1843, made the office an elective one, and the first board elected under its provisions was James Clarke, Jesse Miller and Wm. B. Foster, jr., and took their office January 9, 1844. Mr. Clarke's term expired January 13, 1846, about the time the Pennsylvania Railroad was under course of construction.

June 13, 1837, the piece of canal known as the Bardstown cut, at the Westmoreland county end of the Blairsville bridge, was advertised for letting and completed that same year.

HON. JOHN CUNNINGHAM.

He was born near New London Cross Roads, Chester county February 17, 1794, and was an only child of William and Mary Cunningham nee Hill. The former was born in Ballimony, Ireland, in 1767, and died near Lewistown in 1810. He was married in 1792, in Chester county, to Mary Hill, who was born on Magee Island in 1763, and died in Blairsville in 1831.

From the day our subject was left fatherless, he was cast upon his own resources, not only for his own maintenance, but being the oldest son, for the maintenance also of a dependent mother and several brothers and sisters. He at once devoted himself to learning a trade, and this accomplished, he labored for several years as a journeyman, to obtain the means to support his, mother and her family. In the spring of 1818 he removed to Indiana, and in November of that year attended the first sale of lots at Blairsville, and in the following spring made his permanent home in the embryo village. Through his influence the first prayer meeting in the village was established, and occasional preaching secured, until in September, 1862, the Presbyterian church of West Union (the name and location were afterward changed to Blairsville,) was established. Mr. Cunningham, though then comparatively a young man, was chosen and ordained one of its ruling elders, and held the position nearly forty-three years. For thirty years he was the superintendent, and almost the life of the Sabbath school. He was for a much longer period the centre around which the prayer meeting lived and had its being.

He was closely connected with the growth of the town, having come when its site was almost an unbroken forest. He built and used as a workshop one of the first tenements erected in it, (still standing in the rear of the residence of Jesse A. Cunningham on Main street,) and cut with his hand-axe a path diagonally across the town (then only on paper) from his own lot to the lot now occupied by Mrs. Shields, which contained one of the very few other houses in the place. From that day till his death he was identified with the material, intellectual, moral and religious welfare of the town. He had a large part in all its plans and labors for its improvement. He was trusted and honored by his fellow-citizens, by being called to a large share of the official duties connected with the government. Nor was his influence circumscribed by the limits of his own immediate borough and neighborhood. The county and the state felt it, and the dignity and honor with which, for a number of years, he filled the position of associate justice was one of the ways in which this influence was exerted.

He died April 26, 1865, in the seventy-second year of his age. He was married June 26, 1823, to Rachel Wallace, b. May 24, 1798. She was the daughter of Peter and Jane Wallace nee Craig. The former was the son of Richard Wallace, the pioneer, of "Wallace fort" note and Mary Simpson. Our subject's children were: Mary, P. Wallace, d., m. to Mary Scott Mendel; William, d., Presbyterian clergyman, graduate of Jefferson College and Western Theological Seminary, m. first to Laura Aldrich, d., and second to Rachel Latham; Samuel, d., m. to Catharine Johnston; Jesse A., a soldier in the war of 1861, m. to Nancy McFaren; John Jr., m. to Eliza Isabella McFaren; and Thomas Davis, captain in the war of 1861 for three years, banker, m. to Mary, daughter to Rev. S. H. Shepley.

Mrs. Margaret Coleman was born March 25th, 1791, at the Big Spring, Cumberland county, and was a daughter of Rev. John and Nancy Jamison nee Gibb, the former of whom had migrated from the north of Ireland to America in 1783. In 1794, the family located near Derry, in Westmoreland county, traveling from Cumberland county on horseback. In 1796, the family removed to the farm now occupied by W. J. Coleman, in Black-lick township. Rev. Jamison died in 1821, at the age of seventy-six; his wife in 1841, at the age of ninety-one. His children were: Jane, d., m. to Moses Thompson, d.; John, d., m. to Martha Mitchell; Nancy, d., m. to William Thompson, d.; William, d.; Margaret, m. in 1814, to Archibald Coleman, d. in 1871, eighty-one years of age; and Isabella, d., m. to William Rankin. Archibald and Margaret Coleman's children were: John, d., m. to Elizabeth Taylor; Jane, m. in 1840, to William P. Bruce, d.; Archibald, b. in 1821, m. to Mary Campbell; Nancy, m. to William Irvin, d.; James M., m. to Mary J. Moore; William Jamison, m. to Margaret Nesbit. William P. and Jane Bruce's children were: Mary, m. to Dr. William Jack; John N., m. to Annie Arrowsmith; Margaret, m.

to William Turner; Nancy; Archibald Coleman, d.; and Thomas T., Anna, Josephine and Augusta, who died on successive Sabbaths in the summer of 1863. Archibald and Mary Coleman's children were: A. M., m. to Mary Turner; Sarah Alice, m. to Dr. A. De Voe; and C. B.

NICHOLAS COLEMAN, the father of Archibald Coleman, the husband of Mrs. Margaret Coleman nee Jamison, was among the early settlers of what is now Conemaugh township. He was a native of Ireland, and migrated to America when a young man, locating in the Conscocheaque valley. Here he married Jane McClellan, and here their first child, William, was born.

He settled about 1769 or 1770 on the tract upon which Samuel Coleman of Conemaugh township, now resides near Conemaugh church. After clearing a piece of land, and getting in a second crop of wheat, he was driven away by the Indians. He returned to Conococheque valley, and was gone seven years before he returned to his improvement. Their cabin was burned, and the wheatfield was thickly grown over with brush. His children were: William, d., m. to Polly Lytle, d.; John, d., born in 1771, said to be the first white child born in what was afterward Conemaugh township, m. to Martha Katon, d.; Margaret, d., m. first to John Mathews, d., and second to James Oliver, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Moses Thompson, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to James Mathews, d.; Jane, d., m. to Alexander McGaughey, d.; Mary, d., m. to Samuel Craven, d.; Robert, d., m. to Elizabeth McLain; Archibald, m. to Margaret Jamison; James, d., m. to Mary Campbell, d; and Sarah. The average age of the children at death was eighty. Robert and Archibald were in the war of 1812.

JOHN GRAFF, ESQ.

Of the merchants doing business in Indiana county, to-day, John Graff is the senior, both as regards age and durability of commercial life. He came to Blairsville, in 1837, from Pleasant Unity, near which he was born on the 3d of August, 1800. His parents were John and Barbara Graff nee Baum. The former was born in Neuwid, Germany, on the 15th of April, 1763, migrated to Westmoreland in 1783, and died on the 31st of December, 1818. His grandfather resided at Grafenauer, near Manheim, Germany, Graf signifying a title of nobility, and auer, denoting a castle, hence Grafenauer means Graff's castle. The religious proclivities of the Graffs in those days, were what were termed "Watchmen of the Lord," a denomination corresponding with the Mennonites. Our subject's grandfather, as well as his son, was in sympathy with the tenets of that faith, the latter having a strong bias toward the Methodist denomination.

Barbara Baum was born in the Path Valley, in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania. The word baum denotes a tree, and the family were rightly named, as each member possessed remarkable strength. She was captured by the Indians while her family were risiding on French creek, somewhere within the present limits of Crawford county, Pennsylvania. Owing to the kindness bestowed upon an old Indian during the previous winter, she was released, not however without a long and earnest talk, and the exhibition of unusual interest on the part of the grateful Indian. At the age of fourteen, she was the equal of any laborer in the harvest field. Even before that age, her father and self would make a "double team" on the farm. On one occasion when all the hands had retired from the field, and she alone had persevered to the end of a long summer's day, while sitting on a log and waiting for mate to accompany her homeward, she said as she rose, "I believe I'd rather sit than walk." "I wonder if that is what they call tired." She afterwards learned by experience that it was. She died in 1846, about seventy years of age.

Our subject was educated at the subscription school of that day, his studies being greatly encroached upon by the labors incidental to his home. He attended the Academy in Greensburg, two months in 1816, and about two months in 1817, the institution being under the charge of Jonathan Smith Findley, a brother of George Findley. He remained at home working on the farm, and the distillery connected with it, till thirty years of age. After a few years occupied in farming, he engaged in the mercantile business at Pleasant Unity, where he continued three years. In 1837, he removed to Blairsville, and purchased a half interest in a warehouse erected by his brothers, Henry and Peter, on the banks of the Conemaugh. It was seventy-five feet long, thirty wide, and on the river side, five stories in height. Afterwards, two other warehouses were erected by them on the banks of the canal. In 1847, he assumed the entire control of the house, and has since continued in business, his partners being at this time, his three sons, Jacob, Paul and Charles, He was formerly a member of the German Reformed church, but since his location in Blairsville, has been connected with the Methodist Episcopal congregation, of which, soon after his residence in this place, he was made a class leader. His favorite topic to-day is the "conversion of the sinner," all other matters being second to this.

Politically he was a whig, then a member of the liberty organization, and latterly its successor—the republican party. He was a candidate for the legislature and Congress on the liberty ticket, but of course was not elected, the time not having come for the proper appreciation of the rights of man. His father was an anti-slavery man, and his mother a pious woman, who regarded the negro as an oppressed and degraded member of the human race, and from them he inherited that love of human right which colored and gave tone to all his future convictions on the leading topic of the day—the slavery question.

He was an advocate of the free school law of 1834, and aided materially in securing its acceptance by the township in which he resided. Under its operations he was elected a director, and soon thereafter removed to Blairsville.

He was married in 1824 to Lucy Sophia Hacke—a daughter of Nicholas Hacke, of Baltimore, Maryland. She died on the 4th of March, 1876, at the age of seventy-one years. Their children were: Henry, m. in 1848 to Margaret Wilkinson; Caroline, m. in 1850 to Alexander M. Shields, d. in 1862, forty-five years of age; Alexander, m. in 1856 to Mary Wilkinson; Jacob, m. in 1864 to Sallie J. R., daughter of Rev. Jas. Davis, latterly a resident of Blairsville; Paul, president of the First National bank of Blairsville, and Charles, m. to Margaret Loughry.

His brothers and sisters were: Henry, d., m. to Elizabeth Lobingier, d.; Mary, d., m. to Jacob Lose, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Daniel Barnes, d.; William, m. to Sarah Reed; Margaret, m. to John Colcasure, d.; Joseph, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Jno. Armstrong; Peter, m. to Susan Lobingier; Jacob, m. to Sarah Pershing; Mathew, m. to Barbara Lobingier; and Paul, m. to Rebecca Trimble.

The children of Henry Graff, a son of John Graff, were Geo., d.; Lucy, Harry, Charles, m. to Lizzie Mabon; John, d.; Mary, Caroline Rebecca, d.; James, Sumner, Joseph, d.; Gertrude and John Paul, d. Henry Graff has been a class leader in the M. E. church for fifteen years—from 1848 to 1854. He was a junior member of the firm of John Graff & Son, and for the five previous years was a salesman in the store.

The children of Alexander McKnight and Caroline Shields nee Graff, were: Lucy, m. to A. B. Kirkland, C. E., John, Isabella, d.; Mary, Alexander D., and Caroline. Mr. Shields was a native of Indiana county. From 1845 till his death he was a business associate of John Graff.

The children of A. C. Graff, a son of John Graff, were: Jno. A., Dennison, d., Edgar J., Herbert P., Luella, Anna, James F. Mary and Alfred.

Jacob Graff's (a son of John Graff) only child is Wilhelmina Frew.

The children of Paul Graff, a son of John Graff, are: George R., Frank M., Wilbur P., Laura M. and Walter R.

RICHARD B. M'CABE.

Richard Butler McCabe first saw the light in the county of Cumberland, now Perry, Pa., on the 5th of August, 1792. His grandfather, Owen McCabe, (in the colonial records erroneously called McKibe,) was a native of county Tyrone, Ireland, and came to this country at an early age. His first home was in Lancaster county, where he intermarried with Catharine Sears, and subsequently moved with his wife and eldest son, James, the father of Richard, to Sherman's valley; these two were the first men who settled in the valley. Their settlement was named Tyrone township, in memory of the childhood's home of the elder McCabe. Tyrone Iron Works and Tyrone city, on the Central railroad, also derive their name from the same hardy pioneer.

The life of a settler in that unprotected frontier country, constantly exposed to hostile incursions of Indians, full of perils and hardships of every kind, was well calculated to educate him to endure with patience and fortitude the toils and privations of camp life. When the war of Independence broke out, the brave old pioneer, with two hardy and stalwart sons, Robert and William, in company with Nicholas Hughes, Richard's maternal grandfather, and two equally gallant sons, shouldered arms and went to Bunker Hill. This event was celebrated at the time, in verse, by a rustic poet of the neighborhood. From the family of our subject's mother, descended the founders of many distinguished families of the south and west. James McCabe, the father of Richard, was regarded by his cotemporaries as a man of the purest integrity, scrupulously conscientious in all his dealings, brave, kind and generous. Before Forbes approached Fort Duquesne, or Armstrong burnt Kittanning, a company was formed at or near Carlisle, the first that ever, in Pennsylvania, pursued the Indians as far as the Allegheny mountains. James McCabe was a lieutenant in that company.

The Indians had been down in Sherman's valley plundering, capturing and destroying. The company pursued them as far as the head of Black lick, in cambria, (or, according to other authorities, into the valley of the Black lick, in Indiana county). Here they halted, being without guides, and not knowing how many foes they might have to encounter, and turning back started for the Muncey towns on the Susquehanna. When they arrived at the Muncey towns the surprise was complete, but it was the surprise of women and children only; the warriors were all absent. All the corn was cut down and wigwims burned, to avenge the foray into Cumberland county by the Indians from Kittanning.

But even in war with savages difference of character will be manifest. In a wigwam which Lieut. McCabe entered he found a squaw so old that she was unable to walk. Having with his father been one of the two first white men who settled in Sherman's valley, he could, to some extent, make himself understood in their language. He succeeded in allaying her alarm, believing no man in the company would injure a poor decrepid, old woman. She gave him to know that she was dying of thirst and hunger, and directed him where to find a spring of water and a calabash or gourd. He brought her the water and gave out of his own "store" the heel of a loaf, the last bread in his knapsack. The poor old woman's heart was solaced, and she blessed him, in the Indian tongue.

The company was marching in detachments, one of which was not at the time present. A person in the last detachment, after Lieut. McCabe left, murdered and scalped the old woman, and exultingly displayed, before they reached Carlisle, her scalp with its hoary hair all dabbled in blood.

The kind and noble hearted leutenant, accompanied General Arnold upon his famous expedition up the Kenebec, and across into Canada, and being by the heroic Montgomery when he fell at Quebec, was the first to raise him from the ground. He fought gallantly in many battles, and after the revolution returned home, broken in health, by the terrible exposure to which he had been subjected.

At one time he acted as commissary of purchases, frequently giving his own paper for supplies. A perfidious deserter conceiving an enmity against the commissary, for he had reported him, purchased his paper, and he being unable to satisfy the claims, having nothing for his services but Continental money, then worthless, was sold out, even to the cradle of the infant Richard; but a substitute was found in the bark of the forest tree. In this the gentle and loving mother rocked her child, soothing his slumbers with the glorious songs of the Harper King.

In 1795 his father died, leaving the child in the exclusive care and control of the widowed mother. Schools in that day, in that part of the country, were few, poor and separated, so that the lowest branches of education were difficult of acquisition. He desired to learn to write—money was scarce in the widow's home, and he had no paper. To obtain this was a formidable difficulty; but remembering to have heard that catskins were of some value, he conceived the idea of slaughtering and skinning one of the household pets, but when he prepared to put his design in execution, the gentle and generous heart of the boy failed him, and the life of poor puss was saved.

The period of his early boyhood passed, he left his quiet home in the country and was bound an apprentice to a carpenter, but not liking the occupation, he went to Philadelphia. The war of 1812, having just broken out, he entered himself on board a privateer which was about starting on a cruise, but one of his brothers learning of the facts, prevented his departure. He then went to Richmond, Virginia, where he read law for a time.

Returning again to the interior of Pennsylvania, he became clerk in a store. In 1815 he went to Pittsburgh, passing through this county, then almost a wilderness. There he entered a counting-house; but soon returning to the country, he passed a few years as clerk, and finally manager of several iron works. He was married in 1820, to Sarah A., daughter of John and Ann Vinacke, nee Holland, and removed to Harrisburg, where he entered the office of the secretary of state. While thus engaged he returned to the study of law under the supervision of the attorney general of the state, Mr. Elder.

After his admission to the bar he went to Huntingdon, and commenced his professional career. Subsequently he removed to Blairsville, where he resided till his death, a period of over thirty years. He enjoyed for most of the time a lucrative practice. During one term he served as prothonotary of the county, and performed the duties of the office to the entire satisfaction of the citizens. But the law with its fictions and its quibbles was ever distasteful to him. So turning from her shrine he wandered in the flowery paths of literature.

His antiquarian researches were extensive, and to him we are indebted for the preservation of much of the early history of Western Pennsylvania. His "Brady" and other sketches are found in nearly every history of the state. At the close of his life he was engaged upon a "Biography of the Priest of the Allegheny Mountains"—the Russian prince Gallitzen, which promised to be a most charming an interesting work.

The following extract from the proceedings of the bar of Indiana county will serve to show in what light Mr. McCabe was regarded by the brothers of his profession:

Resolved, That we bow with profound humility to this visitation of Divine Providence, in the removal from earth, of our late friend and brother, Richard B. McCabe, whose venerable years, varied learning, rare integrity and pure character, had won the love and reverence, not only of his professional brethren, but of the whole community amongst whom his early life was spent.

Resolved, That in his death, the bar has sustained a loss that will long be felt, because his extensive knowledge, not limited to the professional circles, his thorough integrity of character, his invincible love of truth, always evinced by a ready and straightforward adoption of his own convictions, as rules of conduct, afford an example to the young lawyer, worthy of all imitation, nor will the loss be felt by the bar only, for in all the relations of citizen, neighbor and friend, as well as in the more sacred ones of husband and father, Mr. McCabe's life exhibited "a daily beauty" of which the world furnishes but few instances, and those who knew him best will not soon forget the goodness of heart which found expression in uniform gentleness of manners, and in frequent acts of charity to the poor and helpless; nor the unselfish, unobtrusive character which, neglecting none of the world's duties, yet cared not for its gains or honors, but found enjoyment in the higher and purer regions of literature, and in the kindly offices and intercourse of social and domestic life.

Beyond the limited sphere of home labor, he sought no field of exertion except in that of our own local history, and his efforts, not completed at his death, in collecting and preserving the fleeting memorials of the past of Western Pennsylvania, have secured him an honorable name in that branch of knowledge, and entitle him to the gratitude of the student of history. He died on the 10th of January, 1860, in the sixty-eighth year of his age. His widow yet survives. Their children were: Ann Mary, m. to Silas A. Riggs; Pauline, m. to Robert H. Ward, d.; Robert Adams, d.; Martha McLure, d.; Jane R., m. to George W. Bonnin, d.; Sarah Minona, m. to Dr. J. P. Shields; John Young, d.; Richard De Charms, d.; Roach B., m. to Mollie Keesburry; Eulalie, m. to McCrea Hosac; and Albert B.

JONATHAN KURTZ was born of German parentage, in Lancaster county, in 1766, where he learned his trade as a hatter. He subsequently removed to Somerset county, where he married Elizabeth Sailor, who was also a native of Lancaster county, where she was born in 1766 They located in Blairsville in 1853, Jonathan being the first hatter to locate in the village. The Methodist Episcopal church was organized at his house, and he served as class leader, steward, &c., for many years. He died in 1857, over ninety years of age; his wife's decease occurred in 1863. The children were: Lydia, d., m. to A. J. Brown; Josiah, d., m. to Henrietta Butts; William E, m. first to Phebe Pence, and second to Nancy Allinder; Matilda, d., m. to Archibald Davis; James, d., m. first to Margery Wilson, d.; second to Eliza Crawford, d., and third to Isabella McConaughy; Samuel, m. to Catharine Irwin; Mary, d., m. to John Bruce; Elizabeth, m. to John Devinney, d., and John G., m. to Marian Stewart.

STEWART DAVIS was born in Preston, New London county, Connecticut. He migrated to what is now the William Lawrence farm, Black-lick township, in 1808. In 1821, he removed to Blairsville, where in the same year he commenced his career as justice of the peace (the first in the village), which only terminated at his death, in 1845, in his sixty-fourth year. He taught school and farmed and served as commissioner and commissioner's clerk, before coming to Blairsville. He was married in 1804 to Elizabeth, daughter of Amos Lawrence, of New London county, Conn., who with two daughters and two sons-in-law came with Mr. Davis to Black-lick township. Mrs. Davis died March 9th, 1829, in her fortieth year. The children by this marriage were: Phebe, d., m. to Cornelius Jamison; Amos, m. to Martha Wakefield; Eunice, m. to Martin Black, d. in 1877, in his seventy-first year; Samuel H., m. to Nancy Cantwell, d.; Amy, d., m. to Stephen Morford; and Chester C., m. in 1838, to Eliza Morton. He was again married on the 17th of December, 1820, to Elizabeth McFarland, who died September 12, 1850. The children by the second union were: Robert S., m. to Julietta Deckhard; and Roach S., who served in a California regiment for four years, while fighting the Indians. Martin and Eunice Black's children were: Kate, m. to Clifford Brown, d., January 30, 1863, while a member of Co. G, 13th Pa. volunteers, whose only child was Harry C.; George, d. in the Pa. militia at the time of the Lee invasion; Sarah, d., m. to James H. Walker, their children being Martin B. and Tillie; Amos Davis, d.; and Charles L. - Martin Black was a justice of the peace for twenty-two years.

Chester C. Davis, a son of Stewart Davis, was born in Black-lick township in 1817. His children were: Amy Elizabeth, m. to M. B. Lowry, D. D. S.; Martha Morilla, m. to Joseph Gwinner, d.; Samuel W., d., m. to Hettie Quirk; Letitie, m. to Theodore S. Fleming; Alexander S.; Phebe Jane; Edgar Swazey, d.; William Henry; Carrie; Charles Calvin, d.; Sallie B.; and Cora Jane, d. Samuel W. was the first native of Blairsville to enter the army. He entered Co. I, 11th Pa. R. C., and served twenty-two months. After his discharge he re-enlisted in Knapp's battery and joined General Sherman at Atlanta, and served till the close of the war. In the same year he went to Omaha and joined General Sully's command, and went to the Rocky Mountains, serving in the Indian wars of 1865-6, coming home by way of California, the Isthmus and New York. He died in 1877, in his thirty-fifth year. Chester C. Davis has been a public auctioneer since 1839, and till within a few years has done all the outcrying for twenty miles in all directions from Blairsville.

Robert Stewart Davis, a son of Stewart Davis, was born in Blairsville, in 1832. He served in the Pennsylvania militia during the Lee raid into Pennsylvania, and also for eleven months in the band of the 11th Pa. R. C. He served in the town council for three years, during the building of the water works. He is master of the lodge of A. F. and A. M. and recorder of the A. O. U. W., besides being connected with several other secret societies. He was a tinsmith by trade, but for ten years has been connected as a commercial traveler with the wholesale houses of Philadelphia, except being with W. T. Kirk & Co., wholesale grocers. His children are: Amelia Elizabeth, Rosa J., Kate Black, and Molly Graff.

MAJOR WILSON KNOTT was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, and first located in Indiana county, in 1830. He was a son of Joseph and Isabella Knott nee Wilson The latter was a daughter of Colonel James Wilson, the pioneer, and Isabella Wilson nee Barr. Our subject was a captain of a company in the war of 1812, and served nearly two years, his company being raised in Westmoreland and Indiana counties. He was a contractor on the Pennsylvania canal, and also on the Kentucky river canal. He was the superintendent of the Morris canal of New Jersey for nine years, and for four years, the postmaster of Newark, New Jersey. He also served as major in the militia of that state for several years. In 1849, he returned to Blairsville, where he was the postmaster for four years, he died in 1856, at the age of sixty-seven. He was married in 1812, to Rebecca Wallace, daughter of Peter Wallace, of "Wallace Fort" families. She died in 1867, eighty-one years old. Their children were: James, d., m. to Julia Kerr; Peter, d.; Joseph, m.; William, d.; Richard, m. to Ann Mary Roberts; Samuel d.; Sarah, d., m. to George S. Mendel; Mary J.; Lucinda, postmistress of Blairsville for four years; Clark; Isabella, d., and Elizabeth, d. Clark, was in the U. S. regular service for twenty-two years. He was in the Mexican war, as a member of company B, 2d Kentucky volunteers, and served twelve months. He was in the 1st U. S. regulars, from 1857 to to 1862; the 13th U. S. regulars, from 1862, to March 20th, 1879. He was first sergeant at the time of being mustered out of service, and had held the position for twelve years, and before this time, was sergeant for ten years. Among the battles in which he was engaged, were: Beuna Vista, (Mexican war), Chickasaw bayou, Arkansas Post, Champion hills, the first battle at Vicksburg, Jackson, Colliersville, Mission Ridge, &c. He was never wounded, though taking part in hundreds of lesser engagements and skirmishes.

SAMUEL DIXON

Was born on the Dixon homestead, Black-lick township, in 1815, and was son of Joseph and Mary Dixon, nee Dixon—a daughter of Samuel and Nancy Dixon. Joseph Dixon was the son of Joseph Dixon, an early settler of what is now Indiana county. He was of a Scotch-Irish Presbyterian family, and an emigrant from Cumberland. His tract in what is now Black-lick township adjoined the land of Samuel Dixon, the father of Mary Dixon, and their tracts adjoined General Campbell's. Both Joseph and Samuel Dixon were among the very early settles of what is now Black-lick township, and both fought in the Indian wars.

Joseph Dixon's children were: John (said to have been the first white child born north of Black-lick), d. in 1843, in his seventy-second year, m. to Elizabeth McQuiston, d.; Rebecca, d., m. to Israel Gray, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Joseph Culbertson, d.; Joseph, d. in 1854, in his seventy-second year, m. first to Margaret Caldwell, d., and second to Mary Dixon, d. about 1860, in her seventy-second year.

Joseph Dixon, the elder, was forced to retreat from his land in what is now Black-lick township to Wallace's fort. He purchased or "took up" a tract of land adjoining the fort tract, and died there. His son Joseph, and perhaps more of his children, were born there. Joseph, the younger, returned to what is now Indiana county in 1804.

Joseph Dixon's (the younger) children: Jane, m. to George Dickey; Nancy, m. to Daniel Smith, d.; Samuel, m. first to Ellen Shields, d., and second to Mary McGuire; Joseph, m. to Margaret Campbell; John, d., and James, m. to Mary Earhart.

Our subject's children were: Harvey, d. while a member of Co. B., 56th Pa. vols., in which he served two and a half years; Joseph, m. to Jane Laird; John, William and Milton.

Israel Gray was a native of Chester county, of Quaker parentage. When a young man he came, a millwright by trade, to the Dixon settlement, near the "Broard Ford," Derry township, Westmoreland county, and was there married to Rebecca Dixon, a daughter of Joseph Dixon. Israel Gray died in 1844, over seventy years of age; his wife in 1848, fifty-three years old. Their children were: Joseph, d. in his seventy-seventh year m. to Hannah Jellison, d.; Sarah, d., m. to James McQuiston, d.; John, m. to Margaret Short; George, d., m. to Ann McQuiston, d.; William, m. first to Isabella Wilson, d., and second to Susannah Spires; Israel, m. first to Eliza Bush, d., and second to Sarah Byers; Joshua, Wilson, d., and Margaret, d., twins; Jane, d., m. first to Thomas Bush, d., and second to Samuel Waterman, and Rebecca, d., m. to Frank Waterman.

Joseph and Hannah Gray's children were; Rebecca, d., in 1871, m. to W. H. McDowell, d. in 1872; David Wilson, d.; Sarah and Mary, twins, the latter married to Robert Duncan; Margaret, m. to J. C. McDowell, d. in 1865, (a member of Co. D., 27th Ohio vols. for four years); Israel, Joseph, m. to Ellen Nesbit; John, m. to Margaret George; John was a soldier in Co. I, 20th Ill. vols. for four years. W. H. McDowell and Rebecca McDowell's children were: Charles S. and Albert Lee. J. C. and Margaret McDowell's only child was J. W. G. McDowell.

W. H. McDowell before the commencement of the late war was engaged in building bridges and railroads in the South. He was assistant superintendent of the Wilmington and Manchester Railroad of North Carolina during the war. He was the chief engineer in building the two bridges over the Cape Fear river, to enable the railroads to enter at one central depot. He was engaged on the Charleston and Savannah Railroad in reconstructing the road, and subsequently was superintendent of the superstructure of the Newport and Cincinnati Railroad bridge.

John Bruce.—He was born in 1805, in Erie county, Pa., and was the son of James Bruce and Jane Cook, who were married in Cumberland county, Pa., and migrated to Westmoreland county. They subsequently resided in Indiana county. James Bruce died in 1810 at the age of forty-six. His widow afterwards married Robert McCray, and removed to Erie county, Pa., where she died, seventy-seven years of age. In 1818, our subject located in Newport, then a small village of thirty inhabitants, where he remained over a year. In 1829, he removed to Blairsville, which has since continued his permanent home. His business has been that of a carpenter and contractor. He has served as member of the state house of representatives, in various borough positions, and in the several official trusts of the M. E. church. He was married first in 1832 to Mary Kurtz, a daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth Kurtz nee Sailor, who died March 11, 1864, and second in 1869, to Mrs. Jane Wilson nee Huey. His children were: Elizabeth, m. to Joseph N. McCartney; Jane, d.; Robert Hopkins, Josiah K., soldier in 3d regiment Pa. vols., d. at Hagerstown in 1861; Mary, m. to Rev. Charles Miller; Emma, m. to Dr. Wm. Hosack; Annabella and Lillie O. The children of Wm. (a brother of our subject) and Mary P. Bruce nee Moorhead were: James H., m. to Margaret Rankin; Wm. P., d., m. to Jane Coleman, and Maria, d., m. to S. J. Rankin. James H.'s children were: John M., m. to Martha J. Nesbit; Wm. W., m. to Sarah E. Guthrie; Matthew R., m. to Irene M. Spears; Mary Clara, m. to T. C. Loughry; Robert N., m. to Mary H. Hopkins; James H., d.; Anna Elizabeth, Maria Ella, Margaretta J., and Laura Bell. John M. was in company K, 105th Pa. vols. for about four years, and was wounded.

Mrs. Elizabeth Shannon was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1800, and was a daughter of Timothy and Ellen Connor nee McCullough. The former was a native of Ireland, and came to America when twenty years of age. He was in the Revolutionary army, and accompanied Montgomery on the disastrous expedition into Canada. He was at the foot of the ladder when the gallant Montgomery fell and was taken prisoner, remaining in custody for six months. He migrated to Derry township in 1794, and located on the farm now occupied by his nephew, Timothy Connor. He died in 1812, at the age of sixty-five; his wife in 1849, about seventy years old. Our subject was married to Thomas Shannon in 1820. He was born near Maguire's bridge, county Fermana, Ireland, in 1788. He migrated to Philadelphia in 1817, to New Alexandria in 1818, to Blairsville in 1829, and to Bairdstown in 1830. He was a justice of the peace for eighteen years, holding his first commission from Governor Porter. He was collector at Blairsville for the canal tolls for three years. He died in Bairdstown in 1867 in his seventy-eighth year. His children were: P. C., chief justice Dacotah territory, m. first to Anna Evans, d.; and second to Annie A. Ihmsen; Ellen, d.; Mary Ann, d., m. to Charles O'Niel; John V., d.; Elizabeth Catharine, d.; Margaret J., d.; Thomas Augustin, d.; Agnes G., d.; Teressa; Michael James, editor and publisher Local Blade, m. to Caroline Hawkhurst. Michael James was a soldier in the war of 1861, serving in Battery B, 1st Pa, (Knapp's) light artillery for three years, and in company D, 206th Pa. volunteers about one year.

JAMES BAIRD, was born on the farm upon which he now resides, opposite to Blairsville, in 1792, and was a son of James and Jane Baird nee Montgomery. The former's first wife was Jane McKean, whom he married at Fort Ligonier. She is buried on the farm. James Baird, sr., was a native of Franklin county, and settled at an early date in Derry township, Westmoreland county. All his children were born on the farm upon which our subject now resides. He died in 1834, over ninety-two years of age. The children by the first wife were: Martha, d., m. to William Campbell, d.; Hannah d., m. to William Irwin, d.; William, d., m. first to Patty Dennon, d., second to Mary Anderson, third to Mary Boyles, d., and fourth to Mrs. Jane Sutton nee Mabon; Polly, d., m. to William Baird, d., and Samuel, d., m. to Susan Trimble. The children of the second wife, were: Elizabeth, d., m. to William Dickey; John, d. in 1864, at the age of seventy-four, m. first to Ester Sloan, d., and second in 1841, to Mrs. Jane Jones nee Cannon; James, m. in 1825, to Mary Sloan, and George, d. John was a soldier in the war of 1812. James was a deacon in the Presbyterian church for many years. Our subject's children were: Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Wilson; George, m. to Mary Bell; Mary Jane, m. to Samuel Bell; Nancy; Margaret Ann, d.; James Sloan, d.; Martha; William M., m. to Jennie Hazlett. James Sloan, died while a member of Company K, 53d Pennsylvania volunteers, having served nearly three years. James Baird, sr., laid a warrant on the tract which includes the site of Blairsville, and sold it to James Campbell.

John Baird, a brother of our subject, was born on the old Baird homestead. His children by his first wife, were: Martha, d., m. to John Craig; James, d., m. to Sarah Reed; Jane, d.; William, d.; Thomas Sloan, d.; Sarah, m. to Dr. R. A. Johnston, and Lizzie. The children by his second wife, Mrs. Jane Jones nee Cannon, born in 1806, in Fayette county, were: Harriet, m. to Alexander Ralston; Rebecca; Emma, m. to William Ralston; and Frank, d. Mrs. Jane Jones' first husband was William Jones, who was a contractor on the Lake Erie and Ohio and Pennsylvania canals. He was a native of Fayette county, and died in 1829, at the age of twenty-nine. His death was caused by exposure while letting water into the canal. William and Jane Jones' children were: Mary J., d., m. to Daniel Armel; Clemmenza, m. to Newton Watts; John, d., m. to Margaret Patterson, d.

REV. S. H. SHEPLEY, A. M.

Samuel Howard Shepley, whose death occurred on the 18th of November, 1874, was born at Quincy, Mass., March 5th, 1810, but passed most of his boyhood at Hardwick, Vt. He became hopefully a Christian at the age of fourteen years, under the pungent preaching of the doctrines of grace. Soon afterwards his pastor directed his thoughts toward the Gospel ministry, and in the fall of 1826 he entered upon the preparatory studies. While fitting for college at Kimball Union Academy, Plainfield, N. H., he imbibed the missionary spirit from a pious roommate who, night after night poured into his eager ear the story of the millions who knew not God, and talked of the glorious privilege of saving souls. Filial duty in after years prevented his embarking for a foreign field. He graduated at Bowdoin College, Maine, in 1833, delivering the Latin Salutatory Oration, and taking rank among the first in scholarship, being immediately elected to the Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha of Maine, and three years later appointed to deliver the Latin Valedictory, on receiving the degree of A. M.

At college he was known as a Christian, and early gained the honor and love of his fellow students, many of whom bless God for his example and counsels. On leaving college he was appointed Principal of North Yarmouth Academy, and occupied that post for two years, during which time was developed the plan which made it in after years the best academy in the state. Failing health interrupted his usefulness, and he returned to his boyhood's home among the Green Mountains. Having regained strength he entered Andover Theological Seminary in 1835 and pursued his studies a year, when, his funds being exhausted, he accepted the principalship of the academy at East Machias, Me, and continued there a year, at the same time carrying on his theological studies under the care of Rev. F. T. Stone. Special invitation and some other considerations led him to enter the Bangor Theological Seminary instead of returning to Andover, and he was there licensed to preach in June, 1838, and graduated the following autumn—twelve years after the commencement of his course. On the 31st day of October, 1838, he was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational Church of New Gloucester, Me. Of his pastorate, which continued nine years, we can truly say that it was eminently happy and useful. In his social intercourse with his people, in his ministrations to the afflicted, in his counsels to those inquiring the way of life, he was always the sympathizing brother, the tender father, and wise, loving teacher of his flock. Everywhere welcomed, dearly beloved, and successful in winning souls—more than a hundred having embraced the Savior under his ministry—it would seem to one ignorant of his after life a wonder that this blessed relation should have been dissolved.

The council which convened to consider his withdrawal from the pastoral office, found no reason, on the part of the church and people, why the pastoral relations should be dissolved. They expressed the feeling that "the talents, learning, urbanity, piety, kindness, and the beautiful simplicity and purity of Bro. Shepley's character should render him a treasure with which no church or congregation should part, except under the direct and obvious call of Divine Providence." Such a call came during the summer of 1847, in the unanimous conviction of many who were then recognized as leaders of the church of God in Maine, that in the education of young men, the faithful pastor would have a more important field of usefulness. Accepting the judgment of those whom he regarded wiser than himself, Mr. Shepley returned to the principalship of North Yarmouth Classical Academy, and devoted himself with renewed zeal to the cause of classical education, until Providence directed him to the work of female education in the west. As some evidence of the power of Mr. Shepley's influence in Maine, we quote the language of Rev. Dr. Cummings, at that time editor of the Christian Mirror, Portland, Maine, and of Rev. Dr. Woods, President of Bowdoin College. Dr. Cummings says. "It gives me pleasure to bear my testimony to the moral and intellectual worth of Rev. Samuel H. Shepley. I have known him as an exemplary Christian, as a blameless, yet distinguished student at college, as a faithful and successful instructor of youth, as a talented preacher and devoted pastor."

Dr. Woods, in behalf of the faculty of Bowdoin College, says: "The Rev. S. H. Shepley has been several years principal of one of the chief classical seminaries of this state, and in this office has acquired a high reputation as a teacher, and the respect and confidence of the entire community. His fidelity and skill as a teacher have been proved to our entire satisfaction, in the number of well prepared students who have come to college every year from the North Yarmouth Academy. It is with sincere regret that we have learned that he contemplates leaving this state for a distant sphere of labor; at the same time we must regard it as an auspicious sign for education at the West, that a teacher of such full experience and ample qualifications is about to enter there upon the work to which he has here devoted himself so successfully for many years."

Of the work of Mr. Shepley in the cause of female education in Ohio and Pennsylvania, the writer need say but little. The living witnesses are everywhere; and years hence, the name of Samuel H. Shepley will be of precious memory. In 1850 Mr.

Shepley received a call from Rev. Dr. Beatty, of Ohio, which resulted in his becoming associated with him in the superintendence and conduct of the Steubenville Female Seminary. He was received into the Presbytery of Steubenville, and thereafter identified himself with the Presbyterian church.

At the end of the second year, Mr. Shepley became principal and soon after proprietor of the Female Seminary at Blairsville, Pa., which had been projected and commenced by Rev. Geo. Hill, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian church. Nearly thirteen years afterwards, in transferring this institution, then in the height of its prosperty, to Rev. J. R. Hughes, A. M., Mr. Shepley, speaking of the plan adopted, and the spirit which had animated all his operations, says: "It was our aim, at the first, that it should be in no respect inferior to the best female seminaries in our country. To this aim our energies and our means have been constantly devoted. During this entire period, it has never for a moment faltered; nor in the advantages afforded, fallen below any of our sister institutions. An intelligent, christian, constant and continually widening patronage, has imparted to it a vigorous growth and established its unquestioned title to the confidence and continued support of the friends of sound learning and christian education." The necessity of retiring from this charge, so precious to his heart, and so full of joy in the future, was a cause of deep regret. But here, too, as in all the events of his life, Mr. Shepley rejoiced to follow the leadings of Divine Providence. He loved to rest on God, to do and be what God desired. He had deep feelings of his own unworthiness and insufficiency, and gave all the glory to Christ. He felt that "For whatever by the grace of God he had been enabled to accomplish in the successive periods of his life, and in the different departments of activity, he was indebted first of all, to the instructions and prayers of an eminently godly mother; also to the faithful preaching of Rev. J. N. Loomis, his early pastor; his thorough and protracted course of academical training; the precious revivals of religion in Bowdoin College, which made memorable the years of his college life; to the practical lectures of Dr. Leonard Woods, at the weekly conference at Andover; to the personal friendship and counsels of the late Rev. Asa Cummings, D. D., editor of the Portland Christian Mirror; to the valuable suggestions and fraternal support of Rev. Dr. Beatty, while associated with him in the Female Seminary; and especially, and more than all human helps, to the eminent, intellectual and christian culture of his wife, whose earnest and efficient co-operation he enjoyed from the beginning of his ministry."

The foregoing have been submitted to Rev. Dr. Hill, he asks leave to to add the following:

"His last years were spent without any direct pastoral or educational charge, but he was not idle. He preached as opportunity offered in vacant churches and in the pulpits of his brethren in the ministry, many of whom are indebted to him for valuable help in time of need. He loved the prayer-meeting and especially the monthly concert, and contributed by his presence and his words of cheer to make them interesting and attractive to others. He was always deeply interested in revivals of religion, and his very last public address, made at the October meeting of Presbytery, was on this subject, when it, at his suggestion, was before that body for conference and prayer. He was even then suffering great pain from the disease which terminated his life. After a sleepless night, he returned home, in the early morning, to lie down upon the bed from which, six weeks later, good men carried him to his burial. These weeks, particularly the last two, were weeks of severe suffering, amounting much of the time to extreme agony. But no word of complaint or impatience, not even a groan escaped his lips. He often expressed the desire to fly away and be at rest; but he was willing to wait, and did patiently wait all the days of his appointed time until his change came.

"A large concourse of friends and brother ministers attended his body to its last resting place in the beautiful Blairsville cemetery; many feeling that the words of the voice from heaven had received a new illustration and confirmation, 'Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them.'"

Daniel Short was born in Emmittsburg, Md., in 1800, and was a son of Peter and Catharine Short nee McGehan. Daniel came to Black-lick township in 1818, and engaged in farming for two years. He then removed to Blairsville and learned the trade of a stone and brick mason with John Shrock and pursued this calling through all his active live. He was married in 1826, to Ascenath Caldwell, who died in 1868, at the age of sixty-six. Their children were: Mary J., now Mother Superior of a convent in Kansas City; John; William, killed at the battle of the Wilderness; and Sarah, m. to Thomas H. Maher, of Freeport, where our subject has resided since 1868.

Jeannet Fee was born in Armagh on the 22d of August, 1793, and was a daughter of Andrew and Jane Fee, who were a portion of the party that made the settlement of Armagh, in the fall of that year. (See sketch of Armagh, East Wheatfield township.) The former died in 1830, at the age of sixty-two; the latter in 1846 in her seventy-ninth year. Their children were: Elizabeth, b. in 1791, d.; Jeannet, b, in 1793; Josiah, b. in 1795, d.; John, b. in 1800, d.; Thomas, b. in 1803, d.; Agnes, b. in 1805; and James, b. in 1809. Agnes was born near the present site of Mechanicsburg, where the family had removed in 1802. Jeannet and Agnes have been residents of Blairsville for many years.

Samuel Ray was born on what is now the John Ray farm, in Cherry Hill township, in 1816, and was a son of Matthew Ray and Mary Mathews, a sister of Archibald Mathews, the husband of Elizabeth Mathews. Matthew Ray was a native of Ireland, and migrated to what is now Indiana county about 1790. He was married about 1798, and died in 1817, about forty-two years of age. His wife, a native of Ireland, died in 1861, at the age of eighty-three. Their children were: James, m. to Elizabeth Blaine, a grand-daughter of Mr. Lewis, who laid out Lewistown; Jane, d.; Martha, m. to James Nesbitt; William, m. to Eleanor Bateman; John, m. to Eliza Leslie; Robert, m. first to Henrietta Blaine, d., and second to Mrs. Harriet Sherrer nee Odell, and Samuel, m. in 1841, to Margaret J. Johnston. Our subject's children were: Jane Parker, m. to Cyrus Stouffer; George, m. to Jennie Paull; Lyman S. W., m. to Kate Scott; Mary M., Sarah Black, d.; Margaret J., Ada F., and Cornelia I. Our subject commenced mercantile life as a clerk in 1828, at Frederick Leydie's general store at Armagh. After a continuance of about sixteen months, he became associated with William Rankin, at a salary of forty-eight dollars per year. In 1836, he removed to Blairsville, and began, at a salary of one hundred and fifty dollars per annum, to clerk for Mulhollan and Waterman. He remained with the firm and its successor George Mulhollan, for ten years. He then became a junior member of the house, having a half interest, and succeeded to the business at the death of Mr. Mulhollan. The firm afterward became (1854) Ray & Poor, then Ray, Hill & Co., of which John Hill was a member, as well as I. D. Poor. Mr. Poor retired and formed a new partnership with Mr. Ray, at Latrobe, Westmoreland county, under the style of I. D. Poor & Co,, to which Mr. Poor succeeded in a few years. The firm of Ray & Hill continued till the beginning of the war. It was followed by Ray and (Jesse A.) Cunningham, which was in operation from October 1, 1862, to March 18, 1867, when the new firm of Ray & Son (George M.) commenced. The brick storehouse was erected in 1864. Ray & Son gave way to S. & L. S. W. Ray, the present proprietors, the association having began on the 1st of October, 1870.

WASHINGTON GEER was born in 1806 near Lake George, New York, and was a son of Elisha and Penelope Geer nee Davis. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812, and died at the age of twenty-eight, two weeks after the battle of Plattsburg. Stewart Davis, the brother of Mrs. Geer, went, in 1818, from Indiana county to New York, and brought the family, consisting of six children, to Silas Davis's, where they made their home. Mr. Davis was three weeks in transporting the family to their new home. In 1819 Mrs. Geer was married to Colonel Charles Boyle, who had a blacksmith shop in Blacklick township, just below where the Frankstown road crossed the Conemaugh. She died in 1835, at the age of fifty-three. Col. Boyle died about 1826, sixty years of age. The issue of the marriage with Colonel Boyle were: Charles Elisha, M. D., d. in Columbus, O., and Elizabeth K., d. Roger Geer, the father of Elisha, died in Blairsville, at the age of ninety-five. He and his wife were converts of Lorenzo Dow. They came to Silas Davis's, where she died about twenty years prior to his decease. He was a Revolutionary soldier. His brother Nathan was a captain in the same war, and Robert, another brother, was on board a privateer, which ventured even into the British channel. Jacob, another brother, was killed in the last Indian war in Ohio. Washington learned the blacksmith trade with Col. Boyle. In 1828 his shop was located on the canal, and in the spring of 1829, removed to Bairdstown, where he has since labored at the trade. He has been a justice of the peace for Derry township, Westmoreland county, for twenty-two years. He was married in 1828 to Phebe Wilkinson, who died in 1872, in her sixty-eighth year. She was a daughter of Mott Wilkinson, a Revolutionary soldier, who had located in Indiana county in 1816. Their children were: Bishop Wesley, d.; Cynthia L. Pierpont, adopted, m. to George Guss, d.; Agnes J. Marks, adopted, m. to Thomas D. Stitt; and Elizabeth L. Brown, adopted, m. to Geo. Jellison. Since the fall of 1829, our subject has been connected with the Blairsville M. E. church, and has served as trustee and class leader for forty years. He was one of the managers of the Conemaugh bridge for several years, and served the last two years that toll was collected as president of the managers. In 1824, he worked near Colonel Boyle's with Daniel, James and Luther Geer, in building flatboats, forty to seventy feet long fifteen to eighteen feet wide. These boats were either laden with salt and taken to Pittsburgh, or loaded with coal and floated to Cincinnati and other river points.

MRS. MARIA A. BOYLE was born near Indiana, in June, 1805, and was a daughter of Blaney and Hannah Adair nee Agey. The former was a native of Ireland, and had come to where our subject was born in 1801. Blaney Adair's children were: John, m. to Maria McCleary; Jonathan, d., m. to Mary Todd; James M. D., d.; Maria, m. to Thomas Boyle, d. in 1846, in Johnstown, forty-nine years of age; Nancy; Josephine, m. to Eliza Todd; and Hugh M. D. d., m. to Sarah Steel, d. Thomas Boyle was a son of Col. Charles and Margaret Boyle nee Pumroy, a daughter of John Pumroy, the pioneer of Derry township. Thomas Boyle's first wife was Eliza McGinley. Their children were: Margaret J., m. to Jacob Long; Maria A., m. to John Trimble; and Dorotha, d. His second wife was our subject, their children being: Amanda N., m. to James Briggs, attorney; Thomas N., presiding elder, M. E. Church, m. to Sallie Craig; Hannah A., teacher for twelve years in the Blairsville school; and Frank, pres. minister, m. to Celia Miller. Thomas Boyle, was one of the partners in the foundry which occupied the site of Kerler's tannery. He was a foreman of the engine shop of the Portage railroad, at the time of his death.

WILLIAM JOHNSTON was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1752. He lived some years near Strabane, county Tyrone. He participated in the seige of Londonderry, and was subsequently forced to fly on account of the rebellion of 1792. His first location was on the North river, in New York, removing successively to Lancaster county, and what is now Cherry hill township, Indiana county, arriving in the latter about 1795, and locating on what is now the Stevens farm near Greenville. He died in 1822. His wife was Sarah Mathews, who died in 1815, sixty-five years old. She was an aunt of Archibald Mathews, d., husband of Mrs. Elizabeth Mathews. William Johnston's children were: Robert, d., b. in Ireland, merchant and banker, Halifax, North Carolina; Mary, d., m. first to William Lapsley, d., and second to William Lawson, d.; William, d. in 1841, sixty-one years old, m. in 1807, to Jane Parker, d. in 1849, sixty-six years old, daughter of William and Margaret J. Parker nee Tomb, the latter's second husband being James Graham; James, d., m. to Mary Gary, d.; and Jane, d., m. to John Huston, d. William was a contractor on the canal. William and Jane Johnston's children were: Robert, b. in Armagh, in 1809, m. to Anna Maria Rahm; William, lost on the Ben Sheridan; Mary, m. to Samuel McDonald; Samuel P., d., m. to Margaret Sutton; Sarah, d., m. to Robert Black, d.; Margaret, m. to Samuel Ray: James, m. to Lucretia Moore; and Caroline, b. in Armagh, in 1825, m. in 1843, to John McClure McCrea, d. in 1853, thirty-one years of age. Samuel was a contractor on the canal and railroad.

When Robert was nine years old, he, accompanied by his father, made a trip on horseback from Armagh to Halifax, North Carolina, the journey occupying fourteen days. He remained in the south till the death of his uncle, attending school and becoming acquainted with business. On the death of his uncle, he went to Washington City, meeting with his guardian, Gov. Berton, John Randolph, Macomb, and other noted men. For several years he was a member of the firm of "Davit, Johnston & Co., painters, upholsterers and cabinet manufacturers," of Pittsburgh. From 1841 to 1850 he was a senior partner of "R. & S. P. Johnston, general merchants," of Armagh. From 1850 to 1852 he was associated with his brother, S. P., and William Sutton in a large store and coal mine at West Greenville, Mercer county. Since 1853 he has been living on his farm in the "two mile bend" of the Conemaugh, engaged in farming and the raising of thorough bred Alderneys and Messengers.

Robert Johnston's children were: Catharine, m. to Samuel Cunningham, d.; Sarah Jane, m. to Rev. Noble G. Miller, d.; Martin R. and Rebecca Orth, d., twins, the former m. to Eva McDonald; Mary Lawson; William Parker; and Anna Maria Doratha, m. to William Sutton. In the early days there was an Indian trading post on what is now Robert Johnston's farm. The Broad Ford is about twenty rods from the east line of the property.

John McClure McCrea was a saddler by trade, and had resided in the county twenty-five years before his death. His children were: Martha Agnes, d.; Margaret J., Mary Eliza, William Johnston, and John M. The residence of Mrs. McCrea, widow of John M., was formerly the First Presbyterian Church.

REV. JAMES DAVIS.—His father, Rev. Thomas Davis, was born in 1772, in England, where he was a cloth manufacturer. He left England in 1806, with the expectation of forming an English colony in the Susquehanna valley, in Pennsylvania. On arriving in Pennsylvania, he became acquainted with a man who in a short time stripped him of his means. This circumstance, in connection with the unprepossessing appearance of the Susquehanna country, was undobtedly the cause of his advising his friends in England, not to come to America. He made his way to Pittsburgh, where for many years he was engaged in active business. He had a good general education before coming to America, and from his first location in Pittsburgh, was associated with the Presbyterian church. For many years he was an elder in the second Presbyterian church of that city. He is said to have been the first layman to make a public prayer in Pittsburgh. This occurred about 1807. At the age of fifty, through the advice of Rev. Drs. Herron and Swift, he studied theology and entered the ministry of the Presbyterian church. He preached to the Salem (Westmoreland county) and Blairsville churches till his death, on the 28th of May, 1848, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. His death occurred on the road, about half way between his residence and Salem church, where he had on that day preached and held the communion service. While Rev. George Hill was preaching the afternoon sermon, word came that the senior pastor was dead.

He was twice married, first in 1793, to Hannah Gilly, who died in 1813, and second to Mrs. Sarah (Jones) Richardson, widow of Dr. Richardson of Pittsburgh—she died in 1845, at the age of seventy-two. She was the daughter of Samuel and Sarah Jones. Mr. Jones was the first register and recorder of Allegheny county. When a little girl, her family were forced to take refuge in Fort Pitt, on account of the trouble incidental to the Whisky Rebellion. His children were: Samuel, d.; Hannah, d.; Thomas, d.; Eliza, m. to James Irwin, who died in Westmoreland county, in 1867, in his seventy-fifth year; she died at Dr. James Davis' residence, on the 11th of May, 1874, over seventy-two years of age; and James, who was born in 1808. The latter geaduated from Jefferson College, in 1834, and from the Western Theological Seminary, in 1837. For eighteen years, he was the pastor of a Presbyterian church at Morgantown, West Virginia. Of late years he has preached occasionally, without any settled pastorate. From 1855 to 1857, he resided on his farm in Westmoreland county, removing in the latter year to Blairsville. He was married in 1837, to Miss Margaret W. Long, of Pittsburgh. Their children were: Joseph, d.; Sallie, m. to Jacob Graff; Eliza, m. to Dr. A. F. Purington; Thomas, M. D., b. in Pittsburgh, a member of Col. Jones' 144th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months, graduate of Washington and Jefferson College, m. to Elizabeth McCoy, of Blairsville; Martha and Annie. Our subject has an old bible in a good state of preservation, printed in London, in 1657. It is termed the "Dutch Annotations upon the whole Bible, according to the Synod of Dort, 1818, and published by authority, in 1637." It was printed by Henry Huls, for John Rothwell, Joshua Kirton, and Richard Tomlins, and was edited by Theodore Haak.

Rev. T. R. Ewing was born in Young township, in 1837, and was a son of Alexander and Catharine E. Ewing nee McAfee. The former was a son of John and Sarah Ewing nee Moore. (For sketch of the elder Ewings see notes on Mrs. Mary Hornwork, East Mahoning.) John and Sarah Ewing's children were: Rebecca. I., m. to Joseph Harbison; James, d., m. to Jane Harbison; William, d., m. first to a Miss Elder, and second to Jane Pattison; John, d., m. first to a Miss Hart, d., and second to Sarah McCurdy; Mary, d.; Sarah, d., m. to John McCurdy, d.; Robert, m. to Elizabeth Walker; and Alexander, b. in 1808, m. to Catharine Eaton McAfee, b. in 1811, in Allegheny county. The latter was a daughter of John and Mary McAfee nee Thompson. Mrs. McAfee died in her ninety-first year. Alexander and Catharine E. Ewing's children were: John Maxwell, m. to Emeline Rankin; T. R., Rev., m. in 1868, to Minnie Hilts, a daughter of Wm. D. and Hannah Hilts nee Ross; Boyd Emery, d.; J. R., M. D., m. to Sarah Orr; S. J., d.; and M. R., d. John Maxwell was three years in Co. E, 11th Pa. R. C. Boyd Emery did in 1861, while a member of Co. E, 11th Pa. R. C. Dr. J. R. was a member of the 206th Pa. vols. for about one year. Rev. T. R. was a student at the Jacksonville academy. He graduated at Washington college in the class of 1863, and at the Western theological seminary in 1868. He was connected with the Christian Commission for two years, as field agent for the army of the Cumberland, and general field agent. He was pastor of the Presbyterian church at New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, from April 30, 1868, to October 2, 1878. Since the latter date he has been the proprietor and principal of the Blairsville ladies' seminary. His children are: Boyd Ross, Edward Hilts, Clara and Helen.

William Hunter, M. D., was born in Philadelphia, in 1830, and was a son of James, d., and Nancy Hunter nee Daugherty. The latter is eighty-four years of age and resides with her son William. They were natives of the vicinity of Londonderry, Ireland, where they were married. They removed to Philadelphia in 1826, and in 1838 located in Greensburg, Westmoreland county. Our subject was educated in Philadelphia, and at the Greensburg academy, subsequently studying under private teachers. He read medicine with Dr. F. X. Spangler (homeopathist), of Greensburg, and attended lectures at the Cleveland, O., homeopathic hospital medical college, graduating in 1862. His first location was in Greensburg, removing to Blairsville on the first of April, 1864. He was the first homeopathic physician in the county to make a permanent location. He was married in 1848, to Maria Deemer, daughter of Andrew Deemer, of Westmoreland county.

Abraham H. Baker was born near Martinsburg, Blair county, in 1821, and was a son of Abraham and Mary J. Baker nee Hayden. Our subject has been a farmer, merchant, carpenter, railroad contractor and hotel keeper. He located in Blairsville in 1849, and has been the proprietor of the "Silver Maple," formerly "Marker" House since 1875. He has been thrice married, first in 1846, to Mary Ann Typher, d. in 1847, at the age of twenty-two; second in 1848, to Sarah Ann Galbraith, d. in 1866, and third in 1874, to Mrs. Sarah Vantine nee Heagy. His children were Flora, d., m. to Robert Fry; Thomas M.; and Washington, d., killed at the explosion of the Harvey Dean, near Gallipolis, Ohio. The "Silver Maple," so called from the beautiful trees, was erected by Silas Moore. It has thirty-eight rooms, and is a favorite summer resort.

Patrick Maher was born in county Carlow, Province of Linster, Ireland, in 1816, and was a son of Thomas and Mary Maher nee Lyon, who came to Blairsville in 1848. The former died in October, 1854, about eighty years of age; the latter in March, 1854, about seventy. The children were: Margaret, m. to John Gaffney; James, d. in Ireland, m. to Anastatia Hart; Nicholas, m. to Kate Strong, daughter of Michael Strong, an early settler; William, m. in 1844 to Ida Rodet; Bridget, m. first to Michael Gaffney, d. in Ireland, and second to Jno. Bean; Ann, d., m. to Edward Myers, d.; Patrick, m. in 1845, to Mary Ann Barr, daughter of D. H. Barr, who came to Blairsville in 1829; John, m. to Kate O'Roork; Mary, m. to Patrick Fenlon; Daniel, d.; Joanna, and Thomas, d. Patrick Maher's children were: Thomas C., Daniel, d.; James P., Teressa, d.; Nicholas G.; and William Edward. He learned his trade as a tanner in Bedford, Bedford county, and Pittsburgh. He had arrived in America on the 20th of November, 1837, came to Indiana county in 1837, made his home in the county in 1840, and he purchased his tannery in 1844. The tannery was erected in 1826, (or at least a portion of it,) by William Loughry, and was the second tannery in the village. John Dively had the first tannery on lot 104, fronting on Brown street, and the site of the tannery is a part of the lot now occupied by Mr. Maher. He, in connection, with his brother William, and his uncle, Lyons, purchased the property in 1844, and in a few years, Patrick succeeded to the entire management. At first it was a very small affair. Four men are at work in the busy season. Steam power is used, and fifty vats are in operation. The business is confined to tanning green slaughter hides, and shipping them in the rough to Philadelphia. William Maher came to America in 1833, and for four years resided with his uncle, Nicholas Lyons, in Bedford, Bedford county. He was engaged in merchandising for twenty-five years in Blairsville, where he located in 1837. He was the president for four years of the First National bank, which he assisted in organizing in 1865. In 1870, he started the "Deposit bank," and has since been solely identified with its management. He has received several nominations by the democratic party, among them being that of state senator, but has always refused to allow his name to go before the public as a candidate. His children were: Mary, m. to Leo Barr; James, d.; Samuel, William, Anastatia, Thomas, Margaret, Rose Celia, d., and Gertrude.

MRS. ELIZABETH HILL was born in 1799, in what is now Plum Creek township, Armstrong county, and was a daughter of Adam and Nancy Lowry nee Adams, natives of county Derry, Ireland. They migrated with a family of five children to America in 1788, residing for some years in Franklin county, and in 1797, removing to Plum creek, where our subject was born. Adam died in 1840, about ninety years of age; his wife in 1810, fifty-three years old. Their children were: Letitia, d., m. to Samuel Irwin, d.; James, d.; Martha, d., m. to Theophilus Smith, d.; Benjamin, d., m. to Mary Rolan, d.; Isabella, d., m. to Hugh Brown, d.; Joseph, d., m. to Elizabeth Kerr, d.; Jane, d., m. to William Clark, d.; Nancy, d., m. to James McKesson, d.; Sarah, d., m. Nicholas Jordan, d.; Barbara, d., m. to Robert Spears; Elizabeth, m. first to Robert Mitchell, d. in 1828, thirty-one years old, and second to Jacob Hill, d. in 1852, in his sixtieth year; and Alexander, d., m. first in 1820 to Nancy Armstrong, d., and second in 1833 to Mrs. Elsie Peart, d. Our subject's children by the first union were: James Mitchell, d.; and Alexander, m. to Sarah McCormick. Her children by the second marriage were: Jackson, d.; John, d., m. to Jane Scott; William Clarke, d.; and Nancy J., m. to Geo. M. Thompson, d. in 1874. John fell at the first battle of Fredericksburg. He was a member of company I, 11th Pa. R. C.; and was acting as sergeant major. He had been a prisoner of war at Libby. Mrs. Nancy J. Thompson erected her conservatory in 1878. It is the most elegant and complete establishment of the kind in the Conemaugh valley.

MRS. ELIZABETH MATTHIAS was born on the "Neck," now a part of Philadelphia, and was a daughter of Moses and Elizabeth Kensler nee Sheller. She was married in 1823 to John Matthias, an umbrella maker of Philadelphia, and in the same year they removed to Centre county, where her husband taught school and worked in the Phillipsburg screw factory. In December, 1832, they removed to the toll gate at the Conemaugh bridge, and for eleven years Mr. Matthias was the toll gatherer. In 1842 he removed to the Blairsville side, having meanwhile become one of the editors and proprietors of the Blairsville Record. He died in 1844, at the age of forty-six. His children were: Martha E., m. to George Stouffer; Franklin; Alfred, editor, m. to Mary Murphy; Lavinia, C., m. to D. B. D. Coleman; Jefferson, d.; Mary; and Elizabeth, d. Our subject's father was a Catholic and her mother a Lutheran; her husband, self and family are Swedenborgians, or New Church.

MRS. MARIA A. LINTNER was born on the old Henderson homestead, in Centre township, in 1807, and was a daughter of Rev. Joseph W. Henderson and Elizabeth Scott, daughter of Judge William Scott of Adams county. The former's first wife was Sarah Dixon, a daughter of Col. James Dixon, of Adams county. Rev. Joseph W. was a son of James and Maria Henderson nee Breckenridge, the latter being a sister of the father of Hon. John C. Breckenridge. The children of the first marriage were: Nancy, d., m. to Benjamin Sloan, d.; Mary, d. m. to Rev. James Galbraith, d.; Jane, d., m. first to Victor King, d.; and second to John Thompson, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Col. Thomas Laughlin, d.; James, d.; Susan, d., m. to Judge Thomas Pollock, d.; Sarah, d., m. to James Loughrey, d.; Eliza, d., m. to Abram Hendricks, uncle of Gov. T. A. Hendricks of Indiana; and Hannah, d. By the second union, the children were: William, m. to Ann Hendricks, sister of Abram; Matilda, d., m. to Charles Campbell, d.; and Maria A., m. in 1825, to William Lintner, d. in 1865, at the age of sixty-seven. The children of William and Maria A. Lintner were: Joseph Henderson, d.; John, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Jane, d.; Matilda, m. to McKinney Turner; Sarah, d., m. to Joseph Rankin; Margaret, d.; William Scott, d.; Andrew Banks, d.; and Emma.

DAVID SIMPSON was born in Philadelphia in 1824, and was a son of David and Phebe Simpson nee Coppick. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812, and the son of a Chester county Quaker. Our subject came to Indiana county in 1860. He was married in 1844 to Sarah Mathews, daughter of William Mathews, of Ireland. Their children were: Anna E., d.; Mary Emma, m. to Theodore Anza; William D., m. to Julia Carter; Sarah E., and Martha W. Our subject was in the militia for ten years, serving as orderly sergeant for several years, and participating in the great riot of 1844. He is "Past Dictator" of the "Knights of Honor" and treasurer of Knights and Ladies of Honor. He has worked at the carpenter trade for forty years, and is now connected with the W. P. R. R. as a bridge builder, &c.

T. E. THOMPSON was born in Conemaugh township in 1849, and is a son of Robert and Eliza Thompson nee Earhart. The former was born in the county and died in 1853; the latter died in 1856. Our subject was married in 1869 to Margaret Boyle, daughter of Johnston and Lydia Boyle nee Baker, of Conemaugh township. His children are: Lydia May, Robert Cromwell, Anna, Margaret Myrtle, and John Somers. He has been a carpenter for thirteen years, and has resided in Blairsville for six years. He is to-day connected with the W. P. R. R. as a bridge builder, etc.

JOHN CAMPBELL came to Blairsville in 1826. He was born near Londonderry, Ireland, in 1796, and was a son of James and Catharine Campbell nee McLaughlin. In 1801, his parents migrated to Philadelphia, and in 1814, they removed to Greensburg, Westmoreland county, where James Campbell died a few years subsequently. His widow, after passing most of her remaining years with her son John, died in Shaneetown, Illinois, at the residence of her son Cornelius. Our subject was married in 1818, to Isabella Cowan, a daughter of Captain Cowan, who was the grandfather of Hon. Edgar Cowan. She died in 1830, at the age of thirty-one. His second wife was Sarah Haney, daughter of John Haney, of Derry township, Westmoreland county, whom he married in 1832. He died in 1877, lacking twelve days of being eighty-one years old. The children by the first marriage were: Mary, m. to William Greene; James, m. to Rebecca Hoover; William, d. He was a soldier in company E, 21st Pennsylvania volunteers, in the Mexican war, from Jan. 1st, 1847, to June 8th, of that year. He read law with Hon. Edgar Cowan, and was admitted to the bar—he died July 12, 1847, two days after his return from the army. Sarah, d., m. to Jacob Kuhn, and John, m. to Kate Logue. The children by the second union were: Robert, m. to Charlotte Peters, and Isabella. Robert was superintendent of the masonry while the W. P. R. R., was being constructed, and also superintendent of the masonry on the Hoosac Tunnel, for twelve years, and latterly, a contractor. Our subject was a brick manufacturer for many years.

HON. JOHN HILL.—His grandfather, Joseph Hill, was of Scotch-Irish extraction, and came, when a young man, from Georgia to Maryland, where he married Catharine Sheets, a member of an old Lutheran family. In 1798, the family migrated to Derry township, Westmoreland county, and in 1804, they located on a tract of land through which the I. B. R. R. passes from the intersection. After residing there for a few years, he purchased a tract of land on the Indiana side. He died in 1830, over sixty years of age. His wife's death occurred some years later. He divided his land on the Indiana side, with Joshua and Richard Hill, and on the Westmoreland side, with Christopher and Jacob Hill. His children were: Joshua, m. to Margaret Cunningham, a sister of Judge John Cunningham; Jane, d., m. first to William Brown, d., and second to John Grewell, d.; Jacob, d., m. first to Eleanor Reese, d., and second to Mrs. Elizabeth Mitchell; Richard, m. to Sarah Libengood; and Christopher, m. first to Margaret Wilkins, d., and second to Mrs. Jemima Dunlap nee Graham, d.

Joshua's children were; Joseph, m. to Ella Bell; Wm. C., m. first to Nancy Hotham, d., and second to Mary Stitt, d.; John, m. in 1852 to Elizabeth Bossert, daughter of John Bossert, who came to Blairsville in 1837, and whose widow is yet living at an advanced age in the town: Catharine J., d., m. to James Dowdle; Mary A., m. to Washington Clawson; Joshua S., m.; Margaret E., m. to William T. Baldridge; Jesse A., m.; Jacob L.; Martha L., d., m. to Charles J. Baldridge; George W., m. in 1864 to Margaret Wilson, daughter of James Wilson, who died while a wagon-master in the Mexican war; Thomas J., m; and Benj. S., d., m. to Elizabeth Repine, d. William C. was in the war of 1861 for nine months. John was a lieutenant in the militia in the Lee raid, and also in the Morgan raid, and assisted in the latter's capture. Jacob L. was in the 49th Pa. vols. for four years. George W. was in the militia for two weeks after the battle of Antietam, and also in company D, 206th Pa. vols. about one year. John Hill has been connected officially, or otherwise, with the Lutheran church of Blairsville since 1851. He has filled nearly all the offices in the township and borough. He was a member of the state house of representatives in the sessions of 1878 and '79. His children are: Edgar N., Mary E., Charles W. and Augustus B. George W. was born in Burrell township in 1840. He has farmed, been connected with the railroad, one of the partners in the planing mill, and for three years in the grocery business. He is connected with the M. E. church. His children are Susan W. and Rebecca.

Mrs. Margaret Scott, widow of Boyd Scott, was born in Blairsville in 1827, and was a daughter of General Joseph McMasters and Margaret Wallace. The latter was a relative of the Wallaces at the "fort." One brother, Hugh, was in the Revolution, and two were in the Indian wars. Her family at one time resided in Hannastown. Joseph McMasters was a general in the militia for many years. He served as prothonotary, register and recorder, and held other positions. He died in 1867, at an advanced age. His children were: Mary J., m. to Richard Peters; Rebecca, m. to Charles Sleysman, d.; Margaret, m. in 1849 to Boyd Scott, d. in 1875, fifty-five years of age; Robert, and George, d. Boyd Scott was in the service of the P. R. R. and W. P. R. R. as conductor, agent, &c., for twenty-two years. In the last year of his career he was ticket agent of the railroads at Blairsville. His children were: Mary Catharine, m. to L. S. W. Ray; Joseph, m. to Elizabeth Dobson; Sarah Mellon, and Albert B.

Archibald Davis was born on the old Davis homestead, in what is now Black-lick township, in 1807, and was a son of William and Phebe Davis, nee Lawrence. The former was a son of William Davis, a native of Ireland, who was among the early settlers of Black-lick township. His wife was a Welsh lady by the name of Waugh. Their children were: John, d., m. to Mary Gordon, d.; Ann, d., m. to David Ferguson, d.; William, d., m. to Phebe Lawrence, d.; David, d., m. to Jane Hunter, d.; Susan, d., m. to Samuel Ferguson, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to George Thompson, d.; and Margaret, d., m. to Elliott Ferguson, d. William and Phebe Davis' children were: William, d., m. to Christina Herald, d.; Archibald, m. first to Matilda Kurtz, d., daughter of Jonathan Kurtz, and second to Mrs. Mary Culbertson, nee McChesney; Elizabeth, d., m. to Joseph Pershing, d.; Jane, Rachel, d., m. to Thomas Burns; John, m. to Mary Rankin, and David, m. to Rebecca Day. Archibald has been a justice of the peace for twenty-eight years. He has been connected with the M. E. church since 1829. Our subject's children were: William, Stewart, m. in 1864 to Amanda Devinney; Elizabeth, m. in 1858 to Rev. Benjamin F. McMahon (M. E.), d. in 1862; Matilda, m. to Rev. A. R. Chapman (M. E.); Mary, m. to I. N. Hughes; Edward, m. to Mary Pease; Margaret, Elzora, m. to John W. Hill; Clara, Martha, Fannie and Frank C. Stewart and William have been in company with their father since 1861. Stewart was a member of Co. H, 10th Pa. militia for thirty days. His children are: John D. and Stewart Archibald. Rev. Benjamin McMahon died in Blairsville, thirty-four years of age. He was born in St. Clairsville, Belmont county, Ohio, and was the son of Rev. John McMahon, M. D., a Methodist Episcopal minister, who had five sons in the M. E. ministry. The McMahons were among the early settlers of both Western Virginia and Ohio. Rev. B. F. was stationed in Blairsville in 1858, his labors being chiefly in Ohio. He became ill while stationed at Steubenville, and returned to Blairsville only to die. His children were: John Archibald and Cassius Clay.

John McCrea Hosack, was born near Bairdstown, Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1837, and was a son of Samuel R. and Rachel Hosack nee McCrea, daughter of John and Elizabeth McCrea nee Reed, who were married in 1801, and were early settlers of Black-lick township, near Bell's mills. John McCrea died in 1861, eighty-four years old, his wife in 1849, seventy-two years old. Samuel Hosack, was a son of John and Sarah Hosack nee Russell. The former located in Black-lick township, and died in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1865, about sixty-eight years old. His wife died in 1876, eighty-four years of age. Their children were: Samuel, d. in 1849, thirty-two years of age, m, to Rachel McCrea, d. in 1869, in her fifty-eighth year; Hannah m. to Andrew Henderson; David, m. to Jane Henderson; Morrison, m. to Mary Ann Sharp; James; Joseph, m. to Sarah Sharp; Alexander, m. to Elizabeth Rigley; William, M. D.; and Mary E. m. to Robert Miller. Morrison served in the war of 1861. James served in the 9th Pa. R. C. Dr. William was surgeon of the 77th Pennsylvania volunteers. Samuel R. Hosack's children were: John McCrea, m. to Eulalie McCabe, daughter of R. B. McCabe; David A., d., m. to Sarah Bruce, d.; William, M. D., b. in 1843, m. in 1872, to M. M. Bruce, daughter of John Bruce; Thomas, m. to Florinda Morford; Joseph; and Elizabeth, m. to Arlington Holmes. John M. was in company A, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months—afterwards was a carpenter in the quartermaster's department at Nashville, Tennessee, for six months. Dr. William Hosack, worked at the blacksmith trade for one year, and then entered the army, serving in company I, 11th Pennsylvana R. C. for three years nine months and eleven days, being a prisoner for the last nine months at Andersonville. He attended Glade Run Academy, graduating in 1868, and taught three years in Blairsville and Burrell townships. He read medicine with Dr. M. R. Banks, of Livermore, and graduated in the spring of 1874, at the Cleveland Medical College, attending his first course of lectures in the session of 1870. His first location was in West Lebanon, remaining till April, 1879, when he removed to Cherrytree, and purchased, in company with J. M. Hosack, the drug store of E. Brailler, M. D. His children are: Robert Bruce and Samuel Lawrence.

Robert Still was born in Alexandria, Huntingdon county, in 1818, and was a son of John and Martha Still nee Galbraith. The former was a native of Alexandria, and was a son of Robert Still, a native of Ireland. John served for one year in the war of 1812. He removed to Mercer county in 1828, and in a few years to Allegheny City, locating in 1839, in Derry township, two miles southwest of Blairsville, where he died in 1856. His wife's death occurred in a few years afterwards. Their children were: Robert, m. to Cordelia Alter; Alexander, m.; Ephraim, m. twice, first wife was a Miss Kincaid; James, d.; William, m. to Catharine Case; Eliza, d.; John, m. to Nancy Dixon; Margaret, m. to John Sipe, d.; Thomas, m.; and Mary, d., m. to William Hill. Ephraim was a sutler in the 11th Pa. R. C. for nearly three years. John was an assistant of his brother Ephraim. Thomas was a soldier in the war of 1861, and was for some time a prisoner at Libby.

Our subject's children were: Melissa, m. to Lewis Ripple; Sarah, d.; Martha, Priscilla, Emma Jane, Cordelia, d.; John Noble, and Ella. Our subject began as a "jigger boss" and cabin boy on the canal in 1831. From 1850 to 1853, in connection with his brothers William and Ephraim, they carried the freight and emigrant passengers for the Pennsylvania Central Railroad. At one time they had twenty-five boats and one hundred horses and mules. They shipped several locomotives from Johnstown to Pittsburgh on flatboats. Our subject was connected with the railroad for sixteen years, as brakeman, baggage master and express messenger, retiring on account of ill health to his farm in this township.

JOHN W. BROWN was born near Munster, Cambria county, in 1802, and was a son of John and Susannah Brown nee Weakland, who were married in 1793, and died in 1810. Their children were: Moses, d.; John W., d. in 1873; Sarah, d.; William, d.; James, and Thomas, d. John W. came to Blairsville in 1820. He assisted in rafting the shingles that were used on the first bridge. He was a boatman as well as blacksmith. He assisted Thomas Lindsey in making the bolts and irons used on the bridge, and afterward pursued the butcher trade. He was the first captain of the "Conemaugh," the first fire engine of Blairsville. He was married first in 1824, to Elizabeth Murray, who died in 1846, at the age of forty-two; again married in 1847, to Fannie Skinner, who died in 1850, at the age of forty-four, and married the third time, in 1851, to Hannah Geary. His children were: William, who was a veterinary surgeon in the late war, m. to Mary Doty, d.; John, d., m. to Mary Ann Cassida, d.; Sarah, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Joseph Green; James, m. to Sarah Pahel; Susan, m. to Amos Fenne; Michael E. and Mary M., twins, the former married to Isadore Jelly, a niece of Rev. J. A. Stillinger; Thomas C., m. to Mary W. Mullen, and Albert Daniel.

WILLIAM RANSON, the road supervisor of the W. P. R. R., and connected with the P. R. R. since April 7, 1851, was born in county Monaghan, Ireland, in 1823, and was a son of David and Mary Ranson nee Windrum. The former died in 1878, at the age of ninety-two; the latter about five years previous, about eighty years of age. Their children were: William, m. in 1846 to Mary J. Duncan, of Nova Scotia; Isaac, a soldier in the war of 1861; John, and David—the two latter residing in Ireland. William's children were: David, in the three months' service of 1861; Alexander, m. to Emma Truby; John, Evaline, Mary and William. Our subject came to America in 1842, and after farming in Pennsylvania, sojourning in South Carolina, and boating, became connected with the P. R. R. He commenced as an axeman with the Robert Clark engineer party on the Northwestern, or W. P. R. R. In 1856 he became road supervisor of the Indiana branch, and afterwards had charge of the West Penn. div. of P. R. R.

DAVID NESBITT was born in Fairfield township, Westmoreland county, in 1829, and was a son of James R. and Martha Nesbitt nee Ray. The former served in the "Silver Grays," in the Penn. militia during the war of 1861. He assisted in hauling timber to build the first houses at Blairsville. His father laid out Williamsport, Lycoming county, Pennsylvania. Jas. R. located in Blairsville about 1850, and died in 1875, at the age of seventy-five; his wife, in 1871, at the age of sixty-five. Their children were: David, m. in 1872 to Harriet J. Fink; Hetty, m. to James Hammill; Martha, m. to John Bruce; Samuel R., d.; Mary E., d.; and James R., d. Our subject's children were: Samuel Fink, d.; Martha, and Nettie. He served in company D, 206th Pa. vols. for one year. He learned his trade as blacksmith with Washington Geer. He has been located at his present shop since 1859.

CHARLES B. STREET was born in Frome, Somerset county, England, in 1840, and was a son of Richard and Anna Street, nee Burgess, who located in Philadelphia in 1847. He learned the machinist trade at the Industrial works of Bement and Dougherty, now William Bement and Son, 21 Callowhill street. He labored there for seven and a half years, and at Norris's locomotive works for one year. We next find him a third assistant engineer on the U. S. S. Pawnee for fifteen months in 1860–1. He entered the army as a member of Co. N, 71st Pa. vols., and served from the summer of 1861 to the fall of 1862. He was wounded at Ball's Bluff, and was taken prisoner, remaining twenty-seven weeks in Libby prison and hospital. He became connected with the P. R. R. in the spring of 1863, as a machinist at the Altoona shops. He was successively promoted as foreman (on Tyrone division), engineer, train master and master mechanic. He then started for Cuba, and was shipwrecked off the Bahamas. He returned to Altoona, and in November, 1865, again engaged passage for Cuba, where he remained till August, 1866. He was in the employ of the Bush Hill Iron Works, of Philadelphia, who engaged him to set up machinery on sugar plantations, to take the place of "bull" power, and to lay tramways and pipe lines. Of the former, he placed fifteen miles in position to bear the cane to the mills, and laid over three miles of pipe to convey water to the boilers. On his return he was appointed master mechanic of the West Pennsylvania railroad, his present office, and removed to Blairsville. He was married in 1865 to Eveline Blanch Riggs, daughter of John and Susan Riggs, of Mifflin county. Their children are: Susan R., Blanch, Robert P., Elizabeth P., and Rhoda M.

MRS. ELIZABETH ZIMMERS was born in Black-lick township in 1827, and was a daughter of Robert and Rebecca Smith, nee Henderson. The former was a son of Daniel and Elizabeth Smith, nee Kiscdmen. Daniel's second wife was Jane Copely. He died in 1851, in his eighty-fourth year. He was born near Carlisle, Cumberland county, and migrated to what is now Black-lick township about the beginning of the present century. Black-lick station is located on Daniel Smith's homestead. Daniel's children were: Joseph, d., m. to Mary Calhoun, d., Robert, d. in 1870, seventy-eight years old, m. to Rebecca Henderson, d., sixty-four years old; Daniel, d., m. first to Elizabeth Copely, d., and second to Elizabeth Henderson, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Howe, d.; Jane, m. to Benjamin Elliott, d., a soldier of the war of 1812; John, d., m. to Ann E. Buchanan; Susan, d., m., to James Henderson, d., a soldier of the war of 1861, d. after two years service at the age of sixty-five; Catharine, m. to William Devlin, d.; James, m. to Susan Smith, d., and Harriet, d., married to James Fair. Robert and Rebecca Smith's children were: Elizabeth, m. in 1850 to Jacob Zimmers, d. in 1870, fifty-one years of age; Joseph H., M. D., m. to Caroline Moore; Jane, m. first to Dr. S. M. Ogden, d., and second to Wm. Rinehart; Daniel, m. to Lavinia Woodward, and Robert, m. first to Susan Bancroft, d., and second to Jane Brown. Dr. J. H. Smith was an assistant surgeon in the army during the late war. Jacob Zimmers was a native of Germany. He migrated from Bedford county to Bairdstown, Westmoreland county, in 1846, where he engaged in merchandizing. In 1847 he located in Blairsville, and was the ticket agent of the P. R. R. for twenty years. The residence of Mrs. Zimmers was the first depot of the P. R. R. in Blairsville. Jacob Zimmers' children were: Lucelia Rebecca, Jane Ella, m. to J. W. Hughes, M. D.; Frank H,, Mary H., Julia E., Jessie and Robert Smith.

Robert Gilmore was born in county Derry, province of Ulster, Ireland, in 1819, and was a son of John and Margaret Gilmore, nee Henly. He was married in Philadelphia, in 1853, to Eliza Long, daughter of James and Mary Long, nee McPherson, a native of Ireland, of Scotch-Irish parentage, and who had come with relatives to Philadelphia in 1845. Our subject came to St. Johns, New Brunswick, in 1838, and thence located successively in Canada, Philadelphia, New Derry, Westmoreland county, in 1850, and Blairsville, in 1862. His business has been that of a merchant tailor. Their children were: James, m. to Effie Conkle, and Jessie, d., a graduate of the Blairsville Ladies' Seminary in the class of 1877.

Mrs. Eliza Jane Wilson, the widow of John H. Wilson, who died in Blairsville, in 1862, at the age of twenty-eight, was born in Blairsville, in 1835. Her husband was a native of the vicinity of Bolivar, Derry township, Westmoreland county, and was a carpenter by trade. Our subject was a daughter of Stephen and Amy Morford, nee Davis—a daughter of Stewart Davis. John H. and Eliza J. Wilson's children were: Martin M. and John Edgar, carpenter and bridge builder, m. to Annie Stratton. Martin M. has been connected with the W. P. R. R. since he was twelve years of age. Before he was sixteen he was acting as a telegraph operator at Natrona. He is now paymaster and superintendent's clerk.

Mrs. Julia Altman, was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1841, and was the daughter of James McCurdy and Elizabeth Clawson. The former was a native of Wheatfield township, and died in 1857, at the age of fifty. The latter is living in Blairsville, and was the daughter of John and Elizabeth Clawson nee Wincher, and was born in 1809, in what is now Burrell township. James McCurdy was the son of James and Sarah McCurdy nee Graham. The former located in Wheatfield township, between 1790 and 1800. James McCurdy's children were: John, m. to Catharine Reegor; James, d.; Archibald, m. to Melinda Cassidy; Elizabeth, m. to M. H. Fails; Nancy; Julia, m. to Morgan Altman, d. in 1876; William, m. to Mrs. Mary Vellis nee Smith; Sarah J., m. to Abram Kaufman, Jesse, m. to Martha Ford; Samuel, m. to Sarah Clawson; and George, m. to Ann Lloyd. John was in the war of 1861. James died in Libby Prison, after nine months captivity. Archibald was in the war of 1861. Morgan Altman served in the Pennsylvania militia during the late conflict. Our subject's children were: Elmer; Gertrude; Dolly, d.; Cora; Jesse, and Laura.

Mrs. Jane Robinson, was born in what is now Conemaugh township, in 1806, and was a daughter of James and Mary Smith nee Watson. The former was a son of Thomas and Jane Smith, both natives of Ireland. Thomas first located in the Conococheaque valley, and then migrated to near the present site of Youngstown, Westmoreland county, and settled on what was called the "Big Road." About 1790 or 1795, he removed to what is now Conemaugh township. His children were: Alexander, d.; James, d., m. to Mary Watson, d.; Jane, d., m. to Alexander McDonald, d.; and Lavinia. James and Mary Smith's children were: Alexander, m. to Amelia Knapp; Isabella, m. to David Brumlee, d.; Jane, m. first to Samuel Watson, d.; and second to John Robinson, who died in 1870, over seventy years of age, on the farm where he was born, near Salem church, Westmoreland county; Mary, d.; Lavinia, d.; Elizabeth, d.; and Thomas, m. to Jane Elwood, who lives on the old Thomas Smith farm. Samuel and Jane Watson's children were: James, m. to Catharine Myers; and Mary J. James was in company B, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers, for about eighteen months. Thomas Smith, the pioneer, wove in the Conococheaque valley, the cloth out of which were made the clothes that Rev. Joseph W. Henderson wore, when he first attended college. He sold his farm for Continental money, which proved utterly worthless, and it was at this juncture that he removed to Westmoreland county.

Philip Harrington Laufman was born in Strausburg, Franklin county, in 1822, and was a son of David and Susan Laufman nee Harrington. Susan Harrington was the only child of Nicholas and Elizabeth Harrington nee Shriver. The former's father was a second son of Lord Harrington, of England, and was a captain in the British army before the Revolution. He migrated to America, and was killed while fighting under General St. Clair against the Indians in the Ohio territory. He left two sons—Nicholas, m. to Elizabeth Shriver, and Peter, who died a bachelor in Strausburg. David Laufman was a son of Philip and Mary Laufman nee Spottswood, both natives of Carlisle, Cumberland county. The former died near Chambersburg, Franklin county, at the age of eighty-seven; the latter in 1836, sixty-two years old. David, when a young man, was deputy sheriff of Franklin county, and was afterwards an iron-master and one of the proprietors of Southampton furnace, where he died in 1834, at the age of thirty-four. His wife died in 1854, at the age of fifty-three. Our subject came to Pittsburgh in 1840, and was a clerk in the hardware trade for eight years, and then engaged in the business for thirteen years, the first firm being Huber & Laufman, succeeded successively by P. H. Laufman, and P. H. Laufman and Brother. He then purchased an interest in the Apollo (Armstrong county) rolling mill, and has since continued in the business. The first firm was Rogers, Laufman & Co.; which, after one year's continuance, was followed by Laufman & Co., the present style of the house. While a citizen of Pittsburgh, Mr. Laufman was for five years a member of the central board of education, and for seven a representative of the Nineteenth ward in the select council. He was one of the five commissioners who negotiated the $3,500,000 of bonds, and erected the present system of water works. He was married in 1848 to Mary Ann Berlin, a daughter of Philip and Mary Berlin nee Cover. Their children were: Wilmer B., m. to Beatrice Lawson: Emma Kate, m. to H. M. Butler, of Pittsburgh; Fannie E; Helen Mary, d.; Marietta, d.; Naome, Anna Cookman, and Philip Harrington.

Mrs. Martha P. Earhart was born in 1824, in Conemaugh township, and was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Barkley nee Rankin. The former was a son of Alexander and Ann Barkley, natives of Ireland, married in Philadelphia, and who located in what is now Young township, in 1807. Alexander died in 1822, over sixty years of age; his wife in 1852, in her ninety-fourth year. Their children were: Jane, d., m. first to James Wilson, d., and second to Thomas Dixon, d.; John, b. in 1802, in Carlisle, Cumberland county, m. first in 1822, to Elizabeth Rankin, d., and second to Anna Clark, d.; Alexander, d., m. first to Nancy, Gallagher, d., and second to Mrs. Russell; Nancy, m. to John McFarland; and James, d., m. to Jane Ferguson. John was a member of the session of Ebenezer Church and superintendent of its Sabbath school for many years. John Barkley's children were: Martha P., m. in 1853, to William Earhart, d. in 1866, in his seventy-first year; Mary Ann, m. first to William Bracken, d., and second to John T. Elder; Alexander Y., m. to Elizabeth Colasure; Elizabeth R., m. to John McIntosh; James M., m. first to Elizabeth Ray, d., and second to Henrietta Ray; William R., m. to Mary Miller; Caroline, m.

to John Lamb; Jemima, d.; John C., m. to Ada Millikin; Thomas, B., m. to Emma Sutton, d., and Foster W., d. Alexander Y., served in the Pennsylvania militia during the Morgan raid. John C. was in the 11th Pa. R. C. and was a prisoner at Libby for forty days. Thomas B. served in the Pennsylvania militia. Our subject's children were: Alexander B., m. to Emma Ludwig; Annie C. and Henry F. d. She has been a Sabbath school teacher in the M. E. Church for twenty years. Her husband was a deacon in the Lutheran Church for several years, and afterward joined the Methodists.

SAMUEL MCNULTY was born in York county, in 1793, and died in Blairsville, in 1870. He learned the printing trade at Shippensburg, removing from thence to Ebensburg, Cambria county, where he labored as a printer, and was married there in 1816, to Mary Mooney, whose parents kept a hotel at that place. In 1818 he removed to Blairsville and opened a hotel, the first in the village. He then kept the Dr. Emerson tavern, and in 1821-2, he erected the Exchange, in its day the best hotel between Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, managing it till 1850, when he leased the property to Col. William Lawson. In 1854, he sold the property to William Cunningham. In 1860, Luther Martin changed the name to the Everett House, and in 1872 it ceased to be a hotel. In 1879 it was remodeled into stores by John Graff & Sons. Our subject was collector of the port of Blairsville for several years, and was one of the partners in the Perseverence stage line from 1837 to 1840, the firm being McNulty, Sterrett & Co. Subsequently he worked his stock for five years, on the Portage Railroad, where he lost a leg. On the 9th of May, 1842, he started the first hack that run from Blairsville to Indiana, making three trips and back per week. His children were: Charles A., m. to Sophia Miraben; John, d.; Isabella, d.; George Washington, m. to Anna Bella Rhey; Andrew Jackson, m. to Rose Stephens; Harrison, the oldest native born male child of Blairsville, m. to Anna Mary Wilson; William, d.; and Agnes, m. to Daniel Barr. Harrison has been an active railroad man for twenty-three years, holding positions from laborer to conductor. His children were: Mary Agnes, m. to James McMoran; Anna Bella, d., m. to John Sutch; William M., m. to Terressa Mills, d.; James W., Charles A. and Ida.

MARK WILKINSON was a native of Hartford, Connecticut, where he was born in 1760. He was a soldier in the revolutionary war. He migrated to Black-lick township in 1819, and settled on what is now the Samuel Earhart farm. He died in 1856. His wife, whose maiden name was Phebe Freeland, died in 1836, at the age of sixty-five. Their children were: Lucy, m. to George Turner; Elisha, d., m. first to Margaret Loughery, d., and married a second time; James, d., m. to Hannah Chipman; Phebe, d., m. to Washington Geer; Dennison, d., m. to Rebecca Loughery; John, d., m. to Margaret Drevo; Deborah, m. to Joshua Goff, and George, m. first to Mary Ann Geer, d., and second to Nancy J. Brown. George was captain of the "Blairsville Blues" from 1849 to 1855, and also captain of the "Washington Blues" till they were re-organized to enter the war of 1861. He was also lieutenant colonel of the 1st regiment, 1st brigade, 17th division Pa. militia for several years. George Wilkinson's children were: Jane, d.; Mary, d.; James, d.; Albert, d.; Gilmor, Charles, Freeman and Elizabeth. Albert served in the three months' enlistment of 1861. Gilmor served in the Pennsylvania militia during the Morgan raid, and was also a telegraph operator under McClellan for three months, and Sherman two and a half years. The "Union House," of which George Wilkinson is proprietor, was erected by James Love, in 1855. In 1876 it was enlarged by Mr. Wilkinson, and now has twenty-two rooms. The children of Dennison Wilkinson, a son of Mark, were: Phebe, m. to John Wainright; Elizabeth, postmistress of Blairsville since August 1, 1878, m. in 1854 to Jacob A. Alter, d.; Mary, m. in 1856 to A. C. Graff; Miriam, m. first to John Hough, d., and second to J. W. Gray. Jacob A. was born in 1832, in Westmoreland county, and was a son of Alexander and Mary J. Alter, nee Buchanan. He was mustered into Co. K, 101st Pa. vols. on the 5th of November, 1861. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Plymouth, and sent to Andersonville, where he remained for five months. He was paroled and died on the 15th of December, 1864, at Morris Island, near Charleston, South Carolina, while en route for home. Jacob A. and Elizabeth A. Alter's only child was Dora R. John and Phebe Wainright's only child was Dora V. John Hough, d., and Miriam Wilkinson's children were: Joseph P. and Ellen R., d. The children of J. W. and Miriam Hough, nee Wilkinson, were: Edgar T., Dennison, Isadore, Lida D., d., and Nellie.

MRS. ANNIE FELTON.—She was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1802, and was the daughter of Samuel and Jennie Echols nee Clendenning. The former kept a tavern for many years on the Frankstown road, about five miles beyond Armagh, at the foot of Laurel Hill. She came to Blairsville in the summer of 1819, in company with her brother, James Echols, who had a contract for building a part of the Northern turnpike, which was located through the place. Her parents arrived in the following year, and opened a place for entertainment, well known as "Echols' tavern." She was married in 1824 to John H. Felton, who died in 1839, about forty-four years of age. Their children were: Alexander, d., m. to Jane Geary, d.; William, d., who migrated to California, and Deborah, d., m. to Thomas Layton, d.

MRS. ELIZABETH GREEN was born in 1798, in Northampton county, and was a daughter of Henry and Catharine Libengoon nee George. In 1800, the family removed to Derry township, Westmoreland county. She was married in 1819 to Isaac Green, the first carpenter to work in Blairsville. He died in 1846, in his fiftieth year. He was born in Bellefonte, Centre county. Their children were: William, m. to Mary Campbell; Henry, d.; James, d.; Joseph, m. first to Catharine Brown, d., and second to Susan Brown; Samuel, m. to Sarah Alters: George Miles, m. to Jennie Jeffries; Foster M., d.; Wilson, d.: and Martha J., m. to S. D. Stiffey. The children of the latter are: Anna Lena, Frank, and Harry E.

DAVID TAYLOR was born in what is now Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county, in 1824, and was a son of John and Eleanor Taylor nee Miller. The latter died in January, 1879, over eighty-five years of age. She was a native of Ireland, and came when only six weeks old with her parents to America. The former was from near the site of Greensburg, Westmoreland county. He died in 1853, at the age of sixty-five. He was a son of James and Elizabeth Taylor, who located near the site of Greensburg in 1780. Both father and son located in Conemaugh township in 1834. James Taylor died in 1842, about eighty-two years of age; his wife died in 1823; the former had two brothers in the Revolutionary war. His children were: John, d., m. to Eleanor Miller, d.; and James, who died in the United States army at Pittsburgh, about 1829. John was drafted in the war of 1812, but peace was declared before his company reached the army.

John Taylor's children were: John M., m. first to Jane Irwin, d., and second to Margaret Anthony; Samuel, m. first to Mary Harbison, and second to Mrs. Susan Smith nee McGough: James, m. first to Mary A. Mathews, d., a daughter of Archibald and Elizabeth Mathews, and second to Susan Ogden; David, m. in 1844 to Huldah W., daughter of Nathan and Huldah Bennett nee Nichols, of Massachusetts, who located in Black-lick township in 1824; the former was a soldier in the war of 1812. Silas, the father of Huldah Nichols, was a captain in the war of the Revolution; his widow was captured by the Indians, her life being spared on account of kindness shown to the chief a few years prior; Hugh M., m. to Sarah McCombs, d.; and William B., m. to Elizabeth Mayers. David Taylor's children were: John T., m. to Mary E. Pershing; James, m. to Esther A. Slick; Mary Emma, m. to Reuben Axe; and Martin M., m. to Jennie Artley. John T. was in the militia during the Lee raid, and in company E, 186th Pa. vols, about eighteen months. David Taylor has resided in Blairsville since 1844, and has taught school for twenty years. He has served as burgess, assessor, &c., and was assistant United States assessor of internal revenue for three years.

Martin C. Stitt, was born near Allegheny City, in 1858, and is a son of A. D. and Anna B. Stitt nee Lippy. The former was a son of John, a soldier in the war of 1812, and Martha Stitt nee Galbraith, both of Irish descent and natives of Huntingdon county. A. D. was born in Huntingdon county, in 1820, and was married in 1845, locating in Blairsville, in 1872. His children were: William H., m. to Jenny Hoffman, Eliza J., m. to George Johns; John, m. to Julia Forester; Anna M.; Martin C., and Maggie L. William H., was a soldier in the war of 1861.

William R. Truby, was born in Kittanning, Armstrong county, in 1843, and was a son of Philip and Pheby Truby nee Reynolds. The former was a son of Michael Truby, of German descent, and was born in Kittanning. He died in 1874, fifty-six years of age. The latter is still living, and is about sixty-one years old. She was a daughter of Job (English Quaker descent) and Elizabeth Reynolds nee Dubre, (French descent.) The latter settled in Lancaster county, and from thence they removed to Armstrong county. William R., was married in 1867, to Charlotte McCune, daughter of Samuel and Charlotte McCune. His children were: Rodela May, Gertrude, Charlotte McCune and Edith Reynolds. He was a clerk from 1862 to '64, in the mercantile line, and in 1864–5, at the draft rendezvous. He has been engaged in the general store business since 1866, and is well known in the section as the most extensive wool buyer in the four counties.

Mrs. Ann Jane Patch, was born near New Florence, Westmoreland county, in 1827, and was a daughter of Thomas and Margaret McClung nee Campbell, the former of whom died when Ann was a young girl. Both parents were natives of Ireland. Our subject was married in 1849, to William F. Patch, a son of Abra. Patch, of the firm of Steel, Boyle & Patch, proprietors of the foundry which occupied the site of Kerler's tannery. Mr. Patch was orderly sergeant company B, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers, and served two and a half years. He was taken prisoner at Gettysburg, and immediately released. He was wounded at Spottsylvania court-house, and died (1864) ten days afterwards. He is buried in Blairsville. Their children were: Mary J., James C., and Sarah H.

William C. Grist, is the superintendent of the Isabel Company's coal and coke works. He was born in Fayette county, in 1821, and was a son of Peter and Hannah Grist nee Mann. The former was with his father, Isaac Grist, from Eastern Pennsylvania, about the beginning of the century. Isaac was a farmer and Peter an iron master. Our subject has been most of his life about furnaces. He commenced in Ohio, his father having moved to Trumbull county, in 1829. His first work was making charcoal—he then labored at blast furnaces, and boated on the canal over four years between Newcastle, Pennsylvania, and Cleveland, Ohio. We next find him digging ore and making coke. In 1855, he went to Johnstown, as superintendent of the coke works of the Cambria Iron Company, and remained there till 1878, when he assumed his present position. He was married in 1848, to Rebecca Ann Reep, of Niles, Trumbull county, O. Their children are: Amanda; and Charles W., m. to Bertie Marshall.

Isaac Hicks was born in Fayette county in 1808, and came to the vicinity of Blairsville when a boy. He worked on the dams on the canal, and teamed—in the latter business for forty years. He has resided in Blairsville and vicinity for over fifty-five years. His wife was Susan Dodson, a daughter of John Dodson. Their children were: William, m. to Sarah E. Hosac; Cynthia, d.; Priscilla, d.; John, d., m. to Lavinia Steel; Elsie J., m. to John F. Steck; Isaac, jr., m. in 1867 to Harriet M. Young, daughter of James Young, of Washington township; Penina, m. to Charles Martin; Edward A. E.; Charles M., and Susan I., m. to Robert Drewbell. Isaac, jr., was in company E, 57th Pa. vols. for three months, and in company F, 193d Pa. vols. for four months. James Young, the father of Mrs. Isaac Hicks, jr., was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. His two sons, Lucian H. and Albert F., were in the army at the same time; the latter was wounded three times.

Mrs. Elizabeth Watson was born in Paisley, Scotland, in 1812, and was a daughter of William and Mary Little. Her brother Richard was superintendent of one of the factories that made Paisley shawls. She was married in Paisley to William Watson, a weaver, who died in 1861, nearly fifty-five years of age. They came to Mobile, Alabama, in 1851, and to Blairsville in 1856.

William Warnock was born in Philadelphia in 1826, and was a son of Daniel and Margaret Warnock nee McConville. The former was a native of Scotland, and landed at Quebec, Canada, and walked thence to Philadelphia, by way of Pittsburgh. He died in 1859, at the age of seventy-six; his wife died in Philadelphia in 1832. Our subject's connection with the P. R. R. dates from September 26, 1853, when he was employed as a machinist and locomotive engineer. He ran a freight train between Pittsburgh and Altoona, and on coming west, about three o'clock on the morning of the 17th of February, 1854, he ran into the east freight at Blairsville intersection, and had his left arm broken at the elbow joint and right wrist dislocated. In September, 1854, he came to Blairsville to run the engine "Henry Clay" from Blairsville to the intersection till the completion of the Indiana Branch railroad. He ran the first engine, the Henry Clay, on the I. B. R. R. The second engine on the I. B. R. R. was the "United States," used by the Collins Brothers to haul iron, etc. When trains began to run regularly, he ran the first train with the "Chestnut Ridge;" he afterward used the "Crawford No. 23," in 1859. In March, 1861, he ran the first train on the Ebensburg and Cresson Branch Railroad, with engine No. 22. In 1865, he was employed by Peter Collins to put up engines and derricks for drilling for oil near Loretto, Cambria county, at what was called the "Dawson well." In May, 1866, he was employed by the Allegheny Valley Railroad as machinist and locomotive engineer. In 1870, he engaged in farming, and in 1871, was employed as machinist in the shops of the W. P. R. R. at Blairsville. Our subject was married in 1847 to Agnes, a daughter or John Platt, who was born in Adams county, in 1784, and died in Westmoreland county in 1871. He was the son of John and Elizabeth Platt nee Leutze, who came from Rockbridge county, Virginia, to Adams county, and thence, in 1801, to Cambria county. He was a soldier in the Revolution. He died at the age of one hundred and four years, in Cambria county, about three miles from Cherry Tree. Our subject's farm in Derry township, Westmoreland county, has the application warrant, dated April 3, 1769, and in the name of William Dixon. The latter transferred the property to John Barnett, who sold to John Platt, the father of Mrs. Warnock.

E. M. EVANS was born in Brush Valley township in 1844, and was a son of James and Mary Ann Evans, nee Conrad—daughter of Rev. Samuel Conrad, a Baptist minister. James was a son of Hugh and Hannah Evans. The former was a native of Wales, who when a young man worked his way as a sailor across the ocean. He came to what is now Brush Valley township in the latter part of the last century. In the beginning of the present century he erected a stone mill on Brush creek, about three-fourths of a mile south of what is now Mechanicsburg. He died in 1849, about seventy years of age. His children were: Ann, d., m. first to John Kelly, d., and second to James Stewart, d.; John, d., m. first to Eliza Sanderson, d., and second to a Miss Petticord; Hugh, d., thrice married, first to Elizabeth Baker, d., second to Catharine Trimble, d., and third to Catharine Empfield; William, d., m. to Susan Wilkins, d.; Evans, m. to Sarah George; James, m. to Mary Ann Conrad; Mary, d., m. to Henry Grumbling; Elizabeth, d., m. to Joseph McNutt. Hugh's second wife was Esther Creswell, d. Their children were: Ellen, Rebecca and Lucinda, m. to Rev. A. B. Bunyan. James and Mary Ann Evans' children were: E. M., m. to Nancy J. St. Clair; Samuel, d.; Christmas, d.; Huldah, Hugh and Gilbert, d. E. M. served for seven months in the 2d battalion Pa. vols., being eighteen years of age at enlistment. E M. Evans' children are: Thomas and Frank. The Evans grist mill is well known as the old Triece mill. It was the first mill in the county to use the middlings purifier, and to regrind. The mill can grind one hundred bushels of wheat and seventy-five of chop per day, having a forty-horse power engine and three sets of burrs. It uses 1,200 bushels of slack coal per annum.

W. C. BLAKLEY was born in Young township in 1843, and was a son of David, d., and Sarah Blakley nee Foreman. The former was born on his father's (James Blakley) farm in what is now Young township. Both James and his father, also James Blakley, were early settlers of what is now Young township. David Blakley's children were: Margaret, m. to Robert Anderson; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Couch; W. C., m. to Harriet Thompson, daughter of John G. Thompson; David, m. to Nancy Clawson; Emma, m. to John Stephens; Agnes, d.; Armetta., Robert, and Thomas. W. C. was in Co. A, 135th Penna. volunteers for nine months, in the second battalion of Penna. six months volunteers, and in Co. D, 206th Penna volunteers about one year. In the latter he went as orderly sergeant. David was in the 53d Pa. volunteers about one year. Our subject has been connected with the W. P. R. R. for thirteen years, beginning as a freight brakeman, and now acting as conductor of the express.

MRS. MARIA STERLING was born in Conemaugh township in 1838, and was a daughter of James and Elizabeth Fulton nee Thompson. The former was a native of Derry township, Westmoreland county. He settled in Conemaugh township in 1837. He was a justice of the peace in Indiana county and a ruling elder in Ebenezer Church, leading the choir a portion of the time. He returned to Westmoreland county and is now living near Latrobe, in his seventy-sixth year. His wife was a native of Derry township. She died in 1875, in her seventy-first year. Our subject was married in Derry township in 1876, to William A. Sterling, who died in 1875, in his forty-first year. Their children were: Hattie E., Ida Maggie and Robert Fulton.

MAJ. A. BOLAR was born near Armagh, in 1833, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Bolar nee Amsbaugh (see Bolar sketch in East Wheatfield township). He entered the army as captain of Co. H, 12th Pa. R. C., on the 24th of July, 1861, and served three years. He was brevetted for gallantry. He was wounded at South Mountain, Antietam, Charles City Cross Roads and Fredericksburg, in all ten times, four wounds being received in one day. He was taken prisoner and borne to Richmond, where he remained three months. He has served as county superintendent of schools, and held important positions in literary institutions. He is now the principal of the Blairsville academy and has won a good name by his thorough training of the students under his charge.

REV. D. W. COLLINS, D. D., was born near Xenia, Greene county, Ohio, in 1823, and was a son of Archibald and Eleanor Collins nee Wallace. Our subject's great grandfather, William Collins, was a native of Ireland, who migrated to York county, where he lived and died. His son, Samuel Collins, was a native of York county, and the latter's son, Archibald, was born there in 1796, and removed to Greene county, Ohio, where he now resides. Archibald was married in 1818 to Eleanor Wallace, who was born in York county in 1796, and was a daughter of David and Mary Wallace nee Manifold. David was a son of James, who was a son of Alexander Wallace, who came in 1734, to a part of what was aftewards York county, with a colony, which settled on the "Barrens of York."

In 1753, Alexander Gellatly, and Arnot, ministers of the Associate Presbyterian church, came from Scotland to this settlement, in answer to repeated petitions, and organized a "Presbytery of the Associate Presbyterian churches," the first or among the first in the United States. Our subject was a graduate of Xenia Academy, Franklin college, Ohio. in the class of 1845, and from the Theological Seminary of Canonsburg, Pa., in the class of 1848. He was licensed to preach on the 20th of June, 1848, and his first charge was Dalton U. P. church, Wayne county, Ohio, where he remained two and a half years. His next churches were the Mansfield and Ontario, Ohio, from April 5, 1854, till April, 1860, relinquishing Mansfield in 1860, and giving his whole time to the Ontario congregation till April, 1864. For the succeeding eighteen months he was canvassing for the endowment fund of the Theological Seminary of Allegheny. On the 13th of October, 1865, he came to Blairsville, and till April, 1874, had charge of the Blairsville and Conemaugh churches. On the above date he resigned the latter, and has since ministered alone to the congregation of Blairsville. In June, 1875, he received the degree of doctor of divinity from Westminster college, of New Wilmington, Lawrence county.

He has been thrice married; first in 1849, to Martha J. Wilson, of Canonsburg, d., in 1852, in her twenty-seventh year; second in 1855 to Mrs. M. A. McConnell, of Mansfield, d. in 1870 in her forty-third year; and third in 1871, to N. J. Hyslop, of Xenia, Ohio. His children are: James W., attorney; Mary, Archibald and George.

REV. GEORGE HILL, D. D.—The Hills are of Scotch-Irish descent. Rev. George Hill, the grandfather of our subject, was ordained and installed pastor over the Fairfield, Wheatfield, (midway between Armagh and Rodgers' Mill,) and Donegal Presbyterian churches, on the 13th of November, 1792. He died June 9, 1862. His oldest son, Johhn, was the father of our subject. John Hill was a farmer by occupation, and served as justice of the peace, member of the state house of representatives, and the Senate. He was a captain under General Harrison in the war of 1812. He died in 1856, in his sixty-sixth year. His wife was Jane Moorhead, a daughter of Samuel Moorhead, of Westmoreland county. Our subject was a graduate of Jefferson college in the class of 1837, and of the Western Theological Seminary in 1840. His first and only charge has been that of the Blairsville Presbyterian church, with which he was at first, for seven years, associated as co-pastor. (For his connection with the church and Seminary, see articles upon those subjects). He received his degree as doctor of divinity from Washington and Jefferson College. He has twice married—first to Harriet Lewis, a daughter of Rev. David Lewis, who died in 1852, and second in 1854 to Abbie Hawes, daughter of N. P. Hawes, of Boston. His children were: Jane E., d., m. to M. H. Hosack; Harriet A., teacher in Blairsville Ladies' Seminary; Sarah R., teacher in the Richmond, Ky., Female Seminary; Grace A., teacher in the Iowa College for the Blind; Geo. H. and Helen P.

John Richardson, was born near Huntingdon, Huntingdon county, in 1828, and was a son of William Richardson, born in Huntingdon county, in 1803, and Mary Hawkensburg, who died in 1855, at the age of forty-eight. The former was of Irish descent. His father was in the war of 1812. William Richardson came to Blairsville, in 1836, where he and three sons were for many years engaged in the cooper trade. His children were: Margaret, m. to Thomas P. Bosh, d.; John, m. to Jane Fleming, daughter of Robert Fleming, of Butler county; Mary Ann, d., m. to Alfred Rinehart; James, d., m. to Harriet Creighton, d.; William, d., m. to Clarinda Carney; and Eliza Jane, m. to William McConnell. James was in company D, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. William was in company D, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years. John was in company D, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, for one year. He was a cooper for thirty-three years, a constable for fifteen years, and has been a grocer for four years. John's children were: Robert, m. to Lida Duncan; Mary Agnes, d., m. to Leonidas Huff; George, m. to Addie Kinter; and Elizabeth.

Christian Detwiler, was born in Montgomery county, in 1820, and was the son of Joseph and Kate Detwiler nee Lands. The father of the former was born in Montgomery county, and the latter's father of Scotch descent, his mother of German, both were of the "Omesh" or "Monesh" faith. Christian came to Indiana, in 1862, and for nine years, kept the Black horse tavern. Since that time he has been engaged in the livery business at Blairsville. He was married in 1843, to Charlotte Crouse, of Montgomery county. Their children were: Harriet d.; Francis, m. to Jemima Wiggins; Amanda, m. to William Ashbaugh; Horace; Annie; Irving and Amelia.

Charles L. Tittle, was born in Johnstown, in 1845, and was a son of John and Mary Tittle nee Snodgrass. The father of the former, James Tittle, and his father, Peter Tittle, were among the early settlers of Derry township, Westmoreland county. James died in 1845, at an advanced age. Peter died at an old age. John was born in 1801, in Derry township; his wife died in 1875, at the age of seventy. Our subject was married in 1871, to Ada, daughter of H. D. Woodruff, editor and proprietor of the Johnstown Democrat. Their children were: Harry W., and Mary S.

THE BLAIRSVILLE FOUNDRY,

Was put in operation by Samuel L. S. W. Ray, in 1874, who, after managing it four seasons, sold to Charles L. Tittle. Five men have been, and two are now employed. The capacity of the cupola is two tons. The principal products are plow and stove castings. The "Clipper" plow is made a specialty. A sixteen horse-power engine, runs the works.

The Moorhouse Brothers, proprietors of the Blairsville woolen mill. The mill was erected by Murphy and Nickerson, about 1852. The product was jeans, yarns, coverlids, etc., and a twenty-horse power engine was used. The successive proprietors have been: Charles Nickerson, John Graff, William Lang, Joseph Gwinner, Bell & Maher, Wilson, Maher & Co., and since 1876 the Moorehouse Brothers, Eli and John, who in full season employ ten hands in the manufacture of flannels, blankets, knitting yarns, etc. Eli was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1830, and was there married to Sarah Hollingsworth. His children are: Jane, Herbert, Alice, Thomas and Sady. He came to America in 1869, and was employed in a Norristown woolen mill before removing to Blairsville. John was born in 1840, in Yorkshire, and was married in Lancashire to Jane Taylor. His children were: Hannah Jane, Emily, Thomas Milton and William. He came to America in 1859, and was for some years employed at Pleasant Unity (Westmoreland county) woolen mill. In the days of the canal, before the railroad was finished, the freight and emigrants were transferred from a railroad station where Mrs. Zimmers now lives to a canal station on the river near the woolen mill. This transfer continued one year.

William R. Boyers was born in Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, in 1829, and was a son of Joseph and Mary Boyers, nee Herr. He came to the county in 1850, to go to school. He was educated at the "Jacksonville Academy." He read law with Judge C. P. T. Moore, of Point Pleasant, Mason county, W. Va., and was admitted to the bar in 1859. In July, 1860, he went to Europe, and on his return located at Altoona, Pa. In the fall of 1861 he came to Blairsville, and has since practiced his profession there. He was married in 1853 to Miss A. McCurdy, daughter of Samuel McCurdy, of Armstrong township. His children are: Mary M. and Joseph H.

R. W. Wehrle was born in Indiana in 1852 (see sketch of Wehrle family in Indiana records). Like his father and two of his brothers he is a watchmaker and jeweler. He has been located in Blairsville since 1872, and has the only jewelry establishment in the town. It is well worth a visit to his store to see his "specimens of the denizens of the earth, sky and water."

John Kerr was born in Ireland in 1812, and came to America in 1830. He has had over forty-five years service with railroads; he was a contractor on the Portage Railroad and afterward was a contractor on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad; he was a foreman on the division of the P. R. R. from Conemaugh to Mineral Point, and in 1867, removed to Blairsville and has since been the foreman of the division from Blairsville to the intersection. His first wife was Mary Blakely, d., a native of Indiana county. Their children were: Robert H., m. to Matilda George; Jane, d., m. to William Pringle; David, d.; Margaret, m to Thomas Espy; John K., m. to Lydia Smith; and William B., b. in 1849, at Portage, Cambria county, m. in 1878 to Lyde Thompson, daughter of John Thompson, of Allegheny City. William B. has been connected with the P. R. R. since 1863, commencing on division with his father, and promoted successively as watchman, fireman, and since 1869 as engineer. John Kerr's second wife was Angelina F. Cruikshank, a native of Indiana county. Their children were: Charles F., m. to Ella C. McJunkin; and Milton C., the druggist, who commenced his store in December, 1877.

W. C. Richey was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1830, and was a son of William and Hannah Richey nee Smith. Our subject has been connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad since 1857, passing through the various grades of brakeman, freight conductor, passenger conductor, train runner, train dispatcher, and since January, 1867, when he located in Blairsville; train master of the W. P. R. R. division of the P. R. R. On the 16th of March, 1854, Mr. Richey pilotted the first engine drawing one baggage and three coach cars, loaded with officials, that passed over the West Penn. At that time he was in the train master's office at Pittsburgh, acting as assistant, or train dispatcher. He was married in 1852, to Mary Pitcairn, of Scotland, daughter of Robert Pitcairn, who migrated to Columbiana county, Ohio. W. C.'s children were: William E., Robert, d.; Alexander P. and Janet.

Mrs. Isabella Peters was born in Dublin, Ireland, and was a daughter of Dr. Bernard W. and Rachel Reynolds nee Jamison.

Her mother's family were French, and being protestants were forced to fly from their native country on account of religious persecutions, locating in Dublin. Mrs. Reynolds died in Dublin and the Doctor, after a practice of forty years, removed to America, settling in Blairsville in 1852, where he died in the same year at the age of seventy. Our subject was a graduate of Mrs. Hart's female seminary at Dublin. She was married in 1852 to John Peters a native of Devonshire, England, and who had migrated to Blairsville in 1824, where he had engaged in merchandizing and farming. He died in 1870, at the age of seventy. Their children were: William Bernard, Isabella Maria Emily, Harry Joseph, Blanch Agnes, Percy Dunbar, and Grace Emily, d.

MRS. MARY FAILS, the widow of David Fails, was born in 1822, on the old Altman homestead, Black-lick township, and was a daughter of Jacob and Margaret Altman, nee Cable. The former was born in 1782, near the present site of Greensburg, Westmoreland county, and was eight years old when his parents, Philip and Louisa Altman, nee Kepple, migrated to what is now Black-lick township. Philip Altman's children were: Jacob, d. in 1854, m in 1806 to Margaret Cable, d. in 1830, in her forty-seventh year; Philip, d.; Susan, d., m. to John Harold, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Michael Earhart, d.; Catharine, d., m. to David Earhart, d; Louisa, d.; Mary, d, m. to Daniel Stiffey, d., and Henry, d., m. to Julia Ann Sloan, d. Jacob Altman's children were: Philip, m. to Elizabeth Rice; John, d., m. to Elizabeth Grant; Jacob, d., m. to Jane Dowlin, d.; Samuel, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Jacob Harold, d.; Margaret, d. in 1840, second wife David Fails, d. in 1862, over fifty-three years of age; Daniel, Lutheran minister, m. to Jane Cover; Henry, m. to Matilda Cribbs; Mary, third wife of David Fails, d.; Lucy, d., m. to Brice Henderson, d.; Susan, m. to Philip Domm; Levi, d. Banks, d., m. to Rachel Mary Fails, and Ellen. Henry was in the 77th Pa. vols. David Fails' first wife was Fannie Geer, d., and their only child is deceased. His children by the second union were: William C., d., and Matthew, foreman car-shop W. P. railroad, m. in 1864 to Elizabeth McCurdy, daughter of James McCurdy, of Burrell township; Matthew H., served in Co. B., 56th Pa. vols., from September, 1861, to April, 1863, and was wounded August 29, 1862, taken prisoner, and discharged in September; he also served in Co. B., 206th, about one year. His children by the third wife, our subject, were: Jacob A., killed in his thirty-fifth year on the railroad, July 23, 1877, m. in 1866 to Rachel Laird, daughter of William and Ann Laird, nee Hill; Margaret J., m. to John Hicks; George, d.; Martha L., m. to Adam M. Martin; David H., Banks A., Annie A., Mary E. and Ella M. The Children of Jacob A. and Rachel Fails were: William A. and Charles Banks. M. H. Fails, the foreman of the W. railroad car-shops, was born in Blairsville in 1840. He learned the trade of carpenter with his father. He has been connected with the railroad since 1863, and has acted as foreman since 1874. His children were: Effie N., Bertha P., Carrie Hughes, d.; Shallus E., Augustus B. and Arthur Spencer.

JOHN SHEPHERD, was born in Philadelphia, in 1815, and was a son of Francis and Elizabeth Shepherd nee Yakely. The former was a native of France. The latter was born in the city, of German parents. Our subject learned the trade of brass founder and machinist, with Joseph Barnhurst, and worked at the business for ten years. At the age of twenty-two, he became connected with the locomotive works, of Norris & Son, Philadelphia, and remained in their employ over thirty years. He was in charge of the construction shop for twenty-five years, and in that time put up twelve hundred engines, from nine to thirty tons weight. After a year in the foundry business on ninth street, he went to the Providence (Rhode Island) Locomotive Works, and in that year, he constructed forty-two engines. He then removed to Blairsville, and has since been the foreman of repairs on locomotives in the W. P. R. R. shops. He was married in 1838, to Ellen L. Hughes, of Cape May. Their children were: John W., m, to Annie Riley; Eliza, d., m. to Maguel Santistleban, d.; Frank, d., m. to Agnes Williamson; Ella, d., m. to Antonio Budett; George, m. to Maggie Dostman; Mary Emily, m. to John Sprogell; and William, m. to a Miss Lent.

JOHN K. HENRY, was born in Unity township, Westmoreland county, in 1819, and was a son of Conrad and Mary Henry nee Kintz, both being of German descent. The former died in 1868, at the age of seventy-one; the latter in 1866, at the age of sixty-eight. Conrad Henry was a distiller and farmer. Our subject kept a hotel at Latrobe, Westmoreland county, for about nine years In 1858, he removed to Blairsville, and has since been the proprietor of the "Henry House," a buildingerected about 1829. John K. was married in 1854, to Margaret J. Haney, a daughter of James and Margaret Haney nee McAfee. Their children were: Emma Elizabeth, d.; James Conrad; Margaret Helena; Agnes Cecelia, and Susan Teressa.

CHARLES KERLER, was born in Geimany, in 1827, and was a son of Joseph Jacob Kerler and Susannah Catharine Schmidt. Charles came to America in 1854, and to Blairsville in 1856. He was married in 1855, to Philippine Reiner, of Allegheny City. Their children are: Emma Catharine, Minnie and William. Our subject is the proprietor of a tannery, having twenty-two large vats, a fifteen horse-power engine, and employing four workmen in the manufacture of harness leather. The premises were originally used by Sterrett & Jones, for a foundry. Dr. Wm. R. Spear and James Alexander, erected the tannery out of the foundry buildings. In June, 1857, steam power was added. Mr. Kerler managed the business for three years, purchasing the property in 1873.

JOHN WATTERSON, SR., was a native of Carroll county, Maryland, from which he migrated in 1825 to New Derry, Westmoreland county. He died in 1853, at the age of seventy-nine. His first wife, who was Regina Ake, died in 1840, at the age of sixty-two. His second wife, who was Mrs. Sarah Crate nee Hanlon, is still living. His children were: James, d., m. to Mary Kintz; John S., b. in Carroll county, Md., in 1805, d. in 1870 in Blairsville, where he had lived since 1834, having been in active business for thirty-six years; he was an earnest member of the Catholic church, and his funeral mass was celebrated by his son, the Rev. J. A. Watterson, assisted by Rev. Ferdinand Wolf, of Indiana, and Rev. Andrew Brown, of Loretto; the sermon was delivered by Rev. J. A. Stillinger, pastor of the church; his wife was Sarah McAfee; Amos, d., m. to Ellen Clark, d.; Joshua, d.; and Mary Ann, d., m. to Henry Sindorf. John S. Watterson's children were: Wm. A. J., m. to Elizabeth Amanda Dodson; James S., m. to Elizabeth Behen, d.; Mary E., m. to Dennis Behen, jr.; Henry C.; John A., Catholic minister, attached to Mt. St. Mary's college, Emmittsburg, Md.; Theodore A.; Sarah A.; George V.; Joseph F., Maria F., m. to Michael J. McCann, and Alfred V., attorney at law.

DANIEL NEWINGHAM, the progenitor of the persons of this name now in America, was one of two sons of an English nobleman. He left his home and went to Ireland, where he married; he subsequently migrated to America, about 1774 or '75, settling, or at least at some time residing at York, Pa., where his two sons, Henry and David, were born. During the Revolutionary war he served his adopted country under General Wayne; with a number of others, he was sent south against the enemy, and while there he sickened and died. In course of time his sons married—Henry to Elizabeth Klinetint, of Hanover, Pa., and David to Susan Kurtz, of Huntingdon, Pa.:

the trade of the former was weaving; the number of his children nine. The latter was a silversmith; his children were seven in number. After his marriage, Henry resided in Huntingdon, where his children were born, in the following order: Margaret, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Harriet, d.; David; Charlotte, d.; Susan; Hannah, d.; Henry and Daniel, who was born July 27, 1824. In 1829, the family removed to Greensburg, Pa., where Daniel learned his trade—harness making—with his brother. Daniel was married in 1855 to Susan Dixon, of New Alexandria. Two children were born in Greensburg, William H. L. and Clara May, d. In the spring of 1864, Daniel moved to Blairsville; another child was here born in 1866, and died in 1867. His employment is, at the first, harness making, his establishment being located at 44 Market street.

D. W. Artley was born near Reading, Berks county, in 1826, and was a son of Abraham and Elizabeth Artley nee Weise. The former died in 1862, at the age of sixty-two; the latter in 1849, forty-seven years old. When our subject was only six months old, the family removed to Lycoming county, and located on the Susquehanna river, opposite Williamsport. Abraham was the son of John Artley, a native of Germany, who migrated at an early date to Pennsylvania, served in the French and Indian wars, and died from wounds received therein. D. W., is a carpenter and bridge builder, and has been connected with the P. R. R., since 1856. After the first nine months he became a foreman, and in 1860, he was promoted to superintendent of a division or master carpenter. Since 1871, he has had the management of the bridge building, &c., of the W. P. R. R. In 1848, he was married to Hannah M., daughter of William Riddle, of Lycoming county. Frank Riddle, the father of William, was a refugee from Ireland, in 1792, and located in Lycoming county. Our subject's children were: Charles F.; Joseph S., foreman of bridge building, W. P. R. R., m. to Mary Duncan; William; Jenny, m. to Martin Taylor; Loretta, Mary, Maggie and Myrtle. Joseph S. Artley's children are: Blanche H. and Charles D.

George W. Innes was born on the border, between Ohio and Canada, in 1837, and was a son of Alexander and Eliza J. Innes nee Wilson. The former was a native of Scotland, and died in 1847, at the age of forty. The latter was a native of Ireland. Our subject was educated at the 4th Ward school of Allegheny City, the Elder's Ridge Academy, and also under the private instruction of Rev. Samuel Anderson, formerly of West Lebanon. He is a practical teacher of twenty years experience, and was associated with the Soldier's Orphan school, of Dayton, for three and a fourth years, the Academy at New Washington, Clearfield county, for two years, the public schools of Apollo, Armstrong county, as principal, for five years, and the public schools of Blairsville, as principal since 1876.

Tobias Hammer was born near the present site of Homer City, in 1820, and was a son of Frances and Margaret Hammer nee Griffith. The former died in October, 1865, over seventy-nine years of age; the latter in the same month, over seventy-one. The latter was a daughter of Jesse, a New Jersey Quaker, and Elizabeth Griffith nee Hammer. Francis Hammer was the son of Tobias Hammer, a soldier of the revolution, and among the early settlers of Centre township. In 1821, Francis removed to Brush Valley, and in 1834, to within a mile of Blairsville. His children were: Tobias, m, first to Mary J. Lucas, d., and second to Nancy Kelly, d.; Eliza, m. to Joseph Johnston, d.; Francis, m. to Victoria Snyder; David Blair, d.; Jesse, d.; Joseph, d., m. to Emma Dully; Benjamin, m. twice; Margaret, m. to James F. Elder; and Thomas, m. twice. Our subject's children were: Matilda M., m. to Joseph W. Mink; Frank, d.; and Samuel K.

James L. Shields.—He was born in Fairfield township, Westmoreland county, in 1821, and was the son of Hugh and Ann Shields nee Snyder. The former was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and a stone-mason by trade. He married Ann Snyder in Fairfield township, Westmoreland county. He died in 1828, about forty-five years of age. The children of Hugh and Ann Shields were: Mary, d.; James Lawson, m. to Sarah Dickson, a daughter of Thomas and Jane Dickson nee Barkley, the latter being a cousin of President James Buchanan; Henry, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Mary, d., and William. Mrs. Shields' second husband was Alexander West. Their children were: Elizabeth, m. to Blaine McCormick, train dispatcher, Altoona, Pa.; Hannah, m. to John McCormick, train master, Altoona, Pa.; Samuel, d., killed on the railroad; Mary, m. to Henry Dell; Jacob, m. to Rebecca Hammond; Lydia, m. to John Treasure. Mrs. Shields resides near Covodesville, Westmoreland county, and is now over ninety years of age. James L. and Sarah Shields' children are: Jennie J., a graduate of the Blairsville Seminary in 1871, m. to Rev. Robert Watson, of West Rushville, Fairfield county, Ohio, and Harry A., assistant ticket agent P. R. R. at Johnstown. Our subject has been connected with the P. R. R. for over twenty-five years, and is now the master mason of the West Penn. division of P. R. R.

William P. Barclay, who died in Philadelphia in 1871, was a native of Indiana county, where he was born in 1833, and spent his early life on a farm. At the age of twenty years he went west, and for a number of years followed the occupation of a surveyor and civil engineer, in the employ of the Fox River and Wisconsin River Improvement Company. Sometimes he was for months in the woods of northwestern Wisconsin, with a single companion, surveying and reporting lands, only occasionally going to the settlements to procure provisions. During this time he was engaged in the study of different languages; selecting an assistant who had a knowledge of some of the European languages, their evenings were spent around the camp fires in mastering the elements of German, French and Spanish, with which he became entirely familiar, and could read with the same ease as English. He afterwards located in Cincinnati, to enjoy the advantages of the extensive libraries for a course of reading. On the breaking out of the war in 1861, he enlisted in the three months' service, and after being discharged re-enlisted, and served as orderly sergeant of company A, "Benton Cadets," which regiment formed a part of General Fremont's body guard during his campaign in Missouri. On the recall of General Fremont, the "Benton Cadets" regiment was disbanded. He again enlisted, and served as first lieutenant of company H, 34th Wisconsin regiment—a regiment composed mostly of French and Belgians, and with whose language he was familiar. During this term of service he contracted a disease which terminated his life, after years of long and wearying illness.

Mrs. Reuhamah Morford was born in Derry township in 1825, and was a daughter of Robert and Mary Cummins nee Yalten. The former was born in Westmoreland county, and died in 1871, at the age of sixty-three. The latter died in 1864, at the age of fifty-six. Robert was the son of Robert Cummins, sr., a native of Ireland. Our subject was married in 1844 to Stephen Morford, a native of Greensburg, who was a shoemaker, and located in Bairdstown in 1834. He died in 1873, at the age of sixty-three; his first wife was Amy Davis, whom he married in 1829. She died in 1838, twenty-five years old. Their children were Eliza J., m. to John H. Willard; and William, m. to Mary McIntire. William served in the 11th Pa. R. C. The children of our subject were: Mary Ann, d.; Flora, m. to Thomas Hosack; Emma; George, m. to Maggie Kells; Sarah, m. to Genoa Stitt; Martha; John, d.; Susan, and Charles.

JOSEPHUS C. MCKELVEY was born in Ligonier township, Westmoreland county, in 1843, and was a son of Nathaniel and Lettie McKelvey nee Clark. The former was born in 1801, in the Ligonier valley, and his father was among the early settlers of Westmoreland county. Lettice was the daughter of James Clark, an early settler of Westmoreland county. She died in 1845, at the age of thirty-nine. Their children were: John Francis, d. in the war of 1861, married; Joseph W., m. to Nancy Kyle; Mary Scroggs, d., m. to George Washington McGary; Heman, m. to Elizabeth Ambrose, d.; and Josephus C., dentist, m. in 1867, to Kate Amanda Marker. Nathaniel McKelvey's second wife was Martha Mathews. Their children were: Martha Elizabeth, m. to William Graham; Arabella, and Lettie. Our subject entered the army August 27, 1861, as a member of Co. C, 11th Penna. volunteers, and remained with the regiment till the battle of Gettysburg, when he was wounded. He was transferred to the 39th regiment, invalid corps, and served the balance of his three years' enlistment in guard duty at Washington City, Philadelphia, and the convalescent camp on the Potomac. Our subject's only child is Bertha Maud.

LEWIS JOHNSON was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1805, and was a son of Samuel, a free colored man, and Rachel Johnson, a slave, and who died in bondage in Westmoreland county in 1823. Lewis migrated to Brairsville in 1825. Here he worked for George Mulhollan, the merchant, driving an ox team, and receiving the blooms which the farmers had hauled over the mountains. Mulhollan's house was situated east of John Graff & Son's dry goods store. He mined coal for forty years, retiring on account of old age. He was married in 1828 to Jane Bronson. Of his children, Jane is d.; Elizabeth, m. to Leefy Massy; Martha, d., m. first to Thomas Walls, d., and second to Edward Young; Nancy, d., m. in 1867, to Samuel McClelland; Lewis, who was for three years in Co. I, 41st U. S. colored infantry; and Skinner, d. Samuel McClelland was born near West Newton, Westmoreland county, in 1843, and was a son of Miles McClelland, who had been a slave, and Isabella Hunter, a free woman. He was in Co. F. 32d Pa. colored volunteers from February, 24th, 1864, to May 29th, 1865. His second wife, whom he married in 1879, was Nellie M. Huell, of Selma, Alabama. His children were: Lewis J. and Francis M.

SAMUEL LYON was born in Bedford, Bedford county, in 1835, and was a son of William and Ruth Lyon, nee Reynolds. The former was a son of Samuel Lyon, whose father, Wm. Lyon, was a brother-in-law of Gen. Armstrong, and a soldier in the Indian war. In connection with Gen. Armstrong, he laid out Carlisle, Cumberland county, and was the first prothonotary of the county. Our subject enlisted in Co. H, 107th Pa. vols. in 1861, and passed through the various grades of private, first lieutenant and captain of the company. He served also on the staff of Gen. Baxter, and was discharged in July, 1865. Samuel read law with his father, and was admitted to the bar of Bedford county in 1858. He located in 1868 in Indiana, and in 1871 removed to Blairsville. He was married in 1868 to Sarah, daughter of William Lowman, of Indiana. Their children were: William, Mary, George and James, twins, and Alice.

REV. CHARLES M. STOCK was born in New Oxford, Adams county, in 1855, and was the son of Rev. Daniel and Elizabeth Stock nee Wolf. The former was a graduate of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary. His father, Wm. Stock, was a well known anti-slavery man, and his grandfather was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Our subject is a graduate of the academic, collegiate and theological departments of the Gettysburg college, passing from the seminary in the class of 1878. His first charge was the Hebron Evangelical Lutheran church of Blairsville, in November, 1878, of which he is the present pastor. He was married on the 19th of February, 1879, to Mary, daughter of President Judge Wm. McLane, of Adams county.

ROBERT J. MARSHALL, M. D., located in Blairsville in 1827. He was born in 1805, in Franklin county, and was a son of Robert and Mary Marshall, nee Prescott. He was educated at the academies of Cumberland, Md., Frederick City, Md., Mercersburg, Pa., and Chambersburg, Pa.; he read medicine with Dr. John Boggs, of Greencastle, Franklin county, and graduated at Jefferson Medical College in 1827, and located in Blairsville in April of that year. During the war of 1861 he served as examining surgeon for the draft commissioners of Indiana county. He was married in 1830 to Jane Loughrey, born in 1813, daughter of John Loughrey, a native of Indiana county, and subsequently a resident of Circleville, Ohio. Their children were: Mary Eliza, m. to Rev. Orr Lawson; Henry Martyn, d.; George Hill, m. to Ella Roland; Margaret Florence, Dwight, d.; Clara, m. to David R. Jackson; Thomas Davis and Jessie C.

REV. EDWARD MICHAEL MCKEEVAR, pastor of S.S. Simon and Jude's Church, was born in Pittsburgh, in 1848, and was the son of William and Catharine McKeever, nee Mullen. He attended the Cathedral school for several years, and at the age of fifteen entered the seminary, from which he graduated on the 21st of December, 1871. He was ordained and attached to St. Peter's church, Allegheny City, as an assistant pastor. He succeeded the late Rev. Dr. Stillinger as rector of the Catholic church of Blairsville.

L. S. CLAGETT, M. D., located in Blairsville in 1877. He was born in 1844, at Offutt's Cross Roads, Montgomery county, Md., and was a son of Oratio and Margaret E. Clagett, nee Scott. The former was a son of Thomas Clagett, whose wife was an Offutt. Our subject was educated at the common schools and at St. Timothy's Hall, near Baltimore, Md.; he read medicine with Drs. Clagett and Walls, of Baltimore city; he attended lectures at the University of Maryland, of Baltimore, and the Long Island College Hospital, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Graduating from the latter in 1868. After graduating he located at Penn's Station, Westmoreland county, and practiced eight years; he attended an additional course of lectures at the Jefferson Medical College, in the session of 1876–7, and then located in Blairsville. He was married in 1872 to Fannie, daughter of William and Catharine A. Ford. She died in 1876, at the age of thirty-three. His only child is Catharine Elizabeth.

MRS. CHARLOTTE MCCUNE was born in county Monaghan, Ireland, in 1811, and was the daughter of Philip and Ann Mccune, both members of the Protestant Episcopal Church. She was married in 1829, to Samuel McCune, and four years later they located in Blairsville. The children were: Hugh, d.; Mary J., d., m. to Dr. Daniel Arter; John, a member of Co. A, 54th Pennsylvania volunteers about four years, taken prisoner; James d.; Ann E.; Samuel, a member of Co. B, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers seventeen months; Stewart, m. to Ellen Jamison; Charlotte, m. to W. R. Truby; Martha, m. to Dr. George Arter; Margaret, m. to Milton Cunningham.

JOHN P. FORD was born in county Down, Ireland, in 1810, and was a son of William and Esther Ford nee Paul. The former was a miller and died in Ireland in 1816. His widow and three children, John P., Mary and Robert, came to Cleveland, Ohio, via Quebec, Canada, and after four years' locaton removed to Pittsburgh. In 1838, the family migrated to Blairsville. Mrs. Ford died in 1861, in Indiana, at the age of seventy-five. Our subject was for many years a carriage manufacturer in Pittsburgh and Blairsville. Since 1872, he has been connected with the management of the water works, and since 1873 has served as superintendent of the same. He was married in 1842, to Martha J., daughter of Hon. James Clark, the pioneer in Pennsylvania internal improvements. Their children are: William C., engineer fire department city of Pittsburgh; Jane, Amelia, Albert B. and Anna Bell.

A. P. Kirtland, C. E., is a native of Boardman, Mahoning county, Ohio, where he was born in 1844, and was a son of Billins and Ruthanna Kirtland nee Frame. He was educated at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, New York, from which he graduated in 1871. He was at first connected with the Indiana North and South Railroad as an assistant engineer to the chief engineer, W. H. Searls. After nine months labor he was associated with the Bennett's Branch, or Low Grade Railroad as assistant engineer to the principal assistant engineer of the western division. On the 13th of December, 1872, he came to Blairsville, as assistant engineer to the superintendent of the W. P. R. R. a position he is occupying at this date of writing. Previous to Mr. Taylor's, the present superintendent's regime, our subject had entire charge of the engineering department of the West Penn Railroad. He was married in 1876 to Lucy Shields, daughter of Alexander M. and Caroline Shields nee Graff.

Michael O'Brien was born in county Dublin, Ireland, in 1824, and was the son of Edward and Mary O'Brien nee Fegin. Their children were: Michael, m. to Catharine T. Langton, daughter of Dominec Langston, who was an organist of the Catholic church for twenty-two years, and a successful teacher of music; John, superintendent of the Midland and Great Western Railroad of Ireland, m. to Elizabeth Delaney; Patrick, m. to Isabella Barr; Mary Ann, m. to Edward Hyte; Ann, m. to John McDonald; William; Bridget, m. to John Johnson; Edward, m. to Mary Flanigan; and Catharine. Michael's children were: Mary Agnes, a teacher of music, m. to Patrick Tormay; and William E., now teaching a band in Nebraska. Our subject migrated from Ireland in 1850, and located in Blairsville. After painting one year, went to work at his trade as a mason on the I. B. R. R.; he then worked on the mountain tunnels and in the western cities; he was in the employ of the government, working on the Alexander and Great Orange R. R., laboring even on a bridge while the battle of Bull Run was in progress, and finishing it in time for the army to cross; he brought to Blairsville the first two-dollar national bank bill that came into the town.

Benjamin Crowther, superintendent of the Isabella furnaces, was born in Staffordshire, England, September 29, 1826, where also he was educated; he emigrated to the United States in 1844, with his father's family, and settled in Morgantown, West Virginia, where a furnace property was purchased. After remaining there two years, his father, brothers and himself removed to Brady's Bend, Pennsylvania, where they erected the furnaces for the Brady's Bend Iron Works. In 1848, his father went to Lowell, Ohio, where he "blowed in" the Lowell furnace, the first furnace in the United States to use the raw, bituminous coal, and in the same year, Benjamin Crowther took charge of this furnace and remained there ten years. In 1861 he went to Pittsburgh and erected two furnaces at Manchester, in which he owned an interest. At this point he continued until 1871, when he took charge of the construction of the Isabella furnace. He was married in 1845 to Mary Jane Hill, of Staffordshire, England. Their children are: Wm. Edward, d.; Samuel G., d.; Mary Jane; Harperlissa; Adela, d.; Adalaide; Isabel; Benjamin F., and Agnes, d.

Mrs. Margaret Harker was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1805, and was the daughter of James and Mary McQuown nee Lattimer. The former died in 1809, and the latter, with her family, removed to Black-lick township, where she remained for some years. In 1826, she removed to Armstrong county, where she died in 1867, in her ninetieth year. Our subject was married to John M. Harker in 1828, and removed to Blairsville, where he died in 1850, in his forty-fourth year. James McQuown's children were: John, d., m. to Anna Scott, d.; William, d., m. to Mrs. Ann Hastings nee Irwin; Margaret, m. to John M. Harker, d.; Jane, d.; and James, m. to Mary A. Lias, d.

Mrs. Mary Elder was born in Hempfield township, Westmoreland county in 1820, and was the daughter of Daniel and Mary Curry nee Workman, a daughter of Samuel and Margery Workman. Daniel Curry died in Holmes county, Ohio; his wife died in 1822, about thirty-seven years of age. Our subject was married to Robert A. Elder in 1836, who died in 1850, at the age of thirty-three. Their children were: Mary Violet, m. to John Miller; Harriet J., d., and James Cameron, d. The latter was in the six months' service in the war of 1861. Mrs. Elder has resided in Blairsville since 1862.

Adam Shurick was born in Bedford county, in 1808, and was the son of Adam and Elizabeth Shurick nee Earhart. The former was born in Germany, and the latter in Franklin county. The family removed to Westmoreland county, and located near Baldridge's mill, near Youngstown. In 1848, Adam settled in Blairsville, and erected a steam grist mill, which was destroyed by fire on the 22d of March, 1861. It was rebuilt in the same year. He has been twice married; first in 1830, to Margaret A., daughter of Christian Soxman, of Westmoreland county, who died in January, 1875, about sixty-seven years of age; and second, in 1878, to Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, daughter of Moses Carr, an old resident of Jefferson county. The children were: Nathan M., m. to Hattie Eno, d.; Christopher, d., m. to Polly Sloan, d.; Margaret E., m. to John Hamlett, d.; Adam, d.; John S., m. to Lavinia Abilene; Ellen S., m. to Rev. Theodore Henderson; Frank De Hass, m. to Gertrude Lee, d.; Mary Emma, d.; and Martha m. to J. S. Weaver. The family are Methodists and Baptists.

Peter Connell located in Blairsville, in 1852. He was born in Ireland, in 1818, and came to the state of New York, in 1851. He was married in the latter year to Mary Golden, daughter of John Golden. Their children were: Hugh; John; Mary, d.; and Lawrence, d.; Peter, was a partner for nine years with Abraham Milhouser, in the restaurant and confectionery business, and since that time, has been in the same line by himself.

Rev. Lawrence Swan.—Samuel Swan was born of a Scotch father and a New England mother, (Miss Ball), in the British West India island, of Dominica, in 1798. Dying on the 5th of August, 1877, he attained the age of seventy-eight years, eight months and five days. His father migrated from Scotland to New York, about the beginning of the Revolution, where he successfully engaged in commercial pursuits for several years. Our subject graduated at the University of Glasgow, when about nineteen years of age, and from Princeton Theological Seminary, in the usual course. In 1824, he became the pastor of Fairfield, Ligonier and Donegal churches, in Westmoreland county, succeeding the Rev. George Hill, deceased. He remained until October 5th, 1841. About 1849, he met with an accident which lamed him for life, and for this reason, it was impossible for him to attend all his congregations. His charge was about to be divided when he accepted the pastorate of the Presbyterian church, at Johnstown. On the 18th of April, 1852, he resigned the latter charge, and after a brief pastorate at Armagh, removed to Leland, La Salle county, Illinois, where he continued to preach for several years, although without a regular stated congregation. He removed to Blairsville, in order to educate his children, and continued to preach occasionally in the pulpit of a Presbyterian brother, till a short time before his death in 1877. Mr. Swan was married twice; first to Sarah Moorhead, daughter of Samuel Moorhead, Esq., who died in Johnstown, and second, to Mary Priestly, daughter of Shepley Priestley, of Johnstown. The latter lady died in 1867, in Aurora, Illinois, where Mr. Swan had removed, in order to educate his children. Mr. Swan, was an earnest, scholarly, and devoted minister. He preached many sermons, but never one that was not fully prepared.

D. MCCLURE FAIR was born in Burrell township, in 1846, and was a son of James and Harriet Fair, nee Smith, a daughter of Daniel Smith. The former was born in 1819, in Derry township, Westmoreland county. The latter died in 1878, in her sixtieth year. James was the son of Samuel and Anna Fair, nee Campbell. The former was a native of eastern Pennsylvania, and migrated to Westmoreland county, removing thence in 1831 to Indiana county. He died in 1872, eighty-five years old; his widow is yet living at an advanced age, near Reed Station, I. B. Railroad. Our subject was married in Kansas in 1872, to Addie M. Phillips, daughter of Henry and Minerva Phillips, nee Bacon, of Fowler, Trumbull county, Ohio. Their children are: Harriet May, Howard McLure and Wallace Henry. Mr. Fair worked at his trade as a carpenter four and a half years, in Kansas, Nebraska and the territories; he assisted in building bridges and shops on the U. P. railroad, and returned to the county in 1872, and in 1874 located in Blairsville.

DAVID SIMPSON was born in county Derry, Ireland, in 1811, and was a son of Robert and Margaret Simpson. He served an apprenticeship as a tailor under Samuel Simpson, of Killy Loo, and left him and came to a brother, John Simpson, and worked with the latter for several years, under instruction. To illustrate the changing nature of a journeyman's career, we will mention a portion of the places in which he worked: In 1833, he migrated to St. John's, New Brunswick; waited there a long time, finding no work; came then on a schooner to Philadelphia, paying the passage of three comrades who had no money; worked in Philadelphia a few years and then sent the passage money for his father and family, who became soon thereafter citizens of Philadelphia; went to Baltimore, remaining eighteen months; Ellicott's Mills, Md., being his next location, removing from there to Philadelphia, where he engaged in the business with his brother, William H. as a partner; his first location was on the corner of Seventh and Pine, and removing from thence to Sixth, between Spruce and Pine. We next find him successively in Wilmington, North Carolina, New York city, Philadelphia, Lancaster, Harrisburg, Lewistown, Hollidaysburg, Loysburg, Bedford county (meanwhile teaching the art of cutting), Newry, Blair county, and Johnstown, arriving in the latter place in 1842. Here he was a cutter, tailor, and subsequently engaged in the business for fifteen years. He erected five shops on the island, all being destroyed by fire; he built the "Mansion House," now kept by Joseph Shoemaker. He then engaged in farming, at the intersection, having purchased the Samuel Black farm. Selling this he bought the Rev. Lewis' farm, and again disposing of this property, he purchased the John B. Ogden farm of 250 acres, situated in the Ligonier valley, and exchanged it for the George Allison tract, receiving a premium of eight thousand dollars. His mother died at the age of ninety-six. He was married in 1841 to Lucinda Gamble, who died in 1853, thirty-seven years old; again married in 1855 to Mary Peebles. His children were: Margaret, d.; James, d.; John M., d.; Martha, m. to B. F. Davidson; William, m. to Lizzie Klingensmith; John, d.; Lizzie, teacher; Mary. J., George, Joseph, David, Emmett and Agnes.

SALTSBURG, CONEMAUGH TOWNSHIP.

The first survey in the vicinity of Saltsburg bears the date of June 20, 1769, and the application was made April 3, 1769, by William Gray. The tract was called "Gray's Mount," and was conveyed to J. Montgomery, May 8, 1772. A portion of the land is now owned by the Robinson heirs. The survey is numbered "363" and the tract is described as "situate westward of 'Black Legg's Town,' and on the north side of a small run, including several small springs." An Indian trail is shown on the plat as proceeding toward Fort Pitt. The survey is signed "Robert McCrea, D. S."

In the same year an application was made for a survey for a large tract lying between "Black Leggs Creek" and Kiskiminetas and Conemaugh rivers (on part of which Saltsburg was afterward located), by Hugh and Thomas Wilson, to whom, we are informed by Woodend, the warrant and patent were afterwards granted.

At this time the "wilderness was scarcely broken by the white man's foot." "Wild animals of every description adapted to this latitude roamed the forests in countless numbers." The purchase of 1768 had called attention to the back woods, and now the law of 1769, permitting the application of surveys, was immediately taken advantage of by many hardy pioneers who rolled the wave of emigration so rapidly that in 1773, Westmoreland county was organized and a settlement was extended on the upper portion of the river. But the frequent attacks of the savages forced the people often to retire to the older settlements, and there was no security of life or property till after the treaty of 1795.

These early pioneers were generally Scotch-Irish, and according to Findley, "were a more sober, orderly people than commonly happens in the first settlement of a new country. A great proportion were farmers' sons, who emigrated from the old countries, and who were generally acquainted with each other."

About the years 1795 to 1798, a Mrs. Deemer made the discovery of salt water rising from the earth into a pond on the north bank of the Conemaugh river, about a mile above the present site of Saltsburg, and proved the fact by evaporating the water and producing a fair sample of salt. A new era now dawned upon the little community scattered along this valley. That condiment so necessary for human comfort and health, which they had been wont to pack over the mountains on horseback and retail at twelve cents per half pint, could now be had for the working.

In November, 1798, William Johnston commenced the manufacture of salt on a small scale, in the vicinity of the discovery of the first salt water. But little was accomplished, and as far as we can learn from his books of 1798 to 1812, no wells were sunk until in July of the latter year. The first well is now some distance out in the channel opposite the "point." The continued washing away of the bottom land having considerably enlarged the channel. We herewith present his "Salt Works Account*."

*"Subsequently about the year 1813, (J. D. Rupp, in History of Cumberland and other Counties,) when salt, in consequence of the war, was extravagantly high, Mr. Johnston, who, it seems, had abandoned the first operations, determined again to perforate rock, and ascertain whether there was not some valuable fountain from where all these oozings issued. He commenced operations on the bank of the Conemaugh, near the mouth of Loyalhanna, and persevered until he had reached the depth of four hundred and fifty feet, through various strata of hard rock, when he struck an abundant fountain, strongly impregnated with salt. He immediately proceeded to tubing the perforations, to exclude the fresh water, erecting furnaces, pans and other fixtures, and was soon in the full tide of successful experiment, making about thirty bushels per day, all of which was eagerly purchased at a high price.

Mr. Johnson's success induced many others to embark in the same business, most of whom were successful. Very soon the silent and solitary banks of the river were all bustle, life and enterprise. Well after well was sunk; competition ran high, and brought the price of the article lower and lower, until it was reduced to one dollar per barrel. This was too low. Some establishments were abandoned, others were carried on amidst every difficulty. However, a reaction, which was naturally expected, at last took place; the price was fixed at two dollars per barrel, which afforded a fair profit. The business regained its former spirit, and the quantity manufactured rapidly increased, and is still increasing (1848).

The wells or perforations are from three hundred to six hundred feet in depth, and about two and a half or three inches in diameter. They are made with a common stone chisel attached to poles. The operation is generally performed by hand, by striking the chisel forcibly upon the bottom. It is a tedious, laborious, and expensive operation; often requiring the labor of two men for more than a year. When water of the required strength and in sufficient quantity is obtained, the well is tubed, to exclude the fresh water, and a pump in-

1812
July 20.	To scantling, 456 feet at 7-6 per hundred	$4	56
	To weather-boarding and lathes, 718 feet at 60 cents per hundred	4	30
	To flooring board, at 80 cts. pr. hundred, 160 ft.	1	27
	To Jacob Werter, 2 days	1	33
	To William John, 3 days	1	86
	To one pump	1	25
July 27.	To cash paid to Mr. Deamer	1	25
	To 7 gallons of whisky, at sundries	3	50
	To one auger weighing 47 lbs.	5	87½
	To one bucket and barley		50
	To Wm. John, four days at the works	2	00
Aug. 4.	To 3 bushels wheat to Mrs. Deamer	2	40
16.	To 49 lbs. of iron, bt. of Mr. Reed	3	92
	To cash pd. James Reed, for steel	1	16½
18.	To iron got of Hiney, at sundries, 23¾ lbs. and ¾ of steel	2	15
23.	To 3 bushels of wheat	3	00
22.	To 65 lbs. of beef at 3d. per lb.	2	16½
24.	To 5 gallons of whisky	2	50
28.	To Wm. Jon, 1½ days making poles	1	10
29.	To three bushels wheat	3	00
	To one bar of iron to Pierce Carson, weighing 49¼ lbs.	4	00
	To cash pd. George Demir for work	1	71
	To 4 lbs. lead		75
	To 3 bushels wheat to Goarly	3	00
Sept. 4.	To 84 lbs. of beef at 3d per lb.	2	30
	To 13 lbs. of salt to Mrs. Deemer		65
11.	Three bushels wheat	3	00
16.	To two bushels wheat from Frederick, jun'r.	2	00
	To 14 lbs. mutton, at 3 per lb		46
19.	To 65 lbs. of beef, at 3 per lb.	2	18
	To 1 gallon whisky		50
	To 1 lb. of tobacco for the boys		25
27.	To 35 lbs. of iron	2	00
	To 1 gallon whisky		50
Nov. 2.	To 71 lbs. of beef, at 3d per lb.	2	37
	To 10 lbs. of beef and 13 lbs. of salt to Frederick		98
6.	To 1 bar of iron, not weighed
14.	To 1 gallon of whisky		50
16.	To 1 bed cord		50
	To 2 gallons whisky to old Mr. Deemer	1	00
19.	To ½ gallon whisky		25
	To 2 bushels of wheat, to Frederick, Jun'r	2	00
Nov. 7.	To 9 lbs. of salt and ½ gallon of whisky.		70
28.	To 1 bar of iron, weighing 21 lbs.	1	60
30.	To 3 lbs. of tobacco for the boys		75
Nov. 2.	To cash for the pipe	4	00
	To ½ gallon whisky		25
	To 1 bushel of corn, to Froderick, Jun'r		50
26.	To cash to old Frederick	5	00
	To cash to Phillip, at sundries	8	00
	To cash paid Henry Varner, at sundries	7	50
Dec. 3.	To 2 lbs. of coffee, to Frederick, Jun'r		61
	To soles for his shoes		33
	To 1 log chain	2	50
25.	To 1 gallon whisky to old Frederick		50
26.	To cash pd. Henry Varner and 2 lbs. tobacco	2	50
	To cash pd. Frederick, Jun'r	5	00
1813
Jan. 13.	To 1½ bush. of buckwheat, to Frederick, Jun'r		60
Feb. 10.	To 2 bushels of wheat, to Frederick, Jun'r.	2	00
Apr. 30.	Paid Pierce Carson for sundries, per bill	19	11
	Cash paid for the boilers	50	00
Apr. 30.	Carriage for the same	$2	50
	To cash pd. old Frederick	5	00
	To work done in August, by my hands	7	50
	To 1 cistern
	To 6 quarts of whisky, at sundries		80
	To 1 trip to Mason's	3	75
	To 2 trips to Pittsburgh	10	75
Oct. 2.	To cash to Daniel Keeley	5	00
	To beef to Mrs. Deer, 43 lbs. at 3d	1	43
9.	To cash to William White, for hauling tools.	3	00
	To work done by Wm. John and Philly Cline	4	60
	To 13 quarts of whisky at sundries	1	62½
	To 1½ days hauling at $1 52 cts	2	25
	To cash pd. George Uncapher for Frederick	2	70
	To tallow and sole leather		50
	To cash pd. James Patton, for 147 lbs. iron, at 8 cts	11	76
	To cash pd. the pump makers	18	12½
Oct. 9.	To 160 feet oak boards	1	60
	To 5 lbs of spikes		65
	To ½ gallon of whisky		31
11.	To 1 gallon to Frederick		62
	To 13 lbs. of salt to Andrew McCurdy		91
13.	To 3 quarts of whisky, at sundries		45
15.	To 9 lbs. of salt to James Painter
	To 75 feet of plank		80
	To 1 gallon of whisky at sundries		32
	To 1 barrel flour	5	00
	To 3 bushels of lye to John Pits	1	50
	To 2 days work of Wm. John and Cline	2	00
16.	To 1 patren and poles	1	80
	To expenses going to Ligonier	2	50
Dec. 12.	To cash pd. James Harshany for moving	3	33
	Daniel Keely, in acct. with William Johnston
17.	To one day hauling wood and chopping lane.		90
	To Wm. Woods, one day chopping wood		40
	To one quart of whisky
Mar. 20.	To one quart of whisky
Apr. 12.	To salt, at $3 50 per bbl.
May	To cash in Pit	2	00
22.	To cash on the saw mill	5	00

In May, 1813, the manufacture of salt by evaporation from kettles or pans was commenced in earnest. Of the ultimate financial success growing out of the enterprise we have no data, but Mr. Johnston was reputed to be wealthy, and lived and died in the homestead at "Point Pleasant," within a few yards of where the Loyalhanna empties into the Conemaugh.

The depth at which salt water is reached in this locality is from five hundred to eight hundred feet, and with the spring pole and the rude appliances of that early day one may well imagine the difficulties that beset the putting down of the first well.

In 1842 the product of salt in Indiana county had reached seventy thousand bushels. We doubt if the product will reach half that amount at the present time.

In time, as the country became settled, other parties sunk wells and engaged in the business. In 1830 twenty-one salt manufacturing establishments were in successful operation within two miles of the present site of the town. The valley in which they were located is wild and forbidding in its aspect, but the wealth that was supposed to lie hid away down among the rocks dispelled the wildness of the scenery, and magically metamorphosed it into an elysium. It was populated with a hardy race of people, whose perseverance knew no bounds and were content with what they got.

The discovery and manufacture of salt has its parallel in the discovery of petroleum, and men were moved by the same motives to seek the precious fluid, with the prospect of failure always rising up before them, and in some instances proving a stern reality.

In the winter of 1816-17, Andrew Boggs, father of the late Judge Jackson Boggs, of Kittanning, who had purchased a considerable body of land and located upon it, at this place, laid out and sold the first town lots. In a short time a town began to rise from the woods. From its inception, by common serted, which formerly was worked by horse power, but now more commonly by a small steam engine. The water is first boiled in large square sheet iron pans, until it attains a strength but little short of crystallization; from these pans it is transferred to large cisterns, in which the sediment is deposited; thence purified, it is put into large kettles placed in the rear of the pans, in which it soon becomes crystallized without any further attention. I have often watched this curious process of crystallization. Spear after spear, of the most delicate structure and fantastic shape, will dart into existence as if by magic; the process becomes more and more rapid every moment; presently it looks confused and muddy, then, almost before he is aware, the spectator finds his eye fixed on a kettle of salt.

---

Sufficient water is drawn from one well to supply from three to five pans, making from fifteen to twenty barrels daily. About thirty gallons are usually evaporated to every bushel Coal is exclusively used as the fuel, nature having provided it in exhaustless abundance, and as convenient to the works as could be desired. At many of them it is thrown from the mouth of the pit into chutes, through which it descends by its own gravity to the side of the furnaces.

In this vicinity and on Black-lick creek, a few miles from Blairsville, there is evidence of an abundant source of copperas, though there is no regular manufacture."

consent, it received the name of Saltsburg, purely from the great interest which at that early day absorbed the attention of the people of this locality. At the time of the first sale, January, 1817, one lot was deeded to the "congregation of Saltsburg," there being no other religious denomination here, it would seem, but Presbyterians.

The first house was erected in 1819–20, on the lot now occupied by the Presbyterian church. It stood in the rear of the site of the church. The first tavern was opened in 1820, by John Williams, who only remained a short time. He remained away till about the time of the building of the canal, and again made an attempt at the tavern business. He was succeeded by Isaac Fitzgerald, who left in 1831. Both of these houses were rude cabins, and were illy constructed to afford much entertainment for the weary traveler.

John Carson, about 1827, was the first tailor. Joseph Anderson, in 1831, was his successor. He also was among the early landlords. The first blacksmith was Daniel Davis.

The first canal boats that reached Saltsburg were the "Pioneer" and "Pennsylvania" of David Leech's line, on the 15th of May, 1829. They proceeded as far as Blairsville and returned to Saltsburg.

The first merchant was George Johnston, in 1829. In 1831, the merchants were. Edward Carlton, George Johnston and Robert McIlwain, the latter receiving as partner in that year William McIlwain, who continued in business till 1875.

In that year a small school was kept in a little log house which still stands near the trestle work of the railroad bridge. Abner Whittlesey was the first and John Bucklin the second teacher.

Weaver did the tanning, and made hats. A story is told of his preparing a wonderful hat out of the shaggy coat of a colt. Simon Drum was the next tanner. His tannery was in the rear of the Earhart House. The population was about fifty, and there was not to exceed twenty houses. There was not a located physician. Dr. Kirkpatrick, of Salem, occasionally visited the place, when the disease was "beyond the usual home relief."

For several years after the completion of the canal, and the opening up of navigation through the main line from Harrisburg to Pittsburgh, no business of any importance marked the history of Saltsburg, save the boat building industry.

In 1835-6, Robert Young, Butler Myers, Jacob Newhouse and others leased several acres of ground above Point street, and prepared a yard for the construction of canal boats, and for a number of years this business was vigorously pushed forward. Some of the finest and most symmetrical heavy freight boats on the canal were constructed in this yard. It gave employment to quite a number of workers in wood, and added no little to the progress and improvement of the town. With the invention of section boats, constructed in three or four compartments, which were clasped together for navigation, and separated and placed on trucks for conveyance over railroads to save reshipment of freight, the boat building interest received an impetus.

Ways were erected for the purpose of drawing boats from the water for repairs, and this in connection with the construction yard, gave employment to a large number of laborers summer and winter. This enterprise continued quite vigorously until the purchase of the main line by the P. R. R. Co., when the business was abandoned.

The first tin smith and stove dealer was S. S. Moore, in 1846, who still continues in business. The first postmaster was Philip Mecklin, an early merchant, in 1832. His successors were R. R. McCrea, William Fleming, William McIntire, R. A. Young, J. S. Robinson, and S. S. Moore, the present incumbent.

In 1833, Saltsburg, according to the Pennsylvania Gazetteer, was a "post town in Conemaugh township, Indiana county, on the east bank of the Conemaugh river, ten miles northwest of Blairsville, seventeen miles southwest of Indiana, 206 miles from Washington City, 175 miles from Harrisburg; contains twenty dwellings, two stores, two taverns and one Presbyterian Church. Philip Mecklin is postmaster. It receives its name from the many salt works in the vicinity."

During a period dating from about 1840, up to the sale of the main line of the canal, a large grain commission business was conducted at the place, and commodious warehouse facilities attracted business from a large area of territory.

ASSESSMENT OF SALTSBURG FOR 1845.

Joseph Anderson, Joseph Alcorn, Wm. Armstrong, John Askum, James Alcorn, John T. Buell, Butterfield, clerk; John Black, James Black, John W. Crofford, Matthew Crofford, Alex. Cannon, Hezekiah Carnehen, Edward Carlton, Edward Coad, Samuel Carpenter, Adam Daugherty, Daniel K. Daugherty, Wm. Dickey, Esq.; James K. Daugherty, Samuel Duncan, Samuel Davis, Frederick Dunhouse, Alexander Duncan, Maxwell Dickey, James, Daugherty, cooper; Philip Earhart, Alex. Fleming, James French, Farrin & McVay, John Farrin, Samuel Forgeson, Duncan Graham, John Guthrie, Isaac Gosset, Hugh Gray, John Graham, James Gailey, Robert P. Hunter, Francis Holleroo, Wm. Hart, James Hart, John Harold, Watson Hughes, David Henderson, Caleb Ingman, James K. Johnston, Robert Johnston, R. W. Jones, Thomas Jeffery, Wm. Jeffery, Hugh Kelly, John Keene, Thomas Keene, James Keer, Jacob Keer, Adam Long, Wm. Lytle, Nelson B. Laughrey, Joseph Laughrey & Son, George Low, Wm. Laughery, Robert Loman, Thos. Murky, James McLaughlin, John M. Marshall, David McJunkins, James Mares, McFarlan & McCray, drug store; John McFarland, doctor; Wm. McFarland, Robert McIlwain, storehouse and warehouse, Robert K. McCrea, warehouse; Leonard McCune, Wm. McIlwaine, warehouse; John McIlwain, store; Thomas McCray, Esq.; Philip Macklin, John Martin, John Maher, John Maher & Co., store; John McGuier, Wm. McVay, Robert Miller, Jacob Newhouse, Matthew Perry, Jeremiah Phillips, John Pool, Johnston S. Robeson, James Robeson, James Rhae, Adam Ringle, Alfred Royer, Thomas W Robeson, John Robeinson, Wm. Robeinson, John M. Robison & Co., steam mill; Thomas Robinson & Co., tan-yard; Wm. Shilds, Wm. Sandels, Wm. Singley, Daniel Stutchel, Archibald Stuart, shop and warehouse; Will Stuart, shops; Marshel Shields, Wm. Sample, Robert Sare, Polly Taylour, George Taylour, Wm. Taylour, Alexander Thompson, John I. Taylour, John Vanhorn, Miss Nancy White, John White, Thomas Watson, Absalom Woodward, John Woods, Joseph Walkinshaw, Jacob Weaston, Daniel Walter.

FERRIES AND BRIDGES.

The first ferry in the vicinity of the city of Saltsburg was on the "Keesk' kshee-man nit'toos," which signifies "Cut Spirit," (or in modern vernacular, Kiskiminetas—or itis,) near the junction of the "La el' han' neck," or "Middle creek," and "Quin nim mough" koong, or "Can na maugh," (latterly spelled "Conemaugh") or "Otter creek," according to its Indian meaning. Who managed this ferry we cannot definitely state, but the names of Johnston, Deemer, Robinson and others are associated with it long before Andrew Armstrong, a colored man, had located his ferry near the present site of the W. P. railroad bridge. The latter began to carry passengers about 1816 or 1817. His charges were: "Man, 6 cents; horse, 10 cents; and horse and wagon, 25 cents." The next ferry was commenced in 1836 by James Daugherty, who kept a hotel on the river bank; his ferry was located immediately below the toll bridge.

The first bridge at Saltsburg was the present toll bridge, erected in 1842, at an expense of $10,000, by the Saltsburg Bridge Company. Absalom Woodward was the contractor. Daniel McKean was master carpenter, and John Stoops master mason. It consists of two spans, each being one hundred and fifty feet in length. The first officials were: President, Alex. White; Treasurer, William McIlwain, and Secretary, William Dickey. The present board of officials are: President, Wm. McIlwain; Secretary, John Martin, and Treasurer, William R. McIlwain. The toll for two horses and wagon is ten cents; half rates are allowed to all persons hauling coal, stone, etc., into Saltsburg.

The first bridge over the Loyalhanna, at the "point," was built about 1820, on wooden bents, by Jacob Weister. It was about one hundred feet in length, and consisted of a single roadway. The present structure was erected in 1847, and is a county free bridge.

The Western Pennsylvania Railroad bridge was erected in 1855. Major S. S. Jameson was the contractor, and John Martin the principal mason. The officers in charge were: Chief engineer, S. H. Kneass; principal assistant, G. B. Roberts, and Thomas B. Bond, jr., assistant engineer.

THE OLD BURIAL GROUND*

Is situated on the southern limit of the borough, on the bank of the Conemaugh river. When this spot was chosen, probably about 1810, it was a pleasant and convenient place for the dead. In the course of years, the surveys for the Pennsylvania canal traversed the bank of the river, and the final location of the improvement penetrated the sacred spot, resulting in the exhumation of some of the bodies, and rendering the place no longer untenable. But two graves of all who were interred there have been preserved with any indications of care, and they are surrounded by a small enclosure. There is a plain stone tablet over each of the graves, each bearing an inscription. The first and oldest is erected—

"In memory of Mrs. Jane Boggs, Consort of Andrew Boggs, Esq., who departed this life, June 3, 1821, aged 36 years."

The second is—

"Sacred to the memory of Major John Johnston, who departed this life, Oct 21, 1826, in the 79th year of his age."

THE NEW BURIAL GROUND.†

Between the years 1817 and 1820, interments were made in the grounds adjacent to the Stone Presbyterian church. The lot, containing about half an acre, was purchased by Matthias Rombach at a sheriff's sale of the real estate of Jacob Drum, and by him deeded, April 6, 1839, to Alexander White, in trust for the citizens of Saltsburg and vicinity as a burial ground. For years the ground lay open. Those who interred their dead in it, enclosed with wooden structures the small space chosen for the purpose, to preserve it from the trespass of animals. On Sunday, April 1, 1832, the church was destroyed by fire, A west wind prevailing, many of the wooden enclosures were burned. The cemetery was afterwards surrounded by a rough wooden fence.

EDGEWOOD CEMETERY.†

The burial ground at the Presbyterian church, having become crowded to excess, it was deemed expedient to purchase a larger body of ground, and lay it off in systematic order for cemetery purposes.

Having this object in view, an organization of a cemetery company was effected in 1868, and the purchase of suitable and convenient grounds made.

The area selected for this purpose lies within a quarter of a mile of the eastern limit of the borough line, south of the Indiana road, extending to the brink of the precipice at the river, and contains about ten acres. It was purchased from R. R. McCrea, at the price of one hundred and fifty dollars per acre, and is well situated for the purpose for which it is intended.

The grounds were laid out in streets avenues and lots, with Quaker precision, (the streets running at right angles), by J. S. Robinson and S. S. Portser, whose correct judgements are made apparent in the substantial conveniences of the whole plan and execution of the work.

"Saltsburg Cemetery," was the original name adopted, which was in 1869, supplemented by that of "Edgewood Cemetery," "Long Centre" street, sixteen feet wide, traverses the length of the ground north and south, and "Short Centre," crosses the same, east and west. On each side of these streets, and around the circular lot in the centre of the ground, set apart for the soldiers' monument, is reserved a margin of six feet, for trees, shrubbery and flowers, a design which is to be carried out by a like arrangement surrounding the whole area.

The "Margin" streets are thirteen feet, and the "Avenues" are five feet wide. There are six hundred and five lots, twenty feet square, and an entrance is secured to each one, from either a street or an avenue. A lot seventy-five by one hundred and twenty feet, situated on the western side of the cemetery is set apart for a single burial ground.

On a lot forty by eighty-five feet, in the north-western corner, in front of the entrance at the small gate, is located the "Lodge"—a building for the reception of funerals in inclement weather. The present building is merely a temporary structure, it being the design of the Association to erect a more substantial and fitting edifice in the future.

The following named officers represent the organization of Edgewood Cemetery: President, W. I. Sterett; Vice-president John Martin; Secretary, S. S. Portser; Treasurer, J. S. Robinson; Auditor, William McQuisson; Board of Managers, W. I. Sterett, John Martin, S. S. Portser, J. S. Robinson, H. Clark, J. Y. Nowry, S. B. Mercer, William McQuiston, and W. R. McIlwain.

THE SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.*

One of the principal, and certainly the most attractive feature in the beautification of the cemetery is the soldiers' monument. It is situated in a central circular lot, laid out and reserved for the purpose. The central diameter of the space upon which the monument has its foundation is twenty feet, while the whole diameter of the circle, embracing the ground for the purpose, is one hundred and thirty-five feet.

The base of the monument, pyramidal in form, and about five feet in height, is constructed of layers of gray sandstone, having a corrugated surface. This is surmounted with a die and cornice, three feet and four inches square and six feet high, upon which is engraven the inscriptions, viz:

NORTH PANEL.

"Behind this slab a box contains
The deeds of men, likewise the names,
Who nobly for their country's cause,
In vindication of her laws,
Which now commands the world's applause,
Risked their lives.

Some still are living, some are dead,
No Spartan crown to deck their heads;
But a grateful people from memory dear,
Around this shaft will drop a tear.
Requiescat in pace."

WEST PANEL.

"In memory of the soldiers of this vicinity, who fought and died to save our country.
All honor to their memory, so noble and so brave, may God protect the country they gave their lives to save."

*For this and much other valuable matter, we are indebted to John McWilliams, of the "Saltsburg Press." He is a lover of "local history," and his paper is replete with interesting sketches of the past. †"Saltsburg Press."

*Saltsburg Press.

SOUTH PANEL.

"Those brave men, to whose honor this monument is erected, leave a history of their achievements written upon the hearts of their countrymen for all time."

EAST PANEL.

"Liberty, to be perpetuated, must be protected. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

They are free whom the truth makes free: All else are slaves beside."

Upon this die is placed an obelisk twenty-five feet high, of gray sandstone, with a corrugated finish, on the apex of which is placed a bronze globe, standing upon which is a bronze eagle, with outstretched pinions, in the attitude of preparing to soar upward.

The names of the soldiers from the immediate vicinity who sacrificed their lives in the service of their country are enclosed in a box in the base of the monument.

The monument was erected under the supervision of the board of managers of the association, John Martin being the contractor, the author of the inscriptions and the architect. The subscriptions for building the monument were paid into the managers' hands for that purpose.

The monument is plain and unpretending, yet imposing, and a characteristic emblem of the fearless spirits whose deeds it is intended to commemorate.

Around the base of the monument the space is ornamented with evergreens, flowers and appropriate devices of art, to render the place a fitting memorial for the patriotic dead.

THE SALTSBURG ACADEMY

Was established in 1851. In that year the brick building, fifty-two feet long by thirty wide and two stories in height, with a cupola, was erected at an expense of thirty-three hundred dollars. The stock was divided into shares of twenty-five dollars, in order to permit persons of limited means to become interested in its operations. The incorporators were: Adam Robinson, William Stewart, J. W. Robinson, S. S. Jamison, Rev. W. W. Woodend, J. S. Robinson and John M. Marshall.

The school opened in May, 1852, with seventy-five scholars, Rev. W. W. Woodend being the principal, and president board of trustees; J. Allen Brown and wife, Mrs. Amanda C. Brown, assistants.

Rev. Mr. Woodend (afterward Dr. Woodend) continued as principal for seven years. His successors were: J. H. Stokes, principal; Belle Dunlap, assistant; Dana, principal; G. W. Chalfant, principal; Louis L. Williams, principal, and daughter; Albert Brown, principal; J. W. Foster, principal; S. B. Mercer, principal; Rev. Dr. Woodend, principal, and Frank E. Dow, M. D., assistant; Robert Harvey, principal, and wife; S. B. Mercer, principal; G. C. McJunkin, principal; and in 1879, William J. Alexander, principal, and John M. Leech, assistant. The latter are graduates of Lafayette College in the class of 1878.

The number of students in the present session is seventy-five.

In 1870 the Presbyterian Church purchased the shareholders' interest, renovated and refurnished the building and changed the name to the "Memorial Institute."

Prior to the organization of the academy only one professional man had gone from Saltsburg's population, but since the inauguration of the "new order of things," over thirty have adopted professional life.

At that time there were only five academies between the Allegheny river and the mountains, now there are seventy-three.

HAIL CLARK'S CARRIAGE FACTORY.

Previous to Mr. Clark's arrival, in 1848, Daniel Walter had a carriage shop, 20 by 60, on the lot east of Mr. Hart's residence. In the spring of 1849, the firm of Row, Clark & Kiester purchased the stock of Mr. Walter, and in 1850 they also bought the building and ground. In 1854, Mr. Keister retired from the firm, and in 1857, Mr. Row disposed of his interest to Mr. Clark, who has since conducted the business. The factory, 58 by 32, three stories in height, was erected in 1870. The repository, 88 by 32, two stories in height, was built in 1876. The trimming, painting and wood work are carried on in the main building. The smith shop, 48 by 28, has three forges. The drying shed's dimensions are 51 by 22, and the space under the repository is utilized for drying lumber.

The best of material, the most expert workmen and improved machinery, are here used to manufacture any and all styles of carriages used in this section of country. From 1867 to 1873, twenty men were employed, and the gross trade was $18,000. In 1878, six men were employed, and the business was proportionately less. In 1873, he built a carriage repository, 30 by 50, one story, in Indiana. In 1874, he erected another, 60 by 24, two stories, in Butler, Butler county. Owing to the pressure of the times, he was forced to abandon these branches and concentrate his energies in Saltsburg.

THE FOUNDRY OF RODGER & BLANK was erected in 1850 by Andrew Steele. In 1851, when Mr. Rodger arrived, it was a small affair, using two horses to "raise" the blast furnace, and employing two laborers. Mr. Rodger purchased it in July, 1851, and in 1853, Valentine Blank became connected with the firm. They employ an eight-horse power engine and three men, and their trade comes from Indiana, Westmoreland and Armstrong counties. They manufacture stoves, plow castings, and general country work, most of their orders demanding heavy castings. For plow castings, they have a capacity of one hundred per day.

THE J. R. REED TANNERY was erected in 1847, and has been managed by him since that date. It is on the bank of the Conemaugh, between it and the old canal. Six hundred hides are tanned annually in the thirty-two vats. The first permanent tannery in Saltsburg was the Simon Drum, located on Point street, in the rear of what is now the Earhart hotel. He was succeeded by John Guthrie in the same location. Thomas and John Robinson had the third tannery, on the site of Hudson's carpenter shop, on the bank of the canal. The J. R. Reed was the fourth tannery.

SALTSBURG BOROUGH.

Date of incorporation, 1838. First election, August 11, 1838. Second election, April 16, 1839. Regular election, third Tuesday of February of each year.

1838—Burgess, Dr. Thomas Murray; assistant burgess, Alex. White. Council, Jacob Whister, Wm. McIlwain, Jas. B. Robinson, Jos. Anderson, James McLaughlin, Robert McIlwain.

1839—Burgess, Dr. Thomas Murray; assistant burgess, Alex. White. Council, James B. Robinson, Joseph Anderson, James McLaughlin, Robert McIlwain, John Vanhorn, Wm. Dickey.

1840—Chief burgess, Alex. White; assistant burgess, Robert L. Johnson. Council, James McLaughlin, Robert McIlwain, John Vanhorn, Wm. Dickey, Thomas Robinson, Dr. Thomas Murray.

1841—Chief burgess, Dr. John McFarland; assistant burgess, Jacob Wiester. Council, John Vanhorn, Wm. Dickey, Thomas W. Robinson, Dr. Thos. Murray, Robert R. McCrea, Johnston S. Robinson.

1842—Chief burgess, Dr. John McFarland; assistant burgess, Nelson B. Loughrey. Council, Thomas W. Robinson, Thomas Campbell, R. R. McCrea, J. S. Robinson, D. Henderson, William Dickey.

1843—Chief burgess, Thompson McCrea; assistant burgess, James R. Daugherty. Council, R. R. McCrea, J. S. Robinson, D. Henderson, Wm. Dickey, Jos. Anderson, Duncan Graham.

1844—Chief burgess, Thompson McCrea; assistant burgess, John M. Robinson. Council, David Henderson, Wm. Dickey, Esq., D. Graham, Joseph Anderson, Daniel R. Stitzel, John H. Robinson.

1845—Chief burgess, James R. Daugherty; assistant burgess, John M. Robinson. Council, D. Graham, D. R. Stitzel, John C. Black, Joseph Anderson, John H. Robinson, James Alcom.

1846—Chief burgess, David Henderson; assistant burgess, J. S. Robinson. Council, D. R. Stitzel, John C. Black, Wm. Loughrey, John H. Robinson, James Alcom, Isaac Gossar.

1847—Chief burgess, D. Henderson; assistant burgess Joseph Anderson. Council, James McLaughlin, Wm. Loughrey, Daniel K. Daugherty, James Alcom, Isaac Gossar, James G. McQuaide.

1848—Chief burgess, James R. Daugherty; assistant burgess, James Alcom. Council, J. Gossar, D. K. Daugherty, R. J. Taylor, Wm. Loughrey, James G. McQuaide, Wm. McQuiston.

1849—Chief burgess, Alex. Fleming; assistant burgess, Wm. Redpath. Council, J. G. McQuaide, R. J. Taylor, John M. Marshall, D. K. Daugherty, Wm. McQuiston, J. S. Robinson.

1850—Chief burgess, A. Fleming; assistant burgess, W. B. Sprague. Council, R. Taylor, John M. Marshall, F. Hollar, Wm. McQuiston, J. S. Robinson, Dr. D. Allison.

1851—Chief burgess, James M. Hart; assistant burgess, D. R. Stitzel. Council, J. M. Marshall, Dr. D. Allison, John Guthrie, J. S. Robinson, F. Hollar, Wm. C. Robinson.

1852—Chief burgess, James M. Hart; assistant burgess, D. R. Stitzel. Council, James R. Porter, Wm. C. Robinson, D. Henderson, Dr. D. Allison, John Guthrie, Wm. Redpath.

1853—Chief burgess, Wm. McIntire; assistant burgess, Hale Clark. Council, W. C. Robinson, D. Henderson, John Maher, John Guthrie, Wm. Redpath, L. E. Freet.

1854—Chief burgess, Wm. R. Sprague; assistant burgess, Daniel K. Daugherty. Council, D. Henderson, J. M. Hart, John F. Kirkpatrick, Wm. Redpath, John Martin, Wm. J. Sterett.

1855—Chief burgess, J. S. Robinson; assistant burgess, D. K. Daugherty. Council, J. M, Hart, John Martin, John F. Kirkpatrick, W. I. Sterrett, S. S. Moore, Wm. McIlwain.

1856—Chief burgess, Jas. M. Hart; assistant burgess, J. S. Robinson. Council, J. F. Kirkpatrick, Wm. I. Sterrett, S. S. Moore, Wm. McIlwain, Shepherd Hawkins, H. W. Wier.

1857—Chief burgess, Jas. M. Hart; assistant burgess, C. S. Moore. Council, S. S. Moore, Wm. McIlwain, S. Hawkins, H. W. Wier, John Earhart, James Daugherty.

1858—Chief burgess, Jas. Moore; assistant burgess, William Moore. Council, S. M. Hawkins, Thos. Waddell, John Earhart, James Daugherty. W. I. Sterrett, John Read.

1859—Chief burgess, R. A. Young; assistant burgess, John Weaver. Council, John Earhart, Jas. Daugherty, Wm. I. Sterrett, John Read, Hail Clark, S. S. Portser.

1860—Chief burgess, R. A. Young; assistant burgess, H. J. Portser. Council, W. I. Sterrett, John Read, Hail Clark, S. S. Portser, C. S. Moore, Robert Campbell.

1861—Chief burgess, Jas. R. Daugherty; assistant burgess, Jas. Alcorn. Council, Hail Clark, S. S. Portser, C. S. Moore, D. K. Daugherty, Dr. John McFarland.

1862—Chief burgess, W. I. Sterrett; assistant burgess, Thos. Waddle. Council, C. S. Moore, D. K. Daugherty, John Martin, H. J. Portser, Joseph Andre.

1863—Chief burgess, John Earhart. Council, Jas. R. Daugherty, John Martin, H. J. Portser, H. Carnahan, James R. Porter, Joseph Andre.

1864—Chief burgess, A. Fleaming; assistant burgess, Sam'l H. Martin. Council, Jos. Andre, H. J. Portser, Jas. R. Portser, H. Carnahan, John Martin, Henry Blank.

1865—Chief burgess, Hail Clark; assistant burgess, Reuben J. Portser. Council, Jas. R. Porter, H. Carnahan, John Martin, H. Blank, S. S. Moore, George W. Freet.

1866—Chief burgess, A. Fleming; assistant burgess, Jas. B. Robinson. Council, John Martin, S. S. Moore, H. Blank, G. W. Freet, R. R. McCrea, John Campbell.

1867—Chief burgess, Jas. Moore; assistant burgess, John M. Robinson. Council, H. Blank, G. W. Freet, R. R. McCrea, Jno. Campbell, S. S. Moore, John Martin.

1868—Chief burgess, Jas. Moore; assistant burgess, John V. Blank. Council, R. R. McCrea, John Campbell, S. S. Moore, John Martin, Andrew Wilcox, H. J. Portser.

1869—Chief burgess, S. H. Martin; assistant burgess, John Read. Council, John Martin, S. S. Moore, H. J. Portser, A. Wilcox, Francis Laird, Wm. R. McIlwain.

1870—Chief burgess, Hail Clark; assistant burgess, R. J. Taylor. Council, H. J. Portser, F. Laird, Geo. W. Freet, A. Wilcox, W. R. McIlwain, James Alcorn, died August 22, 1870.

Election of October 11, 1870—Chief burgess, Wm. I. Sterett; assistant burgess, R. J. Taylor. Council, F. Laird, George W. Freet, Andrew Hessler, Wm. R. McIlwain, Archie Deery, Clarence Hart.

1872—Chief burgess, James B. Robinson; assistant burgess, James Daugherty. Council, Geo. W. Freet, A. Hessler, Joseph Andre, A. Deery, C. Hart, John Campbell, Esq.

1873—Chief burgess, R. A. Young, Esq.; assistant burgess, D. Henderson, Esq. Council, A. Hessler, Jos. Andre, R. J. Taylor, C. Hart, John Campbell, A. Wilcox.

1874—Chief burgess, Geo. W. Freet; assistant burgess, Samuel Taylor. Council, Jos. Andre, R. J. Taylor, James Henderson, John Campbell, A. Wilcox, H. F. Stear.

1875—Chief burgess, R. J. Portser; assistant burgess, T. E. McCrea. Council, R. J. Taylor, Jas. Hudson, S. S. Moore, A. Wilcox, H. F. Stear, Wm. G. McConnell.

1876—Chief burgess, Jas. Hart; assistant burgess, —— ——. Council, Jas. Hudson, S. S. Moore, W. R. McIlwain, H. F. Stear, W. G. McConnell, Geo. W. Reed.

1877—Chief Burgess, Jas. M. Hart; assistant burgess, S. S. Portser. Council, S. S. Moore, W. R. McIlwain, Joseph Andre, W. G. McConnell, Geo. W. Reed, J. C. Bleakney.

1878—Chief burgess, S. S. Portser; assistant burgess, John V. Blank. Council, W. R. McIlwain, Jos. Andre, Thomas B. Patton, George W. Reed, J. C. Blakney, A. Wilcox, died February, 1879.

1879—Chief burgess, Thomas M. Robinson; assistant burgess, W. S. Harris. Council, Jos. Andre, Thos. B. Patton, Thos. B. Martin, J. C. Bleakney, W. G. McConnell.

Williamson Lodge, F. & A. M., was instituted November 30, 5868, by W. W. Barr, D. G. M., assisted by C. Hoover, of Franklin, Venango county. The first officers were: W. M., Oliver P. Carson; Sr. W., C. Hart; Jr. W., Wm. H. Lyons; Treasurer, Hail Clark; Secretary, James A. Getty; Tyler, S. L. Graham. The present officers are: W. M., Dr. W. A. Spahr; Sr. W., John E. Elrick; Jr. W., W. T. Cline; Treasurer, John C. Pearce; Secretary, R. J. Irwin; Tyler, S. L. Graham.

The I. O. of O. F., No. 646, was instituted at Saltsburg, August 28, 1868, with the following officers: Noble Grand, William Portser; Vice Grand, James Hudson; Secretary, J. L. Crawford; assistant Secretary, C. Hart; Treasurer, Edward Johnston.

The K. of H., No. 165, was instituted October 1st, 1875. The present officers are: Dictator, J. Chambers Moore; V. D., Samuel Sindorf; A. D., William Caldwell; R., William M. Daugherty; F. R., James W. Kelly; T., G. W. Freet; C., R. J. Portser; Guide, John Kelly; G., William Blank; P. D., Dr. Thomas Carson.

The A. O. U. W., No. 97, was instituted May 11th, 1876. The present officers are: P. W., B. S. Kelly; W. M., O. Bear

F., J. R. Robinson; J. O., James McClaran; R., T. M. Dickie; F. J., A. Richards; Receiver, D. S. Robinson; J. G., S. Portser; O. G., Dr. Carson; Trustees, B. S. Kelly, John Kelly and J. H. Richards.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

R. FOSTER ROBINSON, Post No. 36, G. A. R., was mustered in July 5th, 1877, by Jr. V. D. C. Hazlet, assisted by Major W. W. Tyson, Past D. C., Hon. W. H. Graham, Major F. K. Patterson, and Captain Abe Patterson. J. L. Crawford was elected P. C. and John McWilliams was appointed adjutant.

During the great railroad riots of July, 1877, the comrades if the post tendered their services to the town authorities and did good service as guards for the protection of property.

The officers for 1880 are: P. C., James Kelly; S. V. C., John R. Robinson; J. V. C., T. Earhart; Surgeon, J. L. Crawford; Chaplain, George McMillen; O. D., Major R. J. Irwin; O. G., Captain Wm. Grabenstein; Adjutant, G. W. Myers; Q. M., Wm. M. Daugherty; Q. M. S., W. S. Harris; S. M., Wilson M. Piper.

Major Samuel Cooper is an honorary member of this post.

THE ROYAL ARCANUM, NO. 381,

Was instituted September 5th, 1879, by District Deputy, James. The officers were: Regent, W. H. Jenkins; Vice-regent, W. I. Sterett; Orator, S. A. Dickie; Guide, Major, R. J. Irwin; Chaplain, J. C. Pearce; Secretary, G. W. Martin; Collector, T. S. Pearce; Treasurer, R. A. Paul; Sentry, William Clark; Watch, George Sindorf.

The following officers of Saltsburg Council, No. 381, Royal Arcanum, were installed on Monday evening, January 12, 1880, by John H. Richards: Past-regent, W. H. Jenkins; Regent, W. I. Sterett; Vice-regent, S. A. Dickie; Orator, W. A. Clarke; Secretary, Dr. Thomas Carson; Treasurer, R. A. Paul; Collector, T. S. Pearce; Chaplain, G. W. Martin; Guide, R. J. Irwin; Sentry, A. E. Rhea; Watch, Henry Fennell; Trustees, John W. Robinson, S. S. Moore and T. R. Kirkdall.—Saltsburg Press.

THE SALTSBURG BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION,

Was organized on the 19th of April, 1873. The first officers were: President, D. S. Robinson; Treasurer, W. R. McIlwain, and Secretary, R. A. Paul. The Association has loaned over forty thousand dollars.

After the first year, R. A. Paul, resigned, and Major R. J. Irwin, was elected secretary, and has since continued in that position. The officers for 1880 are: President, D. Henderson; Treasurer, D. S. Robinson, and Secretary, R. J. Irwin.

The organization of this efficient society, was due to the energy and hard work of D. S. Robinson. So far it has been eminently successful, and its future no doubt will be a repetition of the past.

COMPANY "B," TENTH REGIMENT NATIONAL GUARDS.

This regiment was recruited in November, 1878, by Major R. J. Irwin, but owing to the re-organization of the militia at that time, it was not mustered into service till February 19th, 1879. The mustering officer was Col. C. W. Hazzard, Brigade Inspector. Major Irwin was elected captain, and the company under his command entered upon a course of weekly drills, which have occurred regularly to this date.

The present officers are: Captain R. J. Irwin; First Lieutenant, John E. Gill; Second Lieutenant, W. W. Graham, and First Sergeant, M. D. K. Barnett.

The "Armory" of the company is arranged in modern style, with all the conveniences that are strictly necessary. There are sixty-two cases or wardrobes, in which each soldier places his clothes, arms and equipments.

For efficiency in drill and soldierly bearing, the company takes rank among the best commands of the state.

MAJOR SAMUEL COOPER.

Samuel, a son of James and Rachel Cooper, nee Powers, was born in Shippensburg, Cumberland county, Pa., on the 2d of May, 1788. The family name is Cowper, but since about 1750 has been written Cooper. The great-grandfather of our subject was Samuel Cooper, who was for many years the commander of the Inniskillen Dragoons, in Ireland. His son Samuel, the grandfather of Major Cooper, was a captain in the Inniskillen Dragoons, and migrated to Carlisle, Pa., in 1761.

He was in Gen. Lee's "cavalry legion" in the Revolutionary war, and for several years was sword, drill and riding master for Gen. Lee's noted command. His son James, the father of our subject, was born in Inniskillen, Ireland. He was an orderly sergeant in a company in the Revolutionary war, which Captain John Wilkins (after whom Wilkinsburg, Allegheny county, Pa., was named) commanded. His first battle was the Brandywine, and his roll of engagements participated in, numbered many of the most closely contested battles of that noted period. Two of the brothers of James, William and John, were also in the same struggle. William received a grant of six hundred acres of land, situated on or near the present site of Cooperstown, Venango county, and John also had six hundred acres of the donation lands, his tract being located on Bear creek, Butler county. James would not accept of any lands or gratuities.

When Samuel was only an infant, his parents removed to Chambersburg, where they remained until 1804. In that year they removed to Pittsburgh. In 1833 his father, accompanied by his daughter Margaret, went to Dayton, Ohio, where he died about 1836, eighty years of age.

Samuel entered the army on the 10th of September, 1812, as captain of the "State Pittsburgh Blues," and with his company was mustered into the United States service, at Meadville, Crawford county, about ten days later. There were about two thousand men encamped at Meadville, under the command of Gen. Adamson Taneyhill, and from thence they marched toward "Black Rock," New York. Gen. Smythe was at the United States rendezvous, near Black Rock, with about two thousand regulars. Commodore Elliott was in command of the naval forces on Lake Erie at this point. Gen. Smythe desiring to cross the river and attack the English, sent to Gen. Taneyhill for volunteers to join the party about to storm the fort on the Canada side.

Gen. Taneyhill was ill, and also the colonels of each of the regiments forming the brigade, which numbered, as above stated, two thousand men. Capt. Cooper, feeling that the honor of his state was at stake, called together on the following morning his company, and drew it in line near the centre of the encampment. He made them a brief but earnest address and then called for volunteers. Not a man faltered; the company to a man, even the sick, advancing, stepped into line, and others of the brigade joined their ranks, till there were two hundred and twenty-five volunteers in line. These, under Major Harriet as commanding officer, were tendered to Gen. Smythe. The latter had now the thousand regulars, the marines and sailors under Commodore Elliott, six hundred Indians under Red Jacket, and the two hundred and twenty-five volunteers under Major Harriet.

Meanwhile the fleet had attacked the fort, and the marines and a forlorn hope commanded by Col. Winder had captured the batteries, but were forced to retire, as the enemy was too strong, and the orders from the war department were to the effect that "no forces were to be ordered on the Canada side as an attacking party without they numbered six thousand."

Captain Cooper and his company went into winter quarters at Buffalo, and in about two weeks were honorably discharged. They returned to Pittsburgh about Christmas, and though without blood-stained banners to herald their achievements, yet there was no blot on their record, and no excuses to make for inefficiency. At this time Captain Cooper received the brevet rank of major for his services, meritorious alike to his country and himself.

Early in 1813, he received an appointment as commissary and quartermaster. He shipped large quantities of flour to Harrison's army, and proceeded to the Miami valley of Ohio, and purchased thousands of hogs that were driven to Cleveland, there slaughtered and sent via the lake to Detroit. The army was out of provisions, and no doubt these supplies, coming at a time of little or no rations, had a good effect on the future career of the campaign that closed with such brilliant success. He furnished transportation and provisions for the troops sent eastward to Erie, and also for the army of the northwest. He was equal to all emergencies, and no causes were ever allowed to delay the sending forward of needed troops or supplies.

After the war was over, he returned to Pittsburgh, and in a short time we find him a partner with Lewis Dent, (the father-in-law of General Grant) in the general mercantile business at Elizabethtown, Allegheny county, where he continued fifteen months. Subsequently he was a book-keeper for Cromwell & Dobbin, at the Point warehouse, Pittsburgh, where he remained three years. About 1822, he went above the Barker's Salt Works, and in company with Christian Latshaw, a former warehouse merchant in Pittsburgh, commenced the manufacture of salt. Owing to the poor quality of the brine, and the reduced price of salt, at the expiration of eighteen months, both parties retiring with great loss.

Subsequently we find him teaching school in New Alexandria for two successive years. Again he retraces his steps to Pittsburgh, and for four years was a book-keeper for Baird, Alexander & Co., the well known wholesale dry goods house. He then became a partner with John Dennison and Alexander McClurg, in the general mercantile line, at Noblestown, Allegheny county, retiring from the business after the expiration of four years.

Afterward he was the proprietor of a hotel at Noblestown for two years, removing then to Pittsburgh, where he engaged in purchasing wheat for a steam grist mill. About this time he returned to New Alexandria and began the practice of the law, having, while a former resident of the place, read law with John B. Alexander, and been admitted to the ranks of the legal profession. After a vigorous career of five years, he, in 1867, removed to Saltsburg, was elected a justice of the peace, and continued as such till ninety years of age. He was married in 1817 to Elizabeth Weigley, daughter of Joseph Weigley, attorney at law, of Greensburg. The latter was a Quaker and of German descent. Mrs. Cooper died in 1875, about seventy-five years of age.

The children were: Elizabeth, m. to Rev. Joseph Crummer, M. E., of Warren, Jo Daviess county, Illinois; James, M. D., of Bellefontaine, Ohio; Sybilla, m. to Steele S. Williams, a member of Captain Couch's company, 11th regiment Pa. vols.; he died from wounds received at the battle of Antietam; their son Walter went into the army as a drummer boy, though only fourteen years of age; at the second battle of Bull Run, his drum was shot away, and he took a musket and fought bravely till the end of the battle; thenceforward he was a soldier in the ranks, and after a service approaching four years, returned home a sergeant; he is now an oil operator at Kernsville, Venango county, having an interest in five oil wells; William, m. to Mrs. Nancy Coleman, of Conemaugh township; George W., M. D., editor of Kansas Journal, Garnett, Kansas, m. to Mary Latshaw, of Johnstown; St. Clair, first lieutenant in the 13th, afterward the 102d regiment Pa. vols., in the three months' and three years' service till the second day of the Wilderness battles, when he was severely wounded, m. to Susan Shannon, of Pittsburgh; Jessie, m. to Daniel H. Cooper, died in 1861; Sarah, m. to Lyle Tanner, Joliet, Illinois; and Martha, m. to Daniel Chestnut, of Pittsburgh.

William McIlwain was the son of Patrick and Elizabeth McIlwain nee Borland, and was born in county Donegal, Ireland, in June, 1799. Patrick's father was Wm. McIlwain, a farmer, the latter's wife being a McFarland. Patrick and family migrated to Philadelphia, in 1821, and immediately thereafter removed to Salem township, Westmoreland county. Like his ancestors, he engaged in farming. He and wife are buried at Congruity church. William remained at home, employed on the farm till in November, 1823, when he went to Baltimore, Maryland, and engaged as a clerk in a store. In March, 1826, he located in Pittsburgh, and became the senior member of the firm of McIlwain & Co., dealers in groceries and produce. In 1831, he removed to Saltsburg, and was associated as a partner, with his brother Robert, who had located there in the previous year, in the general mercantile business. After an active career of forty-four years, he retired from business. He was twice married; first to Martha, daughter of George Alcorn, of Salem township, Westmoreland county, and second to Nancy, daughter of David Kerr, of Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county. His children are: Martha J., m. to Rev. Samuel H. Thompson, a Presbyterian minister of Des Moines, Iowa; Nancy H., m. to John W. Robinson, of Saltsburg; and Sarah E, m. to John C. Thompson, coal merchant, of Pittsburgh. He has been over thirty-nine years an elder in the Presbyterian church, of Saltsburg. Always refraining from official life, save a few terms in the borough council, his career has been that of a quiet business man, who, in a modest way, aided materially in the development of this section. In the upholding of the church of which he is a member, he has been an invaluable agent, and to him and his co-workers, is due much of the auxiliary laity work so essential to the growth of all congregations.

Samuel S. Jamison.—His father came to the United States from Ireland in the year 1771, and soon after landing settled in Hagerstown, Maryland, whence he subsequently removed to Carlisle, Penn. Here the elder Jamison learned the trades of wheel-wright and chair making, and was married to a daughter of John Shryock, a German citizen of Hagerstown, Md. Soon after he removed to Martinsburg, Va., where Samuel was born, in 1797. In 1799, the family removed to Greensburg, Westmoreland county, and two years later to Conemaugh township, Indiana county. The father and the elder brother enlisted in the war of 1812, and Samuel remained at home to care for the family. In 1818 the latter removed to Indiana, where in partnership with Judge Joseph Thompson, he carried on the business of wheel-wright and chair making. In 1826, he removed to Saltsburg, having obtained a contract from General Lacock for the construction of a section of the Pennsylvania canal. In 1829, he received the appointment of supervisor of the western extension of the canal, extending from below Saltsburg, "Tarr's Locks," to Pittsburgh, about half the entire length of the canal west of the mountains and retained the position several years. He was reappointed in 1843 and served four years. During the building of the Northwestern, now known as the Western Pennsylvania Railroad, he obtained a contract for the construction of two sections, in the vicinity of Saltsburg, including the stone work of the bridge. He became financially involved, owing to the failure of the company, and the accumulations of twenty years was destroyed. We next find him in the state of Indiana, engaged in building wagons for the government, and subsequently in Council Bluffs, Iowa, where he embarked in various enterprises. In 1836 he was chosen brigade inspector, with the rank of major, for the military, comprising Armstrong, Clarion, Jefferson and Indiana counties and served six years. For several years he was the captain of the Saltsburg Blues, and also of the Saltsburg Troop. He represented this district in the state senate in the sessions of 1854, '55, and '56. He died on the 11th of January, 1877, in the eighty-first year of his age.

He was married in 1823, to Sarah Ann Bell, a member of one of the pioneer families of Indiana county. The children were: Eveline, Eliza, Julia, Benton Knott, John Clark, Samuel Stewart, Mira E. and Mary C.

REV. WM. W. WOODEND, D. D., was born in what is now Clarion county, in 1816, and was a son of John and Jane Woodend, nee Flack. The former was born in 1786, on what is now the old Samuel Moorhead place, near Salem church, Westmoreland county, and died at "Woodland Cliff," near Saltsburg, in 1875. His wife was born at "Antrim farm," Ligonier valley, Westmoreland county, in 1793, and died on the same place in 1841. She was the daughter of James Flack, d. in 1841 in his eighty-ninth year, a native of county Antrim, Ireland, whose father was one of the pioneer settlers of the valley. John was the son of William Woodend, born in Cumberland county in 1760, d. near Natchez, Mississippi, 1787. His wife, Nancy Taylor, was born in 1766, near the site of Salem church, Westmoreland county, and died on Antrim farm in 1853. They were married in 1785. Wm. Woodend was among the early settlers of the Ligonier valley. His tannery on the old Samuel Moorhead farm, Derry township, Westmoreland county, was the first in western Pennsylvania. Our subject has been thrice married: first in 1843, to Matilda Rose Postlethwaite, d. in 1851; second, in 1853, to Judith McConnell, d. in 1862; and third, in 1871, to Rebecca J. Robinson, daughter of J. W. Robinson. His children were: Elizabeth S., m. to Rev. Dr. T. A. McCurdy; Emma J., Matilda N., m. to Wm. B. McLean; James P., Sidney, d.; Wm. Alexander, John H., Juliet W., Isabella G., d.; J. W. R. and Thomas E. Our subject has just terminated his active pastoral relation with the Presbyterian church of Saltsburg, being continued as "pastor emeritus." For further data, see sketch of the church.

REV. FRANCIS LAIRD, D. D., departed this life on the forenoon of the 6th of April, 1854, at his residence in Westmoreland county, in the midst of the congregation over which he first settled, in the eighty-seventh year of his age, and fifty-fourth of his ministry, greatly and deservedly esteemed. He was both paternally and maternally of Scotch-Irish Presbyterian descent. His grandfather, John Laird, emigrated from Ireland, and settled in what is now Franklin township, Adams county, where he long officiated as ruling elder in Lower Marsh creek church, and was succeeded in the sacred office by the father of him who is the subject of this brief memoir.

Francis Laird was born on the 23d of March, 1768, and enjoying in an eminent degree the advantages of religious training under the parental roof, his mind was seriously impressed. In the sixteenth year of his age, he commenced the study of languages under Rev. Dobbin, of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church of Gettysburg, and completed an academic course. He assumed the charge of a classical school in Big Spring, Adams county, for nearly three years, and entered Dickinson college in the spring of 1794, along with Drs. Brown and Herron and Chief Justice Roger B. Taney. He studied theology in company with Drs. Herron and Williams, under the supervision of Dr. Cooper, of Middle Spring, and in the spring of 1797, was licensed to preach. For some time he itinerated as a probationer east of the mountains, and then moved to the west of his native state. In the spring of 1800, he was ordained and installed over the united congregations of Poke run, Westmoreland county, and Plain creek, Allegheny county, the latter not being organized at the time of his settlement.

On the third day of June, 1801, he was married to Mary, daughter of Hon. John Moore, and thus circumstanced, he commenced his pastorate in a comparatively frontier settlement. In 1830, his field of labor proved too onerous, and he resigned the charges above named, and in the same year, was installed over Murrysville church, which had been planted and reared by his own care. Here he was a diligent workman till June, 1850, when paralysis disqualified him from active service.

His children were: John M., editor Greensburg Argus, m. to Rebecca Moore, d.; William; Jane, d., m. to Dr. Z. G. Stewart; Robert, d.; Eliza M., d., m. to J. R. Johnston, d.; Francis, b. in Franklin township, Westmoreland county, in 1812, m. in 1850 to Ellen M. Horton, daughter of Harmon Horton, of Connecticut, a graduate of the Ligonier Female Seminary in the class of 1847; Harrison P., attorney; and Mary M., m. first to Wm. B. Stewart, d., and second to Rev. Thomas S. Leason. Francis Laird came to Saltsburg in 1845, and till 1849, was a partner in the general trade with Major J. G. McQuaide, the firm being Laird & McQuaide. He was also the postmaster during the same period. He has been the proprietor of the Saltsburg mill since 1849. He has served as major in the militia, jury commissioner, and held other positions of more or less importance.

MRS. MARGARET B. WALKINSHAW was born in Lancaster county in 1809, and was a daughter of Hugh and Mary Daugherty nee Blaney. In 1810, the family removed to the vicinity of Mount Pleasant, Westmoreland county, and in 1833 to Saltsburg, where Hugh died in 1847, at the age of seventy-six, and his wife in 1854, at the same age. Our subject was married in 1830 to Joseph Walkinshew, a son of Hugh and Eleanor Walkinshaw nee McGown. Joseph Walkinshaw was a shoemaker, and came to Saltsburg in 1831, where he served as justice of the peace for three terms, dying in 1873, in his seventieth year. He, as well as his wife, were United Presbyterians. Their children were: James, Presbyterian minister, m. first to Nancy J. Brown, d., and second to Mary E. Steinmetz; Eleanor, m. to R. J. Portser; Nancy J., d., m. to S. G. Taylor, d.; Mary, m. to O. P. Carson; Margaret S., d.; Martha, m. to Israel Portser; and Hugh Wilson, attorney, m. to Charlotte Ralston.

ISABELLA HENDERSON was born on the old Henderson Homestead, Conemaugh township, in 1820, and was a daughter of Robert and Margaret Henderson, nee Graham—a daughter of Wm. and Frances Graham. Robert Henderson was a son of Robert and Mary Ann Henderson, nee Ralston, who located in what is now Conemaugh township, in 1797. Their children were: James, d., m. to Jane Andrews, d.; David, d., m. to Eliza Orr, d.; John, d., m. to Letitia Fullerton, d.; Joseph, d., m. to Mary McCombs, d., a daughter of Gen. McCombs; Robert, d., m. in 1811 to Margaret Graham, d.; Alexander, d., m. to Hannah Thorn, d.; Lucy, d., m. to James Smith, d.; Isabella, d., m. to Edward McKelvey, d.; and Jane, d., m. to Thomas Hood, d. Robert was a soldier of the war of 1812. He was born in Ireland, and died in 1871, eighty-nine years old. His wife was born in Ireland, and died in 1864, in her seventy-fifth year. Their children were: Mary A., d., m. to Robert McMeans, d.; Eliza, m. to James Carothers; Jane, m. to D. K. Daugherty; Isabella, Joseph A., d., m. to Julia A. Wilson, d.; Margaret G., m. to Rev. Andrew Getty; Lucinda F., d., and Sarah R., m. to John Longwell.

JOHNSTON S. ROBINSON was born in Conemaugh township in 1816, and was a son of Robert and Elizabeth Robinson, nee Black. The former was a son of Robert Robinson, who located in 1779 on the tract of land now known as Coalport, Conemaugh township, and owned by Wm. L. Rhea. His second settlement was on what is now the Wm. I. Sterrett farm. The children of the pioneer, Robert Robinson, were: John, d., m. first to a Miss Wier, d., and second to Jane Marshall, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Thomas Weir, d.; ———, m. to James Elder, d.; Robert, d. in 1833, in his fifty-third year, m. to Elizabeth Black, d. in 1873, in her eighty-ninth year, daughter of James Black, a Revolutionary soldier and one of the early settlers of what is now Indiana county, and who purchased a farm near the "Broad Ford" in 1792, and James, d. Robert and Elizabeth Robinson's children were: James B., d., m. to Eliza Barnett, d.; Robert S., d., m. to Eleanor Walahan; John H., Thomas W., m. to Elizabeth Johnston, daughter of Wm. Johnston, the pioneer salt manufacturer; Johnston S., m. in 1836 to Sarah S. Shryock, daughter of David Shryock, a pioneer of Salem township, Westmoreland county; William C., m. first to Margaret Robinson, d., second to Jane Trees, d., and third to Sallie A. Wagner; Jane B., d.; David S., d., and Elizabeth W. Our subject came to Saltsburg in 1832, and learned and pursued the avocation of chair-maker and painter till 1853, when he engaged in the drug business, his present calling. He was postmaster of Saltsburg from 1861 to 1869. His children were: David S., cashier of the "Saltsburg Bank," m. to Nancy Galbraith, daughter of Samuel and Martha Galbraith, nee Kerr; and Anna E.

Dr. John McFarland was born in 1813, in the forks of the "Yough," and came to Saltsburgh in 1836. He was a son of Samuel and Mary McFarland nee Stoops, who were married in Ireland, and located in Westmoreland county, in 1800. The former died in 1836, about seventy years of age. Our subject read medicine in Freeport, with Dr. Chas. Snowden, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College. He practiced in Plum township, Allegheny county, for eleven months, and in Salem, Westmoreland county, for about six weeks, and then exchanged locations with Dr. Benjamin Sterrett, who was at Saltsburg. He was married in 1846, to Sarah L., daughter of Rev. John Reed. Their children were: John R.; Thomas F., d.; Charles A., d.; and Mary Bell. Dr. McFarland served in the State House of Representatives in 1845-6. He was a surgeon for several years in the militia, and one of the first directors of the Northwestern, or W. P. R. R. He was president of the County Medical Society for one term, and is still connected with it, and was also a director of the Academy for several years. He engaged in the drug business in 1871, on the old stone house corner, and in the fall of 1876, removed to his new building on Salt street.

Mrs. Catharine Keibler was born in Franklin county, in 1807, and was a daughter of Jacob and Sophia Piper nee Butz. The former was a native of Franklin county, and the latter of Loudoun county, Virginia. Jacob was a son of a Revolutionary soldier. His wife's name was Catharine. Jacob came to Westmoreland, and for a year remained in the Ligonier valley, removing thence to Salem township, Westmoreland county, and subsequently to Conemaugh township, where he died at the age of sixty. Our subject was married in 1822, to Jacob Keibler, who died in 1863, at the age of sixty. Their children were: George, d.; Joseph, m. to Violet Elder; Elizabeth, m. to Joseph Bollman; John, m. to Sarah Plummer; Martha, m. to John Dickie; Mary, m. to George Sigafoes; Sarah, m. to Major John Horrell; Nancy, m. first to Jos. Atkinson, d., and second to Isaac Fennell; Margaret and Jane, (twins), d; the former was married to Isaac Field; Thos., m. to Eliza Horrell; Levi, m. to Hannah Moore; and Samuel, m. to Ellen McQuiston. Thomas was in the war of 1861. Saml's children were: Annie, Kate and Paul. Our subject has sixty-seven grand-children, and four great-grand-children.

Rev. Oliver Katz, pastor U. P. Churches of Saltsburg and New Alexandria, was born in Plum Creek township, Allegheny county, in 1827, and was a son of Peter and Mary Katz nee Brawdy. The former was of German parentage and was born in Allegheny county, where he died in 1836, at the age of fifty-four. His wife was also of German descent, and a native of Allegheny county. The family were Presbyterians, and became connected with the Associate Reformed Church upon the introduction of the hymns in place of the psalms. Our subject was educated under the direction of the Rev. William Conner, of Plum Creek Unity Church, who was afterwards the pastor of the Blairsville U. P. congregation. He graduated at Franklin college, New Athens, Ohio, in the class of 1851, and attended the Allegheny theological seminary. He founded a seminary at Turtle creek, Allegheny county, and continued its management for three years. He supplied occasionally the Saltsburg and New Alexandria churches for four years, and on the first of October, 1861, he became their pastor, being regularly installed on the 31st of December. He was married in 1853, to Jane Bower, daughter of Benjamin Bower, of Long Run, Westmoreland county. Their children are: Lucian Oliver and Mary Ella, a graduate of Washington female seminary.

James L. Crawford, M. D., was born in what is now North Mahoning township, in 1842, and was a son of Allen, d., and Nancy Crawford nee Brown. [See Crawford sketch, North Mahoning township.] He was a member of Co. A, 61st Pa. volunteers from August, 1861, to May 31, 1862; being wounded four times at Fair Oaks, he was discharged. In the fall of 1862, he again entered the service as second lieutenant of Co. C, second battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers. He was appointed by President Lincoln second lieutenant of Co. E, U. S. colored troops, and served three months. He was adjutant of the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. He read medicine with Dr. David Alter, of Parnassus, Westmoreland county, and graduated in 1868, from the Jefferson medical college of Philadelphia. In 1875 he graduated from Bellevue hospital medical college of New York City, taking extra courses under Drs. Austin Flint, E. G. Janeway, and in surgery under Alexander B. Mott. Our subject is now assistant surgeon of the 10th regiment Pennsylvania National Guards. He has been twice married; his first wife was Zeruiah Griffith, d., and his second, Alice Blinn. He has resided in Saltsburg since 1868.

William Grabenstein was born in Baden, Germany, in 1842, and was a son of Adam and Catharine Grabenstein nee Guyer, who located in Pittsburgh, in 1853. William served in company C, 63d Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years. He learned the butcher trade in Pittsburgh, and had a stall in Allegheny City market for one year. He then removed to Apollo, Armstrong county, where he remained for five years. He came to Saltsburg, in 1870, erecting his north building in 1873, and his present shop in 1876. He uses steam power in his market to render lard, cut sausages, &c. His pork packing establishment is one fourth of a mile from town, on the bank of the Conemaugh. In the season of 1878-9, twelve hundred hogs were packed. The hogs are killed, then handled by steam power, and packed in an ice house.

John B. Porter was born in Conemaugh township, in 1843, and was a son of James R. and Mary M. Porter nee Anderson. The former died in 1871, at the age of seventy-four, the latter in 1874, seventy-four years of age. James R., was a son of Richard Wilson and Isabella Porter nee Reed. He came from Adams county, where he was born, to Dennisonstown, when a boy. For several years he attended to the banking business of the merchants, carrying their money to Pittsburgh on horseback. He kept a store at Clarksburg, Indiana county, for several years, and in 1829, purchased the McGowan salt works, and continued in the business for seventeen years. Their product averaged from eight to fifteen barrels per day. From 1847 to 1851, he kept a store in Saltsburg. The McGowan Salt Works tract was surveyed on a warrant dated December 14, 1785, and issued to John Cummings. His children were: Matilda, d.; James R., jr., m. to Margaret Weaver; Catharine A., m. to H.

W. Weir, attorney; Isabella, d., m. to James G. McQuaide; Ellen J., d.; Richard W., m. to Agnes Drum; David A., dentist; and John B., druggist, m. to L. A. McKee, daughter of Rev. David McKee. The drug store of D. McKee, of which John B. Porter is manager, was commenced in 1878, and is located opposite the W. P. R. R. station.

W. F. CARNAHAN was born in Bell township, Westmoreland county, in 1849, and was a son of H. and Mary Carnahan nee Fedder. The former was a son of Thomas and Mary Carnahan nee Kinley. Thomas' father was David Carnahan, who was born in Pennsylvania of Scoth-Irish parentage. His first wife was a Miss Carr, and his second a Miss Hutchinson. He came to Westmoreland county at an early period, when the Indians were hostile, and located about three miles from the present site of Perrysville. He afterward removed to the farm now occupied by his son, Samuel Carnahan. He had been residing in the county several years when Hannastown was burned. He served in the Revolutionary war and died in 1832, at an advanced age. His son Thomas was born near Perrysville, and died in 1833, about forty-eight years of age; his wife died in 1873, ninety-six years of age. H. Carnahan was born near Perrysville in 1822, and came to Saltsburg in 1837, where he worked as a tailor. Subsequeutly he engaged in merchandising near Perrysville, and also was employed in manufacturing salt. He returned to Saltsburg, and for nine years clerked for Wm. Redpath, returning to engage in his old trade, merchant tailoring. Our subject pursues the same avocation as his father, each having an extensive shop of their own. He was married in 1864 to Sarah, daughter of James Sloan, d., of Indiana.

DANIEL K. DAUGHERTY was born on the Big Sewickley creek, about six miles south of Greensburg, Westmoreland county, in 1817, and was a son of Hugh and Mary Daugherty nee Blaney. In 1838, he came to Saltsburg and learned the trade of carpenter and cabinet maker with his brother, James R. Daugherty, and continued with him till 1864. Since the latter date he has been managing an undertaking establishment. In 1875, in one month, he sent out four coffins for four persons who died over ninety years of age. He has held all the borough positions save that of constable. He was married in 1844 to Jane C., daughter of Robert Henderson. Their children were: Lucinda Francis, d.; Hugh Wilson, d.; William W., Robert Clark, and Mary M.

CHARLES W. THOMAS was born in Frederick county, Md., in 1850, and was a son of Robert and Ann Rebecca Thomas nee Fink. The former was a merchant tailor at Middletown, Frederick county, Md. Charles W. came first to Saltsburg in 1872, and worked for a year as a journeyman for Mr. Carnahan. He returned in 1876, and started a merchant tailoring shop in a small building adjoining W. R. McIlwain & Co.'s building. In the same year he erected the building now occupied by him at No. 32 Point street, and occupied it in 1877. He was married in 1876 to Emma F. Keller, daughter of Joel Keller—a brother of Ezra Keller, the founder of Wittemberg College. His only child is F. Leslie. Our subject is Reporter of the Knights of Honor lodge. He has been secretary of the M. E. S. S. since 1876.

WILLIAM J. ALEXANDER was born in Allegheny City in 1852, and was a son of Thomas E. and Mary J. Alexander nee McKee. The former was a native of Paisley, Scotland, and a farmer by occupation. William J. was educated at the Leechburg and Glade Run academies, and at Lafayette college, graduating from the latter in the class of "'77." In 1876 Mr. Alexander was assistant principal of the "Wilkesbarre Institute." After leaving college he was a student at the Union Theological Seminary of New York city, and also acted as a private tutor of a class on "Murray Hill." In the winter of 1878–9, he taught a school in the Dilts' district, North Mahoning township, and since the spring of the latter year, he has been the principal of the Saltsburg academy. He was married in 1878 to Mary E., daughter of Jacob Wilhelm, of West Mahoning township.

ANTHONY EARHART was born of German parentage in York, York county. He came to the vicinity of Hannahstown in 1785 or 1786, and to what is now the Dick farm, Conemaugh township, in 1813. He served in the war of 1812, and died on his homestead about sixty-nine years of age; his wife was Elizabeth Wrey, who died at an advanced age. Their children were: David, d., m. to Catharine Altman, d.; Michael, d., m. to Elizabeth Altman, d.; William, d., m. first to Catharine Keener, d., and second to Martha Barkley; John, d. in 1864, at the age of sixty-four, m. to Catharine Shoemaker, d.; Jacob, m. to Mary Rupert; Sarah, d., m. to Daniel Kimmel, d. in 1861, at the age of sixty; Mary, m. to George Gilbert; and Henry, m. to Elizabeth McGaughey, d. John Earhart's children were: Margaret, m. to John A. Cochran; Elizabeth; Sarah, m. to Geo. S. Elrick, d.; Mary Ann; Solomon, d., m. to Mrs. Mary McConaughey; Martin, m. to Cecelia Curry; Kate L., Leavinia O., m. to S. L. Graham; and Jennie N., m. to John W. Goodlen. John Earhart waggoned for many years on the old Frankstown road; he came to Saltsburg and kept a hotel on the lot now occupied by the Saltsburg bank, and then removed to the Earhart house, since known as the "Central," which was managed by him till his death, and by the family for the succeeding seven months. For fourteen years, his daughters, Mary Ann, Kate L. and Lavinia, have kept the present "Earhart house," No. 37 Salt street, and for nine of which years, S. L. Graham has been associated with them. The latter is a native of Conemaugh township, where he was born in 1836, and was a son of Duncan and Sarah Graham nee Lyon. He served in company D, 135th Pennsylvania vols. for nine months, and was wounded at Chancellorsville.

WILLIAM J. STERETT, a son of Dr. B. F. and Nancy A. Sterett nee Hogg, was born at Salem Cross Roads, Westmoreland county, in 1824. Dr. Sterrett was a son of William and Myrtilla Sterett nee Irvin. He was a graduate of Dickinson college, of Carlisle, and the Jefferson medical college, of Philadelphia. He migrated to Salem Cross Roads, in 1818, and to Saltsburg in 1834, being the second settled physician in the village. His practice extended over a large portion of Indiana, Westmoreland and Armstrong counties. He died in 1865, at the age of seventy-four; his wife in 1858, at the age of sixty-two. Their children were: Myrtilla, d.; John H., d., m. to Ella Tyndal; Benjamin F., m. to Lizzie Fleming; William J., m. in 1856, to Kate M. Thompson, daughter of Hugh A. Thompson, of Indiana, and Samuel H., m. to Mercy Fraley. Our subject's children were: Addie, d.; Bessie J., d.; Frank H., B. F., d., and Mary M. He has been in the mercantile business in Saltsburg since 1841, having been connected with the successive firms of Sterett, Robinson (J. M.) & Co., Sterett & Sandles (Wm.), Sterett & McIlwain (Wm. R.), W. J. Sterett, and since 1876 Sterett & Co. He was right of way agent of the Northwestern, or W. P. R. R. from Blairsville to Freeport Junction, and was a director of the road for several years. Since 1871, he has been the president of the Saltsburg bank.

WILLIAM MCWILLIAMS was born in New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, in 1825, and was a son of Robert and Mary McWilliams, nee Croll, who were married in 1824, in New Alexandria. The former was a son of James McWilliams, and was born in Mifflin county; and came to New Alexandria in 1822, and to Saltsburg in 1827, where he died in 1864, at the age of sixty-four. His first residence in Saltsburg was the stone house on Washington street, now occupied by Mrs. Kelly. Mary Croll was the daughter of John and Mary Croll, nee Bowers, and is still living and over seventy-one years of age. Robert McWilliams' children were: William, m. to Margaret W. Williams, d. in 1868 in her forty-first year; Mary, m. first to. Geo. W. Myers, d., and second to Mordicai Lee; James, m. to Catharine Fishel; Robert, m. to Margaret White; Johnston, d., m. to Rosetta Kettering, d.; Elizabeth, m. to William Row; Samuel, d.; Nancy Lavinia, d., m. to Prof. J. C. Bleakney, and John, m. first to Anna McCoy, d., and second to E. J. Coleman. James was in the 11th Pa. reserve corps about four years, and was a prisoner for five months at Salisbury. Johnston died while a member of Co. D., 135th Pa. vols. John was in Co. A., 8th Pa. reserve corps for one year, being discharged for disability. He was for six months in Co. F., 74th Pa. vols, first as second and afterwards as first lieutenant. He, in connection with Capts. Kinter and McLain, raised the company in six days. Our subject's children were: Alexander McKenney, foreman Pittsburgh Dispatch, m. to Annie Steck; Maggie B., d.; William, Virginia G. and Edward F. He has been in the printing business since 1840, learning his trade in the old Westmoreland Republican office, of Greensburg, serving five years. He conducted the Genius of Liberty, of Uniontown, for one year, and the Armstrong Democrat, of Kitanning, for eighteen years, and the Kitanning Free Press for two. For several years he was connected with the newspapers of Pittsburgh. On the 15th of September, 1875, he, in connection with his brother John, issued the first number of the Saltsburg Press, of which they have retained the management. In August, 1878, he was appointed a justice of the peace, to fill the unexpired term of Major Cooper.

John McWilliams was born on the "Point," Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1842. He learned his trade as printer on the "Armstrong Democrat," serving five years. He was for one year on the old Indiana Register, and was afterward one of the editors and proprietors of the Indiana Free American, and in March, 1867, removed the materials of the office to Wirt county, West Virginia, where he established the Elizabeth Gazette, an independent paper, for two years. He then removed to Parkersburg, where he merged the paper in the Parkersburg Daily Times, a Republican paper. We next find him in Clarksburg, where he inaugurated the Telegraph, a Republican paper, publishing it for two and a half years, and then disposing of it to other parties. He revived the Preston County Journal, a Republican paper, and issued it during the campaign of 1872. He then returned to Wirt county, and started the Wirt County Mentor, retaining its management till December, 1874, when he sold it to Prof. Weld, and removed subsequently to Saltsburg, where he was a prime mover in starting the Saltsburg Press—his present journal.

John Martin was born near Enniskillen, in the county Fermanaugh, Ireland, in 1820, and was a son of Peter and Mary Martin nee Murphy. Peter was the son of Peter Martin, both dying in their eightieth year. The mother of Mrs. Mary Martin nee Murphy was a Maguire, a sister of the celebrated Catholic priest, Rev. Tom Maguire, who held the famous discussion with Pope, in Dublin, in 1829. The Martins were all genuine Celts with no admixture of Scotch-Irish blood. Peter Martin's grandmother was a Lunney, a relative of Dr. Lunney, who wrote a history of Ireland in the Irish language. Their posterity dated to the year one hundred, when Ireland was the "Island of Saints." Long before the country was known to the Danish invaders, and when it educated both England and Scotland, they lived along Lake Erin, many of them being like the disciples of old, fishermen, and their settlement extending from the sea along the lake about sixty miles.

In August, 1834, Peter Martin (our subject's father) and family arrived in Allegheny county and our subject in a short time went to work on the Sandy and Beaver canal. He subsequently learned the trade of stone cutting and masonry with Pagan & Co., of Pittsburgh, and assisted in building the Mechanic street bridge (1836), Hand street bridge (1837), the Monongahela City bridge (1838), the Monongahela House (1840 and 1841), and then in the fall of 1841, came to Saltsburg. Here he was for six years a foreman mason on the Northwestern, or W. P. R. R., and a master man in nearly all the work in the vicinity of Saltsburg, building the soldiers' monument, etc. He was married in 1847, to Eliza Johnston, a daughter of John Johnston, who died in 1868, at the age of fifty-two. His second wife was Lizzie Rembach, whom he married in 1873. His children were: William, professor in Lewisburg University, m. to Mary E. daughter of Rev. James Brown, D. D.; John, James, Thomas, Anna M., m. to Francis Redpath; Stewart, Charles and Margaret.

Thomas Carson, M. D. was born in Deer Creek township, Allegheny county, in 1872, and was a son John and Hanna Carson nee Henderson. The former was born in 1815, in county Fermanagh, Ireland, and came to America in 1826, with an uncle, William Carson, and located in Allegheny City. His father, James Carson, had come to America about 1817. His wife, Catharine Allingham, is living, and is over ninety years of age. John Carson came to Armstrong county, in 1846, and to the old Montgomery farm, White township, in 1864. James Carson's children were: John, m. to Hannah Henderson; William, m.; Susan, m. to James Dalzell, d.; and James, m. to Elizabeth Baily. John Carson's children were: Thomas, M. D., m. to Jennie J. F. Jack, daughter of Samuel Jack, of Westmoreland county; William, d.; James; John, M. D., m. to Lizzie Swalham; Margaret; Catharine and Jason Wilson. Samuel Jack was the son of Matthew Jack, who was a captain in the early militia, and had a store underground, near Salem Cross Roads, Westmoreland county. At the time of the burning of Hannastown, he saved the life of a Miss Hanna, by carrying her behind him on his horse to the fort. He was a son of Matthew Jack, a Scotchman, who was among the early pionoers of this section. Dr. Carson read medicine with Dr. James K. Park, of Cochran's Mill, Armstrong, county, and graduated from the Jefferson Medical College, in 1865. His first location was at Elderton, Armstrong county, remaining till 1877, when, after a few months residence in Verona, he located permanently in Saltsburg. He is the examining surgeon of No. 165, Loyal Lodge, Knights of Honor.

T. M. Robinson was born in Salem township, Westmoreland county, in 1845, and was a son of Capt. James and Hannah Robinson nee McConnell. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was born in Mercer county, and located in Westmoreland county, in 1804. He died in 1868, at the age of seventy-six, and his wife in 1861, at the age of fifty-two. His first wife was a Miss Johnston, of the Johnstons of Loyalhanna township. His third wife, Margery Kennedey, is living, and is over seventy years of age. Our subject from 1868 to 1871, was a member of the firm of J. & C. S. Moore & Co., and latterly has been engaged in grain brokerage. He was the burgess of the town for 1879, trustee of the Presbyterian church, and director of the Building and Loan Association. He was married in 1874. to M. F. Lester, daughter of John Lester, of Washington, N. Y. Their only child is Bertha Lester,

Mrs. Sarah A. Kelly was born in Salem township, Westmoreland county, in 1826, and was a daughter of William and Mary Guthrie nee Hill. The former was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1777, and died in 1865. The latter was born in Derry township in 1788, and died in 1860. William was a son of John Guthrie, one of the earliest settlers of Westmoreland county. One of his brothers was killed by the Indians near Hannahstown. John Guthrie's children were:

Elizabeth, m. to John Brownlee, who with one child were killed by the Indians; his wife and one child were carried by the Indians to Canada, where they remained nearly four years before returning to Westmoreland county; her second husband was William Guthrie, who as well as herself died in Jefferson county at an advanced age; Jennie, d., m. to John Beatty, d.; Sarah, d., m. to William Beatty, d.; Nancy, d., m. to James Porterfield, d.; James, d., m. to Margaret Dixon, d., and William, d., m. first to Nancy Dixon, d., and second to Mary Hill, d. The children of William, a son of John Guthrie were: John, d., m. to Margaret McQuaide; Samuel D., lives on the old homestead in Salem township, Westmoreland county; James, m. first to Sarah Beatty, d., and second to Mrs. Margaret Hall; Nancy, m. to David McConnell, d.; Martha, m. to John B. Chambers, of Apollo, Armstrong county; Elizabeth, d.; Jane, d.; Mary, m. to Thomas K. McQuaide; Jane, H., m. to Archibald Adair, and Sarah A., m. in 1850, to William H. Kelly, agent of W. P. R. R., d. in 1867, in his forty-fourth year. Our subject's children were: Mary C., m. to W. G. Brenner; Jennie E., d.; Bell S., operator Western Union Telegraph Company; Myrtilla A., and William G., operator W. U. Tel. Co., Allegheny City.

J. C. PEARCE was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1822, and was a son of Isaac N. and Martha Pearce, nee Ayers. The Pearce family was founded by three brothers, who migrated from England to Boston, where one exchanged a piece of land, now a part of the city, for a pony. One of the brothers removed to Connecticut, and subsequently located in New Jersey, where Isaac N. was born, near Freehold, Monmouth county. The latter served in the last three years of the Revolution. He migrated to Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1790, and died in 1816, eighty-two years of age. His first wife was Sarah Ayers, who died in 1818. He married in 1820 Martha Ayers, since deceased. His children were: J. C., m. to Sarah Clow; Mary, m. first to Alexander McCartney, d., and second to John Hughes, d.; Jane, m. to Samuel Stiffey, and Martha, m. to Joseph Dixon. J. C.'s children were: James A., m. to Margaret Cunningham; Emma May, Mary, m. to Simon L. Wilt; Thomas S., m. to Juliet W. Woodend, and Kate V., m. to Alfred J. McQuiston. Our subject learned the mercantile business with James Stewart, of New Alexandria, and also taught school several years. From 1847 to 1850 he clerked for Joseph Cook at Livermore, and from 1850 to 1869 he was connected with Thomas G. Stewart, now of Baltimore, in the general trade at Livermore, under the name and style of Stewart & Co. In 1869 he removed to Saltsburg and became a member of the firm of Stewart (J. M.) & Pearce, which changed to J. M. Stewart & Co. in 1876, John W. Robinson becoming a member of the firm.

JOHN W. ROBINSON was born in Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county, in 1845, and was a son of Adam and Mary Robinson nee Foster. The former died in 1874, at the age of seventy-three; his wife, who was born on Elder's Ridge, is still living. Adam was a son of John Robinson—a son of Robert Robinson. Adam's children were: Maria J., m. to David Galbraith; Robert F., lost at Fredericksburg; John W. and Sarah Lizzie. Robert F. was in company I, 11th Pa. vols., and was wounded at the first battle of Bull Run. John W. was in the same company, and was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run, being discharged for disability. Our subject was married in 1873 to Nancy H., daughter of William McIlwain. His children are: Robert F. and William M. One part of the "Robinson heirs'" land, containing two hundred and eighty-six acres, was surveyed on a warrant dated November 8, 1785, and was called "Painter's hall," being surveyed for George Painter. For another and more important survey, see sketch of Saltsburg.

ARCHIBALD TEMPLETON was born in 1815, in Conemaugh township, and was a son of Alexander and Anna Templeton nee Marshall, a daughter of Archibald Marshall, who served as a lieutenant in the Indian wars of Westmoreland and Indiana counties, and was among the early settlers of this section, his first location being on Sewickley creek. Alexander Templeton was born in Peters' township, Franklin county, and came with his father, Alexander Templeton, Sr., in 1795. He died in 1852, at the age of sixty-two; his wife in 1850, about sixty years of age. Their children were: Archibald, m. in 1850 to Catharine Getty; Alexander; Ann, m. to Jas. Getty; James, m. first to Mary Ann Templeton, d., and second to Sarah Beham; and Samuel, d. Alexander was in company C, 4th Pa. cav., and served from September, 1861, to May 4, 1864, when he died forty-seven years of age. Alexander Templeton, sr., who settled in what is now Conemaugh township in 1795, died in 1853, at the age of ninety-four. His wife was Jane Smith, who died in 1816. The former was a son of Samuel Templeton, a native of Ireland, who migrated to Franklin county. Our subject's children were: Marian, m. to Lemon Say; Annie Maria and Jennie, twins; Mary Elizabeth; Margaret E., d.; Jas. Alexander, and Frances Virginia.

JOHN R. ROBINSON was born in Saltsburg in 1835, and was a son of John M. and Sarah W. Robinson nee White. He was educated at the public school and the academy. He clerked for several years, and from 1858 to 1862 was engaged in the general store business in company with his father. In 1878, he located on the "Reddick farm," Butler county, and was in the grocery business for nine months. In January, 1879, he returned to Saltsburg, and opened a hat, cap, boot and shoe, and furnishing store, at Nos. 25½ and 27 White street. He was married in 1862 to Isabella P., daughter of Joseph Andre, of Conemaugh towhship. His children are: Frank F., Wm. Stewart, John Marshall, and Mary Bell. Our subject served in company D, 135th Pa. vols., for about nine months.

CAPTAIN DANIEL W. DAUGHERTY was born in Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county, in 1837, and was a son of Hugh and Margaret Daugherty nee Waddell. The latter died in 1846. Their children were: Anna Jane; Daniel W., m. to Mary Agnes Dickey; Martha, m. to Isaac Akeright; and Alretta, d., m. to Henry Simons. Our subject served in company B, 56th Pa. vols. for three years and eight months, passing through the grades of private, corporal, sergeant, second lieutenant, and on the 21st of May, 1864, he was promoted to captain. His children were: William C.; Hugh, d.; Margaret, d.; Louis, John and Albert. He has been connected with the P. R. R. since July, 1865, when he commenced as a carpenter. Since 1874, he has been a foreman of bridge builders on W. P. R. R.

REV. ANDREW GETTY, Pastor of the Universalist church, was born on the old Getty homestead, Conemaugh township, in 1826, and was a son of James and Prudence Getty, nee Greene. The former died in 1826, at the age of thirty; the latter in 1878, in her eighty-first year. James Getty was a native of Ireland, and came to the county in 1818, in company with his brothers, Alexander and John. James and John were carpenters, and Alexander was a farmer. James' children were: Catharine, m. to Archibald M. Templeton, James M., m. to Anna Templeton, and Andrew, m. to Margaret G. Henderson. Andrew and Margaret G. Getty's children were: Lucy J., m. to Richard Hill; Margaret Prudence, m. to Charles A. Lyon; Anna Bell, m. to James Gregg; Joseph Andrew, and Lizzie Ralston. Our subject studied theology for two years with Rev. D. Bacon, of Pittsburgh. He was licensed in the fall of 1862, and has been since in active work in his chosen fields of labor. He organized the Saltsburg church in 1870, with fifteen members, and in the same year the edifice was erected, mainly at his own expense. He has now regular services at Allenport, Washington county; Smithton, Westmoreland county, and Falls City, Fayette county, in addition to his home field, and attending other points as a missionary.

James Moore was born in or near Hannastown, Westmoreland county, on the 4th of July, 1774, and died December 9th, 1846, near New Alexandria, where he kept the Union Hotel for many years. He was the son of John Moore, one of the early settlers of this section, and a native of Ireland. Our subject was in the fort at the time Hannastown was destroyed. His wife was Catharine C. Scott, who died in her seventieth year, in 1846. She was born on Pine run, near what is now Apollo, Armstrong county. James Moore's children were: Sarah, d., m. to Capt. Joseph Cook, d.; Rebecca, d., m. to John Laid, J. P.; John, d., m. to Margaret Beatty; Jane, d., m. first to William Cook, d., and second to Thomas Elder; James, d., m. to Jane Clark; William, m. to Mrs. Jane Kean nee Robinson; Maxwell, d., m. to Julia A. Sigler, d.; Mary, m. first to Justin Loomis, d., and second to Hardy Sloan; Elizabeth S., m. to Alexander C. Moorhead, d.; Chambers S., m. to Elizabeth Mathews; and S. S., m. first in 1854, to Margaret A. White, d. in 1872, forty-one years of age, and second in 1875 to Mrs. Margaret Leech nee Gamble. Chambers S. was in the Pennsylvania militia at the time of the Morgan raid. S. S. has been in business in Saltsburg for thirty-three years, and was the first merchant in the tin and stove business and is in the same line of trade to-day. He has been postmaster for ten years, and trustee of the Presbyterian Church for two. His children were: Catharine Elizabeth, Sarah Jane, d.; John W., William S., James A. and Anna Mary.

James M. Hart was born on a farm in what is now Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county, in 1814. The farm was first settled by his grandfather, in 1787, and remained in the possession of the family till 1860. It is now occupied by a Mr. Fennel. James M. was the son of William and Catharine Hart nee McKee. The former was the son of John and Martha Hart nee Thompson. John Hart was a native of Franklin county, and died about 1816; his wife's death occurred in 1831, at the age of seventy-four. William Hart located in Conemaugh township in 1818, and in Saltsburg in 1836. He was a cabinet maker and carpenter, and worked in 1826 on the stone house which occupied the present site of the Presbyterian Church. He died in 1854, at the age of sixty-three. He was married four times, his second wife being Elizabeth White, d. about thirty-two years of age; his third was Isabella McKelvey, d. in 1845, and the fourth was Mrs. Margaret McClanahan, d. about fifty-three years of age. William Hart's children were: James M., m. to Rebecca Rowe, daughter of Adam Rowe, of Indiana; Samuel, d.; Mary A., m. to James R. Daugherty, ex-sheriff; John T., d.; Martha J., d.; Joseph Alexander, d.; William, d.; Isabella, Margaret, Eliza, d.; Maria, and Alexander N., m. to Lizzie J. McClaran. Alexander N. served in the 12th Pa. R. C. for three years. James M. was a mill wright, then a builder of threshing machines, and is now a carpenter. His children were: Clarence, m. to Anna M. Sample; William B., m. to Harriet George; James S., m. to Mary Prothero; and Matilda J. Clarence was in Co. D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. William B. was in Co. C, 9th Pa. R. C. for three years.

Simon B. Mercer was born near Martinsburg, Knox county, Ohio, in 1824, and was a son of Levi and Sarah Mercer nee McCuskey. The former was a native of Maryland, and volunteered in the war of 1812, peace being declared before he was in any engag-ment. He was a son of Simon Mercer, an ex-naval officer, a native of Maryland, who died near Hillsborough, Ohio; the latter was a son of Robert Mercer, or Mercier, a Huguenot, who was among the early settlers of Maryland. Levi Mercer's children were: Elizabeth, m. to John C. Hanna; David, m. to Malinda Cook; Simon B., m. in 1853 to Mary Jane Van Eman, daughter of William Van Eman, of Cannonsburg, Washington county; William, m. to a Miss Honey; Levi, m. to Jane Hauk; Nancy, m. to Rev. Milton McMillan, d.; and Jane, m. to —— ————. Simon B. is one of the elders in the Saltsburg Presbyterian church, this being the third term in three different congregations. Our subject's children are: T. B. V., Anna Mary, O. V., Sarah J., Wm. S., and Edward H. Our subject was educated at the Martinsburg (Knox county, Ohio,) academy, and Jefferson college, graduating in the class of 1851, which he entered in the sophomore year. He was assistant tutor at Jefferson College for two years, and traveled one year in raising funds for the college. He taught his first school at the age of seventeen, near Martinsville, Clark county, Ill., and before going to the west, had grubbed over two hundred acres. His second school was in his native township, Clay, Knox county, Ohio. The more noted institutions taught by or presided over by our subject were: New Manchester academy, Hancock county, West Virginia; an academy in the Kishicoquillis valley, Pa.; Hunterstown, Adams county, Pa., one and one-half years; Dunlap's creek academy, Pa., four and a half years; Beaver academy, Beaver, Pa., six years, and for two of the same years he had charge of the Female Seminary, having purchased the latter institution; Monroe College, Uniontown, Fayette county, Pa., one and a half years; and the Saltsburg Academy, from 1867 to 1872, and after an interval of two years, returned to the school and had charge for two more years. In all he taught for thirty years, his students numbering over three hundred, one hundred of whom have entered the ministry. He has now retired to his farm in Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county, near Saltsburg, where he is studying how to adorn his manor, and to learn the ways of Agricola.

H. J. and S. S. Portser were born in Westmoreland county, and were sons of William and Eliza Portser nee Hammer. The former died in 1844, and the latter, with her family, came to Saltsburg in 1847. Their children were: H. J., m. in 1849 to Harriet Foster, d.; S. S., m. to Harriet White; Sarah F., m. to Philip Keister; R. J., m. to Ellen Walkinshaw; A. C., d., m to J. J. McCune; W. J., m. to Julia A. Watt; I. S., m. to Martha Walkinshaw, and L. F., m. to Jane Guthrie. W. J. was sergeant in company B, 23d Pa. militia, at time of Chambersburg raid. I. S. was in company C, 9th Pa. R. C. for three years; L. F. was in company C, 9th Pa. R. C. for three years, and was twice wounded. H. J. and S. S. Portser, under the firm name of H. & S. Portser, employ several workmen and use two large buildings, each three stories in height, in their business as contractors, carpenters, house and sign painters, and dealers in lumber, doors, sash, hardware, wall paper, paints, &c. They are also agents for the Adams Express Company.

Rev. George W. Baker was born in Washington county in 1822, and was a son of Lewis and Eleanor Baker, nee Baker. He was educated at Allegheny and Waynesburg colleges, graduating from the latter in 1854, taking the second honors. For several years he engaged in teaching, and in 1859–60 he acted as county superintendent of schools of Greene county, and at the same time was principal of the county Academy at Carmichaels. For several years he studied theology, and in 1859 he entered the active work of the ministry. From April, 1874, to April, 1879, he has been preaching in Saltsburg and vicinity. He was married in 1849 to Adaline Dorsey, of Morgantown, West Virginia, who died in 1876. He was married in 1878 to Mrs. C. H. Greene, of Huntingdon county. His children were: W. F., m. to Emma Pyle; John E, d.; Dorsey, m. to Maggie Rigney; William H., m. to Rachel Smith; Ellen Anna L., m. to William Clark; James P., Emma and Carrie, twins, and Frank.

MRS. SARAH J. TRIMBLE was born in the Ligonier valley, Westmoreland county, in 1826, and was a daughter of David and Elizabeth Wallace, nee Elliott. The former was born in the Ligonier valley, and the latter was a native of Ireland. David was a son of Hugh and Mary Wallace, both natives of Ireland. He had migrated at the age of fifty to the county at an early period, and died at a very old age. Our subject was married in 1848 to James Trimble, who died in 1864, in his forty-seventh year. Their children were: William, Sarah Elizabeth, m. to Robert A. Leonard; Samuel, Eva, James H., d.; Adah, Carrie and Emma, triplets.

JOHN WIESTER was born in Washington township in 1830, and was a son of John and Mary A. Wiester, nee Harkless, a daughter of Charles Harkless, a Revolutionary soldier. John was a son of Rudolph Weister, a native of Pennsylvania, and of German parentage. Our subject came to Saltsburg in 1849, to learn the smith trade, and is now the master smith of the iron department of Hail Clark's carriage factory, having labored over thirty years in the same works. He was married in 1855 to Sarah A., a sister of Hail Clark. Their children were: Kate S., m. to Samuel Ashbaugh; Mary Ella, d.; Hail Clark, d.; William C., Henry Lewis, Allison P. and Frank B.

MRS. HARRIET N. GRAHAM was born near New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, in 1830, and was a daughter of William F. and Keziah White nee Dillaplane, who removed to Saltsburg, in 1833. The former died in 1859, at the age of seventy-one; the latter in 1877, eighty-one years old. Our subject was married in 1852, to John L. Graham, (a son of Duncan Graham), a native of Saltsburg, who died in 1860, at the age of thirty. Their children were William White; and Sadie K., organist at the M. E. Church.

JOHN C. BLEAKNEY was born in what is now the Fairbanks' coal farm in 1842, and was a son of Robert and Hetty Bleakney nee Mansfield. The latter died in 1855, forty-three years old. The former was born on the above named farm in 1809, and died in 1871. He was a justice of the peace for several years. He was a son of Hugh and Susannah Bleakney nee Campbell, natives of county Down, Ireland. Hugh was a school-teacher for many years. About the year 1800, he located on the above named tract. Our subject was educated at the Saltsburg Academy, and first taught in Bell township, Westmoreland county. For three years he has been the principal of the Saltsburg schools. He served in company K, 11th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years, and was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run and Gettysburg. He was twice a prisoner, but only for from three to twelve days—his brother Hugh, a member of company F, 11th Pennsylvania volunteers, was killed at the second Bull Run battle. Our subject was married in 1868, to Nannie L. McWilliams, daughter of Robert and Mary McWilliams, who died in 1876, at the age of thirty, leaving two children, Robert McW., and John T.

MARION DEKALB BARNETT was born in Jackson county, Arkansas, in 1849, and was a son of Joseph Barnett, who died in 1857, in Arkansas, and who had migrated from Dauphin county, to that state. Joseph's father served in the Indian wars, and was among the early settlers of Dauphin county. Our subject is said to be the only Barnett of the old stock now living. He came to Saltsburg in 1858, and has since resided there. He learned the trade of cabinet-maker with James B. Robinson, and since March, 1878, has been a partner in the firm of Derry & Barnett, furniture dealers.

MORDECAI LEE was born in Washington, Kentucky, in 1823, and was a son of William, d., and R. A. Lee nee Levi, d. He served in company B, 91st Illinois infantry, for three years, and was wounded at Kennesaw mountain. He was the proprietor of the "Central" Hotel, of Saltsburg, for four years. He was married in 1872, to Mrs. Mary Myers nee McWilliams, whose children by her first marriage were; Geo. W., Alice; John F., W. R., and H. A.

MAJOR R. J. IRVIN was born in Philadelpha, in 1846, and was a son of John and Catharine Irvin nee Taylor. The former came to Saltsburg in 1850, and had a boat that carried freight from there to Philadelphia. His grand-father, John Irvin, was in the revolutionary war. John and Catharine Taylor's children were: R. J.; Maggie, d.; Isabella, d.; and Sarah, m. to Captain S. A. Kelly. Our subject served in company F., 1st battalion Pennsylvania volunteers, for the last year of the war of 1861, and was aid-de-camp with rank of major on Gen. White's staff of the 9th division Pennsylvania militia. He organized company B, 10th regiment Pennsylvania militia, which was mustered into the state service, February 19th, 1879, and has since been the captain of the same.

MAJOR WILLIAM H. JENKINS was born in what is now Burrell township, in 1838, and was a son of John and Sarah Jenkins nee Reed, a daughter of David Reed. John was the son of David and Hannah Jenkins nee Davis, both natives of Wales. The former came to America in 1798, and located near Hannahstown, Westmoreland county. In 1821, he removed to near Campbell's Mills, Black-lick township, where he died in 1832, at the age of seventy-nine; his wife in 1830, at the age of sixty-seven. Their children were: Hannah, d.; and John, d. in 1852, about fifty-two years of age, m. to Sarah Reed. The latter's children were: Phebe, d.; David R.; William H., m. to Kate M. Rombach; Thomas, d., killed at Fredericksburg; Lemuel, m. to Anna Livingston; Harrison, d.; Mary E., m. to John Berry; and Samuel, d. David R. was in company I, 11th Pa. R. C. for two years, and was discharged for disability. William H. was in the militia during the Morgan and Chambersburg raid, in the latter acting as second lieutenant. Thomas was in company E, 11th Pa. R. C. Lemuel was in company I, 11th Pa. R. C., for three years, and was wounded. Our subject's children were: Harry E., d.; Mary F.; Lizzie R., d.; William M., J. Arthur, and Anna Kate. Our subject was a school teacher for ten years, having charge of an academy at Livermore for six. He was for four years connected with the state capital; one as a committee clerk, one as superintendent of folding department, and two as messenger. In 1873, he located in Saltsburg, and has since been connected with the real estate and insurance business. He was appointed justice of the peace in January, 1879, and was elected to the same office in February following. He served three years on the staff of General Thomas F. Gallagher, of the National Guard, with the rank of major, and resigned in 1874.

MRS SUSAN FRY was born near Cochran's Mill, Armstrong county, in 1833, and was a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Gray, nee Wilcox. The former died in 1876, in his seventieth year; the latter in 1849, forty-one years old. Samuel was the son of Samuel Gray, who was born on the ship while his parents were en route from Scotland to America. His wife was Rebecca Adams. They settled in Armstrong county at an early date. Our subject was married in 1854, to David Fry, of German descent, and a native of Westmoreland county. They located in Saltsburg in 1854, where Mr. Fry was a cabinet-maker, he died in 1864, at the age of thirty-one. Their children were: Celia A. and Ida E. Mrs. Fry has had charge of the toll-gate for five years.

JAMES HUDSON was born near New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, in 1840, and was a son of Josiah and Hannah Hudson, nee France. The former was a son of James Hudson, a Scotchman, and his wife, by descent, a German. Our subject was married in 1870, to Margaret, a daughter of Andrew Kelly. Their children are: Ellen, Anna, James R. and Francis Laird. James came to the county in 1857, and for some time was a clerk in a dry goods store. He then learned the carpenter trade, engaged in the business on his own account, and purchased his present property. In the winter of 1877 he made it a regular steam planing mill, which is supplied with a twelve-horse power engine, thirteen-horse power boiler, one planer, two scroll saws, one cut-off saw, one rip saw, one turning lathe, one grooving machine and one shaping machine. He has also a lumber yard in connection with his mill, and carries on a regular building establishment.

W. S. Harris was born in Saltsburg in 1848, and was a son of Abel and Mary Harris, nee Newhouse. The former was a teamster on the old roads and pikes prior to the days of the canal. He died in 1865, at the age of sixty-one. His widow is living, at the age of sixty-five. W. S. was in the quartermaster's department in the war of 1861 about two years. He served in the 101st Pennsylvania veteran volunteers for one year, and was in the government employ for over one year. He was married in 1871 to Frances, daughter of Daniel Stuchell, of Saltsburg. His children are: Joseph C., Jeannet, Corilla and Anna L. Our subject has been a plasterer since 1866.

Dr. Eugene H. Van Antwerp is a native of East Groveland township, Livingston county, New York, where he was born in 1850. He is a son of James P. and Elizabeth Van Antwerp nee Hebard. The former was a son of James and Margaret Van Antwerp. Our subject was a student at the Genesee Wesleyan seminary of Lyman, N. Y. He graduated from Jefferson medical college of Philadelphia, in the class of 1878, and located in Saltsburg in the spring of that year.

John H. Richards was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1853, and was a son of Robert E. and Rosanna Richards nee Thompson. The former was a native of Jefferson county and died in Iowa in 1855, at the age of thirty-eight. He was an Elder in the U. P. Church in New Alexandria and Iowa. He was a son of James and Hannah Richards nee Elder. The former died in New Alexandria, in 1827, about fifty-five years of age; the latter in 1855, about seventy-five years old. James Richards had a carding machine, and worked at an early day in various places in Westmoreland, Indiana, Jefferson and other counties. For some years he had a carding machine and linseed oil factory on the point opposite the present site of Saltsburg. Mrs. Robert E. Richards located in Saltsburg in 1855. Her children were: Emma, m. to Samuel Stout; James A., cigar manufacturer; Hannah, m. to J. S. McConnell; William T.; John H., merchant; and Anna E.

Andrew A. Taylor was born in a house which stood on the lot now occupied by him, in saltsburg, in 1820, and was a son of John and Mary Taylor nee Armstrong. The latter was a son of Andrew Armstrong, who had the ferry where the bridge now is. The former died in 1841, at the age of sixty-one; his wife in 1836 about fifty-eight years old. Mr. Armstrong is supposed to have located at the site of Saltsburg about the beginning of the war of 1812, and Mr. Taylor arrived about five or six years later. John Taylor's children were: Andrew A., m. to Mary Kelly, Elizabeth, John, Harrison, Maria, Thomas and James. Harrison, Thomas and James served in the war of 1861 for three years.

Enoch Medsker was born in Allegheny county, in 1821, and was the son of Michael and Nancy Medsker nee Holmes. The former was a son of Conrad Medsker, a soldier in the war of 1812 from Allegheny county, and who died at the age of one hundred and two, in Wayne county, Ohio. Our subject lived in Westmoreland county for twenty-five years, being a miller at different points. He came to Saltsburg in 1878, and has since been the managing miller of the Laird mill. He has been thrice married: first to Barbara Hart, d.; second to Eliza Ann Caldwell, d., and third to Susannah Walter. His children were: Hiram H., d.; William J., m. to Elizabeth Bleakney; Almira F., m. to Albert F. Lemon; James C., d.; Eliza Ann, David E., Mary E., Willis S. E. and Maggie M.

Thomas B. Patton was born in Lancaster county, in 1827, and was a son of William and Margaret Patton nee Dulan, natives of Lancaster county. The father of William was John Patton, of Irish descent, and a captain in the revolutionary army, who lived for some years in what is now Dauphin county. William Patton died in 1863, about sixty years of age. Our subject when eight years old went to Laughlinstown, Westmoreland county. In 1848, he removed to Blairsville, where he learned his trade with John P. Ford. He returned to Laughlinstown, where he managed a wagon making shop on his own account; he also served as postmaster for eight years, during Pierce's and Buchanan's administrations. After residing in Bairdstown and Indiana, he removed to Saltsburg in 1859; his shop was built by Maj. Jamison for a stable and formerly stood near the bridge, and by the canal basin. It was removed by Mr. Patton to the bed of the old canal, near Washington street. He was married in 1850, to Margaret, daughter of Henry Brubaker. Their children were: Mary, Hannah, John, Hugh, Clark, Elizabeth, E. M., d., Annie, Chaney and Della. Mr. Patton has been sexton of the Presbyterian Church for nine years.

John Campbell was born in what is now Loyalhanna township, in 1812, and was a son of John and Anna Campbell nee McKee. The former died in 1815, about sixty years of age; and the latter also in the same year. Their children were: Thomas, d., m. to Elizabeth Dawson, d.; Hugh, d., m. to Marietta Eccles; Mary, m. to James Coleman, d.; Margaret, m. to John Wilson, d.; John, m. in 1838, to Lavina McGaughey, daughter of William and Rachel McGaughey nee Reed, a daughter of Thomas Reed, the pioneer; and William, d. John Campbell and wife joined what is now the U. P. Church, under the ministration of Rev. David Blair, the former at eighteen and the latter at seventeen years of age. Mr. Campbell was reared by his uncle, James Hart, and carried butter, &c., when a boy, to the Latshan, Skilton, LeMar and other Salt Works, selling the butter for six cents per pound—he served as justice of the peace for thirteen years, and as elder in the U. P. Church for twenty years.

Thomas Reed made the first settlement on the Reed farm, and often forced to fly on account of the Indians. His children were: Elizabeth, m. to John McCrea, d.; Martha, d., m. to Thos. McGaughey, d.; and Rachel, d., m. to Wm. McGaughey, d. The latter's children were: Lavina, m. to John Campbell; Thomas R. M. D., d., m. to Sarah Bowman, d.; John, d., m.; Robert T., m.; Mary Jane, m. first to Fowler Riley, d.; and second to Chester Reed; and William, m. to Elizabeth People.

David Henderson was born in what is now Young township, in 1814, and was a son of John and Letitia Henderson nee Fullerton. The former and wife were natives of Ireland, where they were married, and located in what is now Indiana county, in 1786, his father and family accompanying him. The grandfather's children were: James, David, Joseph, Robert, Alexander, Jane, Isabella, and Lucy. Joseph and Robert were in the war of 1812. All of his family are deceased. John and Letitia Henderson's children were: Mary, d., m. to David Hutchinson, d.; Robert, m. to Margaret Hazlett, d.; Jane, d., m. to Hugh Blakeley, d.; James, thrice married, his first wife was Elizabeth Morrison, d.; Lucy, d., m. to Alexander Reed, d.; John, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Alexander Campbell; Joseph, d., m. to Mrs. Catharine Ewing; Letitia, m. to Daniel Wilson; David, m. first to Jane Geer, d., and second to Mrs. Ann H. Redpath; William, d.; Samuel, m. to Margaret Anthony; Andrew; and Alexander, m. to Jane Hood. Our subject's children were: John, d., James, d.; Edward, d.; Theodore, baptist clergyman, m. to Ella Shurick; Anna Mary, m. to Samuel McGowan, Phebe; Thomas, m. to Margaret McClintock; and Amy E., m. to Edwin Walter. Theodore was in company B, 11th Pennsylvania R. C., about four years, and was wounded.

HAIL CLARK was born in Lancaster county, in 1828, and was a son of Alexander and Catharine Clark nee Leader. The former was born "on the sea" and died in 1838. He was a son of Henry Clark, a native of Ireland. Catharine Clark died in 1841. Our subject worked on the canal, driving a team, &c., when only thirteen years of age, and then commenced to learn his trade as a wagon and carriage maker with Adam Stark, of Greensburg, and served six years, traveling one as a journeyman. In 1848 he located in Saltsburg, where he has since been busily engaged. He was married in 1851 to Cordelia F., daughter of William Gorgas, of Greensburg. Their children were: Murray J., William A., Joseph N., d.; Ida, d., and Ferdinand. In 1850 Mr. Clark organized the "Saltsburg Guards," with forty men, of which he was a sergeant, and a Mr. McIntire the captain. In 1858 the "Black Hornets" were formed into a company, of which he was the captain till it disbanded, in April, 1861. In April, 1861, he organized a company for the war, but the state would not accept their services. In the spring of 1862 he raised a company of militia, of which he was the captain, Devinney Ferguson the first lieutenant and W. S. Jenkins second lieutenant. They went to Harrisburg, when the state accepted their services, furnished arms, &c. In five days they were ordered home as the emergency had passed away.

J. REED was born in Indiana in 1826, and was the son of Rev. John and Isabella Reed, nee Ferguson. The latter died 1878, in her eighty-fifth year, and retained her faculties till the last hour of departure. Rev. John Reed located in Indiana in 1816, as pastor of the Presbyterian church. He was a noted linguist, and in the Presbytery he and Rev. David Kirkpatrick were accustomed to examine the applicants for license. He also for some years was a professor in Washington College. He died in 1840, at the age of fifty-eight. His, as well as his wife's remains are interred in the Saltsburg cemetery. His children were: Margaretta, m. to Rev John P. Lloyd; Sarah, m. to Dr. John McFarland; William, M. D., m. to Mary Snodgrass; John, m. to Rachel McVay, daughter of James McVay, of Washington county; and Mary, m. to Hon George V. Lawrence, of Washington county.

JAMES RODGER was born at Coatbridge, near Glasgow, Scotland, in 1823, and was a son of Joseph and Ellen Rodger, nee Gardner. He was educated for an engineer, pursued from youth that avocation. In 1849 he came to New York, and thence to Pittsburgh, where he was second engineer on the steamboat "Arena," in the Allegheny river trade. In 1851, he removed to Saltsburg and has since been connected with the foundry with his name is associated. He was married in 1853 to Jennie Johnston, a native of Scotland, daughter of Robert Johnston.

DAVID O. BROWN was born on the Brown homestead, near New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, in 1834, and was a son of Thomas and Nancy Brown nee Beatty. The former died in 1866, at the age of sixty-six; the latter in 1839, in her thirtieth year. His second wife was Sarah Patterson, who died in 1857, at the age of fifty-six; and his third was Margaret Campbell, who died in 1875. Thomas Brown's children were: Martha, m. to D. P. Marshall; David O., in 1869, to Mary A. Stewart; Sarah, m. to William Steel; Margaret, d., m. to John M. Elder; Mary, m. to James Monroe; and Nancy, m. to Henry Seanor.

Thomas Brown was the son of David and Margaret Brown nee Oliver. The former was the son of Mathew Brown, who was a captain in King William's army at the battle of the Boyne. His sword is now in the possession of our subject. Thomas Brown died in 1841, at the age of eighty-four; his wife in 1842, seventy-nine years of age. The former came from Ireland to America during the Revolution. He was a stone mason, as well as farmer, and aided in erecting the first stone house in Harrisburg, and in constructing, in 1785, the stone arch bridge over the Conococheugue near Greencastle, where he lived. This bridge is still standing. He worked at his trade for several years in the Cumberland valley. He settled on the Brown homestead in 1802, having purchased it in 1799 from his brother Samuel. He repurchased it in 1803 from General Alex. Craig, who held the legal title. The land was surveyed in pursuance of a warrant dated July 29, 1784. His children were: Mary, d., m. to Nathaniel Alexander, d.; Thomas, (see notes of marriage and death) Elizabeth, d., m. to Thomas Gailey; David, d., m. to Maria Beatty, d.; James, m. to Margaret Wilson, d.; and Margaret, m. to John Coleman. Our subject entered the army, August 8, 1862, as a private in company G, 135th Pa. vols., and served nine months; he re-enlisted in company G, 110th Pa. vols,, of which he was the first lieutenant, and served till June 30, 1865. In the fall of 1863, and spring of 1864, in connection with Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, (both Covenanters,) he assisted in organizing the colored schools in the District of Columbia, and he taught the first school of the District. This was situated on the corner of "N" and "O" streets, south of First street, west. From 1870 to 1877, he was a partner in the wholesale grocery house of Stewart & Co., and on the 1st of March of th latter year, he removed to Saltsburg, and has since been the cashier of the Farmers and Merchants' Bank. His children were: James, d., John and Mary.

J. J. MCCUNE, agent Domestic sewing machines. Born in county in 1829.

J. S. SMITH, printer, former buisiness manager Press.

ARMAGH, EAST WHEATFIELD TOWNSHIP.

This village, the second and the oldest of all the existing towns in the county, (Newport being the first,) was founded in September, 1792, by Margaret Jane Graham, the wife of James Graham.

The first settlers were a portion of a ship load of emigrants from Ireland, most of them being from the counties Armagh and Antrim, who arrived in America on the 21st day of July, 1792. They located in Western Pennsylvania, eight families arriving on the present site of Armagh, in the early portion of August of that year.

These eight families were from an Associate Reformed church, in the county Armagh, and were composed of James Graham, Margaret J., his wife, and four children by a former husband, a Mr. Parker; David Tomb, (a brother of Mrs. Graham,) wife, one child and a sister, Mary Tomb; James Anderson, and wife; A. Fee, wife and one child, Elizabeth; Alexander Carnathan, wife and four children; James Leslie, and wife; James Luke, and wife; and Hugh Junkins and wife.

The site of Armagh was partially covered with a thin and scrubby growth of oaks, and was like in appearance to an old field on a hill. Armagh, Armaghada, in the Irish dialect, means a field on a hill, hence its name.

In the first fall of their occupancy, they were forced to fly to the East St. Clair block house, near the present of site of Laughlinstown, in the Ligonier valley, and there was little feeling of safety in the new settlement, till after the treaty with the Indians at Greeneville, in 1795.

The first birth is said to have been that of Jeannette Fee, on the 22d of August, 1793. She is still living in Blairsville.

In the summer and fall of 1799, a subscription school, the first school in the village was taught by Robert Davis, an old revolutionary soldier, who resided near where Hoskin's mill is now situated. He died in 1813, over sixty years of age, and was buried in the old Luthers' grave yard.

The scholars who attended this first school were, Katie Tomb, Hugh Tomb, John Tomb, Elizabeth Fee, Jeannette Fee, (our informant,) Josias Fee, and Elizabeth Carr.

There were no books, save those in the hands of the teacher. Letters were pasted on a board with a handle to it, in shape and appearance like unto a paddle.

The old log building used for a school house, was located south of Philadelphia street, not far from the present site of the Presbyterian church.

The first tavern was opened by James Graham. It was a rude log building like its fellows, and in the beginning of the century, was in active operation.

A blacksmith shop was established about 1800, by Peter Dyke, and his place was resorted to for many miles around. The next blacksmiths were in order, David Campbell, John Clarebaugh, Samuel Devlin, Wm. Devlin, Daniel Tinkcom, Jesse Butler, Jno. D. Tomb, and brother (Richard), Thomas L. Bidelman, and Abram Wilson.

About this time the place was regularly surveyed by Joseph McCartney, and order took the place of indiscriminate lots and streets. Not long after the opening of the first smith, Molley Dempsey opened a little store, the first in the village. Her stock was small, but it was ample to meet all the demands of her patrons. James Luke packed for her, tow and flax to Hagerstown and Mercersburg, and brought back in return, calico, salt, tea, &c. As an item of interest, we would state that at Armagh, calico was then sold for fifty cents per yard, salt fifty cents per quart, and other goods in proportion. Mollie's shop was situated in a little log building which stood east of the old residence of the Devlins, on the north side of Philadelphia street.

The next store was opened by Wm. Parker and Wm. Johnston. In 1810 it was situated on the south side of Philadelphia street, near the present site of the Presbyterian church. Old settlers speak of their store being in operation as early as 1804. It, too, was a small affair, but a great improvement upon its predecessor.

Thomas Dickey was the third merchant and second tavern keeper. His location was on the present site of Biddleman & McCochren's wagon shop.

James Elliott was the next merchant and tavern keeper. His store and hotel was located in a log building, which stood on the present site of Tinkcom's hotel, on Philadelphia street. He was succeeded by Robert Brandon, Gen. John Hued, John M. Davidson, John Thompson, Samuel Singer, Daniel Tinkcomb (the present proprietor), William Parker and Captain Tinkcom, aforenamed.

The first carpenters were William and Samuel Parker, who were also chair and furniture makers.

On the corner now occupied by Mrs. Elliott, Alexander Elliott and Samuel Mears were early merchants. They were succeeded by John Elliott, John Elliott and J. J. Johnston, A. Elliott and S. A. Johnston, who continued till 1876.

In a building which was situated on the site of the house owned by Mrs. Jane Freed, Frederick Leiddy (or Leydy) was an early store-keeper. He was followed by William Barnwell, Henry Moore, Johnston & Thompson and Nutter & Cunningham. The building was destroyed and the present store-house was erected by Mrs. Freed, whose son is managing the present business.

In the papers of 1823, James Elliott, jun., announces: "Armagh Inn, James Elliott, jun., respectfully informs his friends and the public in general, that he has again opened a house of Publick Entertainment on the premises formerly occupied by Samuel Parker." This probably applies to the old building, now empty, the property of Archibald Tomb, where Samuel Parker kept a hotel at an early day. He was succeeded by Jas. Elliott, David McQuiston, the Widow Rhodes, and John Wallace, who was the last innkeeper.

The first tanner was Robert Luther, whose location was on the southeast corner of Canal and Philadelphia streets. He was followed by Benjamin Elliott, James Dick, Samuel Singer, Alex. Elder and Elliott and Beatty, all being on the same location. In 1842, James Dick erected the present tannery. It is situated in the rear of his residence on Philadelphia street. There are eighteen outside and six inside vats. About six hundred hides are tanned annually.

The first physicians, in order, were: John Young, Andrew Getty, Van Horn and Samuel Devlin. The succession was: Geddis, W. G. Stewart, S. F. Stewart, Robert Barr, R. J. Tomb and W. B. Stewart. Dr. Tomb is the present practitioner.

The first justice of the peace was James Dunn.

The first saddler was Thomas Carr, a bachelor, who was also the first postmaster. His shop and postoffice was situated very nearly on the site of the present postoffice. It was in this building that the earliest remembered election took place. Thomas Stewart was also among the early postmasters. He had a store, then a tavern and stage office, the latter being the first established in the village. He was followed by George Clark and Kennedy Stewart. The building was situated on the site of the lot now owned by the Stewart heirs.

The Armagh Foundry was built by James Johnston and Absalom Thompson, who were succeeded by Wm. D. Tomb and Brothers.

In 1810, according to Samuel Killon, Armagh had as many houses and as great a population as to-day. There was not a church or a well constructed building in the village. The nearest church was a log building erected by the Presbyterians, on what is now the John Junkin's farm. A few years later, a stone church was erected by the "Seceder Presbyterians," about three miles southwest of the place. It is still standing about ten rods north of the frame seceder church. In this year an era of prosperity had commenced. Hundreds of wagons filled with emigrants passing through en route for Ohio and Indiana. Armagh then boasted four hotels (Thomas Dickey, Jas. Moorhead and two others) and three stores, and every man who had produce to sell found a good market in the village. Farmers even from Armstrong county, wended their way to the village to sell their butter and eggs. In 1820, Armagh boasted of nine taverns and five stores. In 1832, the State Gazetteer reported: "Armagh, p. t. of Wheatfield township, Indiana county, on the turnpike road from Ebensburg to Pittsburgh, 15 miles S. E. of the borough of Indiana, 175 miles from Washington City, 141 W. from Harrisburg, and 13 milss E. from Blairsville; contains about 40 dwellings, 4 stores and 6 taverns."

[From Harris' Directory of 1837.]

ARMAGH,

Indiana county, is a very healthy town, on Laurel Hill. It is distant fifty-six miles east of Pittsburgh, on the northern turnpike, about two miles from the Pennsylvania canal, fourteen miles east from Blairsville, west from Carroll Hill nineteen, and eleven from Johnstown. In this place is one church, Presbyterian, Rev. J. Terry, pastor. Also three meeting houses in the vicinity, one Methodist, one Baptist, and one Seceder, pastor, Rev. N. Sproul.

DIRECTORY OF ARMAGH.

Postmaster—James Johnston. Merchants—J. & R. Brandon, Mrs. Elliott, —— Meinor. Doctor—Samuel Deulin. Innkeepers—Gen. John Huey, Thomas Steward. Blacksmith—John Deulin. Tanner—Samuel Singes. Chair maker—David Luke. Hatter—James McDonald. Cabinet maker—James Johnston. Wagon maker—Alexander McKinley. Tailor—Jacob Ballard. Woolen factory, owned by A. Mathews.

There are eight grist and four saw mills in the neighborhood of Armagh. Owners of grist mills, Frederick Forrest, Nicholas Altimer, Hugh Cavens, Jacob Gammel, Paul Clark, Henry Rogers, James Finley, M Bracken. Saw mills, Henry Luthers, Thomas Martin, Wm. Clarke, Ephraim McCelway.

Armagh borough, chartered by act of Assembly, passed April 10th, 1834.

1834-5 6-7-8-9—Burgess, Col. Robert Brandon. Council, William Devlin, James Dick, James Devlin, Wm. Parker, John Huey.

1840-1-2-3—Burgess, Thomas Stewart. Council, Wm. Johnston, Henry M. Moore, Robert Brandon, Wm. Parker, Joshua M. Barkley.

1844—Burgess, Joshua M. Barkley. Council, John W. Brandon, John Thompson, jr., Samuel P. Johnston William Parker, Samuel Singer.

1845-6-7-8—Burgess, Samuel P. Johnston. Council, Hugh Parker, J. M. Barkley, James Dick, James McDonald, John Brandon.

1849—Burgess, J. M. Barkly. Council, A. P. Thompson, Samuel Singer, Daniel Edwards, William Parker, sr., Robert Brandon.

1850—Burgess, William Clark. Council, William Parker, sr., John Brandon, G. W. Clark, J. M. Barkly, Jesse Butler.

1851-2-3-4—Burgess, Robert Ford. Council, Jas. S. Graham, Daniel Tinkcom, Geo. Hutchison, Daniel Edwards, Alexander Elliott.

1855—Burgess, Samuel W. Drips. Council, James Dick, J. M. Barkley, John D. Tomb, Findley Bracker and Geo. Hutchison.

1856—Burgess, Samuel W. Drips. Council, J. M. Barkly, John D. Tomb, Hugh Parker, John B. Brandon and K. B. Stewart.

1857—Burgess, J. M. Barkly. Council, A. P. Thompson, Hugh Parker, Robert Beatty, Finly Bracken and Daniel Edwards.

1858-9-60—Burgess, J. M. Bargly. Concil, Hugh Parker, A. P. Thompson, D. Edwards, B. Beatty and Finley Bracken.

1861—Burgess, A. L. Waterman. Council, Wm. Hart, Wm. Tomb, Robert Beatty, Wallace B. Stewart, Robert J. Tomb.

1862—Burgess, Daniel Edwards. Council, S. A. Johnston, Robert Beatty, Finley Bracken, Wm. Tomb, Wm. Hart.

1863-4—Burgess, Wallace B. Stewart. Council, Finley Bracken, D. C. Tomb, Daniel Warren, John H. Cunningham, William Hart.

1865—Burgess, John H. Cunningham. Council, John Brandon, James Dick, W. B. Stewart, F. Bracken, Wm. Hart.

1866—Burgess, Wm. Hart. Council, James Dick, D. C. Tomb, J. H. Cunningham, Samuel W. Drips and T. W. Bowen.

1867-8-9—Burgess, Samuel W. Drips. Council, A. P. Thompson, William Thompson, S. A. Johnston, T. L. Bidelman, Daniel Tinkcom.

1870-1-2—Burgess, William Hart. Council, S. A. Johnston, D. Tinkcom, T. L. Bidelman, A. P. Thompson, J. Stewart Dick.

1873—Burgess, Samuel W. Drips. Council, William Hart, S. A. Johnston, T. L. Bidelman, William Tomb, James Dick.

1874-5—Burgess, Samuel W. Drips. Council, William Hart, S. A. Johnston, T. L. Bidelman, James Dick, William Tomb.

1866-7-8-9—Burgess, S. W. Drips. Council, Daniel Tinkcom, William Tomb, T. L. Bidelman, J. S. Dick, S. H. Johnston.

Robert Brandon, 6 years; Thomas Stewart, 4 years; J. M. Barkley, 6 years; S. P. Johnston, 4 years; William Clark, 1 year; Robert Ford, 4 years; S. M. Drips, 12 years; John H. Cunningham, 1 year; William Hart, 4 years; A. L. Watterson, 1 year; W. B. Stewart, 2 years; D. Edwards, 1 year.

THE TOMBS.

The children of William Tomb, of Ireland were: John came to America in 1790; Hugh remained in Ireland; David, m. to Elizabeth Dickson; Catharine, m. to James Anderson; Mary, m. to Richard Dempsey; Elizabeth, m. to Alexander Carnathan; and Margaret Jane, m. first to William Parker, and second to James Graham. With the exception of Richard Dempsey, the remainder of the family were of the party who made the settlement of Armagh, in August, 1792.

David Tomb died in 1838, at the age of seventy-eight; his wife in 1854, at the age of eighty-four. Their children were: Catharine, d.; Hugh d. in 1863, sixty-nine years old, m. in 1818, to Nancy Devlin; John, d., m. to Frances Shaw, d.; Mary, d., m. to Samuel Killen; Richard Dickson; Jane; William, d.; Elizabeth, m. to John Buchan; and David, m, to Angelina Killen. David, was justice of the peace for fifteen years.

Hugh Tomb's (son of David) children were: Samuel D., d., m. to Maria Louisa McCortney, d.; David, m. first to Matilda Clark, d.; and second to Jane Bracken; John D., m. to Lucinda Hutchinson; William D., m. to Ellen McKelvey; George Washington, m. first to Mary Ling, d., and second to Elizabeth Bracken; Richard D., d., m. to Emily Clark; Robert J., M. D., m. to Fannie Shearer; Dewitt, C., m. to Mary Berkey; B. F., M. D., m. to Sarah Odell; Archibald D., and Matilda, d., twins, the former m. to Amanda Dill; James, d.; and James F. Dr. Robert J., was assistant surgeon in the 2d Pennsylvania volunteers, eight months, surgeon of 193d Pennsylvania volunteers for six months, and acting assistant surgeon United States army for sixteen months. James F. was in company H, 12th Pennsylvania R, C. for three years. He was a prisoner in Libby, for twenty-eight days. William D. was justice of the peace for 15 years. The children of Samuel D., a son of Hugh Tomb, were: James Estep, m. to Mary McElroy Hutchison; Mary Agnes, d.; Matilda J., m. to B. S. Dill, Robert J., d. The only son of James Estep, son of Samuel D. Tomb, is Samuel Roy. The children of David, a son of Hugh Tomb, were: Clark, m. to Melissa Altimus, d.; Dixon, Caroline, Mary and Edward Watson. The children of John D. a son of Hugh Tomb, were: Joseph C., Geo. Steele, d.; Robert Anderson, Nancy Jane, Hugh, Blanch and John C. The children of William D., a son of Hugh Tomb, were: Martha, d.; Eliza Jane, Hugh M., m. to Fannie F. Moore; Nancy, d.; William and Frank. George Washington's (a son of Hugh Tomb) children were: Agnes, d.; Alice, Henson F., Emeline and Harry W. The Geo. W. Tomb land was warranted to Andrew Porter, November 2, 1773, and was patented to said Porter, December 7, 1781. The tract was called "Andrew's Delight." The Frankstown road passed in sight of the residence of Mr. Tomb. Robert J. Tomb, M. D., read medicine with James Taylor, M. D., of West Fairfield, Westmoreland county. He graduated at Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, in the spring of 1854, and located in Armagh on the first of May of that year. His only child is Jennie S., m. to Christian Rugh. B. F. Tomb read medicine with his brother, Robert J. Tomb, M. D. He graduated at the Western Reserve Medical College, of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1867. He began the practice in 1860, in Chess Springs, Cambria county. In 1863 he located in Armagh, and there remained till his removal in 1867 to Mechanicsburg. James F. Tomb, a son of Hugh, was five years in the mercantile business with his brother, R. J., under the firm name of R. J. & J. Tomb. For eight years he has been engaged in the manufacture of wagons and general wood work. The children of David, a son of David and Elizabeth Tomb were: David Harbison, graduate of the Indiana normal school, in the class of 1878; William Rodgers, Mary Josephine, and Dickinson Vance.

Mrs. Margaret J. Graham, the founder of Armagh, died May 9th, 1827, at the age of seventy-four, and was buried in the Mathews grave yard. Her children by her first husband, William Parker, were: Samuel, d., in the winter of 1812-13, m. to Elizabeth McDonald, d.; William, d., m. to Jane McCaffran, d.; Jane, d., m. to William Johnston, d.; and Hugh, d. in the winter of 1812-13. The children by her second husband, James Graham, were: Catharine, d., m. to John Mack, d., and Mary, d. in the winter of 1812-13. Many years prior to the death of Mrs. Graham, her lands were divided into five shares, of which Samuel, William, Hugh and Jane Parker and Catharine Graham each received a share. James Johnston resides to-day on the Jane Johnston nee Parker share.

James Dick was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1802, and was a son of James and Mary Dick nee Dinsmore. In the spring of 1811, the family started for America, and while within sight of New York City, the vessel was captured by the English and taken to Halifax. Three of the sons, John, Robert and William were pressed into the naval service and were for six weeks on the Guerriere before they were released. In the spring of 1812, the family arrived in Indiana county, and located within a mile of what is now Centreville. James and Mary Dick's children were: John, b. in 1787, still living in West Wheatfield township, m. to Sarah Griffith, d.; Robert, b. in 1789, still living in West Wheatfield township, m. to Jane Lapsley; William, d., m. to Isabella Nelson, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Margaret Hice; Jane, m. first to William Moffett, d., and second to John Southwell, d.; James, m. first to Ann Graham, d., and second to Mary Stewart, d.; Jeannet, m. to Thomas Love, and Alexander B., m. to Mary Kelly. John was county commissioner for three years. James was supervisor of canal from Lockport to Sutton's dam for three years. John's (a son of James and Mary Dick) children were: Mary Jane, m. to Daniel Murphy; Smith, m. to Esther Mabon; Margaret, m. to Jacob Frankhouser; James, m. to Mary Mitchell; Isaac, d., and Sarah, d. Smith was in the war of 1861. The children of James (a son of James and Mary Dick), were: Robert, d., C. E; Ann, m. to Andrew W. Wilson: John Stewart; Thomas W., attorney, m. to Lucinda Kern; Mary E., Wallace B., Lucinda, Samuel, m. to Barbara Ella Bidelman. Thomas W. was in Co. H, 12th Pennsylvania reserve corps for three years.

Captain Daniel Tinkcom was born in Armagh in 1825, and was a son of Daniel Tinckcom and Mrs. Isabella Parker, nee McDonald, a sister of James McDonald, a pioneer of Brush Valley. Daniel, Sr., was a native of Rhode Island, and migrated to Armagh in 1808. He died in 1840, about fifty years of age; his wife in 1876, over ninety-one years of age. Their children were: Sarah Anna, John L., m. to Margaret Elder, and Daniel, m. first to Caroline Clark, d.; second to Ann J. Johnston, d., and third to Nancy J. Trimble. Our subject was captain of Co. F, of the 2d battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers. He has been the proprietor of the "Union Hotel" at Armagh for twenty-four years. Captain Tinkcom's children were: Thomas, William P., J. L., Isabella Caroline, d.; James J. and Joseph H. Mrs. Isabella Tinkcom's first husband was Samuel Parker, a son of William and Margaret Parker. The latter's second husband was James Graham. The children of Samuel and Isabella Parker were: John, d., and William, d.

John Shoup was born in Cambria county, in 1837, and was a son of Michael and Elizabeth Shoup nee Lybarger. The former was born in Cambria county in 1880, and was, as well as his wife, of German descent. Our subject came to what is now Nolo, in 1860, and in 1876 located in Armagh, where he is now, as he has been for fourteen years, engaged in the manufacture of threshing machines and general woodwork. He was married in 1863, to Sarah Patterson, of Buffington township. Their children were: William, d.; Charles W., Mattie Ann, and Mary E.

A. H. Wolf was born near Aaronsburg, Centre county, in 1836, and was a son of David and Hannah Wolf nee Harter. The former was a son of George Wolf, a Revolutionary soldier, and among the early settlers of Centre county. David Wolf and family located in 1839, about three miles north of Indiana; he died in 1878, nearly seventy-three years of age; his wife, now living, is over seventy-two years of age. David's children were: George and Jacob, d., twins, the former m. to Elizabeth Lydick; John, m. to Elizabeth Lydick (no relation to aforenamed Lydick); Samuel, m. to Jane Wilson; A. H., m. to E. E. Bartlebaugh; David, d.; D. C. H., m. to Susan Dick; Mary C., m. to Joseph Haines; Thomas H. F., d., and Sophia, d. John was in the 102d Pa. vols., for eighteen months. A. H. was in company H., 12th Pennsylvania R. C., two years and eight months, and in company E, 190th Pennsylvania volunteers, one year and eight months. Thomas H. F. was in company F, 11th Pennsylvania volunteers about fifteen months, and died in the service. A. H.'s children were: Floranna, Hannah Mary, d.; Priscilla, William M., and Robert Francis. Our subject has resided in Armagh since 1872.

Samuel W. Drips was born in Allegheny county in 1820, and was a son of William and Elizabeth Drips, nee Bash, both of whom died before our subject was eight years of age. He located in the county in 1851, and since 1852, his residence has been in Armagh. He was married in 1841, to Elizabeth K. McKendree, of Cumberland county. Their children were: Joseph, d.; Arthur M., d.; Anna V., d.; Harry W., m. to Elizabeth Coho; John D., m. to Anna Campbell; Lily, d., and Robert M. Harry W. was nearly four years in the service, being in the same company and regiment with his father. Our subject in 1839 served eight months in the Texas navy, and was wounded while in action. He entered the 12th Pennsylvania reserve corps in July, 1861; was transferred to the 190th Pennsylvania volunteers in May, 1864, and was discharged June 28th, 1865. He was commissary sergeant of the 12th, saddler to the ambulance corps of the 3d division of Pennsylvania reserves; quartermaster sergeant of ambulance corps; acting sergeant-major of the regiment and adjutant's clerk; forage master of the 3d brigade, 3d division, 5th corps; forage master to the 2d division; forage master to the 5th corps, and forage agent of the 5th corps. He served ten years as justice of the peace, and two terms as county auditor. He has a silver badge presented to him as forage agent by the forage masters of the fifth army corps.

Thos. L. Bidelman was born in Pleasant Unity, Westmoreland Co., in 1830, and was the son of John and Christina Bidelman, nee Walters. The former was a native of New Jersey. In 1831 he migrated to Armagh, only remaining a few years. Our subject was married in 1851, to Mary, daughter of Isaac Decker. Their children were: Sarah, m. to Newton Bracken; Christina, m. to Webster McCachren; Angeline, Barbara Ella, m. to Samuel Dick, Mary, Lucretia, Grant, Orpha, Lucy, d.; Aubert and Earl. Our subject has worked at the smith trade for thirty-five years, the last eleven being at Armagh.

Abram Wilson was born on the Jacob Brown tract, in what is now Buffington township, and was a son of John and Susan Wilson nee Boring, d. John's second wife was Barbara Beringer, d. John was the son of Alexander and Elizabeth Wilson. The former died about seventy years of age; his wife died about the same age. John died in 1878, about eighty-two years of age. Alexander Wilson settled where William Stephens now resides in Buffington township about 1790. John Wilson's children were: Thomas, d., m.: William, m. to Margaret Ferguson; Mary Ann, m. to McCartney Wilson; Abram, m. in 1852 to Margaret J. Stilts; Wesley, m. to a Hildebrand; Elizabeth, d.; Johnston; and David. Abram's children were: Henry G., m. to Jane Morrison; Mary, m. to Chas. McGaughey; Emberson, d.; Lucinda and Emily C., d.

HOMER CITY, CENTRE TOWNSHIP, is situated on a body of land formed of parts of two tracts; one patented in the name of John Allison, and the other to John and Wm. Cummins. About the commencement of the present century, Mr. Allison had a mill on Yellow creek, about fifteen rods below the present dam. The second mill was also erected by Mr. Allison. There was a saw mill and carding machine connected with it. This was erected several years prior to the founding of the village. The McConaugheys, who resided opposite the the site of the village for many years, had a canoe ferry on Two-lick. The second Allison mill passed successively through the following proprietors: William Richards, Samuel Dixon, James Simpson, Robert Craig, Armor Phillips, from whom the post-office received its name; Henry Ketler, George Christy, and in 1870, R. R. Ellis.

The first store was established by John Mullen in 1832. It is still standing on the east side of Main street, near Two-lick. Mr. Mullen erected three store houses before the platting of the village. The second merchant was Hugh Devers who not long after the starting of the Mullen store, had removed to this locality and commenced to sell goods and buy country produce (eggs 2 to 3c per doz, butter 5 to 8 and 10c per lb.), which he wagoned to Pittsburgh. This store was situated on Main street, directly opposite the gate of J. H. Devers. After a continuance of ten years he was succeeded by Devers & Craig, then James and John H. Devers, who removed to the old store room of Mullen & Allison, afterward Mullen & Phillips.

The village was laid out in 1854, by William Wilson who called it for the ancient poet—Homer. The railroad was completed to the village in 1855. The first house after the survey was erected by Isaac Kilton, the second blacksmith; this stands below his residence on Main street. Mr. Wilson then erected a frame building used as a tavern by Matthew Kerr, the first carpenter. This house is now the property of John Peddicord. Mr. Wilson erected a store room, in company with John Griffiith, in which they opened the first store after the founding of the town. This building was erected on the site of an old store room erected several years before, by John Mullen.

The first steam mill was erected by Mr. Wilson for a saw mill. It was afterward changed into a grist mill.

The first blacksmith on the site of the village, was Wilson McDonnell. The first after the platting of the village was Isaac Killen. The first and only tailor (1841), Daniel Myers. The first shoemaker was John Decker.

The first physician was David Burrell who only remained a brief time. Dr. John Evans, the present practitioner, was the first permanent physician.

The first postmaster was Dr. David M. Marshall. The second was Mrs. Jane Phillips, and the third, George H. Ogden, now in charge of office. On the 11th of February, 1876, the office was changed from Phillips' Mills to Homer City.

The first death was that of Harriet, a daughter of William Wilson.

The first church after the town was started was the brick Methodist Episcopal, erected by Mr. Wilson at the contract price of one thousand dollars. The first minister was Rev. Horner.

The first preaching in the vicinity was by the Methodist Episcopals in a private house now owned by the Misses Bonar. Thence the meetings were removed to a school house, and then to a log church, still standing, about thirty rods east of the brick church spoken of as above.

The successive churches were, United Presbyterian, Presbyterian and Lutheran.

The first justices of the peace, after the act of incorporation as a borough, in 1872, were: R. E. Ellis and Daniel Weir.

The tannery of Johnson and Stewart was built in 1861. The present bridge over Two-lick was erected in 1855, and is the second over that stream. The first bridge over Yellow creek was built in 1835. The present structure is the third.

The "Homer City Hotel," Mrs. J. C. Cribbs, proprietress, was erected by John H. Devers, in 1878–9.

The forks of Two-lick and Yellow creek were the most important rivers of Indiana, for the site of the county seat. Had it not been for the extraordinary overtures of Mr. Clymer, no doubt that situation would have been chosen.

The graded school of two rooms, supplies needed facilities for the population of three hundred.

Stone, coal and lumber are abundant, and with these advantages, in connection with excellent water power, and a railroad, there ought to be rapid increase of population and wealth in the near future.

The palmy days of Homer, were in 1855, when the trade from the upper country centered there. Manufacturing will bring back lost commerce—and judging from the immediate prospect, the better days are coming.

JOHN MULLEN was born in Ireland, in 1805, and was a son of Hugh and Alice Mullen nee Phillips. Our subject was married in Ireland to Ann Geddes, born in 1800. They came to America in the summer of 1828, and located in Pittsburgh, and in the following summer, they removed to the site of Homer City. Mr. Mullen was the first merchant on the site of the village, and had three different stores in operation before it was platted. He had over thirty years experience in merchandizing. He was the superintendent of the M. E. S. S., for several years. He was elected sheriff of the county in 1851, and was the last democratic sheriff in the county. His children were: Alice, m. to Joseph Griffith; John, d.; William, m. to Rebecca Cribbs; Hugh, d., m. to Nancy Dickey; Charlotte, d., m. to Martin Simpson; David, m. to Martha Magee; and Armor.

JOHN H. ALLISON was born on the site of Homer City, in 1815, and was a son of John Allison, of the old Allison stock. He was married in 1848, to Sarah Fair. Their children were: Thomas, Walter L., Robert O., James H., and Hester J.

DR. JOHN EVANS was born in 1865, on the farm now owned by S. W. Evans, Brush Valley township, and was a son of Wm. and Susan Evans, nee Wilkins, a daughter of Andrew and Eleanor Wilkins, nee Robinson. Andrew was the son of James Wilkins, who was the original settler of a part of the Robert McGee farm. William Evans died in 1852, at the age of fifty-two; his wife in 1871, sixty-three years old. Their children were: John, M. D., m. to Isabella Watt; Andrew Wilkins, m. to Elizabeth Evans, d.; Samuel Wilson, m. to Sarah Elliot; William Alexander, m. to Florinda Stuchal; Nancy Eleanor, d., m. to Jeremiah Rhoads; Susan Jane, m. to W. Scott McCormick; Sarah Elizabeth and George Washington. Samuel was for three years in company H, 12th Pennsylvania reserve corps, and was wounded. Our subject was in the same company, and was promoted to hospital steward, serving in all three years. Andrew Wilkins was in the 206th Pa. volunteers about one year. Our subject's children were: William Isaac, d., and Luella Gertrude. He read medicine with Dr. James McMullen, of Mechanicsburg, and graduated at the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, in the spring of 1861. After his return from the wars he located in Greenville, removing to Homer City in 1866.

Mrs. Martha Johnston was born in 1804, on the farm now owned by her and the heirs, and was a daughter of Robert and Mary Allison, nee Wilson, a daughter of John Wilson, a Revolutionary soldier. Robert Allison was the son of John and Hannah Allison, nee Grimes. Robert Allison's children were: Martha, m. to James Johnston, d. in 1859, in his sixtieth year; Hannah, m to Joseph White, d.; Elizabeth, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Hutchinson; Sarah, d.; Jane, d., m. to George Johnston; Ann, d., m. to James Allison, d.; Robert, m. to Nancy Lewis; Mary, and James, m. to Lucinda Rice. Our subject's children were: Robert A., d.; James A., m. to Rebecca Ann Hill; Mary J., and John W., m. to Rachel McFeaters.

Mrs. Mary Mears was born in Franklin county in 1803, and was a daughter of Mrs. Esther Smith, nee Baughman. Her father died when she was an infant. The family located near Latrobe, Westmoreland county, in 1808, where her mother was married to John Maguire. Our subject was married in 1823 to John Mears, who died in 1854, in his sixtieth year, and in 1839 located on the farm now occupied by David Mears. Their children were: Eleanor, m. to Joseph Burkholder, d.; Elizabeth, Joseph, m. to Margaret Kinter; Lydia, m. to William Lomison; James P., d.; Mary, d.; Margaret, d.; Martha, d., and Margaret Ann, m. to John D. Cummins.

John H. Devers was born near Ligonier, Westmoreland county, in 1833, and was a son of Hugh and Isabella Devers nee McConaughey, daughter of James McConaughey. Hugh Devers was a native of the vicinity of Ligonier. He came to Indiana county in 1834, and in the same or the next year, opened a store on the site of Homer. He is said to have been the first man in the county to buy country produce to ship to Pittsburgh; he died in 1857, about forty-eight years of age. His wife was one of the pioneers of the Homer M. E. Church, and was for many years a member of that connection. She died in 1879, at the age of seventy. Their children were: James M., m. to Elizabeth Ellis; Isabella, m. to G. C. Cribbs, a son of Daniel Cribbs, d. in 1874, at the age of forty-eight; John H., m. to Elizabeth M. Ogden, daughter of William Ogden, of Westmoreland county; and Margaret, d., m. to Robert Edgey. G. C. Cribbs' children were: George A. d.; James M.; Lizzie A., d.; Anna Mary; William M., and John D. Our subject's only child is Edward, adopted. Mr. Devers was a clerk for, a partner with, and the successor of William McQueston, in the grocery business at Saltsburg. He went to Philadelphia in 1857, and has been engaged in the wholesale notion jobbing trade. He has been connected for nineteen years—three being as a partner—with Young, Smith, Field & Co. He served in company I, 68th regiment state militia for four months at Fort McHenry, and was captain of company D, 54th Pennsylvania volunteers, for ninety days, and assisted in the capture of Morgan.

Mrs. Hannah Orr was born near Brush creek, Westmoreland county, in 1800, and was a daughter of Adam and Elizabeth Kimmel nee Palmer. The former was a soldier in the Indian wars in what is now Armstrong township. He was a son of Jacob and Hannah Magaretta Kimmel. The former was a revolutionary soldier from Westmoreland county. The latter died at the age of one hundred and seven. When ninety-six years of age, she walked from Westmoreland county to Philadelphia, and returned on foot. In 1814, Andrew Kimmel removed to Black-lick township, and in a few years migrated away. He died in Ohio at the age of eighty. His wife died in 1811, and his second wife, Elizabeth Spoon, died in Ohio. Our subject was married in 1822, to James Orr, who died near Homer City in 1875, at the age of seventy-eight. In the year of their marriage, they located in Armstrong township. Their children were: Robert, d., m. to Margaret Billick, d.; Martha, d.; James, m. to Jane Dawson; Julia Ann, d., m. to James Billick; Andrew and George K. twins, the former m. to Martha A. Lowman, and the latter to Sarah Mabon; Alexander C., m. to Laura Campbell; Mary A., m. to John Pounds; John Sutton, d.; Hannah, m. to Daniel Garman; Mima; Nannie E., m. to William Risinger; John Chesney, m. to Albina Trovinger; and Joshua Marlin Walker, d. George K. was a soldier in the war of 1861.

William Wilson was born in county Donegal, Ireland, in 1811, and was a son of John and Martha Wilson, nee Gregg. In 1828 the family removed to Indiana county, and settled on the farm now owned by our subject, situated on Cherry run, near Homer City, where the parents died. Their children were: Hannah, d., m. to John Clark, d.; Mary, m. to David Cummins, d.; William, m. first to Letitia McAdoo, d., and second to Elizabeth Gregg, daughter of James Gregg, of Ashland county, Ohio. Our subject's children were: Mary Catharine, John R., m. to Mary Patton; James M., d.; Martha J., Letitia Elizabeth, d.; William Findley, d.; Thomas S., R. M., m. to Peter C. Fair, and Joseph Alexander. John R. was in the militia during the Morgan raid.

James Madison Cummins was married in 1866 to Esther A. Glass. Their children were: William S., Mary P., James Madison, Robert Phillips and John G.

Mrs. Mary Phillips is a native of Ballybregah, county Down, Ireland, where she was born in 1823. She was the daughter of Anthony and Mary Taylor, nee Lowry. The former died in 1877, in his eighty-second year; the latter in 1865, sixty-eight years old. In 1850 the family removed to Brooklyn, New York, and in 1854 to New Washington, West Wheatfield township. Anthony Taylor and wife, as well as our subject, were Unitarians. His children were: Mary, m. in 1857 to Robert Phillips, d. in 1876, over seventy-nine years of age; Jane, m. to John Michael; Anthony S., d., m.; John L., Robert C., Thomas and Anna, twins, the latter m. to William Hutchinson; Hugh, Sarah and Hance. Robert C. was in the war of 1861, and was wounded while serving in an Illinois regiment. John L. enlisted from Indiana county in the war of 1861, and served three years. He was taken prisoner at Edisto Island. Our subject's children were: David, d., and Mary Frances, d.

James S. Flickinger was born near the site of Homer City in 1844, and was a son of Abraham and Susannah Flickinger nee Postlewait. The former was born in Cumberland county, February 6, 1804, and the latter February 4, 1804. They were married in Perry county, and in 1835, located on the ridge about two miles east of what is now Homer City. Abraham was the son of George and Christian Flickinger. George was the son of Peter Flickinger, who died over ninety-seven years of age. Our subject's parents have been residing in Homer City since 1860. Abraham has worked at shoemaking for many years. Their children were: Barbara J., m. to Jesse Mickle; George W., m. to Sarah A. Kurtz; Samuel, m. to Eliza Z. Fee; Elizabeth, d., m. to Robert Loughery; Margaret Susan, m. to Joseph Mickle; Christina, m. to Henry Miller; John A., Lutheran minister, m. to Wilmina Hendrickson; James S., m. to Amanda J. Peddicord; David J., d.; and Lewis P., m. to Jennie Lucas. George W. was in the war of 1861 from Illinois. John A. was in company I, 11th Pa. R. C. and the U. S. cavalry for three years. David J. was in the late war for seventeen months. James S. was in company G, 103d Pa. vols. for four months. Our subject's children were: Maud, Harry and Flora Edith. Lewis P.'s only child was Pearl.

Rev. H. Q. Graham, U. P., of Homer City, was born in Washington, Washington county, in 1824, and was a son of Dr. John and Sarah Graham, nee Bonner, both parents being of Scotch-Irish descent. Our subject was a graduate of Washington College, in the class of 1849, and entered in the winter of 1849 the Associate Reformed Theological Seminary of Oxford, Ohio, and was licensed by the A. R. Presbytery of Chillicothe, Ohio, on the 14th of April, 1852, and for some time acted as missionary to Milwaukee. He has been connected with Blairsville U. P. Presbytery since December 1, 1855. He accepted a call to Bethel and Fairfield August 26, 1856; was installed September 20, 1856, and demitted charge December 10, 1873. He accepted a call to Homer City and Crete September 8, 1874, and was installed December 9, 1874. He served from December, 1863, to October, 1864, as chaplain of the 4th Pennsylvania cavalry. He was married in 1856 to M. E. Gaston, d., in 1865, thirty-two years of age, to whom were born: Sarilla Baird, John David, Margaret Elizabeth, Robert Patterson, d., and Jesse Gordon, d. He was married in 1866, to Annie J. McIlwain, to whom were born: Jennie A., George Patterson Gaston, Mary Mabon, Robert Audley and Henry Collins.

REV. CARLE MOORE was born in Jefferson, Greene county, in 1814. He was a student at Madison College, Uniontown, Fayette county, for four years, and read theology with Rev. John Morgan, Cumberland Presbyterian, of Uniontown. His first charge was over three Cumberland Presbyterian churches, one in each of Venango, Mercer and Crawford counties. After nearly four years' labor, he removed to Punxsutawney, where he labored about five years. His successive parishes were: Cumberland Presbyterian Church, in Mercer county, about two years; Brady's Bend Presbyterian Church, for Brady's Bend, Iron county; Cumberland Presbyterian Church, in Armstrong county, and Pleasant Unity, Westmoreland county; Beverly and Lowell, Ohio, Cumberland Presbyterian Churches; North Fairfield, Ohio, Congregational, and Greenfield, Ohio, new school Presbyterian Churches; Cumberland Presbyterian, Newburg, Ind.; and from 1869 to 1877 for several Presbyterian Churches, in Northern Indiana county. Our subject's wife was M. J., daughter of William Caldwell, of Indiana. Their children were: William I., b. in 1847, m. in 1877, to Mary G., Woodford, daughter of William Woodford of Cherry Tree; James, d., and Thomas, d. William I.'s only child was Nellie J. William I. attended the Philadelphia school of pharmacy, and graduated in the labratory department. In July, 1876, he engaged in the drug business in Homer City.

WILLIAM MCKESSON was born on the old homestead, now occupied by Elijah McKesson, Centre township, in 1832, and was a son of William and Sarah McKesson nee Adams. The former was born on the homestead, in 1784, and died in 1856. The latter died in 1859, over sixty years of age. William was the son of Daniel and Mary McKesson nee Blair. William's children were: Elijah, m. to Elizabeth Griffith; Mary, m. to John Ellis; Eliza, d.; Hannah, m. to Joseph Pearson; William, m. first to Parmelia Hendrickson, d. in 1862, twenty-one years of age, and second to Mrs. Elizabeth Milliken nee Flowers; Lucinda J., m. to William McNutt; Margaret, m. to Josiah Risinger, and Sarah. Elijah was a soldier in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: Addie Melissa, and Bertha Estella. Mrs. McKesson's children by her first husband were: Jennevieve, Walter B. and Annie L. He has resided in Homer City for twenty-seven years, and has been engaged in the blacksmith trade.

MISS MARTHA PHILLIPS was born in county Down, Ireland, in 1802, and was a daughter of Armour and Martha Phillips nee Morrison. The family, when our subject was three months old, located on the John Myers farm, about a mile from the site of Homer City, where Armour died, in 1842, at an advanced age. His wife died in 1844, at the age of eighty-three. Their children were: Fannie, d., Jonathan, d, m. to Margaret Simpson, d.; Jane, d.; Armour, d.; Robert, d., m. to Mary Taylor, and Martha.

LUMAN GILBERT was born at the James Duncan farm, in what is now West Wheatfield township, in 1844, and was a son of Joseph and Ruth Gilbert nee Crunkleton. The former was a native of Luzerne county, where he was born in 1808, and was a son of Luman and Mary A. B. Gilbert nee Barkman. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was a son of Luman Gilbert, a revolutionary soldier, descended from Plymouth Rock ancestry. Joseph Gilbert came to the tract where our subject was born, in 1842, and died in Homer City, in 1875. His wife died in 1877, about seventy years of age. Their children were: Sylvester C., m. to Nancy Mullen; Mary A. B., d., m. to Soloman Kunkle; Sarah Jane, m. to Andrew A. Reegor; Milton, d.; Luman, m. to Anna B. Pinkerton; Aquilla, d.; Eliza Bell, d., and Leander, twins, the latter m. to Nancy King; Lucinda, m. to H. G. Neely; and Loretta, m. to Daniel Ferrier. Sylvester C. was nearly four years in the war of 1861, serving in Illinois and Colorado regiments. Luman was in company D, 54th Pennsylvania volunteers, about three months, and in Captain Dougherty's company, in the 103d Pennsylvana volunteers about six months. Our subject's children were: Alonzo P., and Alzora.

REV. C. W. MILLER, Methodist Episcopal, was born in Butler county, in 1840, and was a son of James and Margaret Miller nee Miller. Our subject entered the army in June 1861, as a member of the 9th Pennsylvania R. C., and was discharged on the 6th of September, 1862, having lost his left arm at the battle of Gaine's hill. He attended school at the Dayton Academy, and graduated in 1865. For several years he engaged in school teaching, meanwhile studying theology in Brush College. He was admitted to the Pittsburgh Conference in 1869, having been licensed in the previous year. His appointments have been Penn Station, Pa., Apollo, Pa., Martin's Ferry, Ohio, Elizabeth, Pa., Ligonier, Pa., and Homer City, since the fall of 1877. He was married in 1870, to Mary E., daughter of John Bruce—his children were: Robert Bruce, d.; Mark Kurtz, and Richard O'Neil.

MARION, BRADY POSTOFFICE, EAST MAHONING TOWNSHIP.

Marion is situated on a tract of land which originally embraced four hundred and eight acres, the patent of which was issued to James Johnston a deputy surveyor, on the 31st of January, 1798. In the patent the tract is called "Greenland," and is described as situated on the waters of Pine run.

In 1795 John Park came to this portion of Pennsylvania to make surveys under the direction of Mr. Johnston. In 1798 he purchased the "Evergreen" body of land, though he did not get his deed till the 2d of December, 1803. In 1799 he erected a log cabin 16x20 in what is now the south-west end of the village, on the lot now owned by the Ritchey heirs. The Ritchey house stands on the old foundation.

This is said to have been the second house erected in this section north of the purchase line. Elisha Chambers, Hugh Thompson, Fergus Moorhead, Jacob Shellabarger, William McHenry, five Seneca Indians, a squaw and a papoose were at the raising. The Indians, according to tradition, would not work till the bottle of whisky was passed and each had drank a portion thereof. Then, upon a signal from the chief, who shook energetically a gourd partly filled with corn, they went to work with much awkwardness, but good naturedly, and in a few hours the lone cabin had risen.

It is said that when Mr. Park first came to this region he encamped on the site of his cabin. Near it was a fine spring. On the opposite side of the run was a party of Indians, who had erected their wigwams there, no doubt on account of the spring, as well as the abundance of game in the surrounding forest.

After the raising they all went to Hugh Thompson's place, about two and a half miles down Pine run, where the Indians and the whites had a grand frolic. The red men danced to the music of the shaken gourd, and there was naught to disturb the harmony of the hour.

The next comer in this neighborhood was James Johnston, a nephew of the surveyor, who located about half a mile west of Mr. Park.

The next locator was Daniel Davis, the grandfather of Clark Davis, who settled about a mile south of Mr. Park.

William Smith, called "Old Billy," and his son William, termed "Big Billy," with their families, were the next arrivals. They occupied Mr. Park's cabin till he arrived, in 1808, with his family, and then they removed to the farm now occupied by Benjamin D. Rochester.

The first death in this settlement was a female child of "Big Billy" Smith. She was buried on the Rochester farm, and her grave and some others are marked with a rude stone wall which encircles the mounds.

In 1810, Mr. Park built a tan-yard about thirty rods from his cabin, on the same ground where the tannery of the Duncan heirs is situated to-day.

In 1817 he erected another cabin, which is still standing, in the rear of McLaughlin, Kinter & Co.'s warehouse, where it is used as a granary. Fergus Blakeney assisted in its construction. It was considered in its day the best house north of the purchase line.

On account of the great distance from grist mills, Mr. Park was forced to depend upon hand mills for his grinding. His next step was to construct a small mill, using two to four horses, or as many oxen, for the power. The sweep was about ten feet long, and the stones, from the neighboring hills, were about three feet in diameter. This mill was situated on the lot now occupid by H. P. Lewis' hotel stable. By working night and day he could grind from thirty-five to forty bushels of wheat. In 1834 he changed his horse-power into a water-power mill. A rude horizontal water wheel, with a side shute, was used. This was situated about a square below the tannery, and could grind about thirty bushels per day.

The first distillery in this section of the county was erected by James Ewing, on the farm now occupied by Abner Griffith. Not long after this, Thomas Jones started a distillery on the place now owned by Johnston Lightcap. The third was built by James Johnston, on what is now the Jefferson McKee tract. The next was erected by Abraham Davis, on the McClanahan tract. The fifth was on what is now the John Craig homestead, and was inaugurated by Jerry Brown. Then Robert Hamilton started one on the John Hamilton farm, and about the same time John Leasure engaged in distilling on his farm. within a few months after the commencement of the latter. John Decker erected a distillery on the Robert Park farm, now within the borough limits. With liquor thus abundantly produced, it was no wonder that the early settlers were addicted to the free use of the potent beverage.

The first school house on the site of the village was situated on the old "Manor" road, on the site of Joseph Brady's barn yard. It was a six-sided, puncheon-floored log building, with oiled paper for windows. The chimney occupied one end of the building, and the seats and desks were made of slabs. William Work was the first teacher in this building, and taught several sessions. Samuel Craig was the next teacher, and he taught several terms in this building before it was destroyed by fire. Margaret Park, afterward the wife of his son Samuel, and Robert Craig, a Scotchman (no relation of the aforenamed Craigs), also were teachers in this building.

James Park, a son of John, had a cabinet factory and carpenter shop in connection with the water mill for several years. before the laying out of the village. He was and is a most excellent mechanic, and of his work there can naught be said but praise.

Marion was laid out by John Park, in August, 1842, and the first sale of lots occurred in the succeeding month. The plat embraced eight acres, with one main street and two rows of lots on either side. The first house erected after the platting of the town was the residence of Hezekiah Wood, the pioneer chair and spinning wheel maker. This is still standing on the south side of West Main street, and is the property of John Riddle. Mr. Wood worked at his trade in James Parks' shop.

The second building was erected by James Park for James McKelvey, the first blacksmith. It stands to-day on the east side of the Wood residence. The blacksmith shop was situated on the east side of Manor street, one square below the Diamond, and is now used as a warehouse by John H. Rochester.

The next house was Wm. Campbell's, on the West side of the Wood property. The first wagon shop was carried on in this building by Wm. Bowers. It is now occupied by Dr. W. S. Shields.

The first saddler and harness maker was Wm. Richardson, who also kept his shop and residence in the Wood house.

Hezekiah Wood, sr., was the first shoemaker. He was said to have been as good at the last as his son was at the bench.

The first painter was Linton Park, whose experience has justly entitled him to be designated as the master of the craft in the Mahoning valley.

McCracken and Conrad (George) were the first merchants. Their store was commenced in 1845, and was located in the room now occupied by Mrs. Mary Pounds, as her dining room of the Exchange hotel. James Park owned the building, and in a short time, he built the front part of the building, and the store was transferred to the room now used as the office. After a career of three years the store was transferred to Gettysburg. The next firm was that of Wood and Bovard, who were located in the east end of the Wood house. After continuing two years, they were succeeded by J. W. Ayres, who died in about a year thereafter, and Ingersoll and Row purchased the stock. They, in two years later, disposed of their stock at public sale, and departed for the West.

John K. Lewis was the next merchant. He was in business five years, for one of which Joseph Brady was a partner. Mr. Lewis failed, and John H. Rochester purchased the stock, and has since continued in business. The next store was opened by James Bovard, in the building now owned by Hugh Lewis. In 1866, he erected the building now occupied by James McGregor, and the latter, who had for some time been a clerk in his employ, became a partner, the firm name being Bovard and McGregor. The style of the house to-day is James McGregor. McLaughlin and Marshall were the next merchants, commencing in the H. Lewis property. The firm was changed to McLaughlin & Kinter, and McLaughlin, Kinter & Co., disposing of their stock under the latter name to David Weamer, who in a short time failed. The stock was purchased by Jonas Silvers, who disposed of it to James McGregor. The Weamer store was occupied for a year and a half by Hollister and Bates, who in a short time sold the stock to James McGregor.

The first hotel was opened in 1844 by James Park, and is to-day knowu as the "Exchange." J. W. Ayres succeeded Mr. Park in 1848. For several years Dr. David M. Marshall occupied it as a private residence, retiring in 1866, when Mrs. Mary Pounel remodeled it as a hotel. This has been a well kept house under her management. The stable, under the care of her son, Charles Frampton, is equal in its accommodations to the more pretentious city establishments. The second hotel was built by Alexander Adams, who managed it for some years as a public house. David Bair then became the proprietor, and in about a year retired from the business, the building thenceforth becoming a private residence.

The Union Hotel was erected in 1856, by John and James Park, the latter using it as a dwelling house for two years.

The property was then purchased by Joseph Brady, who managed it as the Brady House, till 1864. In the flush times of the war, the Brady and the neighbors would accommodate a hundred soldiers with a breakfast at very short notice. John Brady was the next proprietor, being succeeded by John K. Lewis. The latter was followed by the present landlord, Levi Lowmaster.

The physicians who located in Marion were chronologically: James D. Baldwin (1843), John K. Thompson (1845), William Davidson, William Anthony, George McHenry, David M. Marshall, James M. Loughery and W. S. Shields. Of these, Drs. Thompson, McHenry and Shields are the practicing physicians of to-day.

The first resident justice of the peace in the village, was Robert J. Hopkins. After the incorporation of the borough, the first justices were James McGinnity and James McGregor.

The first steam grist mill was that of Kinter & Ritchey, erected in 1855, and having at that time only two sets of burrs. The mill is owned to-day by the Fulton Brothers, and has three runs of first class stones.

The woolen mill was erected in 1861 by C. M. Lang. At first they had one hundred and forty spindles, and the engine was only of eight-horse power. To-day the establishment under the proprietorship of Bovard and Greaves, has a forty horse power engine, two hundred and sixty spindles, and suitable machinery for the manufacture of the best qualities of cassimeres, jeans, stockings and other articles demanded by the people of this section. In quality of products, this mill is the equal of any in this portion of the state.

The planing mill was erected by James and Linton Park, in 1868. The present proprietor is A. D. Bates, and the engine in use is of twelve horse power.

The cabinet factory was built by Griffith, Work and Richards, in 1869. It was destroyed by fire in 1874, and was rebuilt by Work and Custer. The furniture made by this house, under the superintendence of James Park, foreman, will compare favorably with eastern made goods. Undertaking is carried on in all its branches, and the manufacture of caskets is made a specialty. Their twenty-five horse power engine affords ample facilities for the developing of the manufacture of the native woods into not only furniture, but agricultural machinery and other products now imported into the county.

The Park and Beans window blinds (the invention of Linton Park) are a marvel of beauty and comfort. Their manufacture at Marion is one of the most important industries of the town, and with the advent of good times, we predict their rapid introduction into all parts of the country. Only two men are now employed, but since their first introduction in 1874, the stagnancy of trade has prevented their manufacture on a scale commensurate with their merits.

Marion was incorporated as a borough in June, 1869. The first election was held in July of that year. The first burgess was James Bovard. The first council was composed of John H. Rochester, John Jones, Robert Park, and Joseph Brady. 1870, burgess, Joseph Brady. 1871, burgess, Jesse Young, who retained the position till 1876. In that year and the following, 1877, B. F. Laughlin was burgess. 1878 and 1879, burgess, Dr. J. K. Thompson.

In the midst of an excellent agricultural section, with never-failing supplies of water, with thousands of acres of timber at her very doors, with coal veins opened even within the corporation limits, whose extent seems inexhaustible, and whose quality is up to the required standard, with a climate at once exhilerating and balmy, and having a people industrious, energetic, and fruitful in invention, there is no reason why Marion should not increase steadily in numbers, wealth and intelligence. The academy and the public school offer facilities of no mean order. The religious privileges are the equal of any in the county. The moral tone of the community is at a most healthy stage, and there seems to be a desire to be and to do something for the improvement of not only the village, but the county and state.

JOHN PARK was born in 1776, in the town of Baltiwalter, county Down, Ireland, and was the son of Robert and Jane Park nee Bailey. The family removed in 1794, to Philadelphia, where Robert instructed classes in Navigation. He died about a year after his location, and his widow subsequently married James Johnston, the surveyor, who resided near Green Castle, Franklin county, and whose name is associated with the early surveys of northern Indiana county. She died in Johnstown, Cambria county, in 1828, and was one hundred and eight years of age at the time of death. Our subject studied surveying with his father and step-father, and received a commission as deputy surveyor for the western district of Pennsylvania, from Gov. Snyder. His location near the present site of Marion, is related in the history of the borough. He died August 10, 1844, at the age of seventy. His wife was Mary Lang, whom he married in Franklin county, in 1807. She died in 1864, eighty-one years old. She was the daughter of Rev. James Lang, a Presbyterian minister of White Spring, Franklin county. John and Mary Park's children were: Margaret H., m. to Samuel Craig; Robert, m. first to Mary G. Cannon, d., second to Margaretta Thompson, d., and third to Martha Caruthers, a sister of Rev. John Caruthers; Jane R., married to Alexander Sutor; Mary B., m. to Joseph Brady; James L., m. first to Susannah Early, d., and second to Anna Loughry; Ann E., m. to James Martin; Amanda, m. to Robert Barbour; John, m. to Martha Custiss; and Lindon. Lindon was for six years in the United States service, one of which was as a member of the President's Guards, 2d regiment, District of Columbia. Linden engraved the broad-axe presented to Lincoln, in 1860. James L., was in company E, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about a year. Robert Park's children were: Hugh C., d.; Mary L., m. to Edward H. Griffith; James, d.; Matilda J., m. to Aaron W. Long; John T., m. to Caroline Ryckman; Benjamin F., m.; and Robert L., d. John T. served three months in the 35th Pennsylvania volunteers, and about a year in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers. Benjamin F., served about three years in the United States signal corps. James L. Park's children were: Elijah H., d.; Robert A., m. to Eva Thomas; John L., d.; L. N., m. to Martha Thompson; James L., m. to Jessie Work; Emma J.; John and Mary, d., twins; and Anna Bell. Elijah H. was in company C., 23d Ohio volunteers, commanded by Colonel, afterwards President Hayes. He was wounded at Clark Hollen, West Virginia, and died June 1st, 1863. Robert A., was in company E, 11th Pennsylvania reserves, about two years—he was wounded at Antietam and discharged for disability, and re-enlisted in the signal corps, and served one and a half years. L. N. served in company A., 2d battalion, 6 months' volunteers, and in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. L. N. Park has dental rooms in connection with his drug store, which he established in 1873. He was a student at the Philadelphia Dental College. His dental engine, introduced in 1877, was the first in the county. He has acted as postmaster of Marion, since May, 1876. The children of Edward H. and Mary L. Griffith nee Park are: Harry P., b. in 1860; Charles R., b. in 1862; Robert F., Mabel, William C., and Clarence. Harry P. and Charles R. have the first job printing establishment of Marion. In 1878, they printed over 100,000 tickets for the candidates. Mr. Griffith has been in the harness business in Marion, since 1858, and four years later added the livery trade.

JOSEPH BRADY was born on the farm now occupied by William J. Work, in 1818, and was a son of John and Mrs. Margaret Thompson-Brady, nee McElhaney. The former was a son of James and Jane Brady nee Young. James Brady was a cousin of Captain Samuel Brady, the Indian fighter. He was a captain of a company from the Ligonier valley, which served in the Indian wars in Westmoreland county, and Western Pennsylvania. He removed from Cumberland county to the Ligonier valley about 1790, and in 1804, came to the farm now occupied by John A. Mabon, in East Mahoning. His children were: John, d., m. as above; James, d., m. to Mary Rickett, d.; Jane, d., m. to William McCall, d.; Joseph, d; Hannah, d., m. to John Wiggins, d.; Ebenezer, d.; Rebecca, d.; and Samuel, d., m. to Mrs. Ann McPherson nee Barr. John served in the Indian wars in Western Pennsylvania. He died in 1850, at the age of seventy-five; his wife died in 1869, at the age of eighty-six. John's children were: Jane, m. to Wm. Richardson; Robert, m. to Margaret Weaver; Joseph, m. to Mary B. Park; William W.; and Mary, d., m. to James Frederick. Joseph's children were: Adalaide, m. to Captain John A. Kinter; Louisa, d.; Mary, m. to St. Clair Thompson; Amelia, d.; and Josephene, m. to Robert A. Thompson.

Mrs. Isabella T. McHenry was born in 1802, on the Conemaugh river, two miles below Ebenezer Church, and was a daughter of John W. Jamison and Elizabeth Shryock, who were married in 1792, in Hagerstown, Md. The former was born in Ireland, and came in 1769 with his father, Francis Jamison, to Carlisle, Cumberland county, where the latter lived and died. John W. and family settled in Greensburg, in 1797, and shortly thereafter removed to the Shryock farm, near Dennison's town or New Alexandria. In 1801, the family removed to the place where our subject was born, and twelve years later, they located on the farm now owned by George Tucker, in Washington township. He died in Indiana, in 1851, aged eighty-six. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and connected with the early militia companies of the county. His wife died on her sixty-first birth day. The children were: William T., m. to Mary A. Anderson, d.; Mary A., m. to John McCune, d.; Major S. S., d, m. to Sallie A Bell, d.; John A., d. m. to Jane McHenry; Isabella T., m. to Robert McHenry, d. in 1875, eighty-three years of age, born on what is now the Jacob Myers farm, north of Indiana; George S, d., m. to Eliza Brisbon; and Eli F. Major Jamison was well known as a contractor. He was a state senator, and held other public positions. Our subject's children are: Elizabeth, m. to Jesse Diven, d.; Tabitha, m. to William Wolf; Levi W., d., m. to Matilda Shields; Joseph, d.; John, d.; Jane, m. to Dr. William Anthony; George J., M. D., m. to Margaret Brickley; Isabella, m. to Michael Walters; Robert Harvey, m. to Caroline Robinson; Lavinia; and Erastus Quay, m. to Caroline Sterner. Levi W. served in a nine months regiment, and subsequently in Co. C, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps for a year and a half. He was a prisoner for seven months in Andersonville and Salisbury, and died from the effect of prison life. Robert H. was in Co. A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for one year, and in the signal service for two years and three months. Dr. George J. McHenry was educated at the Blairsville, Indiana, and Marion academies. In 1865, he graduated from the medical department of the University of Michigan, and located in the same spring in Marion, his present residence. His children are: Harvey Lincoln, d., Robert Dalton, John Quay, Viney Pearl, and James Earnest. The children of William T. (a brother of our subject) and Mary A. Jamison nee Anderson were: George, d.; John S., m. to Margaret Sutton; Eliza, m. to Alexander Campbell, d.; Samuel, m. to Rachel McPherrin; Marion, m. to William Hutchison; Robert W., m. to Fannie Wilson; William T., m. to Fannie Caruthers, d.; E. C., m. to Rachel Magee; Margaret, m. to John Hughes; and Hezekiah, d. The children of John A. (a brother of our subject) and Jane Jamison nee McHenry, were: Samuel M., went to California in 1849; Eliza J., m. to John Houston; Kate, m. to A. H. Apple; Isabella, m. to Joseph M. Thompson; Martin F., m. to Rebecca Sloan; J. T., m. to Henrietta Bair; Sallie A., d., m. to Frank Young, d., lieutenant in U. S. army; Nettie, m. to James Watt; and B. H., m. to Kate Spears.

Dr. John K. Thompson was born in Centre county in 1824, and was the son of John and Lydia Thompson, nee Blake. The former was the son of John Thompson, an emigrant from Ireland, who arrived in Philadelphia while a young man. He married a Miss Pyle, the daughter of his employer, and removed to Centre county, where he died in 1802, about thirty years of age. Our subject was a student at Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa. He read medicine under Dr. Geo. B. Engles, of Stormstown, and graduated at Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, in 1843. After a practice with his preceptor, he located, in 1845, in Marion, since his permanent residence. He served as associate judge of Indiana county two terms of five years each, viz: 1856 to 1861, and 1861 to 1866. During the last two years of his second term, he practiced his profession in Indiana. He was a member of the lower house of the legislature for two terms, viz, the sessions of 1875 and 1876. He was a congressional delegate to the republican convention that nominated Grant and Wilson. He served as trustee of the Normal school on the part of the state from 1875 to 1878. His wife was Jane C. Thompson. Their only child is H. J., married to Annie McMurray. The latter's children are John McMurray and Harry Earl.

John H. Rochester was born in New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, in 1845, and was the son of John C. and Eliza Rochester, nee Duffie. The former was a native of Virginia, and of English descent. The latter was of Irish extraction. John C., when a boy, drifted into New York, where he worked on the Erie canal. He visited various portions of the then Far West. In 1837, he located in New Alexandria, where he was married. For some years he engaged in manufacturing boots and shoes, employing fifteen workmen, and subsequently engaged in merchandising. In 1856, he removed to Marion, and in the following year erected the storeroom now occupied by Rochester & Laughlin. He was the first postmaster of Marion. His children were: Agnes, d.; Charles, d.; Margaret, m. to B. F. Laughlin; John H.; B. D., m. to Laura Wells; Anna M., m. to Dr. W. S. Shields; Emma; and Harriet, m. to John W. Frampton. B. D. was in company A, 2d battalion, six months' volunteers.

John J. Wells was born in what is now South Mahoning township, in 1836. He located in Marion in 1869. He was married in 1862 to Mary, daughter of John F. Annis, of Punxsutawney. Their children are: Laura E. and Frank L. Mr. Wells started his carriage shop in Marion in 1869. Three men were employed in that year and four were subsequently engaged. He has the machinery, the raw material and the skill to furnish any style of carriage demanded by this section. John Jesse is the son of Levi Wells, who was born in the county. He married in 1832 Catew, daughter of Conrad Luckhardt, by whom he had ten children, viz: John Jesse, Elizabeth, Margaret, Caroline, Isaiah, Edward, Messenger, Albert, David and Milton. Levi Wells was the first child of Edward Wells, who was born at Norristown, Montgomery county, in 1798, and died in Armstrong county in 1849. He was married in Mahoning township about 1811, to Mary, daughter of John Rarigh. Their children were: Levi, William, Jacob, Mary, Moses, Nancy, Elizabeth, Aaron and Catharine. Edward Wells was the eighteenth child of Christopher Wells, who was born in Scotland in 1732, and emigrated with two brothers, one named Gideon, about 1780. He landed at Philadelphia, whence he soon afterward removed to Norristown, Pa. He died in Indiana county in 1811. He had two wives. His first wife was a Strides, the second was Ann Oxworth. He had twenty-two children, eleven by each wife, who all removed westward except Isaiah, who remained at Norristown. Wellsburg, West Virginia, Wellsville, Ohio, and other places were settled by and named for these Wells families. Christopher Wells children were: Ann, Margaret, Esther, Isaiah, Levi, Sarah, William, Elizabeth, Jesse, John, Rachael, John, Nathan, Mary, Ann, Christopher, Amy, Edward, Sarah, Peter, Elizabeth and James.

HISTORICAL GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY INDIANA

D. R. PRINGLE.—George Pringle, the grand-father of our subject, was of Scotch descent, and was a son of William Pringle. George Pringle was born in Conococheague, Lancaster county, now Franklin county. When a young man, the Indians became troublesome, and his father and family removed to Frankstown, where he was married to Catharine Cable, daughter of Rev. John Cable, a German Baptist minister. There was born to them sixteen children, eight of whom lived to maturity. Their names were: Elizabeth, John, George, David, Catharine, Abraham, Mary, and Daniel, all of whom are dead, except Geo. whose age is eighty-one, and Daniel, whose age is sixty. Our subject was born in 1838, on the farm now occupied by G. W. Haines, South Mahoning township, and was the son of David and Eliza Pringle nee Delancy. The former was born in Cambria county, in 1806, located on the above named farm in 1832, and died in 1872. His second wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Ruth nee Kerr, is still living on the old homestead. The children were: Stephen, d., m. to Sarah Ellen Kerr; William, d. while a member of company E, 148th Pennsylvania volunteers; Jacob, d.; George, m. twice; David R., m. to Caroline Baker; John; Abraham, m. to Margaret Mikesell; Catharine, m. to John Wright: Eliza Jane, m. to Jacob Flenner; and Hannah, m. to James K. Wells. George served in the war of 1861. David R. was in Co. D., 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, about nine months, and in company E, 112th Pennsylvania, or 2d Pennsylvania heavy artillery, two years and three months. He was twice wounded. He was captured July 30, 1864, and was a prisoner at Danville seven and a half months, and at Libby two weeks. Abraham was in company E, 112th Pennsylvania volunteers, for two years and three months. The only child of our subject is Luella Maud, born November 24, 1865. He located in Marion in 1858, and commenced working at the blacksmith trade on his own account. Here, excepting an absence in the army, and a location of four years in Tennessee, his career has mainly been passed, occasionally removing his location, purchasing farms, and adding agriculture to his other vocations. Since 1877, his location has been on the east side or Manor street, north of the Union Hotel, his partner being Marshall W. Smith.

A. D. BATES was born in Cherryhill township, in 1851, and was a son of Abraham and Elizabeth Bates, nee Wasson, a daughter of Adam Wasson, a soldier for six years in the European wars. Abraham Bates was born in Lancaster county, of Scotch parentage. In 1847 he removed to Clearfield county, and three years later located in Cherryhill township, Indiana county. His children were: Agnes, m. to Geo. Patchin; A. D., Barbara, d.; Kate, Mary Elizabeth, Fred C., Martin Samuel John D., Florence and Ora. Our subject has been connected with the lumbering business from his seventeenth year. He was educated at Glade Run Academy and Iron City College, graduating from the latter in 1876. In 1877 he established a general store with L. A. Hollister, under the name and style of Bates & Hollister, which was dissolved subsequently in that year, Bates retaining the stock and disposing of the same to James McGregor, receiving in place thereof a half interest in the planing mill, of which he is now the sole proprietor.

ROBERT W. FULTON was born in Conemaugh township in 1851, and was the son of John and Rachel Fulton, nee Elder. The former was a son of Robert and Keziah Fulton, nee Cunningham. The former was a soldier of the war of 1812. Robert's children were: Alexander, m. to Catharine Harbison; Silas, m. to Anna Harbison; Keziah, d., m. to John Miller, d.; Jane, m. to Andrew Campbell; George, m. to Nancy Cunningham; Margaret, m. to Johnston Holstein, d.; Sarah, m. to Jas. Miller; John, m. to Rachel Elder, and Jemima. John was in the ninety days service, in a Pennsylvania militia regiment. John and Rachel Fulton's children were: Isabella, Adela, d.; J. E., m. to Martha Hamilton; R. W., m. to S. A. Anthony; Jemima A., m. to David C. Brown; Rebecca R., d., and E. D.

TOBIAS RYCKMAN was born near Long Point, Canada, in 1824, and was the son of Abraham and Biah Ryckman, nee Lowry. At the age of seventeen our subject removed to Rural Village, Armstrong county. He was married in 1847 to Susan M., daughter of John Stoups, of Rural Village. Their children are: Alonzo, d.; Elizabeth C., m. to Abraham Emigh; Caroline, m. to John T. Park; John Power and Anna Biah, twins; Mary, d.; Virginia, Martha Bell and Charles. Our subject served as veterinary surgeon in the 2d Pennsylvania cavalry for three years. In 1868 he removed to Marion, where he has served as high constable, justice of the peace, &c. He is acting in his sixth year as justice. For over thirty-eight years he has pursued the calling of a blacksmith.

MARSHALL W. SMITH was born in 1847, on the farm now occupied by John Withers, and was a son of Thomas and Mary Smith. Their children were: John W., d.; Thomas, m. to Rebecca Campbell; Mary J., d., m. to Hugh Kane, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Gilbert Graham; Marshall W., m. to Isabella C. Richardson; James L., m. to Isabella Martin; Wm., m. to Emma Henry; and David. Marshall W. is a blacksmith and a member of the firm of Pringle & Smith. Marshall W.'s children were: Mary Ethel, Maggie Edith, Minnie Elva, Willie Edsell, and Walden Earl.

ALVIN A. BEANS was born in Centre county in 1848, and was the son of Thomas and Anna Beans, nee Moser. Stephen, the grandfather of our subject was among the early settlers of Centre county. Our subject was married in 1871 to Isabella C. Tannehill, of Allegheny city. Their children are: Anna Della and Harry Plato. Mr. Beans was a carder and spinner by trade. He located in Marion in 1871, and since 1874 has been a partner in the manufacture of the "Improved Ventilating Window Blinds."

JAMES MCGREGOR was born in Ringgold township, Jefferson county, in 1841, and was the son of Mahlen and Margaret McGregor nee Chambers, daughter of James Chambers. Mahlen McGregor came to Jefferson county, in 1821. He was a farmer and stock-raiser. Our subject at the age of thirteen, went to Davidsville, where he worked for Solomon Shaffer, who kept a hotel and carried on a brick-yard. Subsequently we find him clerking for John Chambers, at Georgeville, and R. & J. Ross & Co., of Penn Valley, Centre county, teaching school in Ringgold township, returning again to Georgeville, to work for Chambers & Ansley, and then connecting himself with James Bovard, who kept a store on the present Earhart farm. In 1868, he became a partner with Mr. Bovard, who had removed in 1864, to Marion, and since 1878, he has been the sole manager of the house. He has served as justice of the peace for five years. He was married in 1862, to Catharine, daughter of Jno. Pounds. Their children are: Daniel E., William, James C., Mary Ora, Clara L., Harry M., Alice C., and Anna A.

L. A. HOLLISTER was born in Cherry Tree, in 1838, and was the son of E. R. and Phebe Hollister nee Elwell, who came to that vicinity in 1836. The children were: Almira, d.; L. A., m. to Jennie E. Barber; Almira, m. to John E. Pittman; Fitch Reed, d., and Newton Reed, twins; and Hannah M. L. A.'s children are: George Raymond, Logan S., Ezra V. and Mary Edna. L. A. for many years, was a merchant at the Cherry Tree, being connected either as partner or clerk with the Kinport's or Harter & Co. In 1877, he located in Marion, and became a partner with A. D. Bales, in the general mercantile trade. Since that partnership was dissolved, he has traveled for a Pittsburgh wholesale grocery house. He served in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and three months.

James Barr was born in Green township, in 1830, and was the son of James and Mary Barr nee Lang. The former was a son of Samuel Barr, a native of Ireland, and an early settler of Westmoreland county, who subsequently removed to the vicinity of what is now Clarksburg, Indiana county. His first wife's name is not known; his second wife was Fannie Gamble, whom he married in Indiana county. The children were all by the first wife, and were born in Westmoreland county. Their names were: Samuel, d., m. to Isabella McBride, d.; John, d., m.; Robert, d., m.; and James, d. in 1878, over ninety years of age, m. to Mary Lang, d. in 1844. James served in the war of 1812. James and Mary Barr's children were: Rebecca J., d.; Samuel S. m. to Isabella McAllister; John L. m. to Dora Lang; Agnes N., m. to James Scott; James, m. to Margaret Hill; Robert A., m. to a Miss Lisle; Margaret, m. first to John Scott, d., and second to James Staymate; William, d.; Hudson, d.; and Craig, d. Robert A. was in the war of 1861, in a Pennsylvania battery.

Rev. Nelson Davis, pastor M. E. Churches of Marion and Covode, was born in Franklin township, Butler county, in 1846, and was a son of Samuel and Lavinia Davis nee Keister. The former was a native of Butler county and a son of William Davis, an early settler of the county. The latter was of Scotch-Irish descent, and a soldier in the war of 1812. Samuel was a soldier in the Mixican war. Our subject was educated at Prospect academy, Butler county, and entered the M. E. ministry in 1870. His circuits have been as follows: Leechburg, Plumville, Indiana county, Knox, Brownsdale, Circleville, and in 1878, Marchand, Indiana county. He was married in 1871, to Maggie McEwen, of Plumville. His children are: Josie, John S., and Clarence E.

George B. Greaves was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1841, and was the son of Charles and Sophia Greaves nee Bromley. The former was a woolen manufacturer in Dewsbury, the greatest shoddy manufacturing district in the world. Our subject came to America, and had charge of a woolen mill in Marietta, Ohio, for a year. We next find him at Ellenboro, West Virginia, for a year; Allegheny City, where he had charge of the carding and spinning rooms of the Union mills for two years; Blairsville, two years, and then in Marion, where he has since continued in charge of the woolen factory. He manufactures blankets, flannels, and knitting yarns. The factory contains one set of cards, two hundred and forty spindles, three knitting machines, one broad and four narrow looms, and four jacks. The principal market is Pittsburgh. He did work for over nine hundred farmers in the season of 1878.

Henry Wetzel was born in Mifflintown, Pa., in 1821, and was the son of Rinehart and Sarah Wetzel nee Yost. The former was born in Germany, and came to Lancaster county when only nine years of age; he was married in Mifflin county; he died in 1848, in Clearfield county, fifty-two years of age; his wife died in 1840, forty-two years old. The children were: Enoch B., d., m. to Harriet Campbell; Henry, m. to Mary C. Weaver; Jacob Yost, d.; John M., d.; Mary M., m. to Daniel K. McGee; James S., m. to Sarah Baird; Sarah, m. to John Brown; and Christiana. Henry's children are: Samuel S., m. to Dorinda Griffith; Ruth A., m. to John F. Glasser; Sarah E., m. to Kinley Hunter; John R., m. to Nina Smyers; Harry P., James B., d.; and Wm. E. Our subject located in East Mahoning township in 1864.

Mechanicsburg, Brush Valley Post Office Brush Valley Township.

The first improvement near the site of the village was the cabin of James Williams erected about 1780 on the property now owned by the Miller heirs. This was an extremely rude round log house, about eight by ten feet, and for several years after the founding of the village remained in its original position.

Other early settlers in the vicinity were: Adam Richey, about 1798, on the tract now owned by John Brink, where Andrew Campbell lived and died. William Wilson, about 1800, on the Jacob Overdorff property; he had a distillery at an early date; James McDonald, about 1800, on the farm now occupied by George Hileman; William Ferrier, about 1800, on the Armon Tyson tract; Ferrier became discouraged and committed suicide, and his family left for the south, and the land was sold for fourteen dollars to pay taxes; Joseph Wilson, about 1801, on the farm now occupied by Joseph Wilson; John Wolf, about 1800, on the farm now occupied by Simeon Truby; Robert Elgin, about 1800, on the McFeaters' property; Thomas, Richard and Francis Bowles, about 1800, on the Stinman lands; Richard and Francis became discouraged and went south; Richard Dias, about 1800, on the tract now owned by the Page heirs; Thomas Sanderson, about 1801, on the waters of Brush creek, on the land now occupied by Alexander Getty and Henry Miller, and Patrick McCormick, about 1801, on land now occupied by John McCormick. The first settlers on the site of Mechanicsburg were: John Crisswell, in 1802, and Samuel Stephens.

The place was laid out by John Taylor for Robert McCormick, in September, 1833. Being a place for mechanics, it was called Mechanicsburg. The first lot was sold September 7, 1833, to Stephen Adams. The first house was erected on Main street by Samuel Wilson, and is now occupied by Elizabeth McLaughlin, who was the first weaver. The second cabin was built by George Robertson for a hotel. It stands on Main street, and is occupied by Taylor Kelly. The next house was erected by Simeon Truby, who kept in it the first store. Part of it is still standing on Main street and forms a portion of the William Truby property.

The first blacksmith in the vicinity was Leonard Gosshorn and the second was George Turner. The first in the village was George Detrick. The first tannery in the vicinity was Benjamin Elliott's, on the Overdorff place. The first in the village was established about 1834, by William Glass. This was situated on the lot now owned by Richard R. Donahoe.

The first birth was that of T. R. Robertson, on the 10th of August, 1834.

The first wagon maker was John Marks. The first shoemaker was Richard Donahoe. The first cooper was Matthias Yaney. The first cabinet maker and undertaker was Jacob Clark. The first milliner was Margaret McLaughlin, and the second Mrs. Buchanan. The first tailor was William McIntire. The first justice of the peace was James Stewart, and the second was George Robertson, who was the first constable.

The first school in the vicinity was the "Bowles" school house on the John Cresswell farm, about 1803 or 1804. For some time there was no floor nor loft. The chimney was made of wood, and consisted of a back wall and opening in the roof for the smoke. Greased paper, covering holes in the logs, answered for windows. The benches and desks were of slabs with "pegged feet." "Paddles" with letters pasted on them were the "books" for the little ones, and bibles, spellers, etc., formed a miscellaneous assortment of books for the elder pupils. In 1829, Samuel Wilson taught a school on the site of Truby's store. About 1848 a village school was erected. This is now used by Mrs. Kelly. In 1878 the citizens of the borough, with the assistance of the township, erected the present public school building. There are three rooms, and conveniences for the present pupils far superior to any that have preceded.

The first preaching near the site of Mechanicsburg was by Rev. James Wakefield, a local Methodist Episcopal minister, on the Hugh Evans tract, where Rev. A. B. Runyan now resides. The first church was erected in 1851, by the union of the United Presbyterians and Presbyterians. The successive churches were the Methodist Episcopal, United Brethren, Baptist and Evangelical Association.

Thomas Baxter was killed in 1804, at the raising of the Wm. Wilson barn. He was buried at the Cresswell graveyard. This was the first cemetery in this section, and this interment was the first interment in the graveyard.

The first grist mill in the vicinity was the old Evans mill, and the second grist mill in the vicinity was Empfield's. This was built early in the century (perhaps 1804 or 1805). Isaac Griffith was the next proprietor, who was succeeded by Jonathan Adair and Jesse Willett, who sold to the present owner, John Simons. Jno. Wakefield erected a grist mill (since abandoned) in 1822, on "Big Brush creek." Adam Altimus in 1829 built the mill now occupied by Christian Weaver. In 1833 Robert McCormick erected a grist mill on Little Brush creek. This has long since been abandoned.

THE HERLINGER AND DODSON SASH, DOOR, BLIND AND CABINET FACTORY AND UNDERTAKING ESTABLISHMENT.—The main building; 42 by 20, two stories, was erected in 1862 by Geo. G. Clark for a cabinet factory and undertaking establishment. In 1867, he built the rear portion, 42 by 32, and added a twelve-horse power engine, a planer, gig saw, boring machine, &c., thus preparing for a general wood-working factory. In February, 1878, the firm became Herlinger Bros., and in April, 1879, Herlinger & Dodson. Six men were employed for several years, but now only three are engaged. It is the only planing mill in the southeastern portion of the county, and has all the modern appliances for doing merchantable work.

ABRAHAM BECK, the blacksmith, has worked with his father, George Beck, (see Indiana for sketch,) since he was a little boy; he has a set of tools valued at $400, and is a carriage and gunsmith, as well as a blacksmith. This is the only establishment of the kind in this portion of Indiana county.

THE principal merchants are: William Truby, George W. Robertson and Christian Rugh. For the sketch of the Truby block, see the Truby records.

JAMES MCMULLEN, M. D., was born in 1824, on the farm now occupied by W. H. McMullen, Centre township, and was a son of Alexander and Catharine M. McMullen, nee McKinnie, daughter of James and Elizabeth McKinnie, nee Bard (daughter of Richard Bard, for whom see sketch). Alexander McMullen's second wife was Rebecca Campbell, a sister of Judge Joseph Campbell. Alexander was a son of John, a Revolutionary soldier, and the son of a Scotch Highlander, and Mary McMullen, nee Pol. The former had come to the above named tract about 1790, and had made some improvements. He was driven away by the Indians and returned to Franklin county. Alexander was a sergeant in Captain Gordon's company of Col. James Fenton's regiment, which served nearly a year in the war of 1812, from Franklin county. A brother was drafted and Alexander volunteered in his place. He was in the battles of Lundy's Lane and Chippewa, and several minor engagements. Alexander came to the aforementioned place in 1819, and completed the improvements commenced by his father. He served as county commissioner and held other offices. He died in the winter of 1863–4. His first wife died in 1834. His children were: Mary, d.; John, Elizabeth, James, Thomas and Jane, by the first wife, and by the second, Sarah A., Alexander R., Joseph C., d.; Eva and Ellen. Alexander R. was a soldier in the 12th Pennsylvania reserve corps, killed at Charles City Cross Roads. Our subject read medicine for three years with Dr. A. H. Gross, of Jacksonville, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, in 1855. He commenced to practice in Mechanicsburg, his present home, in 1849, having had one course of lectures at Jefferson. He was married first in 1849, to Margaretta Ross, who died in 1854, about thirty-one years old; second, married in 1856 to Ann Roberts, who died in 1863, thirty-three years old, and third, in 1867, to Mary W. Tomb, of Blairsville. The children were: Mary Ellen, m. to John B. Allen; John Alexander, d.; John Alexander, Charles Bell, Elizabeth Jane and Ann Roberts.

SIMEON TRUBY was born near Greensburg, Westmoreland county, in 1806, and was a son of Michael and Mary Truby nee Kline. The former was a native of Westmoreland county, and was a son of Christopher, who, as well as his father, also Christopher Truby, were among the early settlers of what are now Indiana and Westmoreland counties. Our subject came to Indiana in 1821, and resided with William Houston, going to school and working in the latter's store till 1832, when he removed to Brush Valley and opened a store on the Hugh Evans farm. This was said to have been the first store in the township. In the following year he removed to Mechanicsburg, where he started the first store of the village. He was engaged in merchadising here, excepting from 1845 to 1848, when he served as sheriff till 1861. In 1837, he purchased of Robert McCormick about fifty acres of land, upon which Mechanicsburg was situated, and in 1840 he sold one-third to 'Squire Stewart, who laid out an addition to the village. He was married in 1835 to Nancy Kelly, daughter of John Kelly. Their children were: William Harrison, d.; John, m. in 1840 to Margaret M. Rugh; Mary, m. to James Rugh; William, m. in 1867 to Inez Hebe Runyan; Agnes, m. to William Nesbit, d.; James T., d., m. to Bell Smith; Elizabeth, d., and Margaret, d., twins, the latter m. to Samel Rugh; Jane, d.; Ann, d., and Simeon. John Truby's children were: N. Olivia, Stella, Tracy and John Cromwell. William Truby's children were: Mary A., d.; Ellen E., Florence and Simeon Clare. The William Truby block, 160 by 264 feet, extends on Main from Miller to Clark street. The store and residence were erected in 1875, and the drug store in 1876. The barns were erected in the fall of 1878, and the remaining building are new or recently rebuilt. The building which contains the wash house, bake oven and cistern seems to be the very type of economy of labor. Mr. Truby has been in the general trade for twelve years.

CHRISTIAN RUGH was born at Rugh Station, in 1854, and was a son of Jacob and Julia A. Rugh nee Bell, a daughter of Walter and Elizabeth Bell nee Culbertson. Mrs. Rugh was born in 1820, and was married in 1838. Mr. Rugh was born in 1814, in the stone house which is still standing at Rugh Station. He died in 1873. His children were: Elizabeth, m. to Edward Kough; Walter, d.; Maggie M., m. to John Truby; Augustus B., m to Mary Robinson; Mary, d.; Jerusha Bosserman, m. to T. C. Ramey; Christian, m. to Jennie Tomb; George, m. to Rilla Watt; and Samuel. Walter was a member of Co. I, 11th Pa. vols. for about three years. He was captured in Virginia May 30, 1864, and turned over to the provost marshal at the general hospital, Wilmington, N. C., March 22, 1865. He was supposed to have embarked on board the steamer Gen. Lyon, from Wilmington to Annapolis, March 28, 1865. The steamer was lost and all on board perished. He was nearly twenty-three years of age. Jacob Rugh was a son of Christian and Elizabeth Rugh nee Best, who settled at what is now Rugh Station, in the latter part of the last century. The first cabin was not far from the site of the stone house which was erected before the present century began.

John Brink was born near the site of Dayton, Armstrong county, in 1825, and was a son of Samuel and Ellen Brink nee Irvin, a daughter of "Beeseye" Irvin, of Armstrong county. The former was a native of New Jersey, and among the early settlers of eastern Armstrong township. Our subject's wife was Maria Clark, a daughter of Jacob Clark, of Mechanicsburg. His children were: A. C., b. in 1852, m. in 1875, to Belle Kinter; Lizzie, d.; Harry, Anna, Herbert, and Janney, d. A. C.'s children were: Edna, Melissa, d., and Pearl. John Brink was among the early merchants of Smicksburg and Marion. He had a store for fourteen years in Mechanicsburg, starting his last one in 1876. He also had a store in Medina county, Ohio. He started a store in Homer City in 1873, with his son A. C. as a partner, who succeeded to the business in 1877. His career in business extended over twenty-five years.

George W. Robertson was born in Mechanicsburg in 1839, and was a son of George and Margaret Robertson nee Sanderson, daughter of Thos. and Elizabeth Sanderson nee Dill. The former was one of the early settlers of Brush Valley. George was the son of Hugh Robertson. George Robertson was the first hotel keeper in Mechanicsburg, an early merchant for two years, and constable for several years, and a justice of the peace for three terms; he was the first justice elected in the borough; he was a horse and cattle drover, teamed between Philadelphia and Blairsville, and erected nearly all the early buildings in the village; he died in 1867, at the age of sixty-six: his wife in 1867, at the age of fifty-seven. His children were: Alexander S., m. to Josephine Price; John T., d., m. to Ellen Lapsley; Thos. S., d., m. to Lena McCurdy; Ellen Wilkins, d., m. to Robert Fee; George W., m. first to Matilda Cribbs, d., and second to Melinda Robertson; William H. H., m. to Jane Graham; Margaret, d., m. to Albert Cresswell, d.; Caroline, d., m. to Samuel Rhoads; and Mary, d., m. to Dr. C. M. Ewing. T. S. was a lieutenant in company F, 67th Pa. vols. for nine months. George W. was in company H, 12th Pa. R. C. about two years, was twice wounded and a prisoner on the battle field for three days. George W. was constable for two years, and has been a justice of the peace for the last five years. T. S. was justice in Mechanicsburg for three terms. William H. H. was justice from 1870 to 1875.

Richard Donahey was born on the farm now occupied by James Donahey, Burrell township, in 1824, and was a son of James Donahey, who is yet living, and whose people were among the early settlers of the valley. Our subject was married in 1848 to Nancy Duffey, b. in 1832, daughter of Patrick Duffey, of Derry township, Westmoreland county. Their children were: James T., m. to Catharine Conrad; Benjamin F.; Stewart, d.; Agnes, and Letitia.

Mrs. Margaret Kelly was born on the farm now owned by Miss Kate Peddicord, Brush Valley township, in 1824, and was a daughter of Charles and Rachel Kelly nee Burley. The former was born in Indiana county, and died in 1827, at the age of thirty; the latter died in 1873, at the age of eighty-one. Charles was the son of James and Esther Kelly nee Palmer. The former, an emigrant from Ireland, was among the early settlers of Black-lick township. His brother Patrick was a soldier in the war of 1812. James Kelly had thirteen sons and one daughter. Charles Kelly's children were: Sarah, d., m. to Francis Mickle; Hannah, d., m. first to John Miller, d., and second to Samuel Fry, d.; Margaret, m. in 1847 to Wm. Kelly, d. in 1864, thirty-nine years of age, and Mary, d. Our subject's children were: Alice, d.; Ann Elizabeth, d.; Esther, J.; John and George, d., twins; James S.; Sarah A.; and Mary, m. to Blair Findley.

Thompson McCrea was born in 1807, on the farm now occupied by Peter Baroon, Burrell township, and was a son of John and Elizabeth McCrea, nee Reed. The former was born on the same farm, September 16, 1776, and was a son of John and Jane McCrea, nee Porter. John, the pioneer, had located on this tract in 1774. When our subject's father was only six months old, they were forced to fly to Wallace's fort, in Westmoreland county. Mrs. McCrea hastened to the fort, bearing John, their only child, and her husband waited behind to hide the household furniture, and was closely pursued by the Indians as he hurried to the fort. He died the next day from the effect of his over-exertion. His widow returned to Franklin county, where she married Wm. McCrea, Samuel Alexander being their only child, and subsequently removed to Uniontown, Fayette county. John McCrea, about 1800, returned to the former home of his father and erected a cabin. He was married in 1801, and died on the farm now owned by a Mr. Loughlin, near Smith's station, in 1861. His wife died in 1849, over seventy years of age. Their children were: Robert R. m. to Mary A. Hart; William C., d., m. to Nancy Adams, d.; John d., m. to Sarah Parker, d.; Thompson, m. to Anna McKesson, d.; Jane, m. to David Lintner, d.; Rachel, m. to Samuel Hosack, d.; Elizabeth, d; Achsah, d., m. to John Hart, d.; Matilda, m. to John Taylor, d., and Samuel, d., m. to Elizabeth Turner. Our subject's children were: John, m. to Jane Skiles; James M., d.; Robert, E., d.; William, d.; Alexander, d.; Nancy, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Marinda, d.; Chalmers S., M. D., m. to Matilda Couch; Nettie, d.; Gilbert T. and Albert L., twins, the former m. to Jatta Stewart, and Harry. Robert E. was in a three months' West Virginia regiment and in Co. F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers, and died from exposure. Chalmers S. was in Co. F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers about three years and eleven months. Our subject studied surveying with a Mr. Elliott, a practical surveyor and a native of Ireland, who had migrated to Conemaugh township. He has been engaged in surveying since 1836, and was the county surveyor for eighteen years. He served as justice of the peace for twenty-two years.

James McDonald was born in 1809 on what is now the George Hileman farm, Brush Valley township and was a son of James and Catharine McDonald nee Carnahan, who had settled on the above named place in 1800. The former was of Scotch-Irish descent. He died in 1852, about seventy-two years old; his wife died in 1865, about eighty years of age. Their children were: John, d., m. to Martha Stunkard; James, d. in 1865, m. to Christena Parker, daughter of Willian and Jane Parker, d. in 1848, at the age of thirty: Elizabeth, m. to Michael Rugh, d.; Alexander, d., m. to Ann Linn; Mary, m. to Solomon Rugh; Jane, d.; Samuel, m. to Mary Johnston; Nancy; Euphemia, m. to Hon. John Hargnett; and Susannah, d., m. to John Myers, d. John was in the 12th Pa. R. C. for three years, and was wounded. James' children were Alexander, m. to Mary A. Clark; Helen, d.; Elizabeth J., m. to John Moffett; William P., d., killed at Beatty Station, P. R. R.; Catharine Ann, m. to John Robinson; and Lucinda, m. to William Bowdel. William P. was in the 11th Pa. R. C. for three years and a prisoner for six months.

Nicholas Peddicord was born in Black-lick township, in 1819, and died in 1879, in Mechanicsburg. He was married in 1847, to Elizabeth Grumbling, daughter of Christian and Catharine Grumbling nee Heinkle, d. Christian's second wife was Julia Myers. Our subject's only child was Priscilla Jane, deceased in her twentieth year. Mr. Peddicord commenced a tannery in 1834, on Main street, immediately above the McDonald Hotel. The present tannery of the Peddicord's was erected in 1858.

John McElhaney was born on the farm now owned by Francis Killen, Brush Valley township, in 1834, and was a son of Elisha and Jane McElhaney nee Gamble. The former was a son of William McElhaney, a native of Scotland, who lived and died in Shrewsbury, York county. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject's parents migrated to the above named tract in 1826, where Elisha died in 1836, at the age of twenty-nine; his wife died in 1868, at the age of sixty-two. Their children were: Susanah, d., m. to Andrew Campbell, d.; William G., m. to Margaret Morton; and John, m. to Rebecca J. Davis, of Armagh. John was in company F. 55th Pennsylvania volunteers for two years, and in company H, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. While in the 55th he was wounded and taken prisoner, remaining in custody for eight months. His children were: William H., d.; James Y., d.; Julia, A., d.; Jane, d.; and Mary E. He is a tailor and marble cutter, and his location is on the south side of Clark street.

JACOB CLARK was born in Bedford county, in 1797, and was a son of Samuel and Margaret Clark nee Mangas. The former was born on Long Island and migrated about 1800 to Somerset county. He was the son of Noah Clark, a Revolutionary soldier. Samuel, d., over sixty-nine years of age. Our subject was married in 1822 to Mary A. Griffith, who was born in Bedford county, in 1800. He removed to the county in 1842, and in 1843 located on the farm now occupied by John Brink. His children were: Thomas G., m. first to Eve Miller, d., and second to Mrs. Sarah Moore; George G., m. to Mary Ann Young; Maria, m. to John Brink; and Mary Ann, m. to Alexander McDonald. Our subject was a cabinet maker by trade and still works at this avocation. His health and memory are apparently strong.

MATTHIAS YANEY, burgess of Mechanicsburg, was born in Baden, Germany, in 1813, and was a son of George and Mary Yaney, who migrated to America in 1823, and located in York, York county. The former died in 1836, at the age of sixty; the latter in 1839, in her sixtieth year. Our subject was married in 1839, to Eliza Stouch, of York county. Their children were: George, d.; Jacob, d.; Louis, m. to Mrs. Hester Hollis, nee Miller; Charles, Henry, m. to Rebecca J. Murphy; Sarah, d.; Flora W. and George. Mr. Yaney located in Mechanicsburg in 1854. He served in Co. A., 135th Pa. vols. for nine months. He is the burgess of the village for the present term.

REV. S. KEEBLER (Methodist Episcopal) was born in Washington county, Maryland, in 1843, and was a son of George E. and Sarah Keebler, nee Layton. The former was a soldier in the army of the allied powers against Napoleon. He died at the age of seventy-nine; his wife is still living, at the age of seventy-three. The former was of German birth and the latter of German descent. In 1848 the family removed to Derry township, Westmoreland county, where our subject was educated in the common schools. He became regularly engaged in circuit work in the spring of 1872. His stations have been: Penn circuit, Westmoreland county, two years; Coopersdale, Cambria county, two and a half years, and Mechanicsburg, where he is now in his third year. His charges are: Diamondsville, Greenville, Strongstown, Belsano and Mechanicsburg. He was married in 1874 to Kate, daughter of Timothy Akers, of Westmoreland county. His children are: Anson Gilbert and Ernest Minard.

JACKSONVILLE, KENT P. O.

This village is situated in Young and Black-lick townships. It was laid out in 1830, by William and Joseph McFarland, the former of whom had slept in a wagon on the site of Jacksonville when it was a wilderness. It was called Jacksonville for President Andrew Jackson. The first house was erected by James Alcorn, who was a carpenter and cabinet maker; he also kept the first tavern. The first located minister was Rev. Jonathan Fulton, United Presbyterian. The first church was the United Presbyterian, the second was the Presbyterian, and the third the Methodist Episcopal. The first merchant was John Lafferty. The first carpenter was James McKee—the present undertaker. The first blacksmith was Jacob Downey. The first mills in the vicinity were the William McFarland saw and grist mills, about three-fourths of a mile below the present site of Lowman's steam mill. His second mill was on the site of the latter. The first physician was William Jack. There are to-day three physicians—the Drs. Davis and Reed. There are two general stores, two hotels, four blacksmiths, and the usual accession of mechanics. The population is about one hundred. William Smith, the father of James Smith, late deceased, in the season of 1788–9, killed over forty bears and one hundred deer in the vicinity of the site of Jacksonville.

ELLIOTT FERGUSON was born in Black-lick township, Indiana county, in 1812. His father, James Ferguson, when only eight years old, came from Morrison's cove, Huntington county, with his father, also a James Ferguson, to this county, in 1786. The two latter were born in Scotland. The old Ferguson homestead is in Black-lick township, and is still in the possession of the Ferguson family. The land was patented in the name of Barbara Elliott, and situated in Black-lick township. The elder Ferguson, with his family, remained for some time at the Dixon block-house at the Broad ford. James' (the senior) children were: William, Rebecca, Hance, John, Elizabeth, James, Samuel, David, Jane, Elliott and Mary.

A. D. FERGUSON was twice married, his first wife being Matilda Atkinson, d., and his second Ann E. Atkinson. His children were Ann Jane, m. to George Brubaker; Eli Stewart, Mary Cecelia, d.; James Homer, d.; Richard, Matilda and Samuel Earnest. A. D. Ferguson was a lieutenant in Co. A., in Col. Gallagher's regiment of militia at the time of the Morgan raid. He was also in the militia at the time of the Lee raid. He has been a member of the M. E. church for thirty-seven years, and is now a class leader. He lived three years in Clarion county twenty-three in Fillmore, three in Coketon, and four in Blairsville. His life work has been blacksmithing.

MARSHALL SHIELDS was born in Indiana in 1814, to which place his father, Wm. Shields, who was born in Centre township, had removed in the same year. During the latter's residence in Indiana, 1814 to 1828, he kept a tavern, and his hostelry was a great place of resort. He was colonel in the militia, and the tavern was the headquarters of reviews and parades. He afterward rented a farm from Dr. Robert Mitchell, and was engaged in agricultural pursuits till his death. He was married about 1800, to Eliza, daughter of Marshall Reed, an old settler in the neighbornood of Campbell's mills. John Shields, the grandfather of Marshall, was born in the Conococheague valley. He had been a revolutionary soldier, and migrated to the county at about the same time as the location of General Charles Campbell. He was a scout in the Indian wars that followed the Revolution. For many years he packed on horses the products of this section to Franklin county to exchange for iron, salt and other necessities. He died on Plum creek, Washington township. His children were: William, d.; John, d.; Joseph, d.; James, d.; Mary, d.; Jane, d.; and Maria, d. William's children were: Ann, Sarah, Mary, d.; John, d.; Jane, d.; Eliza, Marshall, Josiah, d.; William and James. Marshall Shields was married in 1838, to Margaret Jack. He was a school teacher for eight years, held various township and borough positions, being a justice of the peace ten years at Saltsburg and twelve at Jacksonville. He is filling a term of county auditor, to which he was chosen at the fall election of 1878.

ISRAEL THOMAS was born in Armstrong township in 1832; his grandfather, Israel Thomas, born in Wales, came to what is now the Amos and John Thomas farm, above Shelocta, in 1797; his wife was Margaret Thomas; he died in 1839, at the age of eighty-two; his wife, also born in Wales, died some years later, at about the same age. The children were: William, d.; Amos, d.; John, d.; Mary, Ruth, Nancy, d.; Elizabeth, Susan and Margaret. John Thomas, the father of our subject, was born in Pennsylvania, east of the mountains, in 1797; he married, in 1826, Anna, daughter of John Lytle; he died in 1872; his wife in 1866, aged sixty-one years. The children were: Margaret, Elizabeth, Israel, m. in 1865 to Mary A. Fleming; William, Mary Ann, Sarah, Evaline; John, served nine months in the war of 1861; Amos, and Martha Jane.

George S. Lowman was born in 1805, in Young township, and was the son of Abraham and Susannah Lowman nee McElhoes, who were married in Franklin county, and located in what is now Young township in 1793. Mr. Lowman purchased the "settlement right" of Tolly Rogers, who escaped the massacre which occurred on the Robinson farm; he served about three months in the Indian war which preceded the treaty of Greenville, being stationed most of the time on Crooked Creek, in what is now Armstrong county; he died on the 17th of November, 1846, aged eighty-one; his wife, Susannah, on the 12th of March, 1852, at the age of eighty-two. Their children were Mary, (see sketch of Mrs. Mary Gilmour); Thomas, d., m. first to Elizabeth Graham, d., and second to Rachel Niel; Nancy, d.; John; Susan; Abraham, George S.; Michael; Rosanna, d.; Samuel, d.; and William, d. Geo. S. Lowman's children were: Abraham, d., a minister of the U. P. denomination; Elizabeth; Susan, d.; Maria, d.; Almira; Thomas McLain; and Jno. Calvin. Our subject has served as county commissioner, in various township official capacities, and as an elder in the U. P. church for over thirty-five years. Thomas and Rachel Lowman's children were: W. G., a physician and surgeon, graduate of Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, surgeon in the army, d. in July, 1862, at the age of thirty-seven; Scott; Nancy, d.; Susan, d.; Alexander; John; Hugh, justice of the peace ten years, m. first to Elizabeth Stewart, d., and second to Elizabeth Bell: Samuel, d., soldier in 2d battalion Pennsylvania six months' volunteers from June to October, 1863; and Elizabeth.

Rev. J. P. Black, pastor U. P. Church of Jacksonville, was born in Ashland county, Ohio, in 1837. He was educated at Franklin College, Ohio, graduating therefrom in the class of 1855, and at the theological seminary of Allegheny City, from which he graduated in 1861. His first charge was in Albia, Iowa, in 1863. After traveling for some years under the direction of the Home Mission Board, he was located at Boonesboro, in the same state. In 1876, he was called to the pastorate of the church at Jacksonville. He was married in 1878, to Miss S. J. Hurst, of Ashland county, Ohio.

H. B. McIntire was born in 1837, on the old homestead, in Black-lick township. His grandfather, Hugh McIntire, located in the township about the close of the last century. His wife was Mary Long. He was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, from Frankstown, Blair county. He died in 1836, at the age of eighty-two; his wife in 1845, eighty-two years old. Their children were: James, d., m. to Rebecca Snow, d.; Andrew, d., m. to Elizabeth Benson; Elizabeth, d., m. to R. Lawrence, d.; Mary, m. to William Benson, d.; Andrew, d.; Eleanor, d.; Sydney, m. to George Crissman, d.; Hugh, m. to Elizabeth Rankin; Daniel, d.; and John, m. in 1836, to Keziah Crisman, daughter of Jeremiah and Dorothea Crisman. John McIntire was b. in 1812, on the McIntire homestead. His children were: H. B., m. to H. M. McKee; J. C., d.; and J. A. Our subject was a graduate of the Jacksonville academy, a student for one year at Washington College, and a graduate of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., in the class of 1864. He has been in the mercantile business at Jacksonville, since March 13, 1866. The patent of the McIntire homestead was dated 1787, and was issued to Neal Murry, who sold in 1795 to Hugh McIntire. The latter and his family were afterward forced to fly to the block house.

Wm. Thompson.—Among the early settlers of Indiana county was John Thompson, familiarly known as "Drover John;" his wife was Mary Cain. Their issue were: John, d., m. to Eleanor Davis; Rosanna, d., m. to Wm. Hanna; Sarah, d., m. to Wm. Hopkins; Margaret, d., m. to John Crusan; William, d., m. to Mary Brady; George C., m. to Elizabeth Davis; and Robert, d. Geo. C. Thompson died in 1860, at the age of sixty-seven; his wife in 1862, at the age of sixty-eight. Their children were: Margaret: Jane, d., m. to Samuel Robinson; John, m. to Sarah Smith; Eliza, m. to Wm. Cunningham; William, m. first in 1847 to Nancy Anderson, who died in 1855, and second to Asenath Templeton; George E., m. to Evaline George; Eleanor, m. to Wm. Niel Sarah, m. to Benjamin Hull; Davis; and Porter, d. William's children are: George H., Susan E., Anna M., Samuel P., Maria J., and William A.

James Hunter, a native of the north of Ireland, settled in Black-lick township in 1796; his wife was Mary Hunter. Their children were: Robert, James, Mary and Martha. Robert was born in Franklin county, Pennsylvania, in 1782, where the family resided for several years; his wife was Mary Lawrence, who died in 1856, at the age of seventy-five: he died in 1860, at the age of seventy-eight; he was a soldier in the war of 1812, and served as postmaster of Jacksonville for four years. Their children were: John M., d., m. to Ann Banks, d.; James, d.; Robert, d.; Elizabeth, m. to John N. Ross, d.; James, m. first to Mary Ann Walker, d., and second to Adessa George; Martha, m. to William Nesbitt; Mary; Wm, d., m. to Lydia Lowry; Margaret, d., m. to John Mitchell; Susan, d.; Jemima, d., m. to Nathaniel Emerick; and Robert L., m. first in 1866 to Martha McGinnis, who died in 1870, at the age of thirty-six, and second, in 1874, to Mary Warner.

W. L. Reed, M. D., was born near Stewartsville, Armstrong township, in 1843, and was the son of Augustus J. and Mary Reed nee Anderson. The former was born in Allegheny county, and removed to Indiana county in 1838; he was educated at the Elder's Ridge Academy and Westminster College, graduating from the latter in 1867; he read medicine with Dr. McChesney, of Shelocta, and attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Cincinnati: he practiced at Shelocta six years, and for four and a half years has been located at Jacksonville; he entered the army in September, 1861, as a member of company D, 62d regiment, and served three years and four months; he was wounded five times; he was married in 1867 to Anna P., daughter of James and Mary C. Johnston. Their children number, three living and one dead.

Jacob Downey.—John Downey, the grandfather of our subject, came to Black-lick township between the years 1770 and 1780. He was forced to abandon the country for some years on account of the Indian troubles. His children were: William, d.; Mary, d.; Margaret, d., and John, d., who married in Bedford county, Pa., Elizabeth Crevison, d. The latter had twenty-four brothers and one sister. John Downey, the father of our subject, had the following issue, viz: William, d., m. to Mary Martin, d.; Polly, d., m. to John Taylor, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Jonathan Martin, d.; Margaret, d., and Jacob, who was born on the Davis Winiman farm, in 1795. The latter was married to Elizabeth Kennon, who was born in 1804. Their children were: John, who served three months in the 134th Pa. vols. and one year in the 14th cavalry, m. to Sarah Weister; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Spence; James, d.; Anna, d.; A. P., m. in 1860 to Elizabeth Groft; Nancy, d.; Jane, m. to David McCullough; Isabella, m. to John Neil, and Mary. A. P. Downey's children are: Jemima A., Elizabeth, Mary, Samuel J. and Nettie N.

JAMES MCKEE was born in 1809, in what is now Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county, and was the son of Thomas and Ann McKee, nee Lucas. The former was born in Ireland. He died in Westmoreland county in 1809. The latter died in 1868, about seventy-two years of age. Our subject came to Indiana county in 1823, and has been a farmer, carpenter, and of late years the undertaker of Jacksonville. For seven years he was the captain of the Union Guards. He has been thrice married—first in 1829, to Jane McFarland, who died in 1832; second in 1833, to Elizabeth Ramsey, who died in 1850, and third in 1851, to Nancy McComb, daughter of Gen. James McComb. His children were: Matilda Ann, d.; John McFarland, d.; Jane, Thomas Lucas, served three years in the 76th Pennsylvania regiment; Eleanor Elizabeth, Hannah Maria, Nancy Harriet, James Love, d.; Hugh Calvin, served three years in the 76th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers; Margaret Amanda, Wm. Harvy, Mary and Malinda, twins, and Sarah Barbara, d.

GEN. JAMES MCCOMB was one of the early settlers of Blacklick township. He was born in Ireland, and migrated to Cumberland county when eighteen years of age. He was a colonel in the Revolutionary war, and brigadier general of the militia ordered into action during the war of 1812. His wife was Nancy Jack, whom he married in this county. He resided for some years in Westmoreland county before migrating to a farm in the vicinity of what is now Jacksonville, Indiana county. He was a member of the legislature for thirteen years, one of the first elders of Bethel church, and died in 1814, at the age of fifty-six. His wife died in 1833, at the age of sixty-nine. His children were: George, James, Jane, John, David, Mary, Andrew, Joseph and Nancy. All are dead except Nancy, the wife of James McKee.

SHELOCTA BOROUGH, ARMSTRONG TOWNSHIP.

The first house was erected in the spring of 1822, a short time after the construction of the Ebensburg and Butler Pike, by Thomas and Joseph Sharp, who in the summer of the same year erected the saw mill. They erected the grist mill in 1824. The place was called Sharpsburg, or Sharps' Mills, till 1836, when the village was platted by Abner Kelly, and called Shelocta, for an Indian chief, as tradition has it, who frequented "Caliposenk" or Crooked creek.

Mr. Kelly built a tannery in 1833, when he came to the site of the villege. The tannery used water power till about four years ago, when steam was introduced. The tannery is now the property of Mrs. Mary A. Kelly.

The first blacksmith was David Ralston, afterward a sheriff of the county. The second was Jacob Downey, who labored at the trade over sixty-eight years.

The first doctor was Hugh Calvin, who was succeeded by the present physician, Robert McChesney, with whom is associated his son. The next physician was Dr. Marlin.

The first Crooked creek bridge on the pike was erected in 1822, and has been rebuilt three times. The Shelocta bridge was built in 1835, and was replaced in 1866.

The first merchant was James Thompson, succeeded by Thompson & Nixon, and Robert M. Nixon. J. J. Anthony, present merchant, commenced merchandizing in 1839, in Ralston's blacksmith shop. Then the firm of Henderson & McCartney, followed by Samuel McCartney, were in operation. G. W. Kelley "opened out" his store in 1853, and is still in business.

For several years William Richards had a carding machine in the upper part of the old Sharp mils. He removed to Jefferson county. The mill was rebuilt by Joseph Henderson in 1847. The old Sharp house is still standing, opposite the Sharp mill. The second carding machine was built by Henderson & McCartney, about forty feet above the Sharp mills, receiving its power from the race. Subsequently it was purchased by John Anthony, who had obtained possession of the Sharp saw and grist mills. The carding machine has been removed; the saw mill has not been in operation for several years, and steam power is used in the grist mill.

The Detar & Lytle grist mill was erected in 1874, and is now the property of Joseph R. Smith, of Indiana. The saw mill was built about the same time, by Detar & Lytle, and is now owned by Hefflefinger and McLaughlin heirs. The carriage works were erected about the same time, and have been purchased by Chambers Powers.

The first house built after the platting of the town was the hotel of Joseph Clark, who (1836) was the first postmaster after the village was called Shelocta. Mr. Clark's hotel was the first in the village, and has of late been known as the "Hendricks House."

The several postmasters have been: Thomas Sharp, Joseph Sharp, Jonathan Peacock (1832), Joseph Clark, Daniel Metzgar, Dr. Robert McChesney, Samuel Walker, J. J. Anthony and G. W. Kelly.

The first shoemaker was John Vaugh, in 1832. James Hunter was the second and Aaron Smith, the present workman, in 1841 was the third.

Samuel W. Douds was the first justice of the peace, and was the first teacher in the village.

Shelocta became a borough in 1852, and Samuel W. Douds was the first burgess. The first election was held at the house of William Lowry. Joseph Henderson was judge and Alexander Walker and J. J. Anthony were inspectors. The population to-day (1879) is one hundred and thirty-three, and the number of votes is thirty-three.

LIST OF OFFICIALS OF SHELOCTA.

Borough organized in 1852. Burgess, Samuel W. Douds. Council, R. McChesney, John Anthony, Robert Johnston, J. S. George.

1853—Burgess, J. J. Anthony. Council, John Sharp, John Anthony, Aaron Lockhart, J. S. George.

1854—Burgess, James Hunter. Council, G. W. Kelly, D. F. Conrad, Patterson McAdoo, J. P. D. Billich.

1855—Burgess, Samuel Walker. Council, G. W. Kelly, Geo. Munshower, Alex. Walker, R. McChesney.

1856—Burgess, Abner Kelly. Council, Geo. W. Kelly, John Anthony, R. McChesney, James Orr, Jr.

1857—Burgess, Abner Kelly. Council, John Anthony, Geo. W. Kelly, R. McChesney; the record gives no account of the fourth man.

1858—Burgess, J. J. Anthony. Council, Samuel Lytle, D. F. Conrad, Robert McAdoo, John Anthony.

1859—Burgess, R. McChesney. Council, J. J. Anthony, Uriah Sheffler, Alex. Walker, Thos. Bleakney.

1860—Burgess, R. McChesney. Council, Robert McAdoo, Uriah Sheffler, H. P. Kelly; fourth omitted.

1861—Burgess, R. McChesney. Council, Samuel Walker, John D. Felmley, H. P. Kelly, A. P. Lytle.

1862—Burgess, Alex. Walker. Council, Geo. W. Kelly, H. P. Kelly, Daniel Roof, Will. Beatty.

1863—Burgess, Samuel Walker. Council, A. P. Lytle, Arthur McGlaughlin, D. F. Conrad, G. W. Kelly.

1864—Burgess, H. P. Kelly. Council, Alex. Walker, D. W. Roof, W. H. Anthony, Samuel Walker.

1865—Burgess, George W. Kelly. Council, R. McChesney, Alex. Walker, Archibald Cochran; fourth omitted.

1866—Burgess, W. H. Anthony. Council, J. P. Leach, R. McChesney, J. J. Anthony, Archie Cochran.

1867—Burgess, George W. Kelly. Council, Archie Cochran, Lewis Detar, W. H. Anthony, David Heffelfinger.

1868—Burgess, Arthur McGlaughlin. Council, Samuel Walker, Lewis Detar, William Thompson, W. H. Anthony.

1869—Burgess, Conrad Bley. Council, Philip Detar, George W. Kelly, D. F. Conrad, David Heffelfinger.

1870—Burgess, T. J. Marlin. Council, George W. Kelly, Conrad Bley, Philip Detar, Samuel Walker.

1871—Burgess, A. P. Lytle. Council, Samuel Warker, W. L. Reed, A. McGlaughlin, Lewis Detar.

1872—Burgess, Lewis Detar. Council, J. J. Armstrong, W. H. Anthony, H. P. Kelly; 4th omitted.

1873—Burgess, G W. Kelly. Council, Samuel Walker, W. S. Linsenbigler, J. J. Armstrong, H. P. Kelly.

1874—Burgess, Arthur McGlaughlin. Council, J. J. Armstrong, Thomas J. Marlin, James Heffelfinger, W. S. Linsenbigler.

1875—Burgess, D. C. Kelly. Council, William C. Gray, A. McGlaughlin, George W. Kelly, S. M. Lowman.

1876—Burgess, James J. Armstrong. Council, W. A. McChesny, Albert Dick, William C. Gray, P. T. Ammond,.

1877—Burgess, George W. Kelly. Council, James J. Armstrong James Heffelfinger, W. S. Linsenbigler, W. A. McChesney.

1878—Burgess, George W. Kelly. Council, W. A. Moorhead, Harry Kelly, Arthur, McGlaughlin (died last June), W. A. McChesney (elected but never sworn in).

1879—Burgess, T. J. Marlin. Council, J. C. Powell, Harry Kelly, W. A. Moorhead, W. A. McChesney.

James Kelly came to what is now Indiana county in company with Fergus Moorhead. Their settlement near the present site of the county seat was the first in that portion of what is now Indiana county. He died in 1803; his wife was Sarah Meek, a native of what is now Centre county, who died in 1803. Their children were: Meek, the surveyor, d. in 1843, sixty years old, m. to Jane Moorhead, d.; James M., the lawyer, d.; and Abner, d. in 1864, seventy-two years of age, m. to Mary Richardson, d. in 1878, eighty-two years old. The Kelly and Moorhead tracts joined. The Kelly tract was situated between what are now the Apollo and Saltsburg roads. Meek was state senator for four years, and held many official trusts, for which see official lists. James M. was a noted attorney, one of the foremost professional gentleman of Western Pennsylvania. Abner laid out Shelocta, opened the first tannery, and was the captain of the Indiana county Hornets. Meek Kelly's children were: James M., d.; Pliny, d.; Fergus; Jane, d., m. to Zachariah Laird; Sarah; Margaret, m. to Captain Jas. Sloan, d.; Effie, m. to John Barge; Louisa; and Pauline, m. to Joseph Clark. James M. and Pliny were in the Mexican war; the former died August 21, 1847, in Mexico. Pliny read law with Judge White and was admitted to the bar in 1843. In 1849 he started for California, and when last heard from was with Sheridan on the frontier. Joseph Clark held several positions, among them being that of sheriff of Armstrong county. Fergus left Kittanning for California in March, 1850, and was massacred in December, while acting as an escort to the mail, one hundred and fifty miles west of Salt Lake. Abner Kelly's children were: James, d.; Eliza, d., m. to John Montgomery; Sarah, d., m. to E. W. McKelvey, d.; George W., m. in 1850 to Eliza Russell; O. H. P., d.; Charlotte, d., m. to Andrew Jackson, d.; Pauline, d., m. to Hugh B. Miller: Preble, m. to Mary Ann Thomas; Clinton, m. to Margaret Roetruck; Julia, m. to S. Marlin Lowman; and Isabella, m. to William G. Gibson. The children of George W., a son of Abner Kelly, were: D. C., m. to Ella J. Armstrong; B. F., Harry, Lee, and Andrew J. Joseph Clark, the husband of Pauline Kelly, was born in 1813, in Plum Creek township, Armstrong county, and was a son of William and Sarah Clark nee Woodward. (See sketch of James Clark, Indiana.) William's children were: Isabella, Elizabeth, Sarah, Barbara, James, Absalom, William and Joseph. He learned the tanning trade with Robert McClanahan, who lived five miles south of Indiana. In 1832, after having worked for Robert Hamilton on Yellow Creek, and Nicholas Loughery, of Blairsville, he went on foot to Montreal, Canada, and remained till 1834, when he came to Shelocta, opened a store, built a tavern stand, and inaugurated a postoffice. In 1844, he removed to Kittanning, and in 1852 to Freeport, and was supervisor of the canal for twenty-three months. In 1853 he was elected sheriff of Armstrong county, and served three years. In 1856, he was a candidate for state senator on the democratic ticket, but was defeated by Titian J. Coffee. In 1857, he made a bid on the overland mail for California, and in 1858, was appointed inspector of domestic liquors, with office at Philadelphia, and served two years and nine months. From 1848 to 1852, he ran a stage route from Ebensburg to Butler. He had contracts for "five buckboard" routes, but sold them to other parties. At South Bend, Armstrong county, the fort or station was called "Clark's," after the early settlers of our subject's family.

J. J. Anthony was born in Armstrong township, in 1812, and was the son of Wm. and Nancy Anthony, nee Thomas. The former was the son of Jacob and Nancy Anthony, nee Johnston. Jacob and family came to what is now Armstrong township in 1774, and commenced an improvement on the land now occupied by David Anthony. The warrant was issued September 29, 1774, the patent March 23, 1775, by Thomas and John Penn. The land was called "Anthony's Garden," and was described as situated one mile northwest of where the "Kittanning path" crosses the "Kiskiminitis path," with vacant land all round. Jacob Anthony's children were: William, b. in 1783, on the homestead, in what is now Armstrong township, d. in 1856, m. in 1811 to Nancy Thomas, d. in 1874, over eighty years of age; Levi, d., m. to Mary Miller, d.; David, d. in 1850, nearly sixty years of age, m. to Floranna Armstrong, d. in 1868, in her seventy-second year; Mary, d., m. to Moses Thompson, d.; Nancy, d., m. to James McElhoes, d.; Sarah, m. to Robert Miller, d.; and Rebecca, m. to John Cherry, d. David was justice of the peace from 1826 to 1840. William's (a son of Jacob Anthony) children were; J. J., m. in 1842 to Margaret Lucas; Margaret, m. to S. C. Henderson; John, m. to Eliza McNutt; Nancy, m. to Wm. Lowman, d.; Amos, m. to Mary Johnston; Eliza, m. to George Graham; William, m. to Jane McHenry; Susannah, m. to J. M. Taylor, and David, m. to Margaret Miller. J. J. has been engaged in merchandizing over forty years. He has a pair of spectacles over one hundred years old, which belonged to his grandmother, Nancy Thomas. They were presented to her by Andrew Todd, who sold her father, Israel Thomas, a large tract of land. The children of John (a son of Wm. Anthony) and Eliza Anthony, nee McNutt, were: Wm. Harrison, m. to Sarah Thomas; Nancy, Ellen, d.; Alexander, d.; Annace D., d.. Joseph F., d.; Sarah Elizabeth, m. to Wm. Fleming, and Amanda J., m. to James St. Clair. Wm. Harrison served in company G, 2d battalion, for about seven months. Wm. H.'s children were: Frank E., James R., Gertrude, B., Blanch, Louie E. and John Armor.

James Armstrong came to the Armstrong homestead in 1799, and made the first improvement thereon; he was of English descent; his wife, Elizabeth Oaks, whom he married in 1799, in Huntingdon county, was a native of Ireland. Our subject's brothers, Andrew and William, came to what is now Armstrong township about 1801. James Armstrong's children were: Thomas, b. in 1800, m. in 1825 to Mary Johnston, d. in 1878, seventy-two years of age; Robert, d., m. to Hannah Spencer, d.; Nancy, m. to Alexander Lowry; Mary, d., m. to Alexander

George; Jane, d., m. to Joseph McCracken; John, d.; Margaret; Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Walker; Isabella, d., m. to Absalom Clark, d.; James, m. to Elizabeth Williamson; Lydia, d., m. to James McCracken; and Ann, m. to Matthew Stewart. Thomas Armstrong's children were: James, m. in 1867 to Hannah C. Klugh, daughter of Samuel, seventy-five years old, and Catharine Klugh nee Parchey, seventy-five years old, who were married in 1826; John, m. to Rachel Gilmore; Margaret, m. to Joseph Clark, d.; Elizabeth Ann, m. to George Porter; David Johnston, m. to Julia Ann Fraley; Nancy Jane, m. to David J. Shaw; Robert, m. to Mary Faran; Eleanor, m. to Noah Clark; William, d.; and Clarinda Isabella, m. to Amos Thomas. James served in company C, 36th Illinois vols. from August, 1861, to August, 1862. David Johnston served in the 14th Pa. cavalry for three years. Robert was in the war over three years. William died in the service in 1863, while a member of company A, 135th Pa. vols.

ROBERT MCCHESNEY, M. D., was born in Mercer county, Pa., in 1819, and was the son of John and Elizabeth McChesney nee Mahan. The former was born in Ireland, and died in 1860, at the age of sixty-five; the latter was a native of Maryland, and died in 1868, at the age of sixty-eight. Our subject was educated at the Jamestown, Mercer county, academy, and at Allegheny College, at which he had only a partial course; he read medicine with Dr. James Dowling, of Brookville, Pa., for three years; he located in Shelocta, for the practice of his profession in August, 1843, having purchased the property and good will of Dr. Hugh Calvin, his only predecessor at that point; he attended lectures at the Medical College of Ohio, at Cincinnati, Ohio, graduating in the class of 1849. He has not only been engaged in an active practice, but also was a postmaster for fifteen years; a school director for about the same time, and has held other positions. He was married in 1845 to Isabella Carson, of Cumberland county. Their children are: Mary E., a graduate of the Blairsville Female Seminary, m. to A. C. M. McChesney, M. D., of Chicago; William, M. D., educated at Elder's Ridge Academy, a graduate of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., and of the Medical and Surgical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, in the class of 1872; and John N., dentist, educated at Elder's Ridge Academy, and studied dentistry with W. B. McChesney, D. D. S., of Chicago.

T. J. MARLIN, M. D., was born in Marlin's Mills, Washington township, in 1843, and was the son of Jesse and Ann R. Marlin nee McLaughlin. The former's father was among the first settlers of Washington township. T. J. was a member of company K, 155th regiment Zouaves from August, 1862, to June, 1865; he was wounded; he acted as color-bearer from the battle of Gettysburg till his discharge; he read medicine with Dr. McChesney, of Shelocta, beginning in 1865; he attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College, graduating in 1873; his residence has been in Shelocta since 1865; he was married in 1862, to Elizabeth, daughter of John Hutchinson, of Pittsburgh. His children are: Allen Pierson, Jessie, Harry and Grace.

FERGUS L. MOORHEAD was born in Indiana, in 1844, and was the son of Joseph and Martha Jane Moorhead nee Walker. He was educated at Elders ridge academy, and a select school taught by C. W. Miller. He has taught school for ten, and has acted as justice of the peace for two years. He was married in 1876, to Mary Kenly, daughter of Samuel and Margaret Kenly nee Moorhead. Their only child is Maud.

W. S. LINSENBIGLER was born in South Bend, Armstrong county, in 1830, and was a son of Abraham and Margaret Linsenbigler nee George. The former was a son of John Linsenbigler and Mary Wagley. John located in Armstrong county, in 1830, having migrated from the vicinity of Greensbnrg, Westmoreland county. His son Abraham settled in Armstrong connty, in 1827. John died in 1853, about eighty-four years of age; his wife about 1836, over seventy years of age. Abraham's children were: W. S., m. to Mary Milliron; Lucinda, d., m. to John Mulberger; Dernetta, m. to A. J. Schriver; Alexander, d., m. to Nancy Paul; S. P., W. B., V. T. m. to Nancy Shaffer; H. E., L. C., Isabella, m. to Henry Shaffer; Mary M., m. to Aaron Olinger; Julia Catharine, and Henrietta Alice, d. V. T. was in the 14th Pa. cavalry for three years. He was a prisoner at Andersonville. Our subject's children are: R. A. P., Lauretta May, Carlotta Belle, and Ida Leona. W. S. is a practical miller and has resided in Indiana county since 1852.

SMICKSBURG, WEST MAHONING TOWNSHIP.

Smicksburg was laid out on twelve acres which formed part of a tract purchased by Rev, J. George Schmick, of Charles Coleman, who obtained it from the Holland Land Company. It was platted in the month of May, 1827, by Rev. Schmick, who was a Lutheran minister of Huntingdon county. The work began on the 10th of the month and continued for about a week. Mr. Schmick was assisted by Frederick Steer, Jacob Steer, John Stiteler and others, and a plow line or rope was used to give the "exact dimensions" of the lots and streets.

The first house was erected in June, 1827, for George Sloniger, by George Steer and his son Frederick. It was a log cabin and intended for a gunsmith shop. It stood on the lot east of the Lutheran church, on Main or Church street, as it is now designated. Mr. Sloniger never occupied it, but in a short time after its construction Master Criswell, a school master, used it for a brief period as a residence. The next occupant was Peter Stiteler. Charles Kerr erected the second cabin on the lot on Church street, now the property of George Roush. John Keer built the third house on the lot on Church street, which is at present owned by J. A. Armor, Joseph Robinson's wheel wright shop was the fourth building and the second shop in the village. Here his neat spinning wheels were made as early as 1829.

Jacob Burkett kept the first hotel in the fifth cabin. The house is still standing and is now occupied by George Lewis. The sixth building was a frame house, the first in the village. It was built by Samuel Brink for a store and tavern. The old chimney and the remnants of the building can still be seen on John Stiteler's lot near the Little Mahoning.

The first blacksmith was John Kerr and the second was Geo. Steer. The first wagon maker was John McCormick, and the second was his pupil, George Stiteler. The first cabinet-maker was Hiram Lovelace.

The first mercantile firm was Robinson & Watson, the partners being Wm. Watson and W. W. Watson. They began in 1832; were succeeded in a short time by Mr. Watson, and after a continuance of less than two years he was sold out by the sheriff. The second store keeper was James Robinson, who was succeeded by R. W. Porter. The establishment, after a year's career, was also disposed of by the sheriff. John McCrea was the third merchant, and Joseph Robinson, the pioneer wheelright, the fourth. The latter was in active business from 1837 till his death in 1855.

The first physician was Wm. Simms, an able practitioner, who had an open hand for the poor and unfortunate. He erected the first brick house in 1842.

The first birth was that of John W. Kerr, a son of Charles Kerr, in 1828. The first death was that of an infant child of Jacob Bucket. The first marriage occurred in 1831, when Jos. Robinson was united to Elizabeth Gaghagan.

The first teacher was Samuel Luckhart and the second was Master Samuel Criswell. Both these schools were taught on the subscription plan.

The first death was that of Thomas McPherson, in 1832.

Rev. Elijah Coleman preached the first sermon in the embryo village. The services were held in the open air, in the summer of 1828.

The first Sabbath school was inaugurated by Cornelius Lowe, Lutheran, and George W. Crissman, Cumberland Presbyterian. It was "union" in name and spirit, and the above named acted as its first superintendents.

About 1824 or 1825 James Kirkpatrick erected a small grist mill, on which there was also a carding machine, about ten rods above the mill, on what is now the Jacob Steer farm. Previous to that time the people went to the Wm. Travis mill, now the Samuel Good mill, and oftentimes, when the water was low, they were forced to use hand mills or to pound corn in mortars for bread. The Kirkpatrick mill was 20x24, two stories in height, and had only one run of stones, and these were choppers. The bolt was run by a tarred hair rope, and the flour was carried up two flights of stairs and poured into a box, whence a boy shoveled it into the bolt. This mill would grind about twenty-five bushels per day. In 1828 Frederick Crissman became the owner. He sold it to George Steer, who tore it down in 1839.

Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson was born in Alexander, Huntingdon county, in 1812, and was the daughter of Adam and Catharine Gaghagan nee Caraher. The former died in 1842, about fifty years of age; the latter was of German descent and died in 1866, about eighty years of age. Adam Gaghagan removed from Huntingdon county in 1820, and located on what is now the Wm. G. Travis farm, in this township; his father, Thomas Gaghagan, with most of his family, had settled in what is now West Mahoning township, several years before Adam's arrival. Thomas Gaghagan was a native of Ireland; his wife, whose maiden name was Christina Young, was a native of Wales, and died in 1836. Adam's children were: Thomas, d., m. first to Elizabeth Spencer, d., and second to Sarah Gaston; John, d.; Elizabeth, m. in 1831 to Joseph Robinson, a son of Jas. Robinson; he died in 1855, about fifty years of age; he located in Smicksburg in 1829, was its first wheelwright and spinning wheel maker, was a merchant there eighteen years, justice of of the peace for fifteen, and postmaster for several years; Mary, m. to Wm. W. Travis, d; Eve, m. to A. L. McCluskey; Wm., d., m. to Angelini Gibson; Daniel, d., m. to Catharine Wagner; Benjamin, d.; and Catharine, m. to R. E. Dodson. Joseph and Elizabeth's children were: Wm., m. to Rebecca Good; John G., m. to Sarah E. Lowe, daughter of Cornelius Lowe; Catharine, d.; Sarah, m. to Rev. Chas. L. Streamer, of Butler county, Elizabeth, d.; Joseph F., m. to Maria Keezy; James A., d; Robert C., m. to Anna Stiteler; Mary J., m. to Oliver Crissman; Samuel T., m. to Laura J. Condrow; Adam C., m. to Rebecca Weston. Joseph was in company F, 9th Pa. R. C., for three years. John G. has been a county auditor, and is now one of the county commissioners. John G.'s children are: Eliza J., William, Ella, Harry, Mary E., and Ollie, d. Samuel T.'s children are: Lizzie and Olla. A. C.'s children are: Charles B. and Mary Jane.

Dr. Wm. N. Sims was born in Burlington, New Jersey, April 27, 1798, and was the son of John and Mary Sims nee Neale. The former was born in England, migrated to the United States in 1793 and died in Uniontown, Pa., in 1821, in his fifty-third year; his wife died in Wheeling, West Virginia, on the 10th of February, 1867, ninety-three years old. For several years he had a bank in Uniontown, and Thompson N. and William N. were clerks therein. After the death of his father, the latter read medicine with Dr. Morton, of Wheeling, and was there admitted to practice. His first location was in St. Clairsville, Belmont county, Ohio, where he remained two years. After a practice of some years at Pughtown, Brooke county, West Va., at the instance of his uncle, Dr. Samuel S. Neale, of Kittanning, he removed in 1831, to Glade Run, Armstrong county. In the fall of 1839, he located in Smicksburg, where he died on the 9th of March, 1872. His wife, Margaret McKean, died in 1859, over sixty-two years of age. Dr. Sims was one of "nature's noblemen." He was a true physician in every sense of the term. His professional calls were made without reference to the paying quality of the patient, and he labored as earnestly for a pauper as for the most wealthy of his patrons. Three days before his death he predicted his decease which occurred in accordance with his prophecy. His children were: Mary, d.; Frances Louisa, m. to Samuel T. Fulton; John Arthur, d.; T. N., m. to Rebecca Fleck; Isabella J., m, to Charles Gray; Elizabeth, W.; Margaret, d.; Sarah Martha, d.; and Caroline R., m. to Joseph Adams. T. N.'s children were: Margaret E., d.; Caroline A., d.; John F.; Mary E., d.; Charles A., Josephine I., Francis F., and Bertha R. The Sims family were and are Episcopalians.

Cornelius Lowe was born in Derbyshire, England, in 1812, and was the son of Wm. and Sarah Lowe, nee Bancroft. Our subject came to Wheatfield township in 1830, and farmed for about eighteen months, and then removed to Mifflin county, in which and Huntingdon county he lived for ten years, being engaged in boating, warehouse keeping, teaching school, &c., as circumstances permitted. His father died in Mifflin county in 1832, about sixty-seven years old, having arrived there in the previous year. His mother died in 1817, about forty-four years of age. Our subject came to what is now West Mahoning township in 1841, and engaged in farming on the E. N. Ritchey property. In 1856 he removed to Smicksburg, and engaged with James Condron as a joint partner in a store. The firm continued for three years, and for the succeeding thirteen Mr. Lowe continued the business on his sole account. Since 1854 he has acted as justice of the peace, his term expiring in 1881. He has been thrice married—first in 1837, to Sarah Condron, who died in 1840, at the age of thirty; second, in 1841, to Mary A. Condron, who died in 1867, at the age of forty-nine; and third, in 1870, to Rebecca M. Irvin. His children are: Wm. M., m. to Lavinia Jack; Sarah E., m. to John G. Robinson; Charles M., d.; Elisha J., John A., d.; Jacob K., m. to Margaret E. Stiteler; Lucy Ann, m. to J. C. Crissman; J. Angus, a Lutheran minister, m. to Eugenia Wertz; Luther C., m. to Josephene W. Beck; D. Alvin, Mary E., Thomas N. and Henry L. J. K.'s children are: Lottie Ann, Charles H. and David H. Luther C. has only one child—Cornelia Elizabeth.

John McCurdy was born in Conemaugh township in 1829, and was the son of John McCurdy and Sarah McCurdy nee Arthurs. The former was a native of Ireland, and came with his mother, Abigail McCurdy nee Gilmour, widow of John McCurdy, to the Conemaugh valley, several years prior to the formation of Indiana county. The children of John, the father of our subject, were: John, m. to Mary Daugherty; Sarah E., m. to A. R. Glenn; David, m. to a Miss Hays; Mary J., m. to Dr. Charles Dully; Abigail, d., m. to John Mitchell; James W., d.; Cordilla, m. to Dr. John Pettigrew; and Nancy A., d. John was in the war of 1861, in Captain John Guthrie's undetached company, for nine months. David was in Colonel Sherwell's cavalry regiment about two years; was wounded and discharged for disability. James W. was a member of company B, 78th Pa. vols., was wounded at Stone river, and died two days thereafter. Our subject's children were: Nancy A., m. to Mason J. McGaughey; Jason D., m. to Minerva A. McGaughey; Mary J., m. to Ephraim Cochran; John T. and Margaret E., d. He has lived in Smicksburg since 1854, and from 1856 has conducted a blacksmith shop; he was one of the contractors of iron and sunk the well about a mile from Georgeville, in the 1866; said well was 740 feet in depth, and pierce[illegible]ric acid gas.

veins of coal, and at 150 feet, passed through a three foot vein of limestone.

GEORGE CONDRON was born near Hollidaysburg, Blair county, in 1825, and was the son of Jacob and Elizabeth Condron nee Lockhard. The former was of English, and the latter of Irish descent. Jacob came to what is now West Mahoning township in 1842, where he died in 1865, seventy-seven years of age; his wife died in 1870, eighty-two years old. The children were: William, m. to Susan Stewart; Eliza, m. to Isaac England; Sarah, d., m. to C. Lowe; James, m. to Ellen Jones; Jacob, m. to Isabella Snack; John, d., m. to Harriet Smith; Mary A., d., m. to C. Lowe; Jane, m. to Thomas Weston; Griffith, m. first to Elizabeth Edwards, d., and second to Hannah Kerr; George, m. to Dorcas Van Horn, d. in 1876, forty-eight years old; David, m. first to Laura Ann Davis, d., and second to Caroline Wells; Stephen, m. to Elizabeth Barrett, d.; and Marion, m. to Margaret Kerr. George Condron's children are: Laura Jane, m. to Taylor Robinson; James M., m. to Agnes Galbraith; Wm. M; Jacob L.; Cornelius E.; Marion U.; Charles G.; George A.; Olla F.; and Agnes B. Marion Condron's children are: Mary Frances, Jacob Covode, William Webster, Samuel Ward, Sarah E., Lucy May, Charles Lawrence, Hannah Bell, and Elverda.

CAPTAIN DAVIS A. LUCKHART was born on the Luckhart homestead, in what is now West Mahoning township, in 1841, and was the son of Jacob and Lenah Luckhart nee Davis. The former died in 1864, fifty-three years old; the latter was born in 1816, and is now residing on the homestead. Jacob's parents were Conrad and Margaret Luckhart nee Reese. The former came from the vicinity of Frankstown to what is now West Mahoning township, in 1830; he died in 1859, about seventy-five years of age; his wife died in 1838, about fifty years of age. G. F.'s children were: Thomas, m. first to Rebecca Steer, d., and second to Mrs. Mary A. Marshall; Jacob, d., m. to Lenah Davis; Mary Ann, m. to Philip Mikesell, d.; George, m. first to Mary Mikesell, d., and second to Elizabeth Whittaker; Conrad m. first to a Miss Patterson, d., and second to Lizzie Edwards; Margaret; Sarah A., m. to Wm. Mikesell, d.; and Joseph, m. first to Nancy McCaslin, d., and second to Martha Devinney. Jacob's children were: Mary J., m. to Wm. Roland; Uriah, married to Martha Lewis; Davis A., married in 1865 to Catharine Steer; Miles, married to Mary Zink; Aaron, married to Rebecca Steer; Venizah, married to Peter Keel; James, m. to Nancy Rarigh; Turner, m. to Sarah Van Horn; Agnes; Prescott, d.; Harvey; and Reed. Davis A. was in company A, 61st Pa. vols. for three years and three months; went out as private; promoted to 2d lieutenant Dec. 15, 1864; to 1st lieutenant March 2, 1865, and to captain May 20, 1865, for bravery in action. He has been postmaster of Smicksburg since January 1, 1879. Aaron was also a soldier in the same war. James' children were: Isadore; Sarah, m.; Jacob E. and Syvilla Ann. Aaron's children were: Elizabeth Dell; Charles, Nettie and Alice.

GEORGE STITELER was born in Blair county, in 1826, and was the son of Joseph and Mary Stiteler nee Beamer. The former was a brother of Peter, who was among the first settlers of Smicksburg. The family removed to the vicinity of Smicksburg in 1840, and three years later the parents returned to Blair county. Joseph died in 1878, eighty-three years old; his wife died in 1874, sixty-nine years of age. Their children were: George, William, Susan, John, Samuel, d., David, Christeana, d., and Quincy. Samuel died while a soldier in the war of 1861. Quincy served in the regular army. Our subject was married in 1850, to Mary A. Kunsman. Their children were: Samuel E., d.; Mary C., Anna E., m. to Robert Robinson; Wilbigham, in 1830, Webster, Belle, George L., Romulus and Remus, twins, Westmoreland.

J. F. BECK was born in Huntingdon county, in 1829, and was the son of Daniel and Catharine Beck nee Fetterhaff, both of Lutheran and German ancestry. The former located on what is now the George W. Thompson farm, in 1838, but in a few years, removed to Smicksburg where he engaged in the blacksmith trade. He and his wife and a portion of the family rereturned to Huntingdon county in 1854, where de died in 1857. His wife is living in Huntingdon county, over seventy-three years of age. Daniel's children were: Samuel, m. to Rachel Shaffer; J. F., m. in 1853, to Rachael Fleck; Elias, m. to Laura Yates; Elizabeth, m. to Elijah Plimpton; and Crissman, m. to Elizabeth Shaffer; Crisman was in the war of 1861. J. F.'s children were: Josephine, m. to Luther C. Lowe; W. B., and Harry C. Our subject has managed the blacksmith business in his shop for twenty-four years.

GEORGE E. DAVIS was born in Punxsutawney, in 1857, and was a son of George W. and Mary Davis nee Barto. He was married in 1874 to Elizabeth Fry. Their children were: Emma May, d., and Charles Clarence, d.

FRANCIS ELKIN was born in Omagh, county Tyrone, Ireland, in 1830, and was the son of William and Martha Elkin, nee Beattie, the latter of whom died in 1849. William's second wife was Jane Ripley, whom he married in 1843. William was born in 1803. His father, Francis Elkin, died in Ireland, eighty-nine years of age. Joseph Hill, the Father of Elizabeth Hill, wife of the latter named Elkin, died in 1844, one hundred and seven years of age. Wm. Elkin came to Pittsburgh in 1850, where he had a son. After nine months he returned to Ireland, and two years later again came to Pittsburgh. In 1854 he purchased his present home, and has since been identified with this township. Our subject came to Pittsburgh in 1851 and learned the rolling mill trade of Graff & Lindsey, becoming their superintendent and serving three years. In 1851 he came to West Mahoning and farmed till 1868, when he removed to Smicksburg and built the foundry, and also engaged in the mercantile business. In 1871 he, in company with others, started the American Tin Plate Company, the first association in the United States to manufacture tin plate on an extended scale. Wm. Elkin's children were: Francis, m. to Elizabeth Pratt; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Bond, d; Wm., m. to Mary Elkin; James, m. to Jane Elkin; Henry, m. to Agnes Potter; Ann, m. to Spencer Barrett, and Sarah, m. to James Chapman. Our subject's children are: Elizabeth, m. to Wm. Elkin; James H., John P., Wm. Carden, Martha, d.; Martha C., Wm. F. and Margaret A.

ABRAHAM R. GLENN was born in Wayne township, Armstrong county, in 1832, and was the son of Archibald Glenn and Susan Coursens, the former being of Irish and the latter of German descent. Our subject engaged in the foundry business in Red Bank township, Armstrong county, in 1865, and in 1867 removed to Smicksburg and was engaged for some time as one of the partners of the Smicksburg foundry. Since 1872 he has been building and repairing threshing machines, furniture, &c. He was married in 1853 to Sarah E. McCurdy, of Armstrong Co. Their children are: Laura, d.; John, d.; Mary E., Homer, David, Harry M., Ann, McCurdy and Minnie. He served as a member of Co. B., 78th Pa. vols., three years. He was detailed as escort, first with Gen. Negley, then with Gen. Grant, and subsequently with Gen. Palmer.

JOHN F. STITELER was born in Cleveland township, Chester county, on the 19th of December, 1815, and was the son of Peter Stiteler and Elizabeth Stiteler, nee Fleck. The family came to Smicksburg in 1828, and at first lived in the first house erected in Smicksburg. Peter was the son of John Stiteler, a Baptist, and of German descent, born and reared in Chester county. Peter Steteler's children were: Mary, m. to Frederick Steer; John F., m. first to Elizabeth Smiley, d., and second to Mrs. Susan Lewis, nee Steer; Hannah, m. to Samuel Richey; Joseph, d., m. to Hannah Neville; Sarah, d., m. to Wm. Richey, m. to Anna Daugherty. John F.'s children were: Elizabeth, d.; Maria C., m. to George Lewis; Catharine C., m. to Albert Davis; James W., m. to Jane Lewis.

The Indiana and Smicksburg Hack Line, John C. Armor, proprietor, is a pleasant mode of conveyance to the northwestern part of the county.

Cherry Tree, Grant P. O. — Green and Montgomery Townships and Parts of Cambria and Clarfield Counties.

The first settlers in the vicinity of "the cherry tree" were: John Bartlebaugh and Peter Gordon, the hunter, on the Clearfield side, in 1822; Asa Crossman, Wm. Sebring, in the spring of 1826; Wm. Eason in the fall of 1826; Reeder King, John Armstrong, Samuel Hazlet, Peter Newman, Jacob and Peter Stiffler, Peter Helsell, Barnabas Douglass, Berringers, Pitmans, Cornelius Gailey, John Notley, Joseph Fritz, Samuel Rank and Geo. Cannon.

Joseph Williams had the first store in 1833, in a log building which was stuated above the grist mill. He was succeeded in 1835 by Joseph McMurray, who continued for about a year and a half. Heth V. Camp established the next store, about 1837. This was situated at the junction of the Gettysburg and Clarion roads. He continued in business till his death, in 1849, and was succeeded by his son, E. B. Camp, who has continued the business.

Heath F. Camp, in 1844 platted the village as far as the county line. David Peeler was the surveyor. On the Clearfield county side, Isaiah Bartlebaugh, in 1839, had laid out New Lancaster, which, with some additional territory and with a portion of Cambria county, now forms the eastern portion of the borough.

The next store was opened by David R. Kinports, in 1845, and is continued in the name of Porter Kinports. The next store was that of Elijah Criswell, succeeded by Pitts and George, now conducted by B. F. Pitts. The successive stores were, in order, L. M. Clark, still in business; Absolom Harter, R. C. McCurdy and Wm. T. Mehaffey.

The blacksmiths have been: Jacob Hicks, 1837; Samuel Boocks, Samuel Snyder, Wm. Kneedler, John A. Kneedler and David H. Keller. The two latter are the present smiths.

The first wagon makers were: John Eason and his son John Eason, jr., H. B. Grumbling and Wm. Reed. The first carriage maker and the next wagon maker was Capt. D. J. Weaver.

The first hotel was that of Samuel Smith's, in 1845. This was located in the house now occupied by George Lovelace. Richard Bard kept the next tavern in a log house on North Main street. Absalom Harter had a hotel for several years, in the building now occupied by him as a residence. Edward King's "Eagle Hotel" was the next inn, and is now the property of L. M. Clark. The "Weaver House," erected by Capt. D. J. Weaver in 1870, was the last hostelry. This is now being remodeled by Alexander Henderson as the "Henderson House."

The physicians have been: Wm. A. Piatt, G. M. Gamble, J. A. Adair, Joseph H. Ake, A. R. Lovelace, A. M. Wassam, E. Braillier and Wm. Hosack.

The first shoemaker was Peter Ruth, 1848. The first carpenter was John Barr, and the second Thomas O'Brien. The first butcher was Thomas Beringer. The first tin smith was Capt. R. H. McCormick.

The first and only attorneys were: J. M. Cooley, of Punxsutawney, and J. R. Wilson, now of Indiana. The first teacher was Hugh Gallagher, 1831, in the log store building now occupied by Robert M. Keage. The first academic school was taught in 1853 by Rev. Johnston, Presbyterian, assisted by Wm. T. Forbes. The first sermon preached in Cherry Tree was by Rev. John Kirkpatrick. The first located minister was Rev. Erastus Cole, in 1837. The first church was the Presbyterian, the second was the Baptist, and the third was the Methodist Protestant. The first Sabbath school was conducted in a log building, since floated down the river, by John Eason, Sr., and Isaiah Bartlebaugh.

The first Susquehanna river bridge was erected in 1848, the second in 1858, and the third in 1869. The Cushion creek bridge was built in 1877. Josiah Woodford and Reeder King ran, in 1827, the first raft down the river from the Cherry Tree section. John King was one of the hands. The raft was one hundred feet long and sixteen feet wide. The next raft was conducted by George Atchinson and Daniel Shackler, in 1828. This fell to pieces after running about one day. In 1829, Wm. Mehaffey and his sons, William, John and Thomas, ran a raft from the Cherry Tree. They were seven days in going to Curwensville. The raft consisted of seven pieces, each piece being one hundred feet long and eighteen feet wide. The next raft, in 1829, was that of John Bartlebaugh. In the same year, Geo. Atchinson, Daniel Ullery and Henry Darr ran another raft.

The first Cherry Tree foundry was constructed in 1849 by Capt. R. H. McCormick. The first heat was run in the spring of 1850. His successors were Geo. R. McFarland & Co., and Grumbling & Kneedler. Eight men were sometimes employed. Since 1862, this foundry has not been in operation. The second foundry was erected in 1862 by Grumbling & Kneedler, who ran the first heat in October. They were followed by: Hugh B. Grumbling, C. A. Grumbling, and Langdon & Grumbling. The latter manage the business. The buildings and grounds are now the property of Mehaffey and Kinports.

The Cherry Tree grist mill was erected in 1874 by Robert McKeage. It is 38 by 50, three stories in height, and has three runs of burrs. Its motive power is an overshot wheel, ten feet wide, and twelve feet in diameter. The McKeage saw mill was built in 1864. The grist mill stands on the site of the old William Sebring frame mill, erected in 1826–7. In 1828, Mr. Sebring built a saw mill a short distance from the grist mill. Sebring sold in 1833 to Peter Newman, and the postoffice, which had been for three years Bardsville, with Richard Bard as postmaster, now became Newman's Mill, with Mr. Newman in charge. James Mehaffey was the next proprietor, and he sold the property to Mr. McKeage. The postoffice became Grant in 1867.

Cherry Tree was made a borough April 30, 1855, by an act of the legislature. At that time it was surveyed by Robert Scanlon, of Cambria county. The first election occurred in June, 1855. The first burgess was Dr. W. A. Piatt, and Gideon Kinports, J. M. Harter, R. H. McCormick, clerk; and William Lutman were part of the first council. The present population is about five hundred.

The Artesian Well was bored by Joseph Williams and Joseph McMurray, to the depth of 767 feet. An engine and the usual appliances were used for this work. Operations began in September, 1864, and ceased in October, 1865. The flow of water is abundant and regular. No words can give an adequate idea of the cleansing, refreshing qualities of this fountain. The flow of gas is sufficient to cause a strong and permanent light. The water will remove tan, correct acidity, give tone to debilitated systems, and bids fair to make a "Spa," rivalling more pretentious watering places. We present the analysis of William Richardson, Cooper Institute, New York city: Gases, free carbonic, free chlorine. Minerals, oxide of iron (Fe. 2. O. 3), 00.12; carbonate of lime (Cao. Co. 2), 00.13; carbonate of soda (Nao. Co. 2), 00.35; water, 99.40; total, 108. The iron and the lime are held in solution by the free carbonic acid gas.

The value of the water for drinking purposes is due to the iron and soda. The carbonic acid makes it refreshing, and the soda takes up the acid in the stomach, should there be any. Grains to the pint: Oxide of iron, 6,912; carbonate of lime, 7,488; carbonate of soda, 20.16.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE CHERRY TREE—PORTIONS OF THE COUNTY LINES AND PART OF THE PURCHASE LINE, BY PAIGE & PROUDFOOT, IN 1849.

"In pursuance of an act of the general assembly of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, passed the 29th day of March, A. D. 1849, for the location of the corner of Indiana, Clearfield and Cambria counties, known as the Cherry Tree, and for other purposes, we, Richard J. Proudfoot, Artist, appointed by the commissioners of Cambria county, and Edmund Paige, Artist, appointed by the commissioners of Indiana county, first communicating with the Artist of Clearfield county, he not in attendance, having met at the Cherry Tree, for the purposes aforesaid, in the month of December, A. D. 1849, report the following: Commenced on the old purchase line, to be the boundary as designated at the treaty with the Indians at Fort Stanwix, in 1768, one mile west of the Cherry Tree, or Canoe Place, blocked several trees, age 75 or 76 years, other marks 65 years; run said line carefully south seventy-nine degrees and twenty minutes east to the Susquehanna river, near the lower part of the island, as designated in the draft annexed; then began on the bank of Cush Cushion creek, on a line run by Henry J. McGuire, Artist, in November, 1839, between the counties of Cambria and Indiana, it being the true boundary, as recognized by the aforesaid counties; the course of said true line is south twenty degrees west; ran two hundred and forty-four perches. We then set over eight perches and run a line marked on the ground, bearing north twenty-three degrees east; to continue on would strike the island. McGuire's draft, as filed of record in the commissioner's office of said counties last mentioned, the bearings call for south twenty degrees and twenty-five minutes, west twenty-four miles and forty-three perches to the Conemaugh river. The general course of Cush Cushion creek is north eighty-three degrees west and about three perches in breadth; thence from the north bank of said Cush Cushion creek, where county line crosses same, north twenty degrees, east nine perches to bank of river. Course of Susquehanna river to mouth of Cush Cushion is south fifteen degrees, east fifteen perches to the purchase line; from thence north twenty-four degrees, east twenty-five perches to first tier of bridge on edge of Susquehanna river. River line turns to right. Then examined Potter's district line; run the same one mile; blocked several trees, age sixty-five years. True course of said line is south one degree and twenty-five minutes, west to the point of intersection at the purchase line, one perch above the point of the island and in the river one perch, as designated in the diagram annexed, which point or intersection we designate as the point where the original cherry tree stood. The Indiana and Cambria county line, as run by Henry J. McGuire, Esq., struck the purchase line one and one half perches west from the aforesaid intersection, about one perch from the western bank of said river. Examined for the Clearfield and Cambria county line; found a line running due east; run said line near road leading from Summerville school house; saw another line, said and recognized to be the county line, to right. We run it back at North eighty-nine degrees west; struck the Potter's district line eight perches north of intersection, and in the river a pine put from western bank. Saw no marks on this line older than twenty-eight or twenty-nine years. We consider this as the line run and recognized by the counties of Cambria and Clearfield. We also find the western bank of river near and around the island to be wasting away and the island accumulating. We have set up marks and designated the points where the said canal place is, and where county line intersects, and would recommend the commissioners of said counties to erect a monument as soon as practicable."

"RICHARD J. PROUDFOOT,
"E. PAIGE, } "Artists."

WILLIAM EASON was born in Lycoming county, in 1799. He was married in 1807. He was a wheelwright by trade and came to the vicinity of the Cherry Tree in the fall of 1826. He served six months in the war of 1812. His business was farming and lumbering. He died in 1843. Elizabeth Eason, his wife, died in 1853, at the age of sixty-four. His children were: Harriet, d., m. first to William Jack, d., and second to Joseph Kuntz; Joseph, m. to Mary Ann Cutter; Jane, d.; Ann, d., m. to James McCune; Amelia, d., m. to Matthew Irwin, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Robert Hughes; John, m. first to Mary J. Lafferty, d. in 1874, at the age of thirty-six and second to Mary Tibbetts; Isabella; Robert, d., m. to Mary Patton, d., and Susan. John Eason has served as justice of the peace for three terms, and was re-elected in February, 1879, for an additional term. His business is farming and lumbering. He served as orderly sergeant of Co. F, 7th regiment Pennsylvania militia. His children were: Cynthia J., Harriett, William W. and Nancy E., living, and Albert, d.

E. B. CAMP was born in Middlesex county, Connecticut, in 1825, and was a son of Heth F. and Phebe Camp nee Bales. The family removed to the farm now occupied by Andrew Fraley, in the spring of 1837. On this tract, which adjoins the village of Cherry Tree, Mr. Camp engaged in farming, merchandizing and lumbering, on this as well as on many other tracts. His store was situated at the junction of the Gettysburg and Clarion roads. He continued in business till his death in 1849, at the age of fifty-six; his wife died in 1845, at the age of fifty-two. Their children were: Elizabeth, E. B., m. to Francis E. Waller; James, m. to Mary O'Brien; Emily, m. to Amos Johnson, and Anna. E. B. Camp's children were: Cecelia, m. to Rev. Thomas Parry; E. H., Francis B., Arthur Bates, Hannah W., Everett Brace, and Maria Coe. Our subject succeeded to his father's mercantile interests. In 1850 he erected his present store, and has been engaged in lumbering and farming in addition to merchandizing.

PORTER KINPORTS was born in 1831, in the "old fort," then Huntingdon, now Blair county, and was a son of John and Mary Kinports nee Rench, both being of English descent. The former was weighmaster at Hollidaysburg for several years, was constable for several years, in Frankstown, and held other positions. In 1845 the family removed to the farm now occupied by our subject in Cambria county, the residence being in Cherry Tree. John Kinports died in 1862, at the age of sixty-seven; his wife in 1879, at the age of eighty-two. The children were: David R., d., m. to Nancy P. Barnhart, d.; John W., d.; Benjamin F., d.; Gideon, d.; Joseph, d.; James M., m. to Kate J. Barnhart; Porter, m. to Margaret B. Mehaffey; Lucretia, d.; Amanda M., d., m. to Jesse M. Harter; and Lucy, m. to E. Brallier, M. D. David R. and Porter were postmasters for several years. Our subject's children were: Minnie V., John Clyde, Gertrude M., David O., Elfrida H., d., William M., Mary E., Boyd W., and Nannie B. The Porter Kinports mercantile establishment was founded in 1845, by David R. Kinports and Brothers, John, Gideon, and Porter. In 1862 the firm became Harter & Kinports, which changed in 1867 to P. Kinports & Co. The style of the house since 1869 has been Porter Kinports.

DR. W. A. PIATT was born in 1826, in Lycoming county, and was a son of Col. John and Mary Piatt nee Forseman. The former was a grandson of a Huguenot who settled in Pennsylvania. Our subject read medicine with Drs. Thomas and Charles Lyons, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia in the spring of 1851. He located in Cherry Tree in 1848, where he died in 1860, at the age of thirty-four. He was married in 1851, to Margaretta Jane McCormick, of Blair county. Their children were: Mary Octava, d.; John Williamson, m. to Elizabeth Sedam; Catharine A., d.; Alice, M., m. to Aaron Brilhart; and William A. His widow was married in 1865, to George W. Lovelace. Their children were: Horace McC., Elizabeth Metzler, Albert H., and Cora Estella.

Amos D. Orner was born in Pine township, in 1851, and was a son of Daniel and Eliza Orner nee Cameron. The former settled in the county in 1844. He is over seventy-seven years of age. His wife died in 1876, at the age of sixty-two. Their children were: John, m. to Susan Boring; Amos, D., m. to Joanna Bracken; Emanuel S.; Elizabeth, m. to Stewart Campbell; Phebe, m. to Scott Steffy; and Nancy. Our subject's chilcren are: Franklin F., and Halsaine Allethea. He has worked ten years, six of which in Cherry Tree, at the carpenter trade.

E. Brallier, M. D., was born March 20, 1841, near Belsano, in Cambria county, Pa. His parents were of German descent, and farmers. With them he spent the early part of his life, engaged in attending school and working on the farm. After receiving a liberal education he began teaching school in 1858, which occupation he followed until September, 1862, the last being the select school at Cherry Tree. Closing his school, he enlisted in the army on the 7th of September, 1862. Shortly after going out he was promoted corporal, and held that position until May 2d, 1862, when, while on the battlefield of Chancellorsville he was promoted to second sergeant, which place he held for some time, being then promoted to first sergeant and occupying that position until nearly the close of the war, when he received the commission of captain. At the organization of the company he was chosen company clerk, and occupied the position until the dissolution of the company at Harrisburg, June 1, 1865. During the war he was engaged in seventeen battles, being the first man to mount the enemy's works at Hatcher's Run, February 5th, 1865. Was also present at the surrender of Gen. Lee to Gen. Grant, at Appomattox, April 9, 1865. A few weeks after returning from the army, in 1865, he was nominated for, and duly elected to the office of county auditor in Cambria county for a term of three years, from October of that year. Finding that the duties of the office interfered with the prosecution of his studies, after serving for one year he resigned. He first commenced the study of anatomy and physiology in 1860, but never regularly entered the office of any physician until his return from the army in June, 1865, when he registered and studied with the late R. S. Bunn, M. D., of Ebensburg, Pa. In October, 1866, matriculated in both the Jefferson Medical College and Lying-in Charity, of Philadelphia, receiving his diploma from each of the above institutions in March, 1868; that of the Lying-in Charity March 5th, 1868, and on March 7th, 1868, the degree of Doctor of Medicine from the Jefferson Medical College. In about two weeks after graduation he located to practice his profession in Cherry Tree, Indiana county, Pa. On July 7th, 1868, was married to Lucy M., daughter of the late John and Mary Kinports, of Cherry Tree borough. He has ever since remained in this place, engaged in general practice, but giving particular attention to gynæcology and diseases of children, with success. In 1870 he became a member of the Indiana County Medical Society, and in 1876 became a permanent member of the State Medical Society of Pennsylvania, and of the American Medical Association, representing the county in the former once and the latter twice. He has filled several offices in the Indiana County Medical Society, being its president for 1879. He has always taken a very active part in education, contributing to schools and provising plans to facilitate teaching in the local schools, serving as director of the Cherry Tree Male and Female College and one of its faculty during its existence, and for the five past years as one of the directors of the public schools, the four last as secretary of the board. He was one of the organizers of the Cherry Tree Scientific Lecture Club, lecturing on anatomy and physiology. Our subject's children were: Stanley Allen Emanuel, Anna May, Lulu Veronica, John Kinports, Emma Jane and Amanda Margaret, d.

John B. Mehaffey was born in Lycoming county, in 1807, and was a son of William and Nancy Mehaffey nee Bennett. The latter's father was a Revolutionary soldier, participating in the Brandywine and other battles. The family located on the present site of Burnside, Clearfield county, in 1827. William Mehaffey died in 1859, nearly eighty-two years of age; his wife in 1858, nearly fifty years old. His second wife was Elizabeth Tarbit, who died in 1841, over fifty years of age. Our subject was married in 1833, to Ellen Byers. Their children were: Mary, m. to Jackson Patchen; Margaret, m. to Porter Kinports; Crissy Ann, m. to Rev. S. F. Crowther; Nancy Jane, d.; William T., m. to Julia Ann Patchen; and Elizabeth E., d. William T.'s only child is John Clark.

Rev. S. F. Crowther, B. D., was born near Bellefontaine, Centre county, Pa., August 20, 1834. His father's name was James Crowther, who was of English, or perhaps Scotch origin. His mother's name was Ellenor Baum. Both were born and raised in Centre county, Pa. In 1842 the family removed to Venango county, Pa., where they still reside. The subject of this sketch is the oldest of eleven children, ten of whom, six brothers and four sisters, are still living, full grown men and women. He was converted and united with the Evangelical Church, when nineteen years old. Educated at Grand River Institute, Ohio, taught school nearly three years, received license to preach April 3, 1857, completed the course of study for young ministers, and was ordained Elder, March 24, 1862, served on the Board of Examiners in the Evan. Church four years, graduated at Iron City College, June, 1865, with a view to teaching in the south; not liking the south, he united with the Pittsburgh annual conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, in September, 1865, took charge of the Second M. P. Church of Allegheny City and served it three years, during which time he built a new church worth $20,000. He then served the First M. P. Church of New Brighton, Beaver county, Pa., two years, during which time he organized the M. P. Church of Beaver Falls, and had a good church erected and ready for a pastor. It is doing well. He then served the Brownsville, Pa., M. P. Church two years, and accepted a call to the Cherry Tree pastorate in September, 1872, where he remained seven years, when in September, 1879, he was elected president of Pittsburgh annual conference and pastor of the First M. P. Church, Allegheny City, to which place he removed in October, 1879. In 1875 Mr. Crowther conceived the idea of a Conference College with a faculty of instruction, and a four years curriculum, for licentiates, who should pursue their studies under the direction of the faculty and submit to rigid examinations at each annual conference until they would complete the course satisfactorily, when they should receive diplomas. Conference adopted the plan, elected a faculty of six, making Mr. Crowther president, which relation he still holds. The college is doing well, and the plan will be recommended to general conference in May, 1880, with a view to making it general, and having a college in each conference in the church. The course of study, in college parlance, is called elective, and is sufficiently thorough to entitle to the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Mr. Crowther's work as pastor and church builder during the last seven years may be gleaned from the history of the M. P. churches above given. Two new church buildings and more than 200 souls converted are among the memorials of the work of those years of grace.

CAPTAIN R. H. MCCORMICK was born in Huntingdon county in 1825, and was a son of Joseph and Margaret McCormick nee Graffens. Joseph's grandfather, Alexander McCormick, had a fort well known as "McCormick's fort," in the Stone valley, Huntingdon county. Our subject located in Cherry Tree in 1848, first residing in that part of the borough taken from Cambria county. He erected a foundry, at that time the only one between Blairsville and Hollidaysburg. Soon after he started a tin shop, and has since been connected with that business. He served in company D, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers, as first lieutenant and captain for three years. He was a Democratic member of the state house of representatives in the sessions of 1867 and '68; he was married in 1847 to Ellen Benton; his children were: Edgar Benton, m. to Maggie McKeague; Irene, m. to Jesse Bolsinger; John J.; William Harry; Mary; Carrie A., d.; and Lillie Eva.

WILLIAM HOSACK, M. D., was born in Black-lick township, in 1848, and was a son of Samuel Hosack, of whom see sketch in Blairsvill records. He served in company I, 11th Pa. R. C., four years nine months and seventeen days, the last nine months being passed as a prisoner in Andersonville; he graduated from Glade Run academy in 1868, and taught three years in Blairsville and Burrell township; he read medicine with Dr. M. R. Banks, of Livermore, and graduated from the Cleveland Medical College in the spring of 1874; his first location was in West Lebanon, where he remained till April, 1879, when he removed to Cherry Tree, having purchased with J. M. Hosack, the drug store of Dr. E. Brallier. He was married in 1872, to M. M., daughter of Hon. John Bruce, of Blairsville. Their children were: Robert Bruce and Samuel Lawrence.

WILLIAM REED was born in Montgomery county, Maryland, in 1837, and was a son of Allen and Sarah Ann Reed nee Gardner. The former's father was in the Revolutionary war. Our subject served in company E, 168th Pa. volunteers for eleven months from Franklin county, and in company K, 159th Pa. volunteers for five months from Blair county. He located in Cherry Tree in 1868; he was married in 1858 to Martha J. Mayhugh, of Franklin county. Their children were: Katie Gordon, d.; Joseph Benson, d.; William Allen, Edward Fenton, Ida Bell, Mary Elizabeth, and Anna Martha Jane.

JOHN A. KNEEDLER was born in Williamsburg, Blair county, in 1839, and was a son of William F. and Isabella Kneedler nee Henderson. The former came to Indiana county in 1841, and located at the "Diamond." In 1853, he removed to Cherry Tree. His children were: Mary A., d., m. to Amos Lockhart; John A., m. to Sarah Riten; Elizabeth J., m. to John Conley; Margaret C., m. to Chambers Patrick; Almira Isabelle, m. to William B. Whitesides; William Joseph; George R.; Gertrude, d.; and Elmer E., d. Our subject's children were: Jesse P., d.; William P., d.; George C.; Mollie I.; Guy E., and Boyd M. He was a school director for twelve, and the secretary of the board for eleven years; he has held nearly all the borough positions; his avocation has been that of a blacksmith; he is the inventor of a well known sulky plow, patented in 1874.

WILLIAM W. LANGDON was born in Lancaster county in 1832, and was a son of William and Elizabeth Langdon nee Windolf, daughter of Jacob Windolf, a Revolutionary soldier, and one of the old settlers of Germantown. Our subject was married in 1856 to Mary J. Forrest. Their children were: Mary E., d.; Mary, d.; William, d.; George W., and Jesse H. William W. was in company F, 23d Pennsylvania volunteers, in the three months' service, and in company H, 18th Pennsylvania cavalry for one year. He located in Cherry Tree in 1862.

CHARLES A. GRUMBLING was born in Blair county in 1854, and was a son of Hugh Grumbling and Mrs. Sarah Ginter nee Yingling. The former's second wife was Mrs. Susan King nee Walls. He located in Cherry Tree in 1859. Mrs. Sarah Grumbling's first children were: David Ginter, Ceo. W. Ginter, Anna Ginter, Solomon Ginter, Samuel Ginter, and Lydia Ginter. Hugh Grumbling's children were: Charles A., m. in 1874, to Nannie Dorning; John, Alice, Mostine Claudius, Lucy, and Bertha. Our subject's children were: Viola, Pearl and Anna Maud.

CAPT. D. J. WEAVER was born in Adams county in 1834, and was a son of Henry and S. G. Weaver, nee Cooper. The family removed to Pine Creek township, Armstrong county, in 1844. The former served in the 2d Pennsylvania cavalry for two years, and died in 1864, at the age of sixty-four; the latter is living in Parker City, about sixty-four years of age. From 1856 to 1861 our subject was a locomotive engineer on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. He served four years and one month as a member of company B, 3d Maryland veteran volunteers, holding the successive ranks of orderly sergeant, sergeant-major of regiment, first lieutenant and captain. After the war he located in Cherry Tree, and being a carriage maker by trade, engaged in the manufacture of wagons and carriages. He was married in 1854 to Kate Z. Shaw. Their children were: Sallie Getty, m. to Albert S. Dougherty; Laura Bell, m. to Milton J. McCreery; Flora Iona and Harry Edward.

L. M. CLARK was born in York county, in 1837, and was a son of Virtue and Mary Catharine Clark, nee Grove. The former was a native of New Haven, Connecticut, where he was for several years engaged in the manufacture of brass spring clocks. In 1841 he removed to Indiana and located on the farm now occupied by John W. Clark, Montgomery township. He died in 1863, at the age of sixty-four; his wife is living, over seventy-one years of age. Their children were: Samuel, m. to George Rank; James, d.; Susan, m. to Wm. Hamilton; Hannah, d.; Sylvester, d.; L. M., m. to Almira Haslet; Alpheus B., m. to Larue Thompson; Mary Catharine, Geo. W., d., and John W., m. to Ada Hiddleson. Alpheus B. was in the 105th Pennsylvania volunteers nearly three years, and was wounded. Samuel was in the 178th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Our subject's children were: Alpheus B., jr., Cora Jane, Mary Catharine, Margaret Blanch, Lizzie Sybil and Dolly Emily.

DAVID F. SMITH was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1821, and was a son of William and Ellen Smith nee Feeny, who removed to Canada in 1829, locating in Buck's county in the fall of that year. In 1843, the family removed to the vicinity of Burnside, Clearfield county. The former died in 1858, at the age of eighty-one; the latter in 1876, over ninety-four years old. The children were: Andrew, d., and Mary, d., twins; Sarah, d.; James, m. to Elizabeth Coulter; Robert, m. to Mary Turner; Ellen, d., m. to Lory Lanigan; David F. and Eliza, d., twins, the former m. first to Nancy Bunger, d., and second to H. E. Thompson; and William, m. to Melinda Getter. Robert was in company D, 5th Kentucky volunteers for three years. Out subject's children: William, m. to Ann Ginter; Ellen, m. to J. W. Smith; Ann, m. to John Stoffer; James; Robert, m. to Jane Hileman; David, m. to Miss Brady; Rebecca, d.; Eliza, d.; Mary, Isaac, Loretta, George, Randolph, d., and Julia Alice.

JOHN W. KELLY was born in Centre county, in 1843, and was a son of Robert and Nancy Kelly nee Whipple. The former was the son of a Revolutionary soldier. Our subject learned the milling trade in Port Matilda, Centre county, and has worked in six steam and water grist mills. He came to the village in 1878, and has since been the miller at the Cherry Tree mill. He was married in 1865, to Elizabeth McCoy, o Centre county. Their children were: Franklin E., Letitia, Ida, d., Arena, d., and Ralph Emerson.

S. S. O'Brien was born in Cherry Tree in 1853, and was a son of Thomas and Catharine O'Brien nee Shell. The former was the first permanent carpenter in the village; he was a native of Ireland, whence he migrated while a young man to America; he died in Cherry Tree in 1879; his second wife, above named, resides in the borough. Their children were: D. A., m. to Maggie Sansberry; and S. S., m. to Anna Phœnix.

David H. Keller was born in Maytown, Lancaster county, in 1843, and was a son of John and Nancy Keller nee Coit, who removed in 1847 and located in Sprankle's Mills, Jefferson county. The former died in 1876, at the age of sixty-eight; the latter in 1861, at the age of fifty-nine. David H. served in company G, 105th Pa. volunteers about four years, and was wounded three times. He was married in 1869 to Maggie T. Bracken, of Cambria county. Their children were: Emma K. Maud, Harry Wilmer, James Howard, Malvina Grace, and Lucy Dunda. Our subject has worked at blacksmithing for fifteen years, and has resided in Cherry Tree for seven.

CHAPTER LVI.

THE TOWNSHIPS.

EAST WHEATFIELD TOWNSHIP.

Wheatfield township was formed in 1779, and at one time embraced all of what is now Indiana county south of the purchase line. Old Wheatfield might well be called the mother of the county, for within her limits the early settlements began, and sixteen townships are now embraced within what were once her original boundaries. In 1859, Wheatfield was divided into East and West Wheatfield townships. The name is said to have been derived from the "barrens," or places destitute of timber, affording a good soil for wheat, hence the "wheat fields." The name of the township frequently appears in the surveys from 1780 to 1786, and in 1778–9, we see Wheatfield district.

The first settler was undoubtedly George Findley, who had come to the Pumroy and Wilson settlement in 1764, and in the following year had "tomahawked" a tract of land in what is now East Wheatfield township, and his home was spoken of, May 29th, 1769, as the "Findley cabbins," in some of the application warrants of that year. There were many early settlers, whose graves were scattered in out-of-the-way places through the township, of whom no account is given save that they were pioneers. William Clark was prominently mentioned among the pioneers. His improvement was not surveyed till June 22, 1776, and is described as situated on the "*path between Conemaugh and Black-lick, adjoining George Findley, and including Wipey's cabbin."

On the Kittanning path, not far from the "cabbins" of Findley, William Bracken first located, and afterward removed to the site of his mill, spoken of in another article.

Matthew Dill, about 1768 or 1769 located in the neighborhood of Findley and Bracken. In 1773 he removed to the north side of Black-lick, "adjoining Wm. Bracken's claim."

Robert Rodgers located on the tract now occupied by Mrs. Martha Rodgers, about 1771 or 1772. The warrant is dated September 29, 1772, and the survey October 28, 1774.

John Bolar, about 1773 or 1774, made an improvement on the land now occupied by his grandson, John Bolar.

*Wiper, a peaceful Delaware Indian, who was murdered by the whites.

George Farmer, Daniel McClentock, David Wakefield, Frederick Pershing, jr., John Elder and others were among the early pioneers.

The first blacksmith was Barney Bonar. His shop was situated on Black-lick, where Hugh Parker now resides.

The first tailor was John Ling, who traveled from house to house, and was in all his glory prior to 1800.

The first resident minister was Rev. James Wakefield, a local Methodist Episcopal clergyman.

Shoupstown was laid out about 1807, by Henry Shoup, on the old Frankstown road. It was situated on the hill opposite the present residence of John Schrock. At one time it boasted of a store and a half dozen of cabins. The pike's erection gave it a death blow, and there is not to-day a single vestige of its existence left on the hill to tell the story of its downfall.

The first grist mill in the township was the Wm. Bracken mill, erected about 1772 to 1774, as it is mentioned in the surveys of 1772–4, and called the "Bracken mill." This was situated on a run which flows into Black-lick. During that stormy period, although deserted for several years, and many buildings in this section were destroyed, it escaped all damage save that from Time's ruthless hand, and upon the return of Bracken was again put in order, and did a large amount of work for the new comers who arrived after the war. The Bracken mill was succeeded by the Wm. Clark mill, a better arranged mill than its predecessor. The present saw mill of David Tomb is the third mill that has occupied its site.

The next grist mill was the George Finley mill, on Laurel run. The first was erected in 1784-5, and was a small, rude log mill, using a ten-foot undershot wheel, and had only one run of stones. The second was worn out in 1817, and was then using a breast wheel, and it too had only one run of stones. The third was erected in 1817, and had two run of stones, and used an overshot wheel, sixteen feet in diameter.

The Isaac Rodgers mill was erected by Robert Work, a noted wheelright, about 1784-5, on the Conemaugh. It was the only "dry weather" mill in this section, and was resorted to by the people living distant even forty miles. It was the most noted of all the early mills, and when its mates were prostrate with drought, it went on its way merrily grinding night and day. Old settlers speak of camping near it, and waiting even three and four days for the chance to get their grist. The present mill is the fourth on its site.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mathews was born in Hagerstown, Maryland, on the 28th of January, 1784, and was the daughter of George and Elizabeth Findley. The former had come to the settlement made by Pumroy and Wilson in what is now Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1764, and in the following year selected the tract now occupied by his grandson, George Findley Mathews, in East Wheatfield township. (See general history for first white settler and township notes.) He built a grist mill in the seasons of 1784-5, which is said to have been the second in the county. In 1788, he added a saw mill attachment. His children were: James, b. in 1777, in Franklin county, d. at the age of sixty, m. to Parmelia Dill, b. in 1792, near the site of Dilltown, d. at the age of seventy; Isabella, d., m. to Andrew Reynolds, d., and Elizabeth, m. in 1806 to Archibald Mathews, d. in 1851, about sixty-seven years of age. James was a soldier in the war of 1812, and assisted in building Fort Meigs. Archibald Mathews erected in Wheatfield township the first woolen mill of Indiana county. James Findley's children were: George, m. to Esther Steele; Ann, d., m. to William R. Duke, d.; Mary Jane, d., m. to Robert McCormick; Parmelia, d., m. to William Wolfe; James, m. to Phebe Burket; Rebecca, d., m. to John Goddred; A. M., m. to Eliza Rader; Eliza, d., m. to Samuel McCune, d. and Harriet A. N. James and A. M. were in the war of 1861. Archibald and Elizabeth Mathews' children were: Jane, d., m. to Thomas Chapman, d.; Martha, m. to Isaac Rogers, d.; Isabella, m. to William Lapsley; Eliza, m. to Joseph, Kennedy; George F., m. to Rebecca J. Mathews; Mary, d., m. to James Taylor; James, d., Sarah, d., m. to Samuel Noble; William and Archibald, twins, the former died a soldier in the city of Mexico, the latter is deceased, and was married to Matilda J. Mitchell. The warrant of the George F. Mathews farm bears the date of 1774. The massacre of a boy who was buried on the place, is noted on the back of the deed of the property. The children of George F., a son of Archibald and Elizabeth Mathews were: William E., Emma May, James Miller, Nancy Elizabeth, d., Alice A., Lewis A., d., Charles A., Mary Amanda, Harry Findley, and Benjamin Mitchell. Our subject is the oldest person whom we have met in the county. Her memory and strength are remarkable, and to her we are indebted to a large amount of valuable data.

MRS. SARAH RODGERS was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, in 1800, and was a daughter of Robert and Letitia McRodden nee McDermott. Our subject came to America in 1823, in company with a brother, Rev. Hugh McRodden, who located about four miles north of what is now Nineveh. McRodden was the first minister at the Stone Seceder Presbyterian church. Sarah was married in 1844 to Henry Rodgers, a son of Robert Rodgers, the pioneer, who died in 1872, nearly seventy years of age. Their children were: Letitia, d.; Mary; Margaret, m. to William W. Wakefield, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Robert J.; and John W., m. to Mary J. Junkins.

ROBERT RODGERS came from county Donegal, Ireland, to the Conococheague valley, Pennsylvania, and there met George Findley, who had had for a few years an improvement in the Conemaugh valley, the same as now occupied by George F. Mathews. Together they went to this portion of what is now Indiana county. The date is unknown, but the warrant of the original tract of fifty-seven and one-fourth acres is dated September 29, 1772, and was surveyed October 28, 1774, and was described as situated "on the north side of Conemaugh, on the path leading to Black-lick, two miles from Robert Gibbs, in Westmoreland county." Mrs. Martha Rodgers, widow of Isaac Rodgers, a grandson of Robert, the pioneer, is residing on the original homestead. Robert Rodgers' wife was Sarah Kyle, and their only child was Isaac, who died in 1822. His first wife was Mary Hice, d., and his second was Eliza Elder, d., both natives of the Conemaugh valley. Isaac Rodgers' children were: Robert, d., m. to Margaret Updegraff; Sarah, d., m. to James Killen, d.; William, d., m. to Almira Buck; John, d., m. first to Ruth Wakefield, d., and second to an unknown lady; Henry, d., m. to Sarah McRodden; Isaac, d., and Mary, d., twins, the former, m. first to Margaret Watts, d., and second to Martha Mathews, the latter, m. to Ephraim Skiles, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Edmund Waters, d.; George, m. to Roxanna Rodgers, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Thomas Brown, d.; Joseph, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Eliza Rodgers; Eliza, d., m. to William Nixon; James, d.; and Jane Ann, d., m. to John Hemphill, d. The children of Isaac, the son of Isaac Rodgers, were: Robert B., m. to Mrs. Mary E. Mathews nee Harding; Archibald M., m. to Mary Jones; Margaret J., m. to Samuel Falloon; Elizabeth; Sarah, d., m. to John D. Bryan; James J., m. to Angeline Cook; John H., m. to Ella Hill; William M., m. to Emma B. Pershing; and Isaac S., m. to Elizabeth Swaney. Robert B. was second lieutenant of company I, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, mustered into state service, disability preventing his entering the United States service. Archibald M. was in company H, 12th Pa. R. C., for three years; he was twice wounded, and life was saved by a package of letters at the second Bull Run battle. James J. was in the war of 1861. John H. was in company I, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Mrs. Martha Rodgers has Robert Rodgers' old bible; it was printed at Berwick, England, in 1711. The tract of land upon which Rodgers' mill is situated was warranted March 11, 1886, and the survey was made September 7, 1786, the number of acres being three hundred and thirty-eight and three-fourths. At what time the first Rodgers' mill was erected, we are unable to state definitely, but the tradition is that it was prior to that time (1786), as he felt somewhat uneasy for building a mill before he had either warrant or survey.

JOHN BOLAR was born on the farm now occupied by him in East Wheatfield township in 1798, and was a son of George and Jeannet Bolar nee McCoy. The former was a son of John Bolar and Mrs. Mary Shaw nee Gray. John Bolar, the pioneer, came from England to Pennsylvania when a boy. He served in the Revolutionary war. Prior to the war he had made a small improvement on the land now occupied by our subject, and after his return from the conflict he was married and made an effort for a permanent residence on the above named land. The warrant is dated March 18, 1785, the survey August 3, 1785, and the patent August 22, 1786. The tract is named "Bolar's Chance." John and Mary Bolar's children were: Susannah, m. to Daniel Reynolds; Mary, m. to Elijah Garrison, and George, m. to Jeannet McCoy; all deceased. George as well as his father, was in the Indian wars. George Bolar's children were: Eleanor, d., m. to Thomas Bell, d.; John, m. first to Elizabeth Amsbaugh, d., and second to Mrs. Nancy Bryan nee Hess, d.; Mary, m. first to Hugh Bell, d., and second to David Palmer, d.; and Daniel, d., m. to Sarah Weir, d. Our subject's children are: A. J. (see sketch of Blairsville records), m. to Martha Kern; Gilson, m. to Nancy Johnson; Jane Ann, m. to Charles Killen; Mary Catharine; George, d., m. to Anna Humphrey, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Reuben Ling; Melinda, m. to David Cramer; Matilda, d.; m. to David Cramer; John, m. to Catharine Nagle; Cordilla, m. to John Hess; Lucinda, d.; Findley McCoy, m. to Miriam Spires; Sarah F., d., and Orlando, d. Gilson was a soldier in the war of 1861. George was lieutenant in a company of colored infantry.

WILLIAM WAKEFIELD was born about six miles west of Armagh, in 1797, and was a son of Rev. James and Mary Wakefield nee Clark. The former was a local Methodist Episcopal minister; he died in 1852, at the age of eighty-four; his wife, at the age of sixty-six. James was the son of David and Mary Wakefield nee Hogue, both natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1775, and to where our subject was born in 1785. David Wakefield's children were: Thos., d., m. to Elizabeth Martin, d.; Joanna, d., m. to Wm. Carl, d.; John, d., m.; James, d., m. to Mary Clark, d.; Jeremiah, d., m. to Jane Ling, d.; Mary, d., m. to Robert Wakefield, d.; and David, d., m. to Mary Carnahan, d. James Wakefield was among the first, if not the first, Methodist Episcopal ministers in the county. His children were: William, m. Elizabeth Hough, d.; Thomas, m. to Margaret Harold, d.; Ruth, d., m. to John Rodgers, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Martha, m. to Amos Davis; Margaret, m. to Geo. W. Kern; James, d., m. to Susannah Hughes; John, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Clodfelter; and Lucinda, d., m. to Hugh Parker. Our subject has lived on his present farm since 1801, his father having located there that year. The land was patented in the name of William Clark, Esq.

SAMUEL ELDER was born on the farm now occupied by John Schrock, East Wheatfield township, in 1798, and was a son of John and Agnes Elder nee McManimy, natives of Ireland, and Episcopalians. The former came with two brothers to America in 1791. Samuel located in Westmoreland; William in Somerset, and John in Huntingdon county. In 1795, John located in what is now East Wheatfield township; he died in 1849, at the age of eighty-seven; his wife in 1834, at the age of seventy-four. Their children were: William, d., m. to Jane Caldwell; d.; Margaret, d.; Samuel, m. first to Margaret Mellon, d., and second to Margaret Peelor; John, d., m.; Elizabeth, d.; and Thomas R., d., m. to Ann Falloon. Thomas R. died while a soldier in the war of 1861; he was over fifty-six years of age at the time of enlistment. Samuel was a deacon in the Armagh Presbyterian church for many years. Samuel's children were: Eliza A., m. to Charles Driscol; Margaret, m. to John L. Tinkcom; Nancy, d., m. to Emanuel Lininger, d.; John, d.; Mary A. H., m. to James M. Morrison, d., Samuel M., M. D., d.; Jennie L.; William P., m. to Ida Bauer; and James N. Samuel M. was in company H, 12th Pa. R. C. for three years; he was promoted to captain of same company, and breveted major; he also served six months as a hospital surgeon. The Elder homestead was warranted to John Bolar in 1797. The patent was issued to Daniel and Susannah Reynolds in 1825.

Daniel Pershing.—His grandfather was Frederick Pershing, who was born in 1724, in Alsace, Germany, near the river Rhine. His parents being poor, and having acquired the arts of weaving coverlids and making saltpetre, he migrated to Baltimore, leaving home in May, 1744, and arriving after a voyage of three months. Having no money to pay his passage he worked on the vessel and for a party on shore till he had "redeemed" his passage. He then began to work at his trades, and in time acquired sufficient capital to purchase a small farm in Frederick county, Md. He had married in the meantime a daughter of a Mr. Wiand. In 1773, he sold this farm and came to Westmoreland county, where he purchased a tract of land situated on Nine Mile run, about four miles southwest of what is now Youngstown. In 1774, with several of his older boys, he left Maryland to make an "opening" on his land, and in 1775 he removed with his family (then consisting of the following children, viz: Christian, Peter Frederick, Conrad, Daniel, Abraham, Rosanna, Christina and Elizabeth) to his new home in the woods. He died upon this tract, about sixty-eight years of age, leaving a widow who survived him thirty years. Their remains are lying in Smith's grave yard, near Pleasant Unity. He was a strict Lutheran and raised his family in the same faith. Frederick, jr., located in 1795, in Wheatfield township, then Westmoreland, now Indiana county, on the farm now occupied by our subject, who was born thereon in 1805. His wife was Ann McGee. He died at the age of seventy; his wife at the age of sixty. Their children were: Jacob, d., m.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Hugh Cameron, d.; John, d., m.; Daniel, m. first to Eliza Hice, d., and second to Martha Fisher, d.; James, m., Margaret, m. to James McBroom; Sarah, m. to Abraham Hartzel; Samuel, m. twice, his second wife being Eliza Wakefield; William, d.; Jonathan, d.; Joseph, m. to Martha Butler, d.; Henry B., m., and Hezekiah, m. Daniel's children were; Mary A., d.; Henry H., m.; James, m. to Sarah Bracken; Margaret, m. to Josiah Hill; Samuel, m. to Susan Covode; Mary A., d., m. to Benjamin Stewart; William, m. first to Sarah Morris, d., and second to Ann McGeehan; John H., d.; Joseph, M. E. minister, m. to Nancy Wagner; Hugh H., M. E. minister, m. to Elizabeth Robertson; Eliza, m. to Thomas Graham; Cyrus, d.; Emily, m. to William Rodgers; Thompson F., M. E. minister, m. to Anna Jamison; Frank S., M. D.; Daniel; and Ella Jane. John H., Joseph, and Hugh H. were soldiers in the war of 1861. John H. was three years in the 9th Pennsylvania reserve corps, six months in the cavalry, and one year in the navy. Joseph was three years in the 9th Pennsylvania reserve corps, and in the 58th Pennsylvania militia. Hugh H. was nine months in the 58th Pennsylvania militia.

Levi Foust was born in Somerset county in 1826, and was a son of Frederick and Mary Foust nee Klinefelter, both natives of York county, and of German descent. The former settled in the county in 1834, and purchased the Wakefield mill on Brush creek; he died in 1855, at the age of sixty-six; his wife in 1873, seventy-eight years of age; his first wife was a Shaffer. His children were: John d., m.; Henry, d., m. to Eve Livingston; Elizabeth, d., m. to a Shaffer; Jesse, d., m. to Susan Grumbling, d.; Jacob K., m.; Mary d., m.; Anna, m. to James Dias: Frederick, d., m. to Mary Miller, d.; Susan, d., m. to Isaac Jones; Levi, m. to Catharine St. Clair; Daniel, m. to Eve Stormer; and Bolzer, d. Levi was in company D, 186th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. Our subject's children are: William S., m. to Lavinia Layman; Mary J., m. to John C. Wakefield; Frederick, d.; Isaiah; Catharine A., d.; Rebecca, d.; Samuel A.; James T.; Amanda Alice; Susan E.; Leora; Ella May, d.; John Riley, d.; and Levi Milton. The Foust and Brantlinger mill was erected in 1873 by William Killen. Foust and Brantlinger became the proprietors in 1877. It has three run of stone, and Leffel's double turbine 48-inch water wheel. The first mill on this site was the old William Bracken mill.

Isaac Johns was born near Ross furnace, Westmoreland county, in 1815, and was a son of James and Lydia Johns nee Forrester. The former was a son of William Johns, a captain under Washington in the war of the Revolution. The family settled on what is now the Jordan farm, West Wheatfield township, in 1817. James died in 1850, at the age of seventy-five; his wife in 1858, at the age of seventy. Our subject was married, in 1841, to Susan Fous, who died in 1862, thirty-eight years old; he was again married in 1864, to Eliza Richardson. His children are: Mary, m. to A. M. Rodgers; Frederick, d.; Lydia, m. to George Hickox; Emma Jane, m. to Harrison Spiers; Margaret; Almira, d.; Martha; Ulysses; Henry T.; William C.; Sarah E.; Levi, and Laura. Isaac was a member of company D, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry, for a year and a half.

A. N. Hart was born in Saltsburg in 1842, and was a son of William and Isabella Hart nee McKelvey; he was married, in 1871, to Lizzie J. McClarran, daughter of William and Phebe McClarran nee Sutton. Their children are: Norman S., Nellie Gertrude, d; and William McClarran. He served in company H, 12th Pa. R. C. for three years, and never missed a squad or engagement; he was P. R. R. agent at Verona for three years, and also postmaster for the same time; he has been located in his present store for five years.

William Bracken was born in 1798, in York county, and was a son of Thomas and Sarah Bracken nee Twinam. The family removed to the tract now occupied by our subject in 1802. Thomas was of English descent; he died in 1851, at the age of eighty-seven; his wife died in 1850, in her eighty-fourth year. Their children were: Margaret, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Thomas Clark, d.; John, d.; Twinam, d.; John, d., m. first to Sarah Pearce, d., and second to Elizabeth Cameron; William, m. in 1822, to Jane Cameron, b. in August, 1800; Mary, d., m. to George Clark, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Elizabeth Carney, d.; and James T., m. to Priscilla Howe, d. William was a local Methodist Episcopal minister for several years; his parents were also members of the same church. William's children were: Silas Dorsey, d, m. to Lettice Clark; Findley, d., m. to Julia Ann McCormick; Sarah, m. to James Pershing; John F., m. to Maria Evans; William, d.; James S., presiding elder for six years in the Ohio M. E. conference, m. twice, first wife being Elizabeth Bell, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Washington Tomb; Watson R, d.; Ruth J., m. to David Tomb; Milton, d.; and Melinda, d. John F. was in company H, 12th Pa. R. C. Watson R. was in company H, 12th Pa. R. C. about one year; he was wounded three times, and died from the effects thereof.

Samuel Killen was born in Eastern Pennsylvania in 1794, and was a son of Daniel and Mary Killen nee McClatchey. The parents were natives of Ireland. Daniel came to America in 1770, and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. When our subject was an infant, his parents removed to Derry township, Westmoreland county; his father died in Westmoreland county, and his mother at the homestead, in East Wheatfield township. Our subject came to Armagh in 1810; he learned the trade of a carpenter with his brother James; he was married in 1817 to Mary Tomb, who died in 1874, at the age of seventy-two. Their children were: David, m. to Jane Lewis; Mary, m. to Daniel Snyder, d.; Elizabeth, m. to James Dick; Matilda, m. to Samuel Klinefelter; Jane Ann, m. to Daniel Angos; Daniel, m. to Nancy Patterson; William, d., m. to Nancy McFarland; and Jackson, d. Daniel was first lieutenant four months, and captain five months of company K, 77th Pa. volunteers.

WILLIAM LING was born in 1806, in Shade township, Somerset county, and was a son of Philip and Elizabeth Ling nee Manges, both of German descent. The former died in Shade township in 1814, about forty years of age; the latter died in Bedford county, nearly ninety-two years of age. Our subject came to the farm now occupied by him, in 1850; he was married in 1830 to Mary Berkey, of Somerset county. Their children were: Elizabeth, d.; Benjamin, m. to Elizabeth McFeaters; Chancey, d.; Mary, d., m. to Washington Tomb; Rebecca, m. to Wilson Bown; Reuben, m. to Eliza Bolar; Christian, d., killed in the war of 1861; Emily, d., m. to Chas. Teater; Jeremiah, m. to Matilda Clark; and William, d.

GEORGE W. KERN was born in York, York county, in 1800, and was a son of Joseph and Margaret Kern nee Steinbaugh, both natives of Germany. The former died in Greensburg, Westmoreland county, where he located in 1807; his wife died in Johnstown. Our subject was married, in 1828, to Margaret Wakefield. Their children were: Joseph Benson; Mary M., m. to Abraham Koplin, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Martha, m. to Major A. J. Bolar; William H., m. to Ella Hunter; James, m. to Mary Parker; Lucy, m. to K. W. Dick; and George. William H. was in company H, 12th Pa. R. C. over three years; he was wounded. Our subject was a merchant in Johnstown from 1829 to 1857, and for four of those years was postmaster of the town. In 1857, he located on the Wakefield farm, in East Wheatfield township.

A. P. THOMPSON was born in Morrison's Cove, Bedford county, in 1818, and was a son of Andrew and Elizabeth Thompson nee Pinkney. He located in the county in 1835, and has since engaged in cabinet making, merchandizing and farming. He has served one term as sheriff, and is now acting as county commissioner. He was married in 1842, to Margaret Wallace, daughter of John Wallace, a captain in the war of 1812, serving under General Harrison. Mrs. Thompson died in August, 1875. Their children were: John, d.; Stewart, d.; John, m. to Ann Trimble, daughter of James Trimble; Elizabeth, d.; James, d.; Sarah, d., and Blanch, d. The children of John and Ann Thompson nee Trimble were: Nancy, John, Mabon, and Mary.

WEST WHEATFIELD TOWNSHIP.

This township was formed in 1859, and was made at the last division of Wheatfield. Some of the first white settlers in this vicinity, it is supposed, were exterminated by the Indians some years prior to the Revolutionary war. There are aged persons yet living in this section, who can remember more than eighty years, and whose parents were here many years prior to their births, and found on their arrival, a well filled grave yard on the south side of the river, opposite the Ligget homestead, and on the north side two grave yards, one now known as "Hice's grave yard," and the other as "Rodgers' grave yard." They were evidently the graves of white persons, but who they were, or by whom they had been buried, is not known. There were three graves, side by side, on that part of the old "Reid farm," now owned by T. S. Reid, one large and two smaller, with rough head and foot stones and a well shaped separate tablet on each grave. Trees from fifty to one hundred years old had overgrown these graves, when first discovered by those whose traditions we are now recording. Not only were the graves an evidence of an unknown and extinct population but there also were found the charred foundations of burned buildings, and enormously large apple trees, one of which is still living and bearing on the old Reid farm. Sixty-five years ago it was as thick in the trunk as a flour barrel.

On a part of the old "Wherry farm," now known as the "burnt cabin tract," there are a number of old trunks of apple trees, with numerous living sprouts. Sixty years ago these trunks gave evidence of having been a regularly planted orchard. By whom these trees were planted, or by whom the burned cabins had been erected, has remained a mystery.

By a spring on a part of the Reid farm now owned by William Alexander, near to Thomas Crawford's line, there had evidently been a house of considerable dimensions, and a garden of about an acre in extent, over which there were large trees growing, over sixty years ago. The blackened ruins of a stone chimney, and stones of the foundation, were evidences that the house had been burned. Burned clay, partly decayed charred boards and smaller pieces of charcoal in great numbers covered the space where the house had once stood. Small mounds about a proper distance apart for corn-hills, covered about one-half of what was supposed to have been a garden. Some of the roots of the trees were stretched over and beyond or encircled these corn-hills.

During the wars which preceded the Revolution, as well as the latter, the Ligonier valley, of which this township is a portion was depopulated; many of the inhabitants were massacreed or taken prisoners, and the remainder made their way through the wilderness to the eastern part of the province.

After a number of years, those who escaped or prisoners who had been released from their captors, returned and found their buildings destroyed, their young orchards cut down and their stumps having been burned to prevent them from sprouting, and their improvements overgrown with underbrush.

Among those who are known to have first settled along that part of the Conemaugh river, which bounds this township on the south, were James Clark, "Billy" Woods, David Inyard, William Bennett, Archibald McGuire, Ben Sutton, Neil Dougherty, David Lackens and James Galbraith.

On and near to "Tubmill" creek, there were the ancestors of the numerous families of Bradys now living in the northern part of Indiana county. It is claimed to have been the home for many years of the great Indian hunter, Captain Samuel Brady.

Tradition reports the first mill, of any kind but hand mills, in the Ligonier valley, and perhaps the first power mill west of the Allegheny chain of mountains, was a tub mill propelled by water. It was so constructed that the only wheel was the water wheel, which turned horizontally, with an upright shaft, upon the upper end of which was attached the running mill stones, making exactly one revolution for each of the water wheel. This mill was built by Joseph Dechard; and from it the stream derived its name. It was afterward purchased by William P. Brady, who built upon its site a geared grist mill, which he sold to a Scotch gentleman named James Brown.

William P. Brady, after the disposal of the property, together with "Big Joe" Brady, "Little Joe" Brady, "Big Peggy" Brady, John Brady, and numerous Hughs, Sams and Jims, becoming disgusted (as did also Ben Sutton, Billy Woods, Davy Inyard, William Bennett, sr., William Bennett, jr., and others too numerous to mention,) with the scarcity of bears, wolves, panthers, etc., as well as Indians, left in search of homes more prolific of their accustomed surroundings. Some

"ROUND TOP" CHURCH, NORTH MAHONING TOWNSHIP, INDIANA CO. PA.

OLD HOUSE IN SMICKSBURG, BUILT BY JACOB BURKETT, IN 1829.

HOUSE BUILT BY JOHNATHAN AYERS IN 1820, ON THE OLD "MANOR ROAD" FROM BRADYSVILLE TO GREENVILLE, CHERRYHILL TP. EAST MAHONING TP.

FIRST HOUSE BUILT ON THE SITE OF MARION, INDIANA COUNTY, PA. ERECTED BY JOHN PARK IN 1817. EAST MAHONING TP.

went to the north part of this county, and others migrated to Western Virginia and the Ohio country, where Captain Samuel Brady achieved the most exciting exploits ever recorded in the history of Indian warfare.

A few miles north from the river, on the old Sides farm, stands "Fort Hill." The traditions tell us that it was known as such to George Finley and the early settlers on the river. The soil of the hill is very rich, and till 1817 or 1818, it was nearly all covered with an unimproved forest. In the early part of the century, the outlines of a fort were distinctly marked, being slightly elevated. On the inside were several mounds. In Scott's Gazetteer of 1806, we read the following: "In Wheatfield township, Westmoreland county, Pa., is a remarkable mound, from which several strange specimens of art have been taken. One was a stone serpent five inches in diameter; part of the entablature of a column, both rudely carved in the form of diamonds and leaves; and also an earthern urn with ashes."* The mound above alluded to was on the inside of the fort. Beside the articles aforementioned, there were found at an early date, fragments of pottery of a much finer texture than that made by the Indians; stones of peculiar shape, both carved and hollowed, as if intended for utensils for cooking purposes or receptacles. The latter were both large and small.

David Inyard often told of the Indians leaving the river; going in a northerly direction in the morning, and returning in the afternoon of the same day, loaded with lead ore rich enough to melt out and run into bullets. They would neither tell where they got it, nor allow any of the few whites to go with them. About 1829, there was considerable search made for lead along the east side of the "Chestnut ridge" on the strength of this report, but lead was not then nor since found. Not long after the pioneers already named had come to the river, Peter Dike, a Pennsylvania German, and an eccentric character, with a few associates, settled near the foot of Chestnut ridge. For a time they were unmolested by their red neighbors, but during the Revolutionary war they became their inveterate enemies. The settlers, therefore, joined their neighbors on the river, and, together with those on Tubmill creek, they built a most formidable blockhouse on what was then called the "Indian farm," which derived its name from David Inyard, who first improved it, and his many Indian neighbors. Fort Ligonier was too far distant to be reached in an emergency by families of women and children, with sufficient provisions to last for a long siege, when they should be attacked by a large body of their foes. The block house was about fifty feet long, and sixteen feet wide at the foundation, and was constructed of the straightest unhewn logs that could be found of the same length. The logs averaged in thickness about a foot at the top or smaller end. The walls were built perpendicularly to about the height of a man's breast, and were notched down tightly. The upper log of this perpendicular wall was notched its whole length, the notches being twenty inches apart. The log immediately below it was notched too, at distances to correspond to the upper log turned down, so that notch came to notch, forming port holes of sufficient size to admit the muzzle of a rifle with the sight clear. The logs on the next round were notched down tightly at the corners, and all pushed out half their thickness; and each succeeding round up to the square was treated in the same manner, so that it would have been an impossibility for an Indian, or even a panther, to have scaled the walls and come in through the roof. The back of either man or beast would have been turned down, and the whole weight of the body was forced to be supported by the hands or claws, with nothing to which to cling but the scaly bark of the logs.

On one occasion there was an alarm of Indians, and all had crowded into the block house. The rule was that boys over twelve years of age should take their regular turn as sentinels along with the men. The night came for John Bennett, a little past his twelfth birth day, to take his position as a watchman. Some time before daylight, he imagined he saw an Indian crawling on his hands and feet toward him, with the intention of springing suddenly upon him with his tomahawk. The lad leveled his rifle and fired away at his Indian. At the alarm, all the sentinels rushed to the port holes with rifles ready charged. The drums were beaten and the entire force was placed in position to repulse the enemy when the attack should be made. Daylight came, and Davy Inyard's brood sow, the first emigrant of her kind, was found where John shot the Injun, with a bullet hole through her brains.

On another occasion, John and his brother William, younger than himself, were in the woods hunting their cows, and there met a woman, one of their neighbors. They had proceeded but a short distance from where they met her when they heard a shot some distance behind them. They were not alarmed, supposing it to be a white hunter shooting at a deer. But before they found their cows, their father on horseback met them, and placed the boys on the horse, while he with rifle in hand, walked before them till they reached their home. Here they found the family ready to start to Palmer's Fort, about five miles distant. The woman was near to David Inyard's little improvement when a bullet from an Indian's rifle passed through her clothes without injuring her. She made her escape to Inyard's, whose house stood not more than fifty yards from where William Alexander, jr., now lives.

The old foundation of Bennett's house was still visible until it was dug up or perhaps buried under the towpath of the old canal, but a few rods above Hodge's saw mill. Archibald McGuire's house was where Mr. Watt now lives. Neil Daugherty lived on the property now occupied by William Martin. David Brown's farm was on the site of New Florence. James Clark's homestead was near the site of the old Clark mill. "Billy" Woods lived on the old Milliron farm now belonging to Tobias Hull. "Billy" Hice's home was where Hugh Mack lives, and George Hice's where James Dick resides.

All of these with Peter Dike, his colony, and the Tubmill settlement, on this alarm, fled to the fort for safety. It was now at the season of the year that their corn required to be tilled. The women and the children remained in the fort. A portion of the men turned out as scouts and the remainder with the boys continued day after day to start in the morning with their horses and rifles, as soon as it was light enough to see an Indian, and went to the river where they ploughed and hoed corn till evening. They always left their work in time to arrive at the fort before it became dark.

Some of the patents for lands on this part of the river date back to 1774, and the descendants of many of these early patentees yet retain the lands of their ancestors.

Within the past century, David Reid and a few others whose names we were unable to ascertain, were soldiers in General Lee's army, and were sent by President Washington into Westmoreland county, to regulate the "Whisky insurrection." Reid and some of his comrades requested and received their discharges without returning to the east. Of these soldiers, Reid was the only one who made a permanent settlement in what is now West Wheatfield township. After building a cabin and clearing some ground, he employed "Davey" Inyard to make further improvements, and gave him his cabin in which to live. He then built the first hewed log house in the township, with a shingle roof and a stone chimney. He then returned to Franklin county and married Elizabeth Mitchell, a cousin of the noted Dr. Robert Mitchell, of "Abolition" fame. He returned with his wife, and had lived about eighteen months in his new house when it was robbed and set on fire during their absence at their sugar camp. The fire was discovered from the top of the river hill, on the Westmoreland side, by Rev. James Wakefield, a local Methodist Episcopal minister. He hastened with all speed, dashed his horse through the river, and arrived only in time to see that it was the work of incendiaries. At first he supposed the occupants had been taken prisoners, and that his own life and liberty were in danger. But after a second thought, (as he was accustomed to tell it,) he hoped for their safety, and soon found them busily engaged in boiling sugar, ignorant of the fact that they were destitute of the means of procuring a loaf of bread other than by the charity of their neighbors. None of these had anything to spare, and a majority of them had not even bread for their families. Pack-horses were immediately started out, and as soon as Reid could arrange for the keeping of his live stock, he left his wife at Mr. McGuire's and followed with his own horses. Instead of overtaking the horses first started, he met his father with ten of his horses laden with beds, bedding and other necessaries for housekeeping, and then the horses he had sent, laden with flour. His father told him to go on and pack what he could bring, and he and the man with him would go and take care of his wife and stock till his return.

*See Jeffries' Natural History of the Human Race, page 59.

When he got back he found his wife very comfortably situated in "Davey" Inyard's cabin, the latter having left some time previously. They remained in this cabin till their new one was partly finished, removing to accommodate Isaiah Van Horn, who had arrived with a large family from east of the mountains. The latter, the Works, Mabons, Bradys, the Hendricks, the Hales, and many others removed from this part of the valley early in the century, and located in the northern part of the county. These families deserve more than a limited notice. Among their offspring are Governor Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana; the Hon. Robert T. Van Horn, of Missouri, and others, who became noted men and women.

The first settlers were put to great inconvenience in getting their grain ground into meal and flour. There were very early mills, but on account of drought or other causes, they were often idle. Nearly every family had a "hominy block." This consisted of a block about four feet long, hewed from the trunk of a large tree of hard wood, set on end and hollowed out to the depth of fifteen inches, leaving the outer edge about an inch and a half in thickness. A spring pole was attached, in a horizontal position, to the joists of the dwelling house, and to the smaller end of this pole was attached a perpendicular shaft, hewed from a sapling, leaving a heavy beetle to the lower end. The block was placed in such a position that the beetle had fair play. From a gallon to a peck of parched corn could be pounded at a time and soon reduced to mush meal of a rather coarse quality, but with good rich milk, made a very palatable dish for a hungry boy.

For a change they had barley, prepared in the same way, and with wild turkey, fresh venison, or gray rabbit, made a dish fit for a king. Fish were abundant in all of the streams. Pike, sturgeon, catfish and buffalo were often caught weighing from fifteen to twenty-five pounds, and the pike and sturgeon sometimes as heavy as thirty-five pounds. Bass, salmon, redfins, white suckers and high-backs were caught in baskets in great quantities. The smaller streams, having their fountains in the rocky ridges, were alive with speckled trout. Wild fruits, such as plums, grapes, blackberries, raspberries, strawberries, mulberries and June berries, were abundant, and these, for delicious flavor and prolific bearing, have never been surpassed by anything yet imported and cultivated in this section.

At an early date, Ben Carson made an unsuccessful attempt to obtain various tracts of land by what were called "improvement rights." He cleared a small patch, gathered a few stones into heaps and planted apple and peach seeds on the bank, a few rods west of Ephraim Wallace's spring. He made another improvement of a like nature at a spring on the south side of the same farm.

Apple and peach trees from these seeds were mixed in with a thick growth of forest timber, and bore until they were over fifty years old. Some of the apple trees continued to bear until they were over one hundred years old. Another of Ben's improvements was located on the top of "Coal Hill," where he girdled all the trees on about ten acres of as rich soil as any in the township. This tract is now owned by Andrew Robison and the Reid heirs. This portion of Coal hill was known as "Carson's deadening" until improved by the present owners.

The territory now comprising the two Wheatfields was at an early date divided into three different nationalities. Along the river the early settlers were mainly Scotch and the settlement was called Scotland. The northeast part was inhabited by the Scotch-Irish and was called Ireland. The centre of West Wheatfield was settled by the Pennsylvania Germans, and was and is yet called Germany.

CENTREVILLE is located on the Conemaugh, immediately opposite New Florence, the two places being connected by a toll bridge. The first permanent settler on the Centreville farm was Ephraim Wallace, in 1800. It is now owned by William Leggett. Centreville is an old town being founded in September, 1828, by William Leggett, at the time of the erection of the canal which passed through the village. It was a prosperous community for many years, till the downfall of the canal and the building up of the railroad towns sapped its life blood.

FURNACES.

The Indiana Iron Works (East Wheatfield township) are situated in a deep valley, near the Conemaugh river, in the southeastern portion of the township. A furnace was built here by Henry Noble, about the year 1837. Having passed into the hands of Elias Baker, about the year 1848, it was torn down and a new furnace built. A forge, soon after this date, was erected near the furnace, but it has gone to decay. For some years the furnace has not been in operation. A bucket factory formerly stood on the site of these works. It was built about 1828, and was owned by Hart and Thompson. The Indiana Iron Works are at present better known as Baker's Furnace.

Black-lick Furnace was built in 1844, by David Stewart. It is situated three miles from Armagh, in Buffington township, on a public road leading from the Indiana iron works to Strongstown. It is not now in operation.

ADDISON PALMER was born in 1854, on the farm now occupied by G. W. Cribbs, and was a son of Henry and Sarah Palmer nee Oaks, a daughter of John Oaks. Henry died in 1875, at the age of sixty-eight. His wife was born in 1808, and is now residing with Mr. Cribbs. Henry was the son of Peter and Elizabeth Palmer nee Dunklebarger. The latter died about 1820, at the age of forty. His second wife was Frances Gaffney, who died in 1873, over seventy years of age. Peter died on the farm now occupied by Robert Mack, in 1859, at the age of ninety-eight. He was an early settler of the vicinity of Armagh. Peter's children were: Charles, d., m.; John, d., m. to Esther Kimmell; David, d., m. first to Nancy McDowell, d., and second to Nancy J. Lewis; Henry, d. above noted; Peter, Mary, m. to John Lucas; Jane, m. to Joseph Arters; Sarah, d., m. to Richard Greenhill, d.; William, m. to Jane Wakefield; Cynthia, m. to James Wakefield; Lucinda, m. to Jeremiah Wakefield; Daniel, m. to Amanda Shields; Catharine, m. to Joseph Campbell; Samuel, m. to Margaret Carnahan; Martha, m. first to Keyport Rankin, d., and second to John Baker; and Porter, m. to Lauraelle Brown. William, Samuel, Daniel and Porter were members of the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Henry Palmer's children were: Mary J., m. to Charles Crocker, d.; Caroline, m. to Washington Butler; Harrison, m. to Mary Ann Rockingham; Peter, d.; Joseph, m. to Nora Wallace, d.; Elizabeth, m. to George W. Cribbs; Augustus, m. to Margaret Morton; Addison, m. to Agnes M. Campbell, daughter of Christopher Campbell, of West Wheatfield, and Robert, m. to Isabella Hice. Joseph was in the army from Oregon, engaged in fighting the Indians. Augustus served in the militia for two terms during the war of 1861. Our subject located on his present farm in 1876. His only child is Harry Emory.

George W. Cribbs was born on the present Joseph McCracken farm, West Wheatfield township, in 1840, and was a son of George and Jane Cribbs. The latter was born in 1800, in Ireland. The former died in 1866, at the age of sixty-eight. He was born on the George H. Cribbs farm, Black-lick township, and was a cousin of Daniel Cribbs, Young township, of whom see sketch. George Cribbs' children were: Jacob, m. first to Nancy Boyle, d., and second to Margaret Repine; A. J. B., d. while a member of the second Iowa; Peter I., m. to Adaline McBride; George W., m. to Elizabeth Palmer; Christopher M., m. to Margaret Crusan; and Mary J., m. to Joseph D. McCracken. Peter I. served in the second Iowa. George W. was in company A, 83d Pennsylvania volunteers about three years. He was in the following battles: Yorktown, Meadow Bridge, Hanover Court House, second Bull Run, Brandy Station, Bristow Station, Rappahannock Station, Mine Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Laurel Hill, Bethesda Church, Cold Harbor, four battles at Petersburg, two at Yellow House; also in twenty small battles and skirmishes. He served as justice of the peace for twenty years, and school director and secretary of board for three years. His children were: Harry A., W. B. O., Orrin L., Charles Crocker, d., and Clarence Alexander Scott.

Thomas S. Reid was born in the county, in 1808, and was a son of David and Elizabeth Reid, nee Mitchell. Their children were: Ruth, Andrew, d., m. to Mary McFarland; Esther, m. to Thomas McCleary; Elizabeth, Martha, d.; David, m. to Jane Alexander; Jesse M., d., m. to Eliza Brown; William, d., m. to Margaret Mabon; Robert, m. to Rebecca Croco; Martha, d.; and Thomas S., m. first to Anna Peck, d.; second to Jane Mabon, d., and third to Ruth Kirkwood. Our subject's children were: Anna E., d.; Hadassah M., d.; Robert K., d.; and Jennie A. He learned the printer's trade in Indiana, with John McCrea. In 1832, he went to Brookville, Jefferson county, and, in connection with J. J. Y. Thompson, established the Jefferson Democrat. We next find him in New Lisbon, Ohio, where we was engaged in teaching and in engineering on the Sandy and Beaver Canal. At the solicitation of a number of prominent citizens he went to St. Clairsville, Belmont county, Ohio, where he established the Belmont Chronicle, and the Ohio Cultivator, and Belmont Gardener. After a residence there of about two years, he returned, in 1839, to Indiana county, and engaged in farming on the old homestead. He sold his farm and went to Jefferson county, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits, meanwhile losing a leg. He disposed of his property and returned to the Ligonier Valley. Not long after his arrival he established the True American at Ligonier. In a brief time he purchased the Blairsville Appalachian, and after a residence of four years in Blairsville he removed to Latrobe, and there published the True American. In 1861 he retired from the printing business, and has since been engaged in fruit culture and the nursery trade.

The Reid Nursery at Centreville is well worth a visit. His stock comprises some of the most valuable varieties of fruit to be found in Western Pennsylvania. It is believed by many horticulturalists that the finest apples in the country are the "Ligonier Seedlings," and from the specimens we have examined we cannot but coincide in their opinion.

James Wakefield was born in Indiana county, June 18, 1814, and was a son of David and Jane Wakefield, nee Carnahan. The latter was born in 1780, and settled in Indiana county, where Centreville now is, in 1794. His children were: John, d., m. to Fanny Byers; Elizabeth, d., m. to Jacob K. Gamble; Mary, m. to Geo. W. Gamble; Jane, m. to William Palmer; Jeremiah, m. to Lucinda Palmer; Caroline, Thomas P., d., m. to A. Sides, and James, who married Cynthia, daughter of Peter Palmer, in 1839. Their children are: John C., m. to Polly J. Foust; Catharine, m. to Jesse Fee; Mary E., m. to Dan'l Woods; Thomas J., m. to Louisa Woods; James, m. to Lizzie St. Clair; and Emma. Our subject was raised on a farm, taught school for twenty-five years, and has followed surveying for over forty years. He was elected justice of the peace in 1862, and is still acting in that capacity. His grandfather, David Wakefield, was the first settler on the farm upon which he lives.

William Reynolds, son of Andrew and Isabella Reynolds nee Finley, was born in 1819. His father was one of the early settlers and worked at the woolen manufacturing business. His wife was a daughter of George Finley, one of the first settlers of the county. Our subject was their only child, and he married first Delilah Hutchinson. Their children were: Geo. F., Andrew, m. to Mary Robinson; Elizabeth E., d., and Ruth A. His second wife was Abigail Doty. Their children were: William C., Sarah A., Fannie, Porter T., and Alice. Mr. Reynolds was raised on a farm, but has devoted much of his time to bee culture, dealing extensively in bees. He purchased his farm in 1842.

Jacob K. Gamble, son of William and Elizabeth Gamble nee Doyle, was born in Morgantown, West Virginia, in 1808. William's children were: John, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Archibald Fleming; Harriet, d., m. first to John Rutter, and second to a Mr. Carr; William, m. to Marian Scott; Julia A., d., m. to John Hoskinson; George W., d., m. to Mary Wakefield; and Jacob K., m. first to Elizabeth Wakefield, d., and second to Catharine Lute. Our subject's children were: William H., Maria, d.; John M., m. to Cannie Simpson; George W., m. to Mary Shaffer; Harriet, m. to Henry Shomo; and Elizabeth, m. to Edward Miken, by the first wife; and by the second: Jacob A., James St. Clair, Mary, m. to Thomas Gamble; Archibald F., Hugh P., and Edwin R. Wm. H. and John served in the late war. William, the father of our subject, served under Wayne in the Indian war, and lost his life in the war of 1812. Our subject settled in the county in 1827. He learned the millwright trade and worked at it in Fayette and the surrounding counties for several years. He purchased the present mill in 1830, and rebuilt it in 1844. The old mill which stood on the site of the present one was erected in 1818 by Hugh St. Clair. He served one term as county commissioner and one as justice of the peace.

Thomas McCune, son of James and Agnes McCune nee Peters, was born in county Antrim, Ireland, January 6th, 1845. His father died when he was seven years of age; and his mother and family migrated to the United States in 1854, and settled in Centreville, Indiana county. The children were: William m. to Annie Stratton; James, m. to Mary Sawyer; John, m. to Lizzie Lindsey; Margaret, Martha, Mary A., d., m. to J. McNeilly; Sarah, and Thomas. The latter married Martha J., daughter of John Kroesen, in 1871. Their children are: Mabel C., Agnes, Martha, and Frances L. Our subject served in company D, 102d regiment Pennsylvania volunteers in the late war, was wounded at the battle of the Wilderness and lay in the hospital at Washington, D. C., Camden street, Baltimore, and Wilmington, Delaware. His brother John was also in the service. Mr. McCune was engaged as book-keeper in the second national bank of Pittsburgh five years, then came to this county and is now engaged in farming.

Joseph De K. Hedges, son of James C. and Margaret Hedges, nee Neville, was born in Pickaway county, Ohio, in 1824. The latter's children were: Henry N., m. to Rebecca Darst; James N., d., m. to Mary Kimblin; Charles, d.; Rochester, m. to Catharine Low; Harriet, m. to Samuel Collahan; Araminta, m. to David Kinnear; Margaret, m. to Joseph Hunsicker; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Martin, and Joseph De K. The latter married Jane Liggett, daughter of John Liggett, of Indiana county, in 1849. Their children are: John L. Rochester, Ralph, Ella, m. to William B. Crawford, and Cora M. He came from Ohio to this county in 1852, and is now engaged in farming. He served in company K, 177th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months, and re-enlisted in the 205th regiment (Heavy Artillery), and served until the close of the war.

Israel Doty was a son of Andrew and Catharine Doty, nee Livengood, and was born in Westmoreland county, in 1829. The latter's children were: James, d., m. to Armstrong Henderson; Catharine, m. to George Dougherty, and Israel. The latter married Catharine, daughter of John McCartney, in 1856. Their children are: Elizabeth, Mary, John, Margaret, Kelley, Charles, and Daisy. His wife died in 1873. He learned the shoemaker's trade and followed it a number of years. He was connected with the United States Revenue Department in the Twenty-first Congressional District for four years, and has held the office of justice of the peace twenty years, and is still acting in that capacity. He is also working at his trade in Centreville.

Elliott Robinson was born in Westmoreland county in 1808, and was a son of Irwin and Catharine Robinson, nee Elliott.

[See sketch of Irwin Robinson, North Mahoning township.] They were very early settlers on the place now occupied by our subject. Catharine Elliott was a daughter of John and Mary Elliott, whose children were: John, Thomas, William, Irwin, Catharine, Jane, Mary and Elizabeth. John and William enlisted for the war of 1812, but peace was declared before they reached the seat of war. Our subject's children were ten in number, viz.: six sons and four daughters. Three of the male children died in infancy. The oldest daughter, Eliza Catharine, wife of William L. Winkle, died May 15, 1880. The three sons were pupils at the Jacksonville Academy, and the Millersville State Normal School. His daughters were scholars at the Beaver and the Blairsville Female Seminaries.

ARMSTRONG TOWNSHIP.

This was the second township formed north of the Conemaugh, and at one time embraced nearly half of what is now Indiana county, south of the "purchase line." The township received its name from Colonel (afterward General) Armstrong, the commander of the celebrated expedition against Kittanning. The exact date of the township organization, we have been unable to ascertain, but would judge it to have occurred in 1784 or 1785, as the earliest extant assessment list bears the date of 1785.

STEWARTSVILLE, PARK WOOD P. O.

was laid out by Thompson McCrea, on New Year's day, 1848, for William Anderson, sr. It was named in honor of Archibald Stewart. The first house was erected for a dwelling by Samuel Anderson, on the corner of Indiana and Clarion streets. The first store was established in 1851, by, Thompson McCrea and Robert Smith. Their successors were, Patterson McAdo, Joseph M. Laughlin, and in 1869, Wallace & Fulton, the present firm.

The first blacksmith was James Ray, in 1849, who still continues in the avocation. The first and present shoemaker was Thomas McGaughy. the first and only cooper was William Gray, from 1852 to 1856. The first wheelwright was Charles Kerr, in 1850 and 1851. The first carpenter was James Anderson, in 1876, who is the present workman.

The first teacher was Mr. McLain, who taught in a log house still standing on Indiana street. The present school house was erected in 1858. The first teacher in this building was Hugh Miller.

The postoffice was established in September, 1870; William Calhoun was the first postmaster.

The population of the village in 1879 was about fifty.

TANNERY VILLAGE.

Samuel McCullough started a tannery on the site of the village in 1839. In 1860, he engaged in the shook business, and also had a small store. About this time, the place began to have some importance as a trading post.

The postoffice was established in 1854. Mr. McCullough was the first in charge of the office. In 1870, the office was removed to James A. Laney's, about two miles distant from the village. James Bothel is the present postmaster. Mr. McCullough was succeeded in 1866, by John W. Henderson, who continues the tannery, and resides on the property.

CAPTAIN ANDREW SHARP was a native of Cumberland county, where he married, in 1783, Ann Woods. In 1784, the family located on the land now occupied by Harrison Anthony, Armstrong township. [For further particulars of Captain Sharp see account of massacre of Captain Sharp, and sketch of Mrs. Hannah Leason.] Andrew Sharp's children were: Hannah, b. in 1784, d., m. to Robert Leason, d.; Nancy, b. Feb. 21, 1785—first white child born on the west side of Crooked Creek—d. Aug. 2, 1862, m. first to David Ralston, d., and second to James Mitchell, b. in 1777, d. in 1847; Mary, b. in 1787, d.; Thomas, b. in 1788, d., m. to Isabella McCullough, d.; Joseph, b. in 1789, d. in 1854, m. to Sallie Ramsey, d. in 1839, about forty-two years of age; Margaret, b. in 1790, d., m. to John McCullough, d.; and Ann, b. in 1794, d., m. to Andrew McCreight, d. A black walnut stands on the Harrison Anthony farm, about ten rods west of the spring. This tree was left by Joseph Sharp to mark his father's cabin. The Kittanning path was near the house. The children of Joseph, a son of Captain Sharp, were: Andrew, b. in 1816, m. to Mary Robinson; Hugh, m. to Nancy Johnson; Thomas, m. to Sarah McNutt, d.; Margaret, m. in 1852 to Aaron Smith; John, m. to Elizabeth Cover; Mary Ann, m. to Morrison Hosac; Alexander, m. to Sarah Smith, d.; Joseph W., m. to Mary Ann Walker; and Sarah, m. to Joseph T. Hosac. Andrew served in the militia during the Confederate raids, and also in company H., 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. The children of Andrew, a son of Joseph Sharp, were: Joseph A., m. to Anna Faran; Jane, m. to G. A. Wood; Sarah, Lydia, William, Elder, Mary Bell, and Annie. Joseph Alexander served nine months in the 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, and over two years in the Signal Corps. Nancy Sharp, a daughter of Captain Sharp, and David Ralston's children were: Andrew, David, d., m. to Margaret Sharp, d.; John, d., m. to Jane Sloan, d.; and Mary, m. to Wm. McCracken, d. James and Nancy Mitchell's (widow of David Ralston), children were: James, d.; m. to Sarah Johnston, d.; Thomas Sharp, m. to Sarah Blose, d.; Robert, d.; Ann, m. to Samuel Moorhead, d. in 1853, thirty-eight years of age; Eliza, m. in 1843 to Absalom Montgomery; Alexander, d.; Agnes, m. to Robert Gilson; Rebecca, d., m. to Robert Lytle; and William, d. Thomas Sharp was sheriff of Armstrong county. Alexander was killed by the falling of a tree. William died in California. The children of Samuel and Ann Moorhead, nee Mitchell, were: James, m. to Jennie McMurtrie; William and Clara. Samuel Moorhead was a colonel in the militia. He was a son of Fergus, who was a son of Fergus Moorhead, the pioneer. Mrs. Moorhead has Captain Sharp's old Bible. The children of Absalom and Eliza Montgomery, nee Mitchell, were: Alexander, m. to Statira Jackson; Jane, Anna Bell, William Woods, Sharp, Mitchell, Zenas Woodward, Irene, Anthony and David Elder. The old Kittanning trail passed through the Montgomery farm.

BENJAMIN WALKER was born on the farm adjoining his present premises in 1799, and was a son of Benjamin and Margaret Walker, nee Cunningham. The former was a native of the Path Valley, where he married his wife. He came to the above mentioned tract in 1786, having purchased the property of James Findley. The family were often forced to retire to the blockhouse, which was about ten rods from the cabin, and about one-fourth of a mile from Crooked creek. He died in 1843, over eighty years of age; his wife in 1818, about fifty-five years old. Their children were: Robert, d., m. to Elizabeth Matthews, d.; Jane, d., m. to Robert Walker, d; Mary, d.; John, d.; Mary, d., m. to William Armstrong, d.; Benjamin, m. in 1825 to Elizabeth; Thomas, now over seventy-three years of age; James, d., m. to Margaret Wiggins, d.; Margaret, d., m. to David Johnson, d.; and Alexander, m. to Margaret McFarland. Our subject's children were: John, m. to Sarah Kunkle; Margaret, m. to Jas. McCreight; Nancy, m. to Alexander Campbell; Israel, m. to Emma Dobbins; Mary Jane, m. to John Faran, d.; Elizabeth, m. to James Peelor, d.; James; Maria Louisa, d., m. to Samuel McCurdy; and David Ralston, m. to Melissa McKisson; John served in Captain Gordon's company, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. Israel is building in Peru, about four hundred miles from the falls of the San Antonio, what is said to be the largest quartz mill in the world. Our subject has a foot adze brought from Ireland by his grandfather over one hundred and twenty years ago. There is an apple tree standing in his garden, twelve feet and eight inches in circumference. It was planted in 1786 by Charles McCoy, who was killed by the Indians in 1795, and is still bearing fruit.

MRS. ANN DEVLIN was born in 1801, on Altman's Run, in what is now Armstrong township, and was a daughter of Hugh and Margaret Ramsey nee McHard, who were of Scotch-Irish descent, and were married in Franklin county, locating on what is now Indiana county. The former died in 1818, about sixty years of age. and the latter in 1810. Their children were: James, d., m. to William Wiggins, d.; John, d., m. to Jane McFarland, d.; Mary, d., m. to James Wiggins, d.; Margaret, d., m. to William Rankin, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Richard Devlin, d.; Hugh, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Joseph Sharp, d.; Alexander, d; and Ann, m. to James Devlin, d. in 1875, in his eightieth year. James Devlin was the son of William and Hannah Devlin nee Taylor, who were married in Franklin county and migrated to what is now Indiana county, in 1797. James and Ann Devlin's children were: Richard, Margaret, m. to James Devinney; William, m. first to Mary Carder, d., and second to Eliza Johnston; Hannah, John, d.; Sarah Ann, Grisell, James Ramsey, d.; and Nancy Jane. Richard was in company D, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. William was three years in company A, 111th Illinois volunteers. John was a member of company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers and died in December, 1861. James Ramsey, was a member of company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers and died in December, 1862. William Devlin purchased the tract occupied by our subject, in 1796. The land was called "Alexandria."

John Mitchell was born on what is now the Samuel Bothel farm, Armstrong township, in 1807, and was a son of Samuel and Sarah Mitchell nee Cunningham, a daughter of Andrew Cunningham, a native of Scotland, who served in the Revolutionary army for five years. Samuel was a son of John and Jane Mitchell nee Parkinson. The former migrated to the county about 1800, and at first located a short distance south of the present site of the county seat. John and Jane Mitchell's children were: John, d.; Samuel, b. July 4th, 1776, d., m. to Sarah Cunningham, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to George Miller, d.; Parkinson, Robert, d., b. at the time of the pumpkin flood, on the bank of the Susquehanna, m. to Jane Smith, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Alger Young, d.; Jane, d., m. to Hugh Marshall, d.; and Matthew, d., m. to Nancy Smith, d. John, Parkinson and Samuel were in General Wilkinson's army that went to New Orleans. Samuel and Sarah Mitchell's children were: John, m. in 1827 to Margaret Johnston, b. in 1799; Andrew, m. to Esther Montgomery; George, d., m. first to Eliza Rombaugh, d., and second to Ellen Campbell, d.; David, m. to Nancy Keener; Eliza, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Cynthia Witherspoon; Mary, d., m. first to John Templeton, d., and second to Stewart Fitzgerald, d.; and Margaret, m. to William Braniff. Our subject's children were: Samuel, d., m. to Eliza Shadel; Andrew, m. to Anna Fleener, William J., presiding elder M. E. Church, Beloit, Kansas; Sarah, E., d.; and Mary. Samuel was in the war of 1861 for two years. William J. was in company I, 10th Pennsylvania volunteers for four years and three months.

Mrs. Jane Robinson.—She was born on Cherry run, Centre township, Indiana county, April 20, 1796, and was the daughter of Samuel and Lydia Gibson, nee Wiggins, who were reared and married in Ireland, and settled on Cherry run, about 1795. Mr. Gibson died about 1800, and his widow afterward married Joseph White. The children by these marriages were: James, d., a soldier in the war of 1812, drowned in Lake Erie while in the service; Andrew Gibson, d., m. first to Elizabeth Smith, d., and second to Jane McSparan; Jane, m. to John Robinson, d.; William, d.; Nancy, m. to Wm. Cannan; and Thomas, d., m. to Margaret Thomas; and Joseph White, m. to Hannah Allison. Jane Gibson was married to John Robinson in 1817. He died in 1864 at the age of seventy-five. He was born, reared and died in Armstrong township. His father, John Robinson, was among the early settlers of the township. Mrs. Robinson has resided upon the homestead over sixty-two years. Her husband was an Elder of the U. P. Shelocta church at the time of his death. Their children were: Mary, m. to Andrew Sharp; Lydia, m. to John Stewart; Isabella; Nancy, m. to William Bracken; Margaret, d., m. to John McCaslin, d.; Eliza Jane, m. to James E. Dickson; John J., d.; Martha A., m. to Jas. Campbell; Wm. Gibson, a member of company H, 206 Pennsylvania volunteers, from October, 1864, till the end of the war of 1861, m. to Mary E. Fleming; and Caroline, m. to Harvey McHenry. Mrs. Robinson is as "hale and hearty" as most women of only sixty years of age. She hears readily, and takes a deep interest in all the educational and religious matters of her township and neighborhood.

Moses Johnston was born on the Johnston homestead, Armstrong township, in 1826, and was a son of William and Susannah Johnston, nee Miller. The former was a son of David Johnson and Nancy Armstrong. The former was a native of county Donegal, Ireland, and the latter of Scotland. David Johnston, in 1790, migrated to Franklin county, in 1793, to Westmoreland county, and in 1812, to what is now the Thomas Morgan farm, Chestnut Flat. He died at the age of seventy-five; his wife, seventy years of age. Their children were: James, b. in 1791, still working at the shoemaker trade; Nancy, eighty-three years old, m. to George Bothel, d.; Margaret, m. to John Mitchell; William, d., m. to Susannah Miller; David, d., m. in 1830 to Margaret Walker, d.; Mary, d., m. to Thomas Armstrong; Alexander, d.; and Nellie, m. to Joseph Thomas, d. William's children were: Moses, m. in 1849 to Nancy J. Morrison; David, m. to Rebecca Wolf; Margaret, m. to Daniel Roof; Mary Ann; James, m. to Hannah Catharine Stahl; John, m. to Caroline Wells; Susannah, m. to William Krider; Elizabeth, d.; William, d.; Nancy, d.; and Lavinia, d. David was in company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry, for three years; James was in the 63d Pennsylvania volunteers and Invalid Corps for three and a half years; and John was in company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry, for three years. Our subject's children were: Martha Jane; Mary Margaret, d.; James M., m. to Elizabeth Edwards; Robert M.; and Sarah A. Mrs. Moses Johnston was a daughter of Daniel and Martha Morrison, nee Stoops, daughter of Robert Stoops, a soldier in the Revolutionary war, from Westmoreland county, who died at the age of 110 years, and was buried at Congruity Church Presbyterian Cemetery. The children of David Johnston, a son of David, the pioneer, were: John, m. to Mary Turner; Alexander, m. to Eliza Meeker; Benjamin, m. to Isabella Johnston; David, m. to Nancy J. McWilliams; James; Robert, m. in 1872, to Lena Ann Adams; William; and Thomas A., m. to Susannah M. Stuckhal. David, the son of David, the pioneer, died in 1878, at the age of seventy-six; his wife, also in 1878, at the age of seventy-three. John Johnston was a soldier in the late war for one year. Benjamin was in company L, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for one year. David was in company K, 8th Missouri volunteers, for three years. James was in the 5th Iowa volunteers for four years. Robert was in company A, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nearly one year; in company D, 54th Pennsylvania militia, for forty-five days, and in company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry, for eighteen months. Robert's children were: William, Lizzie Genevra, and David Ira. The Robert Johnston farm was the old Johnston homestead. The warrant was issued to John Harper February 28, 1785, and the patent was issued to David Johnston in 1867.

John Lucas was born in what is now Conemaugh township, near the site of Saltsburg, in 1803, and was a son of Robert and Ann Lucas nee Cummins, natives of Ireland, where they were married. The former was a recruiting officer in Ireland. He migrated to Cumberland county, where he resided for some years. About 1786, in company with three brothers, Thomas, Samuel and Patrick, he removed to a tract of land on the north side of the Conemaugh, a part of which was afterward occupied by Clemence McGara. He removed above Kittanning, where he died in 1805, about fifty years of age; his wife died in 1840, about eighty years of age. His children were: Mary, d., m. to Henry McAnninch, d.; Robert, d., m. to Susan Lewis; Thomas, d.; Anna, d., m. to Thomas McKee, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Peter Brinks, d.; Samuel, m. to Margaret Henderson; and John, m. twice, his second wife being Ruth Cunningham. Our subject's children were: Robert, Mary Ann, m. to J. E. Coulter; Elizabeth; John D.; Thomas, d.; Peter; Sarah, d., m. to Elias Freet; Samuel, James, Joseph, and Caroline, m. to William Sweeney. Our subject has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1826, joining at a camp meeting at Black-lick. He has been a shoemaker for fifty-four years.

John Fleming was born in Huntingdon county, in 1808, and was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Fleming nee Richardson. The family located in Armstrong township, in 1819. Thomas died in his eighty-eighth year, and his wife in her eighty-ninth year. The children were: James, lives on the homestead, m. to Mary Gamble; John, m. in 1837, to Nancy Martin; Mary, m. to Samuel Walker; Annie m. to Ezekiel Jewell; William, m. first to Jane Cummins, d., and second to Susannah Hill; Thomas, m. to Jemima Jewell; Elizabeth, m. to John Henderson; Richardson, m. to Rebecca Gailey, and Morton, m. to Margaret Thomas. Morton has served as justice of the peace. John Fleming's children were: Mary, Eliza, m. to William Robinson; Thomas Martin, m. to Matilda Speedy; Rachel Ann, m. first to Daniel Smith, d., and second to John Stewart; Richardson, m. to Martha Thomas; Martha J., m. to Joseph Johnston; Nancy, m. to Alexander Wiggins; Sarah Ellen, m. to William Couch; James, m. to Elizabeth Miller; Margaret Clarinda; and John Franklin. Thomas Martin was in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and three months. He was a prisoner for eight days, being captured by Gen. Wheeler's command. Daniel Smith was a soldier in the late conflict, and was wounded at Malvern Hill, being discharged for disability. He was afterward a lieutenant in the militia. He re-enlisted in company G. 1st Pennsylvania light artillery, and died at Harper's Ferry. Richardson was in the nine months' service, in the militia, during the raids, and in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers about nine months. Thomas Martin Fleming's children were: John Speedy, Alexander F., Nancy Bell, and Ira Morton. Our subject began to labor on the old canal near Freeport in 1826, and has for many years been connected with public works.

John Davis was born in what is now Blacklick township, in 1780, and was a son of William Davis, an early settler of that township. He married Mary, a second daughter of James Gordon, a pioneer of Black-lick township. Their children were: Alexander, d.; Mary, m. to James Robinson, d.; Jane, d.; William, d., m. to Sarah Rhea. John, m. to Priscilla Martin; Johnson—served three years and ten months as a member of company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserves, in the war of 1861—m. to Minerva Daugherty; and David, d. John and Priscilla Davis's children are: Martin, a member of company K, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, killed at the Wilderness; David W., m. to Sarah Lowman; John A., m. to Martha T. McMillen, of Champaign City, Illinois; Watson; James G., M. D.; and Nancy J., d. Dr. John A. Davis was educated at Elderton and State University of Michigan and Medical College. For five years he was in practice at Deland, Piatt county, Illinois, and since those years at Jacksonville. Dr. James G. is a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, in the session of 1879-80.

John Caldwell was born in county Derry, Ireland, in 1794, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Caldwell, nee Patterson. In 1819 he migrated to America, and resided in Chester county for one year, and in 1820 removed to Indiana county. His wife was Martha Forsythe, who died in 1861, sixty-six years of age. Their children were: Eliza, m. to John Anderson; Martha, m. to David J. Blakeley; John, m. to Sarah J. Henry; Mary; Thomas, m. to Margaret Anderson; Nancy, d.; Esther, d.; Ellen, m. to Thomas Gailey; Nancy, and Robert. Our subject has resided on present homestead since 1830.

Samuel Henderson was born in 1817 in Armstrong township, and was the son of Brice and Susannah Henderson, nee Thomas, daughter of Israel Thomas. The former died in 1836 at the age of forty-four; the latter in 1825. Brice Henderson was the son of Samuel, an early settler of the county. His wife was a Wiggins. Their children were: Brice, m. as above; Elizabeth, d., m. to Samuel Lucas; Samuel, d., m. to Elizabeth Lytle, d.; and John, d., m. to Nancy Wiggins, d. Brice Henderson's children were: Samuel, m. in 1846 to Sarah Ann Beers; Margaret, m. to Robert Sharp; and Nancy, m. to Geo. Adamson. Samuel's (a son of Brice Henderson) children were: Emma, d.; William, m. to Sarah Clark; Brice, m. to Lovey Ann Fry; Newton, d.; John, m. to Cassie A. Smith; Elder, d. Thomas, d.; and Frank, d. The children of John, a son of Samuel Henderson, were: Samuel S. and Emma M. The Hendersons are of Scotch-Irish descent. Our subject's wife is of German descent. The Beers settled in Northampton county, and from thence migrated to Clarion county.

James S. Campbell was born in Armstrong township in 1837, and was a son of Cornelius and Rebecca Campbell, nee Stewart. The former was a native of Ireland. He came to the county when a young man. He died in 1844 at the age of forty-eight. The latter was born in Indiana county. She died in 1858 at the age of fifty-eight. Of their sons, David served in company G, 2d battalion, six months' Pennsylvania volunteers. Our subject was married in 1861 to Annie E., daughter of Hugh Miller, of Armstrong township. His children were: Elmer Ellsworth, living, and Martha Rebecca, d.

Jacob Peelor was born in Berks county in 1784, and was the son of David and Franly Peelor, who, with their family, located on what is now the Joseph McCoy property, Armstrong township, in 1790. Their children were: Joseph, m. first to Mary Scott, d., second to Eliza McCreight, d., and third to Nancy Chochran d.; and Jacob, d. in 1873, m. to Jane Bothel, b. in 1789, d. in 1861, daughter of John Bothel. Jacob made the shingles for the first Indiana Court House, and was one of the first carpenters to work upon this building. He was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church for many years, joining Bethel in 1803. Jacob's children were: David, m. first to Adaline Hunter, d., and second to Mrs. Lavinia Campbell; Mary, d.; Margaret, m. to Samuel Elder; Eliza B., m. to John Smith; John B., m. in 1850 to Margaret Miller; Jane, m. to Samuel McCartney; Joseph, m. to Eliza Richey; William, d.; James B., d., m. to Margaret Thomas; and Caroline Curtis, m. to James Birney Evans. David is well known as a county surveyor, and as holding many official trusts in Indiana and Cambria counties. James B. was in the six months' service in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: James Miller, m. in 1875 to Lide Ward Dithridge; Jacob Casmer; Caroline Curtis, m. to Dr. William McChesney; Evaline Cross, d.; Nannie Jane; and Maggie Augusta. David Peelor, the pioneer, was killed by the Indians while working a short distance from the block-house on the McElhoes farm, Armstrong township. The families were in the block-house, owing to the troublesome times of the Indian war then in progress. In the early days, according to tradition, there was a large Indian encampment on Curry Run, about twenty-five rods northeast of the present site of the John B. Peelor residence. A ring well defined could be seen for many years. The Kittanning path passed by this ring. A block-house was situated eighty rods northeast of the house and fifty-five northeast of the ring. A supposed Indian burying ground was situated on the adjoining, or Robinson farm, near Curry Run Presbyterian Church. A part of the John B. Peelor farm was patented to Moses Hobson in 1807, and was sold to Jacob Peelor in 1808. Another was patented to Alexander Cobean in 1815, the warrant being dated 1788, and issued to William Lackey.

Church Smith McCoy was born in Armstrong county in 1834, and was a son of John and Jane McCoy, nee Smith. The former was a native of the vicinity of what is now Shelocta, and was a son Daniel McCoy, an early settler on Crooked creek, and who at one time resided on what is now the Benjamin Walker farm. He was a scout in the Indian wars. His children were: Joseph, d., m. to Nancy McCracken, d.; Daniel, d., m. to Nancy Smith, d.; Charles, d., m.; and John, d., m. to Jane Smith, d. Of our subject's children, twelve in number, John was in the war of 1861.

John L. Robinson was born in 1827, on the farm now occupied by him, and was a son of William and Rebecca Robinson nee Lewis, a daughter of John Lewis. William was born on the above named farm, and was a son of John and Isabella Robinson nee Gaston, a second wife. The first wife was Mary Robinson, who died in her twenty-seventh year, in August, 1794, and was the first person interred in the Bethel cemetery. John Robinson was a son of Robert Robinson, who died in 1821, at the age of eighty-four. The latter was a native of Ireland, and came with his wife to Cumberland county several years prior to the Revolutionary war. Among his children were: John, William, who settled in Lawrence county; Robert, who migrated to Kittanning, and Samuel. Each spelled his name in a different way. One of the daughters was married to a Mr. Livingston, and resided for some years near Smicksburg. John Robinson came a single man to the Robinson homestead, in 1787, and made the first improvement. In the next spring he brought his wife and a few years later his father arrived. His wife Mary, afore named, on their arrival bent down to the ground a white oak in front of their cabin and cut off the top. This tree is still standing and is enjoying a healthy growth. John Robinson died in 1839, at the age of eighty; his second wife died in 1822, at the age of forty-five. John Robinson's children were: John, d., m. to Jane Gibson; William, d. in 1874, seventy-five years old, m. first to Rebecca Lewis, d. in 1830, thirty-one years old, and second to Sarah Loughrey, d. in 1855, fifty-five years old; Mary, d., m. to John Lytle, d.; Robert T., d., m. first to Nancy Dickson, d., and second to Rebecca Robinson; Nancy, d., m. to James Calhoun; Isabella, d., m. to Joseph Stewart; Samuel, d., m. to Sarah Stewart; and Martha, d., m. to William Stewart, d. Robert T. was a justice of the peace for several years. The children of William Robinson, a son of John Robinson, were: Nancy, d.; Isabella, m. to Samuel Lowry; John L., m. in 1852, to Margaret C. McMullen; William N., m. to Julia Baker; Esther L., m. to Isaac Lewis; James H., m. to Mary Gilmour; Mary J., m. to Hugh Lowry; and Sarah Ann, d. William N. and James H. served in the war of 1861 for nearly four years. The latter was a prisoner for some time. John L.'s children were: William H., graduate of Washington and Jefferson College, in the class of 1878, and a student in the third year of the Western Theological Seminary; Alexander W., m. to Clara Couch; Franklin B., d.; Mary Rebecca, d.; Clara Bell, d., and John M. Mrs. John L. Robinson has a sample specimen of embroidery made by her great-grandmother Bard (Beard), in 1775.

The Samuel Robinson farm in this vicinity, was the scene of the massacre of Derby Ferguson, Edmund Malawley and two of the sons of Tolly Rodgers, by a band of Indians, a short time prior to the capture of Gen. Campbell and others, spoken of in the general history. Tolly Rodgers escaped by hiding in a hollow log. The alarm was immediately given, and the Indians hurried in such haste that they did not scalp their victims. These were buried on this farm, and litter strewn over the graves, that the Indians might not disturb them.

Mrs. Martha Pettigrew was born in 1803, on the present Samuel McCurdy farm, Armstrong township, and was a daughter of William and Ruth Cochran, nee Gray. The former died in 1818, at an advanced age. The latter was about ninety years old at time of death. William Cochran was a native of Ireland, and in 1800 located on above named farm. William and Ruth Cochran's children were: Lily, d., m. to James Guthrie, d.; Andrew, d., m. to Jane Orr, d.; Alexander, d., m. to Sarah Streams, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Joseph Peelor, d.; Margaret, d., m. to George McCasland, d.; William, d., m. to Elizabeth Cunningham; and Martha, m. to John Pettigrew, d., in 1878, at the age of seventy-nine. John Pettigrew was a native of Ireland. John and Martha Pettigrew's children were: Samuel, m. to Sarah Sharp; and Mary Jane, m. to Harvey Peelor. John Pettigrew settled upon the homestead in 1831. Samuel's children were: Mattie Carlotta, Thomas Sharp, John Willis and Sarah Bell.

Robert Graham was born in 1829, on the Alexander Graham homestead, Young township, and died on the farm now occupied by his heirs, Armstrong township, in 1876; he was a son of Alexander Graham (of whom see sketch); he was married in 1853 to Nancy Lowman, daughter of Thomas Lowman. She died in 1863, at the age of thirty-two. Their children were: Lizzie J., Alexander and Nettie L. Mr. Graham located on the farm in 1853. This was a part of the Uncapher tract.

Thomas Sharp was born in 1819, on the Joseph Sharp homestead, Armstrong township, and was a son of Joseph Sharp. (See Sharp notes.) Our subject was married to Sarah McNutt, who died in 1872, at the age of fifty-six. She was a daughter of Alexander McNutt, the first settler on the Thomas Sharp property. Thomas' children were: Sarah Ann, m. to Samuel Pettigrew; Mattie E., m. to John Patterson; Nancy Ellen, m. to John Craig; Margaret Jane, m. to Heth Lowman; Isabella, d.; and Amanda, d. Our subject has served as justice of the peace for twenty-five years. He located on his present farm in 1846.

Samuel C. Henderson was born in 1818, on the present Thomas Elder farm, Young township, and was a son of John and Letitia Henderson nee Fullerton. The former was a native of Ireland. (See Henderson notes, Young township.) He came to America in 1796, and located in what is now Indiana county. John Henderson died in 1844, at the age of seventy-two; his wife in 1858, at the age of eighty-one. Their children were: Mary, d., m. to David Hutchison, d.; Jane, d., m. to Hugh Blakley, d.; Lucy, d., m. to Alexander Reed, d.; Robert, d., m. to Margaret Hazlett, d.; James, d., m. to Elizabeth Morrison, d.; John; Elizabeth, d., m. to Alexander, Campbell; Joseph, d., m. to Mrs. Catharine Ewing nee Graham; Letitia, m. to Daniel Wilson; David, m. first to Jane Geer, d., and second to Mrs. Anna Mary Redpath; William, d.; Samuel C., m. to Margaret Anthony; Andrew, twice married, and Alexander, m. to Jane Hood. Alexander served in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: William, m. to Meta Hunt; Nancy Jane, m. to David Fleming; John Ralston, m. to Margaret Fiscus; Maria Julia, m. to Robert Hazard Cunningham; Elizabeth, and Samuel Clark, m. to Jane Gemmell. The Henderson tract was warranted to Richard Wells, in 1775, and patented to Reese Meredith, in 1776. It was styled "Porto Venero." It was first improved by James Wilson.

William Craig was born in 1837, on the farm now occupied by his brother John, and was a son of Hugh and Barbara Craig nee Ramsey. The former was born in Ireland in 1799, came to America in 1819, located on the present John Craig farm, Armstrong township, in 1822 or '23, and died in 1876. His wife died in 1870, at the age of fifty-seven. Their children were: William, m. to Sarah J. Miller; Jane, m. to Samuel Campbell; Mary, m. to A. M. Harbison; Margaret Ann, m. to Robert Miller; Hannah Elizabeth, d., m. to James Walker; John, m. to Nancy E. Sharp; and Sarah, m. to A. J. Douthit. Our subject's children were: Effie Jane, Hugh Nelson, Barbara Matilda, Luella Marie, Anna May, and Edward Miller.

William Gilmour was born in 1818, on present John Gilmour farm, Young township, and was a son of Alexander Gilmour. (See sketch of Gilmours and Lowmans.) Our subject was married in 1844 to Abigail McCurdy. Their children were: Mary, m. to James Robinson; Alexander, m. to Margaret McKee; and Lizzie. Alexander's only child is Abby McKee. Wm. Gilmour settled on present farm in 1846. The first improvement was made by a Mr. Rutherford, who obtained the warrant. The land was patented to James Sample. The Ligonier and Kittanning trail passed through this tract.

James Barr was born in 1849, on the present Borland farm, northeast corner of Armstrong township, and was a son of Samuel and Mary Barr, nee Young, who were natives of the township. Samuel was a son of John and Hannah Barr, nee Kerr, John was a son of John Barr, an early settler of the vicinity of Saltsburg. Samuel Barr died in 1862, in the hospital at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, while a member of the 61st Pennsylvania volunteers. His wife died in 1859, about thirty-five years of age. Their children were: John; James, m. to Eleanor E. Calhoun; Emma, m. to John Muckle; Samuel, m. to Jemima Bowers; Mary E., m. to Mr. Ragor; and Robert, m. to Sarah Rose. John served in the 61st Ohio volunteers in the war of 1861. James' children were: William Harvey, Samuel Newton, d., and John Armstrong.

Thomas McGaughey, born in 1810, and Sarah McGaughey's (nee McCoy) children were: Joseph, b. in 1835, m. to Elizabeth McGaughey; Elizabeth, m. to John Patterson; Alexander, d.; Caroline, d.; Daniel, d.; Sarah Maria; Mary Agnes; and Thomas Clark. Joseph served in company K, 11th Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years and five months; he was twice wounded—first at Fredericksburg and second at Chancellorsville. Joseph's children were: Sarah Bell, Rachel Catharine, William, d., Nicholas Franklin, Mary and Joseph Lytle. Thomas McGaughey is actively working at shoemaking in Stewartsville (Park Wood). (See McGaughey sketches in various townships.)

James Ray was born eighty miles southwest of Butler, Butler county, in 1825, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Ray, nee Dunn. The former was a native of Ireland; came to Chester county in 1817, and to Butler county in 1819. He died in 1859, about seventy-two years of age. His wife was a native of Huntingdon county, and died in 1879, over eighty-nine years old. Their children were: James, m. in 1851 to Nancy Anderson; William, m. first to Bella McFarland, d., and second to Matilda Getty; Catharine, m. to William Anderson; John, m. to Emma Williamson; Hugh, m. to Amanda Stoops; and Alexander P., d., m. to Margaret Kunkle. James' children were: William John, James Leslie, Thomas Anderson, d., Martha Elizabeth, Ida Mary, Andrew Campbell, George Washington Kelly, Nancy Ella and Hugh Alexander. He located in Stewartsville (Park Wood) in 1849, being the first permanent settler. The family subsequently removed to the vicinity.

Joseph T. Hosack (a brother of Dr. William and McCrea Hosack) was a son of John Hosack, and was married to Sarah J. Sharp. Their children were: Margaret, Emma, d., John Laura, William, Ida, Clara B., Albert, William Edwin, Dora Etta, Thomas Snarp and Samuel Merton.

J. C. Powell was born in 1838, on the present Nathan Crossman farm, Montgomery township, and was a son of John and Martha Powell, nee McManus. Our subject was married to Sarah Kinley. Their children were: Melissa J., d., Maggie J., Florence B. and Bertie. He served in company M, 2d Pennsylvania cavalry for three years, and was wounded at Trevillian Station. He located in Shelocta in 1870, and has since been engaged in the blacksmith trade.

James and Mary (Ramsey) Wiggins' children were: Margaret, m. to Samuel Calhoun; Samuel, m. to Lena Ann Armstrong, d.; Hugh, m. to Jane Ramsey; Nancy, d., m. to Alexander Calhoun; Mary, m. to John Ramsey; Andrew, m. to Sarah Lowry; Jane, m. to Michael Peterman; Sarah Ann; James, m. first to Eliza Lowry, d., and second to Sarah Ann Marlen; William, m. to Sarah Borland; and Thomas, m. to Sarah J. McCollom. The children of Andrew, a son of James Wiggins, were: Mary Jane, m. to Elijah Mangus; James Robert and John Err. The children of Samuel, a son of James Wiggins, were: James W., m. to Catharine McCullom; Alexander, m. to Nancy Flemming; and Mary J., m. to John Anderson. James W. was a soldier in the war of 1861. James Wiggins, Sr., was born on the present Ackerson farm, White township. He died in 1845, at the age of fifty-four; his wife died in 1874, at the age of eighty-four. (See Wiggins articles, Cherry Hill and White townships.)

The Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Armstrong township, was organized in June, 1875. The incorporators were: S. C. Henderson, A. S. Campbell, J. Martin Walker, John Cunningham, Jesse Thomas, Amos T. Anthony, William A. Millen, William Flemming, David Anthony, R. M. Flemming, George Graham, Archibald Cochran and James Wray. The first president was Samuel C. Henderson, and the first secretary was R. M. Flemming. Over three hundred thousand ($300,000) dollars in exclusively Armstrong township farm property are now insured by this company.

ALEXANDER COCHRAN was born in 1828, on the present Jacob Hill farm, Armstrong township, and was a son of William and Elizabeth Cochran nee Cunningham, a daughter of Archibald Cunningham. William was a son of William and Ruth Cochran nee Gray, natives of Ireland and early settlers of Armstrong township. Our subject's children were: Mary Jane, d.; William, James, m. to Margaret J. Craig; Margaret E., John O., Ulysses S. G., Robert Franklin, and Montford. Our subject, since April 1st, 1880, has been the proprietor of the Kinter House, Indiana.

GEORGE C. THOMPSON was born in 1792, on the well known Rev. John Jamison farm, in Black-lick township, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Thompson nee Davis. The former was a native of Ireland and was well known as "Gentleman John." Some years after the close of the Revolution he removed to what is now Indiana county. His wife was a native of Wales. Their children were: John, d., m. to Ellen Davis, d.; William, d., m. to Susan Brady, d.; George C., d. in 1860, m. to Elizabeth Davis, d.; Robert, d., m. first to Mary Shields, d., and second to unknown; Rosanna, d., m. to William Hanna, d.; Margaret, d., m. to John Crusan, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Robert Kelly, d.; and Jane, m. to Jonathan White. Our subject's children were: Margaret, Jane, d., m. to Samuel Robinson; John, m. to Sarah Smith; Eliza, m. to William Cunningham; William, m. first to Nancy Henderson, d., and second to Ascenath Templeton; George E., m. to Emma E. George; Ellen, m. to William Niel; Sarah, m. to Benjamin Hull; Davis, and Porter, d. George C. Thompson settled on the homestead now occupied by his son Davis, in 1835. John Thompson's children were: George E., m. to Mary Jane Becket; John S., d.; Sarah Elizabeth, William C., m. to Nancy E. Reichert. James D., Margaret J., d.; Laura R., Perry Milton, Harry W., and Henry F., d., twins, and Bertha B., d.

CONEMAUGH TOWNSHIP

was organized from Armstrong township, and received its name from the river, which formed its southern boundary. The first official record of its existence as a township bears the date of 1803.

THE FIRST SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL HOUSES.

About 1780 the first school of which the writer has any knowledge in the west or southwest corner of Indiana county was kept in a small cabin owned and occupied by Robert Robinson, Sr., and located three-fourths of a mile from the west corner of the county and half mile from the Kiskeminetas river. Instructions were given at night by a Mr. John McDowell, in reading, writing and arithmetic, and especially the latter to the boys. About 1804, or earlier, a log school house was erected near the southwest corner of the county and near the west line of said county, one and a half miles from the Kiskeminetas. The building was about eighteen by twenty-two feet, and of round logs (bark on), and one story high. The cracks were daubed with mortar called "Katand clay." A large log (the mantle) was placed across the building four feet from the end wall and five feet high, on which the chimney, four by six feet, was built, tapering at the end till above the roof, then straight with uniform split sticks to its height. The cracks and inside were daubed with tough mortar. The floor was of split logs hewed, and called "puncheons." The stone hearth was about four by eight feet, and the back wall about the same. At the end of the hearth there was a piece of "mother earth" without a floor, to afford the writers a place to stick and soften their goose quills to make them of uniform placability. The heighth of the story was seven feet. Three round summer-beams were there, on which split logs were laid face down and grooved together with mud on the upper side. The roof was of clapboards. Eve-poles and weight poles were used to hold them down. There was a large door in the side, with wooden hinges and latch and string. The windows were the whole length of the building. The side or end windows were from eight to twelve inches high, with little posts set in about every foot, upon which paper was pasted, then greased to make it transparent.

SALTSBURG.

was laid out on the 23d of September, 1841, by Thomas McCrea, surveyor, for John Milliron, proprietor of the land upon which the village was situated. It was named in honor of William Clark, a former owner of the present Reed mill. The first sale of lots occurred on the fifth of October, of the year aforenamed.

The first merchant on the site of the village was Alexander Nesbit whose location dates from about 1828. His store was situated in the house now occupied by Samuel Kier. He was succeeded in the same building by John M. Morrison, Joseph H. Henderson, William Hart, James S. Shoemaker, and Scott Marshall, who abandoned business about 1837.

The first justice of the peace was John G. Thompson, and the second and last Samuel M. Hazlett. The first teacher was Mitchell Jamison, and the second James Gray. The first school house was erected in 1851, and the second in 1879. The first church was the reformed Presbyterian, and the second the Presbyterian.

The first postoffice was called Blacklegs and was established while Scott Marshall was keeping a store. He was the first postmaster. The second was Robert Bills, and the third was A. R. Sloan. At this time the office was removed away. In a short time the new post office of Clarksburg was established with James Kier as postmaster. His successors were: Joseph Caldwell, J. Nelson Coleman, and 1863, J. Y. McCartney, the present official.

KELLEY'S STATION.

The first improvement here was made by John Kelley, before the Revolution. Being driven out by the Indians he buried his pots, &c., and returned to Lancaster county, and enlisted in the army, having applied for patent for the land March 1st, 1775, in the name of his father James Kelley. He returned home from the army with camp fever and died. The patent was granted to James Kelley for the land (200 acres), adjoining lands of Joseph Williams and Thomas Reed above on the river, and William Ospery, below, Nov. 3, 1784. Samuel Kelley, a brother of John, who enlisted in the Revolutionary war at seventeen years of age, at the close of the war came and settled on the tract (date not known) and was followed by his father, James, a few years later.

SAMUEL KELLEY was born in Lancaster county, in 1760 or '61 and married a Miss Wallace. Their offspring were: James, d. young, Robert, d., m. to Rachel Glasgo, b. in 1779; John, d. m., to Mary Thompson, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Elizabeth Katon, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Thomas Gallagher, d.; Mary, d., m. to Robert Dunlap, d.; Jane, d., m. to Robert Barr, d.; William, m. to Rachel Hughes; James, m. to Jane Gordon; Margaret, d.; Hamilton, d., m. to Rebecca Youngblood. Robert succeeded his father in possession of the old homestead. His children were: John, d.; Robert, d.; Ann Jane, John S., m. to Mary J. Patton; Minerva, James H., m. to Nancy Gamble; Samuel B., m. to a Miss Thomas; Mary E., m. to Alexander Lemon; Albert G., d., m. to Maria J. Dean; and Caroline H. The widow of Robert, Rachel Kelley, still lives on the old homestead with her unmarried daughters. Robert served in the war of 1812 and his widow now gets a pension. The first house of which there is any record was on the site of the present homestead.

SOLDIERS OF THE WAR OF 1812.

Major Samuel Cooper was born May 2d, 1788, survives, and now, November 18, 1879, his age is 91 years 6 months and 16 days. John Montgomery, died at Robert Ewing's, Indiana county, November 11, 1840, aged 81 years, and was buried with the honors of war at Ebenezer. Guns were fired. John M. Robinson, and his company, the Saltsburg Blues, were there. Samuel Lyons was born January 14, 1762; died May 5, 1844, aged 82 years 3 months and 21 days. Buried at Ebenezer church. Scott Marshall was born May 10, 1788; died July 28 1864, aged 76 years 2 months and 18 days. Buried at Clarksburg, Indiana county. David Kerr died September 27, 1866, aged 83 years 7 months and 27 days. Buried at Edgewood lot. First Lieutenant, Robert Henderson, died August 15, 1871, aged 89 years. Buried in Edgewood Cemetery, Lot 92. Col. Joseph Bowers died at Petroleum Centre, Vanango Co. March 19, 1874, aged 80 years 10 months and 7 days. Buried in honor, in Edgewood, lot 168. John Woodend died at Woodland Cliff, May 25, 1875, aged 89 years 4 months and 13 days. Buried in Edgewood, lot 69.

GENEALOGY OF THE ROBINSON FAMILY, EMBRACING SIX GENERATIONS.

Robert Robinson, Sr., was born in county Antrim, (Mahara,) Ireland, in the year 1739. Rachel Wier, born in same county, in 1738. Robert Robinson and Rachel Wier, were married in Ireland, November, 1769. They, with his father and mother, two brothers, two sisters and brothers-in-law, emigrated to America, landed at Philadelphia, in July, 1770, and in a short time moved to Marietta, (first daughter born,) later, going up to Harrisburg with all his family. Here it is positively asserted by eastern friends that his father's body rests in Lancaster graveyard, and that his mother sleeps in Derry grave yard, now in Dauphin county. He was one of the masons who built the John Harris "House," Harrisburg, which still overlooks the Susquehanna river, (now Cameron House.) In a short time, he with the balance of his family, moved up to Franklin county, to Conococheage (Conikagig) creek, where he helped to build a mill (now a tub factory). Here several children were born. Some time from 1777 to 1778, he, with his family moved west of the mountains to "Big Sewickly," Westmoreland county. There his family began to find new homes. His brother John married and moved to Donegal township, Westmoreland county, where he lived and died, leaving a family. His brother William married and moved to Ohio, where he lived and died, leaving a family. His sister Lavina, married the brother-in-law, Samuel Wier. They moved to Washington county, and there lived and died, leaving a family. His sister Jennie, married Tom Smith, in Armstrong county, and there lived and died, leaving a family, some of whose descendants remain there.

Soon after 1780 they, with their three sons and two daughters, moved from Sewickly to the north side of the Kiskeminetas river, in Armstrong township, Westmoreland county, near the mouth of Lick Run, on lands called "York," in the midst of numerous Indians. While living in that insecure cabin the writer's father got his first schooling at night. Mr. John McDowell was the teacher. In a short time they made their way north one mile (no roads), put up a building twenty-four by twenty-eight feet, two stories high, and used it as a stockade. No windows or doors were there for a time. The second log from the puncheon floor had four feet of it cut out for an entrance. The building is still standing, having been built nearly one hundred years. It is situated on part of the "York" lands. The aged parents lived there till 1820, when they went to their son John's on a visit, half a mile north on the "Iconium" lands. On Friday, October 31, 1823, she died, in her eighty-fifth year. She was buried in the Robinson river hill grave-yard. On Thursday, June 23, 1836, of palsey, he died, in his ninety-seventh year, and was buried in the same river hill.

The above grave-yard is located about one hundred rods (100) from the southwest corner of the county, on an elevation of two hundred (200) feet above the Kiskeminetas river. As the visitor turns his eye up the river then down the stream he beholds a beautiful curve in the river, and as he looks over the river into Westmoreland county, nearly two hundred feet below him, a delightful loop of farms; up stream on the Indiana side, farms. As he turns his eye down on the Indiana side into Armstrong county, an old Indian burial ground can still be observed, and high bluffs. As the morning sun peeps above the horizon it smiles on the same spot, and until the sun drops below the horizon the sight is grand to behold. In those sand mounds ten relatives of the writer repose. Forty-four years since the last relative was laid there. This was the only convenient place at that date (1836). Others of the first settlers sleep there.

He died Thursday, April 13, 1813, (his birthday) aged fifty years, and was buried at Ebenezer Church, beside his wife, leaving six sons and two daughters (writer's cousins). John Robinson was born in Franklin county, Sunday, April 19, 1772, and followed his parents. On Thursday, December 6, 1798, he married Mary Wier, of Washington county. She died Tuesday, March 13, 1804, in her thirtieth year, and was buried at River hill. (Three sons.) May 30, 1805, he was married, by Rev. Joseph Henderson, to Jane Scott Marshall, of Indiana county. About this time he was elected captain of a company. He paraded his men near Indiana, twenty miles from his home. His regimentals were blue coat, cuffs, collar and long skirt faced with red. He was one of the first ruling elders at Ebenezer Church; one of the first in the Presbyterian church at Saltsburg. On Friday, April 25, 1856, he died, aged eighty-four years and six days. On Saturday, November 10, 1860, she died, aged seventy-nine years and eighteen days. The remains were taken from the old grave-yard, and both sleep in Edgewood Cemetery, Saltsburg, in lot No. 60.

Elizabeth Robinson was born in Franklin county, Monday, April 17, 1775, and followed her parents. She was married to Thomas Wier, of Washington county. He died Sunday, January 6, 1833, and was buried, by his request, on his farm near Pigeon creek. She died in Allegheny county, Sunday, September 6, 1862, in her eighty-seventh year. She sleeps in Round Hill Church graveyard, three sons and three daughters, all dead. James Robinson was born in Franklin county, Monday, June 30, 1777, and followed his parents. He was married to Mary Laughlin, of Indiana county; he died at his father's in 1803, in his twenty-sixth year, and was buried in River Hill. She died soon after, and was buried beside her husband; no family. Robert Robinson was born at Big Sewickly, Westmoreland county, Monday, August 14, 1780, and followed his parents. He was married to Elizabeth Black, by Rev. J. W. Henderson. He died Sunday, November 17, 1833, in his fifty-third year, and was buried in the old graveyard. He is now in Edgewood. She died January 10, 1874, in her eighty-ninth year; she sleeps beside her husband. Four sons and three daughters survive. Captain John Robinson's son, Robert W. Robinson, was born Wednesday, September 25, 1799. After a number of years, he went west, and married Jane Richey, of Indianapolis. On Sunday, April 4, 1869, he died at Big Spring, Douglas county, Kansas. He is buried near Topeka, on John Richey's farm; his widow, two sons and two daughters survive. Adam Robinson was born Monday, April 13, 1801. He married Mary Foster, of Westmoreland county. He died Monday, April 13, 1874, (his birthday), and was buried in Edgewood cemetery; his widow, one son and two daughters survive; one son was lost at Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862. James W. Robinson was born Monday, February 21, 1803; he was married to Rebecca Wier, of Washington county, by Rev. Anderson. He died Saturday, February 4, 1865, and was buried in Edgewood cemetery. He had two sons and four daughters. The widow, one son and one daughter survive. Jennie S. Robinson was born Thursday, October 30, 1806; she died Thursday, March 24, 1808, and was buried in River Hill graveyard. John M. Robinson was born December 11, 1808, lived with his parents, and learned the cabinet business. He was married by Rev. Watson Hughes, Tuesday, April 15, 1834, to Sarah White, of Saltsburg, Indiana county. He entered the mercantile business November 7, 1845; continued in it until May, 1862, and then retired. From May, 1863, till in 1867, he served as a revenue official of Indiana county. On Wednesday, April 16, 1879, Sarah W. Robinson died and was buried in lot No. 60, in Edgewood.

Rachel Robinson was born Monday, October 8, 1810, and was married to Captain William Stewart, Tuesday, January 8, 1835, by Rev. Watson Hughes. His birth place was Lancaster. At the time of marriage was in Indiana county. She died Monday, January 20, 1876. He died Sunday, April 23, 1876. Both sleep in Edgewood. Jane Robinson was born Tuesday, August 25, 1812, and was married, by Rev. Watson Hughes, to William Moore, of Westmoreland county, April, 1838. Have one son, three daughters. All survive. William M. Robinson was born Thursday, July 14, 1814. He pursued a college course: studied theology, and was married, by Dr. Francis Herron, Thursday, November 27, 1845, to Eliza Laughrey, of Pittsbugh. He preaches in Allegheny City in the Providence Church. He had two sons and two daughters, and one son and one daughter survive. Samuel S. Robinson was born Monday, August 5, 1816, and was married, by Rev. John H. Kirkpatrick, Thursday, January 14, 1852, to Belle McLanahan, of Indiana county. He died Friday, January 6, 1871, on "Iconium" lands. The widow, four sons and two daughters survive. He sleeps in Edgewood. Thomas W. Robinson was born Sunday, December 11, 1818. He died Tuesday, August 15, 1820, and was buried in River Hill. Eliza M. Robinson was born Wednesday, January 17, 1821, and married to William Guthrie, Esq., of Glade Run, Wednesday, October 8, 1856, by Rev. W. W. Woodend. He died Wednesday, March 3, 1875, and was buried at Glade Run Church. They had three daughters. The widow and two daughters survive. Maria W. Robinson was the youngest sister. She and sister Guthrie live in J. M. R.'s house.

John R. Robinson was born Saturday, May 16, 1835, and was married to Belle P. Andrew, of Indiana county, Monday, August 11, 1862, by Rev. W. W. Woodend. Mary Fullerton Robinson was born Tuesday, December 19, 1837, and died Friday, May 17, 1867. She sleeps in lot No. 60, Edgewood Cemetery. John R. enlisted in the United State service, 135th Regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, August 1, 1862. He was detailed as clerk for colonel till November 2d, and then was detailed as clerk of provost marshal's office till February 15, 1863. He next was detailed as clerk 1st Brigade, 3d Division, 1st drum corps, and was detailed till his time expired. He is now in the gents' furnishing goods and boot and shoe business. Frank Fullerton Robinson, William Stewart Robinson, John Marshall Robinson and Mary Belle Robinson are with the above parents.

Joseph White was born in Lancaster county, Pa., Wednesday, February 8th, 1758. Mary Fullerton was born in Lancaster county, Wednesday, September 16th, 1767. Joseph White and Mary Fullerton (in her 20th year) were married May or June, 1787. Three sons were born in Lancaster county, and one son and two daughters were born in Franklin county, where two little sons died in 1795, of dysentery. In 1798, the parents, two sons and two daughters moved west of the mountains, on two pack horses, and settled in Westmoreland county, near New Alexandria, where two sons and four daughters were born. There were in all twelve children, the youngest of whom was the writer's wife. The father, mother and five children were born on Wednesday. The father sleeps at New Alexandria, one daughter at Ebenezer Church, one son at Unity Church, one son in Dearbourn county, Indiana, and the mother and five children sleep in Edgewood cemetery, Saltsburg. Soon after 1780 Robert Robinson, sr., with his family moved from Big Sewickly on pack horses, crossing the Kiskeminetas in a canoe and floating their horses through the river, and settled on a tract of land, the warrant of which is dated February 25th, 1780. The tract named was called "York," and it contained 210½ acres. The consideration was the sum of three pounds and eight shillings lawful money. The land was situated on the north side of the said Kiskeminetas river, at the mouth of Lick or Robinson run, bounded by the lands of James Montgomery, Alexander Stewart, by vacant lands, thence by lands of Richard Wallace and by lands of Henry Horn.

WILLIAM MARSHALL, SR., the writer's great grandfather, was born in Ireland about 1722; he was married in that country to Elizabeth Armstrong, and migrated to America, about 1748, first settling in eastern Pennsylvania. In 1750, their son John, (writer's grandfather), was born near Marshing creek. Jane Scott was born in Ireland, August 22, 1756. At the age of ten years, with her brothers, William and John Scott, she came to America, the first location being in eastern Pennsylvania. On the 16th of April, 1776, she was married to John Marshall. They then removed west to the old Marshall farm (Conemaugh township) of four hundred and twenty-four acres. This was first settled about 1768; the patent was dated February 25th, 1786. In 1777, their daughter Elizabeth was born; she was married to John McKee. Their other children were: William, born September 22, 1779, m. to Mary Kirkpatrick; Jane S., b. October 23, 1781, m. to Captain John Robinson; Margaret M., born December 29, 1783, m. to Eliphalet Irwin; John, born December 25, 1785, m. to a Miss Stewart; Scott, born May 10, 1788, m. to Jane McClure; James, born July 20, 1790, m. to Margaret Kirkpatrick; Samuel, born October 29, 1792, (still surviving), m. to Nancy Guthrie, and Mary, born November 29, 1794, m. to William Cochran. Some time soon after their arrival on the homestead, they were driven away by the Indians to the eastern part of the state, where they remained for seven years. The writer thinks, on their return, they brought the father and mother, the four brothers, James, William, Andrew and Samuel, and sister Margaret. William, their father, died in 1796, and is buried in Ebenezer graveyard. Elizabeth A., his wife, died in 1806. She sleeps beside her husband. John Marshall, the oldest son, died November 24, 1824, and is buried in the same cemetery. Jane Scott, his wife, died March 28, 1838, and rests beside her husband. John Marshall's lands have been noted. William located four hundred and twenty-eight acres about the same time. Samuel Marshall "took up" about this date, two hundred and eighty-seven acres. James Marshall had three hundred acres in old Conemaugh, now Young township. This tract he obtained about the same time as John's improvement began. Archibald Marshall, a cousin of the above, had an improvement of one hundred and thirty-five acres, which he located about the same period. William and Archibald afterward went to Glade run, in the vicinity of what is now Dayton, when that section was a dense wilderness.

WILLIAM C. MARSHALL was born February 22d, 1811, on the farm now occupied by Elder Marshall, Conemaugh township, and was a son of Scott and Jane Marshall, nee McClure. The latter was born May 7th, 1792, at Newport town, on Black-lick, near its junction with the Conemaugh. The former was born on the above-named farm, and died in 1864. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and also in the war of 1861, as a member of the militia during the Morgan raid. He was a son of John and Jane Marshall, nee Scott. Scott Marshall's children were: William C., m. to Esther Jack; John, d., m. to Mary Singerly, d.; Jane, m. first to Adam Elrick, d., and second to William Lemmon; Eliza, m. to Elliott Ferguson; Maria J., m. to William Sandles; Samuel, d.; and Harrison. Our subject's children were: James, d.; Eliza Jane, m. to D. M. Reed; Harrison Scott, d.; Theodore, m. to Caroline Ashbaugh; John Craig; Anna Mary, d.; Esther Emma, d.; and Martha Ella, m. to Armor Cribbs. James was in the 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps, for three years, and was killed on the railroad some years after the war. Harrison Scott was in the 11th Pennsylvania volunteers; was wounded at the first Fredericksburg battle, and died from his wounds. Theodore was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months; company C, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry for two years, being wounded at Pavillion Station, and in the Pennsylvania militia during the Morgan raid. The latter went to Jewell county, Kansas, in 1872, and passed four years on the plains, two of which were engaged in buffalo hunting. Theodore's children were: William Albert and John Austin. The stonehouse on the W. C. Marshall land was built about 1790, by Christian Miller, whose two daughters waited on the masons, carrying, quarrying, and even assisting in laying the stone. Black Legs, an Indian chief, had a camp for some years at the mouth of a run on the Marshall bottom land, about forty rods north of the creek. The warrant of the Marshall farm tract, which included the site of Clarksburg, was issued to Christian Miller on the 15th of October, 1784. The patent was granted to John M. and William C. Marshall in 1853.

NICHOLAS COLEMAN, PIONEER—Our subject was born in Scotland, in 1731. When he first came to this country, he settled in the Conococheague Valley, and was married to Jane McClelland, native born. He took up his land in Conemaugh township, in 1773, and settled upon it in 1774 or 1775, and made the first improvement of the part of the tract now owned by Samuel Coleman; the original tract, including most of the land in farms now owned by Nicholas, Samuel and Robert. Our subject was driven off his land by the Indians, who destroyed his cabin. When he returned, he could not find the chains, &c., that he had buried, and no trace of them since. The children of our subject were: William, b. in 1774, and died in 1851, was m. to Mary Lytle, b. in 1776, and died in 1863. John, b. April 9th, 1776; died in 1865, having lived to see the close of the war of the rebellion, thus including in his life-time, the wars of the revolution, 1812, Mexican and the rebellion; was m. to Martha Katon, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to James Matthews, d.; Margaret, d., m. first to John Matthews, d., and second to James Oliver, d.; Mary, d., m. to Samuel Cravan, d.; Nancy, m. to Moses Thompson, d.; Jane, d., m. to Alexander McGaughey, d.; Archibald, d., m. to Margaret Jamison; Robert, d., m. to Elizabeth McLane, d.; Sarah; James, b. in 1795, and d. in 1857, was m. to Mary Campbell. William enlisted as scout on the frontier when only about fifteen years old. He had a good gun which was wanted for the service, and he preferred going with his gun. John, Archibald, Robert, and the brothers-in-law, James and Matthew Oliver, all served in the war of 1812. The children of William were: John, d., b. in 1805, m. first to Sarah Ramey, d., and second to Nancy Cruikshank; Jane, d., m. to Alexander Hutchinson, d.; William, b. in 1810, m. to Isabella McConaughy—their issue, one son, J. Nelson Coleman, m. to Elizabeth Sandles; Sarah, m. to J. Y. McCartney; Elizabeth, d., m. to Thomas Elder, d.; Robert, b. 1815, m. to Elizabeth Hervey—their issue, Thomas Henry; William, U. G., d.; and Robert McNary, d.; Mary, m. to John Robertson, now of West Indiana. It is said that William Coleman, sr., in the times of the early settlement, made fourteen trips across the Allegheny mountains, carrying skins of deer and other animals, east on horseback, and carried salt in same manner, on return trip. The children of John were: Nancy, m. to John Neal; Nicholas, m. to Margaret Colwell; Samuel, m. to Margaret Miller; Elizabeth, m. to William Miller; Margaret; and Ebenezer. The last named has not been heard from for twenty years. The children of Archibald were: John G., d., m. to Elizabeth Taylor; Archibald, m. to Mary Campbell; Jane, m. to William Bruce, d.; Nancy, m. to Hon. William Irwin, d.; James M., m. to Miss Moore; and William J., m. to Margaret A. Nesbit. The children of Robert were: John, m. to Margaret Brown; Jane, m. first to John Shearer, d., and second to John Hull, d.; James, d.; Robert, m. to Elizabeth Kier; W. Alex., m. to Nancy J. Jackson; Theodore, m. to Martha Hart; Ebenezer O., m. to Eveline Nesbit; Rachel, m. to James Caldwell; Elizabeth, m. to John M. Duncan. The children of James were: Mary Jane, m. to Alexander Lyons; William M., d.; J. Campbell; James, who enlisted in the late war in the 16th Pennsylvania cavalry, and died in Andersonville prison; Archibald, now a United Presbyterian Minister in Tennessee; Clark, who enlisted in the 62d Pennsylvania volunteers, and died in the service; Margaret Ann; Wilson; and McKee, d.

Joseph Rhea.—We trace the Rhea family to John Rhea, of county Derry, Ireland, who came to this country and settled in Lancaster county, Pa., and afterwards in Franklin county. He was the father of Joseph Rhea, our subject. Joseph was born in Franklin county, and married Elizabeth White, of Adams county. After marriage they settled in West Virginia, and from thence came to this county in 1806 and settled in Conemaugh township, on the Kiskeminetas river, at a point generally known as Coalport. Their children were: James, b. in West Virginia in 1797, d. in this county in 1867, m. to Jane Huston Wray, d.; Thomas, d., b. in 1799, m. to Elizabeth Morrow, d., and settled in West Virginia; Isaac, d., b. in 1803, m. to Elizabeth Caruthers, and first settled in West Virginia, and afterwards in Armstrong county, Pa.; Daniel, d., b. in 1801, m. to Jane Kerr, and settled in Armstrong county; William L., now living in Conemaugh township, at the mouth of Blacklegs creek, and is in his seventy-fifth year, was b. in 1805, and m. to Sarah Shields; Mary, d., b. in 1808, m. to Robert McIlwain, d., of this county; and Elizabeth, d., b. in 1810, m. to David Shields, of Westmoreland county. James was county commissioner one term. Thomas became judge of the court of Marion county, West Virginia; William L., now owns the old homestead, and three other farms in Conemaugh township. The Coalport farm is supposed to have been settled by the Hindmans, but we do not find any record of them earlier than about 1800. They were an unfortunate family—one drowned, one killed at a raising, another met accidental death in some manner, all, we are informed, in the space of about one year. This farm received the name of Coalport at the building of the canal. James Alcorn had the first store about 1829, and for some years a store was kept at this point by Samuel M. Kier, of Pittsburgh, and George Wilson late of Indiana, Pa. The business of the place ceased with the closing of operations on the canal. Wells were bored for salt water, but no paying quantity found. The present house of Wm. L. is where the Spear saw mill was built about 1826. There have been found skeletons of men, probably Indians, on this farm, and there are burial places on this and the Coalport farm. Some old settlers think the Indian town, on old town bottom, opposite, across the Kiskeminetas, extended across the river on present Indiana county side. From one of these graves, stones enough were taken to build a chimney. In drilling a salt well on this farm a vein of gas was struck, the well was plugged and abandoned and the forty years since has not exhausted all the gas, as there are evident signs of it yet. The children of William L. are: Joseph, Thomas W., Elizabeth, m. to Samuel G. Walker of Franklin county; Anna M., m. to James W. Smith; Florence, and William L. The children of James Rhea and wife, Jane H. Wray, were: Eliza Ann, d., b. in 1825, m. to John McDowell; Daniel, b. in 1826, m. to Sarah Alexander, of Ohio; Mary W., b. in 1830, m. to John Alcorn, d., of Westmoreland county; Margaret, d., b. in 1832, m. to Joseph Piper; Nancy J., d., b. in 1834; Henrietta, b. in 1836, m. to James M. Barkley; John Harrison, d., b. in 1839. Daniel served in the late war in 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, nine months' service. Daniel, the only son of James now living, resides on a farm near the place of first settlement of the family, in the county. His children were: James Alexander, Walter Lowry, d., Bessie Huston, and Russell Lyon. This sketch as already seen, embraces names from the Wray family with whom this family intermarried, and of them we are furnished the following notes: Daniel Wray came from county Derry, Ireland, to this country, and lived a while at New Wilmington, Del., thence to Franklin county, Pa., thence to Sewickley, Westmoreland county, thence to this county about 1797, and settled one-half mile from the present town of Saltsburg. His son William H. Wray, d., succeeded him in possession of the homestead. The only living descendants bearing the name now are the children of William H., and are Robert and Margaret J., now living in Black-lick township.

Nathaniel Nesbitt.—Our subject was born in Washington county, Maryland, January 7th, 1792, and was the oldest son of John Nesbitt and Catharine Wycoff, both now deceased, who settled in this county on the farm now occupied by Nathaniel and Samuel Nesbitt, jr., in the year 1816. Their children were: Elizabeth, d., m. to John House; Nathaniel, our subject, m. to Sarah Nesbitt, b. in this county December 27, 1796; Fannie, m. to Samuel Katon, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Jane McConaughey; John, m. to Martha Rankin; James, m. to Mary A. Firestone; Ann, d., m. to William Cunning, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Joseph Cunningham. Our subject served in the war of 1812. Is now in his eighty-ninth year, and retains his faculties. His wife, Sarah is in her eighty-fourth year, and her mental faculties are good. The children of this aged couple were: Catharine, d., b. 1820; Mary, d., b. 1821; John Perry, d., b. 1823; Nancy, d., b. 1825; Elizabeth, b. 1826, m. to Reese Jones; James, d., b. 1828; Sarah Joanna, b. 1830, m. to Josiah Kinter; Jane, d., b. 1832; Margaret, d., b. 1834; Francis, b. 1836, m. to Henry Nesbit Miller; Martha, b. 1829, m. to Andrew McMeans. The brothers and sisters of our subject all settled in this county, except Elizabeth, whose husband settled in Ohio.

Samuel Nesbitt.—Our subject is a son of Samuel Nesbitt, who was born at Hagerstown, Maryland, and came to this county in 1816 with his father, John Nesbitt, and afterward married Jane McConaughey of this county. Their children were: Margaret, m. to W. J. Coleman; Melinda, m. to John Henderson; Rev. J. Harvey, m. to Agnes Ross; Samuel, our subject, b. in 1837, m. first to Agnes Fulton, d, and second, to Elizabeth Lowman; Nancy J., m. to A. C. Walker; Eva, m. to E. O. Coleman; Robert, d; and Belle. Our subject served three years and nine months in company B, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers, and was wounded in the thigh at North Anna, Va., and in the neck at Hatcher's run, Va. The children of our subject by first wife were: Esther J.; Samuel M. F.; Robert Newton; and by second wife, child not named. The homestead of our subject is part of the tract patented by Joshua Elder, March 18, 1788, and known as "Alexander Thompson farm." Our subject is one of the third generation of the Nesbitt family who have owned the farm, and it has been in possession of the family since 1817. It was surveyed to Thomas Murray, October 5, 1773. The claim is said to have been once sold for five shillings, and another claim in same neighborhood was traded off for three yards of shirt cloth.

John McDowell.—Our subject is a grandson of Matthew McDowell, who came to this country not long after the Revolution, and settled on the tract known as "Black Walnut Bottom," on Black-leg creek, a tract containing about four hundred acres, net measure, upon which there is not one acre untillable. A patent for this tract was applied for by George Armstrong April 3, 1769, and was deeded to Samuel Dickson July 15, 1771. Dickson settled the tract soon after, but date not positively known. Matthew McDowell was born in Ireland, and all the record we gathered of his family is noted in the article on Joseph McDowell, Centre township. The children of James and Nancy, his wife, were: Matthew; Joseph, m. to Eliza Jane Garvin; James, d., m. to Anna Bosler, d., settled in eastern part of Pennsylvania; Mary J., d., m. to Joseph Piper, who settled in the county; John, our subject, b. in 1823, m. first to Eliza Ann Rhea, d., and second to Margaret Ewing. The children of our subject by his first wife are Anna Jane and James Rhea, both telegraph operators. Our subject succeeded his father in possession of the homestead. A few years ago in digging a well at the barn he discovered a run bed with drift wood sixteen feet below the surface. Several pieces of the splintered wood were taken out, and appeared to be cedar wood. The earth was solid above it, and the ground is nearly level for some distance every way. A stone, with nearly the form of a tomahawk, with circular indention, as for rope by which to carry it, was found on the farm. Its weight was about seven pounds, much the largest ever found in the county, and the material seemed to be granite. It was sold to Frank Cowan, of Greensburg, for some sum of money. Crawford McDowell, son of James, enlisted from this county in the 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th Reserves, was taken prisoner and died at Fortress Monroe on his way returning from prison after parole or exchange.

MAJOR NATHANIEL NESBITT was born in 1808, on the present site of the village of Clear Spring, Washington county, Maryland, and was a son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth Nesbitt nee Seibert. The former was a son of Nathaniel Nesbitt, who made the first improvement where our subject was born. The father of our subject located in 1816 on the farm where our subject resides. His chidren were: Elizabeth, d., m. to Daniel Stonebarger; Rebecca, d., m. to Robert McConaghey, d.; Frances, d., m. to John Keener, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Isaac Keener, d.; Nathaniel, m. to Martha Keener, d.; Mary Ann, d., m. to John R. Gallagher, d.; Sarah, m. to James Wharry, d.; Susan, m. to Alexander Bell; Jacob, d., m. to Margaret Irvin. Nathaniel has served as jury commissioner, and as a second lieutenant, captain and major in the militia for several years. His children were: Sarah, d., m. to J. R. Burns; Nathaniel, killed at South Mountain while captain company E, 11th Pa. R. C.; Elizabeth S.; George K., died in the hospital at Washington, D. C., while a member of company E, 11th Pa. R. C.; Samuel M.; Mary; Martha, m. to James Fritz; Kate; and Susan.

ROBERT SHIRLEY.—Our subject was born in 1735, probably in Pennsylvania, and was married to Susan Baker, of German descent, born in 1742. He served in the Revolution, and in 1792 came from Conocoheague valley to Conemaugh township and settled on Black-leg creek, about two miles from the present town of Saltsburg. He died in 1834, ninety-nine years old, and his wife Susan died in 1843, one hundred and one years old. His children were: John, d., who lived one hundred and three years, m. to Elizabeth Taiser; Robert, d.; Thomas, b. in 1776, d. in 1875, ninety-nine years old, m. to Mary Miller, b. in 1787, d. in 1875, eighty-seven years old; Jane, m. to a Mullen, went west; Joseph, now living, ninety-three years of age (1880), m. to Catharine Fulmer; and Ann, d., m. to William Bash, d. The children of Thomas were: Margaret, b. in 1809, m. first to John Lampkin, d,, and second to a Mr. Altman; Barbara, b. in 1811, m. to Jacob Long; Robert M., b. 1813, m. to Eliza Kelly; Christopher, b. 1815, m. to Mary Douthett; Susan, b. in 1818, m. to Ezekiel Gray; John, b. in 1821, m. first to Ella Rosborough, d., and second to a widow woman, nee Marshall; Thomas, b. in 1825, m. to Ellen Fairman, d.; and Matthias, b. in 1829, m. to Rachel Longwell.

SAMUEL KIER was born on the farm now occupied by William Bash, Conemaugh township, in 1806, and was a son of David and Elizabeth Kier, nee Bush. The former was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1766, and migrated when a young man to what is now Indiana county, where he was married. Their children were: Mary, b. in 1792, on above named farm, m. to John Laughlin, d.; James, d., m. to Nancy Gray, d.; William, d., m. to Annie Lyons, d.; David, d, m. to Jane Laughlin, d.; Andrew, d., m. to Hannah Martin, d., Jacob, m. to Mary Gamble, d.; Robert, m. to Matilda Walker; and Samuel, m. to Eliza Lyons, b. in Conemaugh township in 1812, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Lyons, nee Matthews, old settlers of the township. Samuel Lyons was born January 17, 1762, and died May 5, 1844. His wife was born November 18, 1744, and died September 11, 1824. Their children were: James, b. December 12, 1794, d.; Ezekiel, b. November 23, 1796, d. May 1, 1846; Martha, b. May 17, 1799, d. 1864; Annie, b. March 13, 1802; John, b. July 12, 1805, d. August 8, 1829; Sarah, b. April 14, 1807, d. July, 1844; Samuel, b. June 7, 1810, d. January 13, 1858; Eliza, b. June 6, 1812; William, b. February 19, 1816, d. February 22, 1851; and Alexander, b. June 8, 1818. Our subject's children were: Maria, m. to Jacob Rumbaugh, d.; Martha Ann, m. to James Ross; Martin, m. first to Mary Moorhead, d., and second to Mary Peddicord; Sarah J., d.; Emma Virginia; and Oliver Murray, d. Martin was a soldier in the war of 1861. James Ross' only child was William.

JOHN EWING was a son of William and Eleanor Ewing, nee Thompson, and was a native of the Conococheague valley, in what is now Franklin county. His brothers, James, Robert and Alexander, and himself, came to the vicinity of what was afterward McFarland's mill, in 1788. (See sketch of Mrs. Mary Horn Work, a daughter of James Ewing for Ewing notes.) John Ewing was married to Sarah Moore, of Westmoreland county. Their children were: James, d., m. first to Jane Harbison, d., and second to M. Hart, d.; William, d., m. to Margaret Elder, d.; John, d., m. to Sarah McCurdy; Robert, b. in 1804, m. in 1828 to Elizabeth Walker; and Alexander, m. to E. McAfee. Robert located in 1828, in the woods on his present farm, near Lewisville, Conemaugh township, where he still remains.

REBECCA ROSBOROUGH.—Our subject, whose maiden name was Rebecca Marshall, married Alexander Rosborough, one of the third generation of the Rosborough family represented in this county, Alexander, her husband, being a son of James Rosborough and Mary Demeer, and this James, a son of James Rosborough, sr., and Rebecca Denny, who settled in the county at an early date on the tract first settled by a Mr. Crawford, on the present line of Young and Conemaugh townships. They were of Irish origin. Our subject is a daughter of Samuel Marshall, d., and was born in this county in 1809. The present home of our subject is land taken up by Mrs. Rebecca Rosborough, d., wife of James Rosborough, sr.; date of patent not known to our subject. The children of our subject were: Violet, m. to Thomas Getty; Joseph, m. to Jane McKelvey; James, m. to Sophrona Noel; Mary J., m. to William McPhilemy; Isabel, m. to Joseph Shirley; Martha E., m. to Christian Sine; Marshall D., m. to Mrs. Nancy Reed, nee Taylor. James served four years in the late war in a Wisconsin regiment, and was wounded. Mr. McPhilemy served in 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th reserves, a short time.

JAMES NOWERY.—Our subject, now deceased, was born in Ireland, and came to this county prior to 1800; in 1808, married Mary Marshall, b. in this county in 1790, a daughter of Archibald Marshall, a pioneer on Blacklegs creek, and in 1811, settled on the homestead now owned by his son, Archibald M. Nowery. In digging out a spring on the premises, a small crucible was found of some very heavy metal, which has the appearance of steel. There is a rough coating of brass on it, and looks as though it had been used to melt brass. On another part of the farm, a portion of a surveyor's compass was found embedded in the clay below the soil. A gold ring, butcher knives, and other relics were found. Mystery enshrouds some of them, but there are mysteries connected with the history of Blacklegs creek, that will never be unraveled. The children of our subject were; Ann E., d., b. in 1809; Samuel H., b. in 1812, m. to Elizabeth Crawford; Margaret, d., b. in 1818, m. to Alexander Lyons; Archibald M., b. in 1820; James Y., b. in 1824, m. to Isabel Patton; Mary, b. in 1827, m. to Michael Earhart, d.; Robert, b, in 1830, m. to Margaret C. Cline; Martha, b. in 1834. The children of Samuel H. are: Martha Belle, Albert and Rebecca M. Those of James Y. are: Harry E., m. to —— Lytle; Samuel E., a teacher; Archey L., and Charlie. Those of Robert are James Irwine, and Willie Marshall.

LEBBENS KUNKLE.—Our subject was born in Westmoreland county, in 1832, and married Sarah R. Kinnard, b. in Armstrong county, in 1836, He settled in Conemaugh township, this county, in 1869, and built the saw mill now owned by him. It is a small water mill, and will cut about 1,000 feet of oak boards per day with good stage of water. It is the third mill built on same site. When, or by whom the first mill was built is not positively known—probably by the Wilson family who were early settlers on the tract. Our subject is a first class wagon-maker and has a shop fitted up on one end of his mill. His children are: William J., Daniel A., George E., Ida J., Maggie C., Minnie Ann.

WILLIAM FRITS, SR.—Our subject was born in Perry county, Pa., in 1797, and married Sarah Wolf, who was born in Centre county, Pa., in 1803. They came to this county and settled on the farm now owned by Wm. Frits, jr., in 1828. The first improvement was made by Samuel Miller, but the original patent was to Mr. Frits. Our subject died in 1850, and his son William succeeded him in possession of the farm. The children of our subject were: Caroline, b. in Centre county, in 1826, m. to John Whitmore, of Allegheny county; Julia Ann, b. in Centre county, in 1727, d. in 1854; Elizabeth, d. in Indiana county in 1829, d, 1854; Mary, b. in 1832, m. to Wm. Jackson, of Westmoreland county; William, b. in 1834, m. to Sarah Miller; Sarah, b. in 1835, d. in 1854; Catharine, b. in 1837, m. to Wm. H. Clark, of Allegheny county; Susanna, b. in 1839, m. to Washington J. Kier. The three sisters deceased all died within four weeks, in November and December, 1854. The children of William Frits, jr., were: Robinson M., b. 1857; James H., b. 1858; Lizzie S., b. 1862; Carrie E., b. 1866; William W., b. 1872; Lillie A., b. 1872; the two last named were twins.

Rebecca Robinson nee Weir.—Our subject, whose maiden name was Rebecca Weir, was born in Washington county, in 1813, and married J. W. Robinson, of this county, who was b. in 1803, and died in 1865. None of Mrs. R's relatives ever settled in this county. Her children were: Sarah M., d.; Rebecca J., m. to Robert Woodend; Martha E., d., m. to Rev. S. J. Berlin, d.; William T., d., was in militia service of 1863, returned sick and was never well afterward, and died in 1865; Ella M., d; A. J. Weir, who yet remains on homestead. The farm adjoins the Robinson farm of pioneer settlement.

Bell M. Robinson nee McLanahan.—Our subject, whose maiden name was Bell M. McLanahan, was born in 1829, on farm now owned by John Carson, in White township, this county, and married S. S. Robinson, deceased in 1854. Her father, Robert McLanahan, d., was m. to Nancy Moorhead, b. in this county. Her present residence is the original Robinson farm or McBride patent, one of the very first farms settled in the township. The children of our subject are Annie B., Mary E., William E., Frank, James White, and Samuel S.

James Getty.—Our subject is a grandson of Andrew and Catharine Getty, and a son of James and Prudence Getty, nee Green. The children of our subject were: Alexander T., d.; and James Sidwell. The farm now owned by our subject is the original settlement of the pioneer, Archibald Marshall, near Blackleg creek, one mile below Clarksburg.

John Elwood.—Our subject is a descendant of William Elwood, a native of Ireland, who was married to Jane Stoops, native born, who came from Conococheague valley to Westmoreland county, and settled on the head waters of Turtle creek. They were among the pioneers of that section, and some of the Elwoods still occupy the original homestead.—When troubled by Indians they took refuge in Duff's block house. When coming over the mountains, their goods and chattles were carried on horseback. Two split-bottomed chairs, with the backs sawed off, inverted, and strapped to a pack saddle served as cribs in which the children were carried. Their stock consisted of a sow and pigs. Early in the first day the pigs became wearied, and as they were not considered valuable were left behind, and the sow driven on. At night they secured the sow, and in the morning were surprised to find the pigs had come up. This occurred each day until the destination was reached without the loss of a pig. Their children were: William, d., m. to Jane McGranahan, d., and settled on the line of Indiana and Jefferson counties; Thomas, d., m. to Hannah McGranahan, d., and settled in this county near Saltsburg; and Mary, d., m to Archibald Adair, d., of Westmoreland county. The family of Thomas all settled in this county, and were: John, our subject, b. in 1810, m. to Dorcas Russell; Jane, d., m. to Thomas Smith; William, b. in 1814; James, d.; Susan, m. to John Wachob; and Thomas and Charles, twins, d.

Philip Cline.—Our subject was born in Westmoreland county in 1815, and was married to Mary Irvin, now deceased, of same county, b. in 1816; he settled in this county in 1841, and on the present farm, part of the Robinson tract, in 1856. His father, John Cline, was born in Greensburg, Westmoreland county, and married Sarah Hartzel, b. in Hagerstown, Md.; his grandfather, Philip Cline, who was married to Margaret Drum, served in the Revolution. There were five of the Hartzels in the Revolutionary war, three of whom were killed, and one other died in the service. One of the Hartzels built a grist mill on Wolfer's run, probably the first mill in Westmoreland county. Mrs. C., the wife of our subject, was a descendant of General James Irvin, a number of whose descendants live in Westmoreland, Indiana and Clearfield counties. Her father, James Irvin, built a mill in 1773 on Loyalhanna creek, on the site of the present one known as the Snodgrass mill. The children of our subject are: Margaret C., m. to Robert Nowery; John I., farmer; James C., a medical graduate; William T., a lawyer at Saltsburg, and graduate of Washington and Jefferson college.

Samuel G. Miller, Esq.—Our subject is the second son of Samuel Miller, who came to this country about thirty years ago, and settled near Jacksonville. His wife Margaret, whose surname is not mentioned, having died in Westmoreland county, he married a Miss E. Bell of this county, and lived here till his death. His children, nearly all of whom settled in this county, were, by his first wife: Ellen, d., m. to John Taylor, d.; James, m. Margaret Miller, d.; Sarah; Hugh, m. Sarah Moore, d.; Samuel G., our subject, m. Mary Keener, d.; John, d., m. Mary Irvin, d., and Mary McPhileney; Ann, m. Peter Keener, d.; Martin, m. Hannah Simpson; Alexander, d., m. Mary Elder; William, m. Elizabeth Coleman; Richard, d., m. Sarah Dilinger; Jane, d., m. James Blakeley, d.; Eliza, m. Samel Davis; Margaret, m. Samuel McCurdy. The following notes indicate the quality of the descendants of this family. Ellen's son, James Taylor, is a practicing physician at West Fairfield, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania; another son, Hugh M., is now justice of the peace of Conemaugh township, this county, and one of her grandsons, Bruce Taylor, is a minister of the M. E. Church. James has four sons, viz: Richard, James, Samuel and Charles, are ministers in the M. E. Church, two of whom are or have been pesiding elders, and another son, J. Clark, a professor in a Medical College, at Cleveland, Ohio. Hugh is an elder in Carries Run Presbyterian Church, and his son, James M., is a practicing physician in West Virginia. The children of our subject are: Mary A., m. James G. Shields; Samuel G., jr., M. D., m. Margaret Hazlett, d., and Elizabeth Snyder; John K., m. Caroline Elias; Margaret, m. R. N. McComb; Thaddeus S., Esq.; Sarah J., m. John N. Marshall; Elizabeth C.; James Albert, M. D., m. Laura Hamilton; M. Watson, M. D., m. Ella Geesey; Robert N., m. Nancy Dixon; Milton M. G.; James Albert served in the late war, 11 months in the 206th Pennsylvania Volunteers. Our subject was born in Franklin county Pa., in 1806, married Mary Keener in 1828, and settled in this county in 1829, near the Salt Works, on the farm originally owned by Wm. McFarland. Settled on present homestead near Lewisville, in 1864. He was among the first abolitionists of this county, and was interested in the "under ground railroad" movement in the interest of fugitive slaves; and has also been an earnest advocate of temperance for nearly fifty years. He is now a ruling elder in Ebenezer Presbyterian Church.

John Fleming.—Our subject settled on the tract since known by his name, about 1772, and was a native of Ireland. His wife, Agnes, whose surname is not remembered, was born in Chester county, Pa. The tract was patented by Jas. Campbell, and comprised about five hundred acres, but was first settled by our subject. The first cabin was built on the part now owned by William Fleming. The children of our subject were: Samuel, d., m. to a Miss Patterson, d.; William, d., m. to Mary Joice, d.; Alexander, d., m. to — Sturgeon; John, d., m. to Rebecca McIntire; James, d., born in fort at Hannastown, m. to Nancy Clawson, d.; James succeeded his father in possession of the old homestead. The children were: Eliza, d., m. to James Householder; James, m. to Jane Fulton; Charlotte, m. to John Johnston; Eli, d., m.; William, m. to Nancy Davis, d., and Margaret McClaran; Nancy J., m. to Joseph Gordon, d.; and Eveline, d. William and James each own part of the original tract. James has two sons and eight daughters living, and one son and two daughters dead. His son, James, d., was killed by a saw log in 1878. William's children by first wife were; Eli; George; Analena, m. to Geo. Taylor; Mary A.; Phebe Jane; William; and by second wife, Nancy and Matilda.

Samuel Marshall.—Our subject was born in Ireland in 1792, and settled in this county in 1826, on farm known by his name, where he remained till his death in 1877; his first wife was Mary Sterling, who died 1830. The issue of this marriage was two children: Sarah J., d., m. to James Lemon, d.; and Mary, d., m. to Benj. Irwin. He then married Nancy Johnson, born in Westmoreland county in 1808. Their issue was: Jas. C., d.; William J., d.; John N., b. in 1841, m. to Sarah J. Miller, b. in the county in 1841; Francis F., d.; Margaret A., m. to Thomas W. Ewing; and David L., born in 1850, m. to Olive Shields. James C. enlisted in company E, 40th Pa. vols., was wounded at Fredericksburg, Va., and died at home six months afterward from effects of wounds. Francis F. enlisted in 206th Pa. vols., and died in service in 1864. John N. and David L. remain on the old homestead. This tract of land was patented by Robert Wilson August 24, 1786, who settled upon it about that time and made the improvement purchased by our subject in 1826. The children of David L. are: Frank, May, and child not named.

JOHN E. ELRICK was born in Conemaugh township in 1853, and was a son of George S. and Sarah Elrick, nee Eckart. The former was born in Conemaugh township, and died in 1877, at the age of fifty-two; the latter is living and about fifty-three years of age. George S. was captain of a boat in "Graff's Union Line" on the canal, for nine years, and was afterward engaged in boating on the Ohio, Mississippi, and Illinois rivers. He was a son of Frederick and Margaret Elrick, nee Keating, who was married in Indiana county, the former migrating to Indiana county at an early date. Frederick Elrick's children were: Elizabeth, m. to Alexander McChesney; Jacob, m.; Samuel, m. first to Eliza Hunter, d., and second to Isabella McPhilamy; George S., d., m. to Sarah Earhart; Washington, d.; John, M. D., m. to a Miss Black; Robert, m. to Jane Anderson; Wallace; and Ann, m. to William Bergman. George S. was in the militia at the time of the Chambersburg raid. Robert was in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Wallace was in company B, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers, served three years and was wounded. George S.'s only child was John E., the surveyor, who was educated at the Saltsburg academy. He has been engaged in his profession for five years, and now has charge of the trestle work of the Saltsburg coal company.

DAVID STIFFY.—Our subject was born in the county in 1820, and was a son of Conrad Stiffy and Mary Connor who settled in Cherryhill township in 1819. The family of Conrad Stiffy and wife were: David, m. to Jane Frederick; John, m. to Mary J. Earhart; James, m. to Mary Cruikshank, d.; Jonathan, d.; William, m.; Joseph, m. to Christiana Noef; Franklin, d.; Henry, m. to Mattie Decker; Azariah, m. to Anna Dishong; Philip, d.; and Margaret, m. to John Patterson. Four of these, viz: David, William, Joseph, and Azariah, settled in this county. There were seven of these brothers in service in the war of the rebellion at one time; four of them served three years, and three of them for nine months—but one of them was wounded, though never known to decline any duty. The children of our subject are: Mary J., m. to John Gifford; James, m. to Elizabeth Dick; George, d.; Elmira, m. to George W. Stahl; Amanda, d.; Maggie; Albert, d., Cyrus. The children of James and Elizabeth Dick are: Albert I., and Della M.

REV. D. J. IRWIN.—Our subject was born at Kittanning, Armstrong county, Pa., in 1832, and came to this county in 1838. His parents were William Irwin and Rosanna Johnston. He received an academical education at Glade Run Academy, Armstrong county, graduated at Jefferson College in 1858, and at the Western Theological Seminary in 1861. During the same year he married Miss Sarah H. Cove, of Tarentum, Allegheny county, and was settled as pastor of Ebenezer Church, this county, which relation still exists. In 1870 Clarksburg Church was added to the charge. Mrs. Irwin is a graduate of Washington Female Seminary, class of 1859, and was for two years principal of female department of Glade Run Academy. The children of our subject are: Margaret B., Benj. Coe, George B., John P., Rose, James Harvey, d. Margaret B. is in graduating class at Blairsville Seminary, and Benj. Coe is about commencing a course of study at the academy. Rev. Irwin's grandfather on the mother's side, Mr. Johnston, was one of the pioneers of Armstrong county; but little is known of the Irwin family. The father of our subject William Irwin, died when D. J. was a mere child, and another brother, Joseph, was killed at the taking of the city of Mexico.

ROBERT ELRICK.—Our subject is a son of Frederick Elrick, d., b. in Bedford county in 1790, and married to Margaret Katon, b. in eastern Pennsylvania in 1798, and still living. Their children were: Elizabeth, m. to Alexander McChesney; Jacob W., m. to a Miss Wycoff; Samuel G., m. first to a Miss Hunter, and second to a Miss McPhilemy; George S., d. m. to Sarah Earheart; Washington I., d.; John H., a physician at Harrisville, Butler county, Pa., m. to Mary J. Black; Robert, b. in this county in 1832, our subject, m. to Jane B. Anderson; Frederick W.; William C., d.; and Annaline, m. to William Bergman. Of these Samuel G., George, S., Robert and Annaline settled in this county. Fred. W. enlisted from this county in the 56th Pennsylvania volunteers, was wounded, and served four years. Our subject served in the Pennsylvania volunteers one year. The children of our subject are: Bella J., Fred. W., Joseph A., Margaret E., Charlie O., Mary E., Albert and Katie L. We do not have the record of early settlement of this family, but they are largely connected with the families of the township.

ALEXANDER LYTLE.—Our subject settled in the county about 1800, on a tract situate on Lytle's run. It is supposed there was a small improvement on the tract when he purchased it; he built the first sawmill in the neighborhood in 1811 or 1812, and the stone mansion now occupied by the widow of John Lytle, d., in the year 1813. His children were: William, d., b. in 1802, m. to Martha Sloan, d., afterwards m. to Sarah M. Collom; Mary, d., m. to William McFarland, d.; Rachel, d., m. to Nicholas McGaughey, d.; John, d., b. in 1811, m. to Eliza Caruthers; Sarah, d.. James, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Kelly. The children of William by the first wife were: Elizabeth, d., m. to Smith Templeton; Martha, d; Mary J., m. to Samuel Richie; Sarah F., d.; and by second wife were: Alexander, b. in 1837, m. to Louisa Blair; Sarah, m. to Robert B. Miller; James, d.; Caroline, m. to Jas. Gilkerson; Maria E., a teacher; and William F., who was injured on the railroad a few years ago. Alexander served eleven months in the late war in company G, 206th Pa. vols. His children are: William B. and Sarah A. The children of John and Eliza Caruthers are: Alexander C., d.; William C., m. to Melinda J. Elrick; John H., m. to Mary C. Waddle; Melissa J., m. to Harry E. Nowery; Eveline, m. to Levi Kuhns; Cordelia, m. to J. E. Wilson; Franklin Pearce and Mary Ellen, twins. The widow of John and son and daughter last named remain on the old homestead. John H. has a sawmill on the site of the old one. His children are: Martha E., Laura F., Samuel, Wallace, and Bertha M. The children of Wm. C. are: Howard R., and a boy not named.

HUGH M. TAYLOR, ESQ.—The parents of our subject, John Taylor, native born in 1792, and his wife, Ellen Miller, born in Ireland in 1794, came to this county in 1830, and first settled on what is now the Wm. Lytle farm, then owned by Samuel G. Miller, Esq., and in 1838, moved into the woods and opened up a farm one mile west of Ebenezer. Their children were: John, m. to Jane Irwin, d., and Susan Anthony; Samuel, m. to Mary Harbison, d., and Mrs. Susan Smith nee Gamble; James, m. to Mary Ann Matthews, d., and Susan Ogden; David, m. to Huldah Bennett; Hugh M., m. to Sarah A. McCombs, d.; William, m. to Elizabeth Mears. James Taylor, the only brother of John, enlisted in the war of 1812 from Westmoreland county, and died in the Florida swamps. There was one sister, Elizabeth, who died young. The children of our subject are: George M., m. to Anelene Fleming; James M., Elizabeth E., and Morgan R., m. to Margaret Kuhn. Our subject is now justice of the peace and has partly served his second term in office. He resides on part of the old "Adam Thompson farm."

MARIA LAIRD GILKERSON.—Our subject is the only one living of the family of James Hart, d., b. in Conocheague Valley, in 1780, and his wife Mary Laird, d., b. in Ireland in 1785. James Hart settled on the farm formerly known as Cooperstown, in 1807. There had been some improvement made by Wm. Cooper, and there are four apple trees still bearing, planted by him before 1800. The farm was purchased of Wm. Cooper, by John Hart, father of James, in 1806, then 280 acres. It is now one of the prettiest farms in the township, there being no land untillable in the tract. The first survey was made in 1773. The children of James were: John, d.; Judith, d.; Maria Laird, b. on homestead in 1824, m. to Rev. Thos. Gilkerson, d., a native of Vermont, in 1841. Their children are: James, m. to Caroline Lytle, lives on part of homestead, and is a teacher and farmer; Agnes J., m. to George H. Adams; Wm. Thomas, a graduate of Saltsburg Academy, now reading medicine and attending lectures at the University Medical College, N. Y.; Ellen Mary, d.; Rev. John C., a Presbyterian minister, graduate of Westminster College and Princeton Seminary; and Judith. Rev. Thomas Gilkerson came to this county in 1840, and until his death in 1859, served the Conemaugh and Apollo U. P. Churches. He was a graduate of Jefferson College. Mrs. G. has a quilt, pot, and teakettle brought from Ireland in 1794, and some very old books in the library—one published in London, in 1634, and another in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1669.

JOHN DRUMMOND, JR., is a son of John Drummond, sr., and Mary Bolmon, who settled on part of the Ospery tract, adjoining the Kelley tract, in 1812, in a cabin then erected. His children were: William, m. to Nancy Kirkpatrick; Joseph, d., m. to Mary Cowan; Ellen, d., m. to John McCracken, d.; John, b. in 1806, m. to Elizabeth Arthurs, d.; Gawin, m. to a Miss Heneigh, d.; Sarah, m. to Archibald Cunningham, d.; Mary, d., m. to Joseph Pounds; and Nancy. John, our subject, for some years managed the salt works now owned by S. Waddle. He is seventy-four years old, and still continues to work at his trade as cooper. His children are: James, m. to Ellen Waddle; Mary, d., m. to Wm. McQueston; Joseph, d., m. to Ellen Drummond; Sarah Ellen, d.; Margaret and Phebe, d. John served in the late war, in company I, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. There was an old Indian camp on the Osprey tract, on the site of which there were mounds of shells and broken pieces of crockery ware, which seemed to have been burned of some coarsely pulverized material. Also appearances of Indian graves. The old Indian path across the farm was plainly visible until 1825.

Robert McGaughey.—Our subject was a son of Thomas McGaughey and Martha Reed. Thomas McGaughey in an early day, settled near Rural village, in Armstrong, afterwards living in Westmoreland county near the tunnel, and in 1818 settled in this county on part of the Thomas Reed tract, near Tunnelton. His wife Martha was a daughter of the pioneer Thomas Reed, who had no sons, and the family name is lost in the decease of the pioneer himself. The children of Thomas McGaughey and Martha Reed were: Thomas R., d., m. first to Mary McLain, d., and second to Lavina Repine; Mary, d.; John, m. to Hannah McCall; Margaret, d.; Robert, m. to Mary G. Thompson; Rachel, m. to J. F. Cruikshank. The only child of our subject is W. T. McGaughey, who lives with his parents on the homestead, a part of the old Adam Thompson farm. Mrs. Mary G. McGaughey is the only child of Adam Thompson now living. Mr. McG. has a powder horn which was got from an Indian at the early settlement of the lands on Conemaugh. The Indian then claimed to have made it, but it looks more like French work.

J. Y. McCartney was born in 1808, on what is now known as the "State experimental farm" near Indiana, and was a son of Samuel and Ann McCartney, nee Young. (See sketch of Samuel McCartney, Indiana.) Our subject was married to Sarah Coleman. Their children were: Mary Jane, m. to Rev. J. M. Jamison, United Presbyterian minister; Nancy, m. to John Lowry; Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Hart; Martha Ann; and Amanda, m. to J. C. Nesbitt.

D. S. Gailey was born on the Gailey homestead, Conemaugh township, in 1844, and was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Erskine Gailey, nee Brown. The latter died in 1872, about seventy years of age. She was a daughter of David Brown, who located, at an early date, on the Loyalhanna, Westmoreland county. She was a descendant of Robert and Ebenezer Erskine. Thomas Gailey was born in Uniontown, Franklin county, on the 31st of October, 1799, and was a son of James and Letitia Gailey, nee Smith, who settled on the part of the Gailey tract, now occupied by Samuel Gailey, jr., in 1806. Their children were: Andrew, d., m. to Jane Barr; James, m. to Elizabeth Moreland, d.; Cornelius, d., m. first to Nancy Cresswell, d., and second to Mrs. Alavia Wilson, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Sarah Shearer, d.; Thomas, m. to E. E. Brown, d.; and Ann. Thomas Gailey's only child was D. S., m. to Amelia Hill.

Mrs. Mary Russell was born on the Elder homestead, in 1800, and was a daughter of James and Martha Elder, nee Robinson. She was married in 1829 to Samuel Miller Russell, a native of Greensburg, who died in 1875, eighty-one years old. He was a son of Joseph and Dorcas Russell, nee Miller. The latter, and brother Samuel, were captured by the Indians at the "burning of Hannastown." Their father, Captain Samuel Miller, was killed before they started. The boy was killed on the march, and Dorcas was absent for two years before returning to her friends. Joseph Russell's children were: Samuel Miller, d., m. to Mary Elder; Margaret, d., m. to David Allsworth, d.; Jane, d., m. to James McFarland; Joseph, d., m. to Lavinia Marchand; Joshua, d.; Dorcas, d.; and William. Joshua was a member of the State House of Representatives for one term; was re-elected, but died before taking his seat. Our subject's children were: William Clark, d.; Rachel Elder, d.; Dorcas Miller, m. to John Elwood; Martha Elder; Samuel Miller, d.; and Mary Elder, d.

Thomas Hart was born in 1840, on the farm now occupied by Benjamin Irwin, Conemaugh township, and was a son of John H. and Achsah Hart, nee McCrea. The former was a son of Moses Hart; was born on the above named place, and died in 1859, at the age of forty-six. The latter died in 1872, at the age of fifty-six. (See Hart history, Saltsburg.) Their children were: Ann E., m. to J. C. Watson, d.; Thomas, m. to S. E. McCartney; Margaret L., d.; Elvira J., m. to James Carroll; Matilda E., m. to Robert Nesbitt; Martha, d.; J. Porter, d.; Geo. M. and R. Mary, twins; the latter was married to John Dunlap. Thomas was in company H, 16th Pennsylvania cavalry for six months, and also in the Pennsylvania militia, at the time of the Chambersburg raid. Thomas' children were: Maggie B.; John M.; Alfred M.; Harry J., d.; and William A.

James Duncan.—Our subject is a son of Thomas Duncan and Dorcas Todd, both native born, who came from eastern Pennsylvania to this county about 1800, and settled on the farm in Young township now owned by Dr. Murray. Their children were: Letitia, d.; Martha, d., m. to Samuel Hart, d.; James, our subject, b. in 1798, m. to Elizabeth Matthews, now deceased, and settled on present homestead in 1829; Isabel, d., m. to Daniel Rhea, d.; Henry, d.; John, m. first to Miss Reed, d., second to Miss Duncan, d.; Mary, d., m. to Mr. McLane, d.: and Dorcas, d. The children of our subject were: John M., b. in 1825, m. to Elizabeth Coleman, b. in 1829: Dorcas, d., m. to William McCurdy. John M. remains on the homestead with our subject, his father, and his children are: Jas. Matthews, now a theological student at Allegheny U. P. Seminary, and graduate of Monmouth college; Mary E.; Mattie J.; Robert C., d.; Tirzah E.; E. Alma; D. Edith; A. Josephine, d.; John E.; E. Jessie; M. Alice; Archy Wallace. Our subject is now eighty-two years old, and retains his faculties well. His son John M. is an elder in Conemaugh U. P. church. The homestead of our subject was settled by John Matthews, pioneer, and included the Oliver farm, J. and M. Matthews farm and three Ewing farms.

John Gilbert, merchant, Lewisville. Our subject was born in the county in 1832, and was the only son of George Gilbert and Mary Earhart, who at the time of birth of our subject, lived in Conemaugh township. He married a Miss Martha Anderson, also born in Conemaugh township. Their issue are: George W., a teacher; Thomas A., teacher; A. Lincoln; Anna May and Daisy C. Our subject had three sisters: Elizabeth, Sarah J., and Mary C. The latter was married to Andrew Compton. He is the only merchant in the vicinity, and has established a successful business, aided by his sons above named.

John Shearer.—Our subject was born in Westmoreland county in 1808, and married Sarah Morgan, now deceased. Their issue was one son, Thomas, deceased. He settled in this county, in Conemaugh township, on the farm known as the "Alexander Getty farm." His second marriage was to Sarah J. Huston, of this county, now deceased. The issue of this union was one son and two daughters, all now living on the homestead, viz: James H., Elizabeth, and Sarah Ida. The old stone building on the farm, yet in good condition, was built by A. Getty in 1812. Sarah J., second wife of our subject, was a sister of the Huston brothers in the eastern part of the county, of whom are named to us Samuel and Harry J.

Michael Miller.—Our subject was born in Cumberland county, in 1806, and settled in this county in 1826, and afterward married Christena Burns, a native of Scotland, born in 1805. Her parents came to this country in 1810. The father of our subject, Michael Miller, d., was born in Cumberland county in 1775, and married Susan Nesbitt, d., born in Franklin county in 1775. They also settled in this county in 1826, near Jacksonville. Their children were: Michael, m. to Christena Burns; Jeremiah, d.; Henry, d.; and Mary. The children of our subject were: H. Nesbitt, m. to Frances Nesbitt; Robert B., m. to Sarah A. Lytle; Ann E., m. to John Lowman; John H., d.; Mary Jane, Graham, m. to Clara Coad; Margaret, d.; and Thomas H. The children of Robert B. and Sarah A. Lytle are: Clark L., d., Ann E. G., Calvin, Agnes M., and Margaret C.

The family has in possession some flax brought from Scotland by Mrs. Burns' mother, in 1810. Some horn table-spoons brought from Scotland are over one hundred years old. They also have a book published by "Adoniram Byfield, Paperhead Alley neere Lumbard St., London, 1656," now two hundred and and twenty-four years old. They have a quilt and walnut case of drawers over one hundred years old. Our subject settled on present homestead in 1849. Mary J. and Thomas H. remain at home and Robert B. resides on adjoining farm.

Samuel Waddle.—Our subject was born in Westmoreland county, in the year 1818, was married to Martha Smith, and settled in this county in 1846, where he bought the salt works on the Osprey tract from a Mr. Ralston; also bought the farm known as the Thomas Reed farm, one half mile from what is now Kelly's Station. The salt werks were in operation as early as 1839, by Edward Carlton. They formerly averaged 20 barrels each 24 hours, and are now producing less, but would average 15 barrels each 24 hours yet, if run steadily. The supply of water has not fallen off, but its value is less in salt. The farm is a good one and valuable improvements have been made by the present owner. The children of our subject are: Ann Elizabeth, d.; Martha Ellen; Mary C., m. J. H. Lytle; John A., m. Miss Badger; Samuel, Francis E., William S., and James E.

A. S. TEMPLETON.—Our subject is a grandson of Alexander Templeton, and a son of Samuel and Elizabeth Hamilton nee Smith. This tract was taken up by Robert McClelland in 1774, to whom a warrant was issued in 1778, but it is not certain who made the first improvement, but tradition credits it to McClelland. The children of Samuel were: Nancy, d., m. to James Caruthers; Eliza J., m. to William Calhoun; Maria; Ellen, d. Alexander Smith, our subject, b. in 1822, m. to Elizabeth Lytle, d.; Mary Ann, d., m. to James S. Templeton; Asenath C., m. to William Thompson. The children of Alexander were: Archibald, m. to Catharine Getty; Alexander, d., served in the late war in company C, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry, and was killed near Richmond, Va.; Ann, m. to James Getty; James S., m. first to Mary A. Templeton, d., second to Sarah P. Beham; Samuel, d. Our subject succeeds his father Samuel in the possession of the homestead.

SAMUEL KEELY.—Our subject is a son of Daniel Keely, who was born in Westmoreland county, and was married to Mary Iddings, of the same county, and settled in this county in 1810, where the town of Saltsburg now stands; from thence he moved to the salt works near the present White's station, on the W. P. railroad, and from thence to the farm north of Blacklegs creek. His children were: Hannah, d., m. to Joseph Anderson; Samuel, our subject, b. in 1807, m. to Jane Barber; John, m. to Nancy Watson; Ann, m. to David Kennedy, of Ohio; Jane, d., m. to Samuel Kulp, d.; Eliza, d., m. to John Kipp, d.; Mary, m. to Henry McKalip; Alice, m. to John Iman, d.; Susanna, m. to Thomas S. Beson, d.; Amanda, m. to James Wyatt, of Virginia. Our subject lived at Saltsburg, when their were but two houses, and ferried traders across the river to that point; he is now seventy-three years old and has been seventy years in the county. He was born in Westmoreland county.

WILSON M. PIPER.—Our subject is a son of Joseph Piper, resident on Black-leg creek, on a portion of the original McDowell tract, and has a saw mill on the stream, which has been used in its time as an oil mill, chopping mill and now saw mill. Joseph, m. first to Mary J. McDowell, d., second to Margaret Rhea, d., and third to Catharine Larimer. His children by his first wife were: Lewis, d.; Nancy, d.; Wilson M., our subject, b. in 1845, m. to M. J. Kaney; Emma J., m. first to James McCauley, d., and second to Henry Myers; John E., m. to Alice Wilson. By second wife: Mary M., m. to J. W. McClintock. By third wife: Joseph M.; Edith, m. to James L. Trees; Morris, d.; Howard; Harry White; Bessie; Alice; Charlie; John F.; and child not named. The children of our subject were: William W., Annie Leeotta, d., Francis J., Kaney and Roy. Near the residence of our subject, at the confluence of Scrub-grass run and Black-leg creek, is a bluff skirted with cedar and crowned with pitch pine, in striking contrast to the oak, chestnut and other hard woods, for long distances on every side. Looking up the creek towards it, it is a fine natural scene.

ALEXANDER LYONS.—Our subject is grandson of Jas. Lyons, of Ireland, who came to this country in 1764, and afterwards came from Conecocheague valley to this county, and settled in Black-lick township. His children were: Samuel, d., b. in Ireland in 1762, and married in this county Elizabeth Matthews, d., who was born in 1774, and settled on the farms now occupied by his descendants, one mile from Saltsburg, in 1793. His wife died in 1824, and he in 1844; Alexander, d., m. to Margaret McFarland, d., also settled in the county; James, d., who was among the first school teachers in Conemaugh township, probably the first. The farm of Samuel was patented by James Chain very early, but it is not certain there was any improvement on it until his settlement of it in 1793. The children of Samuel were: James, d., b. in 1794, m. to Elizabeth George, d.; Ezekiel, d., b. in 1796, m. to Jane McGinley, d.; Martha, d., b. in 1799, m. to John Douthett, d.; Anna, b. in 1802, m. to William Kier, d.; John, d., b. in 1805; Sarah, d., b. in 1807, m. to Duncan Graham, d.; Samuel, d, b. in 1810, m. to Mary Nesbitt, d.; Eliza, b. in 1812, m. to Samuel Kier; William, d., b. in 1816, married twice in Kentucky; Alexander, our subject, b. in 1818, m. first to Margaret Nowery, d., second to Nancy Coudy, d., third to Mary J. Coleman. All except William settled in this county. Alexander, our subject, and the sons of Ezekiel, William Henry and Robert A., live on the old homestead, now divided. The children of our subject by first wife were: Margaret M.; by second wife, Isabella J., m. to Newton Ames; Anna Elizabeth, m. to Michael Hensel, of Ohio; Charles A., m. to Prudence Getty: Samuel, d.; Oliver J.; Nannie C.; by third wife, Sadie M; the three last named remain at home. Anna Kier has one son, Samuel M. Kier, a Presbyterian minister, at College Springs, Iowa, a graduate of Cannonsburg, Pa., and another son, Jacob S. Kier, a physician, at Detroit, Michigan.

WILLIAM DUNLAP.—Our subject was born in Scotland in 1823, in parish of Fenwick, Shire of Ayr, and married Mary McKinzie, also of Scotland. They emigrated to this country in 1850, and settled near Jacksonville, Young township, this county, in the fall of 1855, moving to present farm in Conemaugh township, in 1867. Our subject is an elder in Conemaugh U. P. church. His children were: Agnes King, b. in Scotland, now married to Andrew J. Getty; Jennie Graham, d.; John, native born, m. to Mary R. Hart; Minnie, m. to John Park; Mary G.; and Matthew McKinzie.

MICHAEL SMITH.—Our subject was born in Armstrong county, Pa., in 1819, and in 1845 married Margaret Brown, born in Westmoreland county, in 1825. Is a blacksmith by trade and settled in this county at Clarksburg in 1840, and in 1845 built a smith shop, which he occupied until 1870. In the meantime, he also built the first brick house in the village of Clarksburg. In 1870 he removed to present farm, a part of the John Marshall tract. The father of Mrs. Smith, before and after her birth, resided in this county. The children of our subject were: Thomas, b. in 1847, m. to Jane Frederick; Anna S., d., b. in 1850; Catharine J., d., b. in 1853; Mary A., b. in 1856; John M., b. in 1858, m. to Ida Rumbach; Martin K., b. in 1861; David M., b. in 1863; Elizabeth, d., b. in 1866; William C., b. in 1869. Our subject has but one brother who settled in the county, Abraham Smith, who located near White station, on the W. P. railroad, about 1830.

REV. J. A. BLACK was born near Dromore, county Down, Ireland, in 1838, and was a son of Samuel and Elizabeth Black nee Bell. In 1840, the family located in Pittsburgh. Our subject was educated at Allegheny City College (Reformed Presbyterian), Allegheny City, graduating therefrom in 1862. After a thorough course of study at the Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary, he graduated in the class of 1867. His first charge was at Clarksburg since his residence. He was married in 1876, to Tirzah M. Cannon, daughter of John N. and Eliza Cannon nee Elder. The former was a son of Mrs. Samuel Cannon still living at the age of ninety-one; the latter is a daughter of Mrs. Mary Elder, now living at the age of eighty-six. Our subject's children were: John Cannon and Robert Alfred.

JAMES L. TREES was born on the farm now occupied by his father in 1853, and was a son of Levi and Julia A. Trees nee Jamison, daughter of Major S. S. Jamison. Levi was a son of Thomas and Sarah Trees nee Hill. Thomas' second wife was a Miss Iseman. He was a native of England and came to Salem Cross Roads, Westmoreland county. He was a miller and millwright, as were also his sons John, Elisha, James and Isaac. Levi is a miller. James read law after completing his trade, and for several years was an attorney in Greensburg. Levi's children were: Sarah, m. to Homer C. Bair; James L., m. to Edith Piper; Samuel, d., Thomas, Linie E., Frank, Harry and Asa.

THE TREES MILL was erected by Levi Trees in 1853, Mr. Trees having come to Saltsburg in that year. It is situated on Blacklegs creek, is forty feet square, three stories in height and has three run of burs. The dam is nine feet in height. The power is regular and the mill has constant work and a large area of tributary territory.

DANIEL WILSON was born in 1809, about two miles of the site of Clarksburg, and was a son of Robert and Ann Wilson nee McClellan. The former was born in South Carolina in 1768, and the latter in Scotland in 1771. Her parents came to America in 1773. Robert was a son of Robert Wilson, who came from South Carolina in 1775; and settled in what is called the "Loop," one mile below the site of Livermore. He reared a family of ten children, and died in 1817. Our subject's parents were married in 1791, and settled in that year where Daniel was born. They were driven away by the Indians three summers, but returned as soon as deemed safe, to their improvement. On the farm, eleven children were born, and here Re-

Robert McCurdy w[illegible]5. Our subject was the ninth child. He the farm now occ[illegible]33, to Lettice Henderson, living. Of their The latter died Ap[illegible] are deceased.
[illegible]cCurdy nee McAf[illegible]

[illegible]'s place, in the [illegible]ON.—Annie E. Watson nee Hart, was born on the [illegible]ohn and Sara[illegible]pied by Benj. Irwin, in Conemaugh township, with[illegible], d.; John, m[illegible]e farm which she now owns, and has lived in that Coulter, dau[illegible]eighborhood all her life. On March 14th, 1860, [illegible]ing medici[illegible]rried to J. C. Watson, who was b. April 3d, 1836, d.[illegible]y, b. Febr[illegible]; Matthew Watson was b. March 3d, 1803, d. April 12 Joseph, [illegible] Jane Watson, b. May 27th, 1809, d. Dec. 12th, 1875. T[illegible]880, m. [illegible]ren of J. C. and Annie E. Watson were: John Hart, b. [illegible] daugh[illegible]1863, d. Sept. 20, 1863; Harry, b. Oct. 15, 1864, d. Dec. 15[illegible]byteria Della J., b. Feb. 12, 1866; Achsah Emma, b. Nov. 16, 18[illegible]. J[illegible]ugustus Clark, b. July 19, 1871. The warrant for this trac[illegible] seve[illegible]dated Jan. 11th, 1793, and is now called the Watson farm.[illegible]b was formed from Armstrong township, in 1807, and derived its name from Black-lick creek, spoken of by early writers and settlers as being on the site of the present Black-lick Station.

BLACK-LICK TOWNSHIP

NEWPORT

was founded by Alexander Denniston, the father of John Denniston, between 1787 and 1790. He purchased the improvement right of George Findley. By the act of the 29th of March, 1787, a road (see chapter on early roads) was ordered to "be opened and established between the navigable waters of the Frankstown branch of the river Juniata and the river Conemaugh." The road was run and marked in December, 1787.

Not long after this Newport was founded, and a block-house or fortified building gave security to the village. A new county was expected to be formed out of Westmoreland, and the village was commenced in the expectation that such a division of territory would be made; that Newport, being in or near the center, would become the county seat. However, the Conemaugh was made the line, and Newport's expectations were blighted.

GEN. CHARLES CAMPBELL was of Scotch-Irish parentage, and a native of the Conecocheague valley. He migrated to what was afterward known as Campbell's mills, in this township, about 1772. The data at our command are so meagre that justice cannot be done to his memory. A scant record of his captivity among the Indians and British, which is presented in another chapter, the official tables, and the sketch of the early organization of the county, indicate in some degree the estimation in which he was held by the citizens and state authorities. He died in 1828, at the age of eighty-two. For many years he was an elder in Bethel Presbyterian church. His connection with the militia of the county and district was both honorable and effective. He died as he lived, respected by all who knew him. His first wife was Margaret Clark, and his second was Mrs. Elizabeth Ramsey. The children were: Barbara, d., m. to James McLain, d.; Michael, d., m. to Elizabeth Ramsey, d.; Rebecca, d., m. to Samuel Denniston, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Fullerton Woods, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Denniston, d.; Jane, d., m. to Dr. Jonathan French, d.; James, d., m. to Amy Howard, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Abram Spears; Fennwell, d., m. to Robert Doty, d.; Eliza, d., m. to Alexander Spears, d.; Charles, d. in 1878, seventy-five years old, m. first to Matilda Henderson, d., and second, in 1849 to Mary Cummins; and Thomas, d., m. to Elizabeth Fair. Charles Campbell's children were: Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Kelley; Joseph, m. to Elizabeth Doty; Margaret, m. to Joseph Dixon; Sarah, d., m. to John Leach; George, d.; Thomas, m. to Hetty Doty; and Matilda. Mrs. Charles Campbell has several tea-spoons over one hundred years old, that were used by Gen. Campbell. Matilda, daughter of the late Charles Campbell, has Gen. Campbell's gold watch; this is an unique specimen of old mechanism. It is marked "M. and A. No. 5106."

JOHN GIBSON.—John Gibson, the elder, was born in the Conecocheague valley, and came to the old Gibson farm some years prior to 1775, as in that year he came into possession of the land. Thomas Taylor made application for the warrant in 1769. It then passed through the hands of Brooker, Dixon, and Watt till the purchase of the tract by Mr. Gibson. His capture by the Indians, in company with Randle Laughlin and others, is recited in another chapter. His civil career may be best judged by an examination of the public acts of the county officers in the initiatory years of the county's history. His wife was Jane Lowry, who died in 1837, in her ninetieth year. Mr. Gibson died in 1816, at the age of sixty-six. Their children were: Hugh, d., m. to Margaret Gamble, d.; Nancy, d., m. to William Henry; William, d., m. to Elizabeth McFadden, d.; Levi, d., m. to Jane Cochran, d.; James, d., m. to Martha Gamble, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Blakely; Esther, d., m. to James Cochran, d.; and Joseph, d., m. to Margaret Sloan, d. John Gibson, our subject, was born in this county, and died on the 13th of February, 1879, eighty-eight years, six months and twenty-eight days old. He was married in 1819 to Margaret Blakely, the daughter of David and Margaret Blakely nee Herron. Their children were: David B., m. to Rosanna Hazlett; Jane; John, (served eleven months in the 206th Pa. vols.) m. to Jane McComb; William, m. to Mary J. McCracken; James; Robert, m. to Elizabeth Munshur; and Margaret.

MRS. JOSEPH LAUGHLIN.—Mrs. Laughlin, or Maria Rankin, was born in Indiana county, in 1800, and was married to Jos. Laughlin on the 11th of October, 1824. Joseph Laughlin was a son of Randal Laughlin, the pioneer, (see sketch). Before the above named marriage in 1816, he was married to Jane Guthrie, who died on the 23d of December, 1822. He died on the 30th of November, 1876, at the age of eighty-six. His children were: James G., d.; Eliza W., m. to Joseph Henderson; John, d.; Jane G.; Sarah M., d.; Rankin G., d., M. D., (served three years as private, maj., lieut. colonel and colonel of the 94th regiment Illinois volunteers, and was mustered out as a brevet brigadier general,) m. to Mary Turner, d. at Bloomington, Ill., fifty-one years of age; Thomas S., d.; Joseph H., d., of Washington county, Ohio; Margaret J., d.; Mary M.; William H.; Caroline M.; and Milton H., m. to Harriet A. McLaughlin. Milton H. served first in company C, 18th Ohio volunteers for four months and eleven days, and in Buell's battery for about four years. Mrs. Laughlin resides on the old Randle Laughlin homestead. In the early survey, the land was bounded by tracts of William McNut, James McComb, John Gibson, Benj. Harbison and Thomas Taylor. It contained three hundred and seventy and three-fourths acres of land with allowance, and in the patent is described as adjoining lands of John Gibson, in Armstrong township. The old orchard planted about 1776 or 1777, has five apple trees still standing. Milton H. Laughlin was married in 1868, to Harriet A. McLaughlin, daughter of William and Eliza W. McLaughlin nee McComb, a granddaughter of Gen. James McComb. His children are: Edwin H., Fred. M., K. Clarence, Joseph Rankin and Stewart.

JAMES GORDON.—James Gordon was a native of Ireland, who had served in the Revolutionary war. He married in Bedford county, Pa., where he lived for many years, Mary Dunlap. He was among the early settlers of Black-lick township, Indiana county; for tradition through the family reports that his daughter Sidney carried a gun while her father labored in the field. His children were: Sidney, d., m. to William McHenry, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Davis, d.; Jane, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Thomas, Elliott, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Samuel Lewis, d.; and James, d., m. to Eleanor Cummins. The latter was born on the old homestead, in 1790. He was married in 1828, as above stated, to Eleanor Cummins, a daughter of William Cummins. He served as sheriff of the county, and while acting in such capacity made the arrest of J. L. Gillis for the abduction of Morgan, of anti-Masonic fame. He was a delegate to the convention which met at Harrisburg to further the interests of this county in relation to the extension of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad. He died in 1855, at the age of sixty-five. His children were: William C., who served as second lieutenant of company F, 157th regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, and as captain of company D, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, from September 9, 1864, to June 26, 1865; Joseph T., m. to Nancy Fleming, served as captain of company I, 12th regiment, Kansas volunteers, for three years; James A.; John D., who enlisted as a private on the 5th of September, 1861, and was promoted to lieutenant of company B, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers, on the 5th of April, 1863, and was killed at Gettysburg, was the third man buried in the Pennsylvania lot of the National Cemetery; Mary Ellen, m. to Isaac Earheart; and Margaret Louisa, d.

ALEXANDER MCGAUGHEY came from York county to Westmoreland county a few years prior to the war of 1812. He lived for some time in Indiana county, and died in Armstrong county about 1825. His wife was Sally Marshall, who died a few years prior to his decease. Their children were: John, m. to Margaret Lattimer, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Martha Reed, d.; Alexander, d., m. to Jane Coleman, d.; James, d; Archibald, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Margaret Thomas, d.; and William, d., m. to Mary Blair, d. Alexander and Jane McGaughey's issue was: James; Nicholas, d., m. first to Rachel Lytle, d., second to Sarah Lowry, d., and third to Margaret Knee, d.; Margaret, d.; Thomas, m. to Sarah McCoy; William, m. to Sarah Cochran; Jane; John, m. to Isabella Cunningham; Nancy, m. to Archibald Cunningham; Elizabeth, m. to Clark B. Thompson; Alexander, m. to Catharine B. Coliard; Mary, m. to James Trimble; Montgomery, d.; and Archibald, m. to Elizabeth Rankin.

JOSEPH THOMPSON.—He is a son of John Thompson, (see sketch of D. K. Thompson, Rayne township,) well known as Blockhouse Thompsom, and was born in Conemaugh township, in 1795. He was married in 1819 to Maria Culbertson, who died in 1877, over eighty years of age. Their children were: Nancy; Rachel, d.; John, d.; William, who is the oldest white settler of Puget Sound, Washington Territory; Joseph Thompson, attorney, Quincy, Illinois; Margaret, d.; Thomas Washington, Oregon; Mary Jane, d.; Samuel; Maria J., m. to B. F. Davison, of Independence, Mo.; and James, Oakland, Cal. Our subject has been a carpenter for over sixty years, and for many years also managed a farm. He was a supervisor of Blairsville for three years, and was assessor and collector of the same place, holding each position one term. From 1819 to 1839 he was a contractor in Blairsville. He farmed for several years in Centre township. Was a resident of Jacksonville for eleven years, and for several years has resided on a farm about half a mile south of Jacksonville.

JOHN TAYLOR.—He came from Ireland to Delaware in 1801. In 1807 he removed to the Thos. J. Taylor farm, in Black-lick township. He was married in Chester county, Pa., to Mary Alcorn, a daughter of John Alcorn. She died in 1808. Their only child, Mary, died at the age of two years. His second wife was Polly Downey, a daughter of John Downey. She died in 1870, at the age of eighty-four. Their children were: Elizabeth; Mary, m. to Charles Burt; Nancy, m. to Joseph McCracken; Thomas J., m. first to Jane Gibson, who died in 1874, and second, in 1876, to Mrs. Mary P. Reeger nee Stewart, a daughter of Joseph and Mary Stewart nee Findley; John, d., m. first to Salina Crocker, d., second to Elizabeth Lowman, d., and third to Rosanna Lowman; William; Margaret and Jane, d., (twins); Robert, d.; Cynthia J., d. Thomas J. Taylor's children were: Margaret, m. to Thomas S. Woods; Mary J., d.; Garvey, d.; and William Banks.

PATRICK JACK.—He was born in Cumberland county, Pa., of Irish parents, and came to what is now Black-lick township, in 1789. He had been a captain in the Revolutionary army, and was well prepared to undergo the privations of frontier life. He came into possession of the Jack farm in 1791, the date of the patent. Daniel Rossiter was the party in whose name the warrant was issued, its date being 1773. He was thrice married, first to Margaret Bryant; second to Widow Story; and third to the widow of John Leslie. His children were: Anna, m. to John Henderson; and James who died in 1861, in his eighty-second year, m. to Mary Alcorn, b. in 1793, and still living on the old homestead. She was the daughter of James Alcorn, who came to the Black-lick settlement in 1795. While living near Frankstown, in 1794, his wife was lost and no trace was ever seen or tidings heard of her.

LEMUEL L. FAIR, son of William and Mary Fair nee Cribbs, was born July 7th, 1843. The grandfather of our subject, Peter Fair, settled in the county at an early day. He was a scout and spy during the French and Indian war. The names of the children of the parents of our subject are as follows: Peter, m. first wife Sarah Young, second wife Martha Doty; Mary J., m. to W. Bell; Susannah, m. to Jackson Bell; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Doty; Sarah, m. to Abraham Maxwell; Julia, m. to C. Maxwell; Henry, m. first wife Frances Gilger, second wife Augusta Rodgers, and William, m. Hettie Willoer, of New York. Our subject received a common school education, was raised on a farm and has followed farming for a business during life. He served one year in company G (Capt. Gordon), 206th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers. He married Mary A. Bridenbaugh, of Dacotah City, Neb. They have a family of five children: John S., Mary N., Elda May, Philip Werty, and Susannah M.

JAMES FAIR was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., June 25, 1819. His parents, Samuel and Anne Fair nee Campbell, settled in the county in 1830. Their children were as follows: Florinda, James, John, Samuel; Sarah, Mark, Robert A., live on the Martha, William, Porter, d.; Alexander, Hm of our subject by mond prison in 1863), Margaret, Elizabeth wife, Isabella J., m liam served in the late war. Florinda was Michael Hensel. J. Paige, of Cherryhill township. Sarah was amuel, d.; Olive H. Allison, of Centre township. Our subject w ree last name the common schools and raised on a farm. H Samuel M. Fed to Harriet, daughter of Daniel Smith, of Indiana owa, a grad 1842. They have a family of five children—D. Mc, B Kier, a ph ssor in Normal school, Indiana), Hattie, m. to John I , George and Clara May. Daniel Mc served in the 10 n in S sylvania volunteers in the late war.

nd mar

GILLIS M. DOTY, son of Gillis and Jane Do to this Dixon (or Dickson) was born on the farm upon whic g tow now lives, July 8th, 1843. Mrs. Doty is still living wi ent f r son G. M. Doty on the old farm at the advanced age of en ty-two years. The names of the children of our subject's parents were as follows: Abby, d., m. to Samuel Douglas; Nancy, m. to Henry Harrold; Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Fair; Jonathan, d., m. to Nancy Fouls; Mary, m. to J. H. Bell, M. D.; Robert, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Jos. H. Campbell; Margaret, Rebecca, m. to James Fouls; Sarah, m. to Hugh Flinn; and the subject of this sketch, Gillis M. He was educated in the common schools of the township, was raised on the old farm and has made farming and stock raising the business of his life.

CAPT. JOHN UNCAPHER was born in 1836 in Loyalhanna township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of Daniel and Elizabeth Uncapher nee Keener. The former was a son of George Uncapher. In 1837 the father of our subject moved to the farm which the Uncapher family now occupy and has resided there ever since. Our subject was married to Annie M. Ewing in the fall of 1875, and now resides in Fillmore. John Uncapher was a soldier with General Jim Lane, in Kansas, during the trying times in that border state, previous to our great rebellion. He remembers distinctly of being in Topeka and casting his first vote to make Kansas a free state. Mr. Uncapher was a member of Co. E, 11th Pa. reserves, and participated in all the battles in which that gallant body of men were engaged. He was wounded and taken prisoner at Gaines Hill, and at Fredericksburg he was again wounded and taken prisoner. He was confined at Libby prison and Belle Isle during his captivity. He was promoted to be a sergeant in his company, and returned from the war at the expiration of his term of enlistment. Our subject was captain of company D, 10th regiment National Guard of Pennsylvania for three years. The children of John and Annie M. Uncapher were: Louie May and Mary Elizabeth.

DAVID D. WINEMAN was born November 11, 1836, in Huntingdon county, Pa., and was a son of Jacob and Martha Wineman nee Davis. The former was born about 1807, and lives on the old homestead. Mrs. Wineman died in 1845, aged about thirty-three years. The children of Jacob and Martha Wineman were: Jane, d.; Nancy C., married to John Morton; David D.; John P., d.; James, a member of company E, 11th P. R. C., wounded at second Bull Run, taken prisoner and died from effects of wounds; Samuel C., m. to E. Repine, and Jacob, m. to Eleanor Stewart. Their children were: Martha Ann, m. to Robert Geary; Margaret Ellen, m. to Thompson C. McCrea; Franklin, Elizabeth, Clinton, Tillie, and Elmer Ellsworth. The father of our subject moved into this county when David D. was about one year old. He located on the farm now occupied by Robert Magee, and afterward purchased the farm on which he now resides. Our subject made his home with his father until the spring of 1860. In February of that year he married Catherine Ann Rankin and moved to the tract of land formerly owned by Joseph Repine. Mr. W. finally bought the "Ferguson farm" in 1873, and has lived there since that time. Mrs. Wineman was a daughter of George and Elizabeth Rankin nee Repine. The former was born April 23, 1808, and died January 7, 1860. The latter was born June 10, 1802, and died January 7, 1860. Both died on the same day, and were buried in one grave at Chapel graveyard, near Rugh's station. The children of David D. Wineman and Catherine Ann Wineman nee Rankin were: Viola May, b. May 12, 1861, d. May 1, 1864; James McClellan, b. July 6, 1863; Samuel Gettis, b. November 4, 1865; David Rankin, b. January 31, 1869; and Clark Milligan, b. May 26, 1878.

WILLIAM MCCURDY was born in 1827, in Young township, and was a son of John and Sarah McCurdy nee Ewing. The former was a son of Robert and Mary McCurdy nee McAfee.

Robert McCurdy was a native of Ulster, Ireland. He died on the farm now occupied by James Brown, Young township. The latter died April 30th, 1858, aged about sixty years. Mary McCurdy nee McAfee died about 1852, at her son Joseph McCurdy's place, in the Beechwoods, Jefferson county. The children of John and Sarah McCurdy were: Mary, m. to John S. McCurdy, d.; John, m. to Hannah Weaver; Robert L., M. D., m. to Mary Coulter, daughter of Rev. Jas. Coulter, of Slate-lick, now practicing medicine at Freeport, Armstrong county; William McCurdy, b. February 6, 1827, m. to Dorcas Duncan, d. January 14, 1851; Joseph, d.; Sarah Ann, d.; Joseph Patton, d.; Rebecca J., d. in 1880, m. to B. F. Pitts; Thomas A., D. D., m. to Lizzie Woodend, daughter of Rev. W. W. Woodend, now pastor of First Presbyterian Church, of Wooster, Ohio; James Moore, d., and Ralston. John McCurdy was born in 1795 and died in 1866 in his seventy-first year. The great-grandfather of our subject was Robert McCurdy, sr., of Ulster, Ireland. He had three sons, Robert, John and William. Robert's history has been briefly given. John settled in Maryland and held slaves and became very wealthy; his family is now almost extinct. William remained in Ireland. The grandfather of our subject, Mr. William Ewing, one of the oldest settlers of Indiana county, used to ford the Conemaugh river and attend church at Hannahstown. He would always carry his gun to protect himself from the Indians. William McCurdy taught school for a number of years and was in business as a merchant for twenty-two years. He has recently purchased the McCurdy farm, one mile west of Jacksonville, and is now engaged in enriching his farms by fertilizers. Mr. McCurdy now owns 207 acres of the old homestead.

B. B. Rhodes was born in 1826, in what is now Blair county, and was a son of Philip and Rachel Rhodes, nee Miller. Philip Rhodes died about 1846, aged fifty-five years. Mrs. Rhodes was born in 1800, and is still living in Blair county, aged over eighty years. Mr. Rhodes came to Indiana county about 1850, and lived with Montgomery Thompson for about seven or eight years as miller at the mill still standing on Altman's run. He was in Minnesota for upwards of eighteen months. After returning he was married, about 1850, to Josephine Thompson, and removed to his farm, situated in Black-lick township, and has lived there the greater part of the time since. On April 1, 1880, he leased his farm and moved to Livermore, Westmoreland county, and is now engaged in superintending the steam flouring mills at that place. He was elected and served as justice of the peace for three years. The only child of B. B. Rhodes and Josephine Rhodes is Agnes. This tract of land was warranted by Thomas Nonair, and patented by John Elder. The name of the tract is "St. Johns." The warrant is dated February 23, 1785.

Christina Winsheimer was born in 1830, in Germany, and was a daughter of Balzer and Anna Elizabeth Snyder, who were residents of Germany. Mrs. A. E. Snyder's maiden name was Chrouskoup. Our subject emigrated with her parents when about three years of age. They settled on their farm, about four miles from Indiana, and lived there the balance of their lives. Balzer Snyder died in 1867, aged seventy-two years. Mrs. A. E. Snyder died in 1874, aged seventy eight years. Our subject was married in 1851 to George Winsheimer, who was born about 1820, and was also a native of Germany. He emigrated when about eighteen years of age, and settled in Westmoreland county. After living there for three or four years he moved into Indiana county, and finally located on the farm which Harry Patcher now owns, in Grant township. About 1874 Mr. and Mrs. Winsheimer moved to their present place of abode, formerly the William Irwin place, in Black-lick township. Their children were: Lawrence, b. June 15, 1852, m. to Elva C. Roff, now living in Colorado; John George, b. December 3, 1853, supposed to be in Washington Territory; William Michael, b. March 21, 1856, was for some time at Leadville, Colorado, but now living at home; Thomas McGee, b. June 14, 1860, with his brother John in Washington Territory; Mary Elizabeth and Annie Maria, twins, b. December 15, 1863; and Della May, b. April 4, 1867. This farm was surveyed April 3, 1769, on application from John Peter Altman, and is therefore one of the oldest farms in Indiana county. The name given to the farm in the patent was "Surry." Between the dwelling house and Blairsville road was the site of an old "Indian Fort." Michael Winsheimer, father of George Winsheimer, died March, 1880, aged eighty-four years. Elizabeth Winsheimer, his mother, died in 1879, aged eighty-eight years. They had both been residents of Cherry Hill township for a number of years.

William Smith was born in 1827, on the farm now occupied by William J. Smith, and was a son of James and Theresa Smith nee Wainwright. The former was born in 1800, and died in 1833. The latter was born in 1802, and died in 1871. They were natives of England, and emigrated from their native land when quite young; they were from different parts of "Old England," and were not married until after they landed in this country. Both are interred in Hopewell graveyard. The children of James and Theisa Smith nee Wainwright were: Geo., b. in 1825, m. to Priscilla Crow, lives in Black-lick township; William, b. in 1827; Allie Retta, b. in 1830, m. to Isaac Hoover, d., now the wife of John George; Elizabeth, b. in 1832, m. to Ferguson Badger, lives in Black-lick township; Sarah, b. in 1834, m. to Jesse Long, lives in Black-lick; and our subject, m. to Ann Catherine Bricker in 1858. Their children were: Theresa Jane, b. December 21, 1861; George Newton, b. November 13, 1869. Mr. Smith is the possessor of all that tract known as the "old Bricker homestead," also the "Sutton farm," the "Peter Sutton farm," the "John Loughrey farm," in all hundreds of acres.

Francis B. Mabon was born December 22, 1824, in South Mahoning township, on a farm now occupied by Robert Mabon, of George, and was a son of John and Margaret Mabon nee Leggett. Francis B. was married to Catherine Ansley, March 28, 1850. The children of Francis B. and Catherine Mabon nee Ansley were: Annie, m. to Wm. J. Smith, lives in Black-lick; Robert L., now in Cass county, Iowa; James S., now in Leadville, Colorado; Elizabeth, m. to Charles Graff; Clara, attending school at Blairsville Seminary; William G., living at home; Margaret J.; Emma C.; Louis J., and Francis B., jr. Francis B. Mabon, sr., died January 23, 1876. He was one of the commissioners of Indiana county, and held different offices of trust in his own township. Catherine Ansley was a daughter of Daniel and Catherine Ansley nee Fisher, former residents of South Mahoning township. She was born in Westmoreland county. This tract was surveyed in pursuance of an order on application, dated April 3, 1769, to Francis Waddle.

John Ferguson was born in 1828, on the old homestead in Black-lick township, and was a son of James and Margaret Ferguson nee Devinney, (see historical sketch of Ferguson family). Mr. F. was one of a family of twelve children, all living. Jas. Ferguson, the father of our subject was b. Feb. 17th, 1781, d. March 2d, 1846, aged 65 years and 13 days; Margaret Ferguson was b. Oct. 7th, 1793, d. Nov. 27th, 1861, aged 68 years 1 month and 20 days. The children of James and Margaret Ferguson were: Elliott, b. July 8th, 1812; Aaron, b. March 25th, 1814; Elizabeth, b. Jan. 2d, 1816; William, b. Jan. 21st, 1818; Jane, b. 1820; James, b. March 28th, 1822; Eli, b. April 25th, 1824; Andrew D., b. Feb. 17, 1826; John, b. May 12th, 1828; Joseph, b. March 24th, 1831; David, b. Jan. 2d, 1833; Margaret Ann, b. Sept. 12th, 1836. Our subject was married Nov. 24th, 1863, to Sybilla Kells, who was b. June 2d, 1846. Their children were: Frank Ulysses, b. Dec. 12th, 1864; Charlie Devinney, b. Sept. 29th, 1866; Mary Savannah, b. Feb. 21st, 1870; Jennie May, b. Nov. 23d, 1872; George Crooks, b. May 31st, 1875; Becca, b. Sept. 13th, 1878.

Henry Altman was born in 1820, on the old homestead, and was a son of Jacob and Margaret Altman nee Cable. The former was a son of Philip and Louisa Altman nee Kepple. Jacob Altman was born in Greensburg, Westmoreland county, in the year 1788, and removed with his parents to Altman farm, when but eight years old, and lived there all his life of 81 years—he died Sept. 14th, 1854. Margaret Altman was born in Cambria county, about 1783 and died in 1830, in her 47th year. Our subject was married to Mary Etta Cribbs, about 1845. Their children were: David Cribbs, b. 1849, m. to Martha Graham, d. April 15, 1879; Margaret Jane, d.; Henrietta; William Harrison, lives in Chicago; Mary Catharine, m. to Robert Lattimer, and lives in Burrell township; John Luther Melancthon, lives in Kansas; Margaret Emily, Martha Augusta, Henry Nitterrauer, and Louisa Mendinia. This tract was taken up about 1796, Mr. Jacob Altman being about eight years of age at this time. On this farm is a part of the site of the old town of Newport, commonly called the "Deserted Village." Mrs. Altman relates that when she was married her mother gave her a table cloth which had been bought at one of the stores in this place. On the level tract between Mr. Altman's house and the creek is said to have been an Indian camping ground. Bars of lead and other Indian relics were found. This farm lies enclosed between Black-lick creek and the Conemaugh river, and is one of the oldest and best known places in Indiana county. In the old grave yard on part of the old farm we found the following names and dates of births and deaths of the Altman family: Philip Altman, sr., b. December 28, A. D. 1763, d. May 29, 1813; Louisa, wife of Philip Altman, d. March 8, 1844, in the eighty-sixth year of her age; Philip Altman, jr., b. August 4th, 1785, d. October 18, 1802; Lucinda, consort of Brice Henderson, d. October 8, 1849; Levi Altman, d. Sept 12, 1849; Mary L. Henderson, d. August 31, 1850; Samuel Altman, d. July 23, 1821; Jacob Altman, d. Sept. 14, 1854; Margaret, wife of Jacob Altman, d. October 17, 1830; Mary Altman, d. February 16, 1854.

JAMES HART was born on the old homestead in Young township, in 1833, and was a son of John and Lillie Ann Hart nee McCollum. James Hart was married to Mary J. McNees in 1864, and shortly after, or about 1869, removed to near McMinnville, Tennessee. After living there for four years, he returned to Indiana county, and settled soon after on the farm known as the "Sloan," and later as the "Bruce" farm. Mr. Hart afterward purchased this farm and was engaged in sowing oats on the site of the "historic Newport" when we visited his place. Part of the town was on this farm. The children of Jas. and Mary J. Hart were: Carrie J., Elmer Mc., Loyal C., and Geo. W. On this farm, near where the present residence stands, there was a still-house, and part of the stone walls of the building are yet standing. Mary J. McNees was a daughter of Jas. and Esther McNees nee Anderson, formerly of Young township.

THOMPSON C. MCCREA was born on the old homestead, June 15, 1841, and was a son of William C. and Nancy McCrea nee Adams. William C. McCrea was born September 18, 1803, and died March 1, 1874. Nancy Adams was born October 7, 1811, and died December 19, 1873. The former was a son of John McCrea, sr., and Elizabeth McCrea nee Reed. Wm. C.'s children were: John Porter, b. September 23, 1831; James, b. September 18, 1833; Elizabeth, b. November 10, 1835, m. to Wm. T. Rankin; Robert T., b. August 3, 1838, living in Iowa, U. P. minister, served one year in the Union army during the Rebellion; Thompson C., b. June 15, 1841, lives on the old homestead; Martha, b. August 29, 1843, d. April 6, 1848; Mary Ann, b. April 18, 1846, d. December 1, 1866; William M., b. July 16, 1849, d. November 30, 1866; Nancy J., b. October 6, 1853, living with her brother in Iowa; Samuel, b. November 16, 1856, d. September 19, 1857. James McCrea was a member of company B, 56th regiment P. V., and was wounded at North Anna river, Va., May 25, 1864, and died from the effects of his wounds on May 26, 1864. He had served three years, and re-enlisted for three years more. Our subject was married to Margaret E. Wineman, November 12, 1874. Their children were: Wm. Porter, b. November 27, 1875; James Quincy, b. July 26, 1877; Ethel E., b. December 31, 1878. The warrant for this tract is dated April 3, 1769, and the tract was called "Anti-Tyrannical." This farm was the drilling ground for the militia of early days.

FERGUSON BADGER was born June 8, 1831, in Butler county, and settled in Indiana county in 1837. When Mr. Badger was ten years of age his mother moved to the Gibson farm, and lived there eighteen years, and then moved to the Archy McEwen farm, which he now owns. He was married to Elizabeth Smith January 19, 1858. Their children were: Mary Theresa, b. September 8, 1859, m. to John A. Waddell, now living in Westmoreland county; Alvin Lincoln, b. February 4, 1866, d. April 27, 1867; Lulu May, b. December 2, 1868; and Margaret Laura, b. June 17, 1872. The warrant for this tract is dated December 16, 1785, and was surveyed by Joshua Elder. Mr. Badger worked at barn building for twelve years.

ZACHARIAH LEARD was born in 1823, in Young township, on the farm now occupied by J. A. Blakemore, and was a son of John and Mary Leard, nee Elder. The former was born in 1796, and died in 1858. The latter was born about 1800, and died in 1833. The grandfather of our subject was born and raised in Ireland, and emigrated to this country and settled on a tract of land in what is now Young township. The farm afterward was and still is known as the "Leard farm." This was about 1785. He died about 1819, and Mrs. Leard about the same time. He was one of the school teachers of early days, and he and old Mister Elliott are well remembered by all old residents of this county. He was also an expert at drawing up legal papers. The children of John and Mary Leard, nee Elder, were: Zachariah, b. 1823; Maria Ann, b. 1825, m. to Robert Elder, d., and now lives in Fillmore; Judah, b. 1827, d.; Margaret, b. 1829, m. to David Morrow about 1863, and now lives in Young township; Robert Elder, b. 1831, m. to Nancy Sterling; and our subject, m. in 1852 to Jane Kelly, daughter of Hon. Meek Kelly. Their children were Sarah A., Meek K. and Mary Jane. Mrs. Leard died in 1863. Mr. Leard moved to his present residence in 1859. William Leard, an uncle of our subject, was one of the commissioners of Indiana county. He formerly resided where Peter Kunkle now lives, in Young township. Our subject has performed a large amount of surveying in this county. He was mentioned for Congress against General White a few years ago, and came within a few votes of securing the nomination in this county. This tract was taken up about 1769, and comprised the farms of W. P. Fink, R. E. Leard, a part of B. B. Rhodes' and a hundred acres in John Archibald's farm. It has long been known as the "Elder farm." Near where Mr. Leard now resides is said to have been the site of an Indian village. Indian graves containing bones, trinkets, &c., have been found on this farm. Arrow heads, stone hatchets, and other implements of war and the chase among the savages, have been found quite recently. There was an Indian fort near where R. E. Leard now lives.

GEORGE H. CRIBBS was born February 16, 1826, on the farm now occupied by him, and was a son of David and Mary Catherine Cribbs nee Cribbs. The former was a son Jacob and Mary Cribbs. David Cribbs was born in 1801, and died in 1833. Mary Catherine Cribbs was b. March, 1797, d. 1867. The subject of our sketch was married to Jemima Fair, March 6th, 1855, He is considered a good debator and in a forensic battle, has been known to worst several of our public speakers. The deed for this tract is dated 1787. This place is known as Fairview.

A. S. PATTISON was born June 16th, 1826, and was a son of Robert and Martha Pattison nee Stewart. The former was a son of Robert and Jane Pattison nee Huston. Robt. was a native of county Derry, (Newtonline of Eddy) Ireland. Mrs. Pattison died about 1839—Robert died about 1827. The children of Robert were: A. S., Margaret and Mary. Afterwards Robert married Mary Barr, and three children were born to them: R[illegible] jr., killed at Fair Oaks, May 30th, 1862; Margaret, m. to A. Barr; Martha, m. to William Berry. A. S. Pattison married to Mary Simpson, April 14th, 1853. Their chi[ldren] were: Mattie S., Lizzie B., Margaret J., Robert A., Carri[e] Charlotte S. About fifty years ago there was a still-house on farm, it being then the property of General Charles Camp[bell] The dwelling house which Mr. Pattison has recently repl[aced] by an elegant brick mansion, was one of the best houses [in] day in the country. The chimney in this house was over f[ive] feet in circumference and is calculated to have contained [a] hundred loads of stone. There were three fire places. [The] mantels were elaborately carved and beaded. This must [have] doubtedly have been the finest residence of the time. The lo[gs] of this house are said to have been cut for a barn by General Charles Campbell. During the General's absence, Mrs. Campbell had them built into a house—the house was chunked with stone and the lining of the house was all cherry. The joists were all of the same material, and were all planed and beaded. There were four fifteen light windows. The first floor and sleepers had been replaced. There was fine mouldings all through the house. An old cupboard stood in the house when we visited it, which was made from walnut, and had been there for fifty years. The length of the house was thirty-eight feet, width twenty-eight feet. There were four rooms on the basement floor and four up stairs. The floors were all fastened with hand-made nails. The doors were of cherry and contained six panels. It is now over one hundred years since this house was built. Among other relics at the Pattison mansion, was a dress belonging to Mrs. Isabella Highlands nee Marks. Miss Mattie Pattison appeared in this dress, once the property of her great-grandmother. It was in a good state of preservation at that time. Isabella Highlands nee Marks, died about 1854, aged ninety-three years. Mrs. Pattison's great-grandmother was Mrs. Margaret McKaig; an old family bible was shown, which was the property of Isabella Highland, and was brought from Ireland. It was printed in 1794. The willow which stood near the new residence of Mr. Pattison, is said to have been part of a riding rod brought from east of the mountains and planted in the damp, moist earth. It grew and flourished for over one hundred years. At the time it was cut down, it was five feet ten inches in diameter and seventeen feet in circumference. Margaret J., third daughter of Mr. Pattison, was stolen by a band of Gypsies in June, 1863. She was then about two or three years old, and was staying with her grandmother, then on the pike leading from Indiana to Shelocta. She was recovered in a few hours afterwards by a party who recognized her and restored her to her overjoyed grandmother.

Mathew M. Crooks was born August 28, 1837, in Westmoreland county, and was a son of Francis and Elizabeth M. Crooks nee McGaughlin. The former was a son of James and Mary Ann Crooks nee Dunn. James Crooks was a son of John Crooks, who was a native of Ireland and emigrated with his parents when about five years old. They settled in the Conecocheague valley, in Franklin county, in 1762, and removed to Westmoreland county in 1795. He settled on a farm in Washington, now Burrell township, where two sons and a daughter still reside. He died there in 1822. There were no buildings on the farm when he settled on it, a former resident having been driven away by the Indians and his house burnt. There were no churches or school houses near and no road for miles except paths through the woods. He had several brothers and sisters who settled in the same neighborhood, and a number of their children and grandchildren still reside there. He was married to Mary Ann Dunn who survived him over thirty years. They had eight children, seven sons and one daughter—John, d.; Francis, James, d.; Allen, William, Robert, Samuel and Eleanor. The father of our subject, Francis Crooks, was born March 10, 1803, in Allegheny township, Westmoreland county, and removed to Indiana county in 1851. He settled on the farm now owned by S. P. Marshall. The mother of M. M. Crooks, born March 7th, 1803, was a daughter of Mathew and Rachel McLaughlin, who were also pioneer settlers of Washington township, Westmoreland county. The children of Francis and Elizabeth Crooks nee McGlaughlin, were: James, d.; Mathew M., m. to Martha J. Taylor; John, d.; Mary E., d.; and Rachel E. m. to Mathew Shirkley. The children of Matthew M. and Martha J. Crooks nee Taylor, were: Lizzie J., Clara B. and Harry C. The warrant for this tract is dated Aug. 23, 1786, and was granted to George McCartney. It was patented April 12, 1814.

Washington Township was formed from Armstrong township in 1807, and received its name in honor of General George Washington, under whom many of the first pioneers had served in the Revolution.

Five Points receives its name from the roads that centre there. The land originally was the property of Edward O'Conner. The first building was erected by Samuel McGary in 1858 for a store and dwelling. The first merchant was David Weaver, in 1860. He was fallowed by Fleming & Bowman, H. M. Lowry & Co., and H. B. Miller, 1878, the present merchant. The blacksmiths have been: Solomon Hankinson, Solomon Black, and William Nesbitt, the present workman. The shoemakers have been: William Miller and Michael Frick, the present tradesman. The first and only cabinet shop and undertaking establishment was Smith & Boyer. In 1868, C. Morton had a shook shop. The population in 1879 was about twenty-five.

Marlin's Mill, Willett P. O.—Jesse Marlin was the first settler on the tract which includes the site of the village. He erected a saw mill in 1832, and a grist mill in 1834. The latter had one run of country stone and one of burrs. It was 30 by 32, with two stories and a basement, and used a "rye flywheel." The present mill was erected in 1871; it is 32 by 38, has two stories and a basement, has one run of country stone and one of burrs, and uses a reaction wheel. The postoffice was established in 1854.

Newville, Creekside P. O., was laid out in 1854 by David Peelor, for John Weamer. The first buildings on the site of the village were the blacksmith shop and dwelling house erected in 1852 by William Moorhead. This being a new village, Mr. Peelor so christened it, "Newville." The first store was opened by Andrew Weamer in 1854. Dr. Gamble was the first physician, and the second was Chalmers S. McCrea, the present practitioner. The first and only hotel was that of Mrs. Nancy Stuchell, the present landlady.

Robert Miller settled in what is now Washington township, while the Indians were yet numerous in this section. His improvement was on a little run which emptied into the McHenry run (or McKee run) upon which the McKee mill was situated about two miles from the latter. He was often chased into the cabin by the Indians. Upon one occasion he was followed so closely that he had not time to withdraw the ramrod of his rifle, and he fired at his pursuer, the ramrod passing through his body. A hickory tree is still standing on his old location where the latter fell. He worked a horse and an ox together in plowing as well as in packing. He had a large packsaddle made for the ox, upon which could be carried a barrel of salt. He made trips to and from the Conecocheague valley for several years, the ox being his main dependence for packing. When he first came to this section he was unmarried. While on his trips to the east he made the acquaintance of the lady who afterward became his wife and who lived about two miles from the place where he was accustomed to stay over night. The ox undergoing the troublesome journey better than his horse, he would ride over to the home of the lady who often related stories of her intended husband visiting her on oxback. His widow died over ninety years of age. Their daughter, who married John Black also died over ninety years of age.

Samuel Bell was a son of Robert and Jane Bell. The former died in 1826, and the latter in 1791. Their children were: Joseph, b. in 1765; Jane, b. in 1766; Elizabeth, b. 1768; John, b. in 1770; Samuel, b. in 1773, d., in 1856; James, b. in 1774, William, b. in 1776; and Margaret, b. in 1778. Samuel and family came from Westmoreland county about 1800, and located on the tract now owned by the Bell heirs, Rayne township. Here he purchased five hundred acres. He served as justice of the peace for over twenty years. His wife was Jane Welch. Their children were: Robert, jr., b. in 1793; John, b. in Westmoreland county in 1794; Mary W., b. in 1796; Jane, b. in 1798; William, b. in 1800; Joseph, b. in 1802; Margaret, b. in 1804; James Johnston, b. in 1806; Elizabeth, b. in 1808; Nancy Davis, b. in 1811; Samuel M. N., b. in 1814. The children of William and Margaret Bell, nee Clark, were: Mary Ann, m. to A. C. Reid; Jane W., m. to William H. Lydick; Elizabeth, d., m. to John R. Lightcap, d.; William C., m. to Catharine Kinter; Samuel D., m. to Elizabeth McGaughey; and Joseph H., d. William C. was in company G, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years and nine months, and was wounded. He was a prisoner at Andersonville, Charleston and Florence for eleven months, five being at the first, one at the second, and five at the third prison. Samuel D. was a soldier in the war of 1861. The children of William C., a son of William Bell, were Nolie, Margaret Bertha, Charles T. and Herbert Cecil. John, a son of Samuel Bell, the pioneer, was married first to Margaret McGara and second to Jane Johnston. His children were: Samuel W., m. first to Miss Arter, and second to Miss Schweitzer; Margaret, M., d., m. to Abram Milliron; John W., m. to Jane Blue; Sarah Jane; Mary, m. to Zachariah Kepple; Joseph, m. to Mary McCandless; and Elizabeth, m. to James Miller. Joseph was in the war of 1861, as a member of the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers. John W.'s children were Elizabeth Jane, Mary, Clara A., Evaline and Robert Frank.

John Cummins was born in 1802, on Two-lick creek, about two and one-half miles south of Indiana, and was the fifth child and third son of William and Margaret (Todd) Cummins. In 1806, William Cummins purchased of Robert Elder a tract of land on Crooked creek, containing about 1,200 acres, and took immediate possession thereof. On this Elder had made an improvement on the part where the subject of this notice now resides, and built a house and two barns, one of which is still in use (1880), in pretty good condition, having been built most probably some time early in the decade of 1780. David and Jennet (Davison) Cummins, the grandparents of our subject, came from Franklin county, probably about 1780, and settled near the present site of Homer, where they took up land, and began to improve it, when the Indians became hostile and compelled them to leave. The writer can well remember hearing Jennet Cummins tell of seeing "an Indian pass the door of their cabin in the dusk of the evening, while she was sitting inside the door nursing her child, her husband being absent." Next morning she found where two men had lain in the long grass near their house, but had disappeared without making any attack. Taking the alarm, they packed up what they could carry on horseback, buried their kitchen furniture and pewter ware in the spring run, and left for a place of safety. They returned to Franklin county, and from that to Rockingham county, Virginia; where, having resided several years, and her husband having died, Mrs. Cummins was left with five children to care for, three sons and two daughters, named respectively, William, John, David, Mary and Elizabeth. When William, the oldest, had attained his seventeenth year, John, the next brother, being fourteen, they left their home in Virginia, and came back to their claim, whence they had been driven. They built a house, raised some grain, cut some hay, which they obtained from a neighbor, the other settlers having returned to their farms soon after the Indian raid. Being thus prepared, the boys returned to Virginia, and brought out the family. We regret that we are unable to give any exact dates, but these things must have occurred about the year 1789. The children of the grandparents have been named. William, the father of the subject of this notice, served as an Indian scout along the Allegheny river, which would fix the return of the family to this county at a very early period. After being married, he purchased land on Two-lick, and built a grist mill near the site of Upper Two-lick mills, which he sold to Mr. J. Agey, removed to the present homestead in 1806, as already stated, where he died in 1825. John was married to Eleanor Todd; he was in the government service in suppressing the "Whisky insurrection," and settled near the entrance of Cherry run into Two-lick, where some of his descendants still reside. David, the youngest son, with his mother, occupied the original home, was married to Polly Trimble, and about 1820 or 1821, removed to Richland county, Ohio. Mary was married to Charles Morrow, and removed to Ohio, at the same time as the last named, Elizabeth, was married to Jeremiah Brewer, who settled in Mahoning township, this county, where they resided for the remainder of their lives. The children of parents were: David, Susannah, Samuel T., Jane, John, Eleanor, Elizabeth, Mary, William, Joseph D., and Margaret. Of these, David was married to Margaret McKnight, Susannah was married to Alexander McKnight, Jane was married to William F. Clark, and John remains unmarried. The latter represented the county in the state legislature in 1841 and 1842. Eleanor was married to James Gordon; Mary was married to Charles Campbell, and Margaret was married to A. D. Guthrie. Samuel, Elizabeth, William and Joseph died unmarried.

James A. McKnight was born in 1821, on the farm now occupied by him, and was a son of Alexander and Susannah McKnight nee Cummins. The former was a son of Alexander and Isabella McKnight nee McBride, who were natives of county Down, Ireland, who about 1790, migrated to Franklin county. In 1795 or 6, they removed to the farm above noted, and made the first improvements. Alexander McKnight, sr.'s children were: (1) James, m. first to Jane McNutt, and second to Jane McComb; his children were three sons and one daughter, the latter being the only survivor and is now Mrs. Jane Walbridge; Alexander, a son of James, left two sons, one of whom, Col. A. A. McKnight, fell at the battle of Chancellorsville, and the other is Dr. W. J. McKnight, of Brookville, Jefferson county; Elizabeth, m. to Alexander McNutt, and Alice, m. to John Ross, were also daughters of James; he held several civil offices and was well known to the early settlers; and (2) Alexander, d., in 1821, was m. to Susannah Cummins; his children were: William C., who resides in Chambersburg, whose surviving children are two sons and one daughter, and James A., whose children were two in number, a son, d., and a daughter; Isabella, m. to Joseph Shields, and Margaret, m. to David Cummins. The warrant of the McKnight farm was issued to Robert Elder, April 1st, 1788. A receipt in the possession of our subject, dated April 3d, at the receiver's office, Philadelphia, calls for twenty pounds in Continental certificates.

Bryan McSwiney was born in Ireland in 1801, and was a son of Dennis and Mary McSwiney nee McSwiney. He came to Quebec, Dominion of Canada, in May, 1827, and to the United States in the same year. He engaged as foreman on the Pennsylvania canal, with Peter Ritner, for four years. He was with Col. H. B. Packer for nearly two years. He then came to Indiana county and purchased his present property. He was married in 1832, to Mary, daughter of George Burgholder, of Lycoming county. Their children were: Dennis, m. to Lavinia Beck; Mary J., m. to Jeremiah Sexton; Nancy, m. to John Kelly; Julia A., d.; Sallie, m. to John Stewart; Catharine, m. to Alexander M. Speedy; Peter, d.; Bryan, Eugene, m. to Laura Henderson; Abby, m. to Henry Miller; Henry, d., and Lizzie, d. Dennis served in the 103d Pa. volunteers. Peter was in Co. A, 78th Pa. volunteers.

Capt. John M. Marlin was born in 1836, on the homestead where his mother now resides in Washington township, and was the son of Jesse and Ann R. Marlin nee McLaughlin. The latter was born in 1804. The former's first wife was Barbara Todd, who died about 1829. He died in 1859, at the age of sixty-two. He was the son of Joshua Marlin, who located on the homestead in 1811. Jesse's children by the first wife were: Sarah Ann, m. to James Wiggins; Elizabeth, m. to John C. Briggs; Charlotte, m. to James M. Chambers; and Barbara, d. The children by the second wife were: William, d.; Sidney, m. first to Sarah Thompson, d. and second to Ann Miller; John M., m. A. A. Wallace; David, m. to Clara Anthony; Franklin B., m. to Mary Cochran; Thomas J., M. D., m. to Elizabeth Hutchison; James T., m. to Ella Spencer; and Jesse W. Our subject entered the army as first lieutenant of company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers, and served three years and three months. He was promoted to captain on the first of August, 1863. He was wounded. Sidney was in the U. S. signal corps for eighteen months. For Dr. Marlin's soldier and other records, see sketch in Armstrong township. Captain Marlin's children were, Cora May; Elmer W; Horace H., d.; Ira M. and Charlotte M.

James L. Lewis was born on the Lewis homestead, in Washington township, in 1818, and was a son of James and Catharine Lewis, nee Loughry. The latter was a daughter of James and Rebecca Loughry. The former was born in Huntingdon county. He died in 1852, in his sixty-first year; his first wife died in 1829; his second wife, Mary Loughry, died in 1856, in her sixty-ninth year. His children were: John, M. D., graduate of Jefferson College and of a Cincinnati medical college; James L., m. in 1846 to Julia A. Sutton, daughter of Peter and Nancy A. Sutton, nee Fisher; Rebecca, d., m. to Robert H. Stewart; David, d.; and Nancy, m. to Robert W. Allison. The Lewis homestead was surveyed in 1786, in pursuance of a warrant dated in 1786, issued to Samuel Findley. The patent bears the date of March 19, 1817, and was granted to Robert Findley for the heirs of Samuel Findley. James Lewis made the first improvement in 1815. He was an elder in the Presbyterian church for many years. James Lewis was the son of John and Nancy Lewis, nee David. The former was of Welsh descent, and came to this county about 1793 and first located in the Robinson settlement, near the present site of Jacksonville. His first permanent home was on what is now the J. J. Lewis farm, in Young township.

Adam Altimus, son of John and Margaret Altimus, nee Getz was born in Indiana county, in 1815. He resided near Homer, seven miles south of Indiana, for nine years, and then located on the place which he now occupies, upon the Indiana and Armstrong county line. Upon this property is situated a grist and saw mill. For thirteen years he was engaged in lumbering and on public works. He was married in 1843 to Annie, daughter of Daniel Schoch, of Monroe county. Their children were: Thomas J., m. to Esther A. Altimus; Adeline A., m. to Robert M. Cox; and Mary A., d.

William H. Repine, son of Jacob and Catharine Repine, nee Hoover, was born in 1833, in Indiana county. The former's parents located in the county at a very early date. Jacob's children were: Lavinia, m. to Thomas McGaughey; Maria, m. to Jacob Repine; Elizabeth, d., m. to David Conrad; Mary J.; Margaret, m. to John Altman; Israel, m. to Hettie Forth; Joseph C., m. to Amanda Wegley; and William H., m. in 1873 to Mary E., daughter of Christopher Shirley, of Indiana county. Our subject's children were Anniewilda, Jacob C., Christopher A. and David H. He served in company K, 14th Pennsylvania volunteers, for eighteen months. Israel and Joseph were soldiers in the same war. The former was a prisoner for one year. Our subject is residing on the farm where he was born. The tract was patented in 1771 to Ann Parks.

Daniel C. Davis was born on the farm now occupied by his son, E. M. Davis, South Mahoning township, in 1827, and was a son of Abram Davis, a native of Wales, and Lydia Thompson. The former was the son of Daniel and Mary Davis nee Jones, both natives of Wales. Their children were: Anna, d., m. to William Jones, d.; Joshua, d., m. to Anna Davis, d.; Lena, d., m. to Rev. John D. Thomas, d., Baptist; and Abram, d., m. to Lydia Thompson, d. Daniel Davis settled on the McClanahan tract, in what is now East Mahoning township, about 1800. Abram Davis' children were: James J., d., m. to Sarah Jones; Mary Ann, m. to James Hayes, d.; Lena, m. to Jacob Luckart, d.; William T., m. to Elizabeth Ansley; Rebecca, m. to Rev. A. Neff; Jane, d., m. to Joseph Marshall; Daniel C., m. to Eliza J. McKee; Agnes, d., m. to J. J. Neff; and George Miles, d., m. to Emeline McGaughey. D. C. was first lieutenant in company A, 2d battalion Pa. six months' volunteers. He served as postmaster of Davis for three years. His children were; Thompson McKee, m. to Floretta Ansley; Sabina E., d.; James M.; Thomas J.; Nancy, d.; Clark and Ida M.

Mrs. Eliza J. Davis, wife of D. C. Davis, was a daughter of Thompson McKee, who was a son of Hugh and Jane McKee nee Thompson. The former died in 1821, at the age of sixty. He was among the first settlers, locating in 1815, near the present site of Perrysville, Jefferson county. His interment was the first burial in the Punxsutawney cemetery. His children were: James, d., m.; Thompson, d., m. to Elizabeth Bell, d.; Susan, m. first to George Newcomb, d., and second to Thomas Hall, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Margaret Henderson, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Joseph Bell, d; William, m. first to Nancy D. Bell, d., and second to Mary Johnston; Nancy, d., m. to Thomas Saddler Thompson's children were: Eliza Jane, m. to Daniel C. Davis. Nancy, d., and Sarah, d.

RICHARD SHIELDS was born in 1816, and was a son of James and Margaret Shields nee Getty. His grandfather, John Shields settled in what is now Black-lick township, about 1800. He served in the war of 1812. His children were: William, d., m. Margaret Reed; John, d., m. to Elizabeth Speedy; Mary, d., m. to William McKee; Margaret, m. to James Speedy; and Joseph, d., m. to Belle McKnight. James Shield's children were: John, m. first to Susannah Lucas, and second to Isabella Wilson; James, m. to Marian Miller; William, m. to Elizabeth Johnston; Joseph, m. to Margaret Lewis; Harrison, m. to Mary Sutton; Isabella, m. to William Stewart; Mary, m. to Enoch Lewis; and Richard, m. to Nancy A. daughter of Joseph Diven. The latter's children were: Clark G., m. to Lydia Ann Henderson; James, m. to Catharine McFillen; Winslow, m. to Ellen Hilman; Elizabeth, m. to Franklin Lydeck; Harriet I.; William and Joseph. Clark, Joseph, and James were in the army during the late war.

M. N. MCLAUGHLIN, a son of William and Elizabeth McLaughlin nee McComb, was born in the county in 1842. The former was a son of James McLaughlin, an early settler. His children were: John, d.; James, d., m. to Margaret Speedy; David, d.; Eliza, d., m. to a Mr. Hill; Isabella, d.; Ann, m. to Jesse Marlin; and William, m. to Elizabeth McComb. William's children were: Isabella, m. to William Prathero; Harriet, A., m. to Milton Laughlin; James O., m. to Bella Craig; Mary; and M. N., m. to Margaretta Stewart. M. N. served in company F, 74th Pennsylvania volunteers for six months. Our subject's children were: Howard W., Thomas M., John A. L., Frank W; and Ida A.

CLARK G. SHIELDS, a son of Richard and Nancy A. Shields nee Diven, was born in the county in 1841. He worked in the oil regions for two or three years, and purchased the farm he now owns, in 1866. He married in 1873, Lydia A. Henderson, daughter of Jesse Henderson, of Armstrong county. They have two children, Nannie J. and Jesse R. Joseph, his brother, served in company A, 78th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers and died in the Louisville hospital, in the fall of 1863. James was in company I, 55th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, and Mr. Shields served in company A, 206th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers for one year and was discharged at the close of the war.

A. P. GEORGE was born in Armstrong county in 1830, and was a son of Peter and Rachel George. Their children were: David, d., Jeremiah, d.; James, d.; Johnson, m. to Margaret Shoemaker; Margaret, m. to Daniel Rupert; Emily, m. to Eaton; Miller, d.; Sarah A., m. to Absolom Woodward; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Gibson; Martha, m. to Jacob Eakman; Catharine, m. to David Shaffer; and A. P., m. to Catharine A., daughter of William Keener, in 1854. The latter have two children, Mary and Edwin. Our subject worked at the carpenter's trade for twenty-five years, and is now engaged in farming. He served for two years in company D, 102d regiment Pennsylvania volunteers in the late war. His brothers, David, Jeremiah and James were also in the army during the war. David was killed at the battle of Malvern Hill. Jeremiah was killed on a gunboat on James river, and James was taken prisoner in the Shenandoah valley, paroled, and died at home soon after.

JAMES M. MILLER, son of John and Keziah Miller nee Fulton, was born in 1836. Their children were: Rachel, m. to William McCrea, Robert, m. to Nancy Johnston; Alexander, d., m. to Charlotte Johnston; Ruth m. to William Hammond; Silas, m. to Mary Thomas, and James M., m. to Eliza, daughter of John Bell, of Indiana county, in 1871. He purchased the farm upon which he lives in 1866. Mr. Miller served in company K, 14th regiment Pennsylvania volunteer cavalry three years, was wounded and lay in Frederick City hospital three months. His brother Silas served in the same company and regiment.

JACOB SADLER was born in Westmoreland county in 1839, and was a son of Jacob and Catharine Sadler nee Hoffman. Their children were: Israel, m. to Margaret Miller; Catharine A., m. to John Fisher; Caroline, d., m. to Henry Miller, d.; Frances, m. to John N. Beirer; Mary A., d.; and Jacob, m. in 1868 to Elizabeth A., daughter of Solomon Peurod, of Armstrong county. The latter have one son, Archibald. Our subject was engaged in the oil business a number of years. He purchased the farm he now owns in 1872. He served in company G, 63d regiment Pennsylvania volunteers three years, and was wounded in front of Petersburg in June, 1864.

ALEXANDER K. STEWART was a son of William and Nancy Stewart nee Scott, and was born in 1818. His father settled in the county at an early day. Our subject married Rachel, daughter of John Harmon, in 1848. Their children were: Mary A., m. to Chambers Shannon; Robert S., m. to Catharine Anderson; Rachel A., m. to James Trusall; George C., Laura, John H., Merinda, Emma J., and Elizabeth, Mr. Stewart served in company A, 78th regiment Pa. volunteers in the late war. He settled on the farm he now owns in 1840.

WALLACE C. DIVEN was born in 1856, and was a son of Franklin and Mary A. Diven nee Allison. His grandparents, Joseph and Nancy Diven nee Hunter, settled in the county about 1817 or 1818, and their children were: Jesse, d., m. to Elizabeth McHenry; Nancy, m. to Richard Shields; Rachel M., d.; Elizabeth J., d.; Eliza J.; Franklin, d.; Louisa, m. to Jno. Rice; and Andrew H., m. to Sarah Todd. Our subject's brothers and sisters were: Isabella E., Geo. B, Nancy C., Mary J., and Robert J. He is now living with his mother on the old homestead on Plum creek.

JOHN A. STUCHEL was born in 1859, and was a son of James F. and Martha Stuchel nee Fry. He learned the carpenter's trade and pursues it for a business.

DAVID MARTIN, son of Thomas and Elizabeth Martin nee Fee, was born in 1835. His father settled in this county about 1817, at Buena Vista furnace, in Brush Valley township. His children were: Mary Elizabeth, m. to George McLaughlin; John F., d.; Nancy, d.; Thomas, m. to Ann Bryan, Samuel, and David. The latter married first Elizabeth McCreight, and second Nancy Johnston. He has two children, John J. and Sarah E. He served in company K, 14th regiment Pa. cavalry. His brothers, John F. and Thomas, were also in the late war. The former was captured at Jackson river and died in Andersonville prison. Mr. Martin learned the blacksmith's trade, and worked at it for eighteen years; he is now engaged in farming.

THOMAS H. FLEMMING was born in Armstrong county in 1846, and was a son of James and Elizabeth Flemming nee Shirley. He was married to Mary, daughter of John McAllister, of Westmoreland county. His children are: James A. and Mabel J. Our subject for eight years was engaged as a civil engineer in Venango and Clarion counties. John Black was the first settler upon the farm of Mr. Flemming.

G. C. FLEMMING was born in Armstrong county in 1842, and was a son of James and Elizabeth Flemming nee Shirley. He was married to Martha, daughter of David S. Black. His children were: Jacob E., Lottie E., Charles T., David E., Thomas H., Jesse and Louie E. He enlisted February 13, 1864, at Indidiana, under Lieutenant Duff, in the signal corps, and remained in the service until August 1865.

JACOB M. BLACK was born in 1836, in Indiana county, and was a son of David S. and Margaret Black nee Miller. The former located in the county in 1818. David S.'s children were: James W., m. first to Marion Stewart, d., and second to Mary Notley; Mary; Sarah, d., m. to William Uncapher; Alexander, m. to Ann E. Jasper; William, m. to Mary Myers; Charlotte, d., m. to G. W. King; Margaret J., m. to William Dunlap; David M., d.; Martha, m. to G. C. Fleming; Elizabeth, m. to Joseph Kerr; and Jacob M., m. to Maria King, daughter of G. W. King, of Clearfield county. Alexander served in the 3d Minnesota volunteers for one year. He is a carpenter by trade, and he purchased his farm in 1863.

R. C. MCGAUAGHEY was born in 1841, on the McGaughey homestead on Glade run, and was a son of Samuel and Sarah McGaughey nee Hall. The former was a son of John and Mary McGaughey nee Lattimer. (See sketch of John McGaughey, West Mahoning township). Samuel McGaughey's children were: Harriat, m. to And. Harman; Geo. W.; Lavinia C., m. to Henry White; Mary A.; Sarah E, m. to Sarah D. Bell; Rebecca; Thomas S.; and R. C., m. to Martha Harman, daughter of Philip Harman. George served in Co. A, 78th Pa. vols. for three years, was wounded at Stone river, taken prisoner, and soon after released. R. C. served in company F, 74th Pa. vols., and was discharged at the close of the war. Our subject's children were: Sarah I., John C., Andrew G., Lycurgus N., Samuel S., Lowry, Wilbur, and Maud B.

WILLIAM WALLACE, a son of Robert and Nancy A. Wallace, nee Wilson, was born in the Juniata valley, in 1807. His grandfather, James Wilson, was a prominent civil officer during the Revolutionary period. He was captured by the British in Philadelphia. The public documents were saved by the faithfulness of a female slave named Margaret. Robert Wallace's children were: Jane, m. to Evan Lewis; James, d., m. to Mary Cooper; Mary A., m. to James Woods; Robert, d., m. to Letitia Armitage; Margaretta, m. to John Allen; Joanna, d., m. to John Fields; Decatur D., d.; Nancy Catharine, m. to William Shaffer; and William, m. to Ellen Perry, daughter of James Perry, of Huntingdon county. Of our subject's nine children seven are living—Mary A., m. to Captain John Marlin; Decatur, d.; Perry, m to Emma Bowers; Wilson R.; Lewis; Calvin; Jane E.; Joanna; and Margaretta E., d. He settled in the county in 1839. Nancy A. Wilson was a schoolmate of Commodore Decatur, of Algiers fame.

WILLIAM SUTTON, son of Peter and Nancy Sutton, nee Fisher, was born in Indiana county, in 1834. His grandfather was Malachi Sutton, the pioneer. Our subject married Violet, daughter of Adam and Mary Maxwell, of Indiana county, in 1854. His children were: Mary C., d.; George A.; John E., m. to Mary Sloan; Luther S.; William A.; James E.; and Nettie V. He purchased the farm on which he now lives in 1865. His brothers, John, James, Johathan A. and Joseph, all served in the late war.

ELLIS WISSINGER, son of David and Mary Wissenger, nee Worts, was born in Cambria county, in 1828, and came to this county in 1848 or 1849. His brothers and sisters were: Jacob, m. to Jane Adams; Stephen, m. to Nancy Carney; Margaret; Esther, m. to Joseph Fry; Lewis. m. to Ellen Cutts; Susan, m. to John Johnson; John, m. to Maggie Dickenson; Andrew, m. to Ellen Dickson; and Catharine, m. to Abraham Orris; Ellis, m. first to Sarah Moore. They had five children: Robert, m. to Ida Moore; Ellen, m. to Ira Speedy; Bruce; McClellan; and Maggie, m. to Jacob Fisher. His second wife was Mary Moore, and they have four children: Harvey, Samuel, Laura and Minnet. Mr. Wissinger follows farming and stock-raising for a business. His brothers, Lewis and Andrew, served in company K, 14th regiment, Pennsylvania voluteer cavalry, and John was in the three months' service.

WILLIM B. FLEMMING was born in Indiana county, in 1822, and was a son of Samuel and Elizabeth Flemming, nee Flemming. He was married in 1856 to Margaret J. Brandon, daughter of Samuel Brandon, of Indiana. His children were: Silas M., Elizabeth, Almiretta, David E., Edward J., Sarah and Hattie A. For twelve years he was engaged in constructing public works. He located in 1852 on his present farm, where he raises and deals in fine stock.

J. S. FLEMMING was born in Armstrong county, in 1834, and was a son of James and Elizabeth Flemming, nee Shirley. He was married in 1859 to Angeline Mahan, daughter of Patrick and Nancy Mahan. His children were Kate I., J. Margery, Maud, Philip H. Sheridan and Edith, d. James Flemming settled in the county in 1849. Our subject has been a carpenter since 1853. He served in company K, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years. He was wounded at the battle of Cedar creek, and was discharged on account of disability. Samuel served in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years.

JOSEPH S. FRY, son of George and Catharine Fry nee Fisher, was born in Somerset county in 1839. His parents settled in this county in 1841, and their children were: Jacob, m. to Margaret Weaver; Eliza, A., m. to A. C. Patterson; Elovia, m. to Brice Henderson; Lucinda, d.; Nancy J., d., and Joseph S., m. to Hettie, daughter of Ellis Missinger, in 1865. Joseph S. has seven children: Thompson K., Frank C., Nancy M., Margaret C., Maria J., George, and Marlin. Mr. Fry is engaged in farming. He was in company A, 135th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months, and re-enlisted in 1864 in the 14th regiment Pennsylvania volunteer cavalry, serving till the close of the war.

JACOB FRY, a son of George and Catharine Fry, nee Fisher, was born in 1841. He was married in 1867 to Margaret, daughter of John Weaver, of Armstrong county. His children were: Harriet Lucetta, James Howard, Harvey Linton, John Elmer, Minnie Bell, Catharine May, and Jessie Wilson. He served in company A, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months, and re-enlisted in the 14th Pennsylvania cavalry, serving till the end of the war. He was wounded while on a scout with his regiment, and for six months was confined to the hospital at Baltimore.

JAMES BLACK was born in 1815, and was a son of Alexander and Margaret Black nee Miller. The latter settled in the county in 1838, and was in the war of 1812. Mr. Black was raised on a farm, and has always followed it for a vocation.

J. S. HARMAN was born in Armstrong county in 1835, and was a son of Peter and Penina Harman nee Green. Peter's children were: Marian, m. to Archibald Morrison; Catharine, m. to David Potts; Philip, m. to Elizabeth White; Esther, m. to James Kelly; George, m. to Elizabeth Anthony; Clark, m. to Elizabeth Fisher; Nancy J., d.; Andrew C.; Martha, d.; and J. S., m. to Mary E., daughter of Leonard White. Philip served in company A, 78th Pa. volunteers for three years. He was a prisoner at Belle Isle, Andersonville and Florence for fifteen months. J. S. served in company E, 148th Pa. volunteers for three years. He was a prisoner in Andersonville and Florence for six months. J. S.'s children were: P. H. W., D. C. P., Elizabeth P., and Jacob L.

ANDREW GIBSON was born in Jefferson county in 1842, and was a son of Andrew and Jane Gibson nee McSparan. (See sketch of John F. Gibson, Green township.) Our subject was married in 1866 to Mary J. Swan, daughter of James Swan. Their children were: Clara M., John F., and Mary B. He enlisted in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers in March, 1864, and served till the end of the war, being discharged at Nashville, Tennessee.

MATTHEW LONG, son of Thomas and Esther Long nee Wilson, was born in 1820. His father settled in the county in 1817, and his children were: William, m. to Martha Mahon; Matilda, Wilson, d., m. to Nancy Lebring; Mary, m. first to Robert Barnwell, and second to David Hollis; Rebecca, m. to Thomas Dixon, and Matthew, m. to Rebecca Millen. The latter had seven children: Ellen A., Isabella, Sarah A., Mary J., William W., Lizzie T. and James. Mr. Long purchased the farm he now owns from John, son of Philip Pruner, the first settler on the tract.

THOMAS STUCHEL, son of Christopher and Elizabeth Stuchel nee Lydick, was born in Indiana county in 1810. His father settled in the county at an early period. Our subject was married in 1841 to Margaret, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Kunkle, of Westmoreland county, Pa. They have reared a family of fourteen children: Henry, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Alex. Ray; Christopher, d.; Barbara A., d.; Michael, d.; John C.; Simon S.; Margaret J.; Susanna M., m. to Thos. Johnston; Anna E., Thomas C., Lotta A., Ashbel A., and Mary B. Henry served in company B, 111th regiment Pa. volunteers, and was killed at South Mountain in 1862.

ADAM CARNAHAN was born in Westmoreland county, in 1823, and was a son of Matthew and Lillie Carnahan nee Laughlin. The latter settled in this county in 1838, and his children were: Elizabeth, m. to William Baird; David, m. to Isabella Fitzgerald; John, m. to Jesse Mahan; Sarah, m. to James Getty; Mary, m. to Israel Gibson; William, d., m. to Rebecca Gilbraith; Jas. and Adam. Adam was married to Elizabeth Kunkle, and their children were: James C., m. to Melissa McGeary; Michael L., m. to Nannie Stuchel; Matthew, m. to Annie Gibson Innes; George B. Mc., John. Lealie, Madison, Robert D., William F., and Lottie M. Our subject's brothers, James and John, were in the army during the late war. The former died near Murfreesboro' Tenn. Mr. Carnahan formerly dealt extensively in agricultural implements, but is now engaged in farming.

JOHN BOTHEL was born in Indiana county in 1820, and was a son of John and Mary Bothel nee McCrea. His grandfather, David Bothel, settled in what is now Indiana county about 1790. His children were: John, d., m. to Mary McCrea; Matthew, d., m. to Ann Bran; James, d., m. first to Mattie Bran, and second to a Mrs. Roof; Geo., m. to Nancy Johnston; Campbell, m. to Susan Row; David, m. to Mrs. McWilliams; Jane, d.; Mary, m. to John Cowan; and Elizabeth. John was in the war of 1812. His children were: David, m. to Rachel Fe[illegible], Margaret, m. to Andrew Farren; Elizabeth; James, m. to Mrs. Jane Dickson, Sam'l, m. to Margaret Ray, Mary and John.

The latter was married to Sarah Dick in 1846. Their children were: Mary, m. to William H. Dixon; John McC., m. to Rebecca Trimble; Thomas, James, m. to Clara McDonald; Laura J., m. to Theodore Stuchel; Sarah R. and Daniel P. Our subject's parents were married in 1812 and their descendants number eighty, all living but five. His brothers, Samuel and James, served in the late war. He was in company F, 206th regiment Penna. volunteers. Mr. Bothel taught school many years, but is now engaged in farming, near Newville.

Samuel Wilcox, son of Daniel and Nancy Wilcox nee Rarigh, was born in Armstrong county, in 1843. He married Mary M. Shoemaker in 1866, and came to Indiana county in 1868. They have four children: Trusey M., Lawrence B., Delilah E., and Milton B. Mr. Wilcox purchased the farm he now owns in 1868.

John C. Kunkle, son of Michael and Elizabeth Kunkle nee Anderson, was born in 1848. His father settled in the county in 1825. Their children were: Margaret, m. to Thomas Stuchel; Elizabeth, m. to Adam Carnahan; Christina, m. to Simon Fisher; Lavinia, d., m. to John Patterson; Susannah, m. to William McIntire; Mary, m. to William L. Johnston; Henry, m. to Nancy Steer; Michael, m. to Amanda Fry; Barbara, d.; and John C. The latter was married to Sarah E. Dixon in 1875. They have two children, Jesse M. and Charles L. He is living on the farm where he was born. Indian graves are found on his place.

John Kelly was born in Allegheny county in 1801, and was a son of John and Mary Kelly nee Johnston. The latter's children were: John, m. to Sarah Homer; Thomas, d., m. to Catharine Johnston; William, d., m. to Isabella Moore; Rebecca, d.; Archibald, d., m. to Elizabeth Moore; Benjamin, d., m. to Elizabeth Morrow; and John. The latter was married in 1834 to Maria, daughter of Jas. Speedy, of Indiana county. Their children were: James, m. to Mary R. Johnston; Mary, m. to William Scott; Isabella, m. to William Devinny, and William. Mr. Kelley purchased, in 1829, the farm he now owns, while it was yet a forest. On his property is a valuable vein of coal. His son James was in the service, in the 14th regiment Pa. vol. cavalry.

Jacob Potts, a son of Jacob and Mary M. Potts nee Williams, was born in Westmoreland county in 1825. His father settled in the county in 1835, and his children were: George, d., m. to Margaret J. Carr; Thomas, m. to Susannah Brown; David S., m. to Catharine Harman; Mary A., m. to William F. Alshouse; Christena, d., and Jacob. The latter married Elizabeth, daughter of Philip Harman, in 1848. Their children are: Eli, d.; Philip H., d.; John J.; George I.; William, Catharine, Christena, Sarah, and Hannah E. His farm is located on Sugar run, and on the property is a saw mill, having a large business.

Jacob Frick, son of David and Elizabeth Frick nee Smith, was born in Armstrong county, November 25, 1830. He settled in Indiana county, in 1865. He was married in 1856 to Sarah, daughter of John Shoup, of Armstrong county. She was born July 10, 1839. His children were: Diploma, d., b. November 18, 1858; Daniel, b. February 19, 1861; Babe, d. at birth on April 5, 1863; Charlotte A., b. October 13, 1865; William A., b. September 24, 1867; Harry W., b. October 31, 1875; John L., b. July 18, 1878; and Rebecca M., b. April 16, 1880. He was a carpenter by trade. He located in 1865 upon his present farm on Redding's run.

Jacob Fisher, son of John and Elizabeth Fisher nee Wirtz, was born in Somerset county, in 1824. His father settled in the county about 1839, and his children were: Martin, d., m. to Aldah Clark; William, d., m. to Caroline Boyer; Daniel, m. to Elizabeth Boyer; Catharine, m. to George Fry; Mary, m. first to Samuel Murphy, and second to John Christ; Sarah, m. to William Clark; Elizabeth, d., m. to Maury Morrison; Susannah, m. to Joseph Peterson, and Jacob. The latter married Annie, daughter of Jacob Sadler, of Armstrong county, in 1843. Their children are: Nancy J., d.; James, d.; William, d.; Jacob, m. to Maggie Wissinger; Morrison, Joseph, Elizabeth, Hiram, Sutton, Frank, and Ida. William served in the late war.

William D. Black, a son of David P. and Margaret Black nee Miller, was born in 1831. His father settled in the county about 1826, and his children were: James W., m. first to Mary A. Stewart, and second to Mary Notley; Mary; Sarah, m. to William Uncapher; Alexander, m. to Elizabeth Jasper; Charlotte, d., m. to George W. King; Jacob, m. to Maria King; Jane, m. to William Dunlap; Martha, m. to Gilbert C. Fleming; David M., d.; Elizabeth, m. to Joseph Kerr; and William D., who married Mary E. daughter of John A. Myers, of Minnesota, in 1877. They have four children, Nora F., d.; John Elmer, d.; Flora E., and Cordelia M. His brother, Alexander, served in the late war in a Minnesota regiment.

David Marlin was born in the county in 1838, and was a son of Jesse and Ann Marlin nee McLaughlin. He married Clara J., daughter of Jacob Anthony, in 1839, and is living on the farm where he was born.

Alexander M. McCreery, a son of William and Morgan McCreery nee McLain, was born in 1812, in Indiana county. (See McCreery notes, East Mahoning township.) He was married in 1841 to Hannah M. Wynkoop, daughter of David Wynkoop, of Indiana county. His children were: Margaret J., m. to William Morrow; William M., d.; Philena; Elizabeth; David, d.; John T., m. to Rebecca Stewart; Matthew; Maria; and Julia T. William M. served in company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers and died at Fairfax court house. There was an old deer lick on Mr. McCreery's farm, known among the pioneer hunters as Scaffold lick.

James Stewart, is a son of Michael and Jane Stewart nee Shields, and was born in Indiana county, in 1814. His grandparents, James and Mary Stewart nee McAnulty, settled in the county at a very early day. Their children were: Annie, d., m. to John Trimble; Mary, d., m. to John Thompson; Sarah, d.; Nancy, d., m. to James Beatty; Isabell, d., m. to John Beatty; Jane, d.; Rebecca, m. to C. Campbell; and Michael. The latter married Jane Stewart, and their children were: Maria, d.; John, m. to Lydia Robertson; Sarah, d.; William, d., m. to Isabella Shields; Julia A., Joseph and James. James worked at the blacksmith trade for a number of years. He is now engaged in farming.

The Lytle Steam Saw Mill is situated on Stewart's run, and was erected in 1874, by R. J. Lytle & Brothers. It is a two story building, 16x50, with an addition twenty feet square. The engine is rated twenty horse-power, and was built by J. A. Anderson, of Pittsburgh. Three men are employed, and the maximum product is three thousand feet of boards per day.

R. J. Lytle was born in 1844, in Armstrong county, and was a son of John and Lavina Lytle nee Reed, who located on their present farm in 1860. Their children were: Catharine, m. to Ferguson Speedy; R. J., m. to Sarah Flemming; J. P., m. to Deborah Reeder; J. R.; Martha; and Jane. R. J. was in company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry, for two years, ten and a half months. His children were: Frank Elmer, and Alberta Jen.

Andrew Stuchel was born in 1835, upon the farm in this township, which he now occupies, and was a son of Jacob and Ellen Stuchel nee Fairman. The latter's parents were among the early settlers in this section. The tradition runs, "the Indians watched them as they built their first lone log cabin." Jacob's children were: James F., m. to Martha J. Fry, d.; Adaline, d.; and Andrew, m. in 1864 to Mattie Rhea. Jacob was born in 1758, and died in 1846. His wife was born in 1785, and died in 1878. He was the son of Abraham and Barbara Stuchel nee Lydick. The former's father was the first settler of the family in the county. Our subject's children were: William Elmer Ellsworth, Anna Bella Frances, James Franklin McChesney, John Andrew Virtue, Maggie Lulu Ellen, and Mattie Amanda Adaline.

James McCarroll was born in Westmoreland county in 1809, and was a son of James and Eleanor Carroll nee Carnahan. He was married in 1832 to Nancy, daughter of William Moorhead, of Westmoreland county. His children are: Jane M., m. to James McCreight, William, m. to Jane Churchill, Eliza, M. m. to Jamison McCreight, Robert, m. to Rosanna Flemming; James J., d., m. to Mary J. Hill; Sarah E., Robert Sturgeon, Samuel, d.; Matthew, m. to Mrs. Mary J. Lohman nee Adams, Emma F. and Joanna m. to T. J. McCoy. Our subject's father was in the war of 1812, under General Harrison, and helped to build Fort Meigs. His sons, James J. and Robert served in the late war. The former was in company A, 78th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers and was killed at the battle of Stone River. The latter was in company E, 11th regiment Pennsylvania reserve corps for three years. Mr. Carroll worked at the salt works on the Kiskeminetas river about fifteen years. He purchased the property upon which he now lives in 1837, when it was all a wilderness, moved to it in 1848, built his cabin and commenced to clear his land.

JOSEPH CRIBBS, son of George and Rebecca Cribbs nee Repine, was born in 1808. His grandparents settled in what is now Indiana county at an early period. Their children were: Sarah, m. to William Lucas; Rebecca A., William M., m. to Lizzie M. Beatty; George H., m. to Clarrissa Beatty; James M., d.; Frances R., d.; Emma A., m. to John A. Jamison; Mertilla C., m. to W. S. Kinter; Joseph A., m. to Ella Wilson; Samuel E., Foster A. and Laura B. William and George served in the late war. Mr. Cribbs has recently sold his farm and is now living retired.

HENRY S. MILLER, son of Barnabas and Margaret Miller nee Yount, was born August 25th, 1856. His grandparents settled in this county in 1830, and their children were: Margaret, d., m. to Henry Fraley; Susannah, m. to William Johnston; Betsey, d., m. to John Russell; Mary, d.; Sarah, d., m. to George Mitchell; Ann, m. to John Newbrant, Barnabas, m. to Margaret Yount; Moses, m. to Eliza Clark; Henry, m. first to Caroline Sadler, and second to Margaret Hoffman; William, m. to Susan Fisher; and Lavina, m. to John Akey. Moses served in company K, 14th regiment Pennsylvania volunteer cavalry for three years. The children of Barnabas and Margaret Miller were: Jonathan, d.; Margaret, m. to Israel Sadler; William, d.; Sarah, m. to Robert H. Dailey; John, d., m. to Jane Cochran; Susannah, m. to Samuel Calhoun; Moses B., m. to Rachel Manges; Sloan R., d., m. to Julia Bark; and Henry S., who was m. to Abbie, daughter of Bryan McSwiney, in 1876. They have two children, Bryan and Ida. Henry learned the carpenter's trade and worked at it some years, but is at present engaged in a general mercantile trade at Advance.

A. J. HARMAN was born in Westmoreland county, in 1832, and a son of John and Polly Harman nee Campbell. The former came to Washington township in 1834, but his parents (Andrew and Catharine Harman nee Sandles) had located in the county four years prior. The latter's children were: Philip, d., m. to Christina Shaffer; Frederick, d., m. to Sallie Weaver; Peter, d., m. to Penina Green; Jacob, m. to Polly Cochran; Elizabeth, m. to Solomon Shaup; John, d., m. to Mary Campbell; Babara, d., m. to John Stall. John's children were: John C.; Solomon, m. to Leah Hoover; Catharine, m. to T. M. Waddle; Mary, m. to F. C. Adams; Rachel, m. to A. K. Stewart; Elizabeth, d., m. to J. W. Little; A. J., m. in 1860, to Hannah M., daughter of George Campbell, of Armstrong county. Of our subject's nine children, only the following are living: Polly C., Anna Mary and James Harvey, twins; and Samuel B. He served in company A, 78th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers for eighteen months. He has been connected with grist mills since twenty-one years of age, and is now the miller of the Captain Marlin mill.

B. F. MCCREIGHT, son of Job and Eliza McCreight nee Leach, was born in 1845. His parents located in the county about 1841, and their children were as follows: Harrison W., m. to Elizabeth Walker; James; Clarence, d.; Job, m. to Alice Henry; Ann, m. to William Borland; Elizabeth, d.; and Cornelia, d. Our subject was married in 1875, to Susan Wood, of Jefferson county, Pennsylvania. They have one child, Clara A. His brother Harrison, served in the 135th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, and he was in company K, 14th regiment Pa. vol. cavalry eighteen months. He learned the stone mason's trade, and has worked in the business since 1868.

JOSEPH M. JOHNSON, son of James and Barbara Johnson, was born in Armstrong county, in 1838. He married Martha J. Flemming, daughter of John Flemming. They have five children; James L., Nancy N., John F., Frank A. and Joseph H. He worked in the oil works in Venango county, Pennsylvania, for four years, and purchased the farm upon which he lives in 1866. He was in company A, 135th regiment Pa. vol., eight months, and was discharged at Belle Plain, Va., on account of disability.

JOHN CLOWES, son of Isaac and Anna Clowes nee Conner, was born in Sussex county, Delaware, January 15, 1798. He came to Indiana county about 1820, and settled in Washington township, on the place now owned by William Sutton. He married Sarah, daughter of Isaac Hicks, in 1829. They reared a family of seven children; Hannah, m. to Wm. Jamison; Isaac, m. first to Martha Patterson, and second to Sarah Campbell; Jacob, m. to Mary Reamer; John, m. first to Martha Patterson, and second to unknown; David, m. to Catharine Jones; Sarah, m. to Archibald Muckatine; and Elsie, m. to Thomas Thompson. He learned the woolen manufacturing business, and worked at that trade in his native town, and for some time after he came to this county. In 1836, he purchased the property upon which he now lives, with his sons, at the advanced age of eighty-two years, and in the enjoyment of comfortable health. His father served in the war of 1812, and his son David in the late war.

ROBERT SPENCE, son of James and Martha Spence nee Rutherford, was born June 21, 1817. His grandparents, James and Martha Spence nee Bell, settled in what is now Indiana Co. in 1795, on the place now owned by Isaac Clowes. Their children were: George, d., m. to Mary Rutherford; William, d., m. to Polly Black; James, d., m. to Martha Rutherford; Robert, d., m. to Jane Ray; John, m. first to Eliza Fulton, and second to Martha J. Steffy; Jane, d., m. to Thomas Swan; Margaret, m. to John Rutherford, and Annie, m. to Samuel Brandon. Our subject's brothers and sisters were: Samuel, m. to Eliza Downey; Sarah, m. to William Miller; and Elizabeth, m. to Thompson Kelley. Robert was married first to Matilda Fairman, by whom he had two children: Adaline, m. to Theodore Ballentine; and Martha E., m. to Samuel Fleuer. His second wife was Mary A. Fairman, and their children were: Melinda, d.; Perina C., William J., Harvey, Anna, d.; McChesney R., Maggie, d.; Samuel T., David, d.; Ina S., and Lawrence B. Mr. Spence is living on the farm where he was born, and it may be properly called "Fairview."

H. B. MILLER, son of Henry and Mary Miller nee Blakeney, was born in 1824. His grandparents settled in the county at an early day. Their children were: John, d., m. to Keziah Fulton; James, m. to Mary McKisson; Robert, m. to Rachel Henry; Nathaniel, m. to Jane McAdoo; Molly, d., m. to Wm. Smith, and Martha, m. to Jas. McCollum. His brothers and sisters were: Robert, m. to Isabella Cameron; Jas., m. to Elizabeth Elrick; John, d., m. to Elizabeth Forrester; Martha J., m. to John Weamer; Mary A., d., m. to James Mitchell, and Rachel, d. He was married to Paulina Kelley, by whom he had six children, three of whom are living: Hazard K., Edith, and Jessie F. His second wife was Elizabeth Stuchel, and they have one child, John C. Mr. Miller engaged in the mercantile business at Plumville in 1862. He is now located at Willet, where he has a general store.

D. L. TROUT, son of Daniel and Ann Trout nee Livingston, was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., in 1832. His grandfather came from Virginia and settled in Westmoreland county in 1806. Mr. Trout settled in Indiana county in 1867. He married Eliza Jane, daughter of John Brewer, of Westmoreland county, in 1858. He learned the trade of a stone mason, and worked at it for fourteen years. He purchased the farm he now owns in 1866. Mr. Trout was elected justice of the peace in 1876, and still holds that office.

JAMES JOHNSTON, son of John and Jane Johnston nee McCreight, was born in Armstrong township, November 27, 1804. His grandparents, William and Mollie Johnston nee Moore, settled in what is now Indiana county at a very early day. Their children were: Job, d.; William, m. to Mary Templeton; and John, m. to Jane McCreight. John volunteered in the war of 1812, but it closed before he saw any active service. The brothers and sisters of James were: William, m. to Sallie Johnston; John, d., m. to Lydia Akey; Andrew, m. to Rebecca Mahew; Sarah, d., m. to James Mitchell; Mary, m. to Daniel S. Yeamens; Jane, m. to Andrew S. McCreight; Nancy, m. to Hugh Sharp; and Elizabeth, d. James was married to Rebecca, daughter of Joseph McCracken in 1834. His children were: John; Jane, d.; Elizabeth, m. to William Shields; Joseph M., m. to Martha Flemming; William L., m. to Mary Kunkle; Alexander, m. to Eliza Walters; Isabella, m. to Benj. Johnston, and James. His sons Joseph and William L. served in the late war.

JAMES ADAMS, son of Edward and Mary Adams nee Carney, was born in Indiana county, in 1828. The children of his parents were as follows: Mary, m. to Jacob Wissinger; Agnes, m. to John Cunningham; Joseph, d., m. to Catharine Walters; Sarah A., m. to W. Stockdale; Caroline, m. to James Rankin; Ellen, m. to John Dick; George, m, to Zebiah Steer; and Hannah, m. to Milton Fairman. Joseph served in the late war, and was killed at Petersburg. George served three years in the 78th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, and was badly wounded in Georgia while on special duty with a train of convalescents. Our subject was married to Martha Baldwin, and their children were: Elizabeth; Lena, m. to Robt. Johnston; Edward, Joseph and William. He learned the shoemaker's trade and worked at it for fifteen years. He purchased the farm upon which he now lives, in 1861. He owns one hundred acres of good land. In digging a well some four years ago, at a depth of twenty-seven feet was found a substance that had the appearance of a human jawbone petrified. On the farm are found Indian relics. On this place was one of the first carding mills in the county—it was run by oxen.

William L. Johnston, son of James and Barbara Johnston nee McCracken, was born in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, in 1843. He learned the carpenters' trade and worked at the business for a number of years. He enlisted in company A, 135th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers—served nine months, and was discharged at Harrisburg, Pa. After his return, he worked at his trade for sometime. He purchased the farm upon which he now lives in 1873, and has, since that time, been engaged in farming. He married Mary Jane, daughter of Michael Kunkle of Indiana county. They have a family of four children—Michael A., Simon E., Jennie E. and Margaret A.

J. M. Balentine, son of George and Letitia Balentine nee Marlin, was born in 1816. He married Lucinda, daughter of Daniel Anderson, of Cambria county, in 1842. They have two children: Thos. J., m. to Adaline Spence; and Melinda J., m. to Albert Sloan, of Armstrong, county. Our subject learned the millwright trade and was thus employed for a number of years. He is now engaged in farming.

Noah Boyer, son of Jacob and Margaret Boyer nee Lohr, was born in Armstrong county, in 1846. He learned the carpenters' trade, and came to Indiana county, in 1866. He has worked at his trade for the most of the time in Washington township. In 1879, he entered into partnership with H. S. Miller, at Advance, and is engaged in a general mercantile trade.

Joseph Cummins, son of David and Margaret Cummins nee McKnight, was born in the house in which he now lives, in 1833. His father settled in the county in 1817, and reared a family of five children—Isabella, d.; Jane, d., m. to Wm. Flemming; Margaret, d.; William, and Joseph. Our subject was married to Margaret, daughter of Joseph Shields, of Indiana county, in 1859. They have two children, Eleanor D. and Maggie B. Mr. Cummins was educated at the common schools and at Jacksonville Academy. The tract he owns was surveyed in 1786 and contains some three hundred acres. On this farm was an Indian encampment, and Indian relics such as arrow-heads, pipes, pottery, &c., are very often found. There are also several Indian graves on his property. William, brother of Joseph, served in company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps. Joseph Shields, father of Mrs. Cummins served in the war of 1812.

James Millen, son of James and Mary A. Millen nee Cunningham, was born February 1st, 1832. He was married in 1860 to Margaret, daughter of Philip Uncapher. They have six children: Lolie, d.; Clara, m.; Lincoln H., Merry L., Theo. E. and Mary L. Our subject was in company F, 57th Pennsylvania volunteers. He commenced the study of dentistry at thirty-two years of age with Dr. J. R. Pierce, of Livermore, Westmoreland county, and engaged in practice at Willet, Washington township in 1865.

James E. Dickson was born in 1824, on the present J. Sherfey farm, near Gettysburg, Adams county, Pa. A fierce battle was fought in a peach orchard, on this place, during the late struggle. He was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Dickson nee Williams, who migrated to Indiana county in 1829. Their children were: James, d., m. to James Getty; Ruth, m. to Samuel Patterson; Eliza P., d., m. to John Wilson; Mary A., d., m. to John Wilson; Sarah, m. to John Bothel; Thomas, M., d., m. to Rebecca Long; John G., d., m. to Mary J. Campbell; and James E., m. first to Eliza J. Robinson, d., and second to Lizzie Mahon. The children by the first wife were John R. and Lizzie A. He served in company A, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers. about six months. For ten years he was engaged in the mercantile business in Advance, and has since been employed in farming. The application on this tract bears the date of July, 1769, and was issued to Ann Jamison, who deeded it, Nov. 8th, 1773, to James Noble. He, Nov. 16th, 1779, assigns to John Smith, who, March 3d, 1785, releases to James Patterson, to whom a warrant of acceptance was issued in the same year.

Alexander Ray was born on the farm now owned by William Ewing, White township, in 1824, and was a son of Hugh and Maria Ray nee Rankin. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812. His children were: Rebecca; Martha, d.; Jane, d.; Margaret, d.; Alexander, m. to Nancy J. Fairman; John, m. to Jane Munshower; and Maria A. Alexander's only child is Harry Ray.

C. S. McCrea, M. D., was born in Saltsburg in 1847, and was a son of Thompson and Ann McCrea nee McKesson. He was educated at the Dayton Union Academy, graduating therefrom in 1870. He read medicine with Dr. James McMullen, of Mechanicsburg, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College in the spring of 1875. He located at Newville, his present home, immediately after graduation. He was married in 1875 to Matilda, daughter of Isaac Couch. His children were: Ellerslie D., d., and Harry. At the age of fourteen, he entered the army as a drummer of company F, 55th Pa. vols., and served three years and eleven months. During this time he was never sick or disabled.

Alexander St. Clair was born in 1844, on the farm now occupied by George Coltebaugh, in White township, and was a son of Samuel and Catherine St. Clair nee Miller, daughter of James Miller. Alexander was married in 1867 to Sarah, daughter of Judge Watt. Their children were: William W., Chas. C., and Anna, d. Our subject was in company D, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months; he has been the postmaster of Creekside for four years.

William A. Stuchell was born in 1848, on a farm now occupied by Hugh Miller, South Mahoning township, and was a son of Christopher and Nancy Stuchell nee Mahan. The former was a son of John and Rebecca Stuchell nee Mahon. (See sketch of C. Stuchell, East Mahoning township). The latter's children were: John, m. first to Louisa Eyler, d., and second to Mrs. Kells; Christopher, d., m. to Nancy Mahan; Ella, d., m. to William Neal; Robert, m. to Hannah Thompson; Jesse, d., m. to Elizabeth Rankin, who subsequently was m. to H. B. Miller; William, m. to Lucinda Potts; David, m. to Margaret Marshall, and Joseph. John served in the 56th Illinois, and was wounded. William served in company G, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers, and was discharged for disability. Christopher served also in company G, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers, for one year, and died of disease at Hampton hospital, Virginia. Christopher's children were: William A., m. to Ida May Weamer; Angeline, m. to J. M. Pierce; John C., m. to Mary Morrison; Matthias R., d. in the Dayton Soldiers' Orphan School; Joseph H., and Nancy J., m. to L. M. Carnahan. Lee Clare, the child of our subject, died in infancy. William A. served in company G, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers, from March 4, 1865, to May 23, 1865. Henry Livengood and James Cessna were also from the township in the same company. They were not credited to Indiana county, but their names appear from Lawrence county.

Rev. Andrew Virtue was born in 1826 in county Tyrone, Ireland, and was a son of James and Isabella Virtue nee Woods, who settled in Indiana county in 1840. Our subject entered the Indiana Academy in March, 1843, and completed preparatory course in Blairsville in November, 1845; he graduated at Jefferson College in June, 1848, and at Western Theological Seminary in May, 1851. For two years he labored as an evangelist in Washington county, and then was settled as a pastor in Allegheny county. In January, 1859, he took charge of a church at Apple creek, Ohio, and in 1867, was located in Emlenton, Venango county. He removed from the latter church to the Centre Presbyterian Church of Newville in 1872.

Philip B. Kunkle, son of Jacob and Elizabeth Kunkle nee Walter, was born in 1842. His brothers and sisters were: Michael, m. to Jane Stump; Catharine, m. to James Cochran; Barbara, d., m. to Orin Brown; Margaret, m. to David Fairman; Geo., m. to Susannah Little; and Walter, m. to Mary E. McGeary. Philip B. married Sarah M., daughter of John H. McKean, in 1868. Their children are as follows: Lila M., Mary E., Angie B. and Harry C. Mr. Kunkle is living on the farm where he was born.

Alexander M. Speedy, son of James Speedy, who was twice married—first to a Shields, and second to Martha Foster—was born in 1836. His grandfather was one of the early settlers in the county. James Speedy's children were: Maria, m. to John Kelly; Jane; Isabella, m. to George Johnston; Margaret, d.; Martha; Sarah, m. to Hamilton Beatty; and Alexander M., m. in 1866, to Catharine, daughter of Bryan McSwiney. Alexander M.'s children are: James, Mary, Martha, Sarah and Nettie. He served in company K, 14th Pennsylvania volunteer cavalry in the late war—is now living on the old homestead upon which he was born.

CENTRE TOWNSHIP

Was formed from Armstrong, in 1807, and was thus named from its position. In the same year with Armstrong and Washington townships, it was organized into a separate election district, and their first voting place was at the house of Peter Sutton, in the town of Indiana.

THE FIRST SCHOOL-HOUSE

On the present W. H. McMullen farm, was erected in 1798 or 1799. This was a rude log building, twenty by twenty-five feet in dimensions, and for the first few years had no floor. The windows were of greased paper, and a huge chimney occupied one end of the house. Its round log, chinked, mud-daubed sides and clap-board roof, was a curiosity, even in the days of cabins.

The first teacher was John Mark from 1798 or 1799 to 1801. The next was James M. Kelly, afterwards the noted lawyer, in 1802 or '3, and three other early teachers were; William Fulton, William Flemming and Thomas McClanahan.

JAMES MITCHELL was born October 31st, 1798, on the farm now occupied by him, and was a son of James and Margaret Mitchell nee Montgomery. the latter was a daughter of Andrew Montgomery, of York county. She died in 1856 at the age of eighty-six. In regard to James Mitchell, sr., we extract the following from the Indiana Register of 1859: "James Mitchell went from Cumberland county to the Youghiogheny river in the fall of 1776. There he became acquainted with Samuel Dickson, and accompanied him to the defense of Hannastown. In 1788 he located on Black-lick, in this county, on the tract of land owned at present by his two sons William and James Mitchell, where he died in September, 1832. He was born in Philadelphia, in 1755. He began a clearing and put up a cabin house and barn, and after living alone nearly two years got married and subsequently erected the buildings that are still standing. He often served as a scout during the border troubles, and in the spring of 1791, went with his family to 'Allison's fort,' at Homer. After the alarm had subsided, he returned to his farm, and was not afterward molested by the Indians." The Mitchell tract of two hundred and sixty-five acres was surveyed to Peter Wallace, May 31st, 1787. James Mitchell, sr.'s, children were: David, d.; William, d.; Robert, d., m. to Elizabeth Lowry; James, Jane, Andrew, d.; and Isabella, d. Robert Mitchell's children were: James, d., and Alexander L., m. to Sarah McCormick. Alexander L.'s children were: Margaret Jane, Sarah Finetta, and Mary Elizabeth.

SAMUEL DICKSON (or DIXON) was born in 1812, on the farm now owned by J. M. Guthrie, White township, and was a son of Andrew (known as "Sawyer Andy") and Hannah Dickson nee White, who were married Nov. 25th, 1807. Andrew was a son of Samuel Dickson, the pioneer. (See sketch of Gillis M. Doty, Black-lick township.) Andrew located on the tract of which the Guthrie and Dixon farms are a part, in 1807. He died in 1856, at the age of seventy-four; his wife died in 1839. Their children were: Agnes, d., m. to Robert T. Robinson, d.; Jane, McKee, d.; and Samuel, m. to Martha McConaughey. The latter's children were: Margaret J., d.; James S.; Hannah, d.; Anna Bell, m. to David Stephens; Martha S., Andrew, d.; and Samuel.

JAMES SMITH was born on the John Clauson (cash John) farm, Centre township, in 1787, and was a son of William and Mary Smith, nee Hart, a daughter of Roger and Martha Hart. William Smith came to what is now Indiana county, a few years prior to or during the progress of the Revolutionary war. He married in what is now Westmoreland county, Mary Hart, who died in 1836, at the age of eighty-eight. He died in 1822, seventy-seven years old. Their children were: Anna, d., m. to James Kennon, d.; Mary, d., m. to William Lowry, d.; Martha, d., m. to David Fleming, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Andrew Gibson, d.; William, d., m. to Anna Reed, d.; and James, d. in 1879, m. in 1821 to Nancy Reed, b. in 1799. Our subject's children were: William, m. to Sidney Scott; Sarah, m. to John Roberts; Francis, d.; Joseph, d., m. to Lavinia Gibson; James, m. to Elizabeth Snyder; Thompson T., d., m. to Susan Carson; Mary Ann and Robert, twins, the latter m. first to Delilah Michael, d., and second to Kate Stall; Matilda, m. to Tate Allison; Eliza Jane; Margaret, m. to William Campbell; John Watson, m. first to Margaret Rigor, d., and second to Evaline McCormick; and Alexander Madison. John W. was in company E, 11th Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years and ten months. Thompson E. was in the same company for nine months.

JAMES SIMPSON came to this country from Scotland, locating first at what was called the "Old Scotch Fort," or Ligonier, near Laurel Hill. He suffered all the trials of frontier life in the French and Indian wars, and the Revolution, and with his brother Andrew and the brothers White, served for several years as scouts. His wife was Hannah White, and he and the Whites removed at an early date to the vicinity of what is now Blairsville, and built a block-house and stockade. They remained there for several years. Andrew was killed by the Indians near the mouth of Black-lick while going to warn a settlement below, of danger. John White was with him, but escaped with a broken arm. Shortly after this they removed to Cherry run, on Two-lick creek, just above the mouth of the run. They erected a block-house on a bluff on the bank of Two-lick, which was called the "Old McConaughey Fort." Simpson built a grist mill on Cherry run, on land now owned by Mr. Lomison, and remained there till his death. Of his children: Jane was m. to James Allison; Andrew, m. to Jane Rankin; Martha, m. to John Dean, and afterward to George Plummer, who served in the State Senate and Congress; Mary, m. to Joseph Dean, afterward to Michael McAnulty; Thomas, m. to Elizabeth Clark; Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Cross; Hannah m. to Robert Thompson; Margart, m. to Jonathan Philips; Sarah, m. to John McKisson; and James, m. to Catharine Stewart.

HON. JOSEPH CAMPBELL.—He was born in 1799, at the present residence of his widow, in Centre township, and was the son of William and Ann Campbell nee White. William Campbell was among the early settlers of the township, and was engaged in some of the Westmoreland furnaces. Wm. White, the father of Mrs. Campbell, was an early pioneer of Centre township. Both the Campbells and Whites, migrated from Antietam creek, Maryland, to what is now Indiana county. William Campbell died when Joseph was a young lad, leaving a widow and two children, with a farm in the woods, without horses, implements, or the means with which to secure them. Joseph worked with Rev. Joseph Henderson, on the latter's farm, and the mother and daughter took in weaving. Slowly the land was improved and the necessary stock and appliances were obtained. Our subject was married, first in 1836 to Nancy Elgin, a daughter of Daniel Elgin. She died in 1838, of consumption, and their only child died when three months old; and second, in 1848, to Rebecca Allison, a daughter of Andrew Allison. Their children were: Sarah Ann; Rebecca J., m. to Wm. W. White; and Nancy Ellen, m. to Wm. D. Wilson. Mr. Campbell served in the various township positions, and as an associate judge for five years. He was among the earliest anti-slavery reformers in the county, and was termed an abolitionest more than fifty years ago. He was among the first men in the county to sign the total abstinance pledge, and was among the earliest champions of the temperance cause in the county. He died in 1879, not long after the above was written, and was buried at the Crete United Presbyterian cemetery. His funeral was attended by over a thousand persons.

ROBERT MCKESSON was born on the farm now occupied by him, in 1796, and was a son of Daniel and Mary McKesson nee Hart. The former was a native of Ireland. About 1776, he migrated from Adams county, to Blacklegs creek, in what is now Conemaugh township, and subsequently removed to the place now occupied by our subject. About the time of the latter removel or possibly while residing at their first location, the family were driven away by the Indians. They returned to Adams county, where they remained eight years before returning to the tract above named. The warrant was issued to Daniel McKesson, in 1815, and the patent to Robert and Sarah McKesson, in 1836. Daniel McKesson's children were: James, d., b. in Adams county in 1779, m. to Elizabeth Bracken, d.; Elizabeth, d., b. in Adams county, m. to Alexander Brown, d.; Martha, d., b. in Adams county; William, d., b. on the McKesson homestead, Centre township, m. to Sarah Adams, d.; John, d., b. on the homestead, m. to Sarah Simpson, d; Sarah, d., b. on the homestead; and Robert.

ROBERT MCGEE was born on the farm now occupied by Joseph Lowry, White township, in 1798, and was a son of Patrick and Esther McGee nee Pilson. The former was a native of Ire land and migrated to Franklin county in 1771. He was a soldier in the Revolution for three years, and was a prisoner for some time among the British at New York city. After the Revolution he came to Westmoreland county, and from thence in 1794, to what is now Indiana county. He was married in 1795, to Esther Pilson, whose parents were then living on the old Cummins place. He died in 1818, at the age of sixty-eight, on the farm now occupied by Robert McGee, Black-lick township, where he had made the first improvement; his wife died in 1830, at the age of sixty-eight. Their children were: James, d., m. to Mary Lyons; Robert, m. first to Isabella Ross, d., and second to Mrs. Sarah Ellis nee Humphreys, b. in 1819, in Wales; and John, m. to Margaret Lyons. Robert has been a surveyor for over forty years; he was the county surveyor for several years, being appointed first in 1835; he studied the art under a Mr. Elliott, of Conemaugh township, who had been a practical surveyor in Ireland. His children were: John, m. to Sarah Hodgenson; Martha, m. to David Mullen; Robert P., d.; Samuel, R., d.; James M., Esther Ellen, m. to James W. McGee; Porter, and Charles. Our subject has resided on his farm since 1852. A part was called the "Ross" tract and was ordered to be surveyed April 3d, 1769, and was surveyed in May, 1770, for William Evans. It was patented to John Ross in 1826. The part upon which his residence was situated was first settled by James Wilkins, who planted an apple orchard of seven trees about 1768 or 9. He was driven away by the Indians, who cut down four of his trees with their tomahawks. Only a single tree remains and it is nearly nine feet in diameter. Mr. Wilkins was gone seven years before he returned and it is said he returned in the last year of the Revolution. The tradition among the old men is "that, at that period, the trees were fourteen or fifteen years old." James Wilkins' first cabin was about five rods east of the old apple tree.

Mrs. Susan Stewart was born on the Nicholas Baroon farm, Centre township, in 1799, and was a daughter of John and Eleanor Cummins nee Todd. (See sketch of John Cummins, Washington township.) John Cummins' children were: Susan, m. in 1826, to Samuel Stewart, d. at the age of eighty-three; Jane, d., m. to Archibald Stewart, d.; David, d., m. to Mary Wilson, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Lucinda Campbell; William, d., m. to Almira Beck; John, d.; Margaret, d.; James, d.; and Eleanor, d. Our subject's children were: Margaret Ellen; Archibald Allison, attorney; Jane; John D., d.; William C., judge Kansas City, m. to Catharine Leonard; Samuel T.; David, major 46th Ohio volunteers, d. of disease at Memphis, Tenn., after having served nearly four years; James Harvey, m. to Elizabeth St. Clair; and Ida S. I. The children of David, a son of John Cummins, were: John D., m. to Margaret Mears; William, m. to Mary J. Morrow; Joseph, d.; Caroline, m. to Joseph Repine; T. B.; A. J., m. to Margaret Peddicord; and Elizabeth M., m. to Dr. S. B. Thomas. William was a captain in company A, 78th Penna. volunteers about two years. The children of Samuel, a son of John Cummins, were: John S., W. T., m. to Carrie Adams; R. L. and T. J.

Thomas Burns.—He purchased the Burns homestead in Centre township in 1790. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, and served three years in the British army at the outset of the Revolutionary war. He then served four years under the noted Paul Jones and other American commanders. After his settlement in this section, he chopped wood and burned coal. He died in 1833, at the age of eighty-four. He was twice married, first in 1800, to Mary Harea, who died in 1816, at the age of sixty-four, and second to Sarah Boyle, daughter of Robert and Mary Boyle nee Johnston. The children were: William; Thomas, m. to Margaret Henry; Catharine, m. to Wm. Gloss; and James, m. first to Rachel Davis, d., and second to Julia Thompson. William served four months in the 105th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, and seven months in the 177th during the war of 1861. He was also in the provost marshal's department for nine months. William and Thomas reside on the old homestead, where there is said to have been an Indian village. Tradition reports that for several years, the dusky woodsmen would return to look for treasure said to have been buried there.

Adam Johnston was a native of Franklin county, where he was born in 1791. He came to the farm now occupied by Geo. W. Johnston in 1812, where he erected a cabin and a blacksmith shop. His parents, James and Mary Johnston nee Perry, with their family, came to the tract in 1814, where they found a small cabin and a clearing ready for them. Jas. Johnston's children were: Adam, d. in 1861, m. in 1824 to Nancy McAnulty, b. in 1798; Elizabeth, d., m. to Matthew Rankin, d.; Jas., d., m. to Martha Allison; Ann, d., m. to Thos. Hamilton, d.; Robert, d., m. to Lavinia Woodward, d.; Mary, d., m. to Jonathan Dixon; Sarah, d., m. to Evan Lewis, d.; John, d.; William, d., m. to Elizabeth Harrold; and George W., m. first to Jane Allison, and second to Isabella Speedy. Adam was a justice of the peace for many years. William was a county commissioner. The children of Adam Johnston were: Mary, m. to Charles McCracken; James, m. to Martha Gibson; Isabella; Margaret, d., m. to Hiram St. Clair; John; Robert, m. first to Mary E. Lattimer, and second to Cynthia Meredith, d.; and George W., m. to Mary Dixon. George was in the 11th Pa. R. C. for eighteen months. The children of James, a son of Adam Johnston, were: Anna, Sarah Elizabeth, Jennie H., James Stewart, and John Milton. The children of Robert, a son of Adam Johnston, were: William L., Nancy Clarissa, Frank E., Margaret J., Mary C., George A., and Gertrude C. The children of George W., a son of James Johnston, were: Mary J., m. to John Feit; Margaret, m. to George C. Dickie; Elizabeth M., and J. Speedy. John and Nancy J. Feit's only child was George J. George C. and Margaret Dickie's children were: Clark J. and Laura. The George W., or the old James Johnston homestead was called "The Valley." It was warranted to Dr. Robert Johnston in 1786, and patented to the same in 1796. The tract was purchased by James Johnston in 1812.

James W. Laughlin.—He was born on the Laughlin farm in Centre township, in 1809, and was the son of John and Nancy Laughlin nee Wilkins. The former was the son of the pioneer, Randall Laughlin, and was born on the Randall Laughlin homestead, in Black-lick township. He died in 1817, about forty years of age—his wife died about 1850, at the age of seventy-two. Randall Laughlin's public services, his captivity among the Indians and British, and adventures are spoken of in other chapters. His wife was Elizabeth Warnick, whom he married in Franklin county. Their children were: John, (see above); James, d., m. to Sarah Kirkpatrick, d.; Martha, d., m. John Mitchell, d; Mary, d., m. to James Robinson, d., of Saltsburg; Jane, d., m. to James McComb, d., a son of Gen. McComb; Thos., d., m. to Margaret Henderson, d. a daughter of Rev. Joseph W. Henderson; Thomas was a colonel in the militia; Joseph, d.. (see sketch of Mrs. Joseph Laughlin); Eliza, m. to John Rankin, M. D., d.; and Randall, d. in childhood. Our subject was married in 1833, to Anna, daughter of Joseph and Jane Moorhead nee McElhoes. Their children are: Joseph; John; Benjamin F.; Albert; and Edward, dec'd. Benjamin F., was in the 11th Pennsylvania R. C., for three years. He was wounded at the first battle of Fredericksburg and at the Wilderness. Benjamin F. was married to Margaret Rochester. Their children are: Ruby, d.; Roy and Chill Rochester.

John Coy, the pioneer, located in Greene township, in 1814. John Coy, of Homer city, was born in what is now Cherry-hill township, in 1848, and was the son of John B. and Margaret Coy nee Empfield The latter was born in Indiana county, in 1811. The former was born in Bedford county, in 1814, and was a son of John and Sarah Coy nee Bowers. The former of whom first located as above stated in Green township, and subsequently removed to that part of Brush valley, now Cherry-hill township. Our subject's children were: Lewis, m. to Margaret Sleppy; Franey, d.; John B., m. to Margaret Empfield; Adam, m. to Rachel Lyda; Sarah, d., m. to George Empfield, d.; Peter, m. to Mary Stevens; Nancy, m. to Samuel Stall; Elizabeth, m. to William Fowler, d.; and David, m. to Miss Dick- In 1851, John B., located on the John Mickle farm, Centre township, about one mile from Homer city. His children were: Sarah J., m. to G. A. Mikesell; Benjamin, d.; Alexander W., m. to Christeaun Holmes; Peter, d.; and John, m. to Anna McFeaters, whose children were: Lela T. and Tesora. John Coy, the younger, clerked for his brother, A. W., two years. The latter engaged in business in 1869, and the former succeeded at the death of A. W., in 1872. The store-house was erected by John B. Coy, in 1866, and was occupied by Kier & Moorhead, for two years, and William Guthrie, for one year.

Michael Risinger was born near York, York county, in 1798, and was a son of John and Martha L. Risinger, nee Myers. The latter died in 1807, about forty-five years of age. The former was born near York, of German parents. He and his second wife, Elizabeth Linenger, came about 1810 to what is now the Alexander Dick farm, Brush valley, township. He died about 1844, on the Daniel Risinger farm, at the (supposed) age of one hundred and three. His second wife died in 1843, over fifty years of age. He had twelve children by his first and nine by his second wife. The four children who accompanied him to Indiana county were: Henry, d., m. to Mary Winkerman, d.; Daniel, d., m. to Susan Andrews; Joseph, d.; and Michael, m. in 1823 to Rebecca Williams, b. in Brush valley, in 1802. She was the daughter of Captain Benoni Williams, a captain of a company in the war of 1812. He recruited his company in the county, and served about one year. Michael's children were: Matilda, m. to Rev. J. W. Planett; Josiah, m. to Margaret McKeeson; Evaline, d.; Elizabeth, m. to James Kerr; and William, m. to Nannie E. Orr, daughter of James Orr, an old settler of Armstrong township. William's children were: James M. and William Clarence Perrill. Peter S.'s children (a brother of our subject) were: Wellington, d.; Elliott H.; Ann Eliza; Ida Jane; and William Thomas. Our subject settled on his farm in 1824. Benoni Williams and wife (Catherine Bracken,) were born and reared in the Tuscarowa valley of eastern Pennsylvania. In 1721, they located on the farm now owned by Rev. Runyan, Brush valley township. Subsequently he purchased of James Wilkens, a part of what is now the Robert McGee farm.

N. S. RANKIN was born in 1832, on the present Lemuel Kunkle farm, Black-lick township, and was a son of George and Elizabeth Rankin, nee Repine. The former died in 1860, at the age of fifty-two. The latter was a daughter of Christopher Repine, and died in 1860, at the age of fifty-seven. George was a son of Andrew and Ann Rankin, nee Stitt. Andrew was an adopted son of William and Isabella Rankin, nee Potter, who came to America in 1791, and in 1794, located on the tract now occupied by William and Mary G. Rankin. William Rankin died in 1823, and his wife Isabella in 1852. Andrew Rankin's children were: George, d.; David, d.; William, m. to Isabella Alcorn, d.; James, m.; Isaac, m. to Jane Alcorn; John, M. E. minister; Robert, U. B. minister; Mary, d., m. to John Davis; Catharine, m. to Mr. Travis; Andrew; and Alexander. George's children were: Christopher Repine, d.; N. S., m. to Clarinda Cribbs, daughter of David Cribbs; Israel, d.; Elizabeth, m. to A. C. Fails; and Catharine Ann, m. to D. D. Wineman. Our subject's children were: Araminta Elizabeth, George Albert, Mary Emma, David Cribbs, and Anna Laura Henrietta Jane. Our subject's farm was first improved by John Houston, the pioneer.

ROBERT M. HAMMILL was born in the Ligonier valley, Westmoreland county, in 1805, and was a son of Robert and Jane Hammill nee McKelvey. The former was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1759. His second wife was Ann Scroggs. He was a son of John and Elizabeth Hammill nee Gibson, who came to America in 1761. Tradition reports that their location was the tenth in the Ligonier settlement. They lived about six miles northwest of Ligonier and two southwest of Palmer's fort. John Hammill was drafted in the Revolution and his son Robert served out his term, a brother Hugh's and one for himself, in all over three years. Robert died in 1841, and his wife Ann in 1862, at the age of eighty-two. Robert's children were seventeen in number, twelve of whom arrived at maturity. These were: Elizabeth, m. to John Pollock; Mary, d., m. to James Alexander, d.; Allan, d., m. to Jane Graham, d.; David, d.; m. to Jane Smith, d.; Jane, d., m. to Joseph McLain, d.; Robert, m. to Jane Trimble; Ann, m. to Robert Frew; Ebenezer, m. to Jane McCreery; Hannah, d.; Joseph, m. to Elizabeth J. McCreery; Sarah, m. to Alfred Limerick, d.; and Rachel, d., m. to David Brown, d. (For our subject's children see Hammill sketch.) Robert M. located on present farm in 1831. It was platted to Thomas McCrea in 1788, and the tract was called "Junction." The warrant was issued to McCrea in 1785 and he commenced the improvement about that time. The "Whiskey Boys" had an encampment on this farm during the memorable "Whiskey Insurrection" of the last century.

JOSEPH MCDOWELL was born in 1813 on the farm now occupied by John and Matthew McDowell; Conemaugh township, and was a son of James and Nancy McDowell nee Garvin. Mrs. McDowell's mother and grandmother were captured by the Indians on the Youghiogheny, in Westmoreland county. James McDowell was a son of Matthew and Jane McDowell, who were married in Ireland. The former was a brother of Alexander McDowell, the noted surveyor of Venango county. Not long after the Revolutionary war, the family migrated to what is now Conemaugh township, having for a time after their removal from Ireland, resided in Franklin county. (See sketch of John McDowell, Conemaugh township.) Matthew's children were: Robert, d.; John, d., m. to Jane Barr, d.; Mary, d.; Jane, d.; James, d. in 1830, at the age of sixty-three, m. to Nancy Garvin, d. in 1854, at the age of seventy-five; Ann, d., and Allen, d. (For James' children see McDowell notes aforenamed.) Our subject's children were: Samuel Reddick, Elmer, d.; Harry, and Elmo.

MICHAEL JOB was born in 1799, near Poundstown, Lancaster county, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Job, nee Rudy. The latter was a daughter of Jacob Rudy, a native of Germany. The former was a native of Ireland, was of Scotch-Irish extraction, and served five years on an English man-of-war. At the age of twenty or twenty-one, he migrated to Lancaster county, where he was married. In 1802, the family located near Five Points, in Salem township, Westmoreland county. During the whiskey insurrection, he had served as a soldier in the army, and in that time he had become acquainted with western Pennsylvania. He died in Laughlinstown, in 1849, at the age of eighty-three. His wife was eighty-seven years old at her death, in 1862. Our subject was married in 1821 to Maria McCutcheon, who died in 1837, at the age of thirty-four. His second wife was Mrs. Margaret McGuire, nee Miller, widow of Daniel McGuire, and a granddaughter of "Saucy Jack" Miller, who kept a hotel at the top of Laurel hill. She died in 1873, at the age of seventy-four. His children were: Mary Ann, d., m. to Samuel Griffitn; Johnston, d.; Samuel M., m. to Emma C. Guist; Robert, m. to Elizabeth Kunkle; Eli, d.; and Elizabeth, d. Samuel was in company F, 18th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months. His children were: William M. and Byrty Eli. Our subject located in 1838, in Centre township, on the farm now owned by his son S. M. Job. The grandfather of Maria McCutcheon, our subject's first wife, was killed at the burning of Hannastown by the Indians. His wife was captured and on the first day gave birth to a child. She was taken to what is now Catteragus county, N. Y., and after three attempts escaped and returned to Westmoreland.

NOAH STITT was born in 1823, in Allegheny township, Armstrong county, and was a son of Samuel and Sophia Stitt, nee Hesselgesser. The former was a son of William and Elizabeth Stitt. William was an early pioneer of both what is now Westmoreland and Armstrong counties. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war from Westmoreland county. His children were: Jacob, d., m. to Rachel Ford, d.; William, d.; James, d., m. to Martha Jack; John, m. to Margaret Ann Fryer; Samuel, d., m. to Lavinia Stitt, d.; Joseph, m. to Ellen Black; Andrew, m. to Sidney Stevenson; Sarah, m. to Benjamin Eckman; and Sophia, d., m. to Isaac Garrell.

MRS. SARAH STITT was born in 1813, near Greensburg, Westmoreland county, and was a daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth Beck, nee Shellhammer. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812, from Westmoreland county. He was a native of what is now Indiana county, and a son of William Beck, an early settler of the vicinity of the county seat. The latter's children were: Simon; William, m. to a Miss Row; Susan, m. to Jacob George; Elizabeth, m. to Henry George; and Daniel. Daniel's children were: Susan, m. to William Ashbaugh, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Joseph Ross; Mary, m. to John Eckman, d.; Sarah, m. first in 1831 to John C. Eckman, d., and second in 1848, to Noah Stitt; Jacob, m. to Susan Ashbaugh; Daniel, m. to Mary Stevenson; John, m. to Mary Jack; Annie, m. to Joseph Eckman; Simon, m. to Mary Zell, d.; Catharine, m. to Samuel Jack; Joseph, m. to Nancy Cochran; David, m. to Susan Zell; and Lavinia. Our subject's children were: Samuel; Galbraith, m. to Mary Artman; Sarah A., m. to Jefferson Beale; and Lebanna. Mrs. Stitt's children by first husband were: Nathan, d.; Aaron, d., m. to Harrison Stevenson; Israel, m. to Sarah Smith; Lucinda, d.; Martha, m. to Thomas Johnston; Elizabeth, d.; Mary, m. to Charles Davidson; and Laura, d. Aaron was in the war of 1861, and died of wounds.

JOHNSTON DAVIS was born in 1845 on a farm now occupied by Joseph Steele, Centre township, and was a son of William and Sarah Davis nee Ray. The former was a son of John Davis. (See sketch of John Davis, Armstrong township.) William Davis' children were: Sarah; John, d.; Alexander, m. to Caroline Myers; Martha, d.; Johnston, and Thomas C. John was in company A, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months, and died of disease. Alexander was in company A, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months, and company D, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers for about one year. Johnston was in company D, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers for about one year.

JEREMIAH LOMISON was born in 1814, near Washington, Columbia county, and was a son of William and Ann Lomison nee Fulkerson. The former was a miller. He died in October, 1862, at the age of eighty-two; his wife in 1867, at the age of seventy-four. The family removed to our subject's present farm in 1837. He was married in 1837 to Mary Mervine, of Hughesville, Lycoming county. Their children were: Angeline, m. to James Devinney; John Nelson, m. to Miriam Stewart; Jane, m. to William M. Stewart; Mary, d.; Margaret, m. to Allison Loughrey; and Lucy, d Our subject was a tanner by trade, and the superintendent of the Wolf tannery of Hughesville for five years. For several years, in addition to farming, he managed a grist mill located on his property, which was erected by Robert Allen. He also conducted a general store for several years, and was a dealer in stock and country produce. He served as county commissioner, and in other official trusts. The Lomison tract was patented to Hannah Simpson in 1815.

E. P. Hill was born in 1824, near Tylersville, New York, and was a son of Thomas and Laura Hill nee Parmley, who migrated to what is now Elk county, Pennsylvania, in 1837. The family removed to Conemaugh township, Indiana county, in 1839. The former died in 1859, over seventy-two years old; the latter in 1847, about fifty-five years of age. Our subject commenced on the canal at Nineveh in 1847, and pursued boating as an avocation for six years. In 1848, he ran a section boat called the "Camden." He commenced with the Pa. R. R. in 1850, being engaged in getting out ties, and in September of the following year, began to work as a repair hand. In 1856, he became associated with the Indiana Branch R. R., and since May 24th of that year, has been the foreman of the Homer section. He was married first in 1858 to Susan Fry, d., a daughter of Jacob and Susan Fry nee Junkins, the latter being a daughter of Hugh Junkins, one of the pioneers of Armagh, and second to Miss Mary A. Peddicord, daughter of Richard and Hannah Peddicord nee Allison. Our subject's children were: Rebecca Ann, m. to James A. Johnston; Laura; George W., d.; John, m. to Isabella Lockard; Nancy; Susan, d.; Lucinda, Alexander, Mary S., Hannah C., Benton, Horace, Margaret, Alice, Clarissa.

James W. Kerr was born in Perry county in 1834, and was a son of J. W. and Rosanna Kerr nee McClellan. The family removed to Indiana county in 1843, where the former died in 1844. The widow and children, except James W., subsequently removed to Ohio. Our subject was married in 1857, to Elizabeth Risinger, daughter of Michael Risinger. Their only child is William Kerr. Mr. Kerr served in company F, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers for two years, and was transferred to company I, 6th U. S. Regulars. He was taken prisoner on the 16th of June, 1863, and for four months was retained in Libby and Belle Island prisons.

Philip Sheffler was born near Greensburg, Westmoreland county, in 1820, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Sheffler nee Hile, a daughter of a soldier in the war of 1812. John was a son of George Sheffler, a soldier also in the same war. Philip Sheffler was married in 1842, to Mary M. Bowman, of Westmoreland county, and in 1851 located in Indiana county. Their children were: Samuel, m. to Rachel Bracken; Oliver, m. to Emma J. Hildebrand; Hannah M., m. to J. J. Hill; Emma E. m. to A. B. Mikesell; and Satilla J. Samuel and Oliver were soldiers in the late war. The former served in company F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers. Samuel's children are Cecelia, Edith and Jasper.

Houston Mundshower was born in 1835, on the farm now occupied by Harrison Mundshower, Centre township, and was a son of William and Hannah Mundshower nee Kunkle. The former was a son of John Mundshower, an old settler of the township. The latter's children were: Nicholas, d.; Daniel, Joseph, David, Hannah, d.; William, d., and Samuel, d. William's children were: Catharine, d.; John, m. first to Sarah Switzer, d., and second to a Miss Derr; Samuel, m. to Susan Kinter; William, m. to Margaret Flemming; Houston, m. to Margaret J. Swasey; Harrison, m. to Catharine Switzer; and Mary, m. to James England. Houston was in company I, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps one year, and in company F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers over one year. The remainder of the sons were in the war of 1861. Houston's children were: Sarah Finetta, Hannah Adelia, Charles and Jane.

John R. Roberts was born in Denby, Wales, in 1834, and was a son of Robert and Ellen Roberts nee Williams. The family came in 1844 to the farm in Green township now owned by our subject, where the former died in 1867, at the age of sixty-eight, and the latter in 1875, at the age of sixty-seven. Their children were: Phebe, m. to Evan Roberts; Charles, m. to Mary Brick, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to William Malasee; William, d., m. to Elizabeth Dunkle; John R., m. to Jane Griffith; and Charles, d. John R. was engaged in farming and saw-milling for fourteen years. For two years he was the proprietor of the "Kline House," Indiana, and since 1880, superintendent of the "St. Charles Navigation and Improvement Mill," Homer City. Our subject's children were: Robert, Grant, Sarah, Emma, Lawrence and Albert.

Jedediah Grover was born in 1828, in Lovell township, Oxford Co., Me., and was a son of Stephen and Sarah Grover nee Parker. The former died in 1874, at the age of eighty-five, and the latter, January 1, 1879, at the age of ninety-seven. Stephen was a son of Stephen Grover, a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject came to Indiana county in 1857, and was at first engaged in lumbering, but latterly in farming. He was married in 1869, to Sarah McKesson, daughter of James McKesson, a son of Daniel McKesson, the pioneer. He served for six months in company H, 12th Pennsylvania R. C., and seven months in company F, 2d battalion Pennsylvania volunteers.

G. W. Myers was born in Ligonier township, Westmoreland county, in 1824. and was a son of Franklin and Elizabeth Myers nee Uncapher. The former was a native of Somerset county, and the latter of Virginia. Our subject came to Indiana county in 1872, and purchased the old homestead of the Rev. J. W. Henderson, where the noted mansion still stands. He was married in 1865 to Elizabeth Kemmell.

The Allisons.—In the year 1788, Andrew Allison came to Indiana county, being the first of the name to settle within the present limits of the county. He was born in Cumberland county, Pa., in the year 1757. His father, Robert Allison, came from county Derry, Ireland, in 1750, and settled in Cumberland county. He was married in 1852 to a lady by the name of Beckie Beard, a granddaughter of one Charles Stuart, a descendant of the House of Stuarts. They raised a family of six sons and one daughter. Andrew, the third son, after having followed Gen. Washington through the most gloomy period of the revolution, returned to his father's family in Cumberland county, but did not remain long there. In the year 1785, he again left the paternal roof, and with a new axe in his hand, and a rifle on his shoulder, crossed the mountains and settled in Westmoreland county, near the site of the present village of New Derry—there he commenced an improvement, making his home with John Pomroy, in time of peace, and when the Indians invaded the settlement he took refuge in a fort in the vicinity. During his sojourn in Westmoreland county, the settlement was frequently attacked by Indians, and several men were killed and others wounded. In 1788, he sold his improvements to Francis Pomroy, crossed the Conemaugh river, and settled on the bank of Two-lick, on the site of an old Indian town, opposite the present village of Homer. Here he built a cabin, and cleared some ground for agricultural purposes. The cabin was without a door, and a hole in one side served as a place of ingress and egress. Though not subjected to the observance of stringent rules of etiquette, he nevertheless, had his difficulties and trials. One night while reposing on his rudely constructed couch in the corner of his cabin, he heard a noise, or stir at the hole left for passing out and in, and on looking up, saw a large panther standing with his head inside and his paws on the lower leg, or sill, looking wistfully up at some venison that was suspended from a joist in the cabin. Andrew reached for his rifle, but before he had time to take aim, the panther had backed out and disappeared. During his stay at this place, the Indians did not disturb that neighborhood. In the year 1790, his father came from Cumberland county and took charge of his improvements, and Andrew penetrated farther into the forest and opened up the farm now owned by Archy Nichol, three miles east of the borough of Indiana. Here he was the frontier settler, with nothing between him and the Susquehanna river, but the howling wilderness, abounding with wild beasts, and traversed by hostile savages. In October of that year, he was married to a lady by the name of Sally Barr. He remained at his new home till 1792, in which year the Indians renewed their depredations upon some of the border settlements. A report having reached him one evening that Indians were in the vicinity, he took his family, consisting of his wife and one child, and fled to his nearest neighbor, Irwin Adams, who had come from Ireland, and located on the farm now owned by G. A. McClain. Mrs. Adams was sick and confined to her bed. During the night the Indians kept them in constant terror, one whistling on his rifle charger on one side of the cabin, and another answering in like manner on the other side. The inmates were on their feet all night, the men having their rifles in their hands, ready to repel an attack, and the others being engaged in stopping up the cracks between the logs, to prevent the assailants from taking aim at any one inside. Dreading a warm reception, the Indians kept at a respectful distance, and finally withdrew. In the morning, Allison and Adams yoked the oxen, and placed Mrs. Adams and her infant daughter (afterward Mrs. George McCartney, mother of Mrs. Samuel McCartney, of Indiana,) on a sled, and proceeded with their families to Moorhead's fort, on the farm now owned by Isaac Moorhead. After remaining there several days, Allison went to look after his farm, and get some articles that had been left, but the cabin with all its contents was burnt, the Indians having fired it during his absence. He then returned to his father's on Two-lick, where another fort was being erected; there he remained till sometime in 1793, when he removed to the forks of Two-lick and Yellow creek, on an improvement made by John Henry at an earlier date, but who, on account of the dangers that surrounded him, had returned to his former home in Virginia. At this place Allison remained till 1795, when he purchased an improvement made in 1772, by one Joseph Hopkins, about three miles south of Indiana, Hopkins and his family having fled on account of the Indian troubles. Here again he was on the frontier, with neither a house nor a public road, bridge, church, or school house within ten miles. It was truly a secluded spot; the silence of the forest was seldom broken, except by the howling wolves, the yelling panthers, or the crack of the hunter's rifle. After Allison had settled on the Hopkins farm, the Indians made sneaking visits to the settlement, but were less hostile than before. The following incident is illustrative of the scenes of those times, showing how John B. Allison, son of Andrew, when only nine years old, was the actual slayer of eight wolves in one day. About the first of July, 1805, an old man by the name of John Falkinstine, who had traps set on Yellow creek, and had just caught an old mother wolf, came to Allisons and stated that he had found a den of wolves in a hollow log, about a mile off. He asked for an axe and some assistance. Allison being otherwise engaged, sent his two sons, Robert and John B., with the old trapper. Having arrived at the place, they found one old wolf lying at the but of the log, with a lot of young ones. She made an attack on the party. The old trapper attempted to shoot her, but his gun missed fire and she escaped. The young wolves, eight in number, then retreated into the hollow log, into the side of which a hole was cut, where Robert inserted a pole, driving the whelps back to the mouth, where the old man grabbed them in detail by the hind legs, and held them till John killed them with a club, as fast as they were drawn out. There appeared to have been two sets, one fat and sleek, the other lean and rough. Being at last permanently located, and no longer annoyed by Indians, Allison succeeded in opening out a fine farm, and erecting comfortable buildings. Here he spent the remainder of his days. He died in the year 1815, aged fifty-eight years. His two oldest sons, Robert and John, occupied the property together, till 1818. John was married December 30th, 1817, to a lady by the name of Mary Taylor. The following spring the two brothers divided the land between them, John taking the unimproved part; he cleared a patch, cut some logs, and prepared to build a house. The aforesaid Hopkins, while occupying the property, had built what was then considered a good dwelling house, for the door of which he carried white pine boards on a horse from Stony creek valley, east of Laurel Hill, it being the first pine door within the bounds of the county. From this house, John selected twelve of the soundest logs, and used them in building his house, in 1818. That house is still standing and used as a kitchen by Samuel Shearer, the present owner and occupant of the property, twelve of the logs having been cut and hewed one hundred and eight years ago. John lived on the property till 1866, when he sold it to said Shearer and moved to Indiana, where he spent the remainder of his days; he died July 28th, 1878, aged eighty-two years. Robert was married April 14th, 1819, to Hannah Bryan; he remained on the old farm during his life; he died August 15th, 1866, aged seventy-two years. His son, James S. Allison, still owns and occupies the old homestead.

WILLIAM FRAZER was born on the present Archibald Fowler farm, Cherry Hill township, in 1815, and was a son of William and Mary Frazer nee Barr. The former was a son of Robert and Catherine Frazer nee Wiley. Robert was a native of Scotland, and his wife of Ireland. They came to York county some years prior to 1771. In that year their son William was born in that county. Not long after the close of the Revolution, the family removed to Westmoreland county, where William served in the militia during some of the Indian troubles. Early in the century, the family came to Indiana county, and located on the above mentioned Fowler farm. Robert died about 1822, at the age of ninety-nine. His wife was very old at the time of her decease. Their children were: Margaret, d., m. to John McGuire d.; Jane, d., m. to Robert Gordon, d.; Mary, d., m. to John McDun, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to James Dunwoody, d; William, d. in 1855, eighty-four years old, m. to Mary Barr, d. in 1833, forty-five years old; John, d., and Isaac, d. William's children were: Robert, d.; William, m. to Eliza Murphy; Jane, m. to Matthias Gordon; Sarah, d., m. to William Murphy; and Catharine, m. to John Roberts. Our subject's children were: Mary M., m. to Barnabas Douglass; John M., killed while a member of company D, 54th Pennsylvania volunteers, at Cedar creek; Emma, d.; William, m. to Mary McCollom; Lucy, m. to Jacob M. Walker; Wallace S., m. to Mary Hilliard; Sarah, and Orlando Shelby.

D. C. WEIR was born in Blairsville in 1834, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Weir nee Thompson. The former was born on the present Richard Dias farm, Brush Valley township; in 1801, and died in 1868. The latter was born in 1794, in the "block house" above the site of Saltsburg, and died in 1868. John Weir was a son of Robert and Margaret Weir nee Campbell. Robert was a Covenanter, and was born in Ireland in 1752. He came to Philadelphia in 1773, from Edinburg, Scotland, where he was attending school. He was a sympathizer with the Colonists, and for this reason came to America. He came to the place where his son was born, on "Loyal run," in what is now Brush Valley township, about the commencement of the Revolution. He entered the Revolutionary army in 1777, and continued till the close of the war. In the last two years, he served as a recruiting sergeant. He died in 1823, and his wife in 1852, in her eighty-fifth year. Their children were: Alexander, d.; Agnes, d., November 13, 1850, sixty-three years old, m. to Andrew Ferrier, d.; Ann, m. to George Gear, d.; Jas., d.; Jane, m. to George Beam, d; Daniel, d., supposed to have been killed by the Indians, in Indiana or Kentucky; John, d., m. in 1819 to Elizabeth Thompson, d, daughter of "Blockhouse" John Thompson; Hannah, d; and Archibald, d. in 1859, fifty-four years old, m. to Jane Coleman, d. John Weir's children were: Margaret J., d.; Rachel A., m. first to Richard Repine, d., and second to Ross Clawson; John Thompson, d., m. to Elizabeth Kern; Robert, d.; James Donly, d., m. to Amelia Boardley; David T., m. to Marietta Drenning; D. C., m. to Clarissa Dodson, and Joseph White. Robert served in the war of 1861, for four years, as a member of an Ohio regiment. David T. was in company B, 57th Pennsylvania volunteers, about three years. D. C. was in the "Construction Division" of the "Mississippi department" one year; he has served as a justice of the peace in Homer City for five years. Our subject's children were: Joseph White, Lizzie Amelia, Margaret Jane, Albert McClure, d.; Matthew Ellis, John Albert, William Gordon, McClellan Sloan, and Mary Ellen.

WILLIAM D. WILSON was born in 1848, on the Wilson homestead, Centre township, and was a son of Daniel and Letitia Wilson nee Henderson. The latter was a daughter of John Henderson, of Young township Henderson family. Daniel was a son of Robert Wilson, whose wife was a Miss McClelland, a native of Scotland. Her father was among the pioneers of the township of Conemaugh. The father of Robert Wilson, migrated from South Carolina, and located about 1774, on the land adjoining on the north the farm of Major Nathaniel Nesbitt. The tradition is well preserved in the family of a child being born while the neighborhood was infested with hostile Indians. The following day the mother and infant were placed in a hammock swung batween two horses, and conveyed to a fort in the Ligonier valley. He served in the Indian wars, and for two years the family were forced away from their home. Most of his children removed to what is now Clarion county, where they were among the earliest settlers. Robert Wilson's children were: James, d., m. to Jane Barkley; Robert, m. to Ann Graham; John, d., m. to Margaret Campbell; Daniel, m. to Letitia Henderson; Joseph, m. to Ann Douthitt; and three daughters, now deceased, who were married and residents of Butler county. Daniel Wilson's children were: Robert A., d.; Lucy A., d.; John A., d.; Julia A., d., m. first to Joseph A. Henderson, d., and second to Joseph Pounds; Nancy Jane, m. to Samuel Henry; Letitia E., d., and William D., twins, the latter m. to Nancy E. Campbell; and Melinda C., m. to R. O. Allison. William D. has been a member of the National Guard, for ten years, was second lieutenant, company D, 10th regiment, from Sept. 1875, to Dec. 10th, 1878, and has been captain of same company since the latter date. His children are: Lizzie M., Joseph C., Ann Bell, Maggie E., Mary E., and John H.

The McConaugheys.—The "Allison Block-house," or "Old McConaughey Fort," was erected by the Allisons and other settlers about 1788. It was a round log, two-story (20x24) building, and was situated very nearly on the site of the R. J. McConaughey wash house. The first improvement on the R. J. McConaughey farm was made by Jas. McConaughey, about the commencement of the Revolutionary war. He was driven off by the Indians, and subsequently entered the Revolutionary army, serving for a number of years. The tract in the patent was called "Nazareth," and was surveyed on an application dated April 3d, 1769. It was sold in 1787 for taxes to Charles Campbell, by the commissioners of Westmoreland Co. Campbell deeds, in 1788, the tract to Robert Allison, who obtains the patent in 1789. The patent is assigned to James McConaughey in 1815.

James McConaughey, the pioneer, was a son of David and Jane McConaughey, nee Platt, who migrated to what is now Indiana county, about 1800. Their children were: James, m, to Mrs. Isabella Moore, nee McConnell; David; Robert; Francis; and John, who removed to Miami county, Ohio; Elizabeth, m. to John Steele; Mary, m. to Matthew Steele; and Jane, m. to William Davidson. James McConaughey's children were: David, d., m.; John, d., m. to Margaret McCurdy, d.; James, d., m. to Margaret Findley, d.; and Robert, d., m. to Anna Jamison, d. The latter's children were: Eliza, d., m. to James Graham, d.; Isabella; Martha A., d., m. to Rev. Joseph Shaw, M. E. Mary Jane, d., m. to William Roadman; Rachel, d., m. to Dr. J. W. Blackburn, d.; James H., m. to Mary Brant; R. J., m. to Ann K. Beamer, daughter of Adam Beamer, living, eighty-five years old, with his daughter; John C., m. to Elizabeth Brant; and Frank, d. James H. was a soldier in the war of 1861, from Westmoreland county. Frank was a member of the 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps. He was twice wounded at the second Bull Run battle, and died on the field. R. J. McConaughey's children were: Emma C., Wilbur H., Byer Beamer, Mary T., Frank, Anna C., and Laura.

The Steeles and Carsons.—The children of Matthew and Mary Steele, nee McConaughey, a daughter of David and Jane McConaughey, nee Platt, were: Elizabeth, b. June 24th, 1799, in Franklin county, m. to John Carson, d. in 1853, seventy years of age; Janet, d., m. to James Williams, d., a son of Benoni Williams; and Mary, d., m. to John Hays, d. John Carson's children were: Mary, d.; James, m. to Esther Hendrickson; Matthew; John, m. to Sarah J. Garman; William, m. to Margaret Wolf; Letitia, d., m. to Samuel Mauk; Robert P., m. to Mary Foust; and Thomas, d. James was a soldier for four months in the war of 1861. William served over eighteen months, in three enlistments, in the same struggle. Robert P.'s children were: Albert J.; Elizabeth C.; Cora A., d.; John M.; Lou E.; Anna A.; Daniel E.; Margaret G.; and George H. Matthew Steele came to the farm, which includes the site of Homer City, in 1802, it being a portion of the McConaughey tract.

MAHONING TOWNSHIP.

This township was formed in 1806, and originally embraced all that part of Indiana county, north of the "purchase line." In 1834, it was divided, the eastern half receiving the name of Montgomery township, and the western was still known by the old title. In 1846 Mahoning was separated into West, East, North and South Mahoning townships. In 1847, Montgomery was divided into Montgomery and Canoe townships. The former was again separated in 1868, into Grant and Montgomery. The latter in the same year was formed into the present Banks and Canoe townships.

The Niels.—The founder of the Niel family in this section, was William Niel, an emigrant from Ireland, who had migrated to the vicinity of Hagerstown, Md., about 1760, and about the close of the Revolutionary war had removed to what is now the John Niel homestead, Young township. His death occurred in 1812, at the age of eighty; his wife Catharine, whom he married in Ireland, died subsequently at the age of eighty. Their children were: Mary, John, m. to Mrs. Lydia Lewis, nee Kelly; Thomas, m. to Margaret Crevison; Samuel, James, Rosanna, and William, m. to Mary Cunningham, all dead. John died in 1852, at the age of eighty-three; his wife in 1857, at the age of eighty-eight. William died at the age of ninety-two. John and Lydia Niel's children were: Rachel, m. to Thomas Lowman, d.; John, m. to Nancy Coleman; Hugh, d., m. to Sarah A. Wilkinson; and Keziah, d. Hugh died in 1877, at the age of sixty-eight. John and Nancy Niel's children were: Martha C., d.; Harrison, M. D.; Samuel, John M., Robert, d.; Hugh, Harriet, Lydia, m. to John Nolan; Robert J., student Michigan State University; Nancy, Elizabeth, and Clarke. Hugh and Sarah A. Niel's children were: John Morgan, Nancy J., m. to Alexander W. Gilmour; Caroline, William L., and Sarah B. William, the son of William, the pioneer, removed to what is now West Mahoning township in 1807. His children were: Abraham L., b. in 1807, m. to Sarah McCreight; Elizabeth, d., m. to Jacob Young, d.; Ann, m. to James McHenry; John B., m. to Rachel M., Blose; Thomas, d., m. first Eliza McClelland, d., and second Mrs. Wingrove nee Lewis; Mary, m. to Artemas Purdy; Sarah, m. to John Chambers; Margaret, m. to Robert Patterson; Samuel, d.; James, m, to Catharine Hadden; Winfield S., d., m. to Rebecca Piper; Millie, m. to Joseph Uncapher, d.; Cortez, m. to Rachel Crissman; Sandford, m. to Lydia Lewis; Sharp, m. first to Jane Riddle, and second to Mrs. Margaret Reese nee Gillespie; Effie, d.; and Hardy, m. to Margaret Trimblin. Abraham L.'s children were: Ann, d.; Thomas, Andrew, James, Abraham, and John. John B.'s children were: Cynthia Jane, m. to James Coon; Thomas Sharp, m. to Nancy Oberlin; George, d., m. to Lucinda Van Horn; Martha, m. to Wm. McKillip; Aaron, m. to Margaret J. Morgan; Sarah, m. to Peter Steer; Emma, Joseph, m. to Mary Reitz; W. R.; and Mary E., m. to J. A. Stunkard. Thomas S. served as second sergeant of company C, second battalion, six months volunteers. Aaron was in the six months service, company C, second battalion, in the 100 days service, and in captain Weaver's company in the mounted rifles, for one year's service. Thomas Sharp's (a son of John B.) children were: Preston, d., Naomi, Albert Lawrence, Emma S., Irene L., and Grace C. Mrs. Lucinda Niel's (widow of George) were: Mary R., d.; Zoe W., Ruth, and Nancy Ellen. Mrs. Rebecca Niel's (widow of Winfield S.) children were: Jane, m. to Archibald Hadden; David, m. to Rachel Raybuck; Henry, James B., Elizabeth, and Laura. John W., a son of Cortez, was married in 1866, to Margaret Redding. Their children were: L. M., Harry, d.; Thaddeus, d.; Frank, d., and Bird. John W. served in company C, second battalion, six months volunteers, and in company B, 206th, about one year. He was elected justice of the peace in the spring of 1879.

EAST MAHONING TOWNSHIP

formed from Mahoning in 1846, was the first settled of the Mahonings. The land there was considered the more desirable, because it was smooth and easy to clear, in comparison with that of other portions of the section above the "purchase line."

MILLS.

The Enterline and Mottern mill, was erected by Philip Enterline, in 1860. It is two and a half stories in height and has three runs of stone, two being French burrs. It can grind thirty-five bushels of wheat and fifty of chap per day. Two Burnham turbine wheels, each of thirty-five horse-power are used.

The R. H. Work Mill.—The old mill on this site was erected in 1842, by Alexander Caruthers and William Findley. It was 30x36, used a "Rye fly" wheel, and had two runs of stone, one being of country make. In 1862, it was remodeled by Mr. Findley, who disposed of the property to R. H. Work, who also repaired it and put it in good order. In 1877, he erected the present building, 36x48, and two stories in height. He uses two Burnham turbine and one Leffel wheel. He has a sixteen foot head, and can grind eighty bushels of wheat and one hundred and fifty of chap per day. In the season of 1878, he ground 13,700 bushels.

FIRST SCHOOL HOUSE.

The first school house north of the "purchase line," was erected in 1807, within the woodland, one hundred rods north of what is now the residence of Moses T. Work. The building stood near a fine spring where the ruins of the old chimney can still be seen.

The Van Horns, Bradys and Works, raised the building. It was sixteen feet square, built of logs, had oiled paper for windows, and at first a wooden chimney which was soon supplanted by stone.

The first teacher was William Work, who taught in this house for several years, and in this vicinity for seventeen years.

GEORGEVILLE.

The first house on the site of the village was erected by Lansing Bills, a blacksmith, a short time after the laying out of the road from Indiana to Dilts' mill. When the road from Plum creek to Curwinsville was made, Bills left, and was succeeded by Christopher Bair, who was also a smith, and succeeded to the former's business.

At an early date, Henry Kinter kept a store in a mud house on the Plum creek road, about one-fourth of a mile from the village; he subsequently removed to Georgeville, where he was the second storekeeper. About 1824, George Hoover erected a residence and tan yard. About 1830, Andrew Comptar arrived; he was a brother-in-law of Hoover's, and also a tanner. Together, about this time, they laid out the village, and called it Georgeville, for Mr. Hoover. The old Hoover building is still standing on the Peter Riddle property.

The postoffice for several years was kept at Ewing's Mill, and was then called "Mahoning." It was removed to Georgeville, subsequently it was taken to Ewing's mill, and again returned to Georgeville. Henry Kinter was the first postmaster in the village.

The first church in the vicinity was the log church of the German Lutherans, about half a mile northeast of the town. The second church was the Methodist Episcopal, located within the cemetery grounds. The first preacher at the latter was Rev. Elijah Coleman. The first school was taught in the log German church. Schools were taught in the basement of the M. E. church for several years. The first schoolhouse is standing on the Plumville road, a short distance from the village proper.

THE WORKS.

WILLIAM WORK.—We will preface the Work notes with a brief sketch of the Scroggs, as the families are so closely interwoven. Alexander Scroggs, a native of Scotland, where he was born in 1704, came to Cumberland county, where he died in 1788; his first wife was Rachel Leith; his second was Rachel Ireland, whom he married in 1768; he had twelve children by the first wife, and ten by the second. The latter's children were: Miriam, Allen, Aaron, John, Rachel, Sarah, Elizabeth, Mary, Moses, and Elijah.

William Work was of Scotch-Irish parentage. He was married to Miriam Scroggs in 1792, and nine years later he removed from Cumberland county to the foot of "Squirrel Hill," not far from the present site of New Florence, Westmoreland county. In 1804, he located on the tract now occupied by Moses T. and Elijah I. Work, East Mahoning township. He was among the first, if not the first, teacher in the Mahoning country, and to him great credit is due for the active part he performed in educating the children in the early part of the present century; he died in 1828, about sixty-eight years of age; his wife died in 1855, eighty-one years of age. His children were: Rachel, d. in 1878, in her eighty-fourth year, m. to Robert Hamilton, d.; James, d. in 1860, sixty-five years of age, m. to Mary Horn Ewing; Lettice, d. in 1871, in her seventy-sixth year, m. to John Ewing, d.; Alexander Scroggs, b. December 7, 1797, d. October 23, 1878, m. first to Margaret Brown, d., and second to Nancy Beatty, d.; John, d. in 1872, in his seventy-third year, m. first to Martha Hamilton, d., and second to Sarah Beatty; William, d. in 1878, in his seventy-eighth year, m. first to Nancy Brown, d., and second to Mary T. Hamilton; Allen N., d. in 1852, in his fiftieth year, m. to Lydia Lewis, d.; Sarah, b. in 1805, m. to Matthew Steele, d. in 1870, in his seventieth year; Aaron, b. in 1806, m. first to Nancy Smith, d., and second to Elizabeth Spencer; Mary S., d. in 1853, in her forty-fifth year; Miriam, d. in 1850, in her forty-first year, m. to Alfred Limrick; Moses T., b. in 1812, m. first to Margaret Hopkins, d., and second to Tabitha Van Horn; Susan E., d. in 1844, in her twenty-ninth year, m. to John Smith; and Elijah I., b. in 1818, m. to Margaret McCreery. Allen N. was a member of the lower house of the legislature one term. Aaron has been a member of the U. P. church for fifty-five, and an elder for over thirty years. Elijah I. has been chorister of Mahoning U. P. church thirty years, and deacon of the same seven years. The family, as a whole, have attended this church from its organization.

Alexander Scroggs Work's children were: Miriam, d., m. to John Hopkins; John B., m. to Nancy Thomas; Rachel, d.; Margaretta, d., m. to J. Miller Thompson; Wm. H., m. to Nancy A. Simpson; Phineas A., m. to Sarah A. Blose; James C., d. in the army; Maria; Nancy J., d., m. to Henry K. Blose; Allen S.; Elijah; Rebecca Ann; Josiah; and Jesse G. Wm. H. was in company C, 206th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Phineas A. was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, about nine months. James C. was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, nearly three years, and was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. The children of John B., a son of Alexander Scroggs Work were: Otis C.; Israel Thomas, d.; Linus Ward, d.; Hannah M.; and Mary Elder. The children of Phineas A., son of Alexander Scroggs Work are: Calvin Thorn; Willie Edwin, d.; Albert Brown, d.; Edson L. and Estella M. John Work's (a son of William the pioneer) children were: Mary A., m. to J. R. Elder; Wm. J., m. to Rachel K. Lewis; Robert H., m. to Eliza J. Ayers; Aaron W., m. to Mary B. Lewis; Joseph S., m. to Rolenda McMaster; James T., m. to Frances Campbell; Allen N., d.; John A., d.; Hugh H., m. to Eliza Conner; Martha, m. to Wm. Calderwood; Minerva J., m. to McKee Stiteler; Moses T.; and Rachel A., m. to John Blakely. James T. was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. Allen N. was in company H, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers for two years; he was in Andersonville and other confederate prisons for seven months, and died at home a few weeks after his return. John A. was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, and had served about a year when he was killed. R. H. was in the 22d regiment Pennsylvania militia, during the Chambersburg raid. The children of Wm. I., a son of John Work were: Horace Mann, d.; and Maria L., m. to Samuel M. Cribbs. On the Wm. I. Work farm, is an apple tree eight feet in circumference, planted by James Thompson, in 1814. The children of R. H., a son of John Work were; T. C.; F. L.; John H.; Sylvanus H., d.; Lester S.; Martha E. E.; Minnie O.; Sarah Ida, and Ann Eliza. The children of Hugh H., a son of John Work were: Charles Osborne, and Ruth Ann. The children of William Work, a son of William, the pioneer, were: Jeremiah B., d.; James M., m. first to Margaret Hamilton, d., and second to Mrs. Anna R. Morton nee Getty; David B., m. first to Sarah E. Colkitt, and second to Frances Colkitt; Euphemia, m. to William Hamilton; Elizabeth, d.; Susan, m. to Jas. T. Hamilton; Mary J., m. to Amos Miller; Joseph B., d.; Wm. A. S., m. to Mary A. Ross; Silas W., m. to Caroline Simpson; Clara Bell; and John C. F. David B. was in the war of 1861. Wm. A. S., was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. Silas W., was in the late war. James served as county commissioner one term, and is now acting as justice of the peace. The children of James M., a son of Wm. Work were: Rhoda H., d.; Clara Frances, d.; Jeremiah Walter; Carl Hamilton, d.; Jessie F., m. to Jas. L. Park, jr.; Edsell H., d.; Lizzie E.; Lottie N.; Mary C.; and Margaret H. The children of W. A. S., a son of Wm. Work were: Harry C., Bessie L., J. B. R., Nancy J., and Mary Eva. The children of Allen N., a son of Wm. Work the pioneer, were: Alex. d.; Joshua L., d.; Nancy, d.; Ephraim E., m. to Isabella C. Simpson, d. in 1877; and Rachel H. Ephraim E.'s, a son of Allen N., children are: John K., Sylvester A., Sherman L., George W., Frank B., Linies C., Charles S., and Lydia A. The children of Matthew and Sarah Steel, nee Work, a daughter of William Work, the pioneer, were: Lettice, d., m. to Frederick G. Hoover, d.; William, m. to Dorcas Hamilton; Miriam W., m. to Samuel H. Van Horn; Robert A., m. to Margaret Warden; James W., d.; Moses T., m. to Susan S. Martin; and Aaron W. Robert A. was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months. Aaron W. was in the 2d battalion six months, Pennsylvania volunteers and company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. Moses T. was in company G, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and nine months. He was wounded at Plymouth, N. C. He was in Andersonville prison nine months, weighing two hundred and eight pounds at entrance, and one hundred and twenty-four at departure. Moses T. Steele's, a son of Matthew Steele, children were: Anna Mary, Aaron, and Jennie Myrtle. The children of Aaron A., a son of William, the pioneer, were: Lettice E., d., m. to John R. Elder; John S., d., m. to Jane M. Hamilton; Miriam, m. to Noah Jeffries; Jane, d.; Mary, m. first to Watson Colkitt, and second to ———; Martha, d., m. to Joseph Williamson; Cyrus, d.; Nancy J., d.; Robert N., m. to Catharine Brown; Demosthenes; George, d.; Nelson; Alexander; Thomas; Sarah, d., and Margaret, d., twins. John S. was in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, and died in the service. The children of John R. and Lettice E. Elder, nee Work, a daughter of Aaron Work, were: Aaron W., m. to Serena Williamson; and David H. The children of John S., a son of Aaron Work, were: Cyrus E., Cora A., Anna B., d. The children of Moses T., a son of William Work, the pioneer, were: Thaddeus, d.; Milton, m. to Elizabeth Craig; Arabella, m. to James Work; Elizabeth; m. to Joseph Hood; Francis, d.; Mary; Sarah S., m. to John M. Lytle; Hubert; and Myrtle; Milton served in the Pennsylvania militia during the Chambersburg raid excitement. The children of Elijah I., a son of William, the pioneer, were: Maria L., m. to J. A. Dodge; Ascenath, m. to J. C. Mathews; Samuel M., m. to Sarah J. Ross; Jeremiah B., of the class of "1880," Westminster College; and Mary R. H. Samuel M.'s, a son of Elijah I. Work, children are: Eva, and Charles Ross.

Mrs. Mary Horn Work was born on what is now the James Taylor farm, Young township, in 1799, and was the daughter of James Ewing and Mary Horn. The former was a native of Franklin county, and was a son of William and Eleanor Ewing nee Thompson. The former was of Irish descent and died when his son Alexander was a babe. The children were: Adam, killed by the Indians; Isabella, d. about eighty-three years of age, m. to M. Coyle, d.; John, d. about eighty years of age, m. to Sarah Moore, d.; James, d. in 1851, eighty-four years of age, m. in 1795 to Mary Horn, daughter of Thomas and Susan Horn nee Moffitt, who died in 1858, eighty-six years of age; Robert, d. about seventy years of age, m. to Martha Thompson, d.; and Alexander, d. a bachelor, about seventy years of age. James, John, Robert and Alexander came to the vicinity of what was afterward McFarland's mill in 1788. James served under Gen. Wayne in the Indian wars. Robert and Alexander were in the war of 1812. James Ewing's children were: William, d. in childhood; Sarah, d. in childhood; John, d., m. to Lettice Work, d., and Mary H., m. in 1819, to James Work, d. in 1860, sixty-five years of age. James Ewing removed in 1804, to the farm now occupied by Abner Griffith, East Mahoning township, and in 1814, to what is now the Samuel Aul farm, North Mahoning township, where he had purchased of John Brown, in 1808, a log mill, well known afterward as the Ewing mill and later as the Dilts mill. James and Mary H. Work's children were: William Scott, d.; James Ewing, d., graduate of Washington College, died whild he was a law student; Mary, d., m. to William G. McCreery; John Scroggs, d.; Miriam, d.; William A., m. first to Phonia Briggs, d.; and second to Maria Stewart; Sarah, m. to Abner Briggs; Josiah, m. to Sarah Hindman, daughter of Rev. John Hindman; John Harvey, m. to Jane McCreery, d.; Anna Louisa, m. to Samuel Aul; and Isabella, d. John Harvey was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers about three years. He was twice wounded. William A.'s (a son of James and Mary H Work) children were: James E., d.; Samuel B., m. to Anna Aker, formerly of York county; Abner J., Mary E., Anna J., d.; J. Archibald Stewart, d.; and Flora Sarah. The children of Samuel B., a son of William A., are: A. LeClare and Earnest Verne. Josiah's (a son of James and Mary H. Work) children were: Mary E., Thomas Scroggs, John C. T., Jeremiah C., Rachel E. and Anna Belia, twins; Ruth A., James Ewing, and Robert Marshall.

John Work, a brother of William Work, the pioneer, and who had migrated with him from Cumberland to Westmoreland county, came to what is now the John L. Work farm, in 1804. His wife was Mary Brady, a relative of Captain Samuel Brady, the Indian fighter. He was one of the first justices of the peace in Mahoning township, and one of the first elders in Gilgal Presbyterian church. He was found dead in the woods. His children were: Elizabeth, m. to Matthew Winecoop, d.; Letty, d., m. to Peter Brewer, d.; James, d., in 1844, fifty-seven years old, m. to Rebecca Leasure, b. in 1802; Samuel, d. in 1875, over seventy-eight years of age, m. to Elizabeth Johnston, b. in 1803; Jane, d., m. to William Justice; and William, d. James Work's children were: Jane Elizabeth, m. to Hezekiah Wood, jr., d. in 1866, forty-seven years old; John L., m. to Mary Doty; William, d.; Mary Hannah, m. to Charles Williamson; James B., m. to Sarah Dilts; Sarah Catharine, m. to John B. Colkitt; Samuel P., d.; Rebecca Letitia, d.; Harriet N., d., m. to H. S. Thompson; Sophia C., m. to Daniel Lowry, d.; and Rebecca Margaret, m. to Luther Richards. James B. was in the war of 1861. John L. was justice of the peace for several years. Hezekiah Wood, jr., was a surveyor, teacher, merchant and justice of the peace. His children were: Rebecca E., m. to Rev. Michael Colver; William Harvey, m. to Mary Kimmel; Mary Alice, d., m. to Dr. William B. Ansley; James A., m. to Sarah E. Reed; Horace P., m. to Alice Townsend; Orson Clark; Effie Florence; and Cora Ethel, d. The children of John L., a son of James and Rebecca Work nee Leasure, were: J. C., m.; Melissa J., d.; Elbert D., m. to Julia Jackson; Russell N., Sarah R., Laura, d.; Harry White, Mary H. V., and Charles S. The children of Samuel, a son of John Work, the pioneer, were: John A., m. to Agnes Hastings; William M., m. to Ann Eliza Wallace; Sarah J., d.; James I., m. to Arabella Work; Mary, d., and Robert Newton, killed at the battle of the Wilderness. Robert N. was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months, and also in the 61st regiment Pennsylvania volunteers. John A. and James I. were in company D, 135th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. John A.'s children were: Jane E., m. to Harvey Allison; Mary Bella, m. to William K. Black; Marilla Emeline, m. to Sylvester McCall; and Robert Granville, m. to Margaretta Hopkins. James I.'s children were: Margaret H., Elizabeth J., Tabitha, Edith L., Anna B., Martha, Thaddeus, and Frank Earnest. William M.'s children were: Mary J., d.; Samuel, d.; Laura C., d.; Lizetta; Ruth; Thomas J.; Robert W., and William M.

John Leasure.—He was a native of the Sewickley settlement, Westmoreland county, and was the son of John Leasure, an early settler of the Sewickley neighborhood. Our subject was one of the scouts sent to guard the houses of the settlers along Crooked creek, in what is now western Indiana and eastern Armstrong counties. He was married in 1796, to Jane Culbertson, and lived for a time on the farm now the property of Benj. Walker, Armstrong tp. In 1809, he removed to the farm now occupied by Sam. T. Brady, E. Mahoning tp. The warrant of the land was issued Jan. 15, 1802, and the patent bears date of Jan. 17, 1802. It contained 396 acres, and both warrant and patent are granted to John Leasure. He was a mighty hunter, and paid for several farms with the proceeds of wolf scalps. He died in 1844; at the age of eighty-two; his wife died in 1838, about sixty-five years of age. Their children were: Catnarine, d., m. to Nathaniel Simpson, d.; Solomon, d., m. to Mary Kirkpatrick; John, d., m. to Mary Kinter, d.; Jane, d., m. to Solomon Hall, d.; Rebecca, m. to James Work, d.; Mary, d., m. to Robert Thompson, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel T. Brady; Abraham Y., b. in 1809, m. to Mary Craig; George, d., and Culbertson, d., twins; Sarah, d., m. to William Mahon and Margaret, m. to Andrew Shields. Abraham Y.'s children were: Samuel C., d., m. to Ann R. McQuown, d.; Louisa, m. to Conrad Piper; Lucinda, m. to John Moore; John W., m. to Emily McAdo; Jane, m. to John O. Richardson; Judson, d.; James, m. to Agnes Hopkins; and Mary Elizabeth, d. John W. was in the war of 1861, about twenty months.

Christopher Stuchal was born on the farm now occupied by William Stuchal, White township, in 1805, and was a son of Abraham and Barbara Stuchal nee Lydick. The former was a son of John Stuchal who came to the county about 1785, and resided on a tract of land now occupied by Mrs. Martha Mitchell, White township. His children were: Abraham, d. in 1833, m. to Barbara Lydick, d.; Christopher, d., m. to Elizabeth d.; Jacob, d., m. to Margaret Fairman, d.; Mary, d., m. to John McHenry, d., and a daughter, d., married to a Mr. Caldwell, d. Abraham and Christopher were in the war of 1812. Abraham's children were: Jacob, d., m. to Ellen Fairman, d.; Abraham, d., m. to Ann Craig; John, d., m. to Mary McCurdy, d.; Mary, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Christopher Lydick, d.; Barbara, d.; Christopher, m. to Jane Evans, daughter of John Evans, the surveyor; Elizabeth, d.; m. to David Craver, d.; Margaret, m. to Robert McCurdy; William, m. to Jane Lydick, d. Christopher's children were: Martha Jane, m. to Jackson Stump; John M., m. in 1865 to Hannah Simpson; Milton; Rhoda, d.; Angeline; and Amanda, m. to James T. Brady. John M. was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers about nine months. Milton was in the 206th about one year. John M.'s children were: Jessie E., and Danks. The children of Christopher, a son of John Stuchal, were: John, d., m. to Rebecca Mahan, d.; Cristopher, d., m. to Jane Mahan, d.; Mary, m. to a Fairman; Jacob, d., m. first to Margaret St. Clair, d., second to Margaret Johnston, d., and third to Patience Doty, d.. Abraham, d., m. to Mary M. St. Clair, d.; James, d., m. to Maria Weaver; Eliza, d., m. to William Stuchal; Catharine, d.; Barbara, d., m. to John Moonshower; William, d.; Thomas, m., Joseph, d., m. to Margaret Hazlett; and Samuel, d., m. to Liby Nahan. Jacob's children were: Samuel, m. to Phebe Doty; Joseph S., d., Presbyterian minister, graduate of Jefferson College, and Western Theological Seminary; he died October 12, 1875, in the fortieth year of his age, after fourteen years' service in the ministry; he was married to Josephine Martin; Christopher D., d., m. to Anna Hazlett, d.; John Johnston and Sarah E., twins, the former was married to Elizabeth Donahey, and the latter to John M. Byers; Margaret J., m. to Jonas St. Clair; and Jacob T., m. to Alice Donahey. Samuel's children were: Mary Jane, d.; William Marshall, m to Mary Elizabeth Hamilton; Robert Irvin, d.; Joseph St. Clair; Laura E.; Hannah C.; and Maggie Rosetta. Jacob T.'s (a son of Jacob) only child is Fern Edgerton.

WILLIAM RICHARDSON was born in Huntington county, in 1794, and was a son of George and Elizabeth Richardson nee Fleming, who located in Indiana county about the time of the war of 1812. In 1815, William went to Indiana and learned the trade of a harness maker, and was married in 1818, to Hannah McCullough and removed to Absalom Woodards, in Armstrong county. He located in Marion in 1845, and removed to the farm now occupied by him, in 1818. His wife died in 1844, at the age of forty-three. He was again married in 1845, to Jane Brady. His children were: George, d.; Mary, d.; Evaline, d.; Vinnina, d.; Elizabeth J.; Caroline, d.; Charlotte, d.; Augustus Washington, d; Anna Margaret, m. to Thomas Steffy; Isabella C., m. to Marshall W. Smith; Mary, d.; and Alice Amanda.

JOHN R. ELDER.—His great-grandfather, Robert Elder, emigrated to America from Ireland, about the year 1750. He located in Path valley, Franklin county, Pennsylvania, where he died about the year 1810. According to the family traditions he was a man of small stature, but great energy. He was a farmer, and also dealt in horses, buying them in the north, training them and selling them in the south. It is perhaps from this circumstance, that so many of his descendants have a great penchant for horse flesh. Robert Elder brought a wife with him from Ireland. Her maiden name was Elizabeth Watt. By her he had two sons, David and Abraham. After his first wife's death, Robert Elder married again and became the father of five sons, to-wit: John, Matthew, Robert, Samuel and Joseph. Of the sons of the second wife but little is known. The youngest one, Joseph, died in 1858, in Ligonier valley, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, and some of his descendants are still there. The sons of the first wife, David and Abraham, removed to Half-moon, Centre county, Pennsylvania, shortly after the close of the revolution. Abraham died there about 1825. He was an extensive farmer, and kept a public house. His son Robert inherited his estate, and became well known as a farmer and drover. His (Robert's) only surviving son is George W. Elder, an eminent lawyer of Lewistown, Pennsylvania. David Elder removed to Spruce creek, Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, in 1796. He purchased a farm near the village of Graysville, where he died in 1823. He served a short time in the army during the revolution, and was also in one of the expeditions against the Indians, in the western territory. His wife was Jane Boggs, daughter of Andrew Boggs, who was one of the first settlers in Bald Eagle valley, Centre county, Pennsylvania, having settled there as early as 1767. David Elder had five sons and three daughters, nearly all of whom are now dead. Robert, the oldest son, was the only one of them that ever located in Indiana county, Pennsylvania.

ROBERT MCCREARY was born in 1816, on the McCreery homestead, and was a son of William and Margaret McCreery, nee McClain. The former was a son of Samuel and Margaret McCreery, nee Fletcher. William was born in Ireland, and came, in 1792, with his father and family, to America, and lived for some years in what are now Juniata and Mifflin counties.—About 1800, he removed to what is now Conemaugh township, where his father and a brother, Andrew, had previously settled in what is now the Hugh Speedy farm. In removing his goods from Mifflin county to Conemaugh township, he made nineteen trips on pack-horses. In 1803, he purchased the homestead now occupied by his son, William G., in East Mahoning, made a clearing, built a cabin, and put in a crop. In the fall of 1804, he was married, and in the spring of 1805 he removed to his new home. Samuel McCreery, d. in 1817, about ninety-four years of age. His wife died in Ireland about 1790. William McCreery d. in 1858, eighty-four years of age; his wife d. in 1845, sixty-eight years old. The children were: Jane, b in 1805, m. in 1835 to Ebenezer Hammill; James, d.; James, m. first, in 1838, to Rebecca Smith, d. in 1853, second, in 1854, to Rachel L. Hammill, d. in 1856, and third to Mrs. Isabella Lytle, nee Smith; Samuel F., d., m. to Hannah McEwen; Alexander McClain, m. to Hannah Winecoop; Margaret, m. to Elijah I. Work; Robert, m. to Nancy Dushane; Mary A., d., m. to Hugh H. Hamilton, d.; William G., m. first to Mary Work, d., and second to Mrs. Rachel Lytle, nee Miller; Martha E., d., m. to Samuel Matthews; and John. The McCreery homestead was purchased of William P. Brady, in 1803. It contained one hundred and twenty acres, and cost three dollars per acre. James McCreery's children were: William, d.; Jane, d., m. to John H. Work; Margaret M., teacher; Samuel S., m. to Martha E. Kern; Floretta, d.; Hugh H., teacher; Agnes M., d.; Mary E.; and Thomas W. Samuel S. was in the 2d battalion, six months volunteers, and in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. James McCreery located on his present farm, then in the woods, in 1838. He has been an elder in the U. P. church, and its predecessor, for forty-one years. Robert McCreery's children were: William H., U. P. minister, m. to Martha Marshall; John, d; James Alexander, d; Mary Jane, d.; Isaac Newton, m. ——; Margaret A.; Sarah Ellen, m. to T. J. McKee; James McClain; John Snodgrass, m. to Emma Watts; Ebenezer H.; Joseph F.; and Robert A. Nancy Dushane, the wife of Robert McCreery, was a daughter of Isaac and Mary Dushane, nee Snodgrass. The latter was a daughter of James and Mary Snodgrass, nee Hughes. The latter died in 1847, over ninety four years of age. The Robert McCreery land was patented in 1813, to members of the Holland land company. There was a well-defined trail on this land, plainly visible many years after the improvements were made. He located on this tract in 1849.

JOHN CRAIG was born in the Conecocheague valley, near Chambersburg, Franklin county, in 1810, and was the son of Samuel and Jane Craig nee Kelly. The former was a native of Ireland and came in 1799 to Franklin county, where he was married to Jane Kelly, a native of Ireland. In 1811, the family removed to the vicinity of Hannastown, Westmoreland, where Samuel was engaged in teaching his life occupation. In 1822 the family removed to the vicinity of Marion where Mr. Craig became widely known as an early educator. He died in Brookville, in 1871, in his eighty-ninth year; his wife died in the same place in 1864, in her seventy-second year. The children were: Mary, m. to Abraham Y. Leasure; Samuel, m. to Margaret Park; John, m. to Mary Brown; James, m. twice, secondly to Mary Allen; Jane, d., m, to Samuel Barr; William, M. D., m. to Anna Brown; Andrew, m. to Elizabeth Brady; and Nancy, m. to Samuel Black. John's children were: Elizabeth, d.; Jane Elizabeth, m. to Milton Work; William B., d., a member of company M, 13th Pennsylvania cavalry for five months; Almira, m. to William Kelso; Sarah B., m. to J. O. McLaughlin; Agnes, m. to Silas Marshall, and Anna P. The Craig farm was patented in 1800, in the name of William P. Brady, and was called "Green Park. The orchard was planted by Jeremiah Brown, the father of Mrs. Craig, in 1808. David Cummins, the father of Elizabeth Cummins, the wife of the aforenamed Jeremiah Brown, used to take care of the women and children when the men were away fighting the Indians. Sometimes he would pilot his charges to Eastern Pennsylvania or Virginia. On one occasion Mr. Cummins and wife buried their pewter plates, mugs, &c., near the present site of Homer City, and were gone fourteen years before they returned. After a long search Mr. Cummins found his "pewter fixins" undisturbed. Mrs. John Craig has one of these pewter plates in her possession to-day.

JAMES N. GIBSON was born in 1852, in Centre township, on the farm now occupied by Joseph Pounds, and was the son of James and Matilda Gibson nee Lucas. The former was born on the same property and was also the son of James Gibson, who and father were among the early settlers of Centre township. James and Matilda Gibson's children were: Thomas S., m. to Susan Reisinger; James N., m. to Martha J. Williams, d in 1878, in her twenty-fifth year; Joha M., m. to Amanda Marks; Mary E., m. to Milton McCoy; Clara Bell, Martha J., d. d. Lily Bell. James N.'s children are: Mabel and Clara M[illegible] 1878,

A. S. MCGINNITY was born in 1846, near Bethel Church, C[illegible] m. to township, and was the son of James C. and Elizabeth McGinnity nee Steele. The former was born near what is now Jacksonville. He died in 1872, over fifty-six years of age. His children were: Margaret Ann, d.; Robert Orr, d., m. to Martha A. McBrier, d., and A. S., m. to Martha Hopkins. The children of the latter are: Mary Lizzie, James Horace, Anna Margaret, and Alice Bovard. James C. McGinnity located in Marion in 1854. He was one of the first two justices of the peace after the incorporation of the borough. He was the son of James and Abarilla McGinnity nee Parrish, who were married in 1801, in Huntingdon county, and who removed to Centre township in 1805. He assisted in building the first Indiana court house. He was a native of Ireland, and came to America when only twelve years of age. He died in 1854, about eighty-four years of age. The children were: Mary, Rachel, m. to Wm. Campbell, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Joseph Palmer; Elizabeth, born in 1809, m. in 1834, to Joseph Parrish, d. in 1869, nearly seventy-seven years of age; Rebecca, m. to Thomas Beynon, d.; John P., m. to Marilla Hamilton; and James C., d.

Mrs. Rebecca Campbell was born in Huntingdon county in 1804, and was the daughter of James and Ibbarilla McGinnity nee Parish. The former located in 1804, in what is now Brush Valley township. He died in 1841, eighty-four years of age; his wife in 1847, seventy-five years old. Our subject was married in 1849 to William Campbell, a half-brother of Judge Joseph Campbell. William died in 1872. His first wife was Jane Galbraith. The children by the first wife were: Joseph, m. first to Catharine Baker, d., and second to a Miss Palmer; Rebecca, m. to James Baker; Mary Ann, d.; and Jane, m. to John Van Leer.

James Hopkins was born in Centre county in 1816, and was the son of Robert and Rosanna Hopkins nee Patterson, both natives of Ireland. Robert came to America in 1801, and resided for some years in Lancaster county, subsequently removing to Centre county. In 1825, he located in Indiana county, and two years later located on the farm now occupied by our subject. He died in 1858, about seventy-six years of age; his wife's decease occurred some years prior. The children were: William, b. in 1806, m. to Mary A. Shankle; Thomas, m. to Mary Mauk; Robert, d., m. to Mary Hamilton; John, d., m. first to Susannah Gelore, d., and second to Mary A. Watson; Mary, m. to Isaiah Van Horn; James, m. to Mrs. Mary A. Hopkins nee Watson; Patterson, m. to Mary Mabon, d.; and Aaron, m. first to Martha Van Horn, d., and second to Eliza Baker. The Robert Hopkins tract was patented to the Holland Land Company in 1813. William Hopkins' children were: Rosanna, m. to William Miller; Thomas, m. to Phebe Moore; Jane, d.; Robert, m. to Catharine McQuown; Hannah, m. to George Baker; Margaret, m. to John McNamee; William; James W., m. to Catharine Covert; Hugh; Emily, d.; William Henry; Thompson; and Sarah, d. James, Thomas, Robert and Hugh were in the war of 1861. James was a prisoner over ten months. George Baker, William Miller and John McNamee were also soldiers in the same war. Baker was a prisoner at Andersonville, and Miller was a captive at Libby. The children of Thomas and Mary Hopkins nee Mauk were: John H., m. to Sarah McGregor; Susan, m. to Benjamin McCann; Jane; Robert, m. to Phebe Hilliard; Jacob, m. to Mary Hawk; James, m. to Hannah Schaffner; Mary, m. to John Hutchinson; Eliza; Sarah Ann; Eve, d.; Aaron, and Margaret. Thomas Hopkins settled on his farm in McCalmont township, Jefferson county, in 1842. His wife's parents were Jacob and Susan Mauk nee Walter. Jacob settled in Perry township in 1838; he died in 1866, over seventy-four years of age; his wife in 1857, fifty eight years old; they were born in Bedford county. James and Mary A. Hopkins' children were: John, Thomas, Archibald and Alice. Mrs. Hopkins' children by her first husband, John Hopkins, were: William F., and Nancy.

John Hamilton was born on what is now the George Travis' farm, Jefferson county, within one mile of the corner of Indiana, Armstrong and Jefferson counties, the farm being both in Indiana and Jefferson; he was a son of David and Elizabeth Hamilton nee McFarland. The former was a son of James Hamilton, a Covenanter, who lived and died in Ireland. David came in 1803, with his wife and one child, James, to Greensburg, where he worked for Judge Young for four years, and obtained the money with which to purchase the land above named, at the rate of one dollar and a quarter per acre. In [illegible] when the family removed to the land, they came in a [illegible] was mark[illegible] the present site of Shelocta, and thence, there being [illegible]tled in Newpor[illegible] trail to their destination, they forwarded their baggage on pack-horses. David Hamilton died in 1851, at the age of seventy-two; his wife in 1821, about forty-three years old. The children were: James, d.; John, m. in 1831, to Martha Hopkins; and Robert, m. to Elizabeth Johnston. Robert was county commissioner of Jefferson for one term. John's children are: Margaret, m. to William Nicol; Nancy, m. to Nathaniel North; Ann, m. to Samuel Hazlett; Elizabeth, m. to Girard Winecoop; and David. John Hamilton located on his present homestead in 1831. The land was patented to the Holland Land Company. An Indian trail extended over the tract, from the direction of Cherry Tree toward Kittanning. The pioneers spoke of the Indians passing along this path and exchanging furs and skins for provisions.

William H. Neal was born in Slippery Rock township, Butler county, in 1823, and was the son of Robert and Sarah Neal, nee Love. The former was the son of Smith and Sarah Neal, nee Cochran. Smith Neal was born in Carlisle, Cumberland county. He started for the Revolutionary army with the intention to enlist, but peace was declared before he reached his destination. He served in the war of 1812. For several seasons he keel boated on the Juniata river. He was in Pittsburgh when there were very few houses. He died, in 1865, in Cowanshannock township, Armstrong county, nearly one hundred years of age. His wife died in 1863, about eighty-six years of age. Smith's brothers, John and William, were also early settlers of the Allegheny valley. John locating in Butler and William in Allegheny county. He sometimes went to Pittsburgh, a distance of forty-six miles, to get a doctor. In the early days he made coffins out of the sycamore, hewing with the broad-axe, staining with red alder and cherry, and polishing with beeswax. He built a mill on the Cowanshannock in 1836. Robert Neal died in 1862, at the age of sixty-four; his wife died in 1857, sixty years of age. Their children were: Smith, m. first to Margaret Sloan, d., and second to Caroline Jewett; William H., m. first to Elizabeth Stuchal, d., and second to Harriet N. Barr; Mary, d.; Rosetta P., m. to Thomas Marshall; Alexander; Mary J., d., m. to James Hanegan. William H.'s children were: John L., m. to Ruth A. Horton; Rebecca J., m. to Joseph M. Wilson; Sarah E., m. to William A. Hamilton; Robert S.; and Ormand T. John L. was in the war of 1861, about thirteen months.

John W. Weston was born in Huntingdon county in 1830, and was the son of Abraham and Margaret Weston, nee McCrum. The former was the son of Thomas and Mary Weston, both natives of Germany. In 1834, Abraham and family removed to the tract of land now occupied by Thamas Weston, West Mahoning township. He died in 1852, at the age of fifty-five. His wife is living, being over eighty-two years of age. Their children are: Mary, m. to George McGregor; Thomas, m. to Jane Condron; Elizabeth, d.; Rebecca, m. to Walter Wilson, d.; and John W., m. in 1855 to Hannah Johnson. John W.'s children are: Rutha L., m. to Abram Pearce; Margaret A.; Ida L.; Ormsby L.; Lizzie M.; Asbury G.; and Avra Thomas. Our subject located in Marion in 1866.

W. R. Smyers was born on the homestead in what is now Grant township, in 1847, and was a son of William and Elizabeth Smyers, nee Riddle. (See sketch William Smyers, Grant township.) W. R. was married to Mary E. Hunter. Their children are: Arzy Glair, Bertrand H., and Sadie, d. Our subject was originally a farmer, then learned the blacksmith trade with his father-in-law, and for the last seven years has managed the establishment in Marion.

Robert Y. Campbell was born in Brown township, Lycoming county, in 1815, and was the son of John and Mercy Campbell nee Young, a daughter of Robert Young, a native of England, and a soldier in the Revolution. John Campbell was a son of James and Rebecca Campbell nee English. The former was of Scotch birth, and a soldier in the Revolution, dying from the effect of wounds. John came to the tract occupied by our subject in 1840, where he and his wife died. Their children were: Margaret, d.; Jane, d., m. to Daniel White; Robert Y. and Rebecca, twins, the former was m. to Sarah Campbell, and the latter was m. to Barruck Tozer, d.; Ann, d., m. to Martin Brandt; John B., M. D., m. three times, and William Morrison, d. Robert Y.'s children were: Mary Ann, d.; Eli J., m. to Elizabeth Gallantine; Benjamin, d. in the army, at Fortress Monroe; Jane, m. to David Black; Rebecca, m. to Thomas Smith; Mary, m. to Scott Arthurs; Michael M., d. in the army; and Ann, m. to Arthur Gallantine. Eli J. was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. Eli J.'s children are: Etta Estella, John B. and Clarence C. Scott Arthurs' children are: Robert Niles, Sarah Ann and George Norman.

JOHN W. LOUGHRY was born on what is now the R. W. Allison farm, White township, in 1809, and was the son of James and Ann Loughry nee Wilson. The latter was a daughter of John Wilson, a soldier in Washington's Life Guards, in the Revolution. James Loughry was born in what is now Blacklick township, about two miles northwest of Campbell's Mills. He was the son of William and Esther Loughry nee Allison, natives of Ireland. William was an early justice of the peace of what is now Indiana county. He had been an early locator on the Loyalhanna, Westmoreland county. His children were: James, m. to Ann Wilson; Joseph, m.; John, m. to Margaret Graham; William, m. to a Miss Chambers; Benjamin, m.; Rebecca, m. to Malachi Sutton, d., and Sarah, m. to William Robinson. All are now deceased. James' children were: John W., m. to Jane Lightcap; Mary, d., m. to Abraham Moor, jr., d.; William, d., m. to Margaret Lucas; Alexander, m. to Louisa McClain; Martha, d.; Rebecca, m. to Gibson Stewart, d.; Elizabeth; Margaret, d.; Robert, m. to Susannah Flickenger, d.; and Joseph, m. to Martha Allison. James Loughry's second wife was Jane Shields. Their children were: Ann, m. to James Park. Margaret, d., m. to Dr. D. M. Marshall; James N., M. D., m. to Matilda Duff; Nelson; Esther, m. to Dr. Burrill, and Mary J. Our subject's children were: Samuel Wilson, d.; James M., m. in 1864, to Flora Smith; Johnston L., m. to Ann McLaughlin; Mary J., d., and Margaret A. James M. was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers about nine months. James M. Loughry's children are: Mary Jane, Susan Elizabeth, John W. Wilson, and Clarence May.

MRS. MARY LYDICK was born in 1800, on what is now the Richard McGaughey farm, five miles east of Indiana, and was the daughter of John and Penina Lydick nee Rice, a daughter of Conrad Rice. John was the son of John and Mary Lydick, who settled on a tract adjoining the present site of Indiana, about 1783. John and Mary Lydick's children were: Jacob, m. to Mary Stuchal; John, m. to Penina Rice; James, m. to Jane Boyle; Mary, m. to Wm. Caldwell; Nancy, m. to John Baird; Patrick, m. to Mary McHenry; Elizabeth, m. to Christopher Stuchel; Barbara, married to Abraham Stuchel; and Margaret, m. John G. Allison—all are dead. James served in the war of 1812, about six months. John and Penina Lydick's children were: Samuel, m. to Cetharine Lydick, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to William Lewis, d.; Mary, m. in 1818, to John Lydick, a son of Jacob; John, b. on Two-Lick, in 1790, d. in 1855; Penina; Nancy, d., m. to David Pollock, d.; Susan, m. to Jacob Craig, d.; Joseph, m. first to Jane Lockhart, d., and second to Mrs. Jane Saddler nee Elliott; and Barbara, m. to John Byers. Our subject's children were: Jacob, d., Abraham, d.; Benjamin, d.; Penina, d.; Stephen T., d.; Joshua, m. first to Mary A. Willis, d. in 1855, twenty-two years of age, and second to Mary J. Row; Stuchel, m. to Jane Van Horn; and William W., m. to Mary Van Horn. Joshua and William W., were in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Our subject resides with her son Joshua. She has a spinning wheel made by Wilson, the noted spinning wheel maker, which she has used since 1830. She has been a member of the Presbyterian church since 1839. Joshua's children are: Louisa, Samuel, William and Sylvester. Josep Lydick's (a son of John and Penina) children were: Francis, m. to Martha Bagley; Sarah Melinda; Mary E., d; Parmelia Jane, m. to William T. Lewis; and Milton, d. Francis was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers about three years. He was taken prisoner. The Joshua and Joseph Lydick tracts were patented in the name of Edward Burd. The early settlers called the Joseph Lydick tract "Burd's Hill."

EDWARD J. S. BRANDON was born in what is now Rayne township, in 1831, and was the son of Samuel R. and Ann Brandon, nee Spence. The latter was a daughter of James Spence, a native of Ireland and a soldier in the Black-hawk war. Samuel R. died in 1864, at the age of sixty-six; his wife, born in 1799, is still living. The father of Samuel R. came from New Jersey to Westmoreland conuty, where he served as one of the sheriffs prior to 1803. In that year he located on what is now the James L. Lewis farm in Washington township. He was a justice of the peace in both Westmoreland and Indiana counties. His wife died at the age of ninety-six. The latter's children were: William, d., m. ——; Martha, d., m. to James Guthrie, d.; John, d.; Margaret, d., m. to John Coon, d.; Samuel R., d. m. to Ann Spence; Thomas, d., m. to Isabella McCracken, d.; Mary, m. to Mr. Matthews; James, m. to Catharine Knowlton, d.; and Sarah Ann, m. first to John B. Goff, and second to a Mr. McKee. Samuel R. was justice of the peace over twenty years. Samuel R.'s children were: Mary, d., m. to Joseph Proctor; John, m. first to Nancy Travis, d., and second to Mrs. Hart; Martha, d., m. to William Miller; Edward, J. S., m. first, in 1857, to Jemina Lightcap, d. in 1863, thirty-nine years of age, and second, in 1865, to Lucinda Lightcap; Margaret J., m. to William B. Fleming; Pressley N., m. to Elizabeth Little; Sarah Ann, m. to Charles Weaver; Catharine, d.; and Isabella, d. John was associate judge of Forest county one term. Pressley N. was in the war of 1861. Edward J. S.'s children are: Hugh M., Mary Jane, and Nancy Ann.

JOHN W. COMPTON was born on the farm now occupied by Thomas Bell, East Mahoning township, in 1828, and was the son of John and Susannah Compton, nee Altman, the latter being a daughter of George Altman, of Altman's run. She died in 1869, sixty-six years of age. John Compton was born in 1802, in the state of New Jersey, and was the son of John and Nancy Compton, nee Collier. The former was a native of England, and the latter of New Jersey. The family removed to what is now the Garvin Compton farm, Black-lick township, in 1802. John Compton, sr., d. in 1851, seventy-two years of age; his wife d. in 1843, sixty-eight years of age. Their children were: Susannah Altman, d.; Mary, d., m. to Mary Hoover, d.; and Gawin, m. to Angeline Crissman. In 1826, John Compton, jr., located on Thomas Bell farm, East Mahoning township. His children are: Maria, m. to M. Smith; John W. and Nancy, d., twins, the former was married to Naomi Campbell, the latter to Samuel White, d.; Geo., d., m. to Jane Clawson; Andrew, m. twice, first to Margaret Doty, d.; Wm. Altman, m. to Margaret Smith; and Elijah, m. first to Agnes Hanna, d., and second to Mrs. Elizabeth Price. John W. was in company B, 74th Pa. volunteers, about one year. Wm. A. was in the war of 1861 over three years. John W.'s children are: Mary J.; Angeline, d.; Mahaley, d.; and Alice L. The great-grandparents of our subject were Free-Will Baptists; his grandparents and parents were Methodists. His father was baptized into the M. E. faith in the old Jacob Hoover mill at Claysville; and he himself is a member of the same denomination.

SAMUEL T. BRADY was born on what is now the John Martin farm, Canoe township, in 1810, and was the son of John and Margaret Brady nee Barnes. The former was a son of Samuel Brady, a cousin of Captain Samuel Brady, the Indian fighter. He was a native of Cumberland county, and removed to the Ligonier Valley about 1805; he came a widower, with his son John, to what is now the John Work farm, in East Mahoning township, where he died, an old man, in 1808. His children were: Joseph, d., m. to a McBride, d.; John, d., m. as above; Margaret, d.; Hannah, d., m. to Peter Justice, d.; and Mary, m. to John Work, d. John was a soldier in the Indian wars; he died in 1855; at the age of eighty-four; his first wife died in 1813, at the age of twenty-seven; his second wife died in 1854. John's children were: Jane, m. to William Macbeth; William, m. first to Mary Henderson, and second to Catherine Wakefield; Samuel T., m. to Elizabeth Leasure; and Joseph. Samuel T.'s children were: Oliver C., m. to Margaret Crawford; John L., d.; David and Elizabeth, d., twins, the former was married to Mary J. Compton; and Jas. T. m. to Amanda Stuchel. Oliver C. is a surveyor. David served in company F, 74th Pennsylvania volunteers about six months. Oliver C.'s children are: Jennie E., Samuel C., William Banks, Alice A., Oliver R., and Frank L.

WILLIAM MATHEWS was born in Fairfield township, Westmoreland county, in 1816, and was the son of James and Nancy Mathews nee Hammill. The former was the son of William Mathews, a native of Ireland, who migrated to America when James was only four months old; his first settlement was in Somerset county in 1786. About 1792, he removed to Fairfield township, Westmoreland county, where he died, while James was serving in the war of 1812; his wife was Martha McLain, who died a few years after her husband's decease. Their children were: Mary, d., m. to Matthew Ray, d.; William, d., m. to Elizabeth Snodgrass, d.; Archibald, d., m. to Elizabeth Findley; James, d., m. to Nancy Hammill, d.; Jane, d., m. to James Lemon, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Thomas Trimble, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Archibald Johnston, d.; Samuel, m. to Mary Pollock, d.; Ann, d., m. to John Nesbitt, d.; John, d., m. to Nancy Trimble, d.; and Martha, d., m. to Hugh Knox, d. James died in 1865, in his seventy-ninth year; his wife in 1848, fifty-two years of age. James' children were: W[illiam], C[harch], m. to Susan Brown; Hugh H., m. to Sarah Cross; Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Orem: Joseph S., m. to Margaret Robb; Martha; Mary A., m. to James McFarland, d.; and Ann Elizabeth, m. to Jeremiah Eckerman. Hugh H. served in an Iowa regiment during the late war. Our subject's children are: John C., m. to Ascenath Work; Agnes J.; Martha E., m. to Rob't W. Hamilton; and James Edwin. John C. was in the 135th Pennsylvania volunteers nine months, and in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers about two years; he was a color bearer in the regiment, and was wounded at the capture of Petersburg. Our subject's grandfather was a Presbyterian, but he and his father were United Presbyterians. The Mathews farm was patented to James Kirkpatrick in 1837. Our subject has resided thereon since 1851.

John Hopkins was born on the Hopkins homestead in 1818, and was a son of John and Margaret Hopkins nee Jamison, a niece of John Jamison, who built the stone jail. The former was born in Ireland, and came to Baltimore in 1791, remaining in America six years, and then returning to Ireland; he revisited America in 1801, and lived for some years in Philadelphia, Adams county, and other localities, locating in Wheatfield township in 1808, and on the aforenamed homestead in 1816. Our subject was thrice married, first in 1851, to Miriam S. Work, d. in 1864, thirty-eight years of age; second in 1868 to Mrs. E. Beatty nee Cunningham, d. in 1874, forty-nine years old, and third in 1877, to Margaret Cox. His children are: William W., m. to Laura Ewing; Almira; A. M.; and Margaretta, m. to Robert G. Work.

George Mogle was born in Huntingdon county, in 1810, and was the son of Casper and Margaret Mogle nee Troutner. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was of German descent, was born in Northumberland county, and came to the farm now occupied by Henry Hoover, in 1814. He died in 1819, about sixty years of age; his wife in 1838, about seventy-nine years of age. The parents, our subject and the family generally, were Lutherans. The children were: Jacob, d., m. to Elizabeth Kuntz, d.; Margaret, d., m. to David Shrock, d.; Adam, d., m. to Catharine Neff, d.; Catharine, m; to Adam Stauffer; Eve, d., m. to William Riddle, d.; Mary, d., m. to Peter Riddle; Susan, m. to Henry Aul, d.; Esther, m. to Daniel Shirtle, d.; George, m. to Mary Jordan, d. April 5th, 1877, seventy years of age; and Sarah, d., m. to Joshua Brink, d. Our subject's children were: John, m. to Elizabeth Rishel; George, m. to Mary Wetzel; Margaret, d.; James, m. to Mary Cameron; Mary Jane, m. to Thompson Saddler; William, m. to Elizabeth McCoy; Thaddeus, m. to Mary Swan; Catharine, m. to James W. Bell; and Clark. George, William and Thaddeus, were in the war of 1861. The latter served in company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year.

John A. Stewart was born near Georgeville, in 1839, and was the son of William G. and Mary C. Stewart, nee Van Horn. The former was the son of John and Elizabeth Stewart nee Armstrong. Wm. G. Stewart's children were: Jno. A.; Henry V. S., d.; Elizabeth C., m. to Luther B. Whitham; Archibald S., d.; Margaretta T., m. to M. W. McLaughlin; Franklin L.; Kate; Ianthis; Edward R.; James Mansfield, and Ida. John A. was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for two years and eight months. He was twice wounded, losing an arm. Henry V. S. served in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for two years and eight months. He was killed at the Wilderness. Archibald S., was in the six months service. He also served in the signal service and died while with Sherman, on the march to the sea. Our subject was a carpenter by trade. In 1865, he was elected county treasurer, and served two years. He afterwards was borough treasurer and collector of Indiana. He acted for some time as clerk at the Deposit Bank. He was a patient for two years at "Our Home" Water Cure, Danville, Livingston county, New York, and though leaving in 1872, he has since continued in the diet. In 1876, he removed to his father's farm, one mile north of Marion, where he constructed a pen forty-eight by thirty-two feet and fourteen feet high, to hold foxes and other wild animals. At one time he had twelve foxes in it, and at the same time, had two wolves in another pen. He buys and sells wild animals and furs.

James Ayers was born on the Ayers homestead in 1820, and was the son of Jonathan and Susannah Ayres nee Kinnan. Jonathan Ayres was born in New Jersey and removed when a young man to Derry township, Westmoreland county. Here he was married to his wife, above named, and long thereafter settled in Newport (then in Westmoreland, but afterward Indiana county), where he worked at his trade as a blacksmith. He was an expert smith, and while living in New Jersey, he made augers and other tools for the New York city trade. In Newport his shop was patronized especially by the boatmen, who frequented the place during high stages of water. In 1804, he removed to the tract of land now occupied by James, erected a smith shop, cabin, &c., and worked at his trade and farmed as circumstances demanded. He was the first blacksmith located in the county north of the purchase line. He died in 1832, fifty-eight years old; his wife in 1859, eighty-two years old. He, as well as his wife, our subject and the family generally, were Presbyterians. The children were: Sylvanus, d., m. to Ellen Hall; John, d., m. to Catharine Riddle, d.; Mary, d., m. to James Riddle, d.; Jonathan W., d., m. to Eliza Medill; Phebe, d., m. to James Chambers; James, m. to Nancy H. Dickey, d.; and Rebecca, d. The well known Ayers log house, torn down in June, 1875, was erected on the Manor and Brady's Mill road, in 1820. It was forty-eight by thirty-three feet in size, two stories high, and for fifty-nine years was a central point. Since their construction, it has stood at the junction of the Indiana and Punxsutawney, and Georgeville roads, and the marks of the old Manor route, long since abandoned, can still be seen in front of the site of the building and on the hill side in the rear. Mahoning post office was kept in it for several years by Jonathan, and in more recent days James Ayers had charge of Ayers P. O. for several years, in the same building. From 1847 to 1853, William B. Marshall and James Sutton had a large and well patronized store in the front room of the old building, and since 1846, it has been the voting place for the township. Owing to its location, it has been a favorite stopping place for travelers and teamsters, and many a merry party of Punxsutawnians have gone in their sleighs or carriages, to partake of a repast at Ayers', or to mingle in the mazy walks of the dance till the early hours of the morning. The Ayers farm was patented in 1800 in the name of William P. Brady, and the tract was called "Oak Hall." Jonathan Ayers was as well known "east of the mountains" as in Indiana county, on account of his packing for many years tow and flax eastward, and iron and salt westward. His smithshop was patronized by settlers living thirty and even forty miles distant, and from an auger to horse-shoeing, he could supply all their wants.

James B. Hastings was born on the land now owned by the Lightcaps, East Mahoning township, in 183-, and was the son of Reuben and Margaret Hastings nee Black. The former died in 1875, at the age of sixty; he was the son of John and Isabella Hastings nee Cook; his first wife was a Margaret Dixon. The children were: William, m. to Margaret Johnston; Thirza, m. to John Van Horn; Joseph, m. to Mary J. Kennedy; Sarah E., m. to David Foster; Mary Ann, m. to John Simpson; Reuben, d., m. to Margaret Black; Jane, d.; Isabella and John, twins; Isabella, m. to David Black; Margaret, d., m. to Thos. Ray, d.; Agnes, d.; Lucinda, d., m. to John A. Work; Martha, m. to Peter Simpson; Robert A., m. to Jane Kier; Lucinda, d.; John R., m. to Mary E. Park. John R. was in the confederate army; he held a commission in a Texas regiment. Reuben's children were: James B., m. to Rebecca Brown; Lucinda, m. to Silas W. Brady; Jane, m. to Allen Hamilton, and Evaline, m. to David Leasure. James B.'s children are: Mary E., Reuben Clark, Frank Brown, Carl M., and Grey True.

Henry Earhart was born near Hannastown, Westmoreland county, in 1811, and was the son of Anthony and Elizabeth Earhart nee Urey. (For Earhart family history, see Conemaugh township). When two years of age, his parents removed to Conemaugh township. Henry wagoned from Holidaysburg to Blairsville, and sometimes from the latter place to Pittsburgh and return, for three years; he also boated for four summers on the Union line of canal boats, Henry and Peter Graff, proprietors; he ran the Jupiter No. 1, the first boat of the line, on its first trip; he farmed for sixteen years in Plum creek township, Armstrong county, and then removed to Cowanshannock township, in the same county, where he remained till 1872, when he removed to his present home; his wife was Elizabeth McGaughey, d. His children are: James W., m. to Elizabeth C. Marshall; William Blair, d.; Mary E., d.; Nancy C., d.; Archibald G., m. to Mary Ann Lightcap; John A., d.; Robert G., d.; and Sarah K., d. James W.'s only child is Martin Henry.

H. P. Lewis was born on the Lewis homestead, in what is now South Mahoning township, in 1842, and was the son of Samuel and Mary Lewis nee Graham, of whom see sketch for particulars of family. Our subject was married in 1866, to Ellen Bingham Ansley, daughter of Sheriff Dan'l Ansley. Their children were: Willie, d.; Nannie Viola; Estell Budd; Blanch Hope; John K.; Mary Mabel; and Ruby Pearl. H. P. was a member of company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry for about two years. He served three years as county auditor. He has resided on "Rolling Farm" since 1869, where, since 1874, he has made a specialty of thorough-bred horses, cattle and hogs. His Fleetwood, a Hambletonian, and his Lewis Dolphin, are well known in this county. Of his thorough-bred Jerseys, we will mention the Belle of Brandywine, 4878; Lydia Darrach, 4903; Duke of Brandywine, 2213; Sewickley Chief, 3607; Golden Empress, 8057; Lydia Darrach No. 2, 8056; and Lydia Darrach No. 3, are well worthy the attention of the stock-raiser. They are registered in the American Jersey Cattle Club Herd Book. Rosa Bell, a shorthorn, is registered in Vol. 17, of the American Herd Book. Alla Bell, of the same stock, is a thorough-bred, but not registered. In hogs he has ten thorough-bred Berkshires under two years of age.

NATHANIEL W. STEWART was born in Brush Valley township in 1840, and was a son of Samuel and Elizabeth Stewart nee McFarland. The latter was a second wife. The first wife was Mary Wilson, and the third wife was Margaret Virtue. The children by the first wife were: Joseph, m. to Margaret Marsh, d.; James, m. first to a Miss Wolfe, and second to Nancy Beam; and Matthew James, was in the war of 1861, in an Ohio cavalry regiment. The children of the second wife were: Mary Jane, d.; Robert, m. first to Sarah J. Johnston, d., and second to Dilly Sebring; Miriam, m. to John N. Lomison; Nathaniel W., m. to Louisa Evans, daughter of sheriff William Evans; William McF., m. to Sarah J. Lomison; and Samuel McMillan. Robert was in company H, 12th Pennsyvania R. C., three years. He was wounded. Nathaniel W. was in company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers nine months, and also in the signal service for twenty months, serving under Sheridan. He participated in sixteen battles. William McF. served in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, nearly one year. Nathaniel W.'s children were: Lizzie W.; Maggie Bertha, d.; and Harry Evans. Our subject was an elder in the Mount Pleasant Presbyterian Church, of Knoxdale, Jefferson county.

SAMUEL ROSS was born in 1814, in county Monaghan, Ireland, and was the son of Robert and Mary Ross, nee Moore. He came to America in 1833, and to the farm now occupied by him in 1842. He was married in 1842, to Elizabeth Cowan, a native of county Monaghan, Ireland, where she was born in 1816. Their children are: Robert M., m. to Jane Gray; Richard, m. to Nettie Keister; Mary Ann, m. to W. Alexander S. Work; Samuel; George, m. to Alice Price; Sarah Jane, m. to Samuel W. Work; David McCall; and John Telford. Robert M. was in the late war about two years.

JOHN M. BYERS was born in Burnside township, Clearfield county, in 1837, and was a son of John and Sarah Byers, nee Weaver. The former's second wife was Margaret Bunn. He was the son of John Byers, of German extraction, who was born in Chester county, and served as a "minute man" during the Revolution. John and Sarah Byers' children were: Samuel, m. to Sarah J. Thompson, Mary Ellen, d., m. to Amos Hutton; Ethelia, d., m. to Dr. J. M. Bunn; Ruth, d., m. to William Whelan, d.; Sarah, m. to Henry Darr; John M., m. to Sarah E. Stuchal; Atchison, m. to Caroline Black; James, m. to Lucretia McCracken, d.; Laurinda, d., m. to Russell Rose; William, d. in Evans, Colorado; Hezekiah, d.; Perry C. d.; Jennie, m. to Dr. James Innis; Amanda, d.; and Eliza, m. to John London; John M. was in company I, 6th Pennsylvania reserve corps, and in company I, 6th Pennsylvania veteran reserve corps for four years. He was wounded and detained a prisoner in Andersonville for eleven months. William was in company K, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months. John M.'s children were: Ulysses, Lilly Irene, d.; Perry C., Mabel Blanche, and Frank Hutton.

EPHRAIM STEFFY was born in Green township, in 1838, and was the son of Jacob and Catharine Steffy nee Bence. The former was the son of John Steffy, whose father was a German and a Revolutionary soldier. John Steffy came from Bedford county to Green township, where he died in 1819. His children were: Peter, d., m. to a Miss Altimus; Philip, d.; John, m. twice, his second wife was Elizabeth Wyke, d.; Jacob, d. in 1858, in his fifty-fourth year, m. to Catharine Bench, d. in 1870, fifty-six years old; David and William, d., twins, the former was m. to Margaret Wakefild; Jonas, d., m. to Julia Fairbanks; Susan, m. to a Burnkimer, d.; and Mary, d. Jacob Steffy came to the tract now occupied by our subject in 1839. He purchased it in 1837 of James Kirkpatrick, who obtained the patent in that year. His only child was Ephraim, m. first to Jane Kinter, and second to Margaret Stuchal. Ephraim's children were: Jacob Alexander, James Newton, d.; Albert Lewis, Mary Catharine, and Norman Abraham. He served in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year.

JOHN JONES was born in Newcastle, county Cardegan, Wales, in 1812, and was the son of William and Anna Jones nee Davis, a daughter of Daniel Davis. William Jones migrated to Indiana county, in 1818, and first settled on the McClanahan tract, where he remained three years. He then removed to a tract of timber land which he leased from Robert Craig, and remained fourteen years. He then purchased the land now occupied by his son John. He died in 1840, in his seventy-fourth year; his wife died in 1857, in her eightieth year. The children were: Mary, b. in 1800, m. to James Spargo, d.; Joshua, d.; John, m. first in 1848 to Sarah Stewart, d., and second in 1871 to Susannah Moore, daughter of James Moore. Our subject is well known as a veterinary surgeon, having practiced the profession for several years. The John Jones tract was patented to the heirs of Barbara Snively, jr., late Bechtel, d. The warrant was granted to Barbara Snively, March 17, 1785.

JOHN L. MABON was born in Young township, Jefferson county, in 1839, and was the son of William and Sarah Mabon nee Leasure. The former's second wife was Nancy Anderson. William was the son of John and Margaret Mabon nee Leggett. William had one brother, Robert, and one sister, Jane Mabon. Our subject was married first, in 1869, to Charlotte C. Steffy, who died in 1870, in her twenty-first year, and second in 1872, to Eunice, daughter of George W. Cribbs. The children were: Mary, d.; Francis C., d.; Anna Maud, and Kizzie Blanche. He served for seven months in company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, being discharged for disability; he was also a member of company E, 148th Pennsylvania volunteers from August, 1862, to June 1, 1865; his grandfather was of Scotch descent; his father was a United Presbyterian, as well as himself.

SAMUEL R. MOORE was born near Connellsville, Fayette county, in 1842, and was the son of John and Lydia Moore nee Varnes. The former was born in Germany, and started, when twelve years of age, with his parents, for America. The latter died on the voyage. He removed to Cowanshannock township, Armstrong Co., in 1856. His children were: Martin; Sam'l R. and Isaac S., twins, the former married Nancy J. Burns; John, m. to Adella Clark, d.; Mary, m. to Josiah Davis; Ross S., and Sarah F. Martin was in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers three years. Samel R. was in company M, 204th Pennsylvania volunteers about ten months. Isaac S. was in company K, 155th Pennsylvania volunteers, and died after three months' service. John was in company K, 155th Pennsylvania volunteers about three years. Samuel R.'s children were: Mary L., d., and William J.

WILLIAM MOTTARN.—He was born in Schuylkill county, in 1819, and was the son of Henry and Esther Mottarn nee Snyder. The latter died when William was a child; the former removed about 1849 to near Gristtown or Worthville, where he died, in 1872, eighty-four years of age. The children were: Henry, m. to Lydia Coble; Levi, m. to Eliza Bossert; Elizabeth, m. to Peter Keel, d.; Benjamin, m. to Mary Keifer; Lydia, m. to Jonathan Shaffer; John, m. to Rebecca Drumheller; Joseph, m. to Elsha Reed; Hannah, m. to George Leddig; and William, m. to Delilah Enterline. Our subject's children are: Philip Edmonds, d.; Esther Salome, William Elmer, and Albert Clinton. He purchased a half interest in the Enterline mill in 1870.

MRS. SARAH A. P. ASKINE was born in Indiana Co., and was a daughter of Joseph, d. and Mary Stewart nee Findley. She was married to Shadrach Askine, who died in 1867, at the age of thirty-two. Their only child is T. S. Askine. Our subject is a sister of Mrs. Mary P. Taylor, of Young township.

LEVI SPENCER was born in Richland township, Cambria county, in 1820, and was the son of William and Susannah Spencer nee Goughnour. The former was a son of James and Rebecca Spencer nee Shirley. President Taylor's mother was a sister of James Spencer. William died in 1846, at the age of seventy-seven; his wife in 1848, seventy years old. Our subject was married in 1848, to Anna, daughter of John and Rebecca Decker nee Thompson. John Decker was a Revolutionary soldier who had settled on the Robert Park place about 1812. From this tract he removed a few years later to the tract upon which Decker's Point is situated. Levi Spencer's children are: Lewis D., Aaron N. and Giles T. In 1848, he settled on the farm now occupied by him.

John McGara was born in Centre township in 1809, and was a son of Clemence and Sarah McGara nee McLaughlin. The former was sheriff, county commissioner and filled other offices of trust. He removed in 1790, from the Sewickley settlement, Westmoreland county, and located in the vicinity of what is now the John B. Peelor farm, Armstrong township. John McGara died in 1867, in his fifty-ninth year. He was married in 1829 to Margaret Bell, born in 1804. Their children were: Samuel, m. first to Sarah McEwen, d., and second to Catharine Chaney; Jane W., m. to William Adams; Sarah M., m. to Sampson Love; Caroline, d.; Clemence P., m. to Mary E. Olwine; John Kirkpatrick, d.; Elisha D. B., Margaret Ann, m. to William S. Rishel, and Joseph F., m. to Margaret Black. Elisha D. B. was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. Joseph F.'s children are: Minnie Maud, Haseltine, and Edith. On the John McGara homestead Peter Riddle was the first settler.

Thomas Arthurs was born in Bedford county in 1796, and was the son of John and Eve Arthurs, nee Bowser. The former served in the Revolutionary army throughout the war, being wounded twice, and taken prisoner twice. Our subject first located in Indiana county in 1827. He was married in 1819 to Eve Mauk, who died in 1863, sixty-two years of age. He was again married in 1868 to Violet Doty, born in 1827. His children were: John, d.; George, m. first to Mary A. Palmer, d., second to Mrs. Mary H. Armstrong, nee Campbell, d., and third to Tabitha White; Elizabeth, m. to Shem White; William, d.; Isaac, d.; Mary, d.; Jonah, d.; Susannah, d.; Emily, d.; Sarah, d.; Sophia, d., m. to Clark Baker; Thomas, d., m. to Fannie Bloom; and Jacob, m. to Rachel Armstrong. George was in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. Jacob was in the same company, and previously was in the 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, for nine months; and Thomas was also in company A, 206th, about a year. Our subject located on present homestead in 1870.

Stewart Brothers.—The three sons of William G. Stewart, of East Mahoning township, by first wife were: John A., served in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, wounded near Banks' Ford, Va., May 4, 1863, and taken prisoner; wounded again at Spottsylvania, May 12th, 1864, with loss of left arm and part of right hand.——is living January, 1880. Archibald Swarts served six months in volunteers, and then enlisted in signal corps, and died of fever during Sherman's march to the coast. Henry Van Zandt served in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers; was wounded in the battle at Fair Oaks, Va., and killed in battle of Wilderness, Va., May 5th, 1864.

David W. Fairbank, from near Bangor, Maine, moved to East Mahoning township in 1834, and died at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in 1836. He had five sons, all of whom served in the war of the Rebellion, and one daughter, m. to Jonas Steffey, of East Mahoning township, both now dead. William H. served three years in the 67th Pennsylvania volunteers. Under direction of Major Harry White, in 1862, he recruited about one hundred men for the regiment; returned home unhurt. Elijah W. enlisted in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years' service, and was killed at Fair Oaks, Virginia, May 31, 1862. Richard W. enlisted in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years' service, and was killed in front of Fort Stephens, D. C., July 12, 1864. Joseph C. enlisted in the 86th New York volunteers, and was severely wounded and crippled for life in Wilderness, Virginia, May 6, 1864. David W. enlisted in company C, 42d Pennsylvania volunteers, Colonel Kane's "Bucktails," for three years; re-enlisted in 1863 for the war; transferred to 190th Pennsylvania volunteers; was captured at Welden railroad, August, 1864, and died in Andersonville prison pen. William H. now lives in Nebraska, and Joseph C. in Iowa.

DAVIDSVILLE—TRADE CITY P. O.

The village was named for David Mutersbaugh, who laid out the town in the fall of 1852. He owned the land which included the site of the village, having purchased it of Solomon Sprankle, who obtained it of the Holland Land Company. He soon after this, migrated to Virginia. Peter Dilts, jr., erected in the same fall, the building now known as the "Davidsville Hotel," for a dwelling and store house, and kept therein the first mercantile establishment. The second building was erected by Frederick Sprankle for a dwelling and wagon shop. The building is now used by Mr. Sprankle as his carriage and wagon factory. The third house was the blacksmith shop of W. H. B. Sprankle, who also erected the fourth building for his dwelling. They are used to-day for the same purpose. Mr. Dilts erected several houses, among them a stone building, in which he sold goods for some time, and afterward it was purchased by David Steel, who, after merchandising in it for a few years, abandoned the business, retaining the building in his possession. The present merchant is T. C. Ramey, who succeeded his brother, Hon. Daniel Ramey. The Davidsville Hotel is the only hostelry of the place. The first justice of the peace was Peter Dilts, jr., and the second was James Chambers, sr.

MARCHAND.

The tract upon which the village is situated, was originally Holland land, and was purchased by Archibald Smitten in 1822. The first house on the site of the place was erected by J. Y. Smitten, in 1846. This was burned in 1875. The present residence of Mr. Smitten stands beside the site of the first. The second building was erected by T. B. Allison, in 1847, and is now occupied by his son, D. B. Allison. The third house was built by George S. Haney, and was used for many years as the residence of Mrs. Polly Brewer. The fourth house was erected by John W. Compton, and was occupied for some considerable time by James W. Shields, being burned in 1871. The fifth house was built by George Washington McConaughey. The sixth was a small building erected by David Johnson; J. Y. Smitten added the main portion, and it is, to day, known as the "Marchand Hotel;" and the seventh house was built by Alexander Downey. The first store was opened by T. B. Allison in his residence, in the fall of 1847. The physicians were in order of their location: J. J. Bishop, 1860; Loughery; John B. Bair; Allison; A. H. Armstrong; and the present practitioner, J. Wilson Morrow.

COVODE.

This place for several years was called Kellysville, after John Kelly, who owned the land which included the site of the village. About 1840, he erected a log house, which answered for a store and tavern for several years. This building was situated on the lot now occupied by Aaron Rishel's residence. The second building was erected by a Mr. Altebron; the third, a stone house, by Alexander Hamilton, and the fourth, a frame building, by Alexander Hamilton. The second storekeeper was Alexander Hamilton, and the third was John Rishel. Squire Charles R. White, of Canoe township, relates of passing at an early hour in the morning, in December, 1836, where Covode now is, of his horse being frightened by a buck and doe reclining at the foot of a tree which stood opposite the present residence of Justice Crawford.

The Old Wall's Tavern was in a high state of prosperity fifty years ago. It is still standing in the rear of Prescott's hotel. Isaac Condron erected the building for a blacksmith shop in 1821. In 1829, James Wall purchased the property, and from that time for a period of twenty-five or thirty years, the name of Wall's tavern was a familiar word to teamsters and travelers who were fond of frolic and boisterous carousals.

First Mill.—The first mill in the Mahonings was the Brady, described in East Mahoning. The first mill in this township, and the second above the "purchase line," was the Dilts, erected about 1809, by William Dilts., on Mud-lick. This was a log building, having one run of country stone, and was situated on what is now the H. K. Dilts farm.

First Schools and Teachers.—The first school-house in the township was erected about 1815 or 1816, on the John Mitchell farm. It was a five-sided log building, using one side for a chimney. The first teachers were Robert T. Simpson and George Robinson. The second schoolhouse was on the Michael Peffer farm. The first teachers were Robert Bacon and David K. Thompson. The latter is living, at an advanced age. The third building was on the corner of what are now the Shaffer, Painter and Gourley lands. Samuel McKee was the first teacher in this house.

PETER DILTS, JR., was born on what is now the H. K. Dilts farm, North Mahoning township, in 1818, and was the son of Peter Dilts, sr., and Jane Dilts nee Coulter. The parents of the former were William and Mrs. Nancy Keen nee Watson, who came in 1800 from the vicinity of Hagerstown, Maryland, to what is now the H. K. Dilts farm, North Mahoning township. William Dilts' only child was Peter, whose first wife was Jane Coulter, d. in 1821, about thirty-four years of age, and second was Jane Kinter. Peter Dilts, sr., died in 1856, seventy-one years of age. He served as justice of the peace, county commissioner and associate judge. His children were: Elizabeth, m. first to John Sprankle, d., and second to Daniel Fair; William, d.; m. to Nancy McElhoes; John, m. to Margaret Means; Peter, jr., m. to Mary Ewing; James, m. to Mary Hall; Jemima, m. to Joseph Shields, Isabella, m. to John Lewis; Henry K., m. to Nancy J. Allison; and Sarah J. d., m. to James B. Work. Peter, jr., served as justice of the peace and associate judge. Henry K. was deputy sheriff under Sheriff Brown. Peter Dilts, jr.,'s children were: James E., m. to Elizabeth Simpson; Alexander, d.; John M., m. to Mina Stear; Daniel D., m. to Laura Shields; Mary J., m. to John G. Thompson; Lettice, d.; Sarah Elizabeth, d.; Miriam, d.; Robert A., A. G. Curtin, and Harry White. James E. was in company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, about nine months, and in company C, 206th Pa. vols. about a year. John M. was color sergeant of 206th Pa. vols. about one year, his enlistment being in company C. The children of James E., a son of Judge Dilts, jr., were: Grant Simpson, Frank Erastus, Peter Clarence, Lizzie May and James Walter.

ROBERT JORDAN was born on the Jordan homestead in 1809, and was a son of Robert A. and Catharine Jordan nee Redding. The latter was a second wife, the first Hannah Gill—the former in 1838, about sixty-five years of age. Robert A., settled on the Jordan homestead, in 1807. He was a native of eastern Pennsylvania, and on his first location in this section, was a neighbor for several years of James Kelly and Fergus Moorhead, near the present site of Indiana. He had served in the Revolutionary war throughout the entire conflict. He died in 1835, at the age of eighty-seven. His children were: Alexander, d., m. to Flora Shields, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Isaac Matson, d.; James, d., m. to Margaret Jordan, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Lydia Cochran, d.; Joseph, d., m. to Eliza Young, d.; Hannah, d., m. to James Bell, d.; Martha, d., m. to John McHenry; Jane, d., m. to David McPherson, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Enoch Crisman, d.; Mary, d., m. to George Mogel, d.; Robert, m. to Martha Pounds, daughter of John Pounds; John, d., m. to Mary E. Sharrah, d.; Margaret, m. to Griffith Roland, d.; and William, m. to Eliza Riddle. John was in company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers over two years. William was a soldier in the late war. The children of Robert, a son of Robert A. Jordan, were: Robert A., m. to Catharine Hollowell; Margaret J., m. first to Jonathan Ayers, d., and second to Daniel Loughery; Catharine, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Amanda Henry, d.; James, d.; John, m. to Isabella Fitzgerald; Mary, m. to Clark Kerr; and Charles P. Robert A. was in company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers for four years. See sketch in West Mahoning for R. A.'s children. John A., son of Robert Jordan, has only one child, James L. John (a son of Robert A.) and Mary E. Jordan's, nee Sharrah, children were: Elizabeth A., m. to James W. Carr, d. in 1871, thirty-five years of age; Robert; Mary E., married to John Haney; John, m. to Ellen Borts; George, m. to Elizabeth Simpson; Nancy J., d.; Isabella, m. to Henry M. Sutter; and Christian. Robert was in company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers about four years. He was wounded in the shoulder. J. W. and Elizabeth A. Carr's, nee Jordan, children were: William Clover; Mary E.; John Clayton; Martha Ann; George Russell, d.; and Harry Grant, d.

JOHN NORTH was born near Wilmington, Delaware, in 1811, and was a son of John and Elizabeth North, nee Pogue. The former was born in county Caven, Ireland, in 1799, and was there married, in 1806, to Elizabeth Pogue. They migrated to Delaware in 1810, and for some years he worked at Dupont's powder works. He served one year in the army during the war of 1812, and was enrolled during the entire conflict, being detailed to work at the powder factory. In the spring of 1818, he located in Indiana county, and first lived in an old log school house standing on the John Mitchell, now John Gourley farm. In June, 1818, he purchased the tract now occupied by his son, William P. North. He died in 1843, at the age of sixty-four; his wife in 1846, about sixty-one years of age. The children were: Deborah, m. to William Pogue; Margaret, d., m. to John Henderson; John, m. in 1837, to Elizabeth Simpson; Eliza, d., m. to James Means; Joseph P., m. to Margery Kinsel; Daniel, m. to Catharine Bell; Phebe Jane, m. to John Steffy; Thomas, m. first to Sarah McConaughey, d., and second to Eva Sutter; and William P., m. to Margaret Simpson. Our subject's children are: Anna Mary, m. to William E. Simpson; Joseph P., m. to Mary Martin; S. T., m. to Annie Niel; and Laura A. The children of Joseph P., a son of John North, were: Virginia, m. to A. J. Limerick; John G., m. to Ann Wachol; James K., m. to Eliza Neorr; Henry, m. to Emma E. Evans; Harvey, d.; Mary Charlotte; Phebe Jane; Lot; and Joseph L. The North homestead of one hundred and forty acres in North Mahoning township, was purchased at three dollars per acre of Henry Geddes, of Wilmington, Delaware. It was patented, in 1798, to Henry Geddes, and formed part of a tract called the "Evergreen." The adjoining tract was called "Springfield." Mr. North assisted in raising the first house in Punxsutawney for Dr. J. W. Jenks. At that time the corn hills left by the Indians were plainly visible south of Punxsutawney, and almost joining the town site, that the wild grass and weeds had taken possession.

JOSEPH W. POSTLEWAIT (or Postlethwait) was born in Ringgold township, Jefferson county, in 1832, and was the son of David and Jane M. Postlewait nee Bell, who was born in the Sewickley settlement, Westmoreland county. She was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Bell. The former died in 1855, at the age of eighty-five; the latter in 1828, at the age of seventy. David Postlewait was a son of John and Sarah E. Postlewait nee Ross, who removed from Mifflin county to Westmoreland county, and in 1818 to the farm now occupied by John Iler, in Perry township, Jefferson county. John's father and three brothers were emigrants from Scotland. The three brothers perished in the Revolutionary war. John's father was an early settler of the vicinity of Harrisburg. John Postlewait died in 1852, at the age of eighty-four; his wife in 1844, at the age of seventy-eight. David Postlewait died in 1875, at the age of eighty-one; his wife in 1855, at the age of fifty-eight. John Postlewait's children were: David, d., m. to Jane M. Bell, d.; John, d., m. to Hannah Timblin, d.; Nancy, d., m. to William McKee, d.; William, d., m. to Jane McHenry, d.; Mary, d., m. to William Johnston; and James, d., m. to Elizabeth Piper, d. The children of David, a son of John Postlewait, were: John B., m. to Margaret Weaver; Emily Jane, d., m. to Dr. Theophilus Smith; Sarah Elizabeth, m. to James Means; James Madison, m. to Jerusha Howard; Mary Matilda; Joseph W., m. in 1870 to Sarah Heemer; David M., m. to Sarah J. Blose; Thomas J., m. to Elizabeth Means; Benjamin Franklin, d., and William P., m. to Elizabeth C. Means. Thomas J. served in Captain Jacob Creps' company, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years. Wm. P. was in company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers for nearly one year. Joseph W.'s (a son of David Postlewait) children were: Fitz John, Monroe Barclay, Jesse Scott, and Lena Ann. The children of William P., a son of David Postlewait, were: Lily J., David N., Perley, d., Ira Warren and Homer. The Joseph W. Postlewait land was patented to James Hutchinson in 1814. Mr. Postlewait purchased it in 1854, and has resided on it since 1870. On the James W. Crossman farm, adjoining this tract, was an Indian burial ground, about the middle of the premises. When this valley was first settled the signs of Indian occupancy were visible, and occasionally the aborigines returned for hunting or fishing excursions.

MRS. SARAH RAMEY was born in Huntingdon county in 1803, and was the daughter of Samuel and Mary Noble nee Spencer. The former was a native of Ireland, and migrated, when eighteen years of age, to America; he purchased the tract of land, dying on the same, on which Altoona is now situated; he died in 1813; his wife in 1821. Our subject was married in 1826 to Conrad Ramey, who was born in Maryland in 1791. They removed to what is now the Michael Shaffer farm, West Mahoning township, where he died in 1842. Conrad Ramey was the son of Conrad Ramey, who was the first, or among the first, iron workers at Tyrone forge. Conrad and Sarah Ramey's children were: Samuel, d.; Frederick, d.; Mary, m. to William Gates, d.; Daniel, b. in 1834, m. in 1859 to Eliza J. Crissman; Elizabeth, m. to George Peffer; Sarah J., d., and Thomas C., b. in 1842; m. to Jerusha B. Rugh. Daniel served in the Pennsylvania militia, in Captain McComb's company, during the raids in the war of 1861; he enlisted as a private in company C, and was promoted to second lieutenant in company G of the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, in which he served about one year. He served two terms in the lower house of the legislature, viz: the sessions of 1873–4 and 1874–5. While a member of the house, he was mainly instrumental in defeating the judges' pension bill, and other legislation of a class character. His children are: Ellsworth, Ulysses Grant, Webster E., Harry Baker, and Enoch Crissman. Thomas C., a son of our subject, served in company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, about six months, being discharged for disability; he re-enlisted in the signal corps, being with the Army of the Tennessee, and with Sherman on his march to the sea, about twenty months. He had charge of Mahoning furnace, Armstrong county, for seven years, and also traveled for a Philadelphia wholesale house for five years. Of late, he has succeeded his brother, Hon. Daniel Ramey, in the general store line at Davidsville.

Frederick Sprankle was born in York county in 1784, and was the son of George Sprankle, who was of German descent. Frederick came to the tract of which the A. M. Stewart farm, in this township, is a part, and on which the old house, built in 1824, is still standing. In 1816, he built Sprankle's mills in Oliver township, Jefferson county, in 1834; he died in 1852, about sixty-eight years of age; his wife, who was Margaret Bechtel, died in 1859, about seventy-one years of age. The children were: John, d., m. to Elizabeth Dilts; Susan, m. to John Smith, d.; Daniel, m. first to Jane Simpson, and second to Mary A. Lewis; Maria, m. to Benjamin Gilhousen; George, d., m. to Susan Fetterhoff; Margaret, m. to Nathaniel Simpson; Emily, m. to A. J. T. Crawford; Mary, m. to David C. Simpson; Frederick, m. to Catherine R. Singley; W. H. B., m. to Evaline Hickox; Elizabeth, d., m. first to James Walls, d., and second to James B. Cochran; and M. S., m. to Sarah Fetterhoff. Frederick was in company F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers about seven months. W. H. B. was in company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers nine months, and in company K, 104th Pennsylvania volunteers from March, 1865, to September, 1865. The children of W. H. B., a son of Frederick Spankle, were: Sharretts, m. to Priscilla Gray; Reuben, d.; Thomas; Martin Luther; Mary E.; Regina Emma; Laura; Tecumseh S., d.; William C.; Rhoda M.; Anna M., d.; and John. George (a son of Frederick and Susan) Sprankle's children were: Margaret M.; William H., m. to Melinda Heitzenrater; J. F., m. to Martha J. Campbell; George, m. to Lucinda Chrysmire; Melinda, d.; Jeremiah, d.; and Ann Maria, d. J. F. was in the war of 1861. J. F.'s (a son of George Sprankle) children were: Frederick B.; George A., d.; Orrin L., d.; Willis C., d.; and Ralph B.

Henry Wining was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, in 1814, and was a son of Henry and Elizabeth Wining nee Knauf. The family came to the vinity of Zelienople, Butler county, in 1834, and in the following year, removed to what is now the Michael Peffer farm in this township, and commenced in the woods. Henry, sr., died in 1866, over eighty-three years of age—his wife's decease occurred in 1836. Their children were: Mary, d., m. first to Michael Alt, d., second to Michael Lewis, d., and third to Martin Hop; Henry, m. first to Catharine Domm, d., and second to Catharine Heitzenrater; Eve, m. to Philip Domm; and Michael, d., m. to Elizabeth Silver. Our subject's children were: Mary, d.; Philip, m. to Elizabeth Herwig; Eve, m. to Philip Weaver; John, m. to Catharine Woodring; Michael, m. to Caroline Wortman; Henry, m. to Minnie Barger; Catharine, d.; Augusta, d.; Mary Elizabeth, d.; Melinda R.; Augustus; and Mary Melissa. Philip was in company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and ten months. He was wounded severely at the Wilderness. Philip's only child was John, d. Michael's children are: Lemon L.; Anna May; and John Henry, d. The Wining lands were patented to the Holland Land Co., in 1802. On the Michael Wining farm, was the former crossing of the Indiana and Brookville, and Kittanning and Luthersburg road. Where his garden now is, was the scene of the murder of Cochran by Sharer.

Asa Crossman was born in 1794, near Boston, Mass., and was the son of Asa and Patience Crossman nee Oliver. About 1800 the family started west in a wagon, and at first stopped for a few years in south-western New York. About 1806, they came to the vicinity of what is now Georgeville, where Asa, sr., made a clearing, planted an orchard, &c. His next change was to what is now the John Drummond tract, then to the present Isaac Carmault farm, near Punxsutawney, and finally to an eight hundred acre tract, near the Cherry-tree. He sold the lower part to a Mr. Newman, and removed to the upper, where he died in 1828, about fifty-six years of age—his wife died in the same year about fifty-three years of age. Their children were: Cloe, d., m. to Benjamin Dight, d.; Asa, (our subject), d. in 1864, m. to Mary McHenry, d. in 1878, seventy-nine years of age; Joseph, d., m. to Catharine McHenry, d.; Rebecca, m. to John Piper, d.; Oliver, m. first to a Miss Foster, d., and second to Rachel O'Harra; Nathan, d., m. to Hannah Branthoover, d.; and William, m. to a Miss Wagner, d. William went to Havre de Grace, Maryland, on a lumbering expedition, and disappeared. His fate has never been ascertained. Our subject's children are: Mary, m. first to Washington Christman, d., second to John Barreck, d, and third to Irvin Robinson; Isaac, m. first to Mary A. Mutersbaugh, d., and second to Elizabeth Peffer; Nathan, m. in 1852, to Rachel M. D. Blose; Asa, m. to Mary Robinson; Miles, m. to Margaret A. Beck; James, m. to Julia Ann Sutter; William, d.; and Elizabeth, m. to James M. Chambers. Asa was in the late war. The children of Nathan, a son Asa Crossman were: William A., John D., Iola Jane, Ina Maud, Darius M., and Silas Ralph.

Mrs. Hannah Hoover was born in New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, in 1798, and was a daughter of David Pierce, and Deborah Smith. The former was a son of John and Sarah Pierce nee Smith. David was a native of New Jersey, and while residing in that state pursued the occupation of a fisherman. He settled in 1802, on what is now the James Wells farm, South Mahoning township. He died in 1850, at the age of eighty-four; his wife in 1858, at the age of ninety-five. Their children were; George, d., m. to Sarah Pierce; John, d., m. to Ellen Calkitt, d.; Sarah, d., m. to John Neff, d.; Lydia, d., m. to Joseph Carr, d.; Jacob, d., m. to Mary Hollowell, d.; Hannah, m. in 1819, to Peter Hoover, d. in 1850, about fifty-two years of age; Deborah, m. to John Niel, d.; Elizabeth, m. to James Wells, d.; and Maraba, m. to Thompson Hayes. The children of R. C., a son of Peter and Hannah Hoover, were: Mary Charlotte, Anna S., John Wesley, Charles Craig, Laura Jane, d., Sarah Emma, Milton Danks, and William H. R. C. Hoover has a cannon ball which his grandfather, when a boy, picked up on one of the battle fields of New Jersey.

William Shields was born in Huntingdon county, in 1792, and was the son of James and Margaret Shields nee Douglass. James was a native of what is now Adams county. He served six and a half years in the Revolutionary war, and was wounded in both arms and a leg. The family removed about 1800, to what is now the William McCrea farm, East Wheatfield township. In 1816, they located on the farm now occupied by Geo. McConaughey. James Shields died in 1847, lacking one day of being one hundred and fifteen years of age; his wife died in 1827, about fifty-six years old. The children were: Rebecca, d.; Florinda, d., m. to Alexander Jordan, d.; William, m. to Eleanor Wilson, d. in 1862, over sixty years of age; Mary, d., m. to Robert Thompson, d.; Robert, d., m. to Jane Taylor; George, d., m. first to Mary Boyles, d., and second to Sarah Broughler, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Johnston Boyles, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Matthew Cochran; Jane, d.; m. to Nathaniel Foster; Hannah, d., m. to John Humm, d.; Julia Ann, d., m. to John Rick, d.; and James, W., m. to Mrs. Jane Shields nee Taylor. Our subject's children were: James D., d., m. to Elizabeth Miller; Margaret Douglass, Letitia Brown, d.; Amanda, m. to Daniel Palmer; and Henrietta, m. to Col. H. J. Brady.

George R. Hall was born on the Fetterhoff farm, North Mahoning township, in 1837, and was the son of George and Martha Hall. The latter are living in East Mahoning township; the former is in his seventy-ninth, and the latter is in her eighty-fifth year. They were both born in Ireland, and migrated to America in 1819, and to Indiana county in 1827, locating in 1829 on the farm where George R. was born. Their children are: Jane, m. to J. C. Brilhart; Matilda, m. first to George Hoover, d., and second to Abram Hicks, d.; Mary, m. to J. C. Dilts; Margaret, m. to Lewis Brilhart; George, d.; Eliza, m. to Thompson McConaughey; James, m. to Martha Kimple; Samuel, m. to Mary McCoy; George R., m. to Bella D. Hall; and Hugh, m. to Nancy Hollowell. George R.'s children are: Venna, James T., and Carl T. The senior Hall wagoned for many years between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh and other points. After his location in Indiana county, he continued to wagon for some years, but, as a whole, his career in the county has been devoted to farming.

NICHOLAS MAUL was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, in 1797, and was the son of Nicholas and Barbara Maul nee Frishkorn. In 1828, our subject was married to Sophia Peffer, and in 1830, the family removed to Butler county, remaining four years, and then located on what is now the Joseph Shields farm, North Mahoning township. In 1857, he removed to the tract now occupied by P. J. Martin. His wife died in 1871, sixty-five years of age. The children were: Margaretta, m. to John Peffer; John, d.; George, m. to Elizabeth Smith; Catherine, m. to P. J. Martin; and Barbara, d. Our subject was in the Hessian army for fifteen years. While he lived on the Joseph Shields' farm, his house was used for election purposes for several years.

CONRAD ZENER was born in Hesse Cassel in 1830, and was a son of John and Margaret Zener nee Zeigler. The former died in Illinois about 1864, nearly seventy years of age; his second wife was Mary Detrich, whom he married in Indiana county. The family removed to Harmony, Beaver county, in 1836, and to North Mahoning township in 1837, the first settlement being on what is now the Hicks farm. John Zener's children were: John, m. to Elizabeth Hess; Conrad, m. in 1852, to Fredericka Nigh, a native of Bavaria; Elizabeth, m. to Adam Glasser; William, and Margaret. Conrad was in company B, 74th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers about four months. Our subject's children were: John, m. to Lydia Pifer; George, d.; Caroline; Sarah, m. to Jacob J. Gall; Jacob; Mary; William; Samuel; Annie, and Margaret. Conrad Zener has resided on his farm since 1859.

CASPERT WORTMAN was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, in 1800, and was the son of John and Cathrine Wortman. Our subject migrated to Zelienople, Butler county, in 1835, and to what is now North Mahoning township in 1836; his first wife was Catharine Fail, who died in 1845, at the age of fifty; his second was Mrs. Mary Sweitzer, born in 1808. Caspert Wortman's children were: Barbara, m. to John Emerick; Catharine, m. to George Kuhnley; Adam, d.; John, b. in Zelienople, m. in 1861 to Elizabeth Curry; Elizabeth, m. to John A. Henry; Margaret, m. to David Sloppy; Caroline, d.; and Caroline, m. to Michael Wining. Our subject served ten years in the Hessian army. The children of John, a son of Caspert Wortman, were: Samuel A., Calvin M., and Nannie Dell. The Wortman tract was originally Holland-land. It was purchased by our subject in 1842.

MARTIN HOP was born in Hesse Cassel, in 1809, and was the son of Henry and Mary Hop nee Bostionce. Our subject came to America in 1834, and worked for some time on the canal which was then being built between Newcastle and Erie, Pa.; he settled in the township in 1838, and was married in 1839 to Mrs. Mary Loos nee Wining, who died in 1848. His second wife was Mary C. Kippert. The children were: Elizabeth, m. to Jacob Priester; John, m. first to Martha J. Hicks, and second to Mary Pfiffer; Catharine, m. to John C. Beck; Margaret, d.; Martin, d.; Mary, and Henry. The Martin Hop land was patented to the Holland Land Company. On this land there was, about forty years ago, an old octagon school-house, which was situated near where a single oak now stands, and about twenty-five rods east of the Wortman farm. James Chambers was the first teacher.

ARCHIBALD SMITTEN was born in Dundee, Scotland, in 1780; landed at Philadelphia in 1820, and located in 1823, on the Smitten homestead, North Mahoning township; he was a stone mason by occupation; he died in 1856; his second wife is still living, being over seventy-eight years of age; she was Mrs. Hannah Thompson, widow of Thomas Thompson; his first wife, Jane Smitten, died in Scotland. His children were: Agnes, m., and Jane, m., who live in Scotland; Sarah, m. to Isaac Simpson; J. Y., m. in 1846 to Martha A. Walls, d. in 1847, and second in 1848 to Nancy A. McComb; Evaline, m. to George S. Haney; Mary Ann, m, first to John Mitchell, d., and second to William Mahan, and Archibald, m. to Mary J. Spor. J. Y.'s children were: Rhoda, d.; Archibald, J. G., John Y., White Cloud, S. H. L., Mary E., Richard D., George M., and Hannah F. Q.

ROBERT MCISAAC was born in the county of Wigton, Scotland, in 1823, and was a son of Hugh and Jane McIsaac nee McIsaac. The father of the former was Robert McIsaac, his wife being a Macready. Hugh came to America in 1827, residing for five years in Frankfort, now a part of Philadelphia; he then removed to Unity township, Westmoreland county, and settled on the old Silders farm. In 1843, the family removed to the land now occupied by our subject. Hugh died in 1865, at the age of eighty-three; his wife in 1853, about seventy-two years old. The children were: Matilda, m. to Jos. Murphy; Hugh, d., Agnes, d.; Jane, m. to Robert Pollock; and Robert, m. in 1851 to Mary McEwen. Robert's children are: Martha, Matilda, Hugh Alexander, Robert James, and John Brown. Our subject has been an elder in the Reformed Presbyterian Church for twenty years.

ALEXANDER DOWNEY.—He was born near what is now West Lebanon in 1822; he learned the trade of a blacksmith with John Black, a noted worker in the craft, who had shops successively in Young and East Mahoning townships. Mr. Downey was married in 1842 to Ellen McQuown. Their children are: William C., m. to Margaret Kelly; Mary E., m.; D. S., m.; M. A., m. to Thomas Lunger; Ellen; Hiram A.; S. C., m. to Ada Powell; and Jane. William C. served in 2d battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers, and in company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. D. S. also served in both the battalion and the 206th for the same time. Our subject erected the seventh house in Marchand. S. C. Downey's children are: Stanard Clay and Homer.

J. WILSON MORROW, M. D., was born near Plumville, South Mahoning township, in 1849, and was a son of David and Margaret Morrow nee Lytle. The former served as justice of the peace for two terms, and held several other positions. He died in 1851, at the age of forty-four. His widow married in 1874, a Mr. Laney, and is now residing near Crete Church. David's children were: Jane, Catharine, m. to Jesse Williamson; Robert, d.; Thomas, m. to Nancy Stewart; J. Wilson, and David, m. to Clara Cochran. Our subject read medicine for two years with Dr. C. McEwen, of Plumville. He was educated at the Dayton Union Academy. He attended lectures at the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, in the sessions of 1872–3 and 1874–5, graduating in the spring of 1875; he located in Marchand in March, 1873.

C. B. SUTTER was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1823, and was a son of Jacob and Catharine Sutter nee Wagner. The former died in Germany, and the latter and family came to America in 1836, locating near Zelienople, Butler county. The children were: Jacob, m. to Elizabeth Hall; Catharine, m. to Jacob Martin; Daniel, m. to Catharine Fite; Julia Ann, m. to Adam Blinn; Elizabeth, m. to Jacob Fite; Philip, m. three times, the last wife being Susan Pershing; Margaret, d.; C. B., m. in 1847 to Mercy Peffer; Henry, m. to a Miss Imhoff, and Margaret, m. to Joseph Means. Our subject came to America in 1835; he has resided on his present homestead since 1849. Prior to that he worked in the South, boated on the rivers, labored on the Ohio and Pennsylvania furnaces, on the canals, &c., in order to raise money to buy him a home. His children were: Henry M., m. to Isabella Jordan; Elizabeth, d.; George, m. to Hannah Jane White; Joseph, m. to Martha Gearhart; Jacob L., Daniel W.; La Fayette; John B. M.; James R. W.; Andrew P.; Mary; and Ida Bertha.

HUGH SHARP was born on the Sharp homestead, Armstrong township, in 1817, and was a son of Joseph and Sarah Sharp nee Ramsey. The former was a son of Captain Andrew Sharp, of whom see sketch. Our subject was married in 1844 to Nancy Johnston. Their children were: Sarah E., d.; Nancy J., Mary Rachel, and an adopted child, William L. Hosac. Mr. Sharp has resided on his farm since 1844. A part was part of a tract patented to Paul Buste, of the Holland Land Company, and the remainder was a portion of the lot patented to Herman LeRoy, also of the same company, the date of each being 1813; he has a rifle which his grandfather, Captain Sharp, carried in the Revolutionary war; he also has a mattock which was on the boat at the time of the massacre of 1794.

PETER WALKER was born in New Jersey, near Easton, Pennsylvania, in 1816, and was the son of William and Lydia Walker nee Drake. The former was a native of New England, and the latter of New Jersey. In 1819, the family removed to Indiana county, and located on what is now the David Simpson farm near Georgeville. William died in 1852, about seventy-six years of age—his wife in 1858, eighty-two years of age. The children were: Matilda, d., m. to James Ray, d.; Nelson, d., m. to Lavinia Butterfield, d.; Lavinia, m. to John Bechtel, d.; Mary Ann, m. to Barny McCann, d.; Peter, m. in 1840, to Phebe

Wilhelm; Stinson, d.; Harrison, d., m. to Jane Brown; Adam, d.; and Susannah, m. to Daniel Bush. Peter and the latter, Harrison, served in the regular army, being stationed at the Pittsburgh Arsenal. Peter also served in company A, 105th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers during the war of 1861, for nine months. He was discharged for disability, and is to-day a pensioner. He has served for five terms as road supervisor of one district. Peter's children are: John, d.; Alfred Nelson, m. to Rebecca J. Wall; Elizabeth, d.; Lydia, m. to Charles Spindler; George W.; Christeann; Jacob; Clark; and Caroline, d. Alfred Nelson was a member of Captain Brown's company, 206th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers about a year. Our subject has a Revolutionary relic in the shape of a five pound cannon ball, which his father picked up on one of the old New Jersey battle-fields.

Philip H. Hoffman was born in Jefferson county, in 1844, and was the son of Henry and Catharine Hoffman nee Henkle. The former was b. in 1807, and the latter in 1812, both being natives of Germany. The former served four years in the Hesse Cassel army, acting as orderly sergeant. The family removed to Beaver county, in 1840, to Jefferson county in 1842, and to north Mahoning township in 1850. Mr. Hoffman has been a deacon of St. Paul's Reformed Church, for several years. His children are: Elizabeth, m. to Hartman Knauff; Philip H., m. to Sadie J. Clyde; and Mollie C., d., m. to Marion E. Stear, d. The children of Philip H. are: Orvis Clyde, and Leon Hail. Philip H. Hoffman has been the proprietor of the Davidsville Hotel, since 1876. The hotel was erected by Judge Peter Dills, jr., in 1854.

John C. Peffer was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, in 1828, and was a son of Peter and Elizabeth Peffer nee Homan. The former's second wife was Anna Homan. Our subject came to the county in 1845, and his father and family in 1847. Peter Peffer died in 1878, seventy-seven years of age. His location was on the farm now occupied by Harman Peffer. Peter Peffer's children were: Jacob C., m. to Margaret Maul; Lena, d.; Margaret, d., m. to John Kohlhepp; Elizabeth, m. to John Kohlhepp; Peter, d.; Harman, m. to Mary Philhart; Eve, d.; Sydney T., m. to Sarah Holderman; and Frederick. Our subject located on present premises in 1852. He served in company G, 74th Pennsylvania volunteers for six months. He was Noble Grand of Amor Lodge No. 608, I. O. O. F., of Marchand, for three terms, and has filled all the positions of the lodge, but treasurer. His children are: George W.; John H., d.; Elizabeth, d.; Mary Sophia; Sarah E.; and Lily A. The Peffer farm is Holland Land, being patented to the Holland Company in 1802.

Joseph A. Jordan was born in Jefferson county in 1852, and was the son of Robert G. and Elizabeth Jordan nee Fetterhoff. The former was born in Jefferson county in 1820, and died in 1876. He located on the farm in North Mahoning township, where his widow now resides, in 1862. His father, Samuel Jordan, was among the early settlers of McCalmont township, Jefferson county. Robert G.'s children were: Joseph A., m. to Wilmina Sutter; John S., Mary M., S. C., J. B., Annace L., and William M.

Solomon F. Shaffer was born in Bedford county in 1828, and was the son of Peter and Catharine Shaffer nee Flegal. The former served in the war of 1812. Peter's children were: John, m. to Susan Miller; Jacob, m. to Dolly Miller; Mary A., m. to Benjamin Miller; George, m. to Elizabeth Fetter; Peter, d.; William F., m. ——; Solomon F., m. to Mary A. Beck; Henry, d., m.; Samuel, d.; and Levi, m. Henry was first lieutenant in an Iowa regiment, and was killed at Arkansas Post. Solomon F. was in the 21st Pennsylvania militia during the Chambersburg raid, and also in company G, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. He was postmaster of the latter regiment. Solomon F.'s children were: Rebecca J., m. to Alexander A. Gorman; Simpson, m. to Anna Hoover; Joanna M., m. to David Sutter; Augusta C., m. to Silas Lydick; Flora G., Adda Dell, Lorena Maud, Ord Danks, Harry D, and Bertha Bell. Our subject located in the county in 1851, and on the present farm in 1865. A part of the Shaffer tract became the property of the Holland Land Company in 1820.

Hartman Bartholomew was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, in 1799, and was a son of George and Elizabeth Bartholemew. Our subject migrated to America in 1833, and for two years was located at Zelienople, Butler county. He then removed to the tract now occupied by him in North Mahoning township. His wife was born in 1803. His children are: Dorothea, m. to John Euyler; George, m. first to Dorothea Hefflick, d., and second to Mrs. Sayres; John, m. to Christina Stever; and Jacob, m. to Margaret Behm.

Frederick Walker was born in Huntingdon county, in 1828, and was the son of Frederick and Rebecca Walker. The latter died in 1831; his second wife was Mary A. Sheffy. Frederick, sr., was a native of Germany. He came to the tract now occupied by our subject in 1838. His children were: John, Frederick, m. to Hannah Barr; and Mary A., m. to Samuel Ire. John was in the late war. Frederick was in company B, 74th Pennsylvania volunteers, for six months. Frederick, jr.'s, children were: Harrison, William Thomas, John, Mary J., Samuel B., Clara A., Sarah, Anna, and Peter F.

George Fetterhoff was born in Huntingdon county, in 1832, and was a son of John and Mary Fetterhoff nee Sprankle. The former settled, in 1839, on the farm now occupied by our subject, where he died in 1867, about sixty-seven years of age. His wife is still living, and is over seventy-five years old. Their children were: Susan, m. to George Sprankle; Elizabeth, m. to Robert G. Jordan; Mary A., m. to James McHenry, d.; Sarah, m. to M. S. Sprankle; George, m. to Christeann Crissman; and John, d. Our subject's children are: William Monroe, m. to Laura B. Pearce; John W., Ida M., Mary Alice, Minnie D., Joseph M., Nancy J., Daniel R., and Clarence C.

William Muth was born in Hesse Cassel, Germany, in 1815, and was the son of Conrad and Elizabeth Muth (or Moot) nee Kerchhoff. Our subject came to America in 1840, and leased for a number of years a tract of land belonging to Casper Wortman, now in North Mahoning township. In 1845, he moved to the tract now occupied by himself. His wife was Elizabeth Bradenbach, whom he married in Germany. Their children were: George, m. to Elizabeth Enterline; Martin, killed at the battle of the Wilderness, John, d.; Casper, d.; William H., Mary, m. to Rev. Samuel Milliron; Elizabeth, d.; Hartman, d.; Henry, d.; Frederick, and Margaret. Martin served in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, and was killed. George was in company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about a year.

William Blose was born in Kittanning township, about five miles from Kittanning, Armstrong county, in 1825, and was a son of Michael and Sarah Blose nee Waugaman. The latter's grandfather was an emigrant from Germany. Michael was a native of Northampton county, and was a miller by occupation, his father owning a mill in that county. While a young man, he emigrated to near Salem Church, Westmoreland county, and was there married to his wife, removing, in 1809, to the vicinity of Kittanning, where he located on what is now the David Shoemaker farm; he died in 1862, about eighty-one years of age; his wife in 1865, about seventy-six years old. Their children were: Elizabeth, d., m. to Isaac Fitzgerald, d.; Daniel, m. to Martha Sinclair; Rebecca; d., m. to Robert Sinclair; John, d., m. to Hannah Hileman; Michael, m. first to Catharine Briney, d., and second to Susannah Walls; William, m. in 1845, to Elizabeth Shaw, daughter of Thomas Shaw, an emigrant from Ireland, who located in Armstrong county; and Sarah, m. to David Shoemaker. Michael was in the war of 1861. William served in company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers about five months; he located on his present farm in 1854. Our subject'e children were: Sarah Ann, m. to Phineas A. Work; Henry K., m. to Nancy Jane Work; Calvin, m. to Sarah A. Blakeley; Daniel Albert; Joseph U., M. D., m. to Lily T. C Brown; William Thomas; James Miles; Elizabeth Jane; Ella Myrtilla, and Edwin Franklin. Daniel Albert Blose is a graduate of Glade Run Academy, in the class of 1875; and of Lewisburg University, in the class of 1878, and is now a student of the Auburn Theological Seminary (Presbyterian), in the class of 1880. Joseph U. was educated at Glade Run Academy; he read medicine with Dr. J. W. Morrow, of Marchand, and has taken his first course of lectures at the Columbus, Ohio, Medical College.

Jacob Shaffer was born in Berks county in 1795, and was the son of John and Eve Shaffer nee Dumas. The former's father came from Saxony, Germany, to America, in 1755; he had ten sons, of whom John was the youngest; he and two of his sons served in the Revolutionary war. John Shaffer settled in Huntingdon county in 1803; he died in 1848 in Shaffersville, Morris township, in that county, about seventy-seven years old; his wife in 1843, about seventy-six years old. Jacob Shaffer was married in 1818 to Elizabeth Fetterhoff, who was born in York county in 1794. They removed from Huntingdon county, and located on his present farm in North Mahoning, in 1838; he served as justice of the peace for ten years. Their children were: Eve, m. to Chas. Wilhelm, d.; Michael, (see sketch in West Mahoning,) m. to Martha Thomas; John J., m. to Mary Means; George, d.; Elizabeth, m. to S. S. Beck; Joseph, m. to Mary Snyder, d.; Alfred, m. to Mary C. Chambers, d.; Margaret Ann; and Jacob, m. to Minerva Frampton. Joseph was in Co. C, 206th Pa. vols. about one year. Alfred was in Co. I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers about eleven months, and in company B, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Charles and Eve Wilhelm's (a daughter of Jacob Shaffer) children were: Elizabeth; John J., d.; Henrietta; Catharine; Margaret A., d.; Caroline Eve; Mary C.; and Emma E. John J. Shaffer's children were: Elizabeth C.; Jacob T., m. to Isabella J. Lafferty; George L., m. to Minerva J. McHenry; Mary C., d.; William H., d.; Thomas B.; C. C., and J. T. Jos. Shaffer's (a son of Jacob) children were: George S.; Jacob L., d., John A. and William H. The children of Alfred (a son of Jacob) Shaffer, were: J. C., James A., Sarah E., Margaret A., Jacob H., Della J., d.; John L., and Osborne M.

T. B. ALLISON was born in Centre township, about a mile from what is now Homer city, in 1813, and was a son of Robert and Nancy Allison nee Riddle. The former died in 1832, at the age of sixty-four. He was married four times; his first wife was a Miss Simpson, d.; the second was Ann Ramsey, d.; the third was Nancy Riddle, d., and the fourth was Rhoda Anderson, d. Robert Allison was the son of Robert and Rebecca Allison nee Baird, both natives of Ireland, who located on what is now the McConaughey farm, near Homer City, at an early date. Robert and Nancy Allison's children were: Robert T., d., m. to Isabella Brown, d.; David R., d., m. to Lydia Roney, d.; John R., d., m. to Rebecca James; William B., m. to Ann Brown; T. B., m. first to Hannah Dickey, d. in 1862, forty-nine years of age, and second to Isabella Kinter; Andrew B., d.; Rebecca J., m. to George Bratton; Margaret, m. to George Hammers; and Samuel A., d. in 1869, m. first to Mary E. Bothel, d., and second in 1868, to Jennie McCluskey. T. B. was associate judge of county one term. He has been the postmaster of Marchand, with the exception of three years, since the office was established. He has been a merchant for forty years, commencing in 1839, on the Bell farm, East Mahoning township, and locating in 1843, on the east end of the Allison farm, adjoining what is now Marchand. T. B. Allison's children were: Hannah J., m. in 1855, to Samuel C. Brown, d. in 1873, fifty-six years of age; Nancy A., m. first to T. R. McComb, d., and second to Robert St. Clair; Clark D., d., David B., m. to Jemima Coulter; and Thomas, d. Clark was a drummer in the second battalion six months volunteers and the clerk of the colonel, being enlisted in company C, Pennsylvania volunteers. He died at Point of Rocks hospital. The children of Samuel A., a son of Robert and Nancy Allison, were: James C., m. to Amanda Simpson; Robert B., m. to Lizzie Chambers; Martha A.; Joseph Row; William E., m. to Zetta Stuchal; Samuel A., d.; T. B.; Rebecca Jane; David B.; and Mary, d.

IRWIN ROBINSON was born in what is now West Wheatfield township, in 1808, and was the son of Irwin and Catharine Robinson nee Elloitt, daughter of John Elliott, who located in Fairfield township, Westmoreland county, in 1779. Our subject's parents were natives of Ireland. His father when a boy of sixteen years, migrated to Pennsylvania. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and was wounded severely with buck-shot. About 1783, he removed to Fairfield township, Westmoreland county, and in a few years later, removed to the place now occupied by Elliott Robinson. He died at the age of seventy—his wife, about seventy-two years of age. The childre were: George, d., m. to Susan Brinker, d.; John, d., m. to Rebecca Yalton, d.; Jane, m. to John Long, d., the "hunter;" Hance, d., m. to Helen Spears; Gilmour Craig; Thomas, d., m. to Susannah Long, d., a sister of John Long; William, d., m. to Caroline Talmadge, d.; Irwin, m. first to Martha Armstrong, and second to Mary Crossman; James, m. to a Miss Stear; Elliott, m. three times, first to Margaret Nixon, d., and third to Mrs. Sutton; Mary, d., m. to Jas. S. McCullough; Christopher, m. to a Miss Lynn; and Elizabeth, m. to Smith Lynn. James was in company B, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers about four years. Elliott served in the same conflict. Irwin was in the 2d Battalion, six months volunteers, and in company F, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers about two years. He was wounded at Petersburg. He served as justice of the peace, county auditor, and county commissioner of Jefferson county, where he resided for forty-three years. In 1874, he removed to North Mahoning Tp, Indiana county. Irwin's children are: Sarah Catharine, m. to Frank W. Bell; Babara H., d.; Geo. A., d.; Mary; Martha Melissa, m. to William Barlin; William S. McCullough, d.; and Matilda J., m. to Michael Herwig.

JOHN GOURLEY was born in county Derry, Ireland, in 1808, and was the son of George and Rosanna Gourly nee McNeil. The family came in 1817, to Nova Scotia, and in 1819, to Philadelphia. In 1821, they removed to Huntingdon county, and in 1830, to the farm now occupied by John Kerr, in West Mahoning township. George Gourley was a blacksmith, and our subject pursued the same calling for several years. George died in 1853, at the age of eighty-four—his wife, in 1873, seventy-four years of age. The children were: Thomas, d., m. to Eleanor Adams; John, m. in 1831, to Jane A. Russell, d. in 1862, forty-nine years of age, and second in 1866, to Margaret Crawford; Margaret, d., m. to Samuel Potts; James, d. m. to Margaret Travis; Alexander, m. first to Margaret Gillespie, d., and second to Margaret Henry; Rosanna, m. to Israel Kerr; George, d., m. to Mary Elliott; Robert, d.; Nancy, d., m. to John McClelland; Armstrong; and Mary A., d., m. first to Anthony Miller, and second to James Wachob. James served in the war of 1861. Thomas was county Auditor. John served as county commissioner, and also as elder in the Presbyterian Church, for thirty-nine years—fifteen being at Perryville, and twenty-four at the Covode Church. Our subject's children were: Samuel Robert, d.; George A., m. first to Margaret Coulter, d., and second, to Mrs. Martha J. Sartwell nee Gregg; and Emma J., d. Our subject was the first tax collector of North Mahoning township. In that year, (1846), the township preceded all others in its settlement with the county. The Gourley land was patented to the Holland Company. Mr. Gourley settled on this tract in 1839.

ALLEN CRAWFORD, was born in what is now East Wheatfield township in 1804, and was a son of Moses Crawford and Nancy Scroggs. The former was born in Kentucky in 1772, migrated to Wheatfield township in 1798, and removed to what is now the Moses S. Crawford farm, East Mahoning township, in 1818. He died in 1831, at the age of fifty-nine. His second wife was Mary Jamison, born in Wheatfield township, in 1790, and died in 1864. Moses Crawford's children were: Mary, d., m. to James Donaldson, d.; Samuel, d., m. ———; Jane, d., m. to William Hartman, d.; John, m. ——; David, d.; Allen, d. in 1872, m. in 1826 to Nancy Brown, b. in what is now East Mahoning township, in 1806, daughter of John Brown and Margaret Wiggins, the former was born in the Wiggins settlement, and was a son of John Brown; Ann, m. to William Robb; James, d., m. twice, first wife was a Miss Wallace; Elizabeth, m. to William Matthews; A. J. T., m. to Emily Sprankle; Rachel, d., m. to Andrew Spalding; Margaret, m. to John Gourley; William, m. to Mary Gourley; Isabelle, Martha, and Moses Scott, m. to Rachel Pollock. A. J. T. has served as justice of the peace, and in other important positions. Allen's children were: Margaret, m. to Mr. Rishell; Moses, m.; John, m. first to Jane Black, d., and second to a Miss Milliron; Samuel, m. to Mary Ratcliff; Alexander S., m. to Lizzie Anderson; James L., M. D., m. first to Zermiah Griffith, d., and second to Alice Blinn; Mary Jane, m. to Samuel McGee; Nancy Ann, d., m. to James Wilkins; and Lucinda, d. The children of A. S., a son of Allen Crawford, were: Lula Belle, Byron Porter, d.; and Nancy. The children of A. J. T., a son of Moses Crawford, were: Amelia, m. to Henry Peffer; Sebilla, m. to M. D. Shields; and Frederick J., graduate of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Lawrence county, Pa., in the class of "1876," and of the Western Theological Seminary in the class of "1877."

W. C. BROWN was born near Mahoning Church, in what is now East Mahoning township, in 1831, and was a son of David C. and Martha Brown nee Thompson. The former was a son of Jeremiah and Elizabeth Brown nee Cummins. Jeremiah was the son of John and Ann Brown nee Wilson. John Brown settled in the Wiggins neighborhood, not far from the present site of Indiana, about 1790. He was a native of Ireland, and had been a soldier in the regular army of that country. His children were: Jeremiah, d. in 1830, fifty-four years old, m. to Elizabeth Cummins, d. in 1853, in her seventy-fourth year; John, m. to Margaret Wiggins; and Elizabeth, m. to James Thompson; all dead. Jeremiah, in 1813, located on what is now the John Craig farm, East Mahoning township. Jeremiah's children were: John W., d., member of class of 1823, died a month before graduation; David C., d. in 1843, about forty years old, m. to Martha Thompson, d. in 1847, about forty-two years of age; William, m. to Sarah Ellis; Joseph, m. to Jane Gibson; Nancy, d., m. to William Work, d.; Mary, m. to John Craig;

Elizabeth, d., m. to John Mabon; Jane, d., m. to Joseph Davis; and Samuel C., d., m. to Hannah J. Allison. David C.'s children were: John, m. to Sarah Wetsel; W. C., m. to Mary M. Allison, daughter of Dr. David R. Allison, of Saltsburg; Robert, d.; David, d.; Francis M., d.; and Eliza Jane, m. to Zebulon Baird. W. C. entered the army as second lieutenant in the second battalion six months volunteers, and was subsequently promoted to first lieutenant. He was captain of company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. He was sheriff of county from 1875 to 1878. Francis M. was an orderly sergeant in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, being successively promoted to second and first lieutenant. He was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. The children of W. C. are: Frank E., Harry W., Burt A., and David Earl. The children of Samuel C. (a son of Jeremiah) and Hannah J. Brown were: Lily T. B., m. to Dr. Joseph W. Blose; Melborn A.; Clark W., Hannah Mary, Lauretta Elizabeth, d; Wilbur C., and Samuel T.

Samuel S. Beck was born on Spruce creek, Huntingdon county, in 1825. He was married in 1853 to Elizabeth Shaffer, who was born in Huntingdon county in 1829. Their children were: Martin Luther, Anna M., Jacob Streamer, William H., d., and Laura M. White.

Rev. W. F. Gibson was born near New Wilmington, Lawrence county, in 1852, and was the son of Francis and Melvina Gibson, of Scotch-Irish Presbyterian descent. Our subject was a graduate of Westminster College, New Wilmington, in the class of 1874, and of the Western Theological Seminary in 1877. His first charges were Gilgal, Mt. Pleasant and Rockbridge Presbyterian churches of Indiana county, of which he has continued the pastor, He was married in October, 1876, to Mora R., daughter of Capt. R. I. Boggs, of Allegheny City, Abram Hicks was born in Centre county in 1807; he was married in Indiana county in 1834, to Nancy McKee, who died in the county in 1845; he was again married in 1847, to Martha Hall, who survives her husband. The children were: Simmons, m. to Nancy Slaughengar; Nelson T., m. to Jane Drummond; Mary A., d.; Jemima J., m. to Joseph McCreight; Charles M., m. to Rebecca McSparran; James Emerson, d; Eliza J., d; Nancy, d.; Abram, m. to Ann Barrick; Martha J., d., m. to John Hop; Mary Margaret, m. to J. A. Shields; Geo.; Washington, and Grant, d. Nelson T. served in company B, 174th Pennsylvania volunteers about nine months. Charles M. served in the same company for the same time. The only child of Abram (a son of Abram) Hicks is William Jesse. The Abram Hicks farm was originally Holland land. John Zener made the first improvement. Mr. Hicks purchased the property in 1854.

David Snyder was born on the homestead in 1852, and was the son of John Adam and Caroline Snyder nee Wilhelm, both of whom were born near Hamburg, Germany. The former settled on the homestead in 1843; he died in 1875, at the age of sixty-eight; his wife is living, though over seventy-four years of age, and is as active as a woman of twenty-five years. The children were: Philip, d.; John, m. to Margaret Sutter; Caroline, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Mary, d., m. to Joseph Shaffer; Catharine, m. to George S. Weaver; and David, m. to Martha D. Bowman. John was in company G, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers about three months; he was wounded, and his name appears among the missing. In the early days lead was supposed to exist on the Snyder farm. An old lady by the name of Widow Foster, who was a captive among the Indians, related many stories tending to this belief. The Indians, according to her stories, often made their bullets near a tree whose dead and shrunken trunk is still standing on the Snyder premises.

Jacob J. Gall was born in Washingtonville, Columbiaaa county, Ohio, in 1852, and was a son of John, a native of Austria, and Margaret Gall nee Pifer. The former was a member of the 74th Pennsylvania volunteers for six months. John Gall's children were: Jacob J., m. in 1878, to Sarah C. Zener; W. H., Sarah C., John A., Elizabeth, and Charles.

Alfred Prescott was born in Kennebec county, Maine, in 1819, and was a son of William and Tryphena Prescott nee Wilbur. The former is over eighty-seven years of age; he was a soldier in the war of 1812, and has for a year been drawing a pension. Our subject was educated at Vassalboro Academy, Maine, and was for several years engaged in teaching in Maine, Pennsylvania and Virginia. In October, 1871, he removed to the old Wall tavern stand, on the Punxsutawney road, one mile northwest of Covode, where he has been engaged in keeping a hotel; he was married in 1858, to Hannah Y. Conser, daughter of Jacob and Ruth Conser nee Robinson. Our subject's children were: William Alfred; Sarah E., d.; John O.; Edwin C.; Ruth C., d.; and Samuel Miles. Our subject was one of the constituent members of the Soldiers' Run Baptist Church, of Jefferson county.

SOUTH MAHONING TOWNSHIP.

Probably the first white man to locate above the "purchase line," was John Ross, an Indian trader who had a cabin on the present Samuel K. Lockhart farm, in this township. Tradition reports that this stood about ten rods north of the run which bears his name, near a spring, between an oak and a pine, where a pile of stones is said to be the monument of the ruins of an old house. Not far from this spring, an Indian trail extended from the south toward the north.

THE FIRST SCHOOL HOUSE

Was located at the foot of the Marshall lane, on land now owned by Jacob Keel. It was of the usual round log type, with greased paper windows, in spaces cut out of the logs, puncheon floor, log chimney, and puncheon desks and seats. This building was erected in 1819 or 1820. Paddles with letters pasted on them were used by the infant scholars. The "Dilworth Speller" or "United States Speller," "Western Calculator," and testament, were the text books of the older pupils.

As far as can be learned, Samuel Criswell was the first teacher. Masters Craig, Brown and James were also early teachers in this house.

Mrs. Marabay Hayes was born in 1807, on the James Wells farm, South Mahoning township, and was a daughter of David and Deborah Price nee Smith. The family, with David's brothers, John, Joseph, Job, Jacob, their sister Lydia and their mother, early in the present, or the latter part of the last century, had located in what is now Indiana county. John was married to Mary Stout; Joseph to Elizabeth Fish; Job to Mary Pierce; Jacob to Elizabeth Colkitt; and Lydia was married to an unknown party, and died prior to 1807, on the Mogle homestead. David settled on the James Wells farm; Job on the Henry Crib farm, South Mahoning township; Jacob on the Mrs. Elizabeth Wells farm, same township; and John and Joseph located on Blacklegs, near the site of West Lebanon. David Pierce's children were: George, d., m. to Sarah Pierce, d., John, m. to Ellen Colkitt, d.; Jacob, d., m. to Margaret Hallowell, d.; Sarah, d., m. to John Neff, d.; Lydia, d., m. to Joseph Kerr, d.; Hannah, m. to Peter Hoover, d.; Deborah, m. to John Neal, d.; Elizabeth, b. in 1804, on the farm now occupied by her, m. to James Wells, d.; and Marabay, m. to Thompson Hays. Job Pierce's children were: Lydia, d., m. to Elisha Stout, d.; Lewis, d., m. to Mary Sutton, d.; Mary, d., m. to William Pierce, d.; Sarah, d., m. to George Pierce, d.; Abram, d., m. to Rachel Pierce, d.; Job, d., m. to Jane Wilson, d.; and Margaret, m. to Andrew Spencer, d.

Jacob Weamer was born in 1806, on the farm now owned by Dr. C. Ewen, and was a son of Andrew and Elizabeth Weamer nee Mench, who were natives of Bucks county, who came to the above named tract in 1803. Mr. Weamer purchased the land in 1802, having exchanged a blacksmith shop and a few acres for the tract which contained three hundred acres. He and his family came over the mountains in a wagon, and the winter of 1802–3 was passed at Absalom Woodward's, in Armstrong county, where he worked at his trade. He sold a horse and his wagon in order to provide for the construction of buildings on his land. He packed and carried in the spring of 1803 his goods from Woodward's to his land, over a blazed path, a distance of fifteen miles, the only building on the route being that of Peter Thomas, about four miles from Woodward's. Later in the year, Job Pierce, a Mr. Cochenour, and Joseph Wadding came into the same township and made improvements. Andrew Weamer's children were: Abraham, d., m. to Margaret John, d.; John, d., m. first to Louisa Clark, d., and second to Mary Getty; Susan, d., m. to John Russell, d.; Adam, d., m. to Nancy Shanks, d.; Jacob, m. to Margaret Roof; Nancy, d., m. to James Marshall; Daniel, d., m. first to Matilda Repine, d., and second to Mrs. Mary Wagner; Sarah, m. to Fred. Harmen, d.; George, m. to Mary A. Wagner; and Mary, m. to George Huber.

Our subject's children were: Andrew, m. to Jane Stuchell; Mary, m. to Jacob Clouse; William H., m. to Mary Forrester; John G., d.; George, m. to Elizabeth Eiler; J. C., m. in 1871 to Clarissa C. Hopkins; Margaret; and Geddis, d. William H., John G., George, and J. C. were soldiers in the war of 1861. John G. died of disease, while in the service. J. C. served in company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, for seven months. The children of John (a son of Andrew) Weamer were: Jos., d., m. to Eliza Stear; John, d., m. to Martha Miller; Andrew, d., m. to Isabella Mahon; William, d., m. to Mrs. Eliza Weamer nee Stear; David, d., m. to Elizabeth Wagner; George, d.; Alexander, d.; and Louisa, d. J. C. Weamer (a son of our subject) was born in 1845. His children are: Austin L., Josephine Candace, and Chauncey Earnest.

AARON WELLS was born in 1834, on the James Wells homestead, in this township, and was a son of James and Elizabeth Wells nee Pierce. The former is dead and the latter is living, nearly seventy years of age, on the farm where she was born. Their children were: Christopher, m. first to Margaret Kelly, d., second to Hannah Kerr, d., and third to Mrs. Nancy Kelly; Allen, d.; Hiley C.; Eliza, d., m. to Jacob Bair; John, d.; Maria, d., m. to Henry Van Horn; Aaron, m. to Sarah J. Rishel; Lydia, m. to H. McKee; Jacob P., m. first to Susan Hall, d., and second to Emily Pilson; and James M., m. to Susan Dibler James Wells was the son of Christopher Wells, an early settler of Indiana county, and who located at an early date in what is now South Mahoning township. His children were as follows: Ann, b. October 8, 1757; Margaret, b. March 28, 1759; Esther, b. September 5, 1760; Isaiah, b. April 2, 1762; Levi, b. November 14, 1763; Sarah, b. June 13, 1765; William, b. December 2, 1766; Elizabeth, b. July 12, 1768; Jesse, b. October 2, 1770; John, b. May 11, 1772; Rachel, b. June 10, 1775; John, b. April 15, 1777; Nathan, b. February 8, 1780; Mary, b. September 30, 1781; Ann, b. March 10, 1783; Christopher, b. April 21, 1785. Amy, b. August 12, 1787; Edward, b. August 5, 1789; Sarah, b. March 19, 1792; Peter, b. April 18, 1794; Elizabeth, b. June 3, 1796; and James, b. November 10, 1798. Our subject has resided on the present farm since 1834. His children were: John C., James Aubert, and Elmer Ulysses.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL BRADY.—The name of Captain Samuel Brady was, for many years, a terror to the untutored savage. He was peculiarly fitted to carry out the task which he had undertaken. His father and a favorite brother, within the space of one year, had fallen by the hands of their Indian foes, and he vowed to avenge their death. He was tall, muscular and athletic, with the agility of a tiger, and a physical endurance far beyond that usually allotted to man. Added to this, he was possessed of a courage that never quailed in the hour of danger. So consummate had become his knowledge of the traits of the Indian that the scream of the blue jay and the flight of the crow admonished him that some lodge of the foe was near; but at such times he never lost that coolness which was a distinguishing feature in his character, and never shrunk from the danger which more timid men would have dreaded. He started out in life with but one purpose in view, and that was to strike the foe wherever he could be found. He was alike indifferent to the summer's heat and the winter's cold, and when the tempest raged fiercest and the gloom of night was thickest, he would push out into the dark forest in search of his prey. His grandfather, Hugh Brady, emigrated to the state of Delaware from the north of Ireland, about the year 1732, where his oldest John, father of Captain Samuel, was born in the following year. Sometime between 1733 and 1738, he came into the valley and settled on the banks of the Canodoguinet creek, in what is now Hopewell township, on a farm subsequently owned by James Hemphill.

John and Hugh studied surveying, and were occasionally called upon when a new settler came, or when lands were to pass from one to another, to survey the new purchased premises. John, in 1755, at the age of twenty-two, married Mary Quigley and removed to Shippensburg, where he became the owner of lot No. 17, now the property of John C. Martin. He then built a house, in which his son was born in 1756. This house, with one or two others, was destroyed by fire in 1770, but John Brady was not then in possession of it. Some time prior to 1768, he removed with his family to Standing Stone, now Huntingdon, where his son, Genreal Hugh Brady, was born, July 29th, 1768. He had six sons, viz: Samuel, James (who was killed in 1778), John, William P., Hugh, and Robert; and four daughters, viz: Mary, Jennie, Hannah, and Liberty. Hugh and Jennie were twins. John Brady removed from Standing Stone to a point on the west branch of the Susquehanna, ten miles above the town of Northumberland. He was killed by an Indian on April 11th, 1779, within half a mile of his home. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Brady returned to her father's house, in Cumberland county, in May, 1779, and remained until the following October, when she returned to Buffalo valley, and died in 1783, at the age of forty-eight. In 1784, Capt. Samuel Brady married a Miss Swearingen, of Washington county, where he resided till about 1790, when he removed to Virginia. He died, as above stated, on the 25th of December, 1795, at his home, about two miles west of West Liberty, Ohio county, Virginia, leaving a widow and two sons, and leaving behind him a record for heroism, of which but few in our country could boast.

THE BRADYS.—Silas W. and George W. were born on J. Y. Brady's homestead, and are sons of James Young Brady and Sarah Ricketts. The latter died in 1864, at the age of eighty-eight. The former was born in Huntingdon county, in 1783, and died at the age of eighty-five. They were married in 1814. James Young Brady was a son of James and Jane Brady nee Young. The former was a cousin of Captain Samuel Brady, and a captain of a company in the Indian wars. (See sketch Joseph Brady, Marion.) James Young Brady was a justice of the peace from Dec. 1st, 1823, to 1866. His children were: Andrew Jackson, b. 1815, m. to Catharine Long; John, b. 1818, m. to Catharine Lee; Mary J., b. 1820, m. to Robert Chambers; Julia Ann, b. 1823, m. to Thomas Stewart; James C., b. 1825, m. to Elizabeth Patterson; Oliver, b. 1827, m. to Margaret Long; Eveline, b. 1829, m. to Samuel T. Means, d.; William W., b. 1831; George W., b. 1833, m. to Mary Ann Webster; and Silas W., b. 1836, m. to Lucinda Hastings. George W., was second lieutenant, company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for one year. He was wounded at Fair Oaks, and resigned on account of disability. George W.'s children were: Emma Edith, Mansfield Webster, James Sherman, Harvey Dahlgreen, Howard Judson, Silas Lester and Amada. Silas W.'s children were: Thetta Eveline; James Hastings, d.; in 1868, three years old. Reuben Clark, and Sarah Margaret.

ROBERT MARSHALL was born in 1831, on the Marshall homestead, South Mahoning township, and was a son of James W. and Margaret Marshall nee Marshall, a daughter of Archibald Marshall. James W. was born in 1796, on Blacklegs creek, Conemaugh township. He died in 1844. His wife died in 1873, at the age of seventy-seven years. James W. was a son of William Marshall, who migrated at an early date from the Blacklegs settlement to the vicinity of Glade run, Armstrong county. James W. located on the Marshall homestead, South Mahoning township, in 1820. William Marshall's children were: Joseph, d., married to Elizabeth Marshall, d.; William, d., m. to a Miss Lewis, d.; John, m. to Martha Kirkpatrick, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Jno. McClelland; Mary, d., m. to Abel Findley; Margaret, d., m. to Benjamin Irwin, d.; James W., above noted; Robert, married to Mary Hindman; and Samuel, d. March 19th, 1880, in his seventy-seventh year, m. to Julia Lantz. The children of Archibald Marshall, the father of Margaret Marshall were: John, d., m. first to Elizabeth Stewart, d.; and second to Martha Morrow; William, d., m. first to a Miss Russell, d., and second to Isabella Clyde, d.; Catharine, d., m. first to Lewis Marshall, d., and second to Henry Bowser, d.; Margaret, above noted; James, m. first to Miss Richey, d., and second to Nancy Weamer, d.; Archibald, d., m. to Rebecca Taylor; and Samuel, d., m. to Mary Wadding. James W. Marshall's children were: William, d.; Margaret W., married, first to Thomas Davis, d.; and second to Nathaniel Doty; Joseph W., b. in 1827, m. in 1850, to Jane Davis, d., and second in 1865, to Mary Stewart, daughter of Thomas Stewart; Archibald, d. in 1858, in his thirtieth year, m. to Mary Ann Wadding; Robert, m. to Eveline Roland; and Catharine, m. first to Lewis Marshall, d., and second to Henry Bowser, d. The children of Joseph W., a son of James W. were: Adoniram J., married first to Clara Irwin, d., and second to Jane Orr; Louise Ann, d., m. to J. W. Luckart; Clark G.; Lydia C. d.; Rebecca J.; Margaret E.; Harvey S.; Nettie Irwin, d.; Alice, R.; Minerva Mary; Lawrence J.; Ramey W.; Rosella Sarah, d.; Mason Forbes; Esther Francis; and Bertha Dean. Jos. W. made the first improvement on his farm. The children of Archibald Marshall (a son of James W.) were: George Scott, m. to Amanda J. Doty; and Archibald B. The children of Robert Marshall (a son of James W.) were: Onessimus, d.; James F.; Benjamin R.; and Alvertus Preston.

ROBERT L. MABON was born on the old Liggett homestead, West Wheatfield township, in 1810, and was a son of John and Margaret Mabon nee Liggett, a daughter of Robert Liggett. The former was a son of William Mabon and Margaret Brown, natives of Scotland, where they were married. In 1784 or '85, they settled in what is now West Wheatfield township. William Mabon's children were: George, d., m. first to Ann Steele, d., and second to Margaret McDonald; John, d., m. to Margaret Liggett, d.; James, d., m. to Mrs. Jane Smith nee Wachob; Janet, d., m. first to John Graham, d., second to Robert Sutton, d., and third to William Baird, d.; William, d., m. to Esther Steele, d.; and Thomas, m. to Jane McLeary. George and James were soldiers in the war of 1812. John settled on the present Robert C. Mabon farm, South Mahoning township, in 1811. John Mabon's children were: Robert L., m. in 1837 to Mary E. Lewis, d. in 1879, in her fifty-ninth year; Janet B., m. to William Clyde, d.; William, b. in 1813, m. first in 1836 to Sarah Leasure, d. in 1855, at the age of forty-two, and second in 1858, to Nancy Anderson; John, m. first to Elizabeth Brown, d., and second to Sarah Brown; James, m. first to Margaret Lydick, d., and second to Rebecca Lewis; Nancy, m. first to Jos, Lydick, d., and second to Charles Barr, d.; Geo. m. to Jane Leasure; Thomas, M. D., m. to Mrs. Agnes Liggett nee Wilson; Francis, d., m. to Catharine Ansley; Margaret, d., m. to Geo. Aul; Mary, d., m. to Patterson Hopkins; Ann, d., m. to Hugh Pollock; and Alexander, d. Robert L. located on his present farm in 1837, and made the first improvements; he has a watch which has been for over one hundred years in the possession of the family. The children of William Mabon (a son of John Mabon) were: Margaret, m. to Andrew McCall; John L., (for marriages, &c., see his sketch); Jane, m. to Joseph Fisher; Sarah, m. to George Orr; William, m. to Margaret Dunlap; Ann, d.; Mary, d., and Amos A. James Kirkpatrick made the first improvement on the William Mabon farm. It was patented to James, a son of the aforenamed James Kirkpatrick.

Benjamin B. Van Horn was born in 1819, on the farm now occupied by Clemson Aul, East Mahoning township, and was a son of Joshua and Fannie Van Horn nee Briggs. Their children were: Benjamin B., m. to Phebe Neff; Christian, m. first to Rachel Pierce, d., and second to Mrs. Caroline Houser; Henry, m. twice, first to Maria Wells, d.; Mary A., d., m. to Robert Stewart; Dorcas, m. to Isaac Keck; Samuel, m. to Miriam Steele; and Sarah, m. to Jacob Sink. Samuel was in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: John N., m. to Jane Campbell; J. H., m. to Isabella Fry; Alexander Milton, m. to Rosalie Kerns; and Sarah S., m. to Turner Lukeart. Jno. was a member of the 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, United States signal corps, 2d battalion, being second lieutenant company A, and 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, being second lieutenant of company A; in the first term he was wounded at Fair Oaks. The B. B. Van Horn farm was first improved by himself and his father.

Joseph S. Stewart was born in 1811, on the James George farm, Armstrong township, and was a son of William and Nancy Stewart nee Scott, a daughter of Joseph Scott. William died in 1839, about fifty-four years old; his wife was a native of Ireland, and her family were among the pioneers of Armstrong township. William was a son of William and Mary Stewart nee Walker. The former was a school teacher and an early settler of this section. His children were: Millie, d., m. to William Hice, d.; Ellie, d., m. to Thomas Jones, d.; William, d., m. to Nancy Scott, d.; Jane, d. m. to John Marshall, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Marshall, d., (a cousin of the aforenamed); Watson, d., m. to Hettie Bell, d.; and Alexander, d., m. to Susan Sutton, d. Our subject's father located in Armstrong township about 1806. His children were: Joseph S., m. to Isabella Robinson, d. in 1862, at the age of fifty-four; William, d., m. to Martha Robinson, d.; Sarah, m. to Daniel Ralston; Alexander K., m. to Rachel Harmon; and Mary Ann, m. to James Black. Our subject's children were: John R., m. first to Jennie J. Marshall, d., and second to Mrs. Annie Smith nee Flemming; Nancy J., m. to Thomas Morrow; Sarah E., d.; William W., m. to Susan Jones; Robert T., d.; Joseph H., m. to Mary K. Miller; and Sarah I. John was in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for four years and four months.

Mrs. Elizabeth Snyder was born in 1798, in Lewistown, Pennsylvania, and was a daughter of Robert and Mary Boyles nee Johnston, who removed to Indiana county in 1802 or 1803, and located about two miles north of the site of the county seat. Robert was for seven years in the Revolutionary army; he died about fifty-seven years of age, and his wife at the age of sixty. Their children were: Ann, d., m. to Thos. Smith; Jane, d. m. to James Lydick; Margaret, m. to Joel Stout; Sarah, d., m. to Thomas Burns; Elizabeth, m. to Caleb Snyder, d. in 1879, at the age of eighty-two; Mary, d., m. to George Shields; Rebecca, d., forty-one years old, m. to Joshua Snyder, d., seventy-four years old, the latter's second wife was Mrs. Margaret Coulter nee Craig; Nancy, m. to Solomon Braughler; John, d., m. to Nancy Lockland; Johnston, d., m. to Eliza Shields. Our subject's children were: Robert, m. to Sophia Serene; Mary A., m. to Robert Shields; Elizabeth, d.; Nancy J., m. first to Wm. McHenry d., and second to Milton Sloppy; Thompson, m. first to Catharine Strathuf, d., and second to Maria Ritchie; and Fannie, m. to Joseph Nolan.

Samuel Wingard was born in Brush Valley township, Somerset county, in 1816, and was a son of Christopher and Julia Wingard nee Hoyman. In 1862, Samuel removed to Rayne township, and in 1869, located on his present farm. He was married in 1863 to Mrs. Keziah McQuown nee Snyder; daughter of Joshua Snyder, of Rayne township, and widow of Samuel McQuown. Her only child by her first husband was Ann Rebecca, m. to R. J. Richardson. The children by Mr. Wingard were: Robert Franklin; Charles Joshua; and Ira Preston, d. August 22, 1877, about two and a half years old.

G. H. Hayes was born in 1847, in Cowanshannock township, Armstrong county, and was a son of John and Jane Hayes nee McCaulay. The former was born in 1816, and was a brother of Thompson Hayes, of Plumville. His children were: John, m. to Elsina Martin; Agnes, d., m. to Jesse Alcorn; William B., d.; James W., m. to Jennie Wilson; H., m. to Lavinia Pringle; Luther, m. to Adella McGranahan; Joseph, m. to Adella Hendrick; Almond; and Margaret. G. H.'s children were: Lizzie, Edward, John, Joseph, and George. He has resided on his present farm since 1878. "He is a general mechanic, and all trades seem as one to him."

James McCall was born in 1809, on the farm now occupied by Milton Work, South Mahoning township, and was a son of William and Jane McCall nee Brady. The former made the first improvements on the John Craig and Milton Work farms, and was among the earliest settlers of the township, having migrated from the Ligonier valley. His children were: Rebecca, d., m. to James Haddon, d.; Jane, m. to James Hamilton, d.; Margaret, m. to Peter Kinter, d.; Elizabeth; James, m. to Eliza F. Shields, d. in 1869, fifty-six years old; Hannah, m. to John McGaughey; Mary, m. to John Lemon, d.; and John, m. to Mary Y. Travis. Our subject's children were: John S., d.; William T., m. to Martha Van Horn; Andrew S., m. to Margaret Mabon; Austin, m. to Eleanor McMillan; Mary B., d., m. to Alexander Walker; Elizabeth J., m. to Daniel Baylor; Martha A., m. to James C. Dilts; Maria C., d.; Margaret E., m. to Abram Craft; James M., m. to Anna Ross; and Sylvester, m. to Marilla Work. Andrew S. and Austin, were in the war of 1861.

Thomas Wadding was born in 1816, on the present Smail farm, West Mahoning township, and was a son of Joseph and Jane Wadding nee Travis, a sister of William Travis. Joseph Wadding was a native of England, and came to America when a youth. About 1807, he settled on the present Joseph Lukeart farm, South Mahoning township, and later, removed to West Mahoning. He died in 1817, about fifty years of age—his wife in 1865, at the age of eighty-three. The children were: James, d.; Mary, m. to Samuel Marshall, d.; John, m. to Annie Hendman; William, m. to Mary Rambaugh; Elizabeth, m. to David Rambaugh; Rebecca, m. to David Milliron; and Thomas, m. to Eliza Johnston, daughter of John Johnston. Our subject's children were: James, m. to Mary A. Olwiler; Joseph, m. to Sophia Colkitt; Margaret, m. to Robert Allison, d.; John, m. to Jane Cribbs; and Franklin. Joseph was a member of company A, 2d battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers. The Wadding farm was patented to John Brodhead.

Mrs. Mary Stewart was born in York county, in 1800, and was a daughter of Archibald and Mary Findley nee Poe. In 1800, the family removed to Westmoreland county, and in 1806, to the vicinity of what is now West Lebanon, Indiana county. The former died in 1809, at the age of sixty, and the latter in 1851, at the age of ninety. Their children were: Abel, d., m. to Mary Marshall, d.; Alexander, d., m. to Catharine Deemer, d.; Martha, living, eighty-nine years old, in Brush Valley township, m. first to Robert Adams, d., and second to Findley Cameron, d.; David, d., m. to Margaret McCormick, d.; John, d., m. first to Jane Hutchison, d., and second to Nancy Trimble, d.; Mary, m. to Joseph Stewart, b. in 1802 in Maryland, (a son of William Stewart,) d. in 1877; Jane, d., and Anna, d. Early in the century, Joseph Stewart located in Brush Valley, about three miles north of the site of Mechanicsburg. His children were: Archibald, d.; William, m. to Sarah A. Goodrich; Abel, m. first to Margaret Stewart, d.; and second to Eliza Riddle; Martha J., m. to Simon Lewis; Elizabeth, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Jane Hart, d.; Joseph, M. D., d, m. to Christina J. Graham; Mary, m. first to Rueben Reegor, d., and second to Thomas Taylor; Hannah, m. to H. H. Hamilton, d. in 1876, fifty-two years old; George, m. to Jane Findley; David, m. to Ann Askine; and Sarah A. P., m. to Shadrach Askine, d.

CAPTAIN P. C. SPENCER was born in 1840, on the farm now occupied by him, and was a son of Andrew and Margaret Spencer nee Pierce, a daughter of Job Pierce. Andrew Spencer died in 1855, at the age of fifty-six; his wife is living, at the age of seventy-eight. Andrew was a son of Zachariah and Margaret Spencer nee Biddle, early settlers of the Mahoning country. Andrew's children were: Mary, m. to Jesse Spencer; Nancy, m. to John Montgomery, d.; Margaret, m. to Edward Pierce; Sarah, m. to James Neal; Rebecca, m. to Ephraim Price; Elizabeth, m. to Aaron Work; Julia Ann, m. to Arr. Neal; P. C., m. to Sarah A. Davis; Sophia, d.; and Miles, m. to Anis Braughler. Our subject was a private in company F, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers for fifteen months, being wounded at Fair Oaks; corporal in company A, 2d battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers; second lieutenant company B, 100 days' service, and captain company B, 74th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers for seven months. Captain Spencer's father located upon the farm in 1835.

EBERT KINTER was born at the Mahoning mill, West Mahoning township, in 1835, and was a son of A. F. and Catharine Kinter nee Peter. The former was a brother of John and Isaac Kinter, and died in 1846, at the age of forty-four; his wife died in 1876, seventy-five years old. The children of A. F. Kinter were: I. R., m. to Miranda Crissman; Christianna, m. to S. T. Hoover; Ebert, m. to Addie E. Allison, and J. A.

SOLOMON W. WEAVER was born in 1857, on the farm now occupied by the Weaver heirs, and was a son of Solomon and Nancy A. Weaver nee Rishel. The former was a son of William and Nancy Weaver nee Ferrier, who removed in 1824 from Unity township, Westmoreland county, to the present Henry Weaver farm, South Mahoning township. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812, and a son of Adam Weaver, a captain in the Revolutionary war, and an early settler of Westmoreland county. His wife was Elizabeth Fiscus. William Weaver's children vere: Solomon, d. in 1876, sixty-six years old, m. in 1849 to Nancy A. Rishel; Catharine, d., m. to Robert McQuilkin; Daniel, m. to Mary McKee; William, m. first to Sarah Clyde, d., and second to Nancy Cameron; and Henry, m. to Martha Clyde. Solomon Weaver located on the farm now occupied by his heirs, in 1844. His children were: Esther; Nancy F., d.; Solomon W.; Saloam E., Ruth, John, and Zebia.

W. A. WILSON was born in 1846, in Porter township, Huntingdon county, and was a son of John S. and Eliza Wilson nee Stewart. The former was born in Huntingdon county in 1824. The family removed to Plum Creek township, Armstrong county, in 1863. John S. was a member of the 199th Pennsylvania volunteers for ten months. Our subject was married in 1867, to Nancy Harren, daughter of William Harren. His children were: William Preston, John Todd, Margaret E., and Lottie J. He removed to Washington township in 1868, and to present home in 1871. Our subject for some time has been engaged in the breeding of thoroughbred and graded sheep.

SAMUEL R. FISHER was born in 1832, in Hempfield township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of John and Barbara Fisher nee Errett, a daughter of Adam Errett. John Fisher was a son of Philip Fisher, who migrated from Montgomery county to Jacob's creek, Westmoreland county, about 1800. Philip's wife was a Miss Royer. John removed in 1836 to the farm now occupied by Christian Hoover, Plum Creek township; Armstrong county, where he died in 1853, at the age of fifty-seven; his wife died in 1843, at the age of thirty-three. His second wife was Rebecca Yarger. His children were: Philip, m. to Mary Ritchie; Elizabeth, m. to John Marshall; Samuel R., m. to Maria McGaughey; Mary Ann, m. first to Jos. Hamilton, d., second to Hance Robinson, d., third to a McLeod, d., and fourth to a Pagan; Catharine, m. twice, the first being to Joseph Mills; Sarah, m. to James Stephens; John, m. to Mrs. Allhouse nee Dry; Jacob, m. to Nancy Fisher; Barbara; Margaret A., d.; and Nancy J., m. to William Smail. Philip, John and Samuel R. were in the war of 1861, the two latter being in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers; John was in company E, and Samuel R. company A. The latter's children were: Josiah, Miles, John, Mary Ann, Charles, Effie Mabel, and James. He has served as township auditor for ten years; he located on his present farm in 1864, having removed to the county in 1856. The first improvement was made by Thomas Clyde.

PATRICK LYDICK was born in 1806, on the old Patrick Lydick homestead, or Philip Rice farm, Rayne tp., and was a son of Patrick and Mary Lydick nee McHenry. Their children were: John, d., m. to Elizabeth Chapman, d; Isaac, d., m. first to Ann Turner, d., and second to Eliza Sutor; James, d, m. first to Sarah Chapman, d., and second to Rebecca Johnston, d.; William, m. to Mary Neff; Patrick, m. in 1830, to Jane A. Hamilton, b. in 1811 in Centre township; Samuel, d., m. first to Ellen Harrison, d., and second to Sarah Miller; Joseph, d., m. to Nancy Mabon; Mary, d., m. to Archibald Jamison, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Edward Turner, d.; Hannah, m. to Samuel K. Lockhart; and Margaret, m. to James Mabon. Our subject's children were: William H., m. to Jane Bell; Edward T., d.; John, d.; James, d.; Mary J., d.; Sarah E., m. to Edward Wells; Samuel A., m. to Rachel A. Hamilton; Benjamin Franklin, m. to Jane E. Shields; Silas Clark, m. to Sarah E. McCausland; Ann E., and George A., d. Samuel A. served in Hampton's battery, F, Pennsylvania light artillery. Our subject located on his present farm April 1, 1839. Samuel A.'s children were: Mary J., Minnie Ella, Hubert Orlando, John Martin, Vernie Bell, and Cora. Benjamin Franklin's children were: Joseph Edward, Olive Myrtie, Marvey Lorenzo, and Franklin Wilbur.

JOHN MCGAUGHEY was born in 1808, in Armstrong county, and was a son of Thomas and Martha McGaughey nee Reed, who removed to the vicinity of the canal tunnel, Conemaugh township, Indiana county, in 1817. The former was born in Westmoreland county, in 1776, and died in Conemaugh township, Indiana county, in 1852. The latter was born in what is now Conemaugh township about 1780, and died in 1837. Thomas was a son of Thomas McGaughey, an early settler of Westmoreland county. Thomas and Martha McGaughey's children were: Thomas, d., m. to Mary McLain, d.; Mary, d.; John, m. to Mrs. Hannah McCall; Margaret, d.; Robert, m. to Mary Thompson; and Rachel, m. to Franklin Cruikshank. Our subject's children were: Albert (step-son), m. to Jane Shoemaker; William, d., m. to Martha A. Hamilton; Jane, m. to William H. Hazlett; James, m. to Charity Kirkpatrick; John Scott, and Mary. He located on his farm in 1837. The tract was patented to Dr. James Hutchinson. The first improvement was made by Jacob Neff.

WILLIAM MCMILLEN was born in 1808, in Derry township, Westmorelan l county, and was a son of Daniel and Mary McMillen nee Reynolds, a daughter of John Reynolds, who was driven away by the Indians. Daniel was a son of John and Mary McMillen, natives of Ireland, who settled in Westmoreland county about 1795. Daniel was born in 1777, and died in Armstrong county, where the family had located in 1801. Our subject was married in 1834, to Elizabeth Cessna, daughter of Charles Cessna. His children were: Mary, (forty years old, weighs 266 pounds), m. to James C. Kirkpatrick; Catharine, m. Charles Juart; Jackson, m. to Rebecca Sink; Elmira, m. to Austin McCall; John, m. to Mary P. Morrow; and Silas, d. John McMillen's (father of our subject) children were: William, above named; John, m. to Martha Forster; Robert Beatty, d., m. to Catharine Helman; Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Juart; and James, m. to Martha Powell. William located on his farm in 1838, and made the first improvement.

GEORGE LOGAN VAN HORN was born in 1813, on the farm now owned by John Hamilton, East Mahoning township, and was a son of Isaiah and Dorcas Van Horn nee Logan. His wife was Mary Brady, a daughter of John Brady, a son of William P. Brady. Their children were: Elizabeth, d.; Melissa J., d.; Bennett W., m. to Mary B. Warden; Mary A., d.; and Margaret Emily, d. Bennet W. was in company A., 67th Pennsylvania volunteers for four months. His children were: Addie Myrtle, George P., Mary Caroline, and Cora Bell.

JAMES T. BRADY was born in 1846, on the Samuel T. Brady homestead, East Mahoning township, and was a son of Samuel and Mary E. Brady nee Leasure. He was married in 1874 to Amanda Stuchell, daughter of Christopher Stuchell. Their only child is Roy Glenn. The Brady farm was formerly known as the H. K. Leasure and John Leasure homestead.

MOSES KIRKPATRICK was born in 1806, on the farm now occupied by Simms Kirkpatrick, Cowanshannock township, Armstrong county, and was a son of James and Mary Kirkpatrick nee Larrimer, who were married in Westmoreland county, and not long after the Revolutionary war, settled in Armstrong county. Their children were: John, killed by the Indians when an infant, in Armstrong county; James, d., m. to Nancy Coulter, d.; David, d., m. first to a Miss Barnes, d., and second to Mary Thompson; John, d., m. to Nancy Larrimer, d.; Moses, m. to Sarah Clyde, d.; Jane, d., m. to Samuel Gasten, d.; Nancy, d., m. to David Sloan, d.; Sarah, d., m. to John Simpson, d.; and Mary, d., m. to Thomas Hilberry, d. James was a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject's children were: James, C., m. to Mary McMillen; Jane, m. to Joseph Kuhn; Nancy, d.; John, d.; Martha, d.; Joseph, m. to Mary A. Allison; Lydia; and Ephraim, m. to Mary Spencer. Joseph was in company A, second battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers. James C.'s children were: Elizabeth, d., m. to Thomas Jamison; Charity, m. to James McGaughey; William; Ephraim; Sarah J.; Arabella; Catharine Ann; Maranda Rose; David; Almira; and John Berkeley.

Robert J. Hopkins was born in 1824, on the John Hopkins farm, East Mahoning township, and was a son of John and Margaret Hopkins nee Jamison. (See Hopkins notes, East Mahoning.) He was married in 1849 to Margaret Thompson, daughter of John Thompson, of the "Stone House," who settled on the present J. G. Thompson farm, East Mahoning township. His children were: Harvey, m. to Annie Holman; Martin, m. to Bessie Pennell; Linus, Giles, Alexander, and Laura. Harvey was in the 100 days' service. Martin served for five years, in the U. S. regulars. Our subject located on his present farm in 1866.

Andrew Morrow was born in 1804, in county Down, Ireland, and was a son of John and Margaret Morrow nee Gillespie. The family, in 1812, removed to what is now the vicinity of West Lebanon, Indiana county, and two years later to Armstrong county. John Morrow's children were: Andrew, m. first to Mary Cochran, d., and second to Isabella Rankin; James, m. to Mary Meanor; William, d., m. first to Martha Hutchinson, d., and second to a Miss Gillespie; Martha, m. to John Marshall, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Abel Stewart; John, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Thomas Orin; Nancy, d., m. to Samuel Lytle; and Wilson, d., m. to Margaret Stuchell.

Thomas Stewart was born in 1808, at the "Spruce springs," Westmoreland township, Huntingdon county, and was a son of James and Jennett Stewart nee Gray, daughter of Thomas Gray, who located in Sherman's Valley in 1765, and participated in the Indian wars. James Stewart was a son of Robert and Mary Stewart nee Spencer, who migrated from Kennett Square, Chester county, to Huntingdon county, about the time of the Revolution. Our subject was married in 1839, to Elizabeth C. Canan, daughter of John Canan, a son of Col. John Canan. He located on present homestead in October, 1848, having come to the township on the previous 13th of May. Their children were: mary M., m. to J. W. Marshall; Frances, m. to Joseph Beyer; James Alexander, m. to Martha Kelly, d.; Sarah W.; Ann M., m. to William H. McAfoos; Matthew A.; William A.; Margaret E.; Caroline E.; and Amos S. Miller, an adopted son; James A. was in battery F, Pennsylvania light artillery, from Feb. 16, 1864 to June 16, 1865. Amos S. Miller was also in the same war. The Stewart farm was first improved by Robert Hopkins—it was patented in 1813, to Paul Busti. Our subject has introduced into the northern portion of the county, by grafts, from 1848 to 1854, many of the most valuable apple, peach, plum, apricot and other fruit trees, as well as grapes, &c. Among the apples were: the Baldwin, bell-flower, Peck's pleasant, northern greening, green sweeting, Bailey sweet, northern spy, green catlin, fornwalder, Patterson sweet, Gravenstein, Porter, fall pippin, imperial rambo, gloria mundi, sweetbough, Newtown pippin, maiden blush, and several other varieties. He has now over one hundred different specimens of the apple tree. Among the peaches introduced by him were: yellow rareripe, snow, early York, early and late malocatan, and twenty other choice specimens. His most noted plum was the French D'Agen.

North Seanor (or Zener) was born near New Stanton, Westmoreland county, in 1844, and was a son of George and Sarah Ann Seanor nee Ansley. The former died in 1851, at the age of thirty-five. The latter is living, sixty years of age. The widow, with her family in 1864, settled on the old Thomas Hockenburg farm, South Mahoning township. Her children were: Mary, m. to Jacob Davison; Harrison, killed at Fair Oaks, while a member of company E, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers; Noah, m. to Barbara Ellen Kinan; Lemuel, d.; and Sarah Jane. Noah was in company H, 18th Pennsylvania cavalry, for nine months—was a prisoner of war one day, and was also in company F, 28th Pennsylvania volunteers for six months. Noah's children were: Sarah Jane, Harrison, Sherman, Ella, Emma and Anna. George Seanor was a son of Michael and Elizabeth Seanor nee Werhle. The latter is living, ninety-eight years of age, at Grapeville, Westmoreland county. Their children were: George, d., marriage above noted; Mary, d., m. to Jonathan Null; Eliza, d., m. to William Pool; Lydia, d., m. to Thomas Carpenter, d.; Sophia, d., m. first to John Walker, d., and second to George Mechlen; and Michael, m. first to Margaret Agnew, and second to Lizzie Miller. Michael Seanor was a son of George Seanor, who, about the close of the Revolutionary war, made the first settlement in what is now the Seanor neighborhood, Hempfield township, Westmoreland county. His children were: Michael, above noted; Adam, d., m. to Elizabeth Harrold, d.; George, migrated to Kentucky; Jacob, d., m. first to a Rugh, d., and second to Ann Simpson, d.; John, d., m. to Elizabeth Watt, d.; Philip, m. to Susan Smith, d.; Christopher, d., removed to Sandusky, Ohio; Mary, m. first to an Arrett, d., and second to Adam Horn, d.; and Elizabeth, d.

John Trusal was born near Pittsburgh, in 1827, and was a son of William and Mary Trusal nee Boyd, natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1820, and located in Allegheny county. In 1834, the family removed to the homestead now occupied by our subject. William Trusal died in 1856, at the age of fifty-nine; his wife in 1867, at the age of sixty-eight. Their children were: Bell, d., m. to Andrew Anderson; Mary, d.; Mary Ann, d., m. to Robert Stewart; Robert, m. first to Mary McQuown, second to Kate Harmon, and third to Mary Neal; John, m. in 1858 to Elizabeth Cline, daughter of John Cline, of Westmoreland county; William, m. to Susan Reddon; Nancy, d.; Esther J., d., m. to Elijah Nash, d.; Lydia A., d., m. to Cunningham Kinley; and Eliza, d. Robert was a soldier in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: Elizabeth Matilda, d.; Amos C., Mary Bell, and William Robert. John Cline was a son of Peter and Elizabeth Cline nee Bair. The latter's father was captured in Westmoreland county by the Indians, and remained a prisoner for many years. Of John Cline's children, Andrew was a captain in the late war and wounded twice; Zachariah was a second and first lieutenant, and killed; Amos was killed; David was among the missing, and William was wounded.

The Schrecongosts, or Schreckengosts.—Conrad Schrecongost, a native of Germany, and a "Redemptioner," and his wife Catharine, also a native of Germany, with their family, between 1790 and 1800, migrated from eastern Pennsylvania and located on the present Peter Hill farm, Valley township, Armstrong county. Conrad died in 1840, at the age of eighty-two, and his wife at the age of seventy-seven. Their children were: Catharine, d., m. to Martin Neece, d. Martin, d., m. to Christina Orey, d.; Benjamin, d., m. to Susan Orey, d.; John, d., m. to Sarah Turney, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. first to John Williard, and second to Daniel Shirey, d.; Mary, d., m. to Michael Truby, d.; Eve, m. to Jacob McAfoos, d.; Peter, m. to Mary Myers; Christopher, m. first to Barbara Forster, d., second to Mrs. Sarah Turney nee Craft, d.; and third to Mrs. Willis; and Daniel, m. to Mary Crub. Daniel was born in 1806, and his wife in 1800. Their children were: Emanuel Z., m. first to Sarah Hurtman, d., second to Anna McCurdy, d., and third to Mary Richards; Zephaniah C., m. first to Sarah Houser, d., and second to Mrs. Nancy M. McAfoos nee Hurtman; Isabella, d.; Solomon S.; Johnston, d.; Rosanna, d., Daniel W., m. to Mary M. Olinger; and Aaron C., m. to Catharine Hill. Emanuel Z. was in the 105th Pennsylvania heavy artillery for ten months. Daniel W. was in company B, 139th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and was wounded at the first battle of Fredericksburg and in the Wilderness. Solomon S. served in the late war for one year. The children of Emanuel Z. were: Philander W., m. to Mary C. Lias; Mary N., d.; Nancy L., m. to John White; Melissa A., m. to James Patterson; James L., d.; Emma Virginia; Leander Curtis; and Maggie A. Zephaniah C.'s children were; Anna B., Elmer E., Margaret, Ira Grant, John M., Vernie Etna, d., and Bert Clark. Daniel W.'s children were: Harry Edwin, d.; Albert L., Charles M., Lottie May, and Cora Etta, d.

John S. Spargo was born in 1031, in the city of Pittsburgh, and was the son of James and Mary Spargo nee Jones. The latter was born in 1800, in Cardiganshire, Wales, and is a resident of the township. The former was killed at the age of forty-two in 1844, on "Incline No. six," on the Portage railroad. He was a native of England, and a son of James and Mary Spargo nee Thomas. James Spargo was a native of Cornwall, England. He drove the "great heading" in the Antegloro coal mines between 1800 and 1808. In the latter year he and his family migrated to America. James, jr.'s children were: Mary, m. to John Carrich; William J., m. to Caroline Applegate; James, d.; John J.; Anna J., m. to Joseph L. Kirby; Amelia, m. to Andrew Cunningham; Stephen T., m. first to Margaret Vaughan, d., and second to Esther Isenaur; Ann E., m. to Lewis A. Welch; and Peter, m. to Ann M. Seth. Peter served in the 57th Pennsylvania volunteers and in the signal corps. William was in the United States Navy. Our subject located on his present farm 1847.

ABRAM STEFFY was born in 1844, in Pine township, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Steffy nee Wyke. His children are: Arwillow, Tobias, Camith, Etrulia, and Swartz. He served in company E, 2d battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers, and company F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers for one year and eight months.

T. M. DAVIS was born in 1851, on the present Miles Luckart place, South Mahoning township, and was a son of D. C. Davis, of whom see sketch in Washington township. He was married in 1872, to Floretta L. Ansley, daughter of Daniel Ansley. Their child is Maud M. Abram Davis, the father of D. C. Davis, made the first improvement on the farm now occupied by T. M. and Madison Davis.

REV. AARON NEFF was born in 1816, on the farm now occupied by Abram Sink, South Mahoning township, and was a son of John and Sarah Neff nee Pierce. The former was a native of Maryland, and was a son of Abram and Mary Neff, who about 1805 or 1806, settled on the farm now owned by Joseph Lydick, in South Mahoning township. Abram Neff deid in 1833, at the age of ninety-eight. John Neff in 1810, made his first settlement on the Abram Sink farm. Abram's children were: Elizabeth, d., m. to George Richard, d.; John, d. in 1850, sixty-five years old, m. to Sarah Pierce, d. in 1878, at the age of eighty-two; Michael, d.; Jacob, d., m. to Sarah Colkitt, d.; Susan, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Adam Mogle, d. Our subject was self-educated. In 1845, he commenced the work of a minister at the Mahoning Baptist Church, with which he was connected for eight and a half years. He was also pastor of the following churches: Bethesda, for two years; Shiloh, four years; Mechanicsburg, two years; West Lebanon, two years; Pine Creek, one and a fourth years; and Franklin, two years. On account of ill health, he abandoned active work for a few years, only to return to Mahoning, from which, after a career of twenty-one months, he was again forced to retire.

JACOB KEEL was born in Greensburg, Westmoreland county, in 1803, and was a son of Jonathan and Susannah Keel nee Fisher. The former was a native of Berks county, and the latter of Maryland. Jacob was married in 1826, to Elizabeth Dewalt, who was born in 1802, in Franklin county. In 1829, he returned to what is now South Mahoning township, subsequently removing to what is now Canoe township, and in 1868, locating on his present homestead. His children were: Susanna, m. to David Neal; Anna M., d.; Elizabeth, m. to David Pierce; Henry, D., m. to Sarah Pierce; Catharine, m. to Evan Lewis; John R., m. to Mrs. Sarah Vandivender nee Chambers; Margaret A., m. to Isaac Bowers; Peter, m. to Venizah Luckart; and Rebecca, m. to John S. Luckart. John R. and Peter were soldiers in the war of 1861.

JACOB O. DE LANCEY was born in 1834, on a farm now owned by Jacob Weamer, South Mahoning township, and was a son of Jacob F. and Susan De Lancey nee Knepper, a native of Cambria county. The former was a native of Bedford county, and came to the farm above named in 1832. He died in 1865, at the age of sixty-four. His wife is living, in her seventy-ninth year, with our subject. Their children were: Sarah Ann, d.; Mary Ann; Lavinia; Jacob Oliver; John, William S., d.; Daniel J., d. in Salisbury prison; and George W. Daniel J. was a member of company F, 63d Pennsylvania volunteers for one year, two months of which were passed in prison. Jacob O. was in company M, 5th heavy artillery for about one year. He was auditor of Armstrong county for 1870–71–72. Our subject's children were: Preston F., Clara B., Addison R., John C., Carmi B., Luella, Minnie Etta, William F., and Sydney Bayard. George W.'s only child is Susan Carlotta.

LEWIS A. WELCH was born in 1838, near Clearfield, Clearfield county, and was a son of George and Eliza Welch nee Hartshorn. Our subject came to Plumville in 1859. He was married in 1860 to Ann Elizabeth Spargo. Their children were: Mary, Eliza B., Carlotta Ann, Myrtie, George, Edgar and Almanda. Mr. Welch served in company E, 148th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years.

ABRAHAM PRINGLE was born in 1844, on the farm now occupied by G. H. Hayes, South Mahoning township, and was a son of David and Eliza Pringle. (See Pringle notes, Marion.) Our subject was married in 1866, to Margaret Mikesell, daughter of Joseph Mikesell. Their children were: Jos. A., Melissa and Melinda (twins), Eliza Ann, and John Austin. He served in company B, 2d Pennsylvania heavy artillery, for twenty-three months, and was twice wounded. He located on his present farm in 1877.

JOSEPH LUCKART was born in 1827, on the Kirkpatrick homestead, Cowanshannock township, Armstrong county, and was a son of Conrad and Margaret Luckart nee Reese. The former was a native of Maryland, and died in 1861, in his seventy-eighth year; the latter in 1822, in her seventieth year. They were married in 1808. In 1830, Conrad located on the farm now occupied by our subject. The latter was married first in 1854, to Nancy McCasland, who died in 1861, at the age of twenty-six, and second in 1863, to Martha Devinney, daughter of Daniel Devinney, of Armstrong county. His children were: Leanna Jane, m. to John Thompson; George A.; Margaret R.; John L., d.; William D.; Thomas A.; Mary B.; Sarah C., and Harry Taylor. The patent of the homestead was granted to Col. Andrew Porter.

ROBERT MILLER was born in 1830, near the present site of West Lebanon, Young township, and was a son of John and Keziah Miller nee Fulton, a daughter of Robert Fulton. The former died in 1862, at the age of sixty-two—his wife in 1850, forty-four years old. John Miller was born on the Miller homestead, Young township, and was a son of Henry and Rachel Miller, natives of Ireland, who after their marriage in that country, removed to what is now Young township. John Miller's children were; Rachel, m. first to Thomas Lytle, d., and second to William McCreery; Robert, m. in 1857, to Nancy Johnston, daughter of William Johnston; Alexander, d., m. to Charlotte Johnston; James, m. to Eliza Bell; Silas, m. to Mary Thomas; William, d.; and Ruth, m. to William Hammill. James was in company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry about three years. Our subject's children were: Rebecca, John F., William P., Mary K., Thomas B., and Vernia C. With the exception of four acres, the Miller homestead, in South Mahoning township, was improved by John Miller and his sons. The former located upon it in 1835. The tract was patented to John Brodhead, who, 1814, sold it to Matthew Wyncaop, the latter disposing of the property to Miller.

JOHNSTON MILLER was born in 1824, near Potter's Fort, Centre county, and was a son of James and Hannah Miller nee McCloskey. Our subject came to Indiana county, in 1851, and in 1855, was married to Adaline Tucker, daughter of William Tucker. Their children are: William T., m. to Margaret E. Elgin; James C.; George W.; and Edward J. Abraham Pierce made the first improvement on the Miller farm. Johnston Miller located upon it in 1862.

ROBERT MCLAIN was born in 1828, on the John McLain farm, West Wheatfield township, and was a son of William and Jane McLain nee Mack. The former came from Ireland when a young man. He died, over seventy years of age. His wife was a native of the county, and died, about seventy years of age. Their children were: Robert, m. to Jane Brandon; Samuel, m. to Mary Dickey; John; Margaret Jane, m. to John Mack; Daniel W., m. to Emma McLain; William, d; and Nancy, d. Robert served in company L, 6th Pennsylvania heavy artillery about ten months. Our subject's children were: John Elmer, Araminta, Thomas B., and Margaret J. He located on his present farm in 1869.

DAVID ADAM was born in Altamheiman, Grand Duchy of Baden, in 1827, and was a son of David and Magdalena Adam who came to New York city in 1833. The former was a tailor by trade, and while seeking for work was forced to suffer many privations. He labored also in Philadelphia, and other cities and towns. While working in Williamsburg, Blair county, he studied theology with Rev. William Eister, a Lutheran minister, and after a thorough course of study, was admitted to the ministry. In 1842, he came to North Mahoning township as the pastor of the "Round Top" Lutheran congregation, and after a year's location, removed to Mechanicsburg, where he preached three years. At this point he read medicine with Dr. Falk, and later studied the poofession in Pittsburgh, graduating regularly as a physician. He practiced in Apollo, Armstrong county; Perrysville, Westmoreland county; Adamsburg, same county; Cincinnati, Ohio, where he also was a pastor of a congregation; and Milan, Ripley county, in the same state, where he served both as physician and minister. He died in 1865, at the age of sixty; his wife in 1878, over seventy years old. Our subject was married in 1850 to Lucinda Clowes, daughter of John Clowes, of Washington township. Their children were: Emanuel, d.; Clarinda, m. to Elisha Green; Elizabeth, d.; Sarah, d.; and John, d. From 1850, he worked at the tailor trade in Plumville, being the third tailor in the village. His predecessors were, first George Kern, and second, James Miller. He located on his present farm in 1873.

William Wilson was a native of New Jersey, and a son of Joseph and Elizabeth Wilson nee Shaw, who came to Indiana county in 1814, and settled on the Palmer (now Jacob Peterman) farm, Washington township. They afterwards removed to Canoe (now Banks) township, where they died, the former in 1859, seventy-four years old, the latter in 1842. Their children were: Jane, d., m. to Job Pierce, d.; Eliza, d., m. to James Thompson, d.; William, d. in 1865, fifty-five years old, m. to Jane McKee, b. in 1819; and Phebe, m. to William McKee, d. William Wilson's children were: Jane, d.; William McKee, m. to Margaret McCasland; Joseph M., m. to Rebecca Neal; John C., m. to Eliza Mikesell; Mary Ann, d.; Harry M., and Mary Dixon. William M. and Joseph M. were in company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers about six months. The children of William M., a son of our subject, were: William J. and Sarah Jane. The children of Joseph M., a son of our subject, were: Gertie J., Stella E., Zelda M. and Milda A. (twins), and Joseph H.

Robert H. Stuchel was born in 1826, on the James Little farm, Washington township, and was a son of John and Rebecca Stuchel nee Mahan. The former was a son of Christopher Stuchel (see Stuchal, or Stuchell, &c., notes, East Mahoning and White township). John Stuchel's children were: John, m. to Louisa Eylor, d.; Eliza, d., m. to W. H. Neal; Christopher, d., m. to Nancy Mahon; R. H., m. in 1853 to Hannah D Thompson; William, m. to Lucinda Potts; Jesse, d., m. to Elizabeth Rankin; Joseph, m. to Susan B. Look; and David, m. to Margaret Marshall. John, Christopher and William were soldiers in the war of 1861, the former dying in the service. Rebert H.'s children were: J. T., Eliza J., Rebecca Ann, Hannah Charlotte, R. J., Clara Josephine, and Effie Inez. Our subject has resided on present farm since 1858. The first improvement was made by his father who resided on the adjoining property.

Samuel Paul was born in Bedford county in 1805, and was a son of Abraham and Elizabeth Paul nee Fluke. He was married in 1833 to Susannah Eylor, who died in 1874, over sixty-four years old. He located on his present farm in 1865. The tract was patented to John Broadhead.

William Rowland was born in 1801, in Conemaugh township, Cambria county, and was a son of Griffith and Jane Rowland nee Jones, a daughter of William Jones. Griffith Rowland and William Jones, with their families, came to America in 1795 and to Cambria county in 1800. The former was a son of William and Elizabeth Rowland nee Ellis. Griffith Rowland's children were: William, m. to Clarissa Rundell, b. in 1809; Maria, d., m. first to John Crumb, d., and second to Joseph Craig, d.; Isaac, m. to Elizabeth Keller, d.; Jacob, d.; Griffith J., d. in 1871, sixty-one years old, m. first to Mary Mikesell, d., and second to Margaret Jordan, b. in 1811; John, d., m. to Jane Conrad; and Eliza, m. to Enoch Reese. Our subject settled on his present farm in 1838. He made the first improvement on this place. His children were: Elias, m. to Isabella Simpson; William S., m. to Mary J. Lukehart; John G., d., m. to Tabitha Milliron, d.; Isaac, m. first to Susan Neville, d., and second to Mary French; Jacob, m. to Romina Curry; Emma Jane, d.; Annie M. m. to Isaac Wisinger; Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Mitchell, d.; Mary E., m. to John Davis; Mahala, d.; M. L., m. to Nannie Hull; Amanda, m. to Thomas Jones; and Rebecca, m. to Coleman Miller. Elias was a soldier in the late war. William S. was a member of company E, 7th Pennsylvania cavalry for eleven months. John G. served two years and five months in company E, 148th Pennsylvania volunteers, and died in Salisbury prison after six months' incarceration. Isaac was in the 7 Miss nsylvania volunteers and the 7th cavalry. Jacob was m. to Pay E, 148th Pennsylvania volunteers and a western m. to M The children of William S., a son of our subject, Robert M y P., John D, Ira C., Homer, d., Elvena B., and Allura Estella, d. The children of Griffith J., a son of Griffith Rowland, were: Benjamin, d.; Clark, d., m. to Mary J. Oharra; Sarah Jane, d., m. to Daniel Fraley; Mary A., m. to William F. Kline; Thomas, m. to Hannah J. Lewis, daughter of David Lewis; James, d., m. to Elizabeth Bowser, d.; Catharine E., d.; and Charlotte, d. Benjamin was a member of company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, and was killed at Spottsylvania Court House. He was a prisoner for some time. Clark was in the war of 1861. Thomas' (a son of Griffith J.) children are: Harry E., and Charles G. Thompson Hayes made the first improvement on the Thomas Rowland farm.

Christopher McEwen, M. D., was born in the site of Plumville, in 1830, and was a son of John and Margaret McEwen nee Cochran. John McEwen's first wife was Hannah D. Canfield. He was a son of Christopher and Elizabeth McEwen nee Watson. Christopher McEwen's first wife was a Miss Shaw. He and his family located on the site of Plumville, in 1816—his wife and his children were natives of Ireland, who had migrated to New Jersey. His children were: John, d., (see wives aforenamed); and Jane, m. to David Winecoop. John McEwen's children were: James, m. to Olive Wright; Hannah, d., m. to Samuel McCreery, d.; William, M. D., m. to Elizabeth McCune; Joseph, m. to Mary Gilmore; Elizabeth E., m. first to John Kessler, and second to John Sutton; Jane, m. to John Stuchell; Nancy, d., m. to Joseph Golden; Margaret, m. to Rev. Nelson Davis, M. E.; John, d.; and Emma, d. James was a soldier in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: Charles, M. D., graduate of Jefferson Medical College in 1879; and John, d. Our subject was educated at Glade Run Academy, and read medicine with his brother William. He graduated at Jefferson Medical College, in 1854, and located in Plumville in 1856.

David Brewer was born in 1828, on the John Smelser farm, Derry township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of John and Jane Brewer nee Varner. The former was a son of John Brewer, a native of England, and an early settler of Derry township. John, jr., was born near Youngstown, Derry township. He died in 1872, nearly twenty-nine years old. Jane, his wife, died in 1876, at the age of seventy-nine. Their children were: John, d., and Mary, twins; Abram, m. to Elizabeth Kuhns; Jacob; Christopher, m. to Mary Johnston; James, m. to Sarah Varner; David, m. to Margaret Aukerman; Eliza, m. to Daniel Trout; and Emily. Our subject's children were; Agnes J., m. to Joseph Hollowell; Mary; Martha, d.; Ebert; and Emily. He located on present farm in 1866, and for twenty-nine years has been a blacksmith.

Capt. John Stuchell was born in 1834, on the farm now occupied by David Adam, South Mahoning township, and was a son of Christopher and Jane Stuchell nee Mahan. He was married in 1860, to Jane McEwen, daughter of John McEwen. His children were: Mary E.; Margaret E.; Jennie O.; Orienna; Leah D. Harry W.; Mabel and Maud, twins. He was captain of company G, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers from November 15th, 1861, to April 16th 1863, being discharged for disability. He personally recruited this company, and was elected its captain by the members.

Thompson Hayes was born in 1805 in Franklin county, and was a son of James and Mary Martha Hayes nee Hockenberry. The family located on the farm now occupied by Oliver Delancy, in this township in 1813. James Hayes died in 1834; his wife in 1855. Their children were: Thompson, m. to Marabay Pierce; John, m. to Jane Macauley; Margaret, m. to David Ritchie; Stansberry, m. to Nancy Wells; James, d., m. to Mary A. Davis; Mary, d.; Martha, d.; Ellen, d., m. to William Whitty; and William, d. Our subject's children were: Harrison, m. to Elizabeth Colkitt; Lucinda, m. to J. C. Pierce, d. in the army; Lydia, m. to John McGaughey; Reuben, d., m. to Elsie Clows; Melinda, m. to David McCurdy; Adaline, m. to David Johnston; Louisa, m. first to Martin Hilberry, d., and second to George Stear. Harrison was a soldier in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers. Our subject has resided in Plumville since 1849. He was licensed as a Baptist minister in 1876. The children of James Hayes, a brother of our subject, were: Anna E., m. to Charles Searles; Pearl Rounda, d.; R. H., m. to Mattie J. Waddell; and L. E. R. H.'s children were: Marlin Preston, d.; and Georgietta.

T. R. Luckart was born in Blair county in 1809. (For parentage, &c., see sketch of Luckhart, or Luckarts, West Mahoning township.) The family migrated to the county in 1825. His first wife was Rebecca Stear, and the second Mrs. Mary Ann Marshall nee Wadding. His children were: George W., m. to Susannah Fleck; Maria S., m. to Richard D. McGaughey; David F., d. in the army, a member of company E, 148th Pennsylvania volunteers; Thomas R., jr., m. in 1865 to Margaret Eamich; Louisa, m. to Henry Moser; John S., m. to Rebecca Keil; Nelson L., d.; Lizzie C., m. to J. P. Lewis; Conrad, m. to Martha Little; Rebecca Jane, m. to Jacob Fyock; and William Clinton. John S. and Thomas R., jr., were soldiers in the late war, the former for four and the latter for three years. T. R., jr., was severely wounded. Our subject has served as justice of the peace and postmaster in Plumville for many years. The children of T. R. Luckart, jr., were: Lewis Elmer, Anna Jane, Cora Myrtle, and Thomas Albert.

ALBERT WEAMER was born in Plumville in 1849, and was a son of Joseph and Eliza Weamer nee Stear, whose children were Albert and Wesley, d. Joseph was the son of John, who was the son of Andrew Weamer, who located in 1803, on the land now owned by Dr. C. McEwen.

GEORGE TUCKER was born on the farm now occupied by Johnston Miller, South Mahoning township, in 1830, and was a son of William and Phebe Tucker nee Canfield. The former was a native of New Jersey, and settled on above tract in 1816 He died in 1871, at the age of eighty-seven; the latter, in 1868, at the age of seventy-five. Their children were: Harriet, m. to George Johnson, d.; William, d., m. to Zernah Dunham, d.; Mary Amanda, m. to Alexander Jordan, d.; Matilda, m. first to David Ansley, d., and second to James Kerr; Lucinda, m. to James Spencer; Charles, d., m. to Margaret Green; Ashbel, m. to Mary J. Tubbs; Adaline, m. to Johnston Miller; and George, m. to Martha Bothel. George's children were: James, d.; William, d.; Phebe, Mary, Charles, Ada, d.; Harriet, and David L. The warrant of the George Tucker farm was issued January 26, 1774, to Joseph Fawcet. The patent was granted September 5, 1774, to Samuel Pleasants. The consideration was fifteen pounds and one shilling and one penny. The Tucker farm cost $10,000, and the remainder of the tract is valued at $13,000.

DENNIS ANDREWS was born in Lovell, Oxford county, Maine, in 1844, and was a son of Moses and Susan Andrews nee Charles. He served in company I, 62d Pennsylvania volunteers about one year, and lost his left leg at the Wilderness, May 6, 1864. He studied dentistry with Dr. Burr, of New Derry, Westmoreland county, and located in Plumville in 1866. He was married in 1871, to Martha Doud, daughter of Samuel Doud. His only child is Jennie Josephine.

WILLIAM CRAWFORD was born in Indiana in 1845, and was a son of Robert and Elizabeth Crawford nee Morrison. The former was a native of Ireland, and came to Indiana in 1824. He died in Indiana in 1879, about seventy years old. His wife was a native of Indiana county, and is still living. Our subject was married in 1873 to Ann McCannon, of Butler county. His children were: Laura M., Mary C., and Bessie J. He located in Plumville in 1875.

G. T. JONES was born in South Mahoning township in 1851. He was married in 1868 to Mary E. Hopkins. Their children were: John E., Lewis, Charles, Harry, and Benjamin C. Our subject was engaged in mining and well digging. Since 1873, he has been managing a planing mill and a lumber trade.

ISRAEL ASHBAUGH was born in Armstrong county in 1822, and was a son of John and Mary Ashbaugh nee Learn. The former was a son of Adam Ashbaugh, an early settler of Westmoreland, as well as Armstrong county, and a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a native of Germany. Our subject was captain of the "Maysville Guards" for seven years. His father died in 1870, at the age of eighty-three; and his mother in 1879, at the age of eighty-four. Israel came to the county in 1864, and since has managed mills at the "Ridge," Mechanicsburg, and Plumville, locating in the latter in 1875. He has been twice married: first to Susan Townsend, d., and second to Margaret Townsend. His children were; James, m. to Elizabeth McClelland; Samuel, m. to Catharine Weister; Mary, Alfred, Milton, Tryphena, Matilda, William T., Nora, and Norman.

JAMES A. LOWRY was born in Pine township in 1852, and was a son of Adam and Jane Lowry nee Loughrey. The former died in 1863, at the age of forty-seven. He was the quartermaster of the 78th Pennsylvania volunteers, and had served one and a half years. His children were: Sarah, m. to Geo. Ingersoll; Martin, attorney, Brown county, Illinois; Harry; James A., m. to Mina McHenry; Mary, m. to a Mr. Woolsey; John R., Jennie, and Adam. Marlin was quartermaster's sergeant 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and three months. Our subject's children were: Lena W., Edith W., and Mattie T. James A. learned the tinning trade with James Turner, of Indiana, and located in Plumville in 1879.

RALPH SHIELDS was born on the farm now occupied by Bryan McSwaney, Washington township, in 1833, and was a son of James and Margaret Shields nee Getty. The former died in 1866, at the age of seventy-four, and the latter in 1868, at the age of seventy-three. (See Marshall Shields' sketch, Jacksonville). Their children were: Richard, m. to Nancy A. Diven; John, m. first to Susannah Lucas, d., and second to Isabella Wilson; James, m. to Mary A. Miller; Isabella, m. to William Stewart, d.; William, m. to Elizabeth Johnston; Joseph, M. D., m. to Margaret Lewis; Elizabeth, d.; Ralph, m. first to Mary E. Lydick, d., and second to Sarah E. Streams; Mary Jane, m. to Enoch Lewis; and Harrison H., m. to Mary Sutton. James, William and Harrison H. were soldiers in the war of 1861. Ralph's children were: William, Anna Mary, and Elder O. Our subject has worked at the blacksmith trade in Plumville since 1848.

WILLIAM BOND, of company F, 9th regiment Pennsylvania reserve corps, enlisted under Captain Dick, at Camp Wright, near Pittsburgh, on the 13th day of July, 1861. The first engagement was at Dranesville, on the 20th of December, 1861. The second important battle was that of Mechanicsville, on the 26th of June. On the first day we were kept back for a reserve. "In the evening we were moved to the extreme left of the line, and were soon under a very heavy fire. The line was only too deep, and was charged against, time after time, yet remained unbroken. In the next morning we were ordered into the rifle pits, to relieve the 12th regiment, and went in two hours before daylight under a heavy fire. We remained in that position till we had fired one hundred rounds of ammunition. We were also engaged with Porter's corps at Gaines' Hill and were also at the battle of New Market Cross Roads, where I received a wound in my right leg. I was left on the battle-field in the care of Union surgeons, and the subsequent day found me in care of the Confederate surgeons. As we were lying on the battle-field, Stonewall Jackson with his corps passed along. He left fourteen men to guard us and told them not to ask these wounded men what they came out to fight for; that they had fought like martyrs and he wanted them used like prisoners of war. We were next in the battles of Gettysburg and Hatcher's Run. In May, 1864, we were ordered to report at Pittsburgh, where we received our discharge."

DAVID F. STITELER, son of Peter and Elizabeth Stiteler nee Fleck, was born in Huntingdon county, in 1824. He married Annie, daughter of David Dougherty, in 1849. Their children's names are as follows: Samuel McKee, m. to Minerva Work; Margaret, m. to J. Kirtz Lowe; Annie M., m. to Clark McGeaughey; William, m. to Annie Lewis; Taylor, John, Wilmina, George B., Henry, Curtis, and Lillie. He is actively engaged in farming and lumbering, and has missed running lumber but one year in the last twenty-seven. He owns a saw mill that was built first in 1840 by William Travis, and rebuilt by himself in 1861.

JACOB A. SHAFFER was born on the Shaffer homestead, in North Mahoning township, in 1838, and was a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Shaffer nee Fetterhoff. (See sketch of Michael Shaffer, West Mahoning, and Jacob, of North Mahoning.) Our subject's wife was Minerva Frampton. His children were: Sarah E., Margaret N., Sheridan A., Martha M., Thomas D., Samuel B, Minerva J., Mollie B., and Theda R.

WILLIAM E. SIMPSON was born in 1851, and was a son of Jas. and Jane Simpson nee Martin. The latter was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Martin nee Elder. The grandfather and great-grandfather of Mr. Simpson, located in the county in 1815 or 1816. He graduated from Mount Union Commercial College in 1874. January 1st, 1878, he commenced in the general mercantile business at his present location, in East Mahoning township. He is also the postmaster of the office known as Hamill. He was married on the 2d of December, 1879, to Miss Williams, daughter of James J. and Elizabeth Williams, East Mahoning township. His wife died of consumption on the 3d of January, 1880.

WILLIAM G. STEWART was born in 1816, in Armstrong township, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Stewart. [illegible] and sketch of A. M. Stewart of Indiana, for notes on the Steere he John was a hunter when a young man, and afterwards c with the tailor trade. He removed nine miles north of this, grad-seat, and in 1827, commenced merchandising at the "Cross Roads," which is now included within the farm of T. St.Clair Thompson. In 1831, our subject was sent to Georgeville, to clerk in the store which his father had opened in that village. That year will be remembered for the "laying out" of the village. William G. was a carpenter by trade, but generally engaged in farming. For several years he conducted a store near and in Georgeville. He also taught thirty terms of school in the Mahoning, one in Rayne, one in White, and one in Zanesville, Ohio. He served one term as county commissioner and one as county auditor. Since 1848, with the exception of four years, he has resided in East Mahoning township, about one mile north of Marion. This place was first settled by an unknown person. The next improvement was made by George Stump. For the children of our subject and the war record of his sons, see sketch of John A. Stewart, East Mahoning township.

William Van Horn was born on what is now the Robert Leggett farm, West Mahoning township, March 3d, 1802, and was the son of Isaiah and Dorcas Van Horn nee Logan. The former was a Revolutionary soldier. His parents were Christian and Jane Van Horn nee Van Zandt, both natives of Holland. Christian settled in Berks county. He owned land in New York and leased the same for five generations, which terminated about eighteen years ago. In 1796 or '97, Isaiah and family came to what is now West Wheatfield township, and in 1804, he removed to the farm now owned by John Hamilton, in East Mahoning township, about one mile east of Georgeville. It is said that he planted on this farm, the orchard so well-known for its age and productiveness. His children were: Henry, b. in 1788, d. in his ninetieth year, m. to Elizabeth Thompson, d.; Jane, b. in 1792, d., m. to John McElhoes, d.; Alexander, b. in 1789, d. in his eighty-fifth year, m. to Mary Wharry; Joshua, born in 1794, d. in his eighty-eight year, m. to Fanny Briggs, d.; John, b. in Cumberland county in 1796, m. to Thersey Hastings, d.; Isaiah, d.; Willliam, m. to Rachel Pounds, a daughter of George and Margaret Pounds nee Redding; Nancy, b. in 1804, m. to Hugh Hamilton, d.; Isaiah, m. to Mary Hopkins; Isaac, d.; and George Logan, m. to Mary Brady. Alexander was in the war of 1812. William's children were: Martha, m. to Aaron Hopkins; William, m. to Maria Patterson; Margaret, m. to David Steer; Dorcas, d., m. to George Condrum; Nancy, m. to Jacob Connor; Isaiah, d.; Milton, d.; Catherine, m. to Jacob Coon; Logan, m. to Catherine Travis; Sarah, d.; Lucinda, m. to George Neil, d.; and Samuel. Logan was a soldier in the war of 1861 for three years. He was a prisoner at Libby for six weeks. Our subject and wife are Cumberland Presbyterians; his parents and grandparents were Presbyterians. The children of Joshua, a son of Isaiah Van Horn, were: Benjamin, d., m. to Phebe Neff; Christian, m. to Rachel Pearce; Mary, d., m. to Robert Stewart; Tabitha, m. to Isaac Keck; Sarah, m. to Jacob Sink; Henry, m. ——; and Samuel, m. to Rachel Steel. Samuel served in 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, nearly one year. Benjamin's (a son of Joshua Van Horn) children were: John M., m. to Jennie Campbell; James H., m. to Belle Fry; A. M., m. to Rosa L. Kerns; and Sarah, m. to Turner Luckart. John M. was in the war of 1861. The children of John, a son of Isaiah Van Horn, the pioneer, were: John H., m. to Christina Wright; Wm. A., m. to Mary Shaffnic; and James D., d., m. to Sarah Jane Taylor.

James McHenry was born on the farm now occupied by Joseph Work, in East Mahoning township, on the 27th of June, 1805, and was the son of James and Elizabeth McHenry nee Stutchell, who were married in what is now Indiana county. The former's father first settled in the latter part of the last century, on what is now the Hamilton farm, about three miles north of Indiana. The parents of James were Isaac and Jane McHenry nee Smith. The former was a native of Scotland, one of the early settlers of what is now White township, and subsequently removed to what is now East Mahoning, becoming one of the earliest pioneers of that township. Our subject's father, grandfather, grandmother and uncle Samuel, all died in one week in the fall of 1812. The first was only thirty-three years of age; the grandparents were eighty years of age, and his uncle about three years the senior of his father (our subject's father.) Our subject's mother died in 1851, nearly seventy-six years of age. The grandfather's children were: John, m. to a Miss McCord; William, m. to Sidney Gordon; Isaac, d.; Mary, m. to Patrick Lydick; James, m. to Elizabeth Stutchell; Samuel, m. to Mary McCall; Joseph, m. to Elizabeth Boyd; Jane, m. to Robert Morrison; Sarah; and Hannah, m. to Daniel Morrison; all of whom are dead. William was in the Indian war under General Wayne. Isaac was in the same war, and died during the campaign. James was major in the militia two terms under Governors Snyder and McKean. James McHenry's children were: Catharine, m. to Joseph Crossman, d.; Isaac, b. in 1797, m. to Catharine McClelland; John, b. in 1801, m. to Martha Jordan, d.; James, m. to Ann Neal; Mary, d., m. to Asa Crossman; Elizabeth, m. to George Timblin, d.; Jane, d., m. to William Postlewait, d. James and Ann McHenry's children were: Elizabeth, m. to Martin Reits; William, m. first to Lucetta Light, d., and second to Rachel Lantz; Margaret, m. to Austin Welchans; Benjamin, m. to Catharine Beck; Mary, m. first to George Goheen, d., and second to Rev. Uriah Conly, a United Brethren minister; Catharine, d., Ellen, d.; Nancy, d.; Sarah, m. to John C. Stear; Dallas, d.; and Rebecca. Isaac and Catharine McHenry's children were: James W., m. to Mary C. Horton; William P., m. to Julia A. Ruth; George W., m. first to Rachel M. Swisher, d., and second to Ann Rebecca Keck; and Elizabeth J., d. James W.'s children were: Mary C., m. to Winfield S. Crossman; Minerva J., m. to G. L. Shaffer; Winfield S., d.; Diantha E., m. to Rev. J. I. Means, Cumberland Presbyterian minister; George, d.; Martha A.; I. J. H., and Isalina, d., twins. George W.'s children were: Alfred J., Rachel M., d., U. S. G., Laotta, Ralph F., Lelia A., d., and Bessie S.

Mrs. Susan McDonald was born in the Conococheague valley in 1793, and was the daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Lantz nee Hartel, daughter of Frederick Hartel. The former was born in the valley, where his father, who was a German by birth, had settled at an early date in the history of the state. About 1799, or 1800, Michael located on Ross' run, near the present site of Georgeville, and in a few years started a tan yard, which he sold to one of the Brady's, and then came to the vicinity of what is now Smicksburg. He afteward resided on what is now the Samuel Richey farm, and other places, making the first improvement on several places. He died in 1854, about ninety-three years of age; his wife died in 1846, about eighty-five years of age; his second wife, Susan Howard, died in 1878, about seventy years of age. The children were: Susan, m. first when fifteen years of age to John Hill, a soldier in the war of 1812, killed at the battle of the Chippewa, and second in 1817, to David McDonald, who died March 11, 1841, about forty-eight years of age; Elizabeth, d., m. to William Gaghagan, d.; Jacob, m. to Susan Newcom, d.; Julia Ann, m. to Samuel Marshall; Margaret, m. to William Niel, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Kennedy, d.; George, d.; Frederick, m. first in 1835 to Rachel Kennedy, who died in 1873, fifty-six years of age; and second in 1874, to Elizabeth Allen; Martin, m. to Nancy Coon; Catharine, m. to Harrison Coon; Nancy, m. to George Steer, d.; Sarah, m. to Elias Weaver; and Mary, m. to Isaac Beck, d. in 1868, fifty-four years of age; he was a son of Daniel Beck, the old powder maker on Crooked creek. Our subject's children, by her first husband, were: Peter, m. to Margaret Blunt; by her second husband, the children were: Elizabeth, d., m. to Jane Ewing; John, m. to Mary Fiscus; Sarah, m. to Seneca Barnett; David, m. to Lavinia Welchance; Julia Ann, d., m. to Peter Davis, d.; Ruth Ann, m. to William Gall; Susan, m. to Franklin Sowers; Robert, d.; Samuel, m. to Mary Timblin; Nancy, d., m. to Peter Davis; and Adaline, d. Peter was in the 110th Pennsylvania volunteers, and was killed at the battle of Deep Bottom. John was in the 115th Pennsylvania volunteers. He was noted as among the missing, nothing being heard at that or any subsequent time, as to his fate. David McDonald's children are: John A., d.; Rachel H., d.; James W., d., and M. A., m. to Harriet Roush. M. A.'s children are Lavinia Catharine and Elizabeth, d., twins. Four generations are living on the David McDonald residence.

Frederick Lantz's children are: Michael Hartel, m. first to Margaret Secrist, d., and second to Eliza M. Crissman; James Martin; Elizabeth Ann, d., m. to Ogg Niel; Rachel H., m. to William McHenry; Frederick, d.; Margaret J., m. to R. F. Neville; Martha M., m. to John Gourley; Lavinia, m. to George Keller; John C., d.; Nancy, m. to Lewis Oberlin; Susan L., m. to Joseph Keller; and Laura N.

Isaac Beck's children were: William N., m. to Ann Elizabeth Roush, daughter of Henry Roush; Susannah W., m. to Ogg Niel; Sarah L., m. to James Timblin; John L., m. to Susan Roush; Margaret, m. to Jacob Smith; Mary Catharine, d.; Jas. McHenry, d.; Rachel H., d.; and Caroline. William N.'s children are: Mary E.; Harriet E., d.; Henry C., d.; Elmira Agnes, d.; Aaron Lee, Margaret Jane, Jacob Smith, and Isaac William John L.'s children are: Eliza Catharine, Elias Weaver, James Timblin, Anna M., Augustus N., and Elizabeth Myrtle.

LYSANDER BARRETT was born in Hampden county, Mass., in 1800, and was the son of Daniel and Rebecca Barrett nee Bosworth. The father of the former was Moses Barrett, who was born in 1719, in London, England, educated at Oxford University for the ministry, came to America, and was ordained as a missionary of the Puritan stamp. He was married to Mary Dow, of the Dow family, from whence sprang Lorenzo Hendrick and Daniel, D. D., all ministers and noted men. He was associated with Daniel Brainerd, in christianizing the Indians, and for that purpose made a trip to London, to solicit funds from the government. There he was attacked with the small pox, and died about 1760, leaving a wife and four children. His son Daniel, having the use of his father's library, applied himself to the study of mathematics, and the art of surveying. He made his own instruments, and was for many years (previous to 1815, when he removed to western Virginia) the principal surveyor of Hampshire county. He and his brother Moses were both in the Revolutionary war, and served in the battle of White Plains where the bones of Moses now rest. He was married in 1782, to Rebecca Bosworth, from whom sprung seven sons and six daughters, all of whom lived to maturity. Three of the daughters died in middle life leaving families. Rebecca died aged eighty-six; Moses died aged seventy-six; Samuel, fifty-three; Joanna, eighty-seven; and Benjamin, seventy-four; Rev. Elisha D., aged ninety; Daniel, eighty-five; M. L., seventy-four, and Amarilla, seventy-one, beside our subject, survive. Daniel and Lysander reside in the Loup, (known as Barrett's Loup.) The latter was married in 1830, to Elizabeth Ann Bush, of Hampden county, Mass., who died in 1860, fifty-four years of age. Their children were: Edward E., m. to Ann Tomlinson; Harriet E., m. to Marshall Barrett; Cyrus E., m. to Mary J. Stacy; Spencer P., m. to Ann Elkin; John Quincy Adams, d.; Sarah, J., d.; and Lucy E.; J. Q. A., served six months during the late war, in a West Virginia regiment, and subsequently in company A, 155th Pennsylvania volunteer Zouaves; he was mortally wounded at the Wilderness. Spencer P., served in company A, 155th Pennsylvania volunteer Zouaves, from October, 1862, till the end of the war. Our subject located in the Loup in 1842. While living in Upshur county, West Virginia, he introduced the famous "seedless apple" into all parts of the United States. He has two Bibles, each of which bears the date 1743. One was printed in Oxford, England, and the other in Edinburgh, Scotland.

DANIEL BARRETT, (a brother of Lysander), was married first to Margaret Wheeler, d., and second to Sarah Hunter. His children were: Squire, d., m. to Mary Lanham; Evaline; Lucinda, m. to Henry Stimpson; Hiram, m. to Adaline Crow; Addison, m. to Nellie Farman; and Cynthia, m. to Charles Clark. Daniel, located in the township, in 1843. The children of Benjaman Barrett, (a brother of Lysander), were: Samuel E., m. to Francis Lewis; Elizabeth, m. to Nicholas Dean; Rebecca, m. to Washington Hinkle; and D. D., m. 1st to Sarah J. Hanegan, and 2d to Eliza J. Lantz. Samuel E. was an engineer on an ocean steamship in the Collins Line. He was connected with the ill-fated Arctic, but fortunately remained at home at the time of her disaster. He was in the Mexican war, serving on board the Ann McKimm, supply ship. He participated in the storming of Very Cruz. He served three years and four months as orderly sergeant of company L, 2d U. S. Regulars, in the war of 1861, and was wounded at Fort Stevens. He has an old English Grammar, R. Brown, author, printed in England, in 1736. Samuel E.'s children were: Samuel E., m. to Alice Lamerson; Mary J., m. to George W. Swartzlander; Francis E.; John Quincy, d.; Ulysses, d.; Henry M., and Alice, twins; and Annie Almira. D. D.'s children were: Rebecca A., m. to Thomas Roundy; Benjamin A.; James E.; D. D., d.; John; Lauretta; Charles; Catharine Neil.

GAWIN DRUMMOND was born in Derry township, in Westmoreland county, in 1804, and was the son of John and Mary Drummond, nee Bolman. The former's father was in the Revolutionary war, enlisting from New Jersey. He was wounded and died in that state from the effects of his injuries. John Drummond came with his mother to Westmoreland county in 1790. His children were: William, m. to Nancy Kirkpatrick; Joseph, d., m.; Eleanor, d., m. to John McCracken; Mary, d., m. to Joseph Pounds; John, m. to Elizabeth Arter, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Archibald Cunningham; Gawin, m. to John Haney, d.; and Nancy. Of William's children, Amos was in the six months' service during the late war. Gawin's children were: Mary, m. to Andrew Ruffner; John and Susan, d., twins, the former m. Ellen Pounds, and the latter, Samuel Coleman; Joseph, m. to Mary Ann Smith; Sarah, m. to William Griggs; Gawin, m. to Lorindo Tozier; Columbus, d.; Ellen, m. first to Joseph Drummond, and second to Alfred Lovelace; Wesley, m. to Jane Hazlett; Jane, m. to Nelson T. Hicks; and Andronicus, m. to Lizzie Byers, d. John, Joseph, Gawin, Wesley and Andronicus were in the war of 1861. In a recess of a rock on the Gawin Drummond farm, was found a large quantity of darts, flint flakes, &c., from which circumstance the early settlers deemed it a store-house of ammunition and implements of war for the Senecas who were wont to occupy that portion of the county.

CHARLES C. HOOVER was born near Punxsutawney, Jefferson county, October 23d, 1827, and was the son of John and Francis Hoover nee Coleman. The former died in 1864, about sixty-two years of age. His father, Peter Hoover, was born in Germany, and settled at an early date in the century, on the Little Mahoning, near Ross' run. He, as well as his descendants, was a Methodist, and among the pioneers of that faith in western Pennsylvania. The latter's children were: Jacob, m. to Nancy Young; Elizabeth, m. to Peter Kratzer; Frederick, m. to Susan Weston; John, m. to Francis Coleman; Peter, m. to Hannah Pearce; Mary. m. to Andrew Compton; George, m. to Matilda Hall; and Nancy, m. to Benajah Warren. All of the above named are deceased. John's children were: Elizabeth, m. to William McMillen, d.; Elijah, m. to Catharine Service, d.; Mary, m. first to Hiram Lowdon, and second to John Colkitt, d.; Susan, m. to David Simpson; Charles C., m. first to Caroline D. Dodson, d., and second to Nancy C. Lantz; Peter, d.; John, d., m. first to Mrs. Charlotte Coleman, d., and second to Nancy Sink; Elisha, m. to Mary J. Compton; Martha, m. to Henry Barnhart; and Henry, m. to Melissa McCloskey. John was in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. Charles C.'s children were: George R., m. to Maggie Adams; William G., m. to Catharine Rotroff; James H., Charles Wesley, John Quincy, Luella, Henrietta E., Annice A., Robert C., d.; Maggie V., d.; Ira L., and Esta. John Hoover, the father of our subject, was a great hunter, and in a single winter he has killed a hundred deer near the site of Punxsutawney. He was accustomed to hunt in the winters and to make tar in the summers. Our subject has made 550 gallons of tar in a single season. He prepares valuable medicines from the tar, which seem to be very valuable for the purposes intended. In a quiet way he has done a large business.

MRS. SARAH GRIFFITH was born in Delaware county, N. J., in 1831, and was the daughter of John and Mary Kimple nee Sigler. The latter was a daughter of Philip Sigler, a soldier in the Revolutionary war. The family came to Westmoreland county in 1836, and resided in the Ligonier valley for eight years. They then removed to what is now White township, and lived there and in Rayne township for eleven years. They then settled on the farm now occupied by Peter Fleck. The paternal grandfather was Jacob Kimple, who was of German descent. Philip Kimple died in 1875, seventy-three years of age; his wife is still living, over seventy-five years old. The children were: Philip, thrice married; Maria, d., m. to Richard Repine; Amanda, m. to Daniel Kuser; Margaret, m. to Holloway Butler; George, d., m. to Jane Baird; Elizabeth, m. to Eli Weagly; Sarah, m. to David Griffith, d. in 1878, fifty-seven years old; John, d.; Jacob, m. to Jane McGregor; William, m. to Maria Crissman; Peter; Hannah, m. first to James Pounds, d., second to Alexander Glenn, d., and third to George W. Marshall; Martha, m. James Hall; Jane, d.; Nancy, d.; Lydia, d.; Ann, m. first Abraham Davis, d., and second Clempson Aul; Rebecca, m. to Peter Fleck. Jacob and William were in the war of 1861. The former was wounded and a prisoner; the latter was captain of a company and was also wounded. Mrs. Griffith's children were: Evan W., m. to Flora Spencer; John K., m. to Maggie M. Schall; George L., d.; Mary, m. to Scott Fitzgerald; Sarah L., m. to James Hazlett; George S., Margaret A., Amanda E., Anna Maria, Philip S., and Jennie V. Mrs. Hannah Marshall's children were: Marvie Evaline, William Kimple, Katurah Ann, Maranda H. and Mary Lavinia Pounds, and Susey V. M. Glenn, and Lily M. Marshall, d. Our subject is a Baptist.

MRS. ELIZABETH FLECK was born in Sinking Valley, Blair county, March 20th, 1808, and was the daughter of George and Rachel Steer (or Stear), nee Crissman. The former's second wife was Catharine Fisher. The parents of George Steer were Nicholas and Catharine Steer nee King. George's children were: Elizabeth, m. May 10, 1827, to Thomas Luckhart; John, d., m. to Elizabeth Fleck, d.; Frederick, m. in 1836, to Mary Stiteler; George, m. first to Catharine Roush, d., and second to Catharine Black; these were by the first wife. By the second wife there were: David, m. to Margaret Van Horn; Jacob, m. to Mary Hyskell; Maria, d., m. to James Robinson, d.; Eliza, m. first to Joseph Weamer, d., and second to William Weamer, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Amelia Myers; Ephraim F., m. to Catharine Hyskell; Enoch C.; William, d.; Caroline, m. to Joseph McIntire; and Marion E., d., m. to Mary Hoffman, d. Mrs. Elizabeth Fleck's children were: Mary, d., m. to Hugh McKee; Aaron, d.; Rachel, m. to John F. Beck; Eliza, m. to Daniel Musselman; Rebecca, m. first to Jacob Hoover, d., and second to T. N. Sims; James, d., m. to Emeline Isit; Susannah Margaret, d.; Francis M., m. to Caroline Good; Rolin, d.; John M. Rarigh; David Blair, m. to Cannarissa Fulton; and Missouri, d., m. to Bingham Lydick. James was killed in the battle of the Wilderness. Francis M. was wounded at Petersburg. Rolin died in Danville, after being a prisoner seven months. (See record of soldiers for companies and regiments.) Frederick Steer's children were: Elizabeth Rachel, d.; Susan, m. to William Moser; David, m. to Susan Niel; Peter S., m. to Sarah Niel; Eliza Catharine, d., John C., m. to Sarah McHenry; William, m. to Huldah J. London; Joseph C., d.; George, d., and Maria, twins; Sarah Melissa, m. to James Brown; and Gilbert, d. Mr. Steer has a double coverlid made by his grandmother over one hundred years ago, in Hagerstown, Maryland. The children of David, a son of George Stear, were: Lena Ann, Caroline W., m. to John Dilts; Sarah Lucinda, d.; William Thomas, d.; Addie Rachel, d.; David Blanchard; Lillie May; Ambrose, and Enoch.

Jacob Steer (or Stear) was born in Sinking Valley, Blair county, on the 11th of October, 1810, and was the son of John and Susan Steer nee Tipperry. Nicholas Steer, the father of John, was a German by birth; his wife was Catharine King. John Steer was born in Maryland. In 1825, he located on the tract of land now occupied by Mrs. Mary Ann Steer; he died July 30, 1856, about seventy years of age; his wife died in 1829; his second wife was Margaret Long. John's children were: George, d., m. to Nancy Lantz; Mary, m. to Thomas Kerr; Elizabeth, d., m. to James Kerr; Jacob, m. in 1840 to Elizabeth Kerr; Catharine, d.; m. to Enoch Crissman, d.; Susan, m. first; to George Lewis, d., and second to John Stiteler; Samuel, d. John, d., m. to Mary Ann E. Roush; and Margaret, d., m. to John Kerr. Jacob's children were: John, m. to Mary J. Johnston; Lydia Ann, d., m. to Jacob Lewis; Gilbert, m. to Alice Stuchell; Margaret J., d.; Joseph, m. to Maria E. Seger; Zibiah, m. to George Adams; Sarah C., d., and Thomas Clarke, d. John was in the war of 1861, in the 78th Pennsylvania volunteers, for three years. Gilbert was in the war, in Capt. Spencer's company. John and Mary Ann E. Steer's children were: Margaret J., d.; Henry Young; Isabella, d.; David, d.; John, Luther, m. to Susan Brown; Samuel R., m. to Ann L. Mogel; Gilbert L., William L., m. to Nora Talman; Wesley D., d.; Albert C.; Anna I.; George A., and Mary Ellen. Henry Y. was in the war of 1861, in the nine months' service. John L. was in Captain Lewis' company, in the militia, in the late Pittsburgh riots. John L.' children were: Mary E., Chas. Henry, Harry W., and David Angus.

Mrs. Esther Beyer was born in Buffalo Valley, in what is now Union county, on the 3d of July, 1788, and was the daughter of John and Barbara Pontius nee Coderman. She was married in 1807, to John Beyer, a son of David Beyer, who died in 1836, in his fiftieth year. Their children were: William, d., m. to Mary Ramey; John, d., m. to Margaret R. Crum, d.; Elizabeth d., m. to George Fagley; Sarah, d., m. to Jacob Renner; Mary, d., m. to Jacob Hyskell; Susannah, d., m. to Jonathan Stauffer, d.; David, m. to Margaret L. Stewart; Eliza, m. to Samuel Smith; Samuel, m. first to Caroline Feltwell, d., and second to Lavinia Neigh; Lavinia, m., first to Samuel Utley, d., and second to Martin B. Travis, d.; Jacob, m. to Francis J. Stewart; and Henry, d.; Jacob was in a Colorado regiment in the late war, and served over four years. David's children were: Thomas S., m. to Adessa Good; Mary E., m. to John R. Barnard; John W., d.; Harriet V., d.; Wilber D., d.; and John P.; Thomas S., was in the war of 1861. Samuel Beyer's children were: John H., m. to Catharine F. Crissman; William F., M. D., a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, in the spring of 1879; Joseph M., a practical teacher, m. to Jennie E. Eckman; Henry A., d.; Sarah E., d.; Maria J.; Annie B.; and Caroline E. Our subject, in spite of her ninety-one years, appears as active and hearty as an ordinary woman of fifty. She takes an interest in the ordinary affairs of life, and as far as we could judge, her mental organization exhibited but little decrepitude. She is a member of the methodist church, and is of German descent through both both parents, who are also methodists. Her husband was of German descent, and also a methodist. David and Samuel, and the family generally, are also of the same denomination. The David and Samuel Beyer farms were surveyed on a warrant to Herman Le Roy. One of the head waters of the Cowanshanock, starts from a spring on the Samuel Beyer farm. Glade run commences at a spring under the porch of Mr. Beyer's farm.

Mrs. Susan Beard was born in Scrub Grass township, Venango county, in 1807, and was the daughter of William and Jane McKee nee Buchanan. She was married in 1835, to John Beard, and they removed to the farm now occupied by J. B. Lewis, in this township, in 1840. Mr. Beard died in 1864, about sixty-one years of age. His widow still survives. The family paternally or maternally, is presbyterian.

William G. Travis was born on what is now the Thomas Weston farm, West Mahoning township, in 1830, and was the son of John and Catherine Travis nee Crissman. The former was born on the same farm. In 1832 he settled on the property now occupied by our subject. He died in 1855, at the age of sixty-five; his wife in 1869, at the age of sixty-nine. His father, William Travis, was born on the ocean while his parents were en route from Scotland to eastern Pennsylvania. He was among the early settlers of what is now West Mahoning, arriving in 1806, and his mill, which formerly occupied the site of Good's, was the first in this portion of the county. He died in 1840 at the age of sixty-five. His wife died in 1831 at the age of fifty-two. His children were: Thomas, d., m. to Rebecca Watt; John, d., m. to Catherine Crissman, d.; William, d., m. to Jane McPherson, d.; James, m. to Parmelia Travis; George, m. to Martha Richards; Martin, d., m. to Lavinia Byers; Joseph, m. to Emily Coleman, d.; Margaret, m. to James Gourley, d.; and Mary, m. to William Calhoun. Joseph was in the war of 1861. John Travis' children were: William G., m. to Mary J. Marshall; Mary A., m. to Joseph W. Marshall; Martin B., d.; Joseph W., d.; and Emily, d.; William G.'s children were: John W., Samuel J., Frank M., Lelia, Anna M., and Harry Macklin. The Travis land was patented to Paul Busti, of the Holland Land Company, in 1813. There were plainly visible for many years after the location of the first settlers, several well-defined trails or Indian paths on the Travis farm. From the large number of darts, &c., found thereon, it must have been a favorite haunt of the aborigines. William Travis and his descendants were generally Presbyterians.

Peter Hazlett.—He was born in 1812, in what is now White township, and was the son of William and Sarah Hazlett nee Wells. His grandparents, on the paternal side, were Robert and Margaret Hazlett nee Chambers. The former was a native of Ireland and first located in the Conecocheague valley, removing to what was afterward Indiana county, in the latter part of the last century. His children were: James, m. to Amy Wells; Archibald; William, m. to Sarah Wells; Ruth, m. to Isaac Osenbaugh; and Margaret. William was in the war of 1812, from Indiana county. The children of William were: James, m. to Nancy Stutchell; Peter, m. to Eleanor Stutchell; Robert, m. first to Mary J. Cribbs, d., and second to Mary A. Freeman; Amy, m. to Samuel Fitzgerald, d.; Margaret, m. to Joseph Stutchell, d.; Nancy, d.; Mary, m. to John Lewis; and David, m. first to Ellen Baldwin,d., and second to Eliza Jane George. Peter's children were: Eliza J., m. to Jonathan Brindle; Sarah A., m. to John Blose; Lois, d., m. first to William Bolman, and second to S. F. Conant; Susan, m. to Archibald McBrier; George, m. to Amanda Turner; James, m. to Cetta Griffith; Ellen, m. to Robert McBrier; William, m. to Mary J. Fleck; Silas; and Keziah A., m. to Hezekiah Lewis. Our subject and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. His parents were Baptists. He has been residing on "Pleasant Hill" fruit farm for twenty-seven years. It seems to be, from its peculiar situation, the natural home for fruit. In addition to apples, cherries, peach and other trees, of which there are large numbers, you will find in his extensive orchard the apricot, which he is cultivating with a success hitherto unknown in this vicinity. In the season of 1878, it was the only farm in that section that had any fruit for sale.

Mrs. Mary Hall was born in what is now White township, on the 22d of October, 1793, and was the daughter of John and Sarah Arthurs nee Frederick. The former died in White township, over ninety-six years of age. The children were: Mary, m. to William Hall, d. in 1853, sixty-four years of age; George, d., m. ———; Temperance, d.; Isaiah, d.; Jane, d., m. to John McNiel; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Drummond; John, d., Nancy, m. to John Duncan; Effie, and Sarah, d., m. to John McCurdy, d. Our subject's children are: Samuel, d.; Sarah, m. to Samuel McGaughey, d.; John, d.; George A., d., m. in 1851 to Margaret G. Hilberry; Washington W., d.; and Nancy L., d., m. to Alexander Hilberry. George A.'s children were: Alexander H., d.; Margaret J., m. to M. D. Jamison; Mary Agnes, d.; Sarah C., James, and John. Our subject has been a member of the Presbyterian church from her youth.

JOHN MCGAUGHEY was born in what is now Indiana county, in 1802, and was the son of John and Mary McGaughey nee Lattimer. A short time after his birth his parents removed to the south side of the Conemaugh. In 1820, they returned and located on what is now the McQuilkin farm. The children were: William, d., m. first to Rachel Reed, d., and second to Dorcas Torrence; Thomas, d., m. to Eliza McPherson, d.; James, d., m. to Mary A. Dodson; Margaret, m. to Benjamin Caskey, d.; John, m. to Elizabeth W. Marshall, d. in 1863, fifty-six years old; Jane, m. to James Irwin, d.; Sarah, d., m. to David Henry, d.; Eliza, d., m. to David Lewis; Samuel, d., m. to Sarah Hall. Our subject's children are: Joseph M., m. to Elizabeth Newcomb; Martha J., m. first to William Cochran, d., and second to Thomas Ormond; Margaret, m. to A. A. Findley; Sarah H., m. to J. T. Kirkpatrick; Eliza M.; Robert L., m. in 1866 to Sarah E. Cochran; and John C., m. to Mary Findley. Robert L. was in company K, 155th Pennsylvania volunteers, nearly three years. His children were: Flora M., Albert C., Edward O., Curtis L., Mary E., William I., and Verney D. John C. has only one child, Herbert Franklin.

MRS. LUCINDA M. SPENCER was born near the site of the present village of Plumville, in 1818, and was the daughter of William and Phebe Tucker nee Canfield. The latter was the daughter of a Revolutionary soldier. The former was a native of New Jersey. He located in the vicinity of the present site of Plumville some years previous to the birth of our subject. William's children were: Harriet, m. to George Johnston, d.; William, d., m. first to Zerurah Dunham, d., and second to Aurelia Denna; Mary, m. to Alexander Jordan; Malvina M., m. first to Daniel Ausley, d., and second to James Kerr; Lucinda M., m. in 1837, to James Spencer, who died in 1875, in his sixty-seventh year; Charles, d. m. to Margaret Green; Ashbil, m. to Mary J. Tubbs; Adaline, m. to Johnston Miller; George, m. to Martha Bothel. James Spencer was justice of the peace for ten years and a steward and class-leader for several years in the Smicksburg Methodist Episcopal church. His children were: Samuel, d.; Sue, Martin L., and William D., m. to Jennie Spencer. Martin L. was in company B, 1st battalion 100 days' service. Our subject is a Methodist; her parents were presbyterians, and of English descent.

SAMUEL HOOVER was born in Fayette county in 1796, and was the son of Christian and Barbara Hoover nee Harman. In 1798 the family removed to Armstrong county, where the former died at the age of seventy. The latter died at her son Samuel's house in 1870, about ninety-four years of age. George Hoover, the grandfather of our subject, was among the early settlers of Westmoreland county. He was of German descent and came to that county when only fourteen years of age, with two brothers. He died in Armstrong county in 1806, at an advanced age. Samuel located on his present homestead in 1836. He was married in 1817 to Sarah Thomas, who died in her seventy-third year in 1870. He was married again in March, 1875, to Mary E. McCune. Our subject's children were: Margaret, m. to James McCarty; Absalom, m. to Catharine Jamison; John, a soldier in the nine months service in the war of 1861, m. to Annie Colquit; Samuel, a soldier in the war of 1861 for six months, m. to Christianna Kinter; Mary, m. to Jacob Jamison; Jacob, d., m. to Rebecca Fleck; David, m. to Mary Jamison; Barbara A., m. to George Gray; George, m. to Fannie Dalton; Moses, d.; Henry, d., and Zibiah T.

RICHARD E. DODSON was born in Warrior's Mark township, Huntingdon county, in 1811, and was the son of Richard and Mary Dodson nee Dunlap. The parents were born in Chester county. The former's father, Thomas Dodson, was an emigrant from England, who migrated to America many years prior to the Revolution. Richard Dodson came to the farm now occupied by our subject in 1815. He died in 1843, eighty-one years old—his wife's decease occurred in 1853, in her eighty-first year. Their children were: Eleanor, d., m. to Charles Riddle, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Margaret Riddle; William, d., m. to Susannah Willis; Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Adams, d.; Mary Ann, m. to James McGaughey; Richard E., m. to Catharine Y. Gaghagan; and Eliza P., m. to George W. Travis. One of the daughters was carried away by the Indians. Thomas, after her captivity for six months, was enabled after a long pursuit to obtain possession of her, by giving his horse as a ransom. Richard E. Dodson's children were: Mary, m. to T. W. Hyskill; Augustus C., m. to Narcissa Travis, John W.; William E.; Sarah A., m. to S. T. Good; and Homer C. Our subject, his parents and grandfather, were methodists. The Dodson tract of land was a part of the Holland Land Company's grant.

SAMUEL RITCHEY was born near Poke Run Presbyterian Church, Westmoreland county, in 1814, and was the son of John and Sarah Ritchey nee Hindman; the latter being the former's second wife. John Ritchey was born in Ireland, and came with his parents to America when a small boy. In 1824, he removed to the farm now occupied by David Bever. He died in 1833, at the age of sixty-five—his wife in 1857, at the age of sixty-nine. The children by the first wife were; John, d.; Elizabeth, d.; James, d.; Robert and Mary, d. By the second wife the children were: Nancy, d., m. to James Marshall; Rachel, John, d., m. to Jane Lindsey, d.; Thomas, m. to Mary Calhoun, d.; David, m. to Margaret Hays; Sarah; Samuel, m. to Hannah Stiteler; William, d., m. first to Sarah Stiteler, d., and second to Mary Steer; and Martha, d. Samuel's children were: Maranda, m. to Joseph R. Hare; Zachariah T., m. to Martha E. Fleck; John, d.; and Phebe L. Our subject's parents were presbyterians—he and his wife are lutherans.

JOSEPH L. BUTERBAUGH was born in what is now Grant township, in 1839, and was the son of George and Delilah Buterbaugh nee Laughlin. The former's parents, William and Christina Buterbaugh nee Rotkey, settled in Green township, in 1815. They were both of German descent, and lutherans. Our subject and his parents are baptists. Grandfather's children were; John, m. to Elizabeth Learn; William, d., m. to Mary A. Myers; Jacob, m. to Lydia Chapman; Henry, m. to Mary A. Langham; George, m. to Delilah Langham; Frederick, m. to Margaret Langham; David, m. first to Anna Langham, and second to Mary J. Bell; and Mary, d., m. to George Learn. George Buterbaugh's children were: Joseph L., m. to Maria E. Lewis; Alexander, d.; Christina, d.; Elizabeth, m. to E J. Devinney; Maria, m. to William H. Buterbaugh; Mary A., m. to Albert Daugherty; Emanuel, m. to Mary A. Wilson; Eliza J., m. to Cyrus Furman; George; Lydia; Adam, d.; Daniel, d.; Edward, d.; and Ezekiel. Joseph L. was in company D, 78th Pa. volunteers, about nine months, and was discharged for disabilty. Alexander, died in the army while a member of company A, 239th Pennsylvania volunteers. Joseph L,'s children were: Israel C.; Ella B.; Rebecca M., d.; Minnie B.; John Miles; and Ida Eliza.

SAMUEL T. FULTON was born in Huntingdon county, June 4, 1815, and was the son of Henry and Margaret Fulton nee Mattern. The former was in the war of 1812. His father, William Fulton, was born in Ireland; the latter's wife was Margaret Graham. Henry Fulton died in 1852, in Tyrone city, Blair county, about sixty-five years of age; his wife died in 1836, having reached about the same number of years. Their children were: Samuel T., m. to Francis L. Sims; Mary A., m. to Levi Wilhelm; Wesley, d.; John, m. to Jane Beals; William, d., m. to Catharine Sly; and Catharine, m. to Munson Gardner. John was in company A, 2d battalion six months Pennsylvania volunteers. Samuel T. was in company B, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year and nine months; he was detached at first for the commissary department, and for about a year was on General Negley's staff as secretary. His children were: William Henry Sims, m. to Elizabeth Henderson; Charles Thompson Sims, m. to Hattie Hayes; Margaretta Caroline Sims, m. to Dr. W. J. Smathers; Frances Bell Sims; Mary Anna Young, d., and Norval Lincoln. Mr. Fulton has in his cabinet a tomahawk or stone hatchet, weighing five pounds, found on his farm. He has also a very valuable collection of geological specimens, including some very rare specimens of petrifaction. Mr. Fulton's parents were methodists, and he is a member of the same denomination.

JACOB S. HAINES was born in Hempfield township, Westmoreland county, in 1827, and was the son of John and Margaret Haines nee Mansfield. She died in 1860, in her sixty-sixth year. The former was born in Lehigh county in 1795, and went with his parents, Frederick and Charlotte Haines nee Jarrett, to Westmoreland county when a boy. John Haines' children were: Frederick, m. to Arabella Cinder; Jacob S., m. in 1850, to Martha J. Ridgway; Benjamin, m. to Maria Sterling; John, d.; William Alexander, m. to Elizabeth E. Good; Margaret J., d.; Elizabeth, d.; Philip, m. to Jemima Fry; Hannah, m. to Michael Smith, and Catharine. Frederick was in the Mexican war, serving in Captain Coulter's company from Greensburg, and also in the war of 1861. Jacob S. was a sergeant in company M, 2d Pennsylvania cavalry, serving three years and ten months. William A. was in company K, 48th Pennsylvania volunteers three years; Philip was in Co. K, 63d Pennsylvania volunteers nearly three years; he was severely wounded, and was discharged for disability. Our subject's children were; Clarissa M., d.; Mary E., m. to Abraham C. Good; William Henry, m. to Jennie E. Bowser; Leroy B., d.; Sarah Ida, d.; Charles Wesley, d.; and Vermadel, d. Jacob S. Haines has been a miller since he was seventeen years of age, with the exception of the service in the army, till 1868, when he located in the township.

Evan Lewis was born on the Lewis homestead now occupied by Isaac Good, West Mahoning township, in 1829, and was the son of Samuel and Abigail Lewis nee Hallowell. The former died in 1831. His widow subsequently married David Smouse. She was of Scotch descent. Samuel's father was of Welsh descent, and his mother was of Irish extraction. Grandfather Lewis' children were: Joseph; Evan, d.; Robert, d.; John, d.; Sarah, d.; Joshua, d.; Nancy, d; Elizabeth, d.; Samuel, d.; David, d.; George, d.; and Margaret, d. Samuel and Abigail Lewis' children were; Mary, m. to Jesse Rarigh; Evan, m. in 1851 to Catharine Kee.; Elizabeth and Mattie, d., twins; Elizabeth m. to Samuel G. Smith. David and Abigail Smouse's children were: Nancy, m. to Powell Smith; Sophia and Thomas, d., twins; Sophia, m. to Beatty Hogue; Susan, d.; David and Abby, twins; David, m. to a Miss McCullough. Evan Lewis was in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and three months. He was first and second sergeant, and the last year second lieutenant. He has been captain of company G, 13th regiment, 9th division, Pennsylvania militia for three years. Evan's children were: Elizabeth, m. to J. H. Colkitt; Cyrena, d.; Jane D., m. to James Stiteler; Milton K., Addie A., James N., John Newton, Elmer and Eleanor, twins; Maggie, d.; Susannah May, and Molly, d. Joshua Lewis (a brother of Samuel Lewis) was married to Eleanor Rush. Their children were: David, m. to Susan Smiley; Gilbert, m. to Margaret Keasy; Mary A., d., m. to Henry Knauff; Henry, m. to Eleanor Stear; Eliza, d., m. to Isaac Good; Catharine, d., m. to Michael Knauff; Sarah Ellen, m. first to John Weir, d., and second to Simon McMillin; John, m. to Sarah E. Davis; Joshua, m. to Elizabeth Luckhart; George, m. to Maria Stiteler; Maria, m. to Joseph Buterbaugh; Miles, m. to Oliver Calhoun; and Rebecca, m. to William Sink. Joshua and John were in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. George was in company A, second battalion six months volunteers and in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers nearly one year. Gilbert's children were: John Baird, m. to Mary J. Elkin; Labanna A.; Amanda W., m. to George Weston; Maria K., Samuel M., Susannah, and Harry W. John's children were: Burt C., Lottie P., Homer E., and Walter D. George's children were: John, Elizabeth, Franklin, and Eleanor.

D. R. Lewis was born in Indiana county in 1837, and was a son of E. E. and S. I. Lewis nee Farnsworth. The former was a son of Joshua and Nancy Lewis nee Kelly. The former died in 1828; the latter in 1841. Joshua Lewis located in Indiana county in August, 1806. His children were: Isaac, m. first in 1822, and second in 1872. Lydia, d.; Rebecca, m. in 1818; David, d. in 1830; Joshua, d. in 1817; Keziah, m. in 1823, d. in 1878; Ephraim E., m. first in 1832 to Margaret H. McPherrin, d. in 1833, and second in 1836, to Susannah I. Farnsworth, d. in 1872; John, m. first in 1832, and second in 1866; Lydia, m. in 1827, d.; Nancy, m. in 1830, d. in 1837; W. H. H., m. in 1837; and Mary E., m. in 1837, d. in 1879. Ephraim E.'s children were: Agnes, d. in 1873, and Margaret M., by first wife, and by the second, David R., m. in 1867, to Susan W. Lemmon; Enoch F., m. in 1866, to Mary J. Shields; Jane H., d. in 1847; Elizabeth D., d. in 1847; Eliza H., d. in 1861; Lydia W., Mary M., and Jane E. David R. is the present register and recorder and clerk of the orphans' court of Indiana county. Our subject's children are: Ephraim E. and Ira E. Joshua Lewis' homestead was warranted and patented in the names of Mason and Biddle. The E. E. Lewis tract was first improved by William Pierce. The warrant and patent were issued to E. E. Lewis.

Mrs. Mary Black was born in the Sinking Valley, in what is now Blair county, in August, 1806, and was the daughter of Daniel and Catharine Crissman nee Fleck. The latter's children were: Mary, m. to Joseph Black; Elizabeth, m. to Hezekiah Crissman; Caroline, d., m. to Mathew Long, d.; Frederick, m. to Hannah Harry; Angeline, m. to Henry Aholtz; George F., m. to Nancy M. Smiley; Oliver, m. to Caroline Cessna; Catharine, d., m. to William Orr; David, m. to Mary Thompson; Abraham, m. to Mary Buterbaugh. Our subject was married in 1826 to Joseph Black, and came to the farm now occupied by herself and her son Adam, in 1831. Joseph Black died in 1868, sixty-eight years of age; he for several years was a deacon and elder in the Smicksburg Lutheran Church. He served for several years as second lieutenant in the second company of the 145th regiment Pennsylvania militia, being commissioned in 1837. His children were: Catharine, m. to Geo. Steer; Christina, m. to Henry Walter; Angeline, m. to Jason Daugherty; Daniel, d., m. to Elizabeth Settlemire; Jemima, m. to Thomas Garrett; Keziah, d., m. to David Stauffer; Magdalena; Adam, m. to Nancy J. Brown; Martin L.; Hannah, m. to August Shaffer. Adam was in company I, 135th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers nine months; in one hundred days' service as a member of company B, 2d battalion, and in company B, 74th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers one year. His children were: Mary E.; Cora G.; Dolly M., d.; and Daniel W. The Black farm was patented to the Holland Land Company. The warrant bears date of 1792. On the farm is a cherry tree, three and a half feet in diameter, which was planted by Joseph Black about 1832. Mrs. Elizabeth Crissman's children were: Daniel, d.; Caroline, m. to Michael B. Hileman, d.; Maranda, m. to I. R. Kinter; Maria H., m. to William Kimple; John C., m. to Lucy Ann Lowe; Lavinia E., m. to David Good; and Mary, d. Mrs. Caroline Hileman's children were: Austin F., d.; Maria E., m. to J. D. Shearer; Maranda R., m. to H. Jones; Lavinia A., m. to Charles Trout; Anna S. V., m. to Frank Howe; John C. C., m. to Paulina Worth; Michael W. S.; Eugene A.; Addie L. B., d.; and Oscar F. Mrs. Lavinia E. Good's children are: Addie R., Lucy C., Hezekiah, and Anna E.

William and Mary Young were born in Adams county, and were the children of John and Rachel Young, natives of Ireland, who located in the county of Westmoreland, about 1800. They removed to the vicinity of what is now Perryville, Jefferson county, in 1813, where they died. William is supposed to be eighty-five, and Mary eighty-nine years of age. They have resided on the Thomas S. Neil farm, in this township, since 1867. He is now making raft-bows and pins, fork and other handles, for the neighboring families.

Augustus H. Warren is a son of Benajah Warren and Nancy Hoover, who were married in Indiana, on the 25th of October, 1821. The former was a native of New Marlboro, Mass., and when but a small boy, his parents removed to Ashland county, Ohio. During the war of 1812, he carried the mail. When eighteen years of age, he settled in what is now South Mahoning township, and in 1833, purchased the Peter Crotzer farm. He died in 1861, about sixty-eight years of age—his wife died in 1877, about seventy eight years of age. The latter was a daughter of Frederick Hoover, and was born in Morrison's cove, Huntingdon county. The children were: Mary Ann, m. to William Simpson; John, d.; Harriet N., m. to Dr. W. L. Morrow; Silas E., M. D., d.; George H., m. to Lizzie A. Pontius, d.; Caroline, d., m. first to Rev. J. R. Means, d., and second to Dr. J. S. McNutt; Annace, d., m. to S. L. Simpson; Augustus H., m. to Maria Travis; and Jennie A., m. to H. S. Smullin. Geo. H. was in the signal corps and secret service for two and a half years. Augustus H. was in the 103d Pennsylvania volunteers about six months. Augustus H.'s children are: Edwin L., Ida A., Charles, Benajah, and Thamas. George H.'s only child is Virginia B. The Augustus H. Warren residence ranks among the finest in the country.

James N. Chambers was born in Georgeville, East Mahoning township, in 1846, and was the son of John and Sarah Chambers nee Niel, daughter of William Neil. His grandfather paternal, was James Chambers, a native of Ireland, a soldier in the war of 1812, and an early settler of what is now North Mahoning township. His wife was Sarah Pounds. Grandfather's children were: Robert, m. to Mary J. Brady; James, m. to Phebe Ayers, d.; John, d., m. to Sarah Niel; Charles, m. to Elizabeth Sink; William, m. to Susan Sprankle; George, m.; Alexander, d.; Jane, m. to Michael Schotz, m. to Albert Shaffer. F.'s children were: William, d., m. to Caroline Sims; James N., m. to Susan Ann Snyder; Henry, d.; Scott; Angeline, d.;

Laura, m. to Andrew Shankle; Sarah, m. to John Stewart; and Adella. William was in company F, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, and was wounded; re-enlisted in company E, 3d regiment, V. R. C., serving in all five years. James N, was in company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry, three years, was wounded and a prisoner, the latter fortunately only half an hour. James N.'s children are: Minnie L. D., James Wilson, Lillie May, Aaron N., and Maud.

MICHAEL SHAFFER was born in Morris township, Huntingdon county, on the 25th of November, 1820, and was the son of Jacob and Elizabeth Shaffer nee Fetterhoff. (See sketch of Jacob Shaffer, in North Mahoning.) He accompanied his parents to the county, when they made their settlement in 1838. He was married in March, 1845, to Martha Thomas, daughter of William Thomas. Their children are: William T., to Sabilla Jamison; Melinda J., m. to James Moore; Margaret E., d.; Nancy A., d.; Sarah Emma, d.; Jacob George, d.; Susannah, d.; and Jonn Wilson, d. Our subject and his ancestors, as far as known were Evangelical Lutherans. He has held nearly all af the township offices. On Mr. Shaffer's farm, there was not many years ago, a very marked showing of the trail which, according to the old settlers, was an Indian path from the Cherry Tree to Franklin, Venango county, the latter being called in the early days Fort Venango. In 1858, and some years later, he found twenty lead balls in one of his fields—each weighing about an ounce—within an area of not more than two yards in diameter, and about five inches below the surface. Their appearance indicated that they were never shot. Large quantities of Indian darts have been found at several different points on the same tract.

MRS. SARAH GASTEN was born near what is now Georgeville, in 1816, and was the daughter of John and Margaret Hopkins nee Jamison. She was married in 1838 to James Gasten, who died March 19, 1879, seventy years old. Mr. Gasten was born on the farm now occupied by his widow. He was a son of Samuel and Jane Gasten nee Kirkpatrick. The former died in 1859, about eighty-two years of age; the latter in 1835, about sixty years old. Samuel Gasten married for his second wife, Nancy Seelye, who died in 1862. He located on the farm where his son James was born, about 1805 or 6, having come from the vicinity of Indiana. James Gasten's children were: Margaret, m. to John Adams; Nancy; Alexander, d.; John M., m. to Margaret J. Gaghagan; Amanda, m. to Robert M. Allen; Celia, m. to Benjamin F. Wilson; Miralda, m. to James M. Hammond; Eliza, m. to D. W. Smith; and Sarah Bell. John Adam's children were: Harry O., and Walter H. The Gasten farm is a part of two tracts; one was patented in the name of William Findley, in 1795, and was called "Findley;" the other was patented to Mason & Cross. Our subject is a United Presbyterian; her husband was of the same faith.

SYLVESTER C. WELCHONCE was born in Porter township, Jefferson county, in 1855, and was the son of Austin Welchonce and Margaret McHenry. The parents of Austin were Mathias and Elizabeth Welchonce nee Ambrose. The former died in Porter township, in 1875, eighty-four years of age. He was of German descent, and served in the war of 1812. His father was in the Revolutionary war. Grandfather Welchonce's children were: Ambrose, d.; Lavinia, m. to David McDonald; Austin, m. to Margaret McHenry; Johnston, m. to Elizabeth Timblin; Claranna, m. to Elisha Gaghagan; Alexander, m. first to Jemima Smith, d., and second to Catharine Barrett; Martha, m. to Wallace Farman; and Uriah, d. Austin's children were: Sylvester C., m. to Annie Lettie, daughter of George Lettie; Alvah, Sarah, Mary E., Franklin McKee, and Ruth Ermina. The elder Welchonce was a Lutheran. Our subject and parents are members of the United Brethren church. Our subject and parents have been living in the township since 1863. He has been in the blacksmith business in Sellersville since 1873, and has managed his own shop since 1877.

GEORGE ADAMS was born near Marlin's mills, Washington township, in 1842, and was the son of Edward and Mary Adams nee Kearney. His paternal grandparents were James and Mary Adams nee Rose. Edward Adams was a general mechanic. He died in 1851, fifty-one years of age. His wife was born in 1806, and is still living. Their children were: James, m. first to Martha J. Bolvin, d., and second to Elcy Lewis; Mary J., m. to Jacob Wissinger; Agnes E., m. to John Cunningham; Levi, d., m. to Catharine Walters; Sarah A., m. to George W. Stockdale; Joseph, d.; Caroline, d., m. to James B. Rankin; George, m. to Zibiah Stear; Lucinda, m. to George Hamilton; Eleanor, m. to John Dick; and Hannah, m. to J. W. Fairman. Levi was killed at Dutch Gap in the war of 1861. George was a member of company A, 78th regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, three years and three months, and was wounded while thus serving. George's children were: Maggie May, Elizabeth C., and Zorah Z.

THOMAS ADAMS was born in Sinking Valley, Blair county, in 1803, and was the son of James and Margaret Adams nee Law. The former died in Huntingdon county, in 1818, about sixty-two years of age; the latter was born in Union county, and died in March, 1860, about eighty-four years old. The parents of James were James and Margaret Adams. The former was born in Ireland, and came to Northumberland county, a short time after the Revolution. Our subject and his brother Joseph S., also born in 1803, came to what is now West Mahoning township, in 1837. The latter was a blacksmith by trade. They settled on their farms in the same year. Thomas was married in 1842, to Jane Kennedy. Their children were: John, m. to Margaret Gasten; James, m. to Jane Green; Elizabeth, d.; Margaret, m. to George R. Hoover; Joseph, m. to Mrs. Caroline Chambers nee Sims; Thomas, m. to Lucy Kern; Ann, Robert, and Mary. John was in the 105th Pennsylvania volunteers. Thomas, and Joseph S., their parents and grandparents, were Presbyterians.

CHARLES OBERLIN was born in Baden, Germany, in 1824, and was the son of Christopher and Catharine Oberlin nee Kubach. In 1833, the family removed to America and located in Pittsburgh, where the former died in 1859, sixty-eight years old; his first wife died in 1840, thirty-eight years old, and his second wife, Mary Eschelman, died in 1876. Christopher Oberlin's children were: Lewis F., m. to Christina Shelby; Chas., m. in 1846 to Catharine Grossman; William P., m. to Anna M. Stauffer; Susannah C., m. to Henry Beecher; and Nancy, m. to T. S. Niel. William P. was in the 148th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years, and a prisoner for some months. Our subject located in the county in 1846. His children are: Mary E., d.; Lewis C., m. to Nancy Lantz; Samuel S., m. to Rebecca J. Wonderling; Susannah J., d.; Katurah E., d.; Chas. A.; Sarah, d.; Agnes A.; Margaret M., d., and Virginia M. Mr. Oberlin has served as superintendent of the shoe shop of the Dayton Soldiers' Orphan Home, and as class leader and steward of the church of which he is a member. He is a member of the United Brethren Church; his parents were connected with the Evangelical Association.

MRS. ANNA BARBARA LOOS.—She was born in Germany in 1792, and was the daughter of Nicholas and Anna Barbara Moul nee Freshkern. She was married in 1819 to Casper Loos, who died in 1861; the family migrated to America, and located in what is now North Mahoning township in 1838. Their children were: John Adam, d.; Anna Dorothy, m. to John Uber, d.; Anna Barbara, m. to Michael C. Uber. Both of the Ubers were born in Westmoreland, and were sons of Peter Uber, an old settler of Westmoreland county. Michael C. Uber's children were: Jacob P., m. to Lizzie Hollowell; Casper S., d.; Margaret C., d.; John A.; Mary A., m. to Cameron Myers; and Lewis E., m. to Anna Hollowell. Jacob P. was in company G, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about a year. Jacob P.'s children were: John W.; Anna Mary, d.; Minnie E., and Edward O.

MRS. ELIZABETH MCFARLAND.—She was born in Butler county in 1836, and was the daughter of Frederick and Julia Ann Stiver nee Footers. The latter were born in Germany. Mr. Stiver was a soldier in the war between France and the allied powers for several years. Elizabeth was married in 1851 to Robert McFarland. The latter was born in Ireland, and migrated with his parents, Robert and Isabella McFarland, to Philadelphia, in 1795. In 1802, his father purchased and commenced to improve a tract of land now occupied by our subject, returning in a few years to Huntingdon county, where he died in 1839, in his eighty-eighth year. His wife died in the same county, in 1833, over eighty-three years old. Robert McFarland improved the farm which his widow occupies. He died in 1873, nearly ninety-one years of age. His children were: Isabella, m. to David F. Roush; Christeann and Robert James. David F. and Isabella Roush's child is named Myrtle Elizabeth.

THEODORE R. LAMISON was born in Bell township, Jefferson county, in 1845, and was the son of William and Caroline Lamison nee Robinson. Grandparents paternally were William and Nancy Lamison nee Heller. The former died in 1875, about eighty years of age. He was of Irish descent, born in Cumberland county, and a Methodist; the latter was of Holland descent, a Methodist, and also a native of Cumberland county; she died in 1877, about seventy years of age. Our subject's father served in company B, 74th Pennsylvania volunteers about six months. Theodore R. was in company C, second battalion Pennsylvania volunteers for six months, and in company B, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. He was married in 1867 to Mary Holt, daughter of Alexander Holt. Their children are: Margaret, d.; William, Clara, Sarah, and Walter.

John McClelland was born in Porter township, Jefferson county, in 1818, and was the son of James and Elizabeth McClelland nee Marshall. The former was the son of Daniel and Ellen McClelland, notives of Scotland, and Presbyterians. Our subject is, and his parents were, of the same denomination. James settled in Porter township, Jefferson county, in 1803, and in 1823 removed to the "Willow Spring" farm, now occupied by our subject. He died in 1857, at the age of 80; his wife in 1861, at about the same age. Their children were: Ellen, d., m. to William Newcomb, d.; Catharine, m. to Isaac McHenry; William, d., m. to Eliza Means; Ann, m. to John Coon, d.; Mary, m. to William Irwin; John, m. to Nancy Gourley, d.; Eliza, m. to Thomas Niel; Margaret, m. to Mahlon McGregor, d.; and Joseph, m. first to Sarah Lewis, d., and second to Emily Travis. Our subject's children were: George W., d., m. to Harriet Morgan; James M., m. to Hannah Neville; Lucinda, m. to Joseph Howard; William H., d.; Winfield S., Emma Jane, Benjamin F., Zachary T., Daniel C., John T., and Chester Harvey.

Enoch Dewey was born in Wheatfield, Hampden county, Mass., September 30th, 1815, and was the son of Timothy Dewey, jr., and Clarissa Hackett. The former was a mechanic and farmer. His children were: Elizabeth, m. to Benjamin Barrett; Schuyler; Enoch; Ralph, m. to —— Brumley; Catharine and Henry, twins, the former m. to Henry Barrett; Clarissa, d., m. to James Ashley; Sarah, m. to Joseph Thompson; and Harriet, m. The grandfather, Timothy Dewey, sr., lived and died in Westfield. Our subject, at the age of sixteen, began to learn the trade of a turner, and worked at this business for two years. He then worked at the blacksmith trade for two years, and then traveled as a journeyman in Ohio, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, and other states. He located in West Mahoning in 1842, and has generally been engaged in farming.

William Powell.—He was born in Parker township, Butler county, in 1825, and was the son of John and Mary Powell nee Edwards, who were married in Wales. They migrated to Baltimore in 1817, and in a short time afterward removed to western Pennsylvania. The former associated in building Bear creek furnace, near Parker City, in 1819. He died in Armstrong county in 1849, in his sixty-second year; his wife, in 1869, in her eighty-first year. The children were: John, d., m. to Eliza J. Kinnear; Margaret, d.; Mary A., m. to David Hutchinson; Elizabeth, d.; Sarah, d.; William, m. to Martha J. McFarland; Jane, m. to Hugh Wasson; and Thomas, m. to Anna M. Ritchey. Our subject's children are: William J., d.; Lewis Montgomery, d.; James M., Samuel B., Mary S., Dorcas E., Albert C., d.; William W., Edward C., d.; Margaret J., and Walker Alexander. William Powell located in West Mahoning township in 1874. His mother was, and he is, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

John B. Work was born on the A. S. Work homestead in what is now East Mahoning township, in 1827, and was the son of Alexander Scroggs and Margaret Work nee Brown. The latter were married in 1825, in what is now East Mahoning township. (For date of the Work family see history of the same.) Our subject was married in 1854 to Nancy Thomas. Their children were: Olis Calvin, d.; Israel Thomas, d.; Louis Ward, d.; Hannah M., and Mary Elder. Mr. Work was a carpenter for over thirty years, but has now retired from active business in that trade. His farm is part of a tract patented to Gen. William Todd, in 1785.

Samuel Weaver was born in Hollidaysburg, Huntingdon county, in 1835, and was the son of Elias and Elizabeth Weaver nee Fleck. The former's father was in the Revolutionary war, and was of German descent. Elias came to the vicinity of Smicksburg, in 1835. He died in Jefferson county in 1849, in his fortieth year; his wife is still living and past her seventieth birthday. Their children were: George, m. to Mrs. Margaret Hoover nee Niel; Samuel, m. to Sarah Cochran, daughter of Joseph Cochran; Catharine, d.; Henry, m. to Margaret Drummond; John, m. to Jane Graffies; Anna B., m. to Thomas W. Hoover; Mary Jane; and Elias. Henry and John were in the war of 1861. Samuel's children were: Ann Eliza, Elizabeth J., Amy Teresa, d.; George Clarance, d.; Joseph Elias, Marilla, John H. C.

Solomon Dibler.—He was born in Salem township, Westmoreland county, in 1832, and was the son of John and Barbara Dibler nee Kuntz. The former was born in 1807 in Westmoreland county. The latter was born in Path Valley, Franklin county, and died in Westmoreland county in 1857, at the age of forty-eight. Our subject's grandparents were: Frederick and Susannah Dibler nee Marsh, who migrated from Lebanon county to Westmoreland county. The former was in the war of 1812 from Westmoreland county. Of our subject's brothers David was in the 105th regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers, in the war of 1861, for nine months. Solomon was married in 1858, to Catharine N. Aukerman, daughter of Lewis Aukerman, of Bell township, Westmoreland county. Their children are: Ella M., Ida Belle, and John J.

S. H. Porter was born in Salem township, Westmoreland county, in 1812, and was the son of William and Rebecca Porter nee Dickey. The former's second wife was Jane Kirkpatrick. William's father was Samuel Porter, a native of Ireland, and the pastor of Congruity and Poke Run Presbyterian churches for several years. The latter's wife was Mary Hutchinson. William Porter located in Wayne township, Armstrong county, in 1829. Our subject was married to Nancy Calhoun, a daughter of Hon. John Calhoun, an associate judge of Armstrong county for several years; he also acted as a justice of the peace for many years. Their children were: Eliza J., m. to Robert McQuilkin; John, d.; Mary Catharine, d., and William D., m. to Martha J. Steele. William D. was in company K, 155th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, from August 29th, 1862, to June 1st, 1865. Our subject and family, as well as his parents, adhere to the belief preached by his grandfather, Rev. Samuel Porter.

John Goheen was born in Porter township, Clarion county, in 1829, and was the son of Davis and Sarah Goheen nee Mahans. His paternal grandparents were James and Elizabeth Goheen nee Davis. The former was of Scotch-Irish descent. George Goheen, a brother of John, was in company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers about three years. He was wounded at the second Bull Run engagement. David, another brother, was in the same company, and served till the end of the war. He also was wounded. Our subject was a farmer till 1852, and then became a partner in a general store for three years. In 1856, he removed to Sellersville, and has since been engaged in mercantile business. He erected his present storeroom in 1873. He was married in 1855 to Margaret F. Gaghagan. Their children are: D. W., Laura, Ruth, Franklin and Idella. Our subject is a member of the United Brethren Church. His parents and grandparents were Presbyterians.

William Hiles was born in Herefordshire, England, in 1812, and was the son of Thomas and Esther Hiles nee Haswell. He was a miller by trade, and labored in that business in his father's mill called "castle," till 1832, when he came to America. As illustrative of the roving character of a miller's life, we will name a portion of the places where he labored. He began milling at Phillipsburg, Centre county, where he remained two years. We then find him in Erie, Erie county; next in the state of New York, in a mill on Owasco lake; next in Knoxville, Tioga county, Pa., then in Williamsport, Pa., and then in Janesville, Hillsdale county, Michigan. About this time, 1838, he returned to England, and kept a hotel in Hereford till 1850, when he returned to America, and located in Theraso, Dodge county, Wisconsin, and once more began to labor at his old calling. We then find him in Rockton, Clearfield Co., Pa.; next in Shawsville, in same county; then in Grahampton in same county, and then he rented the Passmore farm, near Curwensville, in the same county, and pursues farming for three years. He then removed to Lexington, Lafayette county Missouri, again resuming milling; thence back to his son-in-law's home, near Curwensville, from which he migrated to Milton, Armstrong county, where he milled five years. His next change was to the Loup mill, where we now find him busily engaged. He was married in 1844, to Ellen Wellington. His children are: Thomas, m. to Rebecca Mowry; Esther J., m. to John L. Holden; G. W.; and Charles A., m. to Sarah Kanar. He and his parents are Episcopalians.

Robert A. Jordan was born in Perry township, Jefferson county, in 1833, and was the son of Robert and Martha Jordan nee Pounds. (See sketch of Robert Jordan, in North Mahoning.) Our subject was in company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers for four years, and drove a team over three years, being detailed from the regiment. He was married in 1869, to Catharine Hallowell. Their children were: James, Mary, Martha and Caroline.

GEORGE W. THOMPSON was born near Pine Grove, Centre county, in 1822, and was the son of James L. and Catharine Thompson nee Gearhart. His grandfather was William Thompson, a native of Wales, who located in Centre county, about the close of the Revolution. His wife was Elizabeth Turner. Jas. L., about 1836, settled near Strattonville, Clarion county, and in 1839, removed to the vicinity of Dayton, Armstrong county. He died in 1878, seventy-eight years old—his first wife in 1850, forty years of age—his second wife, Rebecca Claypool, in 1865, about fifty years of age. James L.'s children were: George W., m. first to Mary Gray, d., and second to Sarah Lias; John, m. to Catharine Gearhart; Mary J., m. to Robert Martin, d.; Sarah Ann, m. to Stephen Gravis; William Turner, m. to Mary Gearhart; Davis K., m. first to Lavinia Coleman, d., second to Caroline Coleman, d., and third to Eva Junkins; Ellen B., m. to Perry Kahl; James C., d., m. to Nancy Devinney; Catharine, m. to David Kahl; Peter, m. to Nancy Stanard; Wesley, m.; and Narcissa, m. to Frank Flick. George W. was fourth sergeant of company M, 5th Pennsylvania heavy artillery, for one year. Davis K. was sergeant of company B, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. He was wounded at Stone river. Wesley was in the second regiment of Berdan sharpshooters. He was taken prisoner at first Fredericksburg, removed to Libby, and paroled in a short time. George W.'s children are: Jared, John, Frank, Charles, James Lincoln, and Sherman. He has been a class leader in the methodist Episcopal Church for twenty-five years. His parents were of the same denomination, and his grand parents were Presbyterians. He located in the township in the spring of 1867.

GEORGE F. CRISSMAN was born in Sinking valley, Blair county, in 1817, and was the son of Daniel Crissman. (See sketch of Mrs. Mary Black.) Our subject came to the farm now occupied by him, in March, 1838. He was married in September, 1838, to Nancy M., daughter of David Smiley, who located in West Mahoning township, in 1830. Their children were; Daniel, d., m. to Agnes Potter; David, d.; Abraham, m. to Elizabeth steer; Oliver, m. to Mary J. Robinson; Frederick T., m. to Sarah J. Black, d.; John, m. to Martha Dilts; Catharine F., m. to Harevy Byers; Winfield S.; Milton F.; and Mary E. Daniel and Abraham were in company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months, and in company M, 5th Pennsylvania heavy artillery. David was killed at Petersburg, June 17, 1864—the latter served till the close of the war. He was a prisoner for eight months at Danville and other points. Our subject, and the family generally are Lutherans. Oliver's children are: Sarah S., d.; Daniel, Ida Blanch, George, and Edith.

JACOB WILHELM was born in Germany, in 1823, and was the son of John and Mary Elizabeth Wilhelm nee Snyder. Christian Wilhelm, the father of the former, was a general in Napoleon's body guard. He disappeared on the retreat from Moscow, and all traces of him were lost. His son, the father of our subject, was a colonel in the same guard. He and his family came, in 1834, to America, when he was sixty-eight years old, and located what is now North Mahoning township, where he died in 1840. His children were: Caroline; Elizabeth, d.; Philip; Catharine, m. to George Licke; Phebe, m. to Peter Walker; Charles, d., m. to Eve Shaffer; Daniel, m. to Mary Nichollson; and Jacob, m. in 1858, to Hannah Thomas, daughter of William Thomas. The latter's only child is Mary E., m. to Prof. W. J. Alexander, of Saltsburg. The Jacob Wilhelm farm is part of a tract styled "My Name," patented to General William Todd, December 13th, 1787, and was described as situated on Sugar creek, one mile north of "Lycamahaning," (Little Mahoning). Israel Thomas was the next owner and he, in 1822, sold it to William Thomas. Mr. Wilhelm became the proprietor in 1858. Our subject has the wood frame of a pack-saddle used by William Thomas in the early part of the century.

NATHANIEL C. COLEMAN was born on the Coleman homestead in the township, in 1829, and was the son of Rev. Elijah and Elizabeth Coleman nee Weston, who were married in Huntingdon county. The former died in 1862, in his seventy-second year, and the latter in 1874, in her eighty-fourth year. Elijah Coleman was among the pioneer Methodist ministers of western Pennsylvania. He was the first minister of that faith in Punxsutawney, Brookville, and many other points. His labors generally preceded all conference or circuit work, and his fifty years of service have left their impress for all time to come. He, as well as his father, Charles Coleman, was born in Maryland. The latter settled on what is now the Ephraim and Enoch Steer farm about 1815. He died in his eighty-fourth year. His children were: Elijah, d., m. to Elizabeth Weston, d.; Charles, d., m. to Eliza Burket, d.; Alexander, d., m. ———; John, d., and Samuel, d., twins, the first m. Christina Watt, d., and the latter m. Lena Travis, d.; Elisha, d., m. ——; Martha, d., m. James Gaghagan, d.; Fanny, d., m. John Hoover, d. Elijah's children were: John T., d., m. to Susan White; Martha, m. to John Lias; Henry, m. first to Charlotte Smullen, d., and second to a Stogdell; Susan, d., m. to Andrew Rankin; Emily, d., m. to Joseph Travis; D. B. D., m. to Lavinia C. Matthias, d.; Wesley, m. to Martha Hyskell; N. C., m. to Lavinia J. Travis; Elizabeth, m. first to Joseph Allen, d., and second to John Cochran; and Lavinia, d., m. to Davis K. Thompson. Wesley's children are: Adella, Mina, Sadie E., and Franklin, d. N. C.'s children are: Become, Alfred, Bascom, Ida V., Emma, and Lelia. The fourth set of houses are now on the Coleman homestead. Both this and the Charles Coleman farm were patented to the Holland Land Company. There were several Indian trails on the Coleman homestead, and among them was the "Bull path," which extended through the tract.

JOHN KERR was born on the Kerr homestead, now occupied by William Kerr, in West Mahoning township, in 1826, and was the son of Samuel and Mary Kerr nee Thomas. The former located on the homestead in 1820, was born on Elder's Ridge, in 1798, and died in 1870. The latter was born in Dauphin county in 1794, and has resided in the county over seventy-eight years. The father of Samuel Kerr, Valentine Kerr, was among the early settlers of Elder's Ridge. His wife was Hannah Barr. Their children were Joseph, d., m. to Lydia Pierce, d.; John, d., m. to Mary Marsh; Samuel, d., m. to Mary Thomas; Hannah, d., m. to John Barr, d.; Charles, d., m.; James, m. to Elizabeth Steer, d.; and Thomas, m. to Mary Steer. Joseph was in the war of 1812. Samuel's children were: Israel T., m. to Rosanna Gourley; Hannah, m. to Griffiith Condrum; Valentine, d.; John, m. to Mary Mogel, daughter of Adam Mogel; Valentine, m. to Sarah Roush; Margaret, m. to Marion Condrum; Amos, m. first to Melinda Lanham, d.; and second to Sophia Ruby; William, m. to Eliza J. Roush; and Thomas, who was killed at Lookout Mountain, while a member of company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers. William was also in the war of 1861. John was in company E, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers, from March to July, 1865. John's children are: Samuel; Catharine; Alfred C., m. to Mary Jordan; Thomas C.; and Ida May. Valentine's children are: Mary Elizabeth, George B., Samuel R., William H., Thomas E., and Anna E. The Keers were generally Seceders, but our subject is a Lutheran, and has served for three years as a deacon.

THOMAS ALLEN was born in Cumberland county, in 1793, and died on the 7th of September, 1871. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, from Cumberland county. His wife was Catharine Borland. They were married at the Spruce Spring, in Huntingdon county, February 14th, 1876, and in the same year located on the farm now occupied by A. B. and W. H. Allen. She died on the 3d day of December, 1878, seventy-two years of age. Their children were: Elizabeth, m. to Frederick Lantz; John A., d.; Isabella N., m. to George Wheatcroft; Archibald B; William H., m. to Mary Beck; Robert M., m to Amanda Gaston; and George H. Archibald B., and Robert M., were members of company B., 78th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. William H.'s children were: Leanna Kate, Allie Bertha, Charles E, and Sarah Bell. The Allen farm is a part of the tract containing 548 acres, which included the forks of the Mahonings and mouth of Sugar creek. It was warranted to Isaac Meason and R. C. Cross, in 1785, and patented to Isaac Meason, and John and Cornelia Cross, executors of R. C. Cross, in 1788, and described as situated in Northumberland county. Dr. John Postlewait, of Greensburg, purchased it in 1809, and in 1817, John Nicoll became the owner. About the same year, he gave the tract to his three nephews, Hugh, Thomas and John. Mr. Nicoll, laid out about 1817, "Nicollville," in the forks of the Mahonings. Not a house was ever erected.

R. F. NEVILLE was born on the Neville homestead in 1846, and was a son of Herman and Charlotte Neville nee Soxman, daughter of Christian and Margaret Soxman nee Kerns. The former was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1777, and was a son of Christian and Elizabeth Soxman, the former being a native of Germany, and one of the early settlers of Westmoreland county. Margaret Kerns was born in the Ligonier valley in 1780. Christian Soxman's (the younger) children were: Elizabeth, m. to John Sigafous, d.; Mary, d., m. to Moses Donnell, d.; Catharine, m. to John Riesman; Margaret, d., m. to Adam Shurick; Susan, m. to George Kline; Nicholas, m. to Margaret Sheek; Philip, d.; John Christian, m. to Eliza J. Bird; and Charlotte, m. in 1842, to Herman Neville, d. in 1871, about fifty-two years of age. The father of the latter, Generalissimo Neville, was a native of Ireland, who settled about the beginning of the century in Derry township, Westmoreland county. His wife was Margaret Lenhart. He was a weaver by trade, and about 1830, removed to West Mahoning township. He died in 1844. Herman Neville's children were: John B., m. to Maggie Foster; Sarah E., d.; R. F., m. in 1870, to Margaret J. Lantz; Herman L.; Hannah J., m. to James McClelland; Margaret L., m. to Abram Foster; James M., d.; Thos. E.; William Tell; Susan M. A., d.; and Mary Bell. R. F.'s children are: Orrin D.; Claude, and Avery. The Soxman's were Lutheran's. Generalissimo Neville, was an Episcopalian, and Herman Neville and wife were Methodists.

John Wingrove was born in Loudoun county, Virginia, on the 3d of June, 1800. He was one of twins, his mate being Nancy, born to John Wingrove, an emigrant from England, who died in Virginia, one hundred and five years old. When our subject was only five years old, he was bound out to George Jenny, a slaveholder. In 1822, he removed to Armstrong Co., where he remained about ten years and then removed to Jacksonville. After residing at other points in the county, in 1840, he removed to his present home. He was married in 1822, to Catharine Wagner, still living, and over seventy-five years of age. His children are: Mary Ann, m. to George Weamer; James A., m. to Sarah C. Ritchey, d. in 1877, about thirty-four years of age. Elizabeth, m. to E. D. Shiffer; Anthony, d., m. to Nancy Lewis; J. H., d.; William Bruce, d.; Cynthia, m. to William Bond; G. A., m. to Catharine Campbell; and Theodore. Anthony died at Petersburg, Virginia, while a soldier in the late war. G. A. was in company A, 2d battalion, six months volunteers. Theodore was in the war about a year. James A. was in company A, 2d battalion, six months volunteers. James A.'s children are: John H., William F., Maggie Bell, Lottie V., and Hannah May.

Rev. George W. Mechlin, D. D., Presbyterian, was born in Donegal, or Concord, Butler county, in 1825, and was a son of William and Catherine Mechlin nee Kuhn. The former was a son of John Mechlin, of German descent, and one of the early settlers of Butler county. His father was one of pioneers in the neighborhood of Hannastown, Westmoreland county. Our subject was educated at Butler Academy, and Jefferson College, graduating from the latter in the class of 1853. He also was graduated at the Western Theological Seminary. He was ordained in 1857, his first charge being Concord and Glade Run churches, resigning the former in 1865. He has been the pastor of Glade Run for over twenty-two years, and teacher for eight, viz: 1857 to 1865, and principal of the Glade Run Academy, excepting seven years, since 1865. The degree of D. D. was conferred upon Mr. Mechlin in 1874, by Washington and Jefferson College. He was married in 1856, to Eliza D., daughter of Henry Baird. Their children were: William Henry, John C., Mary Catharine, Sylvester Lycurgus, George E. K., and Irene Eliza.

David Love was born in Allegheny county, in 1824, and was a son of Rev. James and Jane Glove nee Glenn. The former was the son of David Love, a native of Ireland, and an early settler of Butler county. Our subject was a student at Madison College, Antrim, Guernsey county, Ohio, for four years, retiring in his junior year on account of ill health. He taught for some time the classics and mathematics in Londonderry, Guernsey county. He came to Dayton in 1865, and with the exception of a year and a half, has been a teacher or principal of the Dayton Union Academy. He was married in 1867, to Elizabeth Logan, daughter of Edward Logan, of Guernsey county, Ohio.

Rev. J. W. McIntyre, M. E., was born in Pleasant Unity, Westmoreland county, in 1843, and was a son of James and Ann McIntyre nee Funk. The former was born in that county, in 1808, and is still living. His father was among the early settlers of that county. His wife was Catharine Horbaugh. Our subject was educated at a select school, at Greensburg, also under Rev. W. K. Brown, and Allegheny College, entering in 1866, and graduating in 1869. He immediately entered the ministry. He has served as pastor in Donegal, Circleville, Armagh and Derry. In October, 1877, he became the pastor of the Dayton, Smicksburg and Milton churches. He was married in 1870, to Annie M. Hunter, of Donegal, Westmoreland county. Their children were: Harry, Willie, Grace and Fred.

MONTGOMERY TOWNSHIP

was formed from Mahoning in 1834, the date of survey being June 24th, and was called in honor of John Montgomery, an early settler of Conemaugh township and a noted Revolutionary soldier. He owned a large tract of land in what is now Montgomery township.

GETTYSBURG, HILLSDALE P. O.

The first settlers in the vicinity were William Thompson, John Powell, William Rankin, John Grumbling, Jacob Friedly, George Gose, Cornelius Roley, and others. This village is situated on the dividing ridge between the Little Mahoning and Cush creek. It was laid out in 1851, on the land of Hugh Rankin. The first addition to the plat was made by John Gromlery; the second was by J. G. Ake, and the third was by George Goss.

M. C. Getty was born in 1820 on the farm now occupied by Richard Getty, Washington township, and was a son of James Johnston and Margaret Getty nee Clark. The former was born in Franklin county in 1799, and died in 1866. His wife is living at the age of eighty-six. James J. was a son of James and Isabella Getty nee Green, natives of Ireland, who settled in Westmoreland county in 1812 and removed to aforenamed land in 1813. James died in 1835, at the age of eighty; his wife in 1824, sixty-six years old. M. C. was married in 1846 to Nancy J. McCartney. Their children were: Margaret, m. to Dr. Joseph M. Lydick; George C., m. to Mary Donahey; Nancy J., m. to Dr. M. M. Rankin; Isabella Ann; Richard Wilson, d.; Samuel Jackson and James Alexander, twins; and John A. Lincoln. He located in the village that bears his name in 1850, and has since been engaged in the general store trade. He erected his first store after the Conrath house in 1860. His present building, 27x100 feet and two stories, was erected in 1876. He served as postmaster for fourteen years.

Hugh R. Rankin was born on what is now the William Wiggins farm, Armstrong township, in 1814, and was a son of William and Margaret Rankin nee Ramsey. The former's second wife was Hannah Buckley. William was born on the above named tract. He was a son of William Rankin, who married in what is now Indiana county, Jane Taylor, a native of Ireland. He was a native of Ireland, and served in the Revolutionary war. He located after this struggle on Crooked creek. He died in 1823, at the age of eighty; his wife in 1833, about seventy years of age. Their children were: Mathew, d., m. to Mary McCullough; Isabella, d., m.; Jane, m. to David McMichael; Mary, d., m. to Samuel Miller, d.; William, d., m. first to Margaret Ramsey, d., and second to Hannah Buckley, d.; and Margaret, d., m. to William McMichael, d. William's children were: William, m. to Nancy Anthony, d.; Hugh R., m. to Margaret Cooper; Matthew, d., m. to Jane Lydick; Margaret, m. to Lewis Decker; Jane; Ann, m. to Washington Spence; Isabella, m. to Andrew Morrow; John, m. to Elizabeth Cox, and James, m. to Caroline Adams, d. Hugh R.'s children were: William, m. to Nancy Buterbaugh; Austin C., m. to Etta Rank; John R., m. to Emily Powell; Lewis D., m. to Mary Ruffner; Michael M., M. D., m. to Nancy Getty; and Joseph W., m. to Lucy Lucas. Austin C. was in company D, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and two months. Our subject has resided in the vicinity of the village and in Gettysburg for forty-nine years, having located, in 1830, in the neighborhood of what is now the above named place.

Jacob G. Ake was born in Morrison's Cove, Huntingdon county, in 1811, and was a son of Daniel and Mary Ake nee Higgins. The former died in 1854, at the age of seventy-two; the latter in 1858, about seventy years of age. David was the son of Jacob Ake, a German. He had two sons, William and Jacob, in the war of 1812. Our subject came to the county in 1844, and purchased what is now the William Rankin farm. He was a merchant in New Washington, Clearfield county, for seven, has been the proprietor of the "Union House," Gettysburg, for eighteen, and the treasurer of the school board for eleven years. He was married in 1841 to Elizabeth Notley. Their children were: David S., m. in 1867 to Annace Donahey; William, d.; Sylvester, d.; Frances Drusilla, d.; Mary Jane, m. to John Mehaffey; Sarah E., d.; James Dowler; Agnes B., m. to George Prothero; Joseph H.; John H.; Anna Bell, and Rosa Amanda. David S. was in company D, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and two months. David S.'s children were: Elsie Vernon; Charles M.; Mary Rodella, d.; and William Monroe, d.

ELIZA NOTLEY was the daughter of John and Eliza Notley nee Flinegan, who settled on the tract now occupied by John Notley, Montgomery township. Two of their children, Ellen and Frank, respectively seven and five years old, were lost on Shryock's run in 1831. They were gone twenty-four hours, and the entire settlement was out in search of the wanderers. They traveled along the run till they reached the river, where they were found on the morning of the following day. At night the little girl disrobed herself, in puris naturalibus, to make covering for her brother. They waited at the foot of a tall pine, with naught but the howling of the wolves for company till the morning broke. The scene of their wandering was in the same vicinity of the noted Shryock adventure in 1819.

MRS. CATHARINE GOSS was born in Snyder county in 1813, and was a daughter of George and Rebecca Drees nee Royer, Lutherans, and Germans by birth. Our subject was married to George Goss, in Snyder county, and removed to the farm now occupied by William Goss, in 1845. Mr. Goss died in 1867, about fifty-three years of age. Their children were: Mary Ann, m. to Charles Brown; Jeremiah, m. to Jane Uncapher; Wilson, m. to Ann Conner; John, d.; George, d. in the war of 1861; Catharine, m. to Robert Harbridge; Isaac, m. to Emeline Crossman; Abby, m. to Harvey Sloan; and Matilda, m. to Dr. John B. Green. Wilson and Isaac were in the war of 1861.

HENRY H. RUFFNER was born in Huntingdon county in 1818, and was a son of Daniel and Elizabeth Ruffner nee Huffman. Both parents are living in Grant township; the former over eighty-five, and the latter over eighty-three years of age. Henry, the father of the former, was in the war of 1812 from Westmoreland county. Our subject was married in 1843, to Mary Ann Walker, who died in 1852. Their children were: Louis Agnes, to William McCurdy; and Lucinda Annace, m. to Mathew Wagner. His second wife was Catharine Buterbaugh, whom he married in 1854. Their children were: Mary Ann, m. to William Biss; Martin, m. to Dilly Powell; Emanuel; Elizabeth, m. to Scott Kerr; Ida, and David M. The family located in what is now Grant township in 1842, and Henry H. has been a tanner in Gettysburg since 1856. The tannery has eleven vats, nine inside and two outside. It has a capacity for tanning annually five hundred hides.

W. T. HAZLET was born in what is now Clinton county in 1819, and was a son of Samuel and Sarah Hazlett nee Templeton, who removed to what is now Montgomery township about 1828, locating on the tract adjoining our subject's present farm, about three miles from the Cherry Tree. The former died in 1854, at the age of sixty-six. Their children were: Maria, d., m. to John Churchill, d.; Ann Eliza, m. to William Armstrong; J. C., m. to Anna Wheeler; W. T., m. first to Sarah F. Hazlett, d., and second to Harriet J. Armstrong; Margaret, d.; Samuel, d.; James, m. to Mary Duncan; Jane, m. to John Irwin; Sarah, m. to Rev. J. P. King, Methodist Protestant; Greenwood, d., m. to Harriet Hazlett, d. James was a soldier in the war of 1861, in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, and is now serving in his third term as justice of the peace. Our subject's children were: Elizabeth Ann, m. to J. A. McAnulty; John C., d.; Laura J., m. to Cyrus P. Rank; William Ambrose, d.; Ida May, Olive Harriet, Lelia Pearl, and Mary Winona.

SAMUEL RANK was born in Union county, October 18th, 1802. He was a carpenter and cabinet maker by trade. He came to Lycoming county, Pa., where he married Marion Keports, of Swiss descent, April 20th, 1826. During the same year, they came to Indiana county, and settled where Cherry Tree village is now located. He erected a hewed log house in which they lived, and which was also used for a cabinet and carpenter shop, as well as sometimes for church purposes. They were members of the Methodist church, and he filled the capacity of local minister. He being the only mechanic of that kind in the neighborhood, did all the undertaking and cabinet making for several miles around. Politically, he was reared a Democrat, but at the time the Abolition party was raging he connected himself with them, and was at that time the only one in the vicinity of what is now Cherry Tree village. They lived in their hewed log house at the Cherry Tree, until in 1839, when he purchased and moved on the farm now owned by his son C. P. Rank, located in Cooper's district, Montgomery township, where he remained until his death at the age of sixty-seven years. Their union resulted in nine children, viz: George, b. in the county, Oct. 16th, 1827, m. to Jane Clark, daughter of Virtue and Catharine Clark nee Grove; who settled on the farm where they are now living, and have four children. He served ten months in the war of 1861, in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers; Samuel K., d., b. December 15th, 1829, m. to Martha Palmer; Maria, d., b. January 27th, 1832, m. to Wilson Powell; Zenas, b. May 24th, 1834, m. to Bevlia Lovelace; Mary, b. June 23d, 1836, m. to Rev. Thomas Stephens; Elizabeth, b. June 18th, 1839, m. to Peter Church; Anna, b. March 30th, 1843, m. to Robert Lydick; Sarah T., b. January 20th, 1848; and Cyrus P., b. July 26th, 1850, m. to Laura J. Hazlett, daughter of William T. and Sarah F. Hazlett, November 25th, 1875. They settled on the old home farm where they are now living.

JOHN POWELL was born in Westmoreland county in 1795, and located in what is now Montgomery township in 1827. His wife, Martha McManus, died at the age of fifty-seven. She was a native of Ireland. Their children were: William, d.; James, d.; Wilson, m. first to Maria Rank, d., and second to Annie Marble; Robert, d.; Frank, m. to Mary Gardner; Henry, m. to Nancy Thompson; J. C., m. to Sarah Kinley; Martha, m. to James McMillen; Phebe, m. to John Lowman, and Amos, m. to Mary Ross. Frank was in the 106th Pennsylvania heavy artillery about nine months. J. C. was a soldier in the same war, (see sketch). Henry was a member of company D, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps for two years and was killed in Virginia. Amos was in company M, 2d Pennsylvania cavalry for three years; he was a prisoner for eight months at Andersonville.

THOMAS TRIMBLE was born in Westmoreland county, June 9, 1818, migrated to Indiana county in 1849, and located on land in the "Trimble district," Montgomery township, where he and family are now living. He married Mary A. Bastick, daughter of Phelix and Nancy Bastick, June 22, 1852. They have a family of ten children, six boys and four girls.

A. B. CLARK, a son of Virtue and Catharine Clark nee Grove, was born October 9, 1839, in York county, Pennsylvania. He was brought, in 1841, by his parents, to Indiana county; married in 1868 to Miss Larue Thompson, of Indiana, b June 8, 1843. Their children are three sons, all living. He has followed lumbering very extensively as his occupation, and is among the largest dealers in Montgomery township. For a few years he has employed part of his time in farming. In October, 1861, he enlisted in the 105th Pennsylvania volunteer infantry, and served until January 12, 1864.

JOHN CROSSMAN was born in Indiana county, January 26th, 1831. His father William Crossman, born in Indiana county, was married to Eve Hostler. Their children were: Catharine, John, and Mary. His wife died in 1835. In 1837, he went down the river with timber, and was not heard of again, and was supposed to have been murdered. Our subject was reared among strangers. He is a blacksmith by trade, and followed that as his vocation until 1868, when he moved on the farm where he is now living, and commenced farming as his occupation. He has also been engaged in the lumbering business to some extent. He has been married twice, first to Catharine Ream, June, 1853, d., and second to Lucie Tanner, in 1857. They have a family of three children, viz: Dora A., Ulysses S., and William G. He owns a good farm in Montgomery township, and is one among the leading farmers.

BENJAMIN C. FLECK, son of Conrad and Mary Fleck nee Crossman, was born in 1854, educated at the Purchase Line Academy, and follows farming and teaching as his vocation. He married Miss Anna B. Pollock, January 1st, 1880, and settled in Green township, near the Montgomery township line.

JOHN KERR was born in Indiana county, October 9th, 1838. He is a carpenter by trade and follows that as his vocation. He was married to Sarah T. McGarey, June 20th, 1863. They have nine children, four boys and five girls. In the spring of 1864, he enlisted in the 11th Pennsylvania cavalry, and served until the close of the war.

GEORGE C. GETTY, son of Matthew C. and Nancy Getty, was born in Chambersville, December 16th, 1849, and married Miss Mary S. Donahey, of Gettysburg, October 24th, 1871. They have a family of four children, two sons and two daughters. His occupation is farming.

John Armstrong.—In Lycoming county, in 1788, our subject was born. He married in 1817, Rachel Coens, born September 10th, 1798. They migrated to Montgomery township, Indiana county, in 1830, and located on the farm now owned by their son J. M. Armstrong. They reared a family of ten children, viz: William, b. April 25th 1818; George, d.; Sarah A., d., m. to Jas. W. McAnulty; John D., m. to Ann K. Gamble; Jas. S., d., m. to Mary H. Campbell; Isabella, d., m. to John Pollock, who died in the war of 1861; J. Martin, m. to Miss R. C. Hamilton; Mary P., m. to William Flennigan; Franklin, d., m. to Miss B. L. Sears; and Harriet J., m. to William T. Hazlett.

William Armstrong, son of John and Rachel Armstrong, was born in Lycoming county, April 25th, 1818. He came with his parents to Indiana county, in 1830. He married Miss Ann E. Hazlett, daughter of Samuel and Margaret Hazlett, October 26th, 1843. They settled on the farm where they are now living, in Montgomery township. Their union resulted in eleven children, six of whom are now living.

J. Martin Armstrong was born June 9th, 1831, on the farm where he is now living. He married Miss R. C. Hamilton, daughter of Robert and Mary Hamilton, in 1868. They settled on the old home farm. Their union resulted in two children, Lucy E., and Mary E. He has followed farming as his occupation.

John W. Clark, a son of Virtue and Catharine Clark nee Grove, was born in Indiana county, on the farm where he is now living, December 25th, 1845. He married Miss Ada S. Hoddleson, of York county, August 13th, 1867. They settled on the Clark homestead, and he has followed farming and lumbering as his vocation. They have three children living and one dead.

Phelix Bastick was born in Lancaster county, Pa., March 26, 1810. He married Miss Nancy Myers, of the same county, November 3, 1829. He, with his family, moved to Indiana county, Pa., and settled on land now owned by his son, Jacob Bastick, who located in Gettysburg district, Montgomery township, in 1850, where he remained and followed farming as his vocation for several years. Then he retired from business, and now lives on a part of the same farm, a quiet life. They reared a family of seven children, viz: Jacob, Eliza, Mary A., Maria, Lavina, Benjamin F., d.; and Samuel.

Jacob Bastick, son of Phelix Bastick, was born June 21, 1830, in Lancaster county, Pa. He is a miller by trade, and followed that as his vocation until, in 1849, he came to Indiana county. He purchased the farm on which he is now living for his father, and has since followed farming as his occupation. At this writing he owns the home farm. He married Miss Charlotte Notley, daughter of John and Elizabeth Notley nee Flennigan, December 21, 1858. Their union resulted in ten children, viz: Elizabeth, m. to Andrew Murphy; Nannie, Lovina, Benjamin Franklin, Emma, Mary, Charlotte, Minnie, Gertrude, and Edward. He has filled the office of assessor three terms, and collector two terms. He is considered one among our most industrious and well-to-do farmers.

Jonathan F. Bowder son of Jonathan Bowder, d., was born July 2, 1832, in Lancaster county, Pa. He is a shoemaker by trade. He was married to Catharine Hofford, of same county, in 1856. They moved to Indiana county in 1861, and settled in Montgomery township, where they are now living. They have a family of eight children.

James W. Harlett.—In Indiana county, Pennsylvania, Montgomery township, April 15th, 1830, our subject was born. He married Miss Mary Duncan, daughter of Joseph and Catharine Duncan, in July, 1852. They reared a family of eight children, viz: Sarah K., m. to William Tonkin; John H., m. to Miss H. F. Armstrong; Annie M., m. to I. C. Rank; Joseph I.; Maggie J.; George E.; Zelba B.; and Hattie B., d. He has followed farming and lumbering as his vocation. He enlisted in company A, 206th Pennsylvania regiment, in 1864, and served until the close of the war. He has filled the office of justice of the peace for three terms, the last term expiring in 1881.

William Barbor was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., September 12, 1827. His father, John Barbor was born in Ireland, and was married to Eliza J. Barbor, of Ireland. They migrated to America in 1804, remained east of the mountains until about 1845. They came to Indiana county, Pa., and located in what is now Green township, where they remained until his decease. They reared a family of nine children, viz: Sarah, Robert, Catharine, d.; Martha, John, James, Eliza A., William and Ezekiel H. Our subject was married to Miss Elizabeth Lee, of Clearfield county, Pa., in 1849. They settled in Clearfield county, where they lived until in 1854, they moved on the farm where they are now residing, located in Montgomery township, Indiana county. He is the father of nine children, four of whom are living. He has followed farming and lumbering as his occupation. In 1864 he enlisted in company C, 206th Pennsylvania regiment, and served until the close of the war.

John Notley was born in Ireland, February 14, 1789. He married, in 1812, Elizabeth Flinegan, born in Ireland in 1792. He, with his wife and eight children, migrated to America in 1829. Sailing from Dublin May 24th, they reached Quebec after a toilsome voyage of ten weeks in a sail vessel. They remained a few days in Canada, then continued their journey to Buffalo, New York, traveling by water as far as possible. Then they journeyed by wagons by way of Franklin, Venango county, Pa., until they reached his old friend, George Atchison, who lived in Burnside township, Clearfield county, Pa., about one mile up the river from Burnside village. Here he and his family remained a short time, and then he purchased and moved on the farm now owned by his son, John T. Notley, in Montgomery township, Indiana county. There were a few acres cleared on the land, and a small cabin built, in which he moved his family and lived until a larger and more comfortable hewed log house could be erected. In the latter he spent the remainder of his days. They reared a family of ten children, eight of whom were born in Ireland, viz: William, d.; Mary; Robert; Eliza; James, d.; Ellen, d.; Franklin, d.; and John F. Two were born in America, Jane and Charlotte. He followed farming and lumbering as his vocation. He deceased February 14, 1862. His companion survived him until November 1, 1877.

Virtue Clark was born in Connecticut, May 17th, 1799. In 1821, he migrated to York county, Pa., where he married in 1827, Catharine Grove, born in York county, March 5th, 1807. They settled in York county, nine miles from Harrisburg, near Lewisburg. By trade he was a silversmith and followed that as his principal vocation. In 1842, they migrated to Indiana county, purchased and settled on farm now owned by their son John W. Clark, in Montgomery township. At that time the land there was but little improved. A small piece was cleared and a log cabin erected. In this they lived several years, when he erected the present frame dwelling, in which he spent the remainder of his life. After his settlement in the woods he engaged in clearing, lumbering and farming to some extent. His companion is still surviving him and living on the home farm. Their union resulted in eleven children, viz: Samuel, b. March 30th, 1828; Jane, b. August 9th, 1829; James, d., b. October 20th, 1830; Hannah, d., b. January 13th, 1833; Susan, b. June 13th, 1834; Sylvester, d., b. December 19th, 1835; Luther M., b. July 1st, 1837; Alpheus B., b. October 9th, 1839; Mary C., b. May 5th, 1842; John W., b. December 25th, 1845; and George W., d., b. March 31st, 1848.

Simon Conner was born in 1804, in Hopewell township, Bedford county, and accompanied, in 1817, his parents, John and Mary Conner nee Steele, to Green township, Indiana county. The latter died at the age of one hundred and five years, six months and five days, leaving an issue of children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren, five hundred and seventy-eight in number. She had her second eyesight. Our subject's children were: Levi, d., m. to Mary Ann Chambers; Sarah J., d., m. to Lawrence Irvin; Elizabeth, d., m. to William Carnathan; Robert, m. to Eliza Walker; Mary, m. first to Henry S. Girts, d., and second to Samuel Huey; Harrison, m. to Anna Mauk; Isaiah, d.; James, d.; Peter, m. to Anna Wassam; Nancy, m. to Robert Johnston; and Anna, m. to Wm. Wright. Robert, William, Harrison and Peter were soldiers in the war of 1861. Robert was wounded and a prisoner for a few months. William was in the service for two years and nine months, as a member of company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps; was a prisoner for six weeks, and was killed at the second battle of Fredericksburg. Harrison was in the same company for two years; he was wounded at the battles of the "Pines" and the "Wilderness" and was a prisoner for three weeks. Peter was in the service for eleven months. Our subject speaks of "coming to town in 1817 and later (his only garment being a tow shirt, and having neither a hat nor shoes), bringing five to eight pounds of butter, and exchanging it at five cents per pound for tobacco and coffee." His first hat was purchased on the occasion of his marriage. He has a tomahawk picked up at the "Kittanning trail." Philip Kurns ploughed up on the Abner Coffin farm, an old sword, of unique manufacture.

WILLIAM B. SHEFFAR.—Our subject is a son of Wm. Sheffar, who married Margaret Walter, and came from Westmoreland county to Washington township, this county, in 1840. This aged pair, each 71 years old, (1880) now live in Tennessee. Their son, our subject, is married to Isabella Irwin, and settled in Montgomery township, on the Samuel Irwin homestead. Their children are: Amanda Pearl, Hutoca Oneida, William W. I., Anna E., and Afton Bret.

CANOE TOWNSHIP

Was formed from Montgomery township, in 1847, the date of the survey being July 3d of that year. It received its name from the creek which was called the Canoe, from the fact that its mouth on the Mahoning was generally the head of canoe navigation.

The first settlers were: Daniel Brewer and his sons, the Clawsons, the Hendricks (or Hendrixes), George Saltsgiver, the States, John White, the Bradys, Leasures, and others.

In 1827, when Adam D. Tigers arrived, his neighbors were: John North; John White; James Black, on the Mrs. Porter Black property; Daniel Brewer, on the George S. Hennigh farm; Egman, on the William Martin property; John Brady, on the Tobias Braughler place; and the Hendricks, on the George Smith tract.

The first school was taught by subscription in the White neighborhood, as early as 1820 or 1821. The name of the first teacher is unknown, but the building is remembered as a very rude round log cabin.

The stories of the past, in regard to hunting, indicate the forests as inhabited by multitudes of bears, deer, wolves, etc. Old men speak of Henry Brewer's killing eleven bears in a single afternoon, within a mile of the residence of C. R. White.

RICHMOND, ROCHESTER MILLS P. O.

The first settlers on the site of the village were, David Simpson and John Tozier, who owned the land which included the village. A hemlock tree stands near the bridge and marks the boundary line between the two tracts. The village is situated in Canoe and Grant townships. The first lot was sold by David Simpson to Isaac Bell. Mr. Simpson disposed of the second lot to Daniel Bell. The first house was erected by David Simpson for a dwelling. The second building was the mill of David Simpson. The place was known as Simpson's Mill till 1862, when it was called Richmond, on account of the excitement of the war against the "Confederate Richmond."

The postoffice of Rochester Mills was established in 1867. J. C. Rochester has since been the postmaster. The first merchant was J. C. Rochester, 1866, succeeded in 1869, by Duffie and Rochester.

ROBERTSVILLE

derives its name from Robert Roberts, who was the proprietor of three thousand acres of land in the vicinity. He erected a saw mill and endeavored to found a village, which to-day numbers a single house.

In 1841, there were two dwellings, a cabin and a two-story frame house of eight rooms. In the latter building there resided in that year, for a time, Ezra Horton and wife; John Williams and wife Mary, who died in her one hundredth year, in 1879; Thomas Smith and wife Mary; James Graham and wife Eliza; James Herbison and Nancy; Samuel Becket, his mother, Sarah, and his sister, Sarah; George Mitchell and wife; Thomas Bishop, wife and four children; William Bishop, and William Wingam. These were generally Irish and English emigrants, who had come to these wilds to seek a fortune. One was a London tailor, another a city painter, another a city shoemaker, etc. They soon were disgusted with frontier life and returned to the eastern cities.

LOCUST LANE

is located on a tract of land purchased by William G. Lewis, who erected his residence in 1860, and commenced merchandising in 1863. In the latter year the postoffice of Locust Lane was established with Mr. Lewis as postmaster. He has since been in charge of the office. The second merchant was Henry Miller. The blacksmiths have been Daniel Bee, Philip Palmer, George A. Gamble and Dennis Gamble.

The steam sawmill commenced operations in the fall of 1872. It has a circular saw and a twenty horse power engine, and can produce (8000) eight thousand feet of lumber per day.

CHARLES R. WHITE was born in Newcastle county, Delaware, in 1815, and was a son of John and Keziah White nee Vandever. The former was born in France in 1773, and served fourteen years in the navy of Napoleon I, being a prisoner of war over four years. He was once shipwrecked off the coast of Virginia, and swam to the shore of Norfolk, a distance of four miles. In company with John North, he migrated from Delaware to Indiana county, locating in what is now North Mahoning township in 1818. Mr. White's location was on the farm now occupied by Anderson White, North Mahoning township, where he died in 1856, at the age of seventy-two; his wife died in 1870, at the age of seventy-nine. The children were: Mary J., d., m. to George Smith; Charles R., m. to Rachel Thompson; Isaac, m. to Rebecca Gaston; John, m. two times, first to Mary Henry, d.; James M., m. first to Isabella McConaughey, d., second to Hannah McConaughey, d, and third to Mary Lydick; Isaiah, d., m. to Martha Simpson. John was in the war of 1861, and lost an arm at Pittsburg Landing. Chas. R.'s children were: Thomas T., d.; Isaac A., m. to Eliza Simpson; Hannah Maria, m. to David Wilyard; William H., m. to Sarah Borts; Margaret E., m. to Taylor Simpson; Keziah Ann, m. to David Brown; Joseph M., m. to Phebe Ellis; Chas. Russell, m. to Catharine Like; Hiram, m.; Eli; and Rachel J., m. to D. C. Smith; William H. was in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. The children of Isaac A., (a son of Charles R. White,) were: Della Ann; Rachel Ellen; Austin S.; Sophy Emma, d.; Edwin Taylor, and Eli Clay. Our subject has resided on his homesterd since 1837. He has served as justice of the peace two terms, and in nearly all the township positions.

ADAM STATES was born July 4, 1802, near the site of Lockport, Westmoreland county, and was a son of Samuel and Nancy States nee McFaran. The latter was a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth McFaran. Samuel States was a son of Matthias and Jane States, who settled near the site of Lockport in 1790. Samuel came to what is now the Agnes Braughler farm, Canoe township, in 1808, and two years later removed to Jefferson county, locating about two miles below Punxsutawney, upon a tract known as the Hughes farm. Here he manufactured pottery ware for several years. Our subject was married in 1823 to Susannah Rishel, born in 1807, in Centre county. Their children were: Fancy, m. to Jesse Pierce; Eliza, d.; Catharine Elizabeth, m. to William Henry; Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Hugus; Mary, d.; Sarah, m. to George Painter; David, m. to Mary Rishel; Emanuel, d.; John C., m. to Barbara Ann Borts; Andrew Jackson, m. to Sarah Bell Mauk; and Aaron, m. to Maria Ann Seger. Andrew Jackson's children were: Mary Lavinia and Adam Edgar. Aaron's children were: Katurah, Adam, Samuel and John. Our subject removed from Jefferson county to the William Martin farm, Canoe township, in 1830, and in 1843 to his present homestead. This was was known as Holland Land.

ADAM D. TIGER was born in Twixberry township, Huntingdon county, New Jersey, in 1803, and was a son of Abraham and Anna Tiger nee Teates. The father of the latter was of Holland descent. Our subject's parents were natives of the aforenamed township. Jacob, the father of Abraham Tiger, was of German descent, and a Revolutionary soldier. Abraham was a soldier in the war of 1812. He and his wife died over seventy-seven years of age. Our subject was married in 1824, to Mary Philower, daughter of John Philower, of Huntingdon county. She died on the 6th of May, 1879, at the age of seventy-five. Their children were: Abraham, m. to Sarah Griffith; Rachel, m. to Simon Henry; Isaac, m. to Keziah Smith; Mary, d., m. to George Taylor; Elizabeth, m. to John W. Snyder; Jacob, b. in 1835, m. to Ann Smith; John P., m. to Martha Wilyard; Susannah, m. to William H. Smith; and Eve Ann, m. to John A. White. The children of our subject were: Clark W., m. to Anna Hawk; Mary Jane, Charles H., and Clarence E. Clark W.'s only child is Maybry E. On the 3d of May, 1827, Adam D. Tiger, in company with Peter Philower, located in the wilderness on the tract now occupied by himself. It then required four and a half days to raise a small round log barn, the settlers being few and distant several miles. The saw mill on the Abraham Tiger farm was erected by our subject about 1843. It has a capacity of 1,000 to 1,500 feet of boards per day. It formerly used a sash, and now has a muley saw. The first settler on the Jacob Tiger farm was Jacob Foster, about 1832. The former located upon the tract in 1857. The Adam D. Tiger homestead was Holland land, and was among the first improved tracts. Our subject served as justice of the peace for five years, constable six years, and school director and treasurer twenty-two years.

William H. Shields was born in 1836, on the farm lately owned by Henry Slemmer, Canoe township, and was a son of George D. and Sarah Shields nee Braughler. The former was a brother of William Shields, of North Mahoning township, of whom see sketch. George D. Shield's children were: James G., m. to Jemima Hoover; Robert, m. to Mary Ann Snyder; Margaret; Adam, m. to Hannah Wilyard; William H., m. to Sara Martin; Sarah Ann, m. to David Flemming; Hannah Jane, m. to Isaac Woods; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Calderwood, and Eveline, m. to Cyrus Woods. Adam was a soldier in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: Silas Clark, Geo. McClellan, Margaret E., William M., Adam M., Anna Mary, Linus L., David B., and Joseph Russsll. The Wm. H. Shields saw and shingle mill uses an eighty-horse power engine. It is seven miles from Punxsutawney, two from Smithport, six from Covode, seven from Marchand, and twenty-seven miles from Indiana.

George Smith was born in 1805, in Hempfield township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of Jacob and Barbara Smith nee Ludwig. They, with their family, in 1837, located on the Rev. David Barclay or the McHenry farm, in what is now North Mahoning township. In 1832, they removed to Paradise, Jefferson county. Jacob Smith died in 1870, about ninety-six years of age. Our subject was married in 1832, to Mary J. Smith, who died in 1864, at the age of sixty-two. His second wife was Margaret Frampton. His children were: Keziah, m. to Isaac Tiger; John, d.; Barbara Ann, m. to Jacob Tiger; William H., m. to Susan Ann Tiger; Charles W., d., m. to Lavinia McCullough; Jacob, m. to Margaret Beck; Maria, m. to Samuel Cochran; James, m. to Eveline Smith, daughter of Stephen B. Smith; Rachel, m. to Andrew Bishop; Elizabeth, d.; and Clara J., m. to Sarah Tiger. Charles W., served in the war of 1861. James' children were: Gerge Burns, d.; Amanda Bell, d.; Barbara Ann, d.; James Clark, d.; Keziah Estella; and Ellen Celesta. Clark I.'s children were: Bertha Cordilla, and Margaret Pearl. Our subject settled on present homestead in 1832. The nearest neighbor was distant two miles. A small cabin and a limited clearing had been previously made by a settler or settlers named Hendricks. The land was known as a Holland tract, and was purchased for two dollars and a quarter per acre. Subsequently, he bought considerable land for seventy-five cents to one dollar and a half per acre. He erected his first saw mill in 1830. This was destroyed by fire, and its successor was crushed by the snow. The present mill uses a Roundy metal wheel, and can saw from one thousand to fifteen hundred feet per day.

William Ellwood was born in 1810, near Murraysville, Westmoreland county, and was a son of William and Jane Elwood nee McGranahan. The former was a native of eastern Pennsylvania, and a son of William and Jane Elwood nee Stoop. The former was a native of Ireland, and a Revolutionary soldier, who migrated to Westmoreland county, when his son William was only a babe. Our subject's parents with their children, came to the present Hannah Elwood farm, in 1836. Both parents died at the age of seventy-four. Their children were: William, m. to Barbara Burket; James, d., and Esther twins, the latter being married to Robert Stoops; Jane, d., m. to John Long; Eliza, m. to George Cary; Thomas, d.; and Hannah. Our subject's children were; James, d.; Eliza, m. to John Irwin; Christian, d.; Caroline; Sarah, m. to Lewis Gourley; Hannah; Mary; Emma, m. to Thompson Meneely; and William. He came to his present home in 1838. The farm was a portion of the Latimer lands, noted in the Wilyard sketch.

George Piper was born in 1809, in Donegal township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of Peter and Mary C. Piper nee Karns. He was married in Somerset county, in 1832, to Margaret Howard, born in Somerset county, in 1810. They located upon their present farm, in 1840. Their children were: Elizabeth, m. to John Steffy; Catharine, d.; Allen, d.; Jonathan, d.; Sarah; David, m. to Rebecca Riddle; Harriet; and Ellen.

William Martin was born in Verseilles township, Allegheny county, in 1804, and was a son of Hugh and Jane Martin nee Campbell, who were natives of Ireland. They migrated in 1799, to York count, removing subsequently to Allegheny and Westmoreland counties. In 1834, the family located on the present George McGregor, North Mahoning township, and in 1838, to the land in Canoe township, late the property of our subject, and now occupied by his heirs. Hugh Martin died in 1852, eighty-five years old, and his wife in 1813, at the age of eighty-two. Our subject is yet living. His wife was Francis Sparr, who died in 1874, at the age of sixty-three. Their children were: Abraham S., b. in 1831, m. to Mary Shaffer; Mary, m. to James Lyons; Jane, m. to Adam King; Sarah Ann, m. to William Shields; Harriet, m. to George Schlemmer; Frances, m. to Henry Schlemmer; Margaret, m. to Adam Henry; Angeline, m. to Adam Tiger; Elizabeth, d.; William, d.; and Margaret, d. Abraham S., was first sergeant in company E, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry for three years, and was wounded at Kelly's Ford. He subsequently attended the free military school of Philadelphia, and after a competitive examination at West Point Military Academy, received a commission as second lieutenant of company H, first U. S. Infantry, serving for six months. Abraham S.'s children were: Frances; Angeline; Laura; Harriet, d.; and Eveline.

George Hess was born near Chambersburg, Franklin county, in 1834, and was a son of George and Elizabeth Hess nee Graff, who were natives of Hesse Darmstadt, Germany. They removed to Franklin county about 1832, and in 1842, to the farm now occupied by our subject. The former died in 1878, at the age of eighty-four, and the latter in 1872, at the age of seventy-six. Their children were: John, m. to Margaret Miller; Henry, m. to Mary Eiler; George, m. to Mary Hefflick; and Eliza, m. to John Zener. Our subject's children were: Mary Elizabeth, Gorge Franklin, Hannah Jane, Sarah Isabella, d.; Ulysses G., Anna M., John W., and Ruth Emma, d., twins; Samuel M., Harry B., d., and Harvey C., twins. George Hess, sr., was the first settler on the farm occupied by his son George.

John Emerick was born in 1815, in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, and was a son of John and Eve Emerick nee Graff, who came to Franklin county in 1832. In 1840, they located on the present farm of our subject. The former died in 1878, at the age of ninety-four, and the latter in 1874, at the age of eighty-five. Their children were: John, m. to Barbara Wortman; Henry, m. to Mary Hoover; Elizabeth, m. to John Hefflick; and Mary, m. to Michael Winsheimer. Our subject's children were: John J., m. to Margaret Lowry; Mary, m. to James Calkitt; Margaret, d.; Elizabeth, d.; William, d.; George, and Harvey. John Emerick, sr., made the first improvement on this farm.

James T. Gaston was born in 1819, on the present William Bush land, North Mahoning township, and was a son of Stephen and Fannie Gaston nee Thompson. The latter was a native of Ireland. The former was a native of New Jersey, and came to the county an unmarried man. He paid for the land now occupied by his son, James T. Gaston, by carrying the chain for William P. Brady, the surveyor for the Holland Land Company. He died at the age of fifty-four, and his wife at eighty-six years of age. Their children were: Lydia, m. to Adam George; Nancy, m. to Lorenzo Whipple; Sarah, m. to a McGaughey, d.; Ellen, m. to John Rupert; James T., m. first to Elizabeth Henry, d., and second to Kate Borts; Mary, m. to Annanias Morrison; John, m. first to Selinda Kaufman, d., and second to unknown; Maria, m. to William Williams; and Jane, m. to John Oaks, d. Our subject's children were: John, d.; William, m. to Harriet Snyder; Lewis D., m. to Susan Gearhart; Charles; Clark; Anna J., d.; Mary Elizabeth; Harry; Morrison; Ellie; George; Horace; John; Ida, and Irvin. Jas. T. Gaston made the first improvement upon his farm in 1834.

He has resided upon it since 1854. The children of Lewis D. Gaston were: Lily Olive; James T., d.; Keziah; Effie, and Bessie. The Lewis D. Gaston coal bank was opened in the fall of 1878. The vein is five and a half feet thick, and is self-draining. With one car in twenty-four hours, about twelve hundred bushels can be placed in the sheds. This bank is situated on the north foot of the Little Mahoning, about three miles from Covode, and eight from Punxsutawney. The price of coal at the pit is four cents per bushel.

DAVID WILYARD was born in 1801, in Hempfield township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of Frederick and Elizabeth Wilyard nee Shull. The former was born in Westmoreland county, and the latter in eastern Pennsylvania. Frederick was a son of Frederick and Nancy Wilyard. The latter was a native of Germany. The former was born in eastern Pennsylvania, and served in the Revolutionary war for over seven years. He was among the pioneers of Westmoreland county. He died over eighty-eight years old. His wife died also at an advanced age. Their son Frederick was over eighty at time of death, and his wife had nearly reached her one hundred and first year at her demise. Frederick and Elizabeth Wilyard's children were: Daniel, d., m. to Jane Rudolph, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Abraham Rudolph, d.; John; David, m. to Sarah Tawney, daughter of Adam Tawney; Jacob, m. to Sarah Arwin; Catharine, d., m. to James Carson, d.; Joseph, d., m. first to Eve Shoup, d., and second to Martha Hum; Esther; Henry, d.; Isaac, married first to Elizabeth Borts, deceased, and second to Martha Hum, and Mary, married to Joseph Miller, deceased. David Wilyard's children were: Elizabeth, d.; Jacob, d., m. to Elizabeth Hum; John, d.; Joieph, d.; David, m. to Hannah White; Esther, d.; Mary, d.; Frederick, d.; Hannah, m. to Adam Shield; Sarah, d.; and Isaac, d. Our subject located on the present farm, May 6th, 1838. He had made a small clearing in the previous year, and made preparation for his settlement. The tract was called "Latimer" land, a Mr. Latimer being the proprietor of a large extent of territory.

WILLIAM G. LEWIS was born on the Lewis homestead, Rayne township, in 1827, and was a son of Samuel and Mary Lewis nee Graham, of whom see sketch. Our subject's wife was Margaret Davis. Their children were: Lydia, d.; Lois Dorcas, d.; Samuel T.; Linus Medan; Alexander Brown; Mary Kate; Lyra May; Iddo and Ida twins. Our subject has been merchandising in Locust Lane, since 1863. He is serving his third term as justice of the peace.

LAWRENCE MCQUOWN was born in Derry township, Westmoreland county, in 1817, and was a son of Lawrence and Mary McQuown nee Chambers. The latter was a second wife; she died in 1872, at the age of eighty-four. The former was the son of David McQuown, a native of Ireland, who located at an early date in Westmoreland county. His wife was a Miss Harris, daughter of John Harris, of Harrisburg. Lawrence was born in that county and served in the war of 1812. He removed to the farm now occupied by Hugh Lightcap in 1827, and died in 1830 at the age of fifty-three. His children were: Nancy, m. to William Fox; David, m. to Isabella Borland, d.; Jane, d., m. to Robert Daugherty; John, d., m. to Hannah Walls, d.; James, d., m. to Jane McQuown; Ellen, m. to Alexander Downey; Lawrence, m. to Susannah J. Robinson, Thomas, m. to Ann M. Robinson; Margaret, m. to John Elder; William, m. to Margaret Shields; Mary, m. to William Black; Eliza, m. to James Bash, d.; and Samuel, d., m. to Keziah Snyder. James was in the 105th Pennsylvania volunteers. Our subject's children were: Mary E., m. to Robert Law; Thomas, d.; Martha, m. to Darius Blose; James, m.; Clara, d.; George, d.; and Priscilla. James served for six months in the war of 1861. Mr. McQuown came to Young township, Jefferson county, in 1835, and to his present homestead in 1864.

JOSEPH CARY was born in France, in 1822, and was a son of John B. and Mary M. Cary nee Johnson. The former was a soldier in the French army for fourteen years. In 1827, the family removed to the vicinity of Hanover, Ohio, and in 1832, located on the present George Cary farm, Canoe township. John B. Cary died at the age of seventy, and his wife in 1877, ninety-one years. Their children were: Mary, m. to John Seeder; George, m. to Elizabeth Elwood; Francis, d. in Ohio; Margaret, m. to Allen Stoops; Catharine, d., m. to George Long; John and Joseph, twins, the former m. to Sarah Bell, and the latter m. to Eliza Braughler. Joseph was in company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. He was a millwright by trade, and has erected fifteen grist and saw mills, and rebuilt or repaired thirty. His children were: Ann, Henry, Silas, George, Clarissa, d.; Sarah Ellen, d.; Martha, and Margaret, d.

SIMON SHEESLEY was born near "Blankett Hill," Armstrong county, in 1835, and was a son of John and Mary Sheesley nee Slogenhop. The former was a native of Dauphen county, and the latter of Maryland. John Sheesley's father was a soldier in the Revolution and the war of 1812. In 1825, the family removed to Armstrong county, and in 1844, to what is now Winslow township, Jefferson county. John Sheesley died in 1859, at the age of sixty-four, and his wife in 1848, forty-eight years old. Their children were: David, m. to Sarah Hull; James, d.; Joseph, m. first to Mary Hull, d., and second to Jane Hawk; Mary, d., m. to William Deemer; Catharine, m. to Gordon Harris; Simon, m. to Lydia A. Deemer; Andrew Jackson, m. to Sarah Wachob; John, d.; and Sarah Ann, m. first to Henry Millard, d., and second to Clinton Johnston. David served in the war of 1861. John died while a member of the 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps. He was a prisoner and died a few minutes after his exchange. Simon's only child is Mary Magdalena, m. to John C. Deemer. Our subject is a blacksmith by trade, and has labored in Jefferson county fourteen years, Westmoreland county seven years, and Tennessee one and a half years. He located in Locust Lane, in May, 1880.

MATTHIAS SMITH was born in Prussia, in 1819, and was a son of Casper and Catharine Smith nee Gompers. The former was a soldier in the European wars for seven years. In 1835, the family removed to Westmoreland county, and in 1842, to the present John G. Smith farm, Banks township. Casper Smith died in 1852, at the age of sixty-eight, and his wife in 1866, seventy-two years old. Their children were: Matthias, m. first to Maria Ann Hefflick, d. in 1854, twenty-nine years old, and second to Maria Compton, d. April 4th, 1880, fifty-four years old; John, m. to Margaret Wenshammer; Nicholas, d.; Peter; Catharine, d.; George, d.; Henry; Jacob, m. to Mary Brown; and Margaret, m. to Altman Compton. Our subject's children were: Mary, m. to Fred. Fuller; Catharine, d.; Sarah, m. to William Phillips; Frank, m. to Ellen Barto; Eliza, d.; and Emily, d. Our subject came to what is now Canoe township, in 1849, and located on his present farm in 1865.

ROBERT LOWRY was born in 1826, on the present Daniel Lowry farm, Young township, and was a son of Daniel Lowry, of whom see sketch in said township. He was married in 1855, to Mary A. Black, daughter of William Black, of North Mahoning township. Their only child is Harvey. Our subject served in company G, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, for about one year. He located on his present farm in 1853, it being a portion of what were called "Brodhead lands."

ABRAHAM STIVER was born in 1832, in Sewickley township, Beaver county, and was a son of Jacob F. and Julia Ann Stiver nee Shoemaker, natives of Germany. They migrated to America in 1815—to Beaver county in 1830, and to present Jacob Stiver farm, Canoe township, in 1838. Jacob F. was a soldier in some of the European wars. He died in 1858, at the age of seventy-four, and his wife in 1850, fifty-two years old. Their children were: Jacob, m. to Lena Peffer; Gottlieb, m. first to Caroline Wineburg, d., and second to Mary Dunmire; William, d.; Frederick, d.; John, m. first to Martha Saltsgiver, d., and second to Mrs. Louise Stiver nee Hawk; Henry, d., m. to Louise Hawk; Mary, d., m. to William Winebarg; Abraham, m. to Catharine Winebarg; Elizabeth, m. to Robert McFarland, d.; Daniel, m. to Elizabeth Pifer; Christina, m. to John Barthalomew; and David, m. to Elizabeth Bradenbaugh. John was a member of the 105th Pennsylvania volunteers for four years. He was a prisoner for some time at Andersonville. Abraham was in company A, 107th Pennsylvania volunteers for two years and two months. Gottlieb, Daniel, and David were in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers for about one year. Abraham's children were: William B., m. to Catharine Pifer; John H., m. to Lizzie Hefflick; Sarah C., m. to John Winebarg; Abraham; Martin Franklin; David McClellan; Daniel; Mary Elizabeth; Nettie Ann; Silas Clark; and Rachel Ann. The Abraham Stiver farm was Holland land, and of late years, was known as the John Mitchell property.

ANDREW CALDERWOOD was born in 1799, in county Tyrone, Ireland, and was a son of Robert and Elizabeth Calderwood nee Flood. The former was eighty, and the latter over ninety years old at date of death. Andrew Calderwood was married in 1832 to Mary Milligan, daughter of Samuel Milligan. In 1848 they migrated to America, locating in July of that year, on the present Thomas Barkely farm, North Mahoning township. In 1852 he removed to his present farm, where he made the first improvement. The farm was a portion of the Bradford tract. His children were: Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Shield; Elizabeth; Robert; William, m. to Martha Work, and John. Samuel's children were: William Milligan; Jane Isabella, d.; Robert Simeon, Mary, Hannah Ella, Walter Scott, Geo. Linus, and Harry Edwin.

David B. Work was born in 1832, on the present William Work farm, and was a son of William and Nancy Work nee Brown. (See the Work article, East Mahoning township). Our subject was married first in 1854, to Sarah E. Colkitt, daughter of John Colkitt, who died in 1867, about thirty-four years of age, and second in 1868, to Frances Colkitt, a daughter of John Colkitt. His children were: Ida M., Charles C., Silas Clark, Mary A., Floretta, and Edgar. He located on his present farm in 1856. It was "Gilpin" land, and was first improved by John Pollock.

Philip W. Filler was born in Huntingdon county, now Blair county, in 1832, and was a son of Solomon and Sarah Filler nee Weaver, who died when Philip was a young lad. In 1844, in company with Peter Weaver, he came to Indiana county. In 1854, he was married to Elizabeth Kuntsman, of Indiana county. Their children were: John H., m. to Cynthia Fails; Robert Clarence; Mary Catharine, m. to James Davis; Sarah Bell, James Irwin and Samuel Mauck, triplets, born December 25, 1867; and Lavinia Elizabeth. Our subject was elected justice of the peace for Canoe township in March, 1880, to serve for five years.

Rev. Crisman John was born in Washington township, Armstrong county, in 1842, and was a son of Martin and Mary John nee Crisman. The former was a son of Martin John, whose wife was a Miss Bowser, who settled in what is now the township above named in 1800. Our subject's father was born in 1797, in Huntingdon county, and died in the township aforementioned in 1856; his wife died in 1870, at the age of seventy-two. Their children were: Jacob, d.; Christina, d.; Esther, m. to David Hawk, d.; Ann, m. first to Jacob Crisman, d., and second to Thomas Craig; Michael, m. to Nancy McCollum; Elizabeth, m. to Christopher Wyant; Catharine, d., m. to John Donnell; and Crisman, m. to Jane Mitchell, daughter of Robert Mitchell. Our subject's children were: Robert Martin, Margaret J., David A., Mary A., Mark, and Enos. He located in Banks township in 1873, on the farm now owned by him, and in 1878, removed to his present home, formerly Robert Mitchell's property. He is one of the ministers in the German Baptist church.

John Henry was born near Apollo, Armstrong county, in 1801, and was a son of John and Susannah Henry nee Young. The latter was born in Westmoreland county, and the former was a native of Germany, who settled in what is now Armstrong county, about 1795; he died in 1819, at the age of sixty. His widow died at the age of eighty-four. Our subject's first wife was Eve Dunmire, who died in 1848, about fifty years old; his second wife was Mary Miller, living at the age of sixty-five. His children were: Simon, m. to Rachel Tiger; George, m. to Mary King; Elizabeth, d., m. to James T. Gaston; Mary Ann, d., m. to John White; William, m. to Elizabeth States; John, killed in the army during the war of 1861, while a member of an Iowa regiment; Abraham; Frances, m. to John Rooney; Nathaniel, and Magdalena. Simon Henry's children were: Adam, m. to Margaret Martin; Eve, m. to Philip Domb; Mary, m. to George Hugus; Elizabeth, m. to William Ruffner; Susan, Rachel, John, Simon, and Abraham. The children of Adam Henry (a son of Simon Henry) were: Emma, William and Jennie. Our subject located on the farm now occupied by Simon Henry, in 1844; he removed to his present home in 1869.

David C. Leasure was born in 1837, on the farm now occupied by him in Canoe township, and was a son of Solomon and Mary Leasure nee Kirkpatrick. The former died in 1855, at the age of sixty; the latter was born in 1808, and is now living. (See Leasure notes, East Mahoning township). Solomon Leasure's children were: Agnes, d., m. to Daniel Braughler, d.; John, m. to Mary Smith; Jane, m. to Adam Braughler; David C., m. to Eveline Hasting; and Mary, m. to Archibald Barkley. David C. was in company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. His children were: Luella Maggie, and Quinn Reuben, d. The Leasure homestead was a part of the Bradford lands. A wolf trail, much frequented, extended through this tract.

Robert Mitchell was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, in 1802, and was a son of David and Martha Mitchell nee Briers. In 1812, the family located in Hempfield township, Westmoreland county. The former died over seventy years of age, and the latter over ninety-three. Their children were: Robert, m. to Jeannet Brisbin, d. in 1874, sixty-nine years old; John; James, m. to a Miss Henry; Jane, d.; Martha; and Margaret, m. to Robert Wilson. Our subject came to what is now the present Francis Winebarg farm, Canoe township, in 1850, and in 1858 to the present Crisman John property in same township. His children were: Matilda; William, m. to Martha Craven; David, m. to Rebecca Craven; Robert, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Jeremiah Rhodes; Rebecca, d.; and Jane, m. to Crisman John.

Nathaniel Griffith was born in Cardiganshire, Wales, in 1812, and was a son of Evan and Sarah Griffith nee Davis. The family located in Green township in 1839; the former died at the age of seventy-four, and the latter, seventy years old, near Carrolltown, Cambria county. Nathaniel came to his present farm in 1842; he was married in 1848 to Margaret Adamson. Their children were: Samuel, m. to Barbara Dunmire; Evan, d., and Sarah Elizabeth. The Nathaniel Griffith farm was first improved by Adam States, who had a small cabin and a clearing. The principal work subsequent was performed by our subject and family. Mrs. Margaret Adamson Griffith was a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Adamson nee Swindle. They settled in 1821 near Plum creek, in what is now South Mahoning township. In 1840, the family removed to the present Andrew Pierce farm, Canoe township.

Rev. James Given was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1823, and came with his parents to Pittsburgh in 1844. He attended the University in that city, and the buildings being destroyed by fire, he became a student at Franklin College, Athens, Harrison county, Ohio, graduating therefrom in 1850. In 1822, the United Presbyterian Seminary of Allegheny City, and in 1854, was licensed to preach. In the following year he remained in the city, teaching in the summer and attending the seminary in the fall and winter. He was first settled at East and West Union churches, Allegheny county, remaining four years. In 1859, he located at Logan's Ferry, Westmoreland county. He enlisted in the militia under Col. Gallagher, and assisted in the capture of Gen. Morgan. He was also a member of the Christian commission, and shortly after the battle of Nashville, visited the wounded and sick lying at that place. He located in Richmond in 1876, and became the first pastor of the United Presbyterian congregation. He also has charge of the societies of Oakland and Susquehanna. He was married in 1854, to Margaret Fraser, a native of Scotland. His children were: William G., Margaret P., Mary F., Annie F., Hugh F., and Jennie F.

William Widdowson was born in Plum Tree, near Nottingham, England, in 1815, and was a son of Joseph and Mary Widdowson nee Bexon. In 1816, the family removed to America, residing for two years in New York city. In 1818, they migrated to Laughlinstown, Westmoreland county, and a few years later to the "Manor" settlement, in what is now Cherry-hill township. Joseph Widdowson died in 1817, at the age of seventy-six; his wife in 1870, seventy-five years old. Their children were: William, m. to Louisa Kime; Thomas, m. to Jane Lydick; Sarah, m. to Daniel Howe; John, m. to Ann Ober; Josiah; Joseph, d.; Ann, d., m. to John C. Connor; and Ebenezer, m. to Susan Ober. Our subject's children were: William, m. to Eva Simpson; John, m. to Jennie Hennigh; Emma, m. to Edward Nupp; Joseph, Josiah, m. to Katurah Simpson; Mary, Harvey, Electa, and Laura. The children of John, a son of our subject, were: Phineas Luther, George Earl, and William Charles. Our subject located on his present farm in 1865. His saw, lath and shingle mill was erected in 1868, on Straight run. It is supplied with a "Burnham" turbine wheel and a circular saw. Its capacity is five thousand to six thousand feet of boards per day.

Mrs. Louisa Kime was born in Boston, Lincolnshire, England, in 1792, and was a daughter of William and Elizabeth Berridge nee Key, each of whom died over seventy years of age. Our subject was married in 1812, to John Donaby Kime, who was born August 21, 1789, in Stickney, Lincolnshire, England. Our subject and husband are residing with William Widdowson, in this township. In 1817, they migrated to York county, and in 1836, located on the farm now occupied by Porter Wright, Montgomery township. Their children were: Louisa, m. to William Widdowson; William J., m. to Mary Lockhart; John, m. to Caroline Darr; and Bazil, m. to Jane Detwiler, d.

J. F. BLAKLEY was born in 1851, on the Hugh Blakley homestead, Young township, and was a son of Robert H. and Catharine Blakley nee Henry. (See Blakley notes, Young township.) The former died in 1861, about thirty-five years of age. The latter subsequently married Samuel Knox, and they now reside in North Mahoning township. Robert H.'s children were: J. F., m. to Adaline Work, daughter of John and Sarah Work; Margaret, d.; Sarah A., m. to Calvin Blose; and Hugh H. Our subject's only child is Mabel P. He located in Enterprise in 1873.

WILLIAM J. BURNS was born in county Donegal, Ireland, in 1825, and was a son of John and Mary Burns nee Scott. In 1830, the family removed to Armstrong county, and located on the present John Burns farm, Cowanshannock township. The former died in 1866, at the age of seventy-four, and the latter in 1877, at the age of seventy-two. Their only child was our subject who was married in 1849, to Mary Thomas, daughter of William Thomas. He was a member of company K, 14th Pennsylvania cavalry for twelve months, and was detailed as a clerk of the post-quartermasters. His children were: John; Wm. T., m. to Elizabeth Maxwell; Nancy J., m. to Samuel R. Moore; Joseph A., d.; David Duff, d.; Samuel, m. to Matilda Neal; and Thompson Findley.

FRANCIS WINEBARG (Winebach) was born in 1807, in the canton of Berne, Switzerland, and was a son of Francis and Fannie Winebuag nee Sauger. In 1818, the family removed to Berks county, in 1823, to the "Blockhouse" settlement, Lycoming county, in 1827, to North Sewickley township, Beaver county, and in 1840, near Smicksburg, West Mahoning township, Indiana county. Francis, sr., died in 1850, at the age of eighty-seven, and his wife in 1849, over seventy years of age. Francis, jr., located on his present farm in 1852, having resided in Jefferson county for three years. Our subject was married in 1831, to Lena Hartoon, of Beaver county, who was a native of Germany. Their children were: Margaret, m. to Hartman Beam; Catharine, m. to Abraham Stiver; John, m. to Sophia Homan; William, m. to Sarah Bradenbangh; Martin, m. to Adaline Copock; and Caroline, m. to Fulbert Alderbrand. John and Martin were members of company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. The children of Martin, a son of our subject, were: Mary Eveline, George, Joseph, Elizabeth, and Jennie. The children of John, a son of our subject, were: Margaret, Sarah Catharine, William Francis, George, Anna, Aaron, Irvin, and Henry.

WILLIAM W. HOPKINS was born in 1852, on the John Hopkins homestead, East Mahoning township, and was a son of John and Miriam S. Hopkins nee Work. (See sketch in East Mahoning township.) Our subject's only child is Ruth Gertrude. He is the present secretary and treasurer of the Enterprise Lumber Company.

JAMES TOY was born in 1836, on the Peter Toy homestead, Franklin township, Armstrong county, and was a son of Peter and Delilah Toy nee Bowser, who were natives of the aforenamed county, and are now living, about seventy-five years of age. Peter's father was an early settler of Armstrong county, and died when his son was a young lad. Peter's children were: Michael, d; Catharine; James, m. to Rebecca Findley; Abraham, m. to Margaret J. Bowser; Elizabeth, m. to James Burfet; Peter; Lee, m. to Rachel Hollowbach; Hettie J., m. to David Lemmon; Barbara E., m. to Adam Steinmetz; Ross, m. to Catharine Steinmetz; and Delilah M., m. to Hamilton Bowser. James was in company C, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year; he located on his present farm, named "Canoe," on account of location on creek, in 1855. His children were: Finley; Sarah D., m. to James Cochran; Harvey P., Margaret, and James.

THOMAS N. COON was born near Smicksburg in 1846, and was a son of John B. and Ann Coon nee McClelland. The former was born in Armstrong county, and died in West Mahoning township in 1850, at the age of forty-three; his wife was born in 1812, in Armstrong county, and is now living. Their children were: Elizabeth, m. to Joseph Moore; William R. R., d., m. to Elizabeth Bedell; Mary J., m. to George Bowdich; Sarah A., m. first to S. W. Sartwell, d., and second to Byron H. Bryant; James M., m. to Ellen Pearson; Abel F., m. to Catharine Smith; and Thomas N., m. to Ann Stuchell. Thos. N.'s children were: John B., Isa Ivanilla, and Anna Estella.

The Coon Cabinet Shop.—He located in Enterprise in 1878, and has since been engaged in cabinet making; he erected his shop in 1879; he uses a twelve-inch turbine wheel, a planer, circular saw, turning lathe, jig saw, shaper, etc., and is prepared to furnish chairs, furniture, and general wood work. His factory is on Brewer run, about forty rods north of the Enterprise mill.

GEORGE WEITZEL was born in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, in 1800; his first wife was Elizabeth Ferheller and the second Agnes Long, who died about forty-two years old. In 1850, he migrated to Canoe creek, Indiana county, and in 1851, located on his present farm. His children were: Mary, Christina, Frederick and Catharine.

ALLEN ROSE was born in 1815, in Jenner township, Somerset county, and was a son of Allen and Elizabeth Rose nee Handlan. The former was an early settler of Somerset county; his date of death and age are unknown; his wife died at the age of eighty-eight. Their children were: Margaret, m. to George Piper; and Allen, m. to Harriet Wood, living at the age of sixty-six. Our subject settled on the George Piper farm in 1840, and in 1842 removed to his present homestead. The first, though a small improvement, was made by Samuel Snyder.

ISAAC A. WHITE came to his present farm in 1838; he was married in 1841 to Rebecca Gaston, a daughter of Stephen Gaston. Their children were: John A., m. to Eve Tiger; David Barclay, d.; Melinda, d.; Sarah J., m. to George Timblin; Amanda, m. to John Bee; Maria, d.; Martha Ann; Clark; Charles Harvey, and Emma Ada. (See sketch of Charles R. White, Canoe township).

MRS. MARTHA POLLOCK was born in 1799, in county Derry, Ireland, and was a daughter of Hugh and Mary Steele nee Forsythe. The former died at the age of sixty, and the latter at the age of eighty. Our subject was married, in 1817, to Andrew Pollock. In 1844, they located on the farm now occupied by David Pollock, East Mahoning township. Andrew Pollock died in 1874, at the age of ninety-four. His children were: Robert, m. to Jane McIsaac; Hugh, m. first to Mary Cochran, d., second to Ann Mabon, d., and third to Catharine Stiver; Mary Ann, m. to James S. McCracken; Martha, d., m. to Jas. Knox; David, m. to Jane L. Steele; Rebecca, m. to James McKee; Jane, m. to S. B. Miller; Rachel, m. to M. S. Crawford; Nancy; and Andrew, m. to Lizzie Graham. Hugh served in the 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for three years, and was twice wounded. A set of bullet moulds saved his life. David was in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, and company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers. Andrew was in company A, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers. The Pollock homestead was warranted in 1851, and patented in 1854, to Andrew Pollock. The Robert Pollock farm was patented to Samuel Richard. The first improvement was made by Robert Pollock. An old path to the Brady mill extended through this tract. Robert Pollock's children were: Hugh McIsaac; Andrew Melvin; Robert Forsythe; John Knox Cameron, d.; Samuel Rutherford, d.; and Matilda Jane. The children of David Pollock were: Andrew J., Martha M. E.; Rachel Ella, William Cameron, Robert John Crozier, and Sarah A. The children of Andrew Pollock were: Martha Tirzah, Mary Elizabeth, Georgianna, David Cargill, d., and James Renwick, d., twins, and Sarah Agnes.

HON. THOMAS MCKEE was born in 1801, in Walker township, Centre county, and was a son of William and Elizabeth McKee nee McCombs. The former came from Ireland when a young man, The father of the latter was of Scotch extraction, and came to America when his daughter was a child. Our subject settled in Punxsutawney, Jefferson county, May 11, 1838, and has been known as a spinning wheel manufacturer, chair maker and farmer. He has been thrice married. One of his sons was killed at Spottsylvania, and another was district attorney at the time of his death. His only living child is a daughter by his second wife. Mr. McKee was a member of the state assembly.

HON. JAMES WINSLOW was a native of Maine, and was a son of Carpenter and Elizabeth Willow nee Colburn. In 1817, the former and three sons settled about five miles east of Punxsutawney, he having purchased about four hundred acres of the Holland company. Our subject purchased forty acres now included in the borough of Punxsutawney, soon after Dr. J. W. Jenks' arrival. Carpenter Winslow was a son of James and Elizabeth Winslow nee Carpenter. He had nine sons—four of these were sea captains, and in the war of 1812. They followed privateering. One was master of a privateer, and having letters of marque, sailed to the East Indies. Some of the brothers worked with their father in ship-building in the State of Maine. From 1781 to 1815, he built more vessels than any other man in that state. The great-great-grandfather of our subject was a general in the army at the capture of Lewisburg by the French. Our subject has served as justice of the peace, deputy surveyor, commissioner, associate judge, &c., of Jefferson county. He is a resident of Punxsutawney.

SHIELDS' NORMAL ACADEMY.

Professor W. S. McPherran came to Punxsutawney, to establish a first class school to which parents and guardians could send children, and have them educated at a moderate cost. The academy was named after Dr. Joseph Shields, who, with others, worked with untiring energy and zeal in behalf of the school. The "Academy" is a beautiful, commodious brick building situated in the pleasant and healthy town of Punxsutawney. The specific object of the school is the thorough preparation of students for the best colleges and seminaries, and for the teachers' profession. It is the intention of the Trustees and Faculty, to make it an institution, second to none in the state. The first term opened April 6th, 1880, and there were in attendance about two hundred students from five different counties. There is not another school in Pennsylvania presenting equal advantages at the same cost. The advantages of the institution are, elocution, the classics, modern languages, natural science, mathematics, U. S. history, English history, rhetoric, drawing, oil painting, pastel, mono-chromatic white-wax cross, wax flowers and fruits, hair work, phantom bouquets, vocal and instrumental music, etc. Among the attractions of the school, are two flourishing literary societies, conducted by the students. The "Philomatic" and "Athenaeum." They meet once a week. All the students are earnestly solicited to become members of either of these societies.

Faculty.—W. S. McPherran, M. E. principal; Professor of history, natural science, mathematics, the science and art of teaching. Rev. D. H. King, A. M., Vice Principal, professor of Latin, Greek, rhetoric and elocution. H. S. Barrett, professor of Latin, Greek, German and English grammar. Edward Carmalt, professor of drawing, penmanship and grammar. M. Thompson Hurdman, assistant in mathematics. Miss Jennie Zeitler, teacher of vocal and instrumental music. Miss E. Hattie McPherran, teacher of painting, wax work, etc.

Trustees.—Hon. J. U. Gillespie, president; W. A. Dunlap, Esq., vice president; S. C. Allison, M. D., secretary; Hon. J. B. Wilson, Hon. R. C. Winslow, Capt. John Hastings, Hon. J. E. Mitchell, Prof. W. A. Kelly, P. W. Jenks, Esq., M. J. Dinsmore, Esq, Joseph Shields, M. D., A. J. Monks, Esq., William Altman, M. D., John T. Bell, Esq., John Lang, Esq., John S. Bair, Esq., H. W. Schroch, Esq., T. K. Hastings, Esq.

The principal of the Academy, Prof. W. S. McPherran is a graduate of the Pennsylvania State Normal School at Millersville, and has an experience of thirteen years as an instructor. Prof. McPherran's grandmother's father was a brother of John Adams, him of Revolutionary fame, a member of the Continental and National Congress, constitutional convention, the man who nominated Washington as commander-in-chief, and signed the Declaration of Independence, after securing its adoption in a three days' debate, and second President of the United States. The principal's grandfather served for four years in the Revolutionary war under "Mad" Anthony Wayne. He also has a near relative married to a full cousin of Chief Justice Chase. Prof. King is a graduate of the National School of Elocution and Oratory of Philadelphia, the Waynesburg College, of Waynesburg, Pa., and the Cumberland University of Lebanon, Tennessee, and with ten years' experience as an instructor, is eminently fitted for the position which he fills. Prof. Barrett stood fifth in a class of thirty-five at Pennsylvania College, and is an instructor of ability and experience. Prof. Carmalt is a specialist in his department, besides being a successful and enthusiastic teacher. Miss Jennie Zeitler is a fine singer and brilliant pianist, having received instruction from noted German musicians. Miss E. Hattie McPherran has had charge of the ornamental department at the State Normal School, Millersville, Lancaster county, Pa., for years, and is an artist of recognized ability. It is the intention of the trustees, at an early day, to apply for a charter. Shields' Normal Academy is an institution of which the people of Punxsutawney and Jefferson county may justly feel proud.

WEST MAHONING.

West Mahoning was set off from Mahoning as a separate township, in 1846, and was thus called from its position. Its shape, boundaries, etc., are shown on the explanatory map of the county. The soil is an admixture of clay, gravel and slate and with careful culture is reasonably fertile. It is drained by the Big and Little Mahoning (Lycamahoning it is termed in the early surveys), which unite in the northwestern portion of the township.

SELLERSVILLE, NORTH POINT P. O.

This village was thus termed, according to James McHenry, because there was a "cellar" under every house. The first house was erected in 1849, by Philip Enterline, and is now occupied by Henry Startzel. In 1850, Mr. Enterline built the mill and the first sermon was preached in it, that year, by Rev. Daniel Long, a German Methodist. The first store was commenced by John Goheen, in 1856, and three years later William Gist started a blacksmith shop. The first shoemaker was George Drummond.

On the north side the first house was erected by Benjamin McHenry in 1867, and is now occupied by Sylvester C. Welchonce. John C. Stear, in the same year, was the first blacksmith, and his shop was shop was the second building. Mr. Welchonce succeeded him in this business. In 1876 Mr. Stear erected his storehouse and commenced merchandizing. The Sellersville Hotel, John C. Stear, proprietor, was built in 1873.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, JEFFERSON COUNTY.

The tract of land upon which the village is situated was purchased by Dr. John W. Jenks and Rev. David Barclay, of Samuel Findley, in 1818. It originally contained three hundred and twenty-seven acres, and was granted to Findley on a warrant that bears the date of 1795. The patent was issued in 1838, to Dr. John W. Jenks and Charles R. Barclay.

"Punksatawney," in the Seneca dialect, signifies Great "Town," and for many years prior to the whites' occupancy was an important village. Heckwelder and his missionary band were detained here, and his journal informs us, for six weeks some of his party having fallen victims to the small pox. He says "that we were most hospitably received by the Indians."

By some it is supposed that a party of the early Spanish or French adventurers passed through this place, as the remains of an army wagon were discovered by the first settlers near the mouth of Elk run.

Punxsutawney was laid out in the 24th of December, 1821, by Rev. David Barclay. It was made a borough in 1849. It has increased steadily in wealth population and influence.

GREEN TOWNSHIP

was formed from Wheatfield township in or about 1816. The exact date we are unable to ascertain, but from the assessments at our command we judge the time to have been between the years 1815 and 1821, with a strong preponderance of evidence pointing to 1816 as the date. The late Michael Sweeney of Indiana informed the editor that "he carried, in 1816, the chain for the surveyors when the boundaries were first established." It received its name from the immense forests of pine and hemlock within its borders.

COOKPORT.

The first settlers in the vicinity of what is now Cookport, were: Jacob Conner, 1821; Simon Conner, Samuel, Robert, James and John Barr, Richard Smith, James Caldwell, William Cook, James Gardner, William Buterbaugh and John Learn.

Jacob Conner made the first improvement on the site of the village, about 1821. William Cook purchased the Conner property and afterward presented it to his son Richard. In 1858, Lewis Shaw purchased a lot and erected a dwelling and blacksmith shop. About this time Richard Cook erected a store room and the place began to be called "Cookport."

The physicians were: A. H. Allison, 1868; A. R. Lovelace; J. N. Evans, and O. C. Stewart. The latter two are at this time the located practitioners.

The first hotel was opened in 1868, by Andrew Shark. He was followed by Mrs. Eliza Fleming, Benjamin Williams, and 1879, J. T. Gibson.

DIXONVILLE.

This village received its name from "Dixon's Run," upon which it is situated. The latter was called for the Dixons, who resided below Indiana, and were accustomed to pasture their cattle along this stream.

The place was located on the farm of Richard Price, and was first called Dixonville in 1860.

The first merchant was Geo. Row, jr., who commenced in 1866, and continued in business until 1871. Longwell and Buchanan, were his successors. They sold in 1872, to Marshall Gilpatrick, the present merchant.

J. S. Longwell, opened a store in 1874, and retired in March, 1878.

KESSLERVILLE, BERRINGER P. O.

This village was platted in 1871, by Peter Kessler, who purchased the tract which includes the site of the village of Reuben Boring, in 1852.

The house was erected by William Nicholson, a blacksmith, for his shop. He erected the second building for his residence. The next house was the carpenter shop of John Garman. Jacob Conner erected the next building for a storehouse. This is now the residence of Reuben Boring.

The first and only store was opened by Pitman Berringer, in 1877.

The postoffice was established in 1877.

PINE FLAT.

The first settlers in the vicinity were John Huston, James Dunmoody, Robert Dunmoody, Alexander Stephens, Joseph Askens, Thomas Huston, Robert Evans, Hugh Huston, James Ellwood, Daniel Williams, William Arthur, Thomas Asken, Hugh Perry, Hugh Williams, and others.

Evan Williams, in 1860, erected a storehouse, now vacant, on the north side of the Susquehanna road. In this building he sold goods for three years. H. J. Ellwood commenced merchandising in the Dr. Thomas' room, and after a year, he removed to Hustonville; he was succeeded by Thomas Cook, the present occupant. The physicians were: A. H. Armstrong, 1873; Shadrach Thomas, and A. R. Lovelace, the present practitioner.

TAYLORSVILLE, UTAH P. O.

Taylorsville was laid out on the lands of Robert T. Allison and Samuel Lydick, and was named in honor of Gen. Zachary Taylor. The first houses were erected in 1854 by A. T. Moorhead for a dwelling and storeroom. Both were destroyed by fire, and were replaced by Mr. Moorhead. He was succeeded, in 1866, by W. S. Davison, who has since continued in business. About 1860, George Keeler had a store and shook shop, which continued operations for a few years. The first church was the "Union," erected about 1832; the second was the Presbyterian, and the third the United Presbyterian, now used for school purposes.

THOMAS PRICE was born in 1802, on a farm in Green township now owned by Rev. Dr. William Shadrach, and was a son of David and Elizabeth Price nee Rees, natives of Wales. They were married in Philadelphia in 1801, and located on the farm above named in the same season. This tract was about one-fourth of a mile from the site of Dixonville. "When our subject was about a year old, his mother placed him in a sugar trough near the run, while she was washing her clothes. Occasionally she cast her eye around to see that all was safe. All at once a large bear was seen coming down the run toward the baby. The woman, alarmed at the probable fate of her child, hastened to its rescue, while the bear, thinking an attack was pending, ran in the same direction. The mother reached the cradle first, and the bear turned into the stream and passed rapidly out of sight." David Price died in 1853, at the age of seventy-four, and his wife in 1875, at the age of one hundred and three. The children were: Thomas, m. first to Rachel W. Smith. d., and second to Ruth White, d.; Mary, d., m. to Rev. Dr. William Shadrach; John, m. to Margaret Wimer, d.; Elizabeth P., m. to Ezekiel Gibson, d.; Jane, m. to Rev. James B. Allison; Obadiah; Ann, m. to Edward Williams; and Harriet N., d. Thomas taught school near the site of Newville in the winters of 1829–30 and '31; he worked in an iron mine in Huntingdon county for Rev. Thomas E. Thomas. His children were: Richard, d., m. first to Jane Price, d., and second to a Miss Buterbaugh; David, d.; Isaac N., d.; Mary, d.; Rachel; William; Mary; Benjamin, m. to a Miss Long; Watson; and Emily Judson, d. David was a member of company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, and died at Harrison's Landing. Isaac was second lieutenant of company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers; he was mortally wounded by a sharpshooter on the last day of his three years' service, while saying, "Come on, my brave boys." He died in Baltimore.

SIX WELSH FAMILIES, John Reese, Hugh Reese, David Moses, Simon Davis, David Price, and a Mr. Jones, settled on Dixon Run in 1801. Davis and Roberts, two Englishmen, bought the lands, or thought they did, and sent out this colony of Welsh, promising each one fifty acres for settling. Finding their title to the land not good, they returned to England discouraged, writing the settlers they had lost their land. The lands were held by the colonists almost twenty-one years before the rightful owners made claim, when most of them bought the tracts upon which they had settled. The Reeses, Price and Davis remained on the lands till their death. These settlers at first went to Ebensburg to preaching, and Welsh preachers afterward occasionally visited the colony. An incident is related to us by Thomas Price, which is as follows: "At an early day, when there were no churches nor settled ministers in the township, meetings were held in private houses. A Mr. Carmalt, father of Isaac Carmalt, being a preacher of the "Society of Friends," (Quakers,) had met the people at the house of Francis Chapman. The congregation were waiting patiently for the minister to speak, and though some considerable time had elapsed, not a word had been spoken. Suddenly a hen rushed into the house, closely pursued by a hawk. As the latter passed by Mr. Carmalt, he grasped it by the wing, and went out of doors to a log heap, where he laid the head and neck across a log. William Stephens, who had accompanied him, picked up an axe, and cut off the head. Gravely as ever they resumed their seats, not a word being uttered either by them or the people during the time of interruption."

THE LEARNS.

ANDREW LEARN was born in 1809, in what is now Bell township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Learn nee Ashbaugh. The former was a native of the Sewickley settlement, Westmoreland county, where he was born in 1785. He was a son of Andrew and Susan Learn nee Yorkey. He was a native of Pennsylvania, and located at an early period on Sewickley creek. His father and wife, their son Geo. and wife and family, were killed by the Indians near Blue mountains. The tradition is that this massacre was committed by seven Indians from the Lake Erie country. The children of Andrew Learn, the pioneer were: John, d., m. to Elizabeth Ashbaugh, d.; Catharine, d., m. to George Wagerman, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to George Vest, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Ashbaugh, d.; Susan, d., m. to Barney Blose, d.; George, m. to Elizabeth Piper, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Charles Weindal, d.; Barbara, d., m. to Hamilton Morton, d.; Rachel, m. to Jacob Bash; and Andrew, d., m. to Fannie Piper. John Learn settled on the tract now owned by Henry Learn, Green township. His children were: Andrew, m. to Catharine Fluke; John b. in Bell township, Westmoreland county, in 1811, m. in 1834, to Catharine Rodney, b. in 1810; Susan, m. to William Kunkle; Elizabeth, m. to John Buterbaugh; Jacob, m. to Sarah Rodkey; Adam, d. in 1874, fifty-seven years of age, m. in 1841, to Lucretia Ann Cook; Salome, m. to Hugh Laney, d.; George, m. first to Mary Buterbaugh, d., and second to Mrs. Catharine Shankle nee Riddle; Peter, b. in 1822, m. to Lucinda Cook; Ann Maria, m. to George Rodkey; Henry, m. to Catharine Emma Kunkle; David, d.; and William, m., to Margaret Kunkle. Our subject, (Andrew Learn,) has lived on his homestead since 1838. His only child was John A., m. to Jane Darmey. Their children were: Alfred, m. to Mattie Donahue; Miranda; Anna Mazilla; Martin Luther; Leonard; and Henry Ward Beecher. The children of John, (a son of John and Elizabeth Learn,) were: George, m. in 1861 to C. H. H. Black; Elizabeth, m. to David Hartman; Mary Ann, m. to Dr. J. N. Evans; Jonathan, m. to Rebecca J. Baker; and Jacob R., m. to Elizabeth M. Kunkle. George and C. H. H. Learn's children were: Matilda, Charles, Elizabeth Jane, Anna Bell, John Roof, Catharine Melissa, Benton, and Pearl. John Learn has been an elder and deacon in the Lutheran church for twenty-five years. He commenced on his present homestead in 1834. He cut a set of cabin logs, eleven rounds high—the building being 18x20, in one day. A part of his land is included in a tract warranted July 15, 1784 to Robert Underwood, and called "Spring Mount." It was patented to the heirs of John Wighton, October 22, 1801. Another part was warranted to Moses Bartram, July 20, 1784, and was named Liverpool. It was patented to Thomas Fisher, Samuel R. Fisher, Moses Fisher, John R. Gilpin, and Thomas Gilpin, July 25, 1806. The children of Jacob, (a son of John and Elizabeth Learn,) were: Elizabeth, m. to John Bagley; David, d.; Catharine, m. to Henry Bagley; James, m. to Ann Black; Sarah A., m. to Wm. Bagley; and Mary A., m. to Isaac Hudson. Jacob was deacon in the Lutheran church over fifteen years.

The children of Adam D. (a son of John and Elizabeth) Learn were: Mary, m. to Frederick Gaston, d.; Lucinda, d.; Jacob, d.; Clarissa, m. to William Laney; Emanuel; Richard; Ann, d.; William Hezekiah; Irwin; Elenora, d.; Henry A., and Caroline. Frederick, d., and Mary Gasten's children were: Ann Elizabeth, Sarah Jane, Clarissa, Laura Alice, Henry, d.; Mary Ellen, Jessie Ira, and Lucinda. The children of Peter (a son of John and Elizabeth) Learn were: Susannah, m. to John Elwood; Israel, m. to Anna A. Kime; William P., m. to Anna S. Kunkle, d.; Andrew, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Alexander, m. to Lavisa Minerva Henry; Uriah S.; Elis, and Eliza. Peter Learn has been an elder in the German Reformed Church for two years. William P. and Anna S. Learn's children were: Minnie Etta and Ollie Lavorie. The children of Henry (a son of John and Elizabeth) Learn were: Francis Henderson and Oakley Effington. The children of William (a son of John and Elizabeth) Learn were: Elizabeth, Hannah and Harvey.

Emanuel H. Grumbling was born in York county in 1830, and was a son of Christian and Catharine Grumbling nee Hinsdell. The former was the son of George and Catharine Grumbling. George was a Revolutionary soldier. In 1833, the family removed to the farm now occupied by George Grumbling, Brush Valley township. Christian died in 1865, at the age of sixty-seven; his wife in 1834. His second wife was Julia A. Myers. The children were: Julia A., m. to Henry Snyder, d.; Susan, d., m. to Michael Sowers; Jeremiah, d.; William, m. to Louisa Sowers; Elizabeth, m. to Nicholas Peddicord, d.; Emanuel H., m. to Margaret E. Stewart; George, d.; Christian, m. to Ella Jones; and Angeline, m. to Edward Murphy. Christian served in the 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, and in the U. S. regulars about two years; he was a prisoner for some time. Our subject's children were: Theodore A., m. to Ellen Roberts; Celia, d.; Nettie, d.; Ida Bell, Milton S., James W., and Samuel E.

Jacob L. Lydick was born on what is now known as the "Strong" farm, Cherry Hill township, in 1825, and was a son of Samuel and Catharine Lydick nee Lydick. The former was a son of John Lydick. (See Lydick notes, Cherry Hill township). Samuel died July 17, 1879, nearly eighty-three years of age; his wife died in 1869, in her seventy-third year. Their children were: Mary, m. to Isaac Allen; Penina, d.; Jacob L., m. to Ann Anderson; Nancy Elizabeth, m. to Robert A. Lydick; Julia Ann, m. to William McCoy; and Catharine, m. to Robert Barr. Jacob L.'s children were: Catharine, m. to Henry Rorabaugh; Margaret; Mary Idella, d.; Adella, Carrie Jane, and Myrta May. Samuel was, and our subject has been an elder in the church.

William S. Davison was born in Schoharie county, New York, in 1829, and was a son of Cardington and Elizabeth Davison nee Warner. The latter was born in 1809, and she, as well as her husband, are still living in Taylorsville. The former was born in New London, Connecticut, in 1799, and was the son of Daniel and Margaret Davison nee Searls. Daniel served throughout the entire Revolution. Cardington and family settled near Blairsville in 1837. His children were: Maranda, m. first to George Wolf, d., and second to Joseph Dodson; Matilda, d., m. to Henderson Buchanan; William S., m. to Rebecca Rowland; James, m. to Ellen Hunter; Katura, d.; Chas. W., m. to Mary Akeman; and Emeline, m. to Nelson Thompson. Charles W. was in the war of 1861. William S.'s children were: Jennie R. and Alice. In 1866, our subject succeeded A. T. Moorhead, jun., in the latter's store at Taylorsville. J. C. Rugh was his partner for two years, and of late years he has conducted the business.

Jacob S. Conner was the second white child born in the vicinity of the Cherry Tree (the first being Joseph Barber.) He was born on the farm he now occupies in Green township, on the 21st of April, 1822, and was a son of George and Annie Conner nee Bartlebaugh. The latter was a daughter of John Bartlebaugh, who made the first improvement in what was afterward called "New Lancaster," now a part of Cherry Tree borough. George Conner was a son of John and Mary Conner nee Steele, who located about 1817 on the "Manor settlement," in what is now Cherry Hill township. The latter's children were: Jacob, d., m. to Barbara Myers, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Chapman, d.; George, d., m. to Annie Bartlebaugh, d; Abner, d., m. to Elizabeth Harbridge, d.; Mary, d., m. to Conrad Steffy, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Catharine Hoster, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Isaiah Bartlebaugh; Simon, m. to Margaret Harbridge; James, d., m. to Annie Bartlebaugh. George, Abner, Simon and Samuel Conner were among the earliest settlers in the vicinity of the Cherry Tree. They ran some of the early rafts. George Conner's children were: Jane, d., m. to John Boring, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Wier, d.; John, d., m. to Keziah Myers, d.; Jacob S., m. to Catharine Dishon; James, d., m. to Mary Layman; Catharine, d., m. to William Dishon, d.; Thomas, d.; Ellen, d., m. to Joseph Lentz; Elizabeth, m. to William Riblet; Martha, m. to Abram Byers; and George, m. to Lucinda Kessler. George was a soldier in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: Paul, m. to Susan Hudson; Annie, m. to Wilson Goss; Elizabeth, m. to Cornelius McFeeters; John, d.; George; James, d.; Mary, m. to Uriah Sides; Florida, and Henry.

An Incident.—In the winter of 1830, while the snow was over two feet, the house of Abner Conner caught fire in the night, while the only occupants were Mrs. Connor and her two little children. She had only time to grasp her little ones and escape in her night clothing to the next neighbor, a distance of over half a mile. She carried her children all of that lonely way, and fainted as she reached the door. She lived to a good old age.

J. E. Miller was born in Diamondville in 1853, and was a son of Samuel and Frances Miller nee Mock. Our subject's Grandfather Miller died in 1872, about one hundred years old; his wife, our subject's grandmother, died in 1873, about ninety-eight years of age. Samuel's children were: J. E., m. to Amanda Lutman; and Mary, m. to William Cunnington. The only child of our subject is Merrell.

B. F. Williams was born in Ebensburg, Cambria county, in 1843, and was a son of John T. and Ann Williams nee Thomas. The former was the son of Thomas Williams, a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject learned the machinist trade in Blair county, Pennsylvania, and Iowa City, Iowa; he also worked in Ebensburg and Altoona; he located in Indiana county in 1865, and operated a planing and saw mill for three years; he managed a saw mill on one of the branches of Two-Lick for about four years, and then removed to Cookport. In 1878, he built the "Cookport Foundry, Machine Shop and Planing Mill," where he is employing eleven workmen. The business of 1878 amounted to over $8,000; he is manufacturing a shingle machine of his own invention, which he places on the market at lower rates than the old machines; he served in Co. E, 11th Pennsylvania militia for five weeks during the raids; he was married in 1861 to Jane Tibbotts.

Jonathan Lemon was born on the farm now occupied by Jackson Lemon, Pine township, in 1838, and was a son of John and Margaret Lemon nee Graham. The former was a native of Ireland, and located when a young man in Pine township; he died in 1854, sixty-two years old; his wife in 1862, about fifty-eight years of age. Their children were: William, d.; James, d.; John, d.; Solomon, m. to Lare Rhoads; Henry, m. to Ada Lydia; Jonathan, m. to Nancy Detwiler; Sarah J., d.; Jackson, m. to Bell Allison; Delilah; and Jacob, m. to Eliza A. Allison. Solomon died in Pittsburgh while en route for the army.

Jonathan was in company F, 145th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. Jackson was in the 55th Pennsylvania volunteers for nearly four years. Jacob was in the 11th reserve corps for two years, and was wounded three times in the Wilderness. Our subject's children were: Jeannetta, Ollie, Charles Emberson, and Harry Benjamin. Jonathan has resided in Cookport since 1875; he has worked at shoemaking since 1859.

DR. J. N. EVANS was born in Ebensburg, Cambria county, in 1841, and was a son of Richard and Margaret Evans nee Lloyd, a daughter of Stephen Lloyd, a soldier in the war of 1812. Both parents were of Welsh extraction. Our subject served in company F, 133d Pennsylvania volunteers for eight months, and was wounded; his brother William served in company A, 11th Pa. reserve corps, was severely wounded, and died in prison from his wounds. J. N. read medicine with Dr. A. P. Field, an eclectic physician of Ebensburg, and graduated from the American Eclectic College of Philadelphia in 1871; he first located in Carrollton, Cambria county, remaining there and in Ebensburg about five years; he removed to Cookport in 1876; he was married, in 1878, to Mary Ann Learn. Their only child is Bertha.

C. J. CAMERON was born on the Cameron homestead in 1856, and was a son of Daniel and Margaret Cameron nee Bartlebaugh. Their children were: Emma, m. to John McFeaters; Amanda, m. to Bruce Leasure; Marlin J., m. to Adaline Garman; C. J.; Phebe; Lloyd G., d.; Cordelia, Daniel, Sharp, and Howard. Our subject studied dentistry with T. C. Mardis, dentist, of Greenville; he has been located in Cookport for two years.

PHILIP J. ARTHUR was born in Monmouthshire, Wales, in 1824, and was a son of William and Mary Arthur nee Jones. In 1830, the family migrated to Ebensburg, Cambria county, and in 1832, located on the farm now owned by our subject. The latter died in 1865, at the age of eighty, and the former in 1878, at the age of eighty-three. Both parents, our subject, and the family generally, are members of the Christian church. Their children were: Gwenllean, m. to John D. Hughes; Philip J., m. to Mrs. Sarah Otter nee Fury; and Rachel, d. Philip J.'s only child is Rachel. In October, 1858, Philip Arthur, (an uncle of our subject,) who lived on the farm now occupied by his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas, was "lost," or disappeared, and his fate was never known.

WESLEY H. ACKERSON was born in Sussex county, New Jersey, in 1845, and was a son of Aaron A. and Lucy A. Ackerson nee Peters. In 1869, our subject and a brother came to Greenville; he clerked for Martin Kier, of Homer City, for two years; and was engaged in the feather renovating business for two years. He removed to Pine Flat, and has been engaged in the general store trade; he was married in 1870, to Sarah J. Snyder, of Mechanicsburg.

PETER KESSLER was born in Sinking Valley, in what is now Blair county, in 1807, and was a son of Peter and Anna Kessler nee Smith. Our subject came to the farm now occupied by him in 1852; he was married in 1832 to Ann Smith. Their children were: Christina, d., m. to Richard Kelly; Jacob, d.; John Peter, m. to Anna Davis; Lucinda, m. to George W. Conner; Adolphus, m. to Catharine Ralston; Harmonis O., d.; Martha Melinda, m. to John George; and Cina S., m. to William Berringer.

RICHARD COOK was born in 1817, in Hopewell township, Bedford county, and was a son of William and Mary Ann Cook nee Stover. In 1828, the family removed to the tract of land upon which Cookport is situated. The former died in 1869, in his eighty-fourth year; the latter in 1865, over seventy years of age. Their children were: Richard, m. to Catharine Langham; Hezekiah W., d. m. to Lucinda Bartlebaugh; Lucretia Ann, m. to Adam Learn; Elizabeth, m. to George Baker; Lucinda, m. to Peter Learn; John, d., m. first to Mary Buterbaugh, and second to Lizzie Smith; Mary Ann, m. to Rev. Alexander Marple, Methodist Protestant; and Andrew, m. to Rachel McGuire. Our subject's children were: Washington, m. to Nancy Smith; Abram, d.; Andrew, m. to Bell Repine; Mary Ann, m. to John Cummins; Catharine, m. to Emanuel Dasher; Richard, d., and Lucinda, d. Washington was a soldier in the war of 1861.

RICHARD L. WILLIAMS was born near Ætna, Allegheny county, in 1845, and was a son of John E. and Mary L. Williams nee Lewis. The former was a native of Wales, and was a son of Hugh and Mary Williams, natives also of that country. John E. Williams' children were Richard L.; Hugh E., m. to Lizzie Williams; Mary J., and Sarah A. All of the above named persons were connected with the Baptist Church.

THOMAS COOK was born near Cookport, in 1854, and was a son of William A. and Maria Cook nee Gibson. The former was a son of Thomas Cook. William A. died in 1864 in Tennessee, while a member of the 106th Illinois volunteers. His children were: Thomas, m. to Mattie Roberts; Mary; George, d.; and Joseph, d.

A. R. LOVELACE, M. D., was born in York, York county, in 1826, and was a son of William and Margaret Lovelace nee Long. The former was the son of a Revolutionary soldier; he died at the age of forty-seven; his wife died in 1862. Our subject read medicine with Drs. Fuget and Nebinger, of York, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College. His first practice was at Lewisburg, York county, removing from thence to Cherry Tree. In the fall of 1878, he located in Pine Flat. He was married in 1849 to Mary J. Sipe, of York county. His children were: Robert, m. to Nettie E. Crowther; Eliza; Joseph; and Emma J., m. to John Davis.

THOMAS THOMAS was born in Cardiganshire, Wales, in 1790, and was a son of Richard and Martha Thomas nee Davis, who came to what is now Cambria county in 1796. The family, three years later, returned to Wales. Richard and his wife returned to Pennsylvania in 1813, and located in Newtown, Bucks county, where they died a few years subsequent. Our subject was married to Mary Davis, who died in 1857, in her sixty-fourth year; he migrated to America in 1836, and in 1842, located in Green township. Of his seven children, the only one living is John T., m. to Mary Griffith.

JOHN T. GIBSON was born in Perry township, Jefferson county, in 1846, and was a son of Andrew and Jane Gibson nee McSparan. The former's first wife was Elizabeth Smith. Andrew and his brother James were in the war of 1812, where the latter was killed. Andrew was a native of Ireland; he died in 1873, in his eightieth year; his widow is still living, and about sixty-five years of age. Andrew was a son of Samuel and Lydia Gibson, who, about 1800, settled about four miles south of Indiana's site, on the Saltsburg road. His children by the first wife were: Samuel, d., m. to Catharine Kerr, d.; Mary Ann, d.; m. to James Reed; Lydia, d., m. to Josiah Evans; Matilda, m. to Theodore Morris; William, m. to Malinda McKee, d.; James, d.; and Nancy, d., m. to C. R. B. Morris. The children by the second marriage were: Andrew, m. to Mary J. Swan; Joseph T., Presbyterian minister, formerly county superintendent, m. to Bell Brown; John T., m. first to Jennie Allison, d., and second to Joanna M. Cunningham; Lucy J., m. to John Uncapher; Amanda, m. to Samuel W. Getty, and Albert C. Andrew was in the war of 1861. Joseph T. was in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and two months, and was wounded at Lookout Mountain. John T. was in company E, 2d battalion Pennsylvania volunteers for six months, and in company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps for two years. He was taken prisoner and recaptured on the next day. He was clerk of the county commissioners for four years. Since 1879, he has been in the mercantile and hotel business in Cookport. His children were: Albert B., Edwin A., Joseph T., John E., and William Clare, d.

WILLIAM H. STERNER was born in Clarion county, in 1843, and was a son of Jacob and Rebecca Sterner nee Ginter. The former was a native of Clarion county, and a blacksmith; he died in 1864, at the age of forty-six; his father, John Sterner, was also a blacksmith. Our subject was married in 1868 to Mary Lydick. Their children were: Frank A., Harry H., Alexander, Clara, and Clark R. He located in Taylorsville in 1875, and was the first permanent blacksmith in the village.

JOHN B. GREEN, M. D., was born in what is now Cherry Hill township, in 1849, and was a son of Jesse and Rebecca Green nee Byers. The former was a son of Samuel Green, who died in Indiana. Our subject read medicine with Dr. W. H. Sloan, of Chest Springs, Cambria county, and graduated in the spring of 1876 from the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery. He first located in Chest Springs as a partner of his preceptor, and in August, 1876, removed to Dixonville. He was married, in 1874, to Matilda Goss. Their children are: Fannie, and Stella.

CYRUS NUPP.—Our subject is a son of Daniel Nupp, who was born in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, and was married to Leah Mostoller, of the same county; he settled in this county in 1838, and on the farm now owned by our subject in 1841. His children were: Lavina, m. to Samuel Grosnickle, S. in Kansas; Alexander, m. to Catharine Mummau; Mary Ann, m. to William Houk; George, d.; Cyrus, our subject, m. to Cynthia Kingsley; Franklin, m. to Susan Buterbaugh; John, killed in Wilderness, Virginia, in 67th Pennsylvania volunteers; Edward, m. to Anna Widdowson; and Anna, m. to Elias Ruffner. Our subject served in the late war three years, in company D, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers; his wife is a daughter of Rev. Alanson Kingsley, who preached on circuit in the eastern part of the county from 1857 to 1860, for classes of the Methodist Protestant Church, and organized the church at Gettysburg, Montgomery township; he is now a resident of Chatauqua county, New York. The children of our subject are: Orren Ora, Luna Viola, Irvin H. (our patron), and Ella May.

Jacob Garman.—Our subject settled in this county in 1858, on his present farm, and is a son of John P. Garman, of Cambria county, Pa. None of the family, except John and Jacob, settled permanently in this county. The family were: John; William, m. to Catharine Dunckel; Mary, d., m. to Robert Notley; Peter, m. first to Lucinda Dunckel, d., and second to Caroline Bracken; Jacob, our subject, b. in Blair county, Pa., in 1824, m. to Mary Beringer; Rebecca, m. to Peter J. Stifler; Elizabeth, m. to Thomas McKisick; Daniel, m. to a lady in Wisconsin; and Sarah J., m. to John Carson. The children of our subject were: Martha J., d.; Adaline, m. to Marlin Cameron; Jeremiah; Rebecca, m. to John Barto; Jacob S.; U. S. Grant; Norman A., d.; and Dwight Moody, d. Of the brothers and sisters of our subject still living, William and Peter reside in Cambria county, Pa., and Rebecca and Sarah J. reside in Clearfield county, Pa.; Daniel is in Wisconsin, and Elizabeth in Illinois.

S. W. McCoy.—Alexander McCoy and his wife, Mary Piggot, settled in Cherry Hill township, adjoining the Huston tract, in 1834. Their children were: William, m. to Julia A. Lydick; James, m. to Mary Ray; John, d.; Alexander C., m. to Ann Lydick; Robert, d.; Margaret, m. first to J. T. Jamison, who was lost at Spottsylvania, Virginia, member of company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, and second to William Cook; Samuel W., our subject, b. in 1844, m. to Kate Parry, b. in 1846; and Mary L., m. to George McCullough. Our subject was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, enlisting in 1864, and served to the close of the war; he was wounded at Fort Stephens, D. C., and slightly wounded at Spottsylvania C. H., Virginia. The children of our subject were: Philip Sheridan, d.; Hugh A., d.; R. Milton; and Mary S. He settled on his present farm in 1869, on the road from Cookport to Cherry Tree.

Daniel Cameron is a grandson of Hugh Cameron, the pioneer, and son of Hugh Cameron second. He was first married to Margaret Bartlebaugh, d., and second to Mrs. Cordelia McNeal nee Repine. His children were, by first wife, Emeline, m. to John McFeeters; Amanda, m. to Bruce Leasure; Marlin J., m. to Ada Garman; C. J., m. to Ida Hazlett; Phebe; and by second wife, Cordelia, Daniel, Sharp, and Howard. He settled on his present farm in 1858. It was first settled by A. Lute.

E. M. Lydick.—Our subject is a descendant of Jacob Lydick, pioneer, and grandson of John Lydick, who was married to Philipena Rice. The children of this John Lydick were: Samuel, d., m. to Catharine Lydick, d.; Mary, m. to John Lydick, d.; Nancy, d., m. to David Pollock, d.; Elizabeth, m. to William Lewis, of Ohio; Philipena, went to Ohio; John, d., m. to Elizabeth Lydick; Philip, m. to Elizabeth Byers, settled in the West, and is supposed to have been killed; Joseph, m. first to Jane Lockard, d., and second to Mrs. Jane Wagoner; Susan, m. to Jacob Craig, d.; Barbara, m. to John Byers, and William, m. to Jane McGuire. The children of William were: Sarah S., m. to John Wheeler; Elliott M., our subject, m. to Lucinda Buterbaugh; Azariah J., m. to Mary Gallagher; and Annie J., d. The children of our subject are: Annie J., George B., Rosa M., Mary S., and Clara Belle. The Lydick family is supposed by many to be the largest connection in the county.

Peter Leasure.—We trace the Leasure family to John Leasure, who was among the very earliest settlers in East Mahoning township. Peter, born in 1824, was married to Margaret Ann Miller, born in 1824. The children of Peter are: J. Calvin, m. to Lucy Graham; Bruce, m. to Amanda Cameron; Samantha; Ida, d.; and Mary M., d. Our subject settled on his present farm in Greene township in 1849, and succeeded George Baker, who had taken a life lease of the farm, date not known, but was one of the early settlers.

I. N. Buterbaugh is a grandson of William Buterbaugh, and son of John Buterbaugh, born in Huntingdon county, Pa., in 1799, and settled in this county in 1829, and was married to Elizabeth Learn; he is still living, and his wife also; he is the oldest of William's children, the others of whom were: William, d., m. to Mary Myers, d.; Jacob R., m. to Lydia Chapman; Henry, d., m. to Mary A. Langham; George, m. to Delilah Langham; Frederick, ex-commissioner, m. to Margaret Langham; Mary, d., m. to George Learn; David, m. first to Ann Langham, and second to Mary J. Bee. Our subject was born in 1844, is married to Lizzie A. Baker, and their children are: Isaac V. and George W. He has been in the shingle cutting business since 1875, and has had two mills burned for him; the present mill has a capacity of 20,000 shingles per day.

Ellis G. Smith is a grandson of Richard W. Smith, generally known as "Quaker Smith," born in New Jersey, and with his father, Timothy Smith, came to Fayette county, Pa., where he married Grace Moore, d., the order of marriage being in accordance with rules of the Quakers. His second marriage, to Elizabeth Walker, was also consummated in Fayette county, Pa., but in the meantime he lived forty years in Monongalia county, W. Va., and from thence came to Indiana county in 1824, and settled in Green township, on Cushion creek, a neighborhood still settled by his sons and grandsons. He was married the third time, in this county, to Catharine Lewis, d. It is said he claimed to have carried papers for General Washington, but was a boy too young for enlistment.; he died in 1849, about eighty-four years old. His children by first wife were: Sarah, d.; Timothy, d., m. to Maria Tuthman; and Jane, d., born in Fayette county, Pa., m. to Solomon Exline, who settled in Virginia. The children by second wife were: Mary, d., m. to Laban Radcliff, d., of Virginia; Ebenezer W., d., m. to Lavina Hahurst; George W., m. to Leah Moses; Micajah, m. first to Lavinia Askin, d., and second to Eliza A. McCallister; Rachel, d., m. to Thomas Price; Richard W., b. in 1814 in West Virginia, m. to Mary B. Garee; Elizabeth, d., m. first to Isaac Steers, d., and second to Eber Holt, of West Virginia; and Lydia, d., m. to William McCallister. All of these children were born in West Virginia. Richard W., sr., built the first saw mill on Cushion creek, above the Cherry Tree, and his son George W. has since built a grist mill. The saw mill was built about 1832. Our subject, Ellis G., b. in 1839, is the only child of Richard W., jr., is married to Ruth Etta Weaver, and their issue is one child, Clarence R. "Quaker" Smith got out the petition for the first mail route from Indiana to Curwensville, and succeeded in having the line established. Timothy Smith, the elder, of Fayette county, Pa., was the first man who put lock and key on anything near where is now the town of Brownsville, and that was on a hollow sycamore tree, in which he cut a hole, and put on a door with a lock, in which travelers' saddle pockets were put for safe-keeping. Job Gavee, born in New Jersey, and married to Sarah Smith, sister of "Quaker" Smith, settled in Green township in 1831.

Moses Lydick.—Our subject is a grandson of Jacob Lydick, pioneer, who settled in Cherry Hill township, on what is now the McGaughey farm, and a son of Jacob Lydick, jr., who was born in the fort on the farm in 1795, and died in the county in 1867. He was married to Nancy Alexander, born in Ireland in 1797, and died in 1865. The children of Jacob, jr., were: Mary, b. in 1816, m. to William Bell, of Indiana, Pa.; Alexander, b. in 1819, m. to Sarah J. Butterfield; Elizabeth J., b. in 1822, m. to Thomas Widdowson; Jacob, b. in 1825, d.; Catharine, b. in 1828, m. to Smith Barr, d.; Moses, our subject, b. in 1830, m. to Eliza P. Hensley, b. in 1828, in England; Sarah Ann, b. in 1833, and Nancy, b. in 1835, m. to John Hensley. The farm now occupied by Moses and his sister, Sarah Ann, was settled by the father in 1827 or '28. The children of our subject were: Sarah, m. to Augustus F. Barber; William A., m. to Mary A. Shank; Arthur Bell; Elizabeth G.; Mary A.; Alice J.; Frank S.; Tirzah, d.; Ida Willis.

Rev. M. L. Rowland.—Our subject was licensed by the Bethel Baptist Church of Cambria county, Pa., about 1870, and ordained by council at Pine creek, Armstrong county, Pa., in 1874. He is now resident of Dixonville, and pastor of Two-lick, Shiloh and Fairview Baptist churches. He was married in 1874 to Nannie A. Hull, of Armstrong, county, Pa., and their children are: Emma Belle, d.; Clara, d.; and Wilda D.

E. C. Compton.—Our subject is a son of John Compton, who came to this county with his father in 1803. The senior John Compton had been a resident of New Jersey. Our subject was married first to Agnes Hannah, d., and second to Mrs. Elizabeth Price nee Buterbaugh, who had one child by first husband, Richard Price, named for his father. The children of our subject were, by first wife: Lizzie, d.; Thomas Clark, d.; and by second wife, Minni E., and Rosa M.

JACOB STIFLER.—Our subject settled in the county at his present home in 1825; he was born in York county, Pa., February 14, 1800, and came from Bedford county, Pa., to this county. He is married to Catharine Elizabeth Helsel. There was no road nearer him than the Douglass farm. He had no cabin, and built a pen of poles in which to keep his goods for a while. The wolves were plenty in the neighborhood then, and Sunday was the regular hunting day. Mr. S. had to go twice to Blair county to get grinding done. His children were: Mary E., m. to Reuben Boring; George H., m. to Mary Johnston; Peter, m. to Sophia Duncan; John, m. to Margaret Dishong; Joseph W., m. to Sarah Hudson; William T., m. to Margaret Douglass; Philip H., m. to Rebecca Engle; Elizabeth, m. to David Piper; and Eve, d. The children are mostly settled near the old home. William T. served three years in the 78th Pennsylvania volunteers. Philip was in the signal corps. George H. had one son in the war, badly wounded. Our subject helped to raise the first log schoolhouse at the Cherry Tree. He thinks there never was any school in it, and it was never finished.

REUBEN S. BORING.—There is a large connection of this family name in the county, descendants of Isaiah Boring, married to Mary Eve Hartlein. He came from Baltimore county, Maryland, to this county in 1824, and settled where Berringer P. O. and village of Keslarville are situated. His children were: Leonard; John, m. to Rebecca Conner; Abram, m. to Elizabeth Fink; Reuben, m. to Mary E. Stifler; Mary, m. to Isaiah Boring, d.; Katie, m. to Reuben Boring, d.; Susan, m. to William Hollis, d.; and Rachel E., m. to John Willis. Most of family settled in the county. The children of Reuben Boring were: Catharine, m. to John D. Adams; Jacob S., served in 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th reserves, and died two weeks after getting home; was twice a prisoner. George served in the late war, in one year's service, m. to Susan Makins; Reuben S., our subject, served in the war in battery G, 1st Pennsylvania light artillery, m. first to Sarah J. Duncan, and second to Eliza J. Imler; Elizabeth, m. to George Kelly; Mary Eve, m. to Edward Timothy; Ann, m. to Joseph Anderson; Philip, Lorenzo, Jeremiah and Amanda. The children of our subject, by first wife, were: Francis, and by second wife, Maria E., Elmira, Phebe, and Marlin. Our subject is a blacksmith, and established a shop at Keslarville in 1878.

JAMES KELLY.—Our subject is a son of Samuel Kelly and wife, Charity Long, residents of Cambria county, Pa., where James was born in 1816. Samuel, the father, was killed by a tree falling in 1825. The brothers and sisters of James were: John, d.; Andrew, died in the army in 78th Pennsylvania volunteers; Alexander, has not been heard from for twenty years; Hugh, d.; Catharine, m. to Joseph Stewart, of Clearfield county, Pa.; Elizabeth; and William, m. to Rebecca McMillen. All settled in this county except Catharine. Our subject, with his wife, Isabella, settled in this county, he coming into the county in 1836.

REV. RICHARD L. WILLIAMS.—Our subject is a grandson of Hugh Williams, of Carnarvanshire, Wales, who with his wife Jane and his family emigrated and settled in Green township in 1836. His son John E., father of our subject, had preceded him about six months, and had gone back to New York to hunt work and accidentally met his brother soon after the landing of the family. Hugh died in 1872, ninety-four years old. His children were: William, d.; Edward, d., m. to Miss Jones of Pittsburgh; Ann, died in Wales; John E., s. in county, m. to Mary Lewis, of Allegheny county; Hugh, d. a sailor, was drowned in Liverpool river; Jane, d., remained in Wales and married; Winfield, d.; Mary, m. first to Thomas Jones, d., these were shipwrecked in transit, but escaped with life, losing all else, and m. second to Robert Jones; and Robert H., m. first to a Miss Holmes, d., and second to a Miss Herron. John E. now lives on old homestead of his father, at Pine Flats, His children were: Richard L., our subject, Baptist minister; Hugh, m. to Elizabeth Williams; Mary J.; and Sarah A. Our subject is a graduate of Lewisburg University, and now an ordained minister of the Baptist Church.

SAMUEL ANDERSON.—Our subject is a son of William Anderson and wife, Elizabeth Logan, of Ireland, who migrated about 1815, and settled a short time in Ohio, and from thence came to this county, first near present village of Taylorsville, and then in Armstrong township. Their children, nearly all of whom settled in the county, were: John, m. to Eliza Caldwell; James, m. to Margaret Dean; Mary, m. to Augustus Reed; William, m. to Catharine Ray; Samuel, our subject, b. in county in 1825, m. to Sarah Dodds, of Butler county, b. in 1829; Eliza, m. first to William Oliver, d., and second to David Bothel, d.; Daniel, m. to Mary McColliam; Margaret, m. to Thomas Caldwell; Robert, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Nancy Smith; Nancy, m. to James Ray; Martha, m. to John Forsythe; Robert, 2d, died in the west; and Thompson McCrea, d. Our subject settled on present farm, near Pine Flats, in 1865. There is a small saw mill on the tract, and it was for twelve years the site of Thorn's steam saw mill. John and William are on old homestead, in Armstrong township. James settled in Butler county, and is the only one located out of the county. The children of our subject were; James; Elizabeth, m. to S. S. Gibson; William, Alexander, Miller, Priscella, John Reed, and Joseph, d.

ADAM SIDES.—There have been so many of above name in the county that we will have to number them. Adam, 1st, was the settler and native of York county. His son Adam, 2d, the father of our subject, settled in East Wheatfield township, and married Margaret Dyke, of the Ligonier valley. He died about 1820, of the bite of a rattlesnake. His children were: Ann, d.. m. to James Gregg, d.; John, m. to Margaret Siler, of Chambersburg, and settled in Iowa; Jane, d., m. to William Wilson, d.; and Adam, our subject, b. in the county in 1821, m. to Mary Dickey, b. in county in 1819. Our subject settled in Cherry Hill township in 1853, and on present farm, in Green township, in 1854. The tract was first improved by Robert Dunwiddie, who built a saw mill on it in 1849, on site of one built still earlier by his father, James Dunwiddie. The property, both farm and mill has been greatly improved by Mr. Sides and sons. The children of our subject were: Elias, served in the 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, died at Berryville, Va., in 1863; John; William, m. to Rebecca Graham; Uriah, m. to Mary Connor; Alonzo, b. in 1850; Margaret, d.; Mary J., m. to W. C. Wilson, settled in Westmoreland county; Emma, Adam, and Elizabeth. John Dickey, father of Mrs. Sides, came to this county in 1816, from Huntingdon county. His occupation was principally hunting and trapping, but he contracted and cleared three miles of the clay pike. He is now dead and has no descendants of the name in the county. One son served in the 67th Pennsylvania volunteers in the late war, and since moved to Kansas.

ROBERT M. MORRIS.—The father of our subject, Robert Morris, was born in North Wales, in 1788, and married Mary Perry, b. in Isle of Anglesea, North Wales, in 1775, who emigrated about 1832, and settled in New York state, and in 1840 settled in Indiana county. Only two of his children are now in the county, viz: Robert M., our subject, and Elizabeth, consort of W. R. Williams, He died in 1876, eighty-eight and a half years old, and his wife died in 1875, and if there is no mistake in the record, was one hundred years old. Their children were: Elizabeth, m. to William R. Williams; Henry, m. to Catharine Williams; Jane, m. to John Syms; Mary, m. to James Reese; Ellen, m. to Robert T. Gordon; Robert M., our subject, b. in 1833, m. to Elizabeth Williams; and William, d.. All except the two above specified reside in Allegheny county. Robert M. served in the late war in the 74th Pennsylvania volunteers, one year's service. Our subject settled in the county in 1840. His wife is a native of Rumney, South Wales; and is a daughter of Thomas Williams, who settled in the county in 1863, but emigrated in 1850. Our subject has, since his settlement on present farm, near Pine Flats, in 1872, erected one of the finest water power saw mills in the county. It now consists of circular saw mill, shingle mill, lath mill, and chopping mill, and improvements are still going on. It is on a small stream but has an overshot wheel eighteen feet in diameter with six feet buckets. The children of our subject are: William, Mary, Ellen, d., John, Harry, Thomas, d., James, and Fannie.

JAMES T. ELWOOD.—The father of our subject, James Elwood, was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., in 1793, and was married to Margaret Sheridan, of the same county, born in the same year. They settled in Indiana county about 1823, in White township, and in Green township, near Shawanee bottom, in 1840. He died in 1869, and his wife in 1878, and both are buried at Harmony Church. Their children, all of whom live on or near the place of settlement, were: Mary, m. to Jas.

Dunwiddie; James T., our subject, b. in 1821, m. first to Sarah Johnston, d., and second to Mary Johnston; William, m. first to Jane Huston, d., and second to Margaret Anderson; Margaret, m. to James Ray; and John, m. to Susanna Learn. Our subject, in 1858, built a saw mill on the run on the premises. There are four mills within one mile on this small stream, viz: Morris', Huston's, Elwood's, and P. Learn's. The children of our subject are, by first wife, Robert J., m. to a Miss Chambers, of Iowa, and is settled in Kansas; and by second wife, John S., and Sarah E. The Sheridans, of Westmoreland county, came from the Conococheague valley, and Mrs. James Elwood was brought a child. A bed-tick was placed across the horse, with a child in each end, with an opening in the tick for each to stick out their heads for air.

William J. Roberts is a native of Wales, and youngest son of John Roberts and Catharine Evans, who, with their family, emigrated to this country in 1836, settling in Green township, this county, on "Big Bend" of Two-lick creek. Mr. R. was born in 1781, and died in 1872. Mrs. Roberts died in 1850. Their children were; Evan, m. to Phebe Roberts, and now in Missouri; Robert E., m. to Sarah Griffith; John, m. first to Eliza Tomlinson, d., second to Jane Turner, d., and third to Sarah Smith; Richard, m. to Ellen Riddle; Catharine, m. to Hugh Roberts; Hugh, died in college at Meadville, Pa.; and William J., our subject, m. to Elizabeth McCurdy. Our subject is now the owner of the old "Turner farm," near Pine Flats, which he purchased in 1866. His children are: Samuel E., Scott L., Nettie M., John A., Della J., Henderson H., and Sheldon. Of John Roberts' sons, Robert E., John, Richard, and William J. are all settled near the old homestead.

Thomas Griffith.—Our subject was born in Glanmorganshire, Wales, in 1815, and married Margaret Williams, born in 1820. They emigrated in 1851, and settled in this county in 1852, near Welsh settlement, in Green township. Mrs. Griffith's father was a Baptist minister in Wales, and she is a sister of Daniel Williams, an early Welsh settler at Pine Flat. The children of our subject are: Daniel W., a Baptist minister, graduate of Lewisburg University, Pa., and Theological student at Crozer Seminary; Samuel, m. to Sarah A. Williams; John; Evan; Jane, m. to W. E. Patterson; Elizabeth, m. to Wallace S. Lockard; and William.

Owen D. Williams.—Richard W. Williams, father of our subject, was born in Wales in 1796, and was a native of the Isle of Anglesea. He married Jane Davis, by whom he had seven children, all born in Wales, and all emigrated to this country. After the death of his first wife he married Sarah James, of Pittsburgh, a native of Wales, now deceased. He died in 1876, at eighty-one years of age. He came to this country in 1832, and settled first in Madison county, New York, then in Allegheny county, Pa., and from thence to Green township, this county, in 1840, on the farm now owned by our subject. He was one of the men interested in the establishment of a Welsh church and Sunday School near the premises. His children were: William R., m. to Elizabeth Morris; Owen D., our subject, b. in 1818, m. to Margaret Jones, also b. in Wales, in 1828; John, m. to Martha Evans, a settler in Armstrong county, Pa.; Benjamin, m. to Margaret Davis, of West Virginia, and settled there; Catharine m. to Benjamin Argust, settled in Illinois; Rowland D., merchant in Pine township, m. to Hannah Owens, and Richard, m. to Martha Griffith. Robert D., a son of William R., served in 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, and was once a prisoner. The children of our subject were: Jane, m. to E. R. Jones; Richard; John, m. to Ellen Winrose and settled in Cambria county, Pa.; David R., m. to Zena Graham; Cassie, m. to V. S. Barker, of Ebensburg; Annie, Maggie, Mary, Ida, and Sarah. All of the brothers of our subject are in the county, except those specified as elsewhere.

Daniel Glenn.—The father of our subject, Joseph Glenn, emigrated from county Tyrone, Ireland, about 1820, and settled in Green township, and married Catharine McGlaughlin, of Brush Valley township. Both are now dead, Mr. G. living till 1866. The old homestead is now occupied by our subject. The place in 1823 (time of settlement) was a wilderness, and wolves were so plenty that they had paths beaten in the woods. The nearest farm eastward was the Howard farm, near the Cambria county line. The children were: Joseph, jr., b. in 1825, m. first to Mary Carner, of Venango county, Pa., d., and second to Isabella Martin; Matilda, b. in 1826, m. to John Westover, of Cambria county; Wilson, b. in 1829, d.; Daniel, our subject, b. in 1832, m. to Sarah King, of Clearfield county; James, b. in 1834, served in company B, 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th reserves, was wounded and taken prisoner, and died in prison at Richmond, Virginia; A. Johson, b. in 1837, m. to Jennie Frits, of Cambria county; Catharine, b. in 1838; and Robert, d., b. in 1840. Joseph, who lives, adjoining the old homestead, has five children living and three dead, and Daniel, our subject, has an adopted boy.

William Parry.—Hugh and Henry Parry emigrated from Carnavonshire, North Wales, and settled in Green township in 1836. Robert, another brother, came in 1844, and settled in Philadelphia, and now has a hotel on Race street. William, our subject, came in 1849, was at sea twenty-eight days on the voyage, and settled in the county the same year. Hugh was married in Wales to Grace Williams, and Henry was married in this country to Amanda McGlaughlin. Henry was caught in the machinery of a steam saw mill, and so badly injured that he lived but two hours. This occurred in 1866. His widow lives near the village of Pine Flat. A nephew of our subject, Erasmus Thomas, served in the late war, and contracted disease, from which he died. Our subject was born in 1820, and was married to Jane Williams, of Anglesea, North Wales, and their eldest child was born in Wales. Their children were: William T.; Griffith, d.; Erasmus; Hugh; Elizabeth; Catharine J., d., and Robert, d.

W. P. Lockard.—We trace the Lockard family of the county to Samuel Lockard, who with his sons, Francis, John, Thomas, Robert and Samuel, settled in the county, in Cherry Hill township in 1818. The four first named married and raised families. Samuel never married. Two Brothers, William and Matthew, remained in Bedford county, Pa., from whence the others came. John d., was married to Elizabeth Long, d., and their issue were: Eliza, m. first to Wm. T. Stephens, d., and second to Bartold Flemming, d. Thomas was born in the county, in 1819, m. first to Nancy Patterson, d., and second to Keziah Dunckel; William, m. to Elizabeth McKisick (or McKesson); David, m. first to Julia A. Long, d., and second to Sarah J. Jones; Mary, m. to Wm. Kimes; Jane, m. to Calvin Young; Susanna, d.; Martha, d.; John, d.; and Samuel, d. Our subject is a son of David, whose children by his first wife were: Obediah, d.; William W., our subject, m. to Phebe J. Cunningham; by second wife, Emma, m, to Thomas Caddick; Mary A.; George W.; James S.; Elmer E.; Cora; Amanda N.; Albert D.; Belmont; Charles and Harry. Our subject is now engaged in the saw mill business at Cookport.

John D. Martin is a son of David Martin, married to Nancy Hadden, who settled near the point now Kimmel P. O., in 1838. Their children were: Jane; John D., our subject, b. in 1840, m. to Maria Askin; Isabella, m. to Joseph Glenn; William H., m. to Margaret J. Dunwiddie; Mary; Catharine; Sarah and George. Our subject established a store, on a lot, a part of the farm settled by his father in 1869, and in 1872, built a commodious store room 22x36 feet, with ware-room 12x24, and has since made other improvements. The smithshop was built in 1876. The children of our subject are: David, Elizabeth E., Nancy J., Thomas Askin, John, Martha Ann, and Emma Blanche. The wife of our subject is the only daughter of Thomas Askin, jr.

James McGuire, our subject, served in the war of 1812, and was born in Allegheny county, in 1787, and was married to Mary Kunkle, who was born in this county, in 1786, and is still living on the homestead of our subject in Green township. She was of German descent, and her parents were very early settlers in Black-lick township. Our subject settled on the homestead in Green township, in 1837, and remained in till his death, in 1858. It is now occupied by the widow and son William, and daughter Louisa. The children were: Amy, m. to David Buterbaugh; Levi, m. to a Mr. Johnston, settled in Clinton county, Pa.; William, m. to Jane Jewell; James, d.; John, m. to Mary Kerr; Elliott, m. to a Miss White; Elizabeth, m. to Charles Cox, settled in the State of Indiana; Mary, d., m. to John McCullough; Matilda, m. to Morton Flemming; Sarah, m. to Isaac McCullough, d.; Rachel, m. to Andrew Cook; and Lavina. John settled on the Mitchell farm, in Cherry Hill township, in 1842, and lived in the stone house at the time the negroes were kidnapped on the farm, and yet lives in sight of the old spot. His children are; Levi, m. to Mary Wymer; Martha, d.; Jennie; John H.; Mary, and Clara.

William E. Davis.—Our subject was born in the parish of Aber, Carnarvonshire, Wales, in 1813, and migrated in 1836, settling in the county about 1840. He was married to Nancy Gibson, descendant of Charles Gibson, pioneer. Of the Davis family another brother, John, migrated and settled in Wisconsin, and a sister, Jane, was married to John Hughes, and lived several years in the "Red tavern," Cherry Hill township, and then moved to Wisconsin. There is one brother yet in Wales. The children of our subject were: Jane, d.; Evan, m. to Ellen Patterson; James; Mary, d., m. to David R. Williams; Ellen; John; Willie, d.; and Catharine. The children of Mary, d., are: Evan, and Lawrence Williams. Our subject was among the early Welsh settlers in the township, for which see notes on the Welsh settlement.

DAVID R. HOUK, son of Henry and Elizabeth Houk, was born in Indiana county, Sept. 3d, 1845. He was educated at Pine Flat Academy, and Two Lick Select School. He followed teaching as his avocation for four years, his first term being in 1863, in Green township. From 1867 to 1870, he was engaged in farming. In 1870, he married Maggie S. Buterbaugh, daughter of Frederick and Margaret Butterbaugh. They settled at Purchase Line, where they are now living. They have three children, daughters. He engaged in the mercantile business in 1870, in company with David and Joseph Myers. In 1873, they dissolved partnership, and his brother William Houk, purchased an interest in the store, and the firm has since been known as D. R. Houk & Brother. In 1879, they erected a two story frame structure 22x50 feet, for a business house, and a fine dwelling near the store room.

JOHN MUMMAU was born in 1811, in East Huntingdon, township, Westmoreleland county, and was a son of David and Maria Mummau nee Newcomer, who were natives of Lancaster county. David was a son of Jacob Mummau of German descent, who settled at an early day in Westmoreland county. The former died in 1835. David died in 1868, at the age of eighty-five; his wife in 1856. Their children were: Peter, George, Catharine, John, Mary, Jacob, Elizabeth, David, and Christian. Our subject came to Indiana county in 1840, and for ten years resided near Kellysburg on land which he leased of Robert Thompson, of Rayne township. In 1850, he located in Green township. He was married in 1833 to Mary Long, daughter of Jacob Long, of Westmoreland county. She died in 1874, about sixty-five years of age. Their children were: Catharine, m. to Alexander Nupp; David, m. to Catharine Philips; Samuel, m. to Jane Fulmer; John A., m. to Rachel Buterbaugh; Jacob, m. to Ann Myers; Levi H., m. in the West; and Daniel Webster, m. to Martha Kenter. Samuel and Levi H. were soldiers in the war of 1861, each serving for three years. Samuel was a prisoner for some time. Each was slightly wounded. Levi H. is a justice of the peace in Illinois.

YOUNG TOWNSHIP

was organized in 1830 from parts of Conemaugh and Black-lick townships, and was named in honor of President Judge Young. We herewith present its first assessment, its early settlers being noted in the lists of taxables of Armstrong, Blacklick and Conemaugh townships, presented in their respective sketches. Mrs. Mary Cunningham, Mrs. Mary Gilmour, and other old residents mentioned particularly as among the pioneers, John and Robert Robinson, the Niels, James McKissen, Andrew Cunningham, the Smiths, the Lowmans, Hutchinsons, Harbisons, Elders, McCombs, Millens and others.

WEST LEBANON, YOUNG TOWNSHIP.

The original settler upon the tract which includes the site of the village was John Hutchinson. The tract was about a third of a mile wide and extended from the mouth of Whisky run to about half a mile north of the site of the town. In 1805 his sons, John, James, George, Edward and David, were occupying this land.

The village was laid out by Thompson McCrea, surveyor, on the 25th of December, 1839, for John White and William Kier, who owned the land upon which the town is situated.

SCOTLAND.

That part of Young township known as Scotland received its name from the native country of Andrew Cunningham, who was the first to found the settlement bearing this name. His location is said to have been a few years after the close of the Revolutionary war. Later came Hugh Cunningham and Alexander Gilmour, John Gilmour and Robert Park, about 1808, Thomas Burns, Alexander Graham and William Gemmell. (See sketches of Gilmour, Park, Graham and others.)

ELDER'S RIDGE

received its name from Robert Elder, who with his children, Robert, David, James and Ann, settled upon it in 1786. (See sketch of Robert Elder.)

WATSON'S RIDGE

was called for Matthew Watson who located upon the present Dr. Thomas Murray farm in 1794.

EVAN LEWIS was born in 1802, on the farm now occupied by J. J. Lewis, and was a son of John and Nancy Lewis nee David, who was married in 1790. The former was born in Franklin county in 1768, and settled on the old homestead in 1796, where he died in 1831. His wife died in 1835, at the age of seventy-five. Their children were: James, b. 1791, d,, sixty-seven years old, m. to Catharine Laughery, d. in 1829, at the age of forty-nine; Margaret D., b. in 1793, d. at the age of sixty, m. to William McFarland; Catharine, b. in 1795, d. at the age of forty, m. to John McFarland; John, b. in 1797, d. in 1828, m. to Nancy Weamer; Rebecca, b. in 1799, d. in 1830, m. to William Robinson; Evan, our subject, d. in 1873. m. in 1825, to Sarah Johnston, d.; David, b. in 1804, d. in 1879, m. to Elizabeth McGaughey; and (Rev.) Reuben, b. in 1807, Presbyterian minister, who is married and resides in eastern Virginia. Our subject's children were: Mary Ann, m. to Samuel Barr; Nancy, d., m. to Valentine Kerr; Sarah, m. to William Beatty, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Sloan; Margaret, m. to James George; Rebecca, m. to John Bell; Martha, m. to Daniel Elgin; and John J., our informant, b. in 1846, m. in 1869, to Kate M. Dixon. John J.'s children are: James Dixon and Sadie Blanch.

THE BLAKLEYS.—David Blakley, a native of Ireland, Margaret Herron, his wife and two or three children, came to what is known as the old Blakley homestead, Young township, between 1792 and 1800; David in 1820, at the age of sixty, and his wife in 1849, about eighty-nine years old. Their children were: James, d., m. first to Elizabeth Gibson, d., second to Catharine Waters, d., and third to Jane Jack, d.; Hugh, b. in Ireland, in 1790, d., in 1877, m. to Jane Henderson, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Hugh Knox, d., Margeret, m. to John Gibson, d.; and Susan, m. to James McClanahan; Hugh's children were: D. J., m. to Martha Caldwell; John; James W., m. to Jane Wilson; Mary, d., m. to James Brown; Robert H., d., m. to Catharine Henry; Julia Ann, d.; Rebecca, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Richard Lafferty; Ellen, m. first to James R. Hart, d., and second to Alexander Sharp; and Joseph A., m. to Elizabeth Fulton. Joseph A., was a member for about one year of the 56th Pa. volunteers. He was wounded and discharged for disability.

DANIEL LOWRY.—He was born on the 20th of September, 1797, in what is now Armstrong township, and was the son of Robert and Rachel Lowry nee Elgin, who were married in the county about 1790. Robert Lowry was the son of William and Nancy Lowry nee Steele. William and wife were of Irish birth, and probably all of their children were born in Ireland. The date of the Lowry's location in the county is unknown, but it must have been only a short time after the Fergus Moorhead settlement. William Lowry's children were: Jane, d., m. to John Gibson, d.; Sarah, d., m. first to —— Simpson, who was killed by the Indians at the time of the capture of Fergus Moorhead, and second to Samuel Hall: James; Robert, (see above); Isabella, m. to James Gamble; Samuel; William, m. to Mary Smith; and Nancy. Robert Lowry's children were: James, d., m. to Sarah Beatty, d.; Samuel, m. to Sarah Calhoun, d.; Daniel, m. in 1820 to Nancy Lewes, now living, eighty-three years old; William, d., m. to Hattie Miller, eighty yelrs of age; Mary, m. to Robert Douthard, d.; and Sarah, d., m. to Nicholas McGaughey, d. Daniel's children are: Samuel, Rachel, Lydia, Robert, Mary, Hugh, Sarah, Lewis, William, d.; Jesse, Nancy, and Keziah Ann, d.

MRS. MARY GILMOUR was born in Franklin county, in 1792, and was the daughter of Abraham and Susannah Lowman, who located in the county in 1793, for whom see sketch of the Lowman family. She was married in 1814 to Alexander Gilmour, a native of Scotland, who had migrated to Westmoreland county, in 1808. After remaining there two years, he was joined by his parents and a number of his brothers and sisters. In 1812, they removed to Young township. William Gilmour, the father, died in 1821, at the age of eighty-six. He and his son John wagoned goods between Philadelphia and Baltimore and this section before the pikes were made. His wife, who was Christine Graham, died in 1811, about seventy-two years of age. Alexander, the husband of Mrs. Gilmour, died in 1844, at the age of sixty-three. Of his brothers and sisters who migrated to Indiana, are: Jane, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Robert Burns, d.; Euphemia, m. to Robert Parks; and John, d.; m. to Esther Gray, d. Of those who remained in Scotland are: Janet, d., m. first to John Reed, and second to ——; Matthew, d.; and William. Alexander and Mary Gilmour's children are: Susan, m. to Jacob Lowman, d.; William, m. to Abby McCurdy; and John, m. in 1850 to Ann H. Cunningham, daughter of Robert and Jane Cunningham nee Hopkins. John and Ann H. Cunningham's children are: Alexander W., m to Nancy J. Niel; Jennie E.; Robert Clark, d.; and Elsie. Jacob, d., and Susan Louman's children were: Alexander G., d., m. to Jane Adams; Mary J., m. in 1843 to W. H. Henry; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Nesbitt; and William, m. to Mary Smith. M. H. and Mary J. Henry's children are: John G., Susan, Elizabeth, William, Clark Miller, George Herbert, Mathew Hugh Dean, and Charles. Mrs. Mary Gilmour, her daughter, the latter's daughter and family, in all four generations, reside in the same house on the old Gilmour homestead. The latter was surveyed for John Mifflin in 1803, February 14th, and a patent of that date was issued. The warrant of the John Gilmour (the adjoining tract) bears date of March 2, 1775, but the survey and patent were of the same day and year as the above. John, d., and Esther Gilmour's children were: Margaret A., m. to Thos. Clemment, d.; Jane, d.; Mary; Elizabeth, m. to Alexander Lowman; Nancy, d.; Martha, m. to William Lucas; William, m. to Nancy J. Young; John, m. to Elizabeth Scott; and three deceased.

Robert Elder, who, with his family was the first settler on the ridge that bears his name, was of Scotch-Irish descent, being the grandson of Robert and Eleanor Elder, who migrated from Drummore, county Down, Ireland, in about 1730, and settled on a tract of land about five miles north of Harrisburg, Pa. When he came to his new home, his children, James, David, Robert and Ann, had reached maturity. He had one son by his first wife, who did not accompany the family, being brought up by his mother's people. His second wife was Mary Taylor. Robert Elder died in 1790 or 1791; his wife (Mary T. Elder) on the 15th of April, 1813. Both are buried in Ebenezer grave yard. James Elder, the oldest son, was married to Martha Robinson in 1792, and settled on the half of the farm that contained the first buildings. He was a large muscular man, full of courage and capable of great endurance, and thus was well fitted for pioneer life. His children used to say he never was known to feel any fear except on one occasion when coming home late at night from a neighbor's, where he had been butchering, the wolves in considerable numbers came up to him and circled around with hideous howlings. He pounded on a tree with a club and frightened them away. He was a ruling elder in the church of Ebenezer, chosen at the first election for officers of that order in that congregation which position he held till his death, in 1813; his wife died in 1812. His farm was subdivided, his son David living on the part that contained the homestead, and his son James on the other portion. David Elder, the second son of Robert, was born in 1764. He married Ann Nesbitt in 1790, and settled on a farm along the Conemaugh about one mile east of what is now the tunnel on the W. P. R. R. In 1816, he removed with his family to Ohio. Robert, the third son of Robert Elder, was born in 1767. He was married to Mary Smith. They lived on the eastern half of the original tract. He died in 1813, and his wife in 1857. Ann, only daughter of Robert Elder, was married to Archibald Marshall, who made the first improvement on the present Getty and Lowry farms, Conemaugh township. There are a number of others by the name of Elder living in this county who are of the same stock, but descended from a different branch of the Dauphin county family. When the Elders first came to their new home, they found no clearing whatever on the tract they were to occupy, and their nearest neighbors were several miles distant. At that time, the settlers were few and widely scattered in that part of the county. They extemporized a shanty of four upright forks holding up a roof of bark and brush, having no protection at the sides. This shanty stood a few rods north of where Prof. S. J. Craighead's house is situated. They had brought a few cooking utensils and some provisions with them across the mountains on pack-horses. In this simple manner they lived until they were able to erect a house of hewn logs, which was built in a very short time on the ground now used as a garden, beside Craighead's house. The use of this building as a blockhouse is mentioned in another article. Joshua Elder, the surveyor was a son of Rev. Colonel John Elder, of Dauphin county, and a second cousin of Robert Elder, our subject. Joshua died in 1820, at the age of seventy-six. His first wife was Mary McAlister, and the second, Sarah McAlister. The former died in 1782, at the age of twenty-nine, and the latter in 1807, at the age of forty-five. His old bible, and one of his early survey books are in the possession of Robert Elder. His dictionary is in the hands of Thomas Elder. Robert, jr.,'s children were: Margaret, d., m. to William Ewing, d.; Joshua, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Leard, d.; Ann, d.; John, d.; Hannah, d.; and Robert, m. to Nancy W. Douglass. The latter's children were: Maria, J., m. to Thomas Elder, d.; John D., d., a graduate of Jefferson College in the class of 1856; Robert Y., m. to Mary E. Spalding; Cordelia, m. to Dr. Robert Barr; Julia, d.; Lyde A., m. to C. C. Collins; Josephine, Agnes V., and Lizzie E. John D. was second lieutenant of Co. D, 62d Pa. vols. for about one year, and was killed at Malvern Hills while in command of the company. The children of Robert Y. Elder were: Maud W., Robert Roy, George Paul and Alice Mary. The children of James Elder, a son of our subject were: Robert R., d., a surveyer, m. first to Sarah Sherer, d., and second to Eliza Elder, d.; David, d. b. in 1795, m. to Julia Ann Sherer, d.; John, d., m. to Elizabeth McKee, d.; Mary, m. to Samuel Russell, d.; Joshua, m. first to Eleanor Sherer, d., second to a Miss Gilmore, d., and third to Nancy Brown; James, d., m. to Margaret Barnett; Rachel, d., m. first to George Whitby, d., and second to Jesse Smith, d.; and Thomas, b. in 1810, married first to Elizabeth Coleman, d., second to Mrs. Jane Cook nee Moore, d., and third to Mrs. Martha Caldwell nee Robinson, daughter of James Robinson, a soldier in the war of 1812, and a captain in the militia of Westmoreland county. The children of Thos. a son of James Elder were: Sarah, m. to Marshall Doods; Robert, d.; and Margaret J., m. to Rev. James Moorhead, Presbyterian minister. The children of David Elder, a son of James Elder were: James S., Presbyterian minister, m. to Nannie C. Barnett; and Sarah E., m. to S. Judson Craighead of Washington county. Rev. Sames S. Elder's children were: John W. B., and David Judson, d., and James Montgomery, twins. Prof. Craighead's children were; David Elder, George V., Julia E., James R. E., Sarah M., Mary E., and Nannie. The children of James, a son of James Elder were: Martha R., m. to Rev. John M. Barnett, Presbyterian minister; and T. B., graduate of Elder's Ridge Academy, in the class of 1853, and of Jefferson College, in the class of 1855, teacher for several years in the Academy of Elder's Ridge, m. to Mary Barnett. The latter's children were: Nettie M.; Wilson B.; Maggie May; Lily A., d.; Emma Gertrude, d.; James T., d.; and Nannie Grace, d. The four deceased children died of diphtheria in a single week in November, 1878. From 1813 to 1879, there was not a death on the homestead of David Elder, nor the S. C. Craighead property. In the latter year, Mr. Elder died. The warrant of the Robert and T. B. Elder and S. J. Craighead farms, was issued in 1784, to George Gray, who deeded to John Elder, the surveyor. The latter on the 10th of April, 1790, conveyed the same to David, James, and Robert Elder. David and Robert deeded to James on the 28th of October, 1802. The patent was issued to the latter in 1802. In it the tract is called "Elder's choice." Mr. Craighead has a hammer used by James Elder, in making the early improvements on his tract.

James H. McKissen was born in 1816, on the farm now occupied by him, and was a son of James and Nancy McKissen nee Lowry. The former was a son of James McKissen and Mrs. Letitia Caldwell, a widow whose maiden name is unknown. Jas. McKissen, sen., came to the above named tract in 1776, and made a small improvement, building a cabin and raising a crop of corn. In the fall he was forced to fly on account of the Indians, and returned to eastern Pennsylvania. A native of Ireland, nevertheless he enlisted in the Revolutionary army from Carlisle, and served till the cessation of hostilities. He was married not long after the war, and resided in Franklin county till 1790, when he returned to his former improvement. He died in 1838, about ninety years of age; his wife in 1828, about eighty years old. Their children were: Martha, d., m. to William Cochran, d.; James, d., m. to Nancy Lowry, d.; and Robert, d., m. to Ellen Patterson. James was in the war of 1812 for six months. The latter's children were: Anna, d., m. to Thompson McCrea; James H. m. to Eliza Couch; and Robert, d. Our subject's children were: James T., d.; Samuel, m. to Evaline Sharp; Melissa, m. to Ralston Walker; Robert; Clarissa; William, d.; and John, d. James T. was a musician in the three months' service, in the 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps for nine months, and in the "Boston Brigade Band" for two years.

FRANCIS HARBISON was born in the township in 1815, and was a son of Robert and Mary Harbison nee Miller. The former was a son of Francis and Catharine Harbison nee Hart. Francis Harbison was born near Philadelphia, served in the Revolutionary war, during part of which he was a prisoner, and settled in 1798 on the farm now occupied by William Donahey, Young township. He died in 1823, at the age of sixty-five; his wife in 1849, at the age of ninety. Their children were: Joseph, d., m. to Rebecca Ewing, d.; Robert, b. in 1785, d. in 1855, m. to Mary Millen, b. in 1785, d. in 1858; Mary, m. to Thomas Cunningham, d; Jane, d., m. to Jas. Ewing, d.; Anna, d.; William, d., m. to Sarah Hutchinson, d.; Sarah, d., m. to William McNeil, d.; and Matthew, d., m. to Mary Henry. The children of Robert Harbison were: Anna, d., m. to Thomas M. Anderson, d.; Catharine, m. to Alexander Fulton; Francis, m. to Eliza Armstrong, daughter of Andrew and Eliza Armstrong nee Wallace; Andrew was a son of William Armstrong, a Revolutionary soldier; Mary, d., m. to S. M. Taylor; James, d.; Sarah, m. to Francis Cunningham; and Jane, d., m. to William K. Davis. Our subject's children were: Mary Elizabeth; Robert A., m. to Nannie Cribbs; Martha Ann, m. to D. F. Ashbaugh; and Maggie W. Robert A.'s children were: Albert C., Mary, Edna, and Francis Ralph. The Francis Harbison farm was warranted to Charles Massey in 1773, and patented to John Miffln in 1784. It contained three hundred and five acres, and was called "Charleston." Mary Miller, the wife of Robert Harbison, was born in the Sewickley settlement, Westmoreland county, whither her parents had fled from the Indians. She was a daughter of James and Anna Miller nee Sherbley, who located about the close of the Revolutionary war on the farm now occupied by R. J. Arnold, Young township. The former died, eighty-four years old; the latter sixty-four years old. Their children were: John, d., m. to a Miss McCurdy, d.; Barbara, d., m. to Andrew Uncapher, d.; Mary, d., m. to Robert Harbison, d.; Joseph, d.; William, d., m. to Ellen Rosborough, d.; Anna, m. to Alexander Graham, d.; and James, d., m. to Mary Ann Cunningham. The children of Joseph Harbison (a son of Francis) were: Anna, m. to Silas Fulton; Sarah, m. to Joseph Cunningham, d.; William, d., m. to Margaret McNutt, d.; Mary, m. to William Cooper, d.; Francis, m. to Parmelia Cooper; Catharine, d.; John, m. to Elizabeth Beatty; and Jane, d. The children of Francis (a son of Joseph) Harbison were: J. W., m. first to Mary A. Hart, d., and second to Sarah Galbraith; Matilda, m. to A. W. Ewing; William C., m. to Emma Hart; and Armelda M., d. J. W. served in company D, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. The children of J. W. Harbison (a son of Francis and Parmelia Harbison) were: Alvah V., and Ella M. The children of Matthew (a son of Francis, the pioneer) and Mary Harbison nee Henry were: Martha Ann, m. to Rev. Ross Stephenson (Presbyterian); Sarah, m. to Joseph Ritner; Nancy Jane; Catharine, m. to A. H. Fulton; Rebecca, m. to Henry Townsend; Maria, m. to W. T. N. Wallace; Robert Henry and Rachel, d., twins; Amanda; Margaret, m. to T. C. Watson; and Clarissa C., d.

ALEXANDER FULTON was born in Frankstown, Huntingdon county, January 1, 1805, and was a son of Robert and Ruth Fulton nee Cunningham. The family came to Indiana county in May 1805, and located on a tract of land now owned by Silas Fulton, one and one fourth miles south east of West Lebanon. Robert was accompanied besides his own family, by his brothers John and William and family, and his grandmother, Sarah Fulton nee McDonald, widow of Alexander Fulton. Robert Fulton's children were: Alexander, m. to Catharine Harbison; Silas, m. to Anna Harbison; George, m. to Nancy Cunningham; John, m. to Rachel Elder; Keziah Ann, d., m. to John Miller, d.; Jane, m. to Andrew Campbell; Sarah, m. to James Millen; Margaret, m. to Johnston Holston, d.; and Jemima. John was in Rev. Captain Samuel Anderson's company of militia at the time of the Morgan raid. Our subject's children were: Keziah Ann, d.; Mary Jane, d., m. to Alexander Hazlett, d.; Sarah, m. to Boz. Heasley; Robert A., m. to Elizabeth Campbell; and Joseph, m. to Elizabeth Coulter. Robert A. and Joseph, were in the 63d Pennsylvania volunteers, the latter serving over four years. The house of David Hutchison, the son of John the pioneer, and original improver of the tract (which extended from the mouth of Whisky run, about half a mile north of West Lebanon) is still standing in the rear of Mr. Fulton's residence.

MRS. LETITIA EWING was born about six miles from Gettysburg, Adams county, on the 23d of November, 1774, and was a daughter of Hugh and Griselia McCurdy nee Walker, a daughter of Joseph Walker. Hugh was a native of county Antrim, Ireland, and was a son of John and Elizabeth McCurdy, who lived and died in Ireland. Hugh was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, having migrated to America when a young man, and located in what is now Adams county, where he was married. In May, 1792, the family removed to Allegheny county, where Hugh McCurdy died over eighty years of age, and his wife at the age of eighty-seven. Their children were: Mary, d., m. to Joseph Glenn, d.; Letitia, m. November 18th, 1793, to Major Samuel Ewing, d. in 1821, at the age of forty-six; Elizabeth, d. in 1825, at the age of fifty (according to the Montour Cemetery, Allegheny county tombstone), m. to Archibald Shaw, d.; Joseph, d., m. to Mary Hall, d.; Andrew, d., m. to Elizabeth Reed, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Joseph Scott, d.; and John. Our subject's children were: James, b. November 22d, 1794, d. in 1842, m. to Elizabeth McCandless, d.; Hugh, b. in 1803, m. in 1839, to Sarah McMeans; Mary, m. to David McKee, d.; Elizaboth Ann, d., m. to George Sherer, d.; William, d.; John Alexander, b. in 1814, m. in 1839, to Elizabeth Wray; Samuel, m. to Sarah Chamberlain; and Andrew Walker, m. to Mary McComb. The children of Hugh M., a son of our subject, were: Elizabeth Jane, Letitia Ann, Samuel, Mary, Harriet Melinda, and Amanda. The children of John A., a son of our subject, were: Sarah J., m. to Dr. S. W. Virtue, d.; Samuel, d.; Letitia; Robert Wray, m. to Jemima Laney; William H., m. to Mary E. Hart; John Calvin, and James Smith. Our subject in her prime was about five and a half feet in height, and weighed from one hundred and forty to one hundred and sixty pounds. At this time her head is covered with a luxuriant growth of not very gray hair, and though confined to her bed, has the characteristics of a woman of seventy-five. Until one hundred and three years of age she was able to walk about, but at that time met with a fall by means of which a leg was broken, and dislocated, which has since confined her to her bed. Her appetite at this time (February, 1880,) is in a normal condition, and she eats occasionally four or five times per day. Her residence is now with her son, John A. Ewing, South Bend township, Armstrong county, though she resided for many years with her son Hugh M. on the Indiana and Armstrong county line. She is now and has been for many years, a constant and inveterate smoker of tobacco.

JOHN HART was born in 1816, on the farm now occupied by Francis Hart, Young township, and was a son John and Abby Hart nee Scott. The former was born in the Loyal-hanna, and died in 1874, in his ninetieth year. His wife died in 1825, about thirty-five years of age. His second wife was Lilly Ann McCollom, who died in 1877. (See Hart sketches, Saltsburg and Conemaugh.) John Hart's children were: Mary, m. to James Oliver, d.; John, m. first to Ann Barr, d., and second to Mary A. Smith, d.; Martha, m. to Hugh Cunningham; Eliza, m. to Robert Cunningham; Nancy; Sarah; Jane, m. to Samuel Stewart, d.; James, m. to Mary J. McNees; Francis, and Abby. Our subject's children were: Robert Alexander, m. to Amanda E. Henry; John Wilson; Emma, m. to Calvin Harbison, and Abby. The Francis Hart farm was warranted March 2d, 1775, to Joseph Mifflin, and patented Feb. 15th, 1803, to Jonathan Mifflin. It was called "Farmer's delight," and included two hundred and fifty-four and four-tenth acres. The deed to John Hart is dated in 1814, and probably about that time he located on the tract above named.

JOHN CALDWELL was born in Armstrong township, in 1824, and was a son of John Caldwell, of whom see sketch in Armstrong township. He was married in 1848, to Sarah Jane Henry, daughter of John and Margaret Henry, who migrated from Ireland to Armstrong township, in 1829. Our subject's children were: J. R., m. to Nancy Patterson; M. H, m. to Isabella King; R. M.; Thomas; W. M.; D. M.; J. W.; and Margaret Agnes. He removed to his present location in 1868. This tract was warranted to Jacob Beeler, in 1776.

THE CALDWELL POTTERY was erected by Thomas Anderson, in 1850. James McNees was his successor, and continued five years. John Caldwell became the proprietor in 1868. Anderson employed from one to two men, McNees two to four, and Caldwell five to eight. The product is grey stone-ware, stone pumps, drain-pipe, etc., and is sold either from the factory, or delivered to stores in this and the neighboring counties.

George Reed was born in 1801, near New Salem, Westmoreland county, and was a son of John and Dorcas Reed nee Neil. The former was a soldier in the Revolutionary war for eighteen months, serving three terms of six months each, for his father, brother, and himself. He was at the battles of Stony Point and Brandwine, where he was wounded in the leg. The only relief he received for his injury was by tearing off a piece of his linen shirt and drawing it through the hole in his leg. He was a native of Lancaster county, and four of his children were born in that county, and the remainder in Westmoreland. He died in 1818, at the age of seventy. His children were: Robert, d., b. in 1785, m. to Jane McCullough; James, d., b. in 1788, m. to Margaret Ralston; Adam, d., b. in 1789, m. to Mary Christy, d.; Joseph, b. in 1792, d. February 22, 1880, m. to Ann Christy, d.; Jane, d., b. in 1794; John, d., b. in 1796; Samuel, d., b. in 1799, m. to Lavinia Hunter; George, b. in 1801, m. to Mary Mechling; Dorcas, d., b. in 1803, m. to Jeremiah Tittle, d.; and William, d., b. in 1805. James was county commissioner of Westmoreland county, and died during his first term. George was justice of the peace for one term. The latter was a millwright by trade, and built and repaired mills for twenty years. He erected three steam mills in Westmoreland county, namely, at New Salem, Derry, and Hannastown. He came to Indiana county in 1839, and erected the Reed and Wallace steam mill in Young township, the second steam mill in the county, the first being at Blairsville. Since 1855, he has been the proprietor of the "old Clark mill," Young tp. Our subject's children were: John, d.; David M., m. to Eliza Marshall; Benjamin Franklin, d., m. to Jennie Sandles; Eliza, m. to David Robinson; Mary Jane, m. to John Jack; Charlotte Susan, m. to William McKelvey; Dorcas Ann, m. to William McGara; and Sybilla Margaret, m. to Robert Henry. John was a private in Co. K, 11th Pa. vols., and was promoted successively, to second lieutenant and captain. He was wounded at Antietam, while in command of his company, and died Oct. 2, 1862, before the latter commission reached him. David M. was a lieutenant in the militia at the time of the Morgan raid. Benjamin Franklin was a soldier in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers. The children of William and Susan McKelvey nee Reed were: John, Frank, George and Armor.

Robert Henderson was born on the farm now occupied by his son, Joseph H. Henderson, in 1811, and was a son of Alexander (a native of Ireland) and Hannah Henderson nee Thorn. The former died in 1844, about sixty years of age, and the latter in the same year about sixty-five years of age. Alexander Henderson was a son of Robert and Mary Henderson nee Ralston, natives of Ireland, who settled about 1796 on what is now the Frank Cribbs farm, Young township. (See sketch of David Henderson, Saltsburg.) Alexander's children were: Mary, d., m. to John Robertson; Robert, d. in 1852, m. to Martha Henderson, b. in 1807; Matilda, d., m. to Samuel McLaughlin, d.; and Margaret Jane, m. to John Rosborough. Our subject's children were: Robert Alexander, d.; John, m. to Hadessa Wright; James Wilson, d.; James Ralston, and Joseph H., m. to Prudence J. Telford. Robert A. was in company A, 1st Kansas cavalry for about two months, and was killed at Little Blue creek, Johnston county, Missouri. John was in company D, 62d Pennsylvania volunteers for three years and was wounded three times. The children of Joseph H., a son of our subject, were: Martha Mabel, Mary Hadessa, and Cree Telford.

Mrs. Mary Rosborough was born in 1800, on the farm now occupied by Alexander McConnell, Conemaugh township, and was a daughter of Frederick and Lydia Deemer nee Eberhart. The former was a native of Germany and the latter of Pennsylvania and were married in Lancaster, Lancaster county. They located on the above named tract not long after the close of the Revolutionary war, having migrated to this section on pack horses. They were often forced to retire to the blockhouse on the McLain farm (south side of the Conemaugh), about half a mile above the site of Saltsburg. Frederick Deemer's children were: Catharine, d., m. to Alexander Findley, d.; Frederick, d., m. to Rebecca Johnston, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Matthias Miller, d.; Hannah, d., m. to Andrew Miller, d.; Philip, d., m. to Sarah Miller, d.; George, d., m. to Elizabeth Amenlong, d.; Lydia, d., m. to Andrew Duncan, d.; Mary, m. to James Rosborough, d. Jan. 8th, 1876, at the age of seventy-five; he was a son of James Rosborough who settled prior to 1800, on the farm now owned by J. Y. McCartney, Conemaugh township; James, jr., located in 1829, on the farm now occupied by his widow; he was a justice of the peace for two terms; Margaret, m. to David Miller, d.; and John, m. to Barbara, Hazlet, d. Our subject's children were: Charles, m. to Elizabeth Fraley; John, m. to Margaret J. Henderson; Frederick, m. to Mary Hankerson; Rebecca, d.; Alexander, d.; Lydia, d.; Isabella, d., m. to Sample Love; James, d., m. to Sarah Graven; Alexander; Maria, m. to John Getty; Violet; Elizabeth, m. to Robert McAdoo; Thomas; Rebecca J., m. first to Jonathan Ayers, d., and second to James Billick; and Julia Ann. John was in the 5th Pennsylvania cavalry for about three years. James was in the 116th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. Alexander was in the 2d battalion six months Pennsylvania volunteers, in Thompson's independent battery, Pennsylvania light artillery for one year, and in company M, 5th Pennsylvania heavy artillery for nine and a half months.

David McComb was born on the farm now occupied by his son A. D. McComb, Young township, in 1800, and was a son of Allen and Hannah McComb nee Bovard. The former was a native of Scotland. He served in the American army during the Revolution, for six years, and immediately subsequent to that eventful period, located on the tract now occupied as above stated, by A. D. McComb. This tract was first surveyed on an application order, dated April 3d, 1769, and issued to James McConnell. The deed to Allen McComb, is dated in 1790, the consideration being one hundred and seventy-four pounds. The patent was issued to Allen McComb in 1828, the consideration being two hundred and seventeen dollars and six cents. Allen McComb's children were: Charles, d., m. to Mary McGuire, d.; David, d. in 1873, m. to Nancy McKalip, d.; Allen, d. m. to Annie Patton, d.; Jane, d., m. to Alexander Wilson, d. at the age of one hundred and five; and Hannah, d., m. to William Cochran, d., a soldier in the war of 1812. Our subject's children were: Mary Ann, d.; Hannah, m. to Andrew Giffin; David Wilson, d.; and Alexander Donaldson, m. to Rebecca Fulton. David Wilson served in company D, 2d battalion Pennsylvania six months volunteers, and in company C, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry, for about one year. A. D.'s children were: James Fulton and Agnes Kate.

Samuel Irwin.—Our subject was born in 1817, on the farm now occupied by him, a part of the Laughrey patent including the present village of Lewisville. His father Eliphalet Irwin, d., was born in Conecocheague valley, and m. Margaret Marshall, d., born in this county, the dates of settlement and marriage not known. The children of Eliphalet, were: Hannah, d.; Jane, d., m. to Samuel Dixon; Mary, m. to John Elder, d.; John, d., m. to Catharine Banks; James, m. to Jane Griffith; Samuel, our subject, m. to Dorcas Elder; William, d., m. to Nancy Coleman; Marshall, m. to Ellen McConnell; Benjamin, m. first to Margaret Marshall, d.; and second to Rebecca Sterling, d.; and Joseph, d., m. to Sarah Freeland. Eliphalet and his brothers, Benjamin and Bezi, were in the war of 1812, but were not of this county then. Our subject was elected county commissioner in 1860, and served one term—that of the war—term of trial for public officers. His children are: Thomas E., m. to Elsie Walker; and Rebecca A., m. to Jacob Nesbit.

Samuel Henry was born in 1837, on the farm now occupied by his father, in Young township, and was a son of Robert and Isabella Henry nee Gilmore. The former was born in 1805, in the house now occupied by our subject, and was a son of Robert and Martha Henry nee McKesson. Robert, sr., was a native of Ireland, and located on the farm now occupied by our subject in 1804. He died in 1844, at the age of seventy-two. His wife died in 1846, at the age of seventy-seven. Their children were: John, d.; Nancy, d., m. to William Davis; Joseph, d.; Robert, m. to Isabella Gilmore; Martha, m. to Robert Henderson, d.; Mary, m. to Matthew Harbison, d.; and Rachel, d., m. to Robert Miller. Robert and Isabella Henry's children were: Nancy, m. to William Hart; Samuel, m. to Nancy J. Wilson; Martha Ann, d.; Robert, m. to Sybella Margaret Reed; Jane Elizabeth, m. to James Forsyth; Amanda Emily, m. to Alexander Hart; and Jno., d. Sam'l was in company B, 101st Pennsylvania volunteers for about six months. Our subject's children were: Robert Wilson; Joseph Newton, d.; Martha Elizabeth, d.; John Calvin; William Daniel, d.; and Alexander Frank.

Mrs. Mary Coleman was born in 1802, about three miles from New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, and was a daughter of John and Jane Coleman nee McKee. (See sketch of John Campbell, Saltsburg.) Our subject was married in 1821, to James Coleman, a son of Nicholas Ewing, who died in 1857, at the age of sixty-three. Their children were: Mary J., m. to

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Alexander Lyons; William, d.; J. Campbell; Archibald, B.; Clark, d.; Hugh McKee, d.; Maggie A.; and Thomas Wilson. James was a soldier in the war of 1861, and was a prisoner at Andersonville, where he died. Clark was a member of company D, 62d Pennsylvania volunteers, was wounded at the Wilderness, and died from a wound May 11, 1864. Thomas Wilson was in company G, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. The J. Campbell Coleman homestead was first occupied by James Coleman in 1825. The latter was born on the farm now occupied by Samuel Coleman, Conemaugh township, and was a son of Nicholas and Jane Coleman nee McClelland. (See Coleman History. Blairsville and Conemaugh township).

EVAN LEWIS was born in 1802, on the farm now occupied by J. J. Lewis, and was a son of John and Mary Lewis, who were natives of Franklin county, and about 1800 came to the farm above named. Their children were: Evan, d., m. to Sarah Johnston, d.; John, d., m.; David, d., m.; Reuben, Presbyterian minister, m. to a Miss Miller; and Catharine, d., m. to Wm. McFarland. Evan's children were: Mary A., m. to Samuel Barr; Sarah, m. to William Beatty, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Valentine Kerr, d.; Margaret, m. to James George; Rebecca, m. to John Bell; Martha, m. to Daniel Elgin; and J. J., m. to Mary C. Dixon. The latter served in company F, 57th Pennsylvania militia for two months. J. J. Lewis' children were: James Dixon and Sarah Blanche.

MRS. MARY CUNNINGHAM was born in Adams county, in 1791, and was a daughter of Francis and Catharine Harbison nee Hart, who settled in what is now Young township in 1798. (See sketch of Francis Harbison.) She was married to Thomas Cunningham, d. Their children were: Joseph, m. to Sarah Harbison; Jane, m. to John Reed, d.; George, d., m. first to Eliza Anderson, d., second to Catharine Nesbit, d., third to Rachel Ritchey, d., and fourth to unknown; Mary, m. to William Reed; Francis, m. to Sarah Harbison; William, m. to Olive Eliza Webster, d.; Robert, m. to Rosanna Mears; James, d., m. to Elizabeth Caldwell, d.; Nancy, m. to George Fulton; and Catharine, m. to James Butt. James was a soldier in the war of 1861, from Westmoreland county. Geo. Fulton's only child was Austin Cunningham.

GEORGE W. COLLINS was born in Penn township, Westmoreland county, in 1835, and was a son of William S. and Hannah Collins nee Harvey. In 1857, he removed to West Lebanon, and worked for his brother Joseph, in the latter's factory. From 1866 to 1877, he conducted the manufacture of threshing machines, &c., on his own account. He was married first in 1860 to Eliza Reed, who died in 1871, at the age of thirty-three, and second in 1872 to Mary J. Reid. His children were: Willis E., Sarah J., John and Jane, d., twins; Nathaniel Nesbit, and Thomas Reed.

The Collins Threshing Machine Factory was commenced in 1877 at the present location, having been removed from West Lebanon. The product is four-horse and tumbling shaft threshing machines, sleds, harrows, &c., and meet with a sale directly from the factory. The works are situated on Blacklegs near the centre of the township. The tradition is that, not many years ago, a stone with an arrow engraved upon it, pointing toward the creek, stood upon the hillside above the factory. It was rolled into the creek many years ago.

REV. J. C. TELFORD was born in East Greenwich, Washington county, New York, in 1821, and was a son of Stephen and Mary Telford nee Cree. He was a graduate of Cambridge Academy, Washington county, N. Y., in 1843, and entered the junior class of Jefferson College, Cannonsburg, Pa., graduating in 1844. He attended the Associate Theological School of Cannonsburg for four years, and graduated in 1848. He was licensed on the 20th of June, 1848. His first charge was the Mahoning United Presbyterian Church, where he was ordained January 1st, 1850, and remained till May, 1867. His labors with his present congregation, West Union, Young township, commenced in May of the latter year, and have continued to the present time of writing. He was married in 1850 to Martha Oram of Cannonsburg. Their children were: Prudence J., Stephen J., Mary A., S. E., d.; and Maggie Bell.

JOHN L. ASHBAUGH was born in Kisklminetas township, Armstrong county, in 1824, and was a son of John and Mary Ashbaugh nee Learn. He was married in 1848 to Miss L. S. Shelhammer. Their children were: Caroline, m. to T. S. Marshall; Susan, m. to E. H. Ringer; Benjamin Franklin, m. to Martha A. Harbison; Albert, d.; John Elmer; Wm. Thomas; Elfrida Eldilla; and Alvah Morton. Mr. Ashbaugh was connected with the Maysville Mills, where he learned his trade as a miller, for five years. In 1864, he removed to Young township, and has since been connected with the Ridge Steam Mill, as part or sole proprietor.

A. H. FULTON was born on the 8th of January, 1840, on the Fulton homestead, Young township, and was a son of Silas and Anna Fulton nee Harbison. (See sketch of Alexander Fulton.) Silas' children were: Sarah, m. to James McClelland, d.; Caroline, m. to Robert Reed; Elizabeth, m. to Joseph A. Blakeley; A. H., m. to Catharine Harbison; Robert, m. to Agnes Douthitt; Joseph and Rebecca, twins; the former was married to Maria McClelland, and the latter to A. D. McComb. A. H. was a member of the state house of representatives, in the sessions of 1877–'78 and '79. His children were: Silas Alfred and Anna Mary.

W. T. LARIMER, M. D., was born in Wesmtoreland county in 1850, and was a son of William and Mary Larimer. He was educated at the Saltsburg and Glade Run Academies, graduating from the latter in 1876. He read medicine with Dr. J. L. Crawford, of Saltsburg, and graduated at Jefferson Medical College, on the 12th of March, 1879. His first location was in West Lebanon, his present home, as the successor of Dr. William Hosack. He was married in 1878 to Anna E. McCrea, daughter of Robert R. McCrea.

JAMES BROWN was born on the farm now occupied by John L. Kier, Young township, in 1823, and was a son of Thomas and Catharine Kier nee Ringle. The former was born in what is now Conemaugh township, in 1794, and died in 1865. He was a son of James and Margaret Brown nee Bush. James Brown came from Ireland when a young unmarried man, and located in what is now Conemaugh township. His children were: Thomas, d., m. to Catharine Ringle, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Kier, d.; and Mary d., m. to Alexander Gregg. The children of Thomas were: John, d., m. to Margaret Cunningham, d.; Julia Ann, m. to John L. Kier; James, m. to Mary Blakley, d.; Margaret, m. to Michael Smith; Joseph R., m. to Charlotte Keener; Matthias, m. to Mary Graul; Thomas, d.; and David A., m. to Georgina Chapman. Joseph R., Matthias, and David A. were soldiers in the war of 1861. Our subject's children were: Jennie, Wilson, John, Kate, Thomas, Hugh, Robert and Mary. The James Brown farm was warranted March 2, 1775, to John Mifflin, and patented February 14, 1803, to Jonathan Mifflin.

JOSEPH W. WALKER was born in Westmoreland county, in 1841, and was a son of Robert and Jane Walker nee Walker. The family removed to Armstrong county in 1849. Our subject came to Saltsburg in 1865, and labored as a shoemaker. He removed in 1872 to West Lebanon, and worked as a carpenter. He has been the postmaster since 1879. He served in company C, 139th Pennsylvania volunteers for two years and ten months. He lost his left leg at the battle of Winchester, and was wounded in the breast at the Wilderness. He was married in 1862 to Louisa Fulmer. His children were: Minnetta Isle; Harvey Parr, d.; Cora J., d.; Mary Luella, Carrie, Jane, Frank, and Elva.

JAMES WATSON was born in 1816, on the farm now occupied by Dr. Thomas Murry, Conemaugh township, and was a son of Matthew and Mary Watson nee McClelland, daughter of James McClelland. The former was a native of Ireland, and came with his first wife, a native of Ireland, to Westmoreland county, in 1792. In 1794, he located on the above named tract. He died in 1859, at the age of ninety-three. Mary, his second wife, was the daughter of James McClelland, who, about the close of the Revolution, located in what is now Conemaugh township. She died in 1866, at the age of seventy-six. Matthew Watson's children were: John, d.; Thomas, m. to Rebecca Wilson; Matthew, d., m. to Jane Thompson, d.; Mary; William, d.; Alexander, d.; Robert, d.; James, m. to Mary Pattison; Jane, d.; Isabella, d.; Ann; and Margaret, m. to Robert Gray. James served in Rev. Samuel Anderson's company in Colonel Gallagher's regiment of Pennsylvania militia at the time of the Morgan raid. James' children were: Alexander P., m. to Miranda Waddell; Bella Jane, m. to Rev. Hugh H. Boyd, United Presbyterian minister, of Lawrence county; M. B., district attorney, m. to Juliet White. Alexander P. served in the 67th Pennsylvania volunteers about four years. He was a prisoner for six months.

WILLIAM GEMMILL was born in 1819, in Fenwick, Ayrshire, Scotland, and was a son of John and Elizabeth Gemmell ...

Gemmil. In 1840, our subject came to America, residing for a time with Alexander Graham, Young township. From 1842 to 1849, he was chiefly engaged in buying cotton in Mississippi for an English firm, teaching school in Brush Valley township; Indiana county; farming in Iowa for Judge Mason, of the Territorial court. In 1849, he went to California, in an expedition composed of sixty wagons. They started from Burlington, Iowa, in March, and reached Placerville in August. He remained on the Pacific coast, visiting Oregon and other localities till 1853, when he returned to this county. In 1853, he was married to Margaret Cunningham, daughter of Robert Cunningham. Their children were: Rebecca Jane, m. to Clark Henderson, Alexander McKenzie, Jessie Ann, and John. He located on his present farm in 1869. This land was known as the Samuel McCurdy tract. The residence is a two-story log building, and in the northeast room in the second story. McCurdy kept a store for several years, prior to the founding of Jacksonville, and for some years later.

Daniel Cribbs, (Kreps or Creps,) was born in 1804, in what is now Burrell township, about one mile from the site of Blairsville, and was a son of George and Rebecca Cribbs nee Repine. The former was a son of George and Barbara Cribbs nee Haines. The former was a native of Alsace, Germany, was married in Europe, and migrated to Lancaster county in 1784. In 1786, the family settled on the tract where our subject was born. The children of the grandparents were: Christian, d., m. to a Miss Steinmetz, d.; George, b. in Alsace in 1778, d., m. to Rebecca Repine, d.; Barbara, d., m. to David Milliron, d., Eve, d., m. to David Mercer, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to James Repine, d.; Esther, d., m. to Daniel Long, d.; Catharine, d., m. to David Cribbs, d.; and Mary, d., m. first to Philip Wareham, d., and second to unknown. The children of George, (a son of George Cribbs,) were: Barbara, m. first to Thomas Oharra, and second to Simon Nixon; Daniel, m. first to Eliza McQuiston, d., and second to Nancy Dixon; Jane, d., m. to James Dodson; Joseph, m. to Jane McQuiston; George, m. to Mary Dixon; John, d., m. to Margaret Seelye; Eliza, d., m. to Jacob Lear; Rebecca, m. twice, first to Robert Patterson, d.; Martha, m. first to William Clark, d., and second to John Paisley; Sarah, m. to Rev. G. Compton, M. E. minister; and Margaret, m. to William Harrison. Our subject's children were: George C., d. m. to Isabella Dever; James, d.; Ann Eliza, d., m. to William Hill; Rebecca J., m. to William Mullen; Madeline, m. to Daniel Griffith; Myrtilla, d., m. to George Robertson; Daniel, d.; Samuel, d.; John, d., and Joseph, d., twins; Benjamin F., m. to Emma Ferguson; Araminta, d.; Sarah Emma, m. to Mowry Moorhead; Nancy, m. to Robert Harbison; and Armor, m. to Anna Marshall. George C. was a soldier in the war of 1861. Benjamin F.'s children were: Araminta, William W., Anna, Eliza M., and Myrtle. Our subject located, in 1865, on the A. R. Sloan farm, where the latter kept a store several years after leaving Clarksburg. The warrant of this tract was issued in 1786, to Thomas, William and David Davis. The patent was granted in 1854 to A. R. Sloan. The patent of Mr. Cribbs' farm, known as the "Russell" property, was granted in 1797, to David Findley. The warrant was issued in 1784, to Robert Taylor.

Mrs. Martha Smith, widow of Michael Smith, was born in what is now Black-lick township, in 1805, and was a daughter of Thomas and Fanny Gamble nee White. Her husband came with a brother, Mark, from England about 1825, and settled on the property now occupied by his widow. Their children were: Martha J., m. to Joseph Pierce; Fannie, d., m. to Edward Duffield; Mary, d.; William, d.; Simon, m. to Sarah Rumbaugh; Catharine; and William, m. to Jane Rumbaugh.

Alexander Graham was born in 1800, in Fenwick, Ayrshire, Scotland, and was a son of George and Jane Graham nee Brown. In 1820, he came to the Ligonier valley, (on the Indiana side,) and in 1822 he removed to what is now Young township. He was married in 1824 to Janet Park, daughter of Robert Park, and in 1826 removed to the tract now occupied by him, where his wife died in 1877, at the age of seventy-four. Their children were: George, m. to Eliza Anthony; Robert, d., m. to Nancy Lowman, d.; Christina Jane, m. to Dr. Joseph Stewart, d., of Jacksonville; and Elizabeth, m. to Samuel P. Marshall. George served in the Pennsylvania militia during the Chambersburg raid. Dr. Joseph Stewart's children were: Alexander Graham, William St. Clair, d.; Janetta Mary, d.; and Elma Elizabeth. Samuel P. Marshall's only child was Simpson Tyler. The Graham farm tract was styled in the patent "Delphos." The first settler upon it was driven away by the Indians. The tradition is that the first improvement was made prior to the Revolutionary war.

George Graham was born in 1825, on the Graham homestead, and was a son of Alexander and Janet Graham nee Park. (See sketch of Alexander Graham, Young township.) He was married in 1847 to Eliza Anthony, daughter of William Anthony. Their children were: John A., m. to Elizabeth Lowman; William A., d.; Nancy Jane, Thomas Milton, Elizabeth Ann, Nettie M., and Stewart. John A.'s children were: George H., Anna M., and Elsie. One part of the Graham farm was surveyed to Mary Cachel in 1774, and patented to John Niel in 1828. The other portion was warranted to Thomas Niel, and patented to the same in 1828. The Newport and Campbell's mills roads crossed on this farm thereby making the corners of four townships. There is a twelve foot stratum of lime being mined on these premises.

Jane Park was born in Scotland in 1805, and was a daughter of Robert and Euphemia Park nee Gilmour, who migrated to what is now Young township, in 1808. The former died in 1847, at the age of sixty-eight; the latter in 1820, about fifty years of age. Their children were: Christina, d.; Janet, d., m. to Alexander Graham; and Jane.

John Barkley.—Our subject was born in Westmoreland county in 1801, and died in this county in 1879. He was the eldest son of Alexander Barclay and Ann Martin, who moved to Young township in 1804, and settled on the farm now occupied by James M. Barkley, then owned by the father of James E. Brown, of Kittanning. Brown had made some improvement prior to this time. Alexander's children were: Jane, d., m. to Thomas Dickson, d.; John, d., our subject, m. first to Eliza Rankin, d., and second to Mrs. Anne Cameron nee Clark; Alexander C., d., m. to Nancy Gallagher; Nancy, m. to John McFarland; and James, d., m. to Jane Ferguson. The sons of Alexander C. were: Nelson C. and Cyrus N., who edit the Altoona Sun; John W., teacher; William Porter, in employ of Government on western land survey about three years, then served on General Fremont's staff, and for some time commanded a regiment in the war of the rebellion; and Arte Clinton, in the printing business at Washington, D. C. All these received their education at Elder's Ridge Academy. Their sister, Nannie, is a teacher in Philadelphia. The sons of James were: David D., served in late war, was raised to the rank of Major, and is now in Allegheny county; and Alexander R., farmer in Armstrong county. The children of our subject, by first wife, were: Martha, b. in 1824, m. to William Earhart, d.; Mary Ann, b. in 1826, d., m. first to William Bracken, d., and second to John T. Elder; Alexander Y., b. in 1828, m. to Elizabeth Colleasure; Elizabeth, b. in 1830, m. to John McIntosh; Jas. M., b. in 1832, m. first to Elizabeth Uray, d., and second to Henrietta Rhea; Caroline, b. in 1834, m. to John Long; William R., b. in 1837, m. to Mary Miller; by second wife, Jemima, d.; John C., was in late war in company E, 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, and the 11th reserve corps, now a member of the firm of Barkley, Hasson & Co., Baltimore, Maryland; Thomas B., m. to Emma Sutton, d.; and Foster, d. Our subject was a ruling elder in Ebenezer Presbyterian Church for many years, and his son James M. now serves in the same capacity. James M. and Alexander Y. are all the sons now in the county, James M. in the old homestead, in Young township, and A. Y. on part of the Fleming tract in Conemaugh township. James M. had three children, Stewart, Anna May died young, and Robert W. supposed to have been drowned in Fremont county, Iowa.

Leslie C. Hazlett was born in 1819, on the farm now occupied by him, and was a son of James Hazlett. (See sketch of S. C. Hazlett, Blacklick township). He was married, in 1848, to Ellen Leard, daughter of Zachariah Leard. His children were: James L.; Zachariah, d.; and Ella, m. to J. C. Frank. The Leslie C. Hazlett tract was warranted to James, John, Leslie, and Robert Hazlett, in 1807, and was patented to the same in 1813. The Samuel Dixon tract was warranted to John Leslie in 1798, and patented to the heirs of John Hazlett, d. in 1814.

Samuel Musick was born in 1845, in Mount Pleasant township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of Peter and Elizabeth Musick nee Seaner. The former was a son of David Kier, born near Philadelphia, who settled in Westmoreland county, and died there in 1858, at the age of fifty-six. The latter's children were; Mary, d.; Hannah; Catharine, m. to John Launce, d.; Lydia, m. to John Hewis, d.; and Peter, m. to Elizabeth Seaner. The children of Peter were: David, m. to Sarah Barnhart; George, d.; Uriah, m. to Catharine Hayes; Cyrus, m. to Rachel A. Fiscus; Susan; Philip, d.; Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Brinker. Philip was in company B, 142d Pennsylvania volunteers, and was killed at the first battle of Fredericksburg. Samuel was in the same company for three years, entering as private and being promoted to second sergeant. He was wounded three times at the first battle of Fredericksburg; Derwin, m. to Sarah Hayes; Mary, d.; Margaret, d.; Peter, d.; Abraham, m. to Mary Slaughter. Cyrus Musick's only children was John Franklin. Our subject's children were: Minnie Mahala; Clark Brinker, d.; Peter Allen, Ida Olivia, Thurman Coulter, and William Bell.

S. C. KENNEDY was born on Lower Burrell township, Westmoreland county, in 1843, and was a son of Joseph and Margaret Kennedy nee Coe. The former was born in Allegheny county, and died in 1878, sixty-six years old. The latter is living, at the age of sixty-two. Joseph Kennedy was a son of Thomas and Catharine Kennedy nee Flick. Thomas Kennedy settled in 1819 in what is now Lower Burrell township. He served in the war of 1812, from Butler county. His wife was born in 1793, in what is now Butler county. Joseph Kennedy's children were: Araminta, d.; S. C., m. to E. M. Simons, daughter of William and Mary Simons nee Ireland, of Westmoreland county; Thomas L., d.; Joseph A., d.; James E., d.; Elizabeth M., m. to D. M. Clements; Anna M., m. to James Shearer; and John S. S. C. was a graduate of Duff's (Pittsburgh) Commercial College in 1866. He served in company I, 123d Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. His children were: Albert C.; Elmer C., d.; Nellie G.; Nannie J.; and William J. He located on his present homestead in 1869. His residence was erected by the Ewings in 1800.

JOHN L. KIER was born in Westmoreland county in 1819, and was a son of David Kier. (See sketch of Samuel Kier, Conemaugh township.) David Kier's children were: John L., m. to Julia Ann Brown; Eliza, m. to William Moore; Hannah, m. to Richard Clawson; William, m. first to Elizabeth Vanatt, d., and second to Margaret Ann Dixon; Mary Ann, m. first to Samuel Stewart, d., and second to James Henderson; James, m. to Elizabeth Milliron; Robert, m. to Cordelia Richey; and Martha Jane, m. to Nathaniel Davis. James was a soldier in the war of 1861 for nine months. Our subject's children were: Catharine, Martha Jane, David, d.; Thomas, d.; James, d.; Alexander Smith, d.; William M., d.; and Margaret Ann. He located on his homestead in 1868.

WILLIAM KIER was born in 1825 near Maysville, Armstrong county, and was a son of David Kier. (See sketches of Samuel Kier, Conemaugh township, and John L. Kier, Young township.) His children were: Elizabeth, d.; D. M., Mary Jane, m. to H. P. Sandles; Samuel I., John A., d.; Joseph P., Harry C., Anna M., and Bertha M. He has lived on his present farm since 1847.

The children of JAMES KIER, a brother of John L., were: Martha Ann, m. to Joseph Allshouse; Ellen Mary, m. to Robert Smith; Bella Jane, Susan F., David M., Homer, d.; John, d.; Harry, Emma, and Vinie.

ROBERT J. ARNOLD was born in 1823, in Plymouth, Devonshire, England, and was a son of William and Maria Arnold nee Jeffery. Our subject, in company with his brothers, William T. and Edward H., migrated to America in 1848. He was a tinner by trade, and at first located in Pittsburgh, where he remained one year. He removed successively to Maysville, Armstrong county, remaining six years; Olivet, same county, eight years; Burnell township, same county, four years; also, farming, and his present residence, where he settled in 1868, still working at his trade in connection with farming. He was married, in 1850, to Mary Shirley, daughter of Joseph Shirley and Catharine Fulmer. The former is living at the age of ninety-eight. Two of his brothers died at the ages of one hundred and two, and one hundred and three. Our subject's children were: Maria Catharine, m. to R. C. Millen; Joseph Ralston, d.; George Wilson, James H., Emma B., John Nelson, Flora Adaline, m. to John A. Knepshiel; and Jacob Samuel Telford. He has a box made to enclose guinea scales made by his great-great-grandfather. In this wire is used instead of nails. He has a trained dog which acts as the motive power of a churn, groing to and fro at the word of command.

WILLIAM LATIMER was born on the farm now occupied by Jamison Coleman, Black-lick township, in 1818, and was a son of James and Ruth Latimer nee Thompson, a sister of Moses Thompson. The former came from an eastern county of Pennsylvania, and settled when a young man on the above named place, obtaining his warrant from the Penns. He died in 1824, about forty-five years of age; his wife in 1871, about ninety-three years of age. Their children were: Mary, d.; Jane, m. to Tobias Bricker; Mary Elizabeth, d.; William, m. first to Catharine Rhees, d., and second to Julia A. Barnes; and Robert, m. to Margaret Marshall. Our subject's children were: Mary E., d.; Francis Augustus, Anna Margery, Margaret, Martha Ella, Robert, Sarah J., Ida B., Julia May, William Bruce, and Laura Narcissa. Francis A. was a soldier in the war of 1861.

JOHN A. HULL was born in 1855, on the farm now occupied by John Scott, Burrell township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of John Hull, who married Mrs. Jane Sherer nee Coleman, (a second wife), a daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Coleman nee McLain. John Hull died in 1879, at the age of eighty. He settled in Indiana, in 1871, and returned to Westmoreland county in 1878. His children by the second marriage were: John A., m. to Maggie E. Latimer; and George, m. to Clara Kinkead. John A.'s only child was Ralph Grason. He located on the farm now occupied by him in Burrell township, Armstrong county, in 1878.

ROBERT AND ELIZABETH COLEMAN'S children were: John M., m. to Margaret Brown; Jane, b. in 1816, m. first to Andrew Sherer, d., and second to John Hull. d.; James. d.; Rachel, m. to James Caldwell; Robert R., m. to Elizabeth Kier; Alexander, m. to Nancy J. Jackson; Theodore, m. to Isabella Hart; Elizabeth, m. to John Duncan; and Oliver, m. to Evaline Nesbit. Robert R. was a soldier in the war of 1861.

SAMUEL W. VIRTUE, M. D. was born in Ireland, in 1834, and was a son of James and Isabella Virtue nee Woods, who about 1842, located in Centre township, Indiana county. He was educated at the Jacksonville and Elder's Ridge Academies. He read medicine with Dr. Mabon, of Jacksonville, and graduated in 1868, from the Cleveland (Ohio) Medical College. His first location was in Olivet, Armstrong county. After five years' practice, then removed to West Lebanon, where he died in 1872. He was married in 1863, to Sarah J. Ewing, daughter of John A. Ewing, of Armstrong county. Their children were: Lizzie A., Bell A., Nettie V., and Samuel M. H. John A. Ewing, was a son of Samuel and Letitia Ewing nee McCurdy. The latter is living in Armstrong county, near the Indiana county line, at the age of one hundred and five.

REV. FRANKLIN ORR was born in what is now Limestone township, Clarion county, in 1825, and was the son of Sam'l C. Orr and Margaret McCurdy Orr nee Sloan, a daughter of Sheriff Sloan. Sam'l C. removed to what is now Clarion county, in 1805. He was born near Hannastown, Westmoreland county, and was two years old, at the time the town was burned, and his parents fled to the fort to escape the general massacre. He was the son of Robert Orr, who served in the Indian wars, and was a prisoner three years among the British. He settled at Kittanning. He died over eighty years of age. He served several years as Associate Judge. His wife was a Culbertson. Their children were: John, m. to —— Dickey; Nancy, who m. first a —— McCartney, and second a——Jones; Samuel C., see above; Robert, colonel in war of 1812, an associate judge, m. to Martha Grier; William, d.; and Cnambers, sheriff, m. to Hannah Turney. The latter is the only one of the above now living. Samuel C. was a farmer by occupation. Under the old constitution he was a justice of the peace for several years. He was a ruling elder of Rehobeth Presbyterian church for many years. He died in 1855, at the age of seventy-six. His wife died in 1859, aged seventy-four years. Their children were: Lavinia, m. to Hon. J. B. Lawson; R. W. (Rev.) one of the first missionaries (Presbyterian) to China—Professor in Jefferson College, Washington county, Pa., m. to Eliza A. Carter, of Elizabeth N. J., d. in 1855, at the age of fifty-one; John, m. to Jane Maffett; Hunter, m. to Margaret Lawson; Fanny, m. to R. M. Corbett; Nancy, d., m. to John Neil; Culbertson, m. first to Nancy Smith, d., and second to Susan Sherrard, d., a sister of Miss Nancy Sherrard, principal of the Female Seminary, at Washington, Pa.; D. S., m. to Jane C. Paul; Franklin, (Rev., Presbyterian), graduate of Jefferson College, Washington county, Pa., in the class of 1850, graduate of the Allegheny Theological Seminary, in the class of 1853, first ministry was at Bethel and Curry's Run Presbyterian Churches in 1853, resigning the latter in 1858, and taking charge of the Jacksonville congregation, in connection with the Bethel, relinquishing Bethel in 1877, and in connection with Jacksonville, now has a young congregation at Tunnelton, Kelly Station, on the West Penn. R. R., Conemaugh township, m. first to Margaret Craighead, daughter of George and Nancy Craighead nee Niel, of Washington county—she d. in 1867, at the age of thirty-three, and second, in 1868, to Mrs. Martha Curtis nee McLain, widow of Dr. Charles Henry Curtis. His children are; Elizabeth M.; Sarah Lavinia; William Freeman; Samuel Culbertson; Margaret M., m. to George Smith. All of the brothers-in-law were elders in the Presbyterian Church, and the family is Presbyterian throughout, beginning with Robert, who was a member of the old Associate or Seceder Church.

Mollie Russell was born in Adams county, on the 18th of May, 1797, and when two years of age her parents migrated to Westmoreland county, where her father, William, died in 1802, at the age of fifty-seven. He was a soldier in the Revolution and lost a leg in the battle of Brandywine. His service after that was as a tailor. He received a pension of one hundred and twenty dollars per annum. He was buried not far from the Horse-shoe Church. In 1802, after the death of Mr. Russell, the family removed to Conemaugh township, near the Broad Ford. She attended school near the Broad Ford, John McKinley being the teacher. Her mother died in 1847, in her ninety-fifth year. Our subject was a resident of the county for over seventy-seven, and of Young township for over sixty years. She died in March, 1880.

John Oliver was born in Conemaugh township in 1815, and was the son of James Oliver and Margaret Coleman. The former was a native of county Derry, Ireland, and was only four years of age when his father, James Oliver, migrated to Franklin county, where he died. His widow with her children, William, James, Alexander, John and Nancy, came to what is now Young township, and subsequently settled near the Conemaugh. William was married to Nancy Sloan; James was married to Margaret Coleman; and Alexander was married to Mattie Elgin. James was an Indian scout during the last wars in Western Pennsylvania, and also a soldier in the war of 1812. He died in 1865, at the age of eighty-nine; his wife died at seventy years of age. Their children were: James, d., m. to Mary Hart; John, m. in 1839, to Mary Pattison; William, d., m. to Eliza Anderson; and Robert, d., m. first to Eliza J. Pattison, d., and second to Jane Marshall. John has been a justice of the peace for twenty-one years, and an elder in the Associate, and its successor the United Presbyterian Church, for twenty-three years. He erected, in 1852, the brick Presbyterian Church of West Lebanon, and successively, 1856, Shelocta U. P.; 1857, (reconstructed) West Union U. P.; (erected) 1877, West Union U. P.; 1878, West Lebanon Presbyterian, and 1879, Elder's Ridge Presbyterian Church.

Samuel C. Hazlett was born in 1816, on the James Hazlett homestead, in Young township. His grandfather, John Hazlett, came from Ireland to the county in 1791, when his son, James, the father of our subject, was only a year and a half old. His wife was Margaret Long. Their children were: Martha, James, Lesley, John, Margaret and Robert (all deceased). John Hazlett, the elder, transported grain and cloth on pack-horses eighty or ninety miles, and brought back salt and other necessities. James Hazlett was married to Nancy Caskey, who died in 1844, at the age of fifty-one. He died in 1844, nearly fifty-five years of age. Their children were: John, Samuel C., Lesley, Margaret, Rosanna and Nancy J., d. Our subject was married in 1837, to Jane Jack. Their children are: James J., attorney, Greensburg, Pa., m. to Lizzie, daughter of Hon. Edgar Cowan; Leslie; Mary Agnes, m. to John Welch; Alfred, attorney and ex-judge, Beatrice, Nebraska, m. to Libbie Cotton. S. C. and his son Leslie were for several years in company with John Hunter, of Derry township, Westmoreland county, Pa., in the stock business. Both father and son unite stock dealing with farming. Lesley (a son of John) and Jane Hazlett nee Marshall's children were: John, m. to Elizabeth Marshall; Mary, m. to James J. McFarland; Samuel M., m. to Mary Clark; James L., m. to Elizabeth Lewis; Martha, d., m. to James G. George; William, m. to Mary A. Sloan; Lesley, m. to Sarah J. Marshall; Archibald, d.; Robert M.; and Rebecca, m. to Elder P. Marshall. Robert was a soldier in the war of 1861. James L's children were: D. M., Presbyterian minister, m. to Jane Reed; Jane E., m. to W. M. Baird; Mary C.; and Annie S. James L. Hazlett has been engaged in the practice of dentistry since 1857, first locating in Elderton, Armstrong county, removing in 1868, to Indiana.

William Wilkinson.—He was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1795, and removed to Maryland in 1819. In 1821, he married Nancy Wingrove, and migrated in the same year to Indiana county, locating in Young township, where he has been engaged in farming and brickmaking. His children are: Sarah Ann, m. to Hugh Neil, d.; Isaiah, d.; Mary Jane, m. to Isaac Couch; Caroline, m. to Jesse Lewis; Isaiah, m. to Mary Richey; William Clark, m. to Mary Cooper; Eliza Ellen, m. to Dr. John Criswell; Isabella, d., m. to Marlin Lowman; John E., M. D., m. to Jane Greathouse; and Albert, d.

Hugh Niel was born on the Niel homestead, Young township, in 1809. He died on the 23d of November, 1877, at the age of sixty-eight. His grandfather, William Niel, locating in about 1790, was among the early settlers of the township. He was born in Ireland, and died in 1812, about eighty years of age; his wife, Catharine Niel, died some years later, at about the same age. The latter party's son, John Niel, the father of our subject, was born in 1769, in the Conecocheague Valley, and died in Young township, in 1852. His wife was Lydia Kelly, who died in 1857, nearly eighty-eight years of age. Their children were: Rachel, m. to Thomas Lowman, d.; John, m. to Nancy Coleman, a daughter of John and Martha Coleman nee Keating; Hugh, d., m. to Sarah Ann Wilkinson, their children being J. M. Merchant, at Jacksonville; Nancy J., m. to A. W. Gilmour; Caroline, William Lewis, Sarah Bell, and Keziah, d. John and Nancy Niel's children were: Martha C., d.; Harrison, M. D., in Hollister, California; Samuel; John Milton; Robert, d.; Hugh; Harriet; Lydia, m. to John Nolan, of Pittsburgh; Robert J., student of State University of Michigan; Nancy, Elizabeth, and Clark.

Alexander Fails.—He came to Blacklick township, about the close of the last century. His wife was Rachel Hall. Their children were: John, d., m. to Mary Geer; Alexander, d., m. to Abigail Geer; David, m. first to Mary Geer, d., second to Margaret Altman, d., and third to Mary Ann Altman; Thomas, d., m. to Margaret Doudson, d.; Richard, d.; Hannah, d., m. to James Repine, d.; and Sarah, d., m. to Benjamin Crisman. Thomas Fails was born on John Hill farm, Blacklick township. He died in 1874, at the age of seventy-three. His wife died in 1841, at the age of about forty. The children were: Alexander; Rachel, m. to J. B. Altman, d.; A. C., m. to Elizabeth J. Rankin; Susannah, m. to Benjamin Underwood; John, (killed in the battle of the Wilderness,) d., m. to Martha Decker, d.; and Samuel, m. to Kate Prosser.

GRANT TOWNSHIP

Was formed from Montgomery township in 1868, and was thus named in honor of General U. S. Grant.

EAST RUN

Is the present name of the village on the farm first settled by George Buterbaugh. The neighborhood was formerly known as "Big Bottom." In early days the brush along the run was the place of bear pens or traps, and the hunter was often rewarded well for the labor of building these.

KINTER HILL

In the north end of the township, is one of the highest points in the township, and presents the finest view that one can see eastward to the neighborhood of Ebensburg, and westward to the hills west of the Allegheny river. Near by, and parallel, is the

BALD RIDGE.

Thirty years ago, this was a barren ride, upon which but little wood grew, now it is quite well covered with a small growth of timber, but the indications are that it will not attain any size. It is merely brush fifteen to twenty feet in height. It is noted as the place where David Gorman was frozen to death in 1842. He had been to John Decker's in the evening in his duties as collector, and quite late started for home, in the extreme north end of the township, and was frozen by the way. A search revealed the body, but none of the secrets of the death. There were marks left indicating that he had a premonition of coming death.

DOTY'S ROUND TOP,

Said to be the highest point in the county, is in the extreme north of the township, is of evenly circular form, set on a hill, and a landmark not easily forgotten when once seen.

COLFAX—DECKER'S POINT P. O.

The postoffice was established in 1855, and was called for John Decker, the first settler in the vicinity. This site was first called Decker's Point about 1830 or '31.

The first postmaster was William Midkirk, and the second W. N. Prothero. The first merchant was John Lewis, the second was W. N. Prothero, in 1856, and the third H. J. Thompson, in 1872.

The village was platted in 1867, on the lands of Adam Fitterington and W. N. Prothero, and was named in honor of Schuyler Colfax. It is generally known as Decker's Point. The blacksmiths have been: David Bates, Adam Leck, David Ruffner, and James Martin. The first wagonmaker was Michael Kunkle. The first carpenter in the settlement was William Warden, and in the village, John Stump. The first teacher at the "Point" was Eliza Price, who taught, in 1837, in a little log schoolhouse. The first minister to preach at the "Point" was Rev. Thomas Wilson, a Baptist, who spoke in William Smyers' log cabin. The first church was the Baptist, and the second the United Presbyterian. Adam Knarr had a planing mill in the village for about two years. This was abandoned, the machinery being removed to Cookport. There is no hotel in the village, the only place of entertainment being at the residence of William Smyers.

NASHVILLE

Was named for William Nash Prothero, who made the first improvewent and opened the first store in 1872. The steam sawmill was erected by James Barkey in 1873. He was followed by McCall Brothers. The successors of Wm. N. Prothero were his brother James, and since 1877, H. Prothero, Widdowson & Co. The village numbers ten houses.

MRS. MARY AGNES MCCUNE nee JAMISON.—Our subject was born in Martinsburg, West Va., in 1795, and came to Indiana county when about twelve years old. She now lives with her son Leonard McCune of Grant township, and is yet in possession of all her faculties. Her father was John Jamison, who was married to Elizabeth Shryock. She was married to John McCune, d., a native of this county, a descendant on his mother's side of the house of the Luthers, pioneers in the Ligonier valley. One of the Luther boys was taken prisoner by the Indians when only seven years old, and was raised by them. Two other boys were taken, but when the Indians went to pull out their hair they cried, and the Indians killed them. Young Luther determined not to flinch, and after pulling out his hair they washed him in the river to "wash out the white blood," and adopted him. At the treaty the Indians returned him with a full Indian outfit, pony and all, but the pony strayed in the woods and could never be found. John McCune, husband of our subject, was a carpenter, and helped build the old courthouse, and it is said he placed the balls on the steeple as his closing work on it. He died in 1866, aged sixty-five years.

ABRAM Y. LOWMAN was born in Franklin county, in 1813, and was a son of John and Magdalene nee Bush. The former came to the county in 1813, and lived in Conemaugh township for ten years, being settled at Johnson's Salt Works. He served in the 28th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. He died in Rayne township in 1870, over eighty years of age. He was a son of Abraham Lowman. John Lowman's children were: Abram Y., m. first in 1834, to Elizabeth Kennedy, who died in 1837, and second in 1845, to Catharine Manor; James, d., m. to a Miss Campbell; Mary, d., m. to James Kennedy; Jacob, d. in the army while a member of the 34th Pennsylvania cavalry, m.; John; Hannah, m. to Thomas Beringer; Catharine, d., m. to Adam Weagley; and Margaret, m. to Henry F. Peters. Our subject's children by his first wife, were: Harrison, m. to Mary Myers; and Elizabeth—by the second, the children were: Samuel S., m. to Rebecca McKee; Jacob F.; James M.; Matthias; William; Thomas; Emma; Frances May; and Minnie Alice.

C. A. RIDDLE was born in what is now Bank's township, in 1858, and was a son of Charles Riddle, d., and Catharine Riddle nee Silvers. The latter's second husband was John T. Patterson. Charles Riddle was the son of William Riddle, who was among the early settlers of what is now East Mahoning township. He died in 1875, in his eightieth year. Our subject was the assistant principal of the Smithport Normal Academy, which began its first session on the 21st of April, 1879, with sixty enrolled scholars.

WILLIAM SMYERS was born in 1808 in what is now East Wheatfield township, and was a son of Philip and Margaret Smyers nee Leffler. The former died at the age of eighty-four, and the latter, at eighty-nine years of age. William located on present homestead in 1835. Our subject's first wife was Martha King, d. Their children were: Philip, m. to Nancy Titterington; Mary J., d.; and George W., d. His second wife was Elizabeth Riddle—their children were: William R., m. to Mary E. Hunter; John C., m. to Mary Sylvis; Daniel W.; Nina; and Delce.

GEORGE BARRETT.—Our subject is a native of Nottinghamshire, England, and was born in 1814. He emigrated to this country in 1851, and settled in this county, and in 1865, settled in Grant township, on the old German farm which he still owns. His wife is a native of same place as he, and was Frances Bexson, b. in 1811. Their children are: Elizabeth, m. to Aaron Patchen, of Clearfield county, Pa.; Thomas, m. to Catharine E. Ryan; Jennie has a millinery store in Cherry Tree; George, m. to Sarah S. Mehaffy, and is in the lumber business in Camden, New Jersey. Our subject is the only one of the family who came to this country. Mrs. B. is a sister of Mrs. Joseph Widdowson, who settled on Dixon's run, Green township, in 1822.

MOSES KANARR.—Our subject is the only resident surveyor of Grant township, and for seven years has been employed in this kind of labor. He is a son of John Kanarr, d., b. in Lehigh county, in 1807, and Anna M. Bender, b. in Westmoreland county, in 1811. John settled in Grant township in 1853. His children were: George A., m. to Kate King; Moses, our subject, m. to M. J. Hamilton; Jacob, m. to Martha J. King; Aaron, m. to Susan Ruffner; John, m. to Lydia Bender; Henry and Elizabeth L. In the late war George served in company G, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers; Moses in company F, 206th, Jacob in 101st P. V., and Aaron in company F, 206th. The children of our subject were: Mary A., Clara M. and Harry M.

GEORGE LEARN.—Our subject was born in Westmoreland county, in 1820, and settled in this county in 1829, and on present farm in 1856, was married first to Mary Ann Buterbaugh, d., b. in 1817, and died in 1858, and second to Mrs. Catharine Shankle nee Riddle, b. in this county in 1821. The children were by first wife: William, b. 1842, d.; Rachel, b. 1844, m. to J. M. Rodkey; Joseph, b. 1846, enlisted in 84th Pennsylvania volunteers, and was killed in front of Petersburg, Va., June, 1864; Mary, b. 1848, m. to Cyrus Daugherty; David, b. 1851, m. to Caroline Long; James A., b. 1856. The saw mill of our subject was built in 1857, and is on a tributary of Little Mahoning creek.

JOSEPH NICKLE.—Our subject is a son of William Nickle, d., who was married in Ireland to Mary McBeth, d., and migrated to this country, settling in the county about 1830. Their children were: Archy, m. to Annie Trimble; James, m. to Mary McKendrick; Mary, d., m. to Adam Stonebreaker; William, m. to Margaret Hamilton; Joseph, our subject, m. first to Sarah Lowman, d., and second to Mrs. Mary Robeson nee Moore; and John, m. to Margaret Buterbaugh, d. The children of our subject, by first wife: Alice; by second wife: Joseph, William, Laura, Horace, and Clara. Mrs. N. has one child by first husband—Jennie Robeson.

JAMES A. MCQUOWN.—Our subject is a son of William McQuown, born in Westmoreland county, and married to Margaret Shields, who settled in Grant township in 1862. Their children were: James A., our subject, m. to Mary J. Shankle; Annie M., m. to John Potts; William W., m. to Susan Shaffer; Martin L., m. to Virginia Flegal; Emma, m. to Robert McGarvey; Nina M., m. to a Mr. Edmiston. Martin L. is now superintendent of common schools in Clearfield county, and most of the family settled in the same county. James A., our subject, settled in Grant township in 1870. His children are: Harry E., Mary A., Martin L., James E. and Charles C. Our subject served during the late war in company C, 1st Pa. vols. (old 11th).

JAMES R. LYDICK is a son of James Lydick, and a grandson of Patrick Lydick. James Lydick first married Sarah Chapman, and second Rebecca P. Johnston. All are now dead. He settled in Grant township in 1840, and almost all of his large family are settled in the county. The children by first wife were: Mary, m. to E. H. Ruffner; Jane, d., m. to Edmund Davis; Margaret, m. to John Barkey; Elizabeth, m. to Israel Courath; Sarah, m. to James G. Gorman; and Chapman, m. to Maria Bostick. By second wife: William J., m. to Roxana L. Furman; Anna R., m. to Alex. C. McCoy; James R. m. to Kate L. Barr; Robert L, m. to Anna Rank; Eveline, m. to Charles A. Palmer; and Lydia C. James and Robert both served in 84th Pennsylvania volunteers, and the former lost an arm, and the latter was slightly wounded. The children of our subject are: Lavinia and James N.

SAMUEL SMILEY.—Our subject is a son of David Smiley, deceased, who was married to Mary Miller, deceased, and settled near Smicksburg. Their children were: Nancy, m. to George Crissman; Samuel, born 1822, m. to Mary Ann Riddle; Elizabeth, m. to John Stiller; Ellen, m. to Christ Good; Mary, m. to John Fetters, d.; Susan, m. to David Lewis; John, m. first to Charlotte Raney, d., and second to Mrs. Mary Reese nee Ayers; Hezekiah, d., m. to Catharine Lewis. Our subject settled in Grant township in 1848. The children of our subject were: Charles T., m. to Mary Hamilton; Angeline, m. to Josiah Buterbaugh; Elvira, m. to Alexander Laugham; Ida. The wife of our subject is a daughter of Charles Riddle, who came from New Jersey when a boy, and was married to Eleanor Dodson. They had but three children, James E., Mary Ann and Margart C., all of whom married and settled in the county. Mr. Riddle was one of the early settlers of Grant township.

JOHN FARNSWORTH.—Our subject is a son of John Farnsworth, of Jefferson county, and formerly from Huntingdon county, Pa., who was married first to Elizabeth Dean, d., and second to Mrs. Susanna Turner nee Smiley, d. After the death of Mrs. F., the children nearly all settled in Indiana county. They were, by first wife: Susanna, d., m. to Ephraim E. Lewis; Joseph, m. to Elizabeth Wymer, d.; Enoch, m. to Maria Turnbaugh; Mary J., m. to Jonathan Neff. By second wife: Henry, m. to Nancy Wilson; Nancy, d., m. to Martin R. Cooley; John, our subject, b. in Huntingdon county, Pa., in 1834, settled in the county in 1856, and m. to Mary A. Buterbaugh, b. in the county in 1841; David, m. first to Jane McCartney, d., and second to Salina McCombs, d., and third to Jennie McCallister; Louisa, m. to James Miller, who was colonel of the 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, at close of late war. The children of our subject were: Ida, m. to Joseph Houk; Azanath, d.; Eva, Clara, and Louisa. Our subject served during the late war in 102d Pennsylvania volunteers.

P. N. BAKER.—Our subject is an enterprising young merchant in what is known as the "Big Bottom," in Grant township. Is a son of George Baker and his wife Elizabeth Cook, of Green township. The children of George were: Levi, m. to Caroline Dasher; Hezekiah, m. to Catharine Buterbaugh; Mary, m. to Simon Buterbaugh: Jane, m. to Jonathan Learn; George, m. to Emily Refner; Furman, m. to Mary A. Langham; Elizabeth A., m. to Isaac Buterbaugh; Lucinda, m. to George McCullough; Philip N., m. to Rella Z. Buterbaugh; and Henderson. The grandfather of our subject, George Baker, was one of the early settlers of Green township. The industries of the village, where our subject has a store are: smith shop, carpenter shop, saw mill, and postoffice in prospect. The place is now called "East Run."

REV. SAMUEL FURMAN.—Our subject was born in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, in 1811, and was married to Pamelia Kelly, native of Erie county, Pa. He was licensed to preach by the Zion Baptist Church, of Clarion county, Pa., and ordained at Sandy Lake, Mercer county, Pa. He settled in this county, in 1849, in Green township, near present village of Cookport, and commenced his missionary work in the county in 1851, and one of the results of his labors is the East Mahoning Baptist Church, one of the largest of the sect in the county, and with it may be included very largely the membership of Fairview and Cookport Churches. He also, for some time, helped the cause at Indiana, and did not leave it until every dollar of debt for the church building was liquidated, begging the money for that purpose from other points, except the little a few at Indiana could raise. He commenced opening up a farm where he settled and for many years there was no other man's farm in sight. For five years, from 1869 to 1874, he resided in Tennessee, but has again returned to the field of early labors in the county, and resides near Purchase Line, Pa., in Grant township.

S. BRADDEE MILLER.—The father of our subject, Samuel Miller, was born in Conemaugh township, and was married to Mary Rankin, also born in the county, and settled in Grant township, in the woods, in 1838. Mr. M. died at the advanced age of eighty-two, and his consort at seventy-eight years. Their children were: Jane, d., m. to James Smyers, d.; Sarah, m. first to Samuel Lydick, d., and second to Samuel Streams, d.; Mary, m. first to James McKelvy, d., and second to Hugh K. Colgan; John, d.; Margaret A., m. to Peter Leasure; William R., m. to Rosanna Hopkins; S. Braddee, our subject, m. to Jane Pollock. Samuel, the father, served in the war of 1812. Jane and husband, and six children, were drowned in the Mississippi, in a steamboat collision. One child escaped and died a few years later in Iowa. John built the Dale mill in 1852 or 1853. Our subject succeeds his father in possession of the old homestead. His children were: Elder J.; Mary M., d.; John A. S.; Samuel McC.; Tirzah; Annie A.; Zillah J.; Ida Main, d.; Georgiana A.; Sarah M.; and Argyl I.

BANKS TOWNSHIP

Was formed from Canoe township in 1868, the report of survey bearing the date of March of that year. It received its name from William Banks, the well known attorney of Indiana.

SMITHPORT, HORTON P. O.

The old settlers in this portion of the county were: Joseph Steer, George Oburn, George Pearce, Simon Uber, George Hoffman, and John M. Hughes.

The first settlers on the site of Smithport were: Simon Uber, a hunter; Casper Smith, John Michael Winsheimer and John Havelick. In 1848, Matthias Smith erected a log cabin. In 1854, M. C. Getty built a storehouse and commenced the sale of merchandise. At this time the place was called Smithport, on account of the number of Smiths in the neighborhood, who owned the land upon which the village is situated. The village was surveyed in 1864 by Edmund Paige, and resurveyed in 1867 by the same party. The postoffice was established in 1856. Mrs. E. J. Horton, after whom it was named, was in charge of the office till 1866, when she was succeeded by Henry Prothero, the present official and merchant.

MRS. ELIZA Z. HORTON was born in 1821, near New Columbia, Union county, and was a daughter of John and Ruth Weaver nee Zimmerman, who located in Bell township, Westmoreland county, in 1826. The former died in 1870, at the age of ninety; the latter in 1873, eighty-seven years of age. Our subject was married, in 1841, to Ezra Horton, who died in 1852. Their children were: Samantha C., d., m. to Joseph Pierce; Sarah Elizabeth, m. first to William Riddle, d., and second to William Williamson; Ruth Anna, m. to John Neal; Hannah Amanda, m. to Dr. G. J. Rheese; Happylonia Amelia, m. to Henry Fairbank; and John Thomas, m. first to Mary Hess, d.; and second to Alice McCullough.

HENRY PROTHERO was born in Indiana in 1839, and was a son of John and Sarah Prothero nee Clark, a sister of James Clark. (For Prothero notes, see Rayne township.) He was a member of company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps, and served his term of enlistment. He has been engaged in the general store trade in Smithport for fourteen years.

JOHN MCCULLOUGH was born in Armstrong township, about one mile from what is now known as "Tannery village." in 1815, and was a son of John and Margaret McCullough nee Sharp, a daughter of Captain Andrew Sharp. The father of our subject was born in Armstrong township in 1786, about one mile east of the above named village. He was a son of David and Hannah McCullough nee Rutherford. The former was among the early settlers of what is now Indiana county. The mother of the latter died in Armstrong county about 1825, at the age of one hundred and three. At the age of one hundred she visited our subject. David McCullough's children were: Isabella, d., m. to Thomas Sharp, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Sharp, d.; Mary, d., m. to Matthew Rankin; Robert, d.; David, d., m. to Elizabeth George; Elizabeth, d., m. to William George, d.; and Hannah, d., m. to William Richardson. John's children were: David, m. to Rachel Lovelace; Andrew, d.; John, m. to Cordelia Beebe; Thomas S.; Mary Ann, m. first to Samuel Irwin, d., and second to Frederick Shepherd; Joseph, d.; Alexander, m. first to Jane Walker, d., and second to Mrs. Mary Strong nee Fyock; Nancy, m. to John McKay, d.; Margaret, d.; and Hannah, m. to John Woodward. Our subject's children were: Alice, m. to John Horton; John Milton, d.; and William Benton. A white pine tree, eighty feet in height, now standing on the "Daniel McCoy" farm, Armstrong township, was planted in 1827, when only three inches in height, by our subject and his father. The former, in 1827 or '28, went to the place now occupied by him and camped over night. His parents, about that time, had located in Clearfield county, not far from what is now the Banks township line.

NICHOLAS H. HUGUS was born in Hempfield township, Westmoreland county, in 1839, and was a son of Dr. John M. and Mary Ann Hugus nee Kuhns. The latter was a daughter of Philip and Elizabeth Kuhns nee Felgar. Dr. John M. Hugus was a son of Jacob and Catharine Hugus. He was born in 1807, and died in 1879. He was a self-educated physician and commenced the practice of medicine in 1849. He located in what is now Banks township in 1852. The nearest postoffice was Marchand, a distance of nine miles. The nearest grist mill was Simpson's, on the site of Richmond. The blacksmith was eight miles and the store nine miles from the settlement. The father of Jacob Hugus migrated, prior to the Revolutionary war, from France to America, on account of persecution for his Protestant faith. Jacob's mother was the daughter of Captain Flick, of Northampton county, who was an officer in the Revolutionary army, and gave command in the German language. Jacob Hugus' children were: Lydia, d, m. to William Riley; Jacob, d., m. to Mary Crider, d.; Sarah, d., m. to John Lose; Margaret, b. in 1796, living, m. to Henry Fisher; Susan, d., m. to Rev. N. P. Hacke, D. D., d.; Mary, m. to Rev. Henry Coch, d.; Paul and Catharine, d., twins, former m. to Sarah Whiant, and the latter m. to Jacob Lose; Hannah, m. to Henry Ulerich; John, d., m. to Mary M. Kuhns; Henry, m. to Francis Berlin, d.; and Elizabeth, m. to James Murphy, d. All the children were born in Greensburg, Westmoreland county. Dr. Hugus' children were: Ann E., m. to Samuel States; Catharine, twenty years a teacher in the common schools, taught one hundred and fourteen months; Simon D., m. to Winnie Fah; Nicholas H., carpenter and joiner, m. to Maggie R. Watson; George, m. to Mary Henry; and William E., m. to Mary Wetzel. Simon D. was a private in company F, 105th regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers. The old house to which Jacob Hugus removed from Greensburg, was about a mile and a half distant from that place. It was erected prior to the burning of Hannastown by a Mr. Ulno. It is still standing and a port hole is yet visible. From this a boy shot an Indian in the last Indian war.

WILLIAM MARTIN.—Our subject was born in Ireland, October 12th, 1798. He married Ruth Urey, June 20th, 1820. Their issue was seven sons: William, b. Nov. 12, 1823; John, b. May, 1825; Joseph, b. November, 1826; Robert, b. February, 1829; James, b. February 20, 1831; Alexander, b. February 20, 1833; and David, b. April, 1835. His wife deceased January 29, 1837. He, with his seven sons, migrated to America, sailing from Warrenpoint in the ship St. Martin, commanded by Captain Vaughen, April 3d, and arrived at New York May 17th, 1842. They settled in what is now Banks township, Indiana county, on farm owned by his son James, in the same year. He followed teaching as his vocation, and was among the early teachers in the neighborhood. He taught his last term at the age of seventy-two years, in 1870, and departed this life September 25th, 1872.

JAMES MARTIN, son of William and Ruth Martin, was born February 20th, 1831, in Ireland, and married, in 1857, Mary Wilkson, born in 1830, in Armstrong county. They settled on the old home farm, where they are still living. They have a family of six children, three sons and three daughters.

GEORGE DARR was born in 1804, in Lancaster county. In about 1824 he came to Indiana county. He married Margaret Bougher, born in Franklin county in 1808. They lived in Indiana county until about 1844. They moved to Brownside, Clearfield county, where they remained until deceased. They reared a family of seven children: Maria, m. to Robert McMasters; Salina, d., m. to B. G. McMasters; A. W. Darr, born Dec. 26th, 1834, in Indiana county, m. to Jane E. Reed; Henry, m. to Sarah Byers; Caroline, m. to John Kime; Sarah D., d., m. to John Detwiler; and Clara, d., m. to Peter Sawyer.

BENJAMIN BAIRD was born in Clinton county, in 1796. In 1823 he married Rachel Poorman, born in same county in 1803. They settled in Clinton county and remained until 1834. They moved to Clearfield county, lived there till 1837, and then removed to Indiana county and settled in what is now Banks township, on farm owned by James Brady. There was but one family living in a radius of two miles distance from them. They lived in their forest home about ten years and then returned to Clearfield county, where his wife is still living. He died in 1873. He followed farming as his occupation. They reared a family of ten children: Martha J., Anna E., Peter, Mary, Sarah, Zebulon, Lydia R., Essa B., Samantha, d., and Benjamin F.

ZEBULON BAIRD, son of Benjamin Baird, d., was born June 2d, 1833, in Clearfield county. In 1857, he married Miss Eliza J. Brown, born April 4th, 1841, and a daughter of David and Martha Brown nee Thompson. They settled on the farm where they are now living. Their union resulted in eight children, four boys and four girls. He has followed farming and lumbering as his vocation.

DAVID GORMAN was born in Westmoreland county, October 14, 1798. He married, in 1818, Miss Jane George, of Irish descent, b. in Maryland, October 27, 1794. They settled at Woodward Mills, Armstrong county, Pa., and remained several years. He worked at his trade, blacksmithing. In 1828, they moved to Elderton, in same county, and kept public house until in 1832, they removed to Chambersville, Indiana county, where he worked at his trade until 1837. He then made improvements, and moved his family on land now owned by Thos. Barrett, Grant township. On all sides of him was timber. The forest was unbroken from his home to the Susquehanna river. On the evening of the 17th of November, 1840, while taking the assessment of property in the township, he started home on a near cut through the woods, lost his way, and was frozen to death, leaving a wife in the forest home, with nine children to care for, seven sons and two daughters, viz: John W., Samuel, d.; David G.; Martha D.; Daniel; Elizabeth M., d.; James; William, d, and Alexander. His wife is still living, at the good old age of eighty-six years, and is enjoying good health.

DAVID G. GORMAN, son of David and Jane Gorman, was born in Armstrong county, April 2, 1823. He came with his parents to Indiana county in 1832. He married Christina Fry, October 14, 1845. They settled on the farm where they are now living, in Banks township. They have a family of ten children, four son and six daughters. He has followed farming and lumbering as his vocation. He served nine months in the late war, and was at Lee's surrender. He enlisted in company C, 206th Pennsylvania regiment. He filled the office of justice of the peace from 1857 to 1877.

THOMAS SMITH emigrated about 1840, and in 1843, settled in Banks township, in what is now known as the "Irish settlement." There was then no house between Robertsville, on Mahoning creek, to Baird's on line of Clearfield county. Mr. S. is now eighty-five years old and his wife, Mary Williams about sixty-five. His son James is J. P. of Banks township. One son, John, was in 49th Pennsylvania volunteers, was captured in front of Richmond, in 1862, and was never heard of afterwards.

ROBERT J. BECKETT was born in 1853, on the farm now occupied by Mrs. Margery Beckett, Banks township, and was a son of Samuel and Margery Becket nee Wilkins. The former was a native of Ireland, who came with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Becket, to Banks township, in 1842. He died in 1867, at the age of fifty-eight. His children were: Sarah S., d.; John W., d.; Robert J., m. to Emma Smith; Samuel; Mary E.; Rebecca M.; Margaret P., d.; Anna J.; and William Andrew. Our subject's children were: Evangeline, d.; and Harry.

BRUSH VALLEY TOWNSHIP

Was formed from Wheatfield, in 1835, and was so called from the valley of Brush creek. In the early days, the timber along the creek was short and compared by the settlers to brush—hence the name Brush creek.

MATTHEW CRESSWELL was born in 1807, on the farm now occupied by James W, Chambers, and was a son of John and Ann Cresswell nee Anderson, who removed from Huntingdon county, and settled on the above named farm in 1802. John made the first improvement, but after working thirty years, and clearing one hundred and twenty-five acres of land, he was dispossessed for lack of a good title. He died in 1841, in his seventy-seventh year; his wife in 1851, in her eighty-first year. John was the son of James Cresswell, a native of Scotland, who had migrated to Pennsylvania, prior to the Revolution. Samuel, a son, was in war of the Revolution, and Alexander, another son, was in the war of 1812. John's children were: Samuel, d., m. to Elizabeth Stewart, d.; Esther, d., m. to Hugh Evans, d.; Rebecca, m. to James S. McFeaters, d.; Elizabeth, in her eighty-third year; James, d.; Robert, d., m. to Isabella Campbell, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Campbell; Matthew; Mary, d., m. to William McNutt; and Ann, m. to James Parks, d. Our subject has been a justice of the peace for thirteen years. He managed the mill near his residence for twenty-two years, and has of late been engaged in farming.

Rev. A. B. Runyan, (Baptist,) was born in Franklin township, Lycoming county, in 1826, and was a son of Thomas Runyan, still living, in his eighty-ninth year, in Columbia county. Thomas was the grandson of Rev. Thomas Runyan, a Baptist minister. Our subject was educated at the Bloomsburg Academy and the Lewisburg University, and commenced preaching in the Two Lick Baptist Church in 1852, where he remained for one and a half years. His charges have been: Brush Valley two years; New Bethlehem, Pine Creek and Red Bank, three years; Clarion and Strattonville, three years; Curwensville, Reynoldsville and Clearfield, subsequently adding Ansonville in place of Reynoldsville; and West Lebanon. He then entered the army as a member of company L, 6th Pennsylvania heavy artillery, and served nearly one year. On his return, he resumed the pastorate of West Lebanon, serving the Indiana church as a supply. His subsequent parishes have been: Apollo, where he organized the Church, and Branch of Brady's Bend; Lock Haven; Eagleville, where he organized the Church, and Milesburg; the Johnston and other parts of the year; and Crooked Creek, Rayne and Old Mahoning, retaining to-day the pastorate of Crooked Creek. He was married in 1853, to Lucinda, daughter of Hugh Evans, an early settler of Brush Valley. His children were: Mary Emma, d.; Hugh Carey, d.; Anna Jane; Carmi, d.; and Nettie B. Our subject, despite his labors in so many counties, has retained his residence on the old Evans homestead, near Mechanicsburg.

Rev. T. P. Patterson, United Presbyterian, was born in Western township, Guernsey county, Ohio, in 1832, and was a son of John and Margaret Patterson nee Thompson, natives of Westmoreland county, who located in Guernsey county in 1827. John was a son of Thomas, who was a son of Thomas Patterson a native of Ireland, and among the early settlers of Westmoreland county, prior to the Revolution. When he first migrated to America he located on what is now a part of the present city of Philadelphia. Our subject was educated at Muskingum College, and Madison College, Ohio, graduating from the latter in 1859. He graduated from the U. P. Theological Seminary, of Allegheny City, in 1863, and was first stationed at Spring Grove, Warren county, Ill., where he remained for five years. After remaining one year as a missionary in Wisconsin, his parents have been in order: Laurel Hill, Fayette county, seven and a half years, and a charge consisting of Bethel, Mechanicsburg, and Greenville, Indiana county. He was married in 1862, to Celia McKee, daughter of Thomas McKee, of Guernsey county. His children were: John W., Clarance McKee, Margaret Janette, and Augusta Bell.

Rev. W. K. Shimp, United Brethren in Christ, was born in Berkeley county, Va., in 1824, and was a son of Jonas and Elizabeth Shimp nee Kerns. The former was a son of John Shimp, a Revolutionary soldier who enlisted in Virginia, and served through the entire war. Our subject was educated in the common schools of Virginia, and commenced preaching in Westmoreland county in 1852, having six churches in his circuit, and has been a constant laborer, when health permitted, since that date. He was married, first to Sarah St. Lawrence, of Uniontown, Fayette county, and second, in 1849, to Martha Parks, daughter of James Parks, of Allegheny City. His children were: Margaret, d.; William J., Mary Emma Esther, and Joseph Henry. His present circuit embraces Balsano, Mechanicsburg, Orner's Chapel, Bethel, Dias' Ridge, and other points where he is performing missionary work.

Rev. Samuel Milliron, Evangelical Association, was born in Wayne township, Armstrong county, in 1847, and was a son of Jacob and Leah Milliron nee Schecendost. The former's second wife was Margaret Bradenbaugh. He was a native of Jefferson county. Our subject was educated at Glade Run Academy, and in the common schools. He entered the ministry in the spring of 1863, and was located at Marchand, having appointments at five other congregations. His successive circuits have been in order: Fairview, Cambria county, Clearfield, Clearfield county, and Mechanicsburg since March, 1879. He has nine appointments to fill every three weeks, having to preach on Saturday evenings and three times on Sunday. He was married, in 1872, to Mary, daughter of William Moot, of North Mahoning township. Their children are: Ida Rebecca, and Ezra Lester.

Captain Daniel McFarland was born in 1800 in the Tuscarawas valley, Mifflin county, and was a son of John and Elizabeth McFarland nee McMillan, natives of Ireland. In 1803 the family migrated to Indiana county, and settled on the farm now occupied by Michael Stiles, and in a short time removed to the farm now occupied by our subject. John McFarland died in 1823, at the age of fifty-three; his wife in 1841, about seventy years of age. The children were: Robert, d.; Daniel, m. to Sarah Kennedy, d. in 1860 about forty years of age; John, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Samuel Stewart; Mary; William, m. to a Miss Sutton; and James, m. to Sarah McCartney. Daniel was a lieutenant for ten years, and a captain for ten, in the militia. His children were: William, m. to Ella Young; Catharine, m. to George Stevenson; Isabella, m. to Berry Stevenson; and John. William was in the war of 1861.

Mowry T. Moorhead was born in Indiana borough, in 1842, and was a son of Robert B. and Rosanua Moorhead nee Lichteberger. The former was born in Indiana in 1816, and died in 1858, having located in Mechanicsburg in 1851. He was a son of James Moorhead, had served in the legislature for two terms, and aided materially in preserving the memoirs of the olden time. His wife was born in 1816 in Somerset, Pa., and is now residing in Mechanicsville. Robert B.'s children were: Charlotte D.; Mary S., d., m. to M. L. Kier; Mowry Thompson, m. to Sarah E. Cribbs; Margaret Wallace, d., m. to William A. Stiffey, d.; Marth S.; and William Bruce, m. to Belle Peddicord. Mowry T. was fourth sergeant in company H, 12th Pennsylvania reserve corps, July 24th, 1861, to August 29th, 1862, being discharged for disability. Mowry T.'s children were: Rosa Agnes, Robert B., Carl D., and Nellie R. William Bruce's children were: Inez H., and Ida P.

John Marks was born in Westmoreland county in 1821, and was a son of Joseph and Frances Marks nee Speck. Joseph was a son of John and Sarah Marks nee Collins. The latter was a daughter of Timothy Collins, a local M. E. preacher, who had been a soldier in the Revolution. He died over ninety years of age. Our subject came to Mechanicsburg in 1843, and was the first wagon and chair maker of the place. His children were: Labanna, d.; Afadella, d.; Henry, m. to Catharine Carbaugh; William R., d.; Mary A., m. to W. H. Davis; John S., m. to Harriet Paul; Collins, d.; Margaret, m. to Abraham Beck; Sarah C., d.; Ulysses G., Elizabeth, Harry, and Clarance. Henry Marks' children were: William Boyd, John C., Charlotte Elizabeth, and Mary Agnes.

Alexander Morgan was born in Blair county in 1830, and was a son of John and Catharine Morgan nee Yearty. The former died about fifty years of age. The latter is living over eighty-one years old. John was a son of John Morgan, an emigrant from Germany to what is now Blair county. Alexander purchased his farm in 1851, and located upon it in 1855. He was married, in 1855, to Sarah Sides, daughter of Jacob Sides, a son of Adam Sides. His children were: Elizabeth Ann, Susan Rebecca, Sarah Catharine, d., and Jacob Alexander, d., twins, Matilda Jane, Margaret Teressa, Milton, d.; and John Grant. John Morgan, jr.'s children were: Jacob, d., m.; John, m. to Esther Roberts; Eliza, m. to Samuel Mardis; Nancy, m. to David Mentzer, d. in the army; and Alexander, above named. John was in the 209th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Alexander was in company H, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year.

Samuel Brackenwas born in 1819, on the farm now known as the "Coal lands," Chestnut Ridge, Centre township, and was a son of William and Margaret Bracken nee Boner. The former was born about two miles east of the site of Armagh, and was a son of Thomas Bracken, ("Short Tommy,") an early settler of what is now East Wheatfield. Thomas' location is supposed to have dated from about the close of the Revolutionary war. His children were: John, d.; Sarah, d., m. to John Wakefield, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to Jacob McCartney; Thomas, m.; William, d. in 1823, m. to Margaret Boner, d.; James, m.; Isaac, m.; and David, m. William Bracken's children were: James, m. to Margaret Kerr; Asby, m. first to Sarah Gibson, d., and second to Mrs. Decker; Samuel, m. to Jane Campell; Mary, d., m. to Israel Mikesell; Isaac, m. to Cornelia Buel; and William, m. to Nancy Robinson. William was a soldier in the war of 1861.

REV. A. J. ASHE, of M. E. Church, Mechanicsburg, was born in Summer Hill, Croyle township, Cambria county, and was a son of Tobias and Hannah Ashe nee Myers. The former was a son of Jacob Ashe, one of the original settlers of Scalp Level, and a son of Christly Ashe, an Amish preacher, and an early pioneer of Somerset county. The latter was a brother, according to tradition, of General Ashe, of the Revolutionary army. Our subject was educated at the Ebensburg Academy and the Indiana Normal School. He taught in the Ebensburg schools for two years. He entered the M. E. ministry in 1876, being licensed on the 28th of February. He took charge of the Plumville circuit in 1877, Rural Valley in 1878, and Brush Valley in 1879. He was married in 1877 to Anna Platner, of Wilmore, Cambria county.

W. B. HOSKINSON was born in Monongalia county, West Virginia, in 1827, and was a son of John and Julia Hoskinson nee Gamble. The former died in 1843, at the age of fifty-six; his wife in 1836, at the age of thirty six years. John was a son of George Hoskinson, a native of Wales. John's children were: Riley; Harriet; Caroline; W. B., m. to Louisa Mikesell, d. in 1874, at the age of forty-four; Julia; and John Nelson. Riley was quartermaster of the 73d Illinois volunteers. John Nelson was in the 4th Pennsylvania cavalry. W. B. was first sergeant company H, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. Our subject's children were: Rev. Winfield S., graduate of "Wittemberg College," Ohio, in 1876, and of the Theological Seminary in 1878, professor of preparatory department of the college; Wilson Nelson, M. D.; Emma, m. to Oliver Wilson; Jennie; Clarissa, d., and Julia, d., twins; Emma Flora; John Milton; Minnie; Frank E., and Clarence, d. The Heshbon tract was warranted in 1827 to A. Free, and patented in 1850 to our subject and Thomas Auld.

ALVAH POLLOCKwas born in Jefferson township, Allegheny county, in 1829, and was a son of David and Elizabeth Pollock nee Barkley. The former died in 1876, at the age of eighty-one; the latter in 1867, at the age of seventy-one. David was a native of what is now Lawrence county, and his wife of Allegheny county. The former, for three days, was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a gunsmith by trade. His children were: Joseph, b. in 1819, d. in 1874; John B., b. in 1820, d. in 1821; Peter S., b. in 1822; Silas, b. in 1822; Alvah, b. in 1829; and Mary J., b. in 1832, d. in 1858. Our subject was a miller for thirteen years. He served in company H, 62d Pennsylvania volunteers for three years as a fifer. He was married in 1866 to Dorathea Thompson, of Allegheny county. Their children were: Peter Stilley, Robert Thompson, David Boyd, and Priscilla Jane. He located on his present farm in 1876.

FRANCIS KILLEN was born in 1833, on the Cambria county line, and was a son of Charles and Anna Killen nee Clark. The latter was a daughter of William Clark. Charles' second wife was Maria Simmons. Charles was a son of Daniel Killen. (See sketch of Killen, East Wheatfield township.) Charles Killen's children were: William, d.; Daniel; Thomas, d.; Martha, d.; Francis, m. to Martha Taylor; Samuel, d.; and George, d., m. to Elizabeth Harkins, d. Francis was in company H, 206th Pa. vols. about one year. His children were: Sarah, William and Annie Ellen.

JAMES WOLF was born in 1849, on the Wolf homestead, now occupied by David Dearmond, and was a son of Samuel D. and Susannah Wolf nee Altimus. The latter was a daughter of Adam Altimus, an early settler on the McFeaters farm, Centre township. Samuel D. was a son of John and Mary Wolf nee Dearmond. John came from Maryland, and in the latter part of the last or early portion of the present century, located on the Wolf homestead. He died in 1859, at the age of eighty-four; his wife died in 1856, about seventy-five years of age. Their children were: Abram, d., m. to Mary Lockard; John, d.; James, d., m. in Kentucky; S. D., d. in 1866, at the age of fifty-five, m. to Susannah Altimus, living, sixty-seven years old; Isaac, d.; John, m. in Kentucky; William, m. first to a Miss Finley, d., and second to Eliza McCune; Uriah, d., m. to Susan Grumbling; Margaret, d., m. to James Stewart; and Josiah, d. The children of Samuel D. Wolf were: Josiah, m. to Amelia Herlinger; Eliza Jane, d.; John A., Abram T., James, William, d., and Margaret. Josiah was in the 206th Pa. vols. for about one year, and also in the six month's service.

M. L. STEWART was born in Indiana borough, in 1832, and was a son of James and Martha Stewart nee Williams. The latter died in 1849. The former was a native of the Tuscorora valley, and came to the county seat in 1818. He was a tailor by trade and managed a shop for some time in Indiana, as well as "kept" the jail. In 1838, he removed to Mechanicsburg and pursued his calling for some years. He was justice of the peace for twenty years. In 1837, he made the first improvement at Stewartsville, and in 1844, removed to our subject's location at that point, where he died in 1872, at the age of seventy-two. His children were: Thomas, M. D., m. to Julia Brady. Benjamin and Josiah, twins; the former was married to Esther Campbell, the latter was killed in 1857, in Minnesota, by the Indians, he was married first to Sarah Barton, d., and second to a Miss Leonard; William, d., m. to Clarinda English, d.; James, d.; M. L., m. to Sarah Hileman; Mary Catharine, d., m. to George Hileman; and J. W., m. to Mary Davis. Thomas was a surgeon in a Texas regiment during the war of 1861. J. W. was in the 11th Pa. reserve corps. Benjamin was in the 67th Pa. vols. William was a lieutenant in company F, 55th Pa. vols. Our subject's children were: Martha Gertrude, m. to Gilbert T. McCrea; Mary Florinda; Elizabeth Blanch; and Thomas Horner. Our subject's farm was warranted to Charles Deal and Robert Weir, in 1794, and patented to Alexander Elliott in 1833. An excellent mineral spring is situated upon this tract. Its properties are similar to the Bedford springs.

DAVID ALTIMUS, SR., was born in this county, in 1807, and was a son of Adam and Eve Altimus nee Shaffer. Adam was a native of Northampton county, and migrated to what is now Indiana county, about 1798, locating on the present Robert McPhetris farm, Centre township. His children were: Nicholas, d., m. to Mary Wolf; Margaret d., m. to Peter Steffy; Daniel, d., m. to Elizabeth Hendrickson; John, m. to Mary A. Drennan; Thomas, d.; William, d., m. to Prudence Peddicord; Susanna, m. to Samuel Wolf; and David, m. in 1832, to Sarah Peddicord. Nicholas was killed by an accident at his mill. Thomas and his horse was killed by falling trees while returning from Wakefield's mill. Our subject's children were: Nicholas, m. to Cordelia Wolf; Prudence; Alexander, d., m. to a Mrs. Parks; William, m. to Nannie Rugh; David, m. to Rebecca Hughes; James, d.; Martha J., m. to Michael Stiles; Abraham, m. to Catharine Dias; William, m. to Catharine Dias; John, d.; and Daniel. Nicholas, William and David, were in the late war. Our subject purchased his farm in 1838. In 1863, he broke a hip-bone and has since been unable to do any work.

THE STEWART FAMILY.—The ancestor of the family of Stewarts, that are the subject of the present sketch, came from England many years before the Revolutionary war, and settled upon the tract of land upon which the town of Gettysburg, Adams county, Pa., now stands. He had two children, William and Sarah. Sarah married a man by the name of Burns, and removed to Hagerstown, Md. William entered the navy as soon as the Revolutionary war began, and remained in it to the close. He was taken prisoner, but escaped with a few others at night, when the guards were asleep, from the vessel in which they were confined, and swam to the shore. He then married Elizabeth St. Clair, (aunt of Dr. Thomas St. Clair, of Indiana, Pa.,) who resided near Little York, Adams county, Pa., and settled at Emmettsburg, Md. Here were born Mary, James, Hannah, David, Elizabeth, Samuel, Joseph, John, and Benjamin. The latter died while an infant. The family removed to Mercersburg, Franklin county, Pa., in about 1809. Here Hannah married Peter Elliot and some years after removed to Ohio, her husband having first died. The family removed to Indiana county, in the year 1812, and settled in what is now Brush Valley township, near the "forks" of Yellow brush. Mary here m. Samuel Gibson, of the "Manor" settlement; Jas., m. Margaret Gibson, Samuel Gibson's sister; David, m. Martha Allen; Elizabeth, m. Samuel Creswell; Samuel, m. Jane Wilson, and after her death, Margaret Virtue; Joseph, m. Mary Findley, and John, m. Mary Ann Ocher, of Blair county, Pa. Samuel is the only son of the above family that is alive at the present time, (1880)—he resides in Centre township. Although above 81 years of age, he is well preserved and comparatively active, and may live many years yet. David enlisted in the war of 1812, and was engaged in several battles that were fought in the southern campaign. James was also in the war of 1812; he being under Gen. Harrison, in the campaign against the Indians in the northwest. He was promoted to the office of lieutenant for meritorious service. He was very fond of the adventures and dangers incident to frontier life, and had many exciting encounters with the bears, wolves, and panthers, which at that time were very abundant. From this, and his style of dress, as well as to distinguish him from 'Squire James Stewart, of Brush Valley, and Maj. James Stewart, of Buffington, he was known as "Moccasin Jimmie" Stewart. He lived for several years near where the town of Mechanicsburg now stands, and afterwards, in 1820, removed three miles northwest of that place, where he resided until his death, in 1858. His children were: William, James Gibson, Samuel, David, Margaret, Elizabeth, and Rebecca. William read medicine with Dr. James Stewart, of Indiana, and located in Armagh, where he resided until his death, in 1851. He was married to Martha Noble, and has two children living, J. Spencer and Henry N. James Gibson married Rebecca S. Loughry, and remained upon the old homestead until 1874, when he removed to Armagh, where he died in 1876. He had three children, James N., Elizabeth and Wilson L. Samuel read medicine with his brother William, and located in Armagh, where he died in 1857. David married Elizabeth Boner, and is still living in Brush Valley township. Margaret married James Young, and resides at St. Clairsville, Ohio. Elizabeth married Nicholas Paige, and is still living in Brush Valley township. Rebecca married Benjamin Coffman, of Perry county, Pa., where he died in 1861.

John Williams, who died in 1866, at the age of eighty-four, was a native of what is now Brush Valley township, and nephew of Benoni Williams. His first wife was Annace Mayhew, who died in 1829, and his second wife was Rachel Thompson. His children were: William, m. first to Margaret Thompson, d., and second to unknown; James, m. first to Elizabeth Bowers, d., and second to Elizabeth Fulmer; Reuben, d., m. to Lucinda McGregor; and Mary, m. first to John Frampton, d., and second to Charles Pounds. Mary's children by first husband were: L. P., d. from wounds received at Fair Oaks while a member of company A, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers; Mary A., m. to J. J. Wells; Charles Augustus; and John W., m. to Harriet Rochester. By the second husband the children were: William; Clover, m. to Rosa Stoneberger; and Franklin, d.

George B. Snyder was born in Warren county, N. J., in 1827, and was a son of William and Elizabeth Snyder nee Quick, who removed to the vicinity of Blairsville in 1853. Their children were: Sarah A., m. to William Ackerson; and George B., m. in 1846, to Hannah Ackerson. Our subject's children were: William, m. to Amanda Menier; John, m. to Margaret Stevens; and Emma, m. to Luther McDonald. He purchased his farm in 1870.

WHITE TOWNSHIP.

This township, named for Judge Thomas White, was organized in 1843, and is composed of parts of Centre, Washington, Green and Armstrong townships. Its situation can be seen by an examination of the map in the beginning of the volume. Its pioneers are shown in the sketches of the Moorheads, Kelly, Thompson, and others, in previous chapters, or the records in the biographical or genealogical department. Much interesting matter is written in connection with the history of Indiana, and the reader is referred to those articles for valuable data in relation to this portion of the county.

The fort on the Moorhead farm is noted in connection with Fergus Moorhead. There was a ring, about two rods in diameter, said to have been an Indian encampment, on the Isaac St. Clair farm. This was elevated about two feet above the surroundings which were situated on the flat top of a hill, fifteen rods east and above his residence.

Conrad Rice was born in Lancaster county, June 16th, 1783, and was a son of John Conrad Rice, the pioneer, whose location and adventures are mentioned in connection with the history of the borough of Indiana. His wife was Philipena Dickey, who died about the time of the removal, and never located in the county. His children were: Philip, d., m. to Margaret McAnulty, d.; Margaret, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Catharine, d., m. to James Middleton, d.; Philipena, d., m. to John Lydick, d.; Susannah, d., m. to Robert Adams, d.; Barbara, d., m. to John McDonald, d.; and Conrad, d., m. to Mary Fair, b. in 1798, near what is now Black-lick station, danghter of John and Elizabeth Fair nee Wolf. The latter's children were: Elizabeth, m. to Philip Altman; John Conrad, m. to Elizabeth Kinkaid; Jacob, m. first to Rebecca Ann Hall, d., and second to Mary Walton; Daniel, m. to Lucy Earhart; Susannah, m. first to Peter Garman, d., and second to William Peters; John Fair, m. to Eliza Hice; Mary C., m. to A. W. Kimmell; Lucinda, m. to James S. Allison. Mary Ann, m. to James A. Fulton; William F., m. to Maria Shotts; Samuel F., d.; and Martha, m. to Jacob A. Hile. Mr. Hile was born in Westmoreland county in 1837, and settled in Indiana county in 1861. He is an engineer on the Indiana Branch railroad. His children were: William Rice, Frank C., Lewis A., d.; and Maurice F. The widow of our subject has a quilt in her possession which was made (in what is now Indiana county,) before there was a carding machine in the county.

George Trimble was a native of the north of Ireland, and at the age of nineteen, migrated to the Conecocheague valley, Pennsylvania. About the time of the second removal of the Moorheads to their former settlement, we find him located near the site of the old brickyard, or the Reider distillery, near Indiana. From this place he was driven away by the Indians, and was forced to reside either in the Moorhead block-house, or to migrate to his former home in the above-named valley. In the latter place he remained about seven years. At what time he returned is not known, but in 1796, he removed to the farm now occupied by William Ray. In the same season, and prior to his removal, his son Samuel attended a school taught in an old log building in this place. The schoolhouse was situated on a cross road from Mahoning road to the pike, about a fourth of a mile south of the new state road. George Trimble's wife was Jane Mearns. Their children were: Elizabeth, d., b. in 1776; William, d., m. first to Margaret McCrea, d., and second to Jane Morrison; James, d.; Mary, d., m. to David Cummins, d.; John, d., m. to Annie Stewart, d.; George, d., m. to Anna Hutcheson, d.; Samuel, d., b. in 1788, probably at their first location in Indiana county, m. first to Elizabeth Agey, d., second to Jane Armstrong, d., and third to Veniza Hood, d.; and Jane, d., m. to Joseph McCartney, d. Samuel served as county commissioner, county auditor, and justice of the peace. The children of Samuel (a son of George)Trimble were: Jonathan A., m. to Matilda Hamilton; Jane, d., m. to Joseph Lytle, d.; George M., d.; Mary, d.; James, m. to Mary McGaughey; Hannah; and Veniza H., d. The children of Jonathan A. (a son of Samuel) Trimble were: James H., d.; Eliza Jane; Samuel, d.; Margaret Ann, m. to William C. McGaughey; Mary; Robert, m. to Anna J. Long; Harvey; Martha; Sarah; Hannah; and Matilda. James H. served in company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps for about eighteen months, and was killed at the first battle of Fredericksburg. Samuel served in company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months, and company D, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry for four months. He was killed while on guard duty in 1864. The children of James (a son of Samuel) Trimble were: Laura Jane, Elizabeth E., Samuel Stewart, and Mary Etta. The children of George (a son of George) Trimble were: Thomas, m. to Mary Anderson; Jane, m. to William Hamilton; Samuel, m. first to Lucy Magee, d., and second to Mrs. Lydia Reed nee Kelly; Nancy, d., m. to Jas. Kinter; Esther, m. to Nathan Hilands; William, d., and Geo., d., m. to Nancy Hamilton. Samuel served as deputy sheriff under Gawin Sutton. George was a member of the 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps. The children of Thomas (a son of Geo. and Anna) Trimble were: Ann, m. to John J. Stephens; Margaret; John A., George and William, twins; the latter was married to Anna Stormer. The George Trimble (now William Ray) homestead was warranted to James Ramsey in 1784. It was patented to the latter in 1795, and was called "St. James," situated in Armstrong township, Westmoreland county. It was deeded in 1797 to George Trimble.

James Thompson located in what is now Indiana county, on the Clark B. Thompson farm, White township, as one of the companions of the Moorheads. His wife was Mary Parks. Their children were: Elizabeth, b. in 1773; William, b. in 1775; Robert, b. in 1777; Nancy, b. in 1779; Rebecca, b. in 1781; John, b. in 1784; James, b. in 1786; Joshua, b. in 1788; Mary, b. in 1792; and James, b. in 1794; all deceased. The latter married Ann Simmons McKee, a daughter of James McKee, on the 24th of February, 1820. The records say: Charles B. McKee, m. to Julia Hamilton Snyder; James, m. to Ann McLosky; Mary McKee, m. to A. T. Moorhead; Samuel W. McKee, m. to Letitia Thomas; Nancy E., m. to Abraham Hicks; John J., m. to Elizabeth Herrell; and Alexander, m. to Margaret Tate; James McKee, d. in 1821; Nancy (his wife) d. in 1850; Samuel, d. in 1836; Mary Moorhead, d. in 1836; James McKee, Jr., d. in 1838; Ann Simmons Thompson, d. in 1844; Nancy Hicks, d. in 1845; Joseph, d. in 1849; John J., d. in 1853; George Trimble, d. in 1859.

James McLain was born in 1804, on the homestead now occupied by him, and was a son of Rev. James and Barbara McLain nee Campbell, a daughter of General Charles Campbell, who were married in 1801. The former was a native of Franklin county, and was a son of James and Christian McLain nee Brown. For five years he was a Presbyterian missionary in the South. He located on the homestead in 1801. The official tables exhibit the positions held by him, and indicate in some measure the public estimation of his ability and character. He died in 1835, at the age of seventy-seven; his wife died in 1816, at the age of thirty-five. His children were: Margaretta C. C., d., m. to Thomas Howard, d.; James, m. to Margaret Hutchison, d.; Charles C., m. first to Penelope Adams, d., second to Caroline McLain, d., and third to Mary Reynolds, d.; Thomas Brown, m. to Eliza Hutchinson; Louisa C., m. to Alexander Loughrey; and Mary J., m. to William Lowman. Our subject's children were: John, m. to Jane Reynolds; Bell; David, d.; James, m. to Nellie Clapp; Sarah, m. to Frank Goodlin; Thomas S., and Caroline, d.

JOHN ADAIR was born near Gettysburg, Adams county, in 1798, and was a son of Bleany Adair, a native of Ireland, and Hannah Agey, who located in 1803, on a tract of land now occupied by Hiram St. Clair, White township. The former died in 1840, at the age of seventy-two. His first wife died about twenty years prior. His second wife, Susan Hill, died in 1842. His children were: John, m. to Maria McCleary; Jonathan, d., m. to Mary Todd; James, M. D., d.; Maria, m. to Thomas Boyle, d., Nancy; Joseph, d., m. to Eliza Todd; and Hugh, M. D., d., m. to Sarah Steele, d. John Adair's children were: Hannah, S., d.; m. to Mark Fair; James H., Presbyterian minister, graduate of Franklin College, Ohio, and the Allegheny Theological Seminary, m. to Mary J. Gailey; John M., United Presbyterian minister, graduate of Jefferson College, and the Xenia Theological Seminary, m. first to Sarah Cummins, d., and second to Ruth Cummins; Joseph, B., m. to Mary J. Moorhead; Eliza, d.; Margaret McC., d.; Milton W., captain company K, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers, wounded twice, m. to Mary M. Bell; and Calvin, killed at Fair Oaks, while a member of company K, 105th. Our subject was at the first sale of lots in Indiana. The children of Joseph B. Adair were: Maria J., John Calvin M., Maggie M., Nettie Ruth, and Alexander Thompson Moorhead.

WILLIAM D. STUCHELL (or Stuchal) was born on the 29th of February, 1804, on a farm now owned by the Stuchell heirs, Payne township, and was a son of Jacob and Margaret Stuchell nee Fairman. The former was a son of John Stuchell, who located on the above named tract in the latter part of the last century. (See sketch of C. Stuchell, or Stuchal, East Mahoning township.) Jacob's children were: William D., m. to Elizabeth Stuchell, d.; John, m. to Hannah Hicks, d.; Nancy, m. to James Hazlett; Francis, d., m. to Ann Little; Catharine, d., m. to John Thompson, d.; Eleanor, m. to Peter Hazlett; Alexander, m. to Martha Evans; James F., d.; and Jackson, d. William D.'s (our subject's) children were: Julia Ann; Margaret, m. to Samuel F. Hazlett; Alexander J., m. to Martha Coleman; Sarah Jane, d.; Eleanor E., m. to William R. Black; Samuel, d. in the army; Isabella; Francis T., Nancy, d.; Rhoda, m. to John French, a member of company A, 88th Pennsylvania volunteers for four months; and John W., killed in June, 1879, by the falling of a tree. The William D. Stuchell farm was settled by his father in 1807. The tract was called "Gentlemen's Land," and was owned by Stewart and others of New York and Philadelphia. John Freck's children were: Irwin, d.; William, d.; Edwin Nelson, Harry Ellsworth, Lizzie Larne, Laura Estella, and Earl.

GAWIN ADAMS was born at what is now "Porterfield's" mills, White township, in 1819, and was a son of James and Martha Adams nee McCartney. The former was a son of Gawin and Nancy Adams nee Irvin, natives of Ireland. Gawin, some years prior to the Revolution, migrated to what is now Indiana county, and erected his first cabin near the spring on the lot now occupied by James McCracken, in the borough of Indiana, and subsequently removed his family to his "improvement." They were driven away by the Indians, returned to the Conecocheague valley, and did not return to this section till about 1790, or when James was about one year of age. At this time they settled on the Major Ramsey tract, now occupied by James Hood, White township, and subsequently removed to the farm now owned by Gawin Adams McLain, a grandson, where they died at an advanced age. Their children were; Robert, d., b. in Ireland, m. to Susan Rice, d.; Mary, d., m. to Archibald Haddon, d.; Jane, d., m. to William Haddon, d.; James, d., m. to Martha McCartney, d.; David, d., m.; Nancy, d., m. to George McCartney, d.; and Gawin, d., m. first to Penelope McCartney, d., and second to Susan Trimble, d. Jane's children were: Nancy, m. to William C. McCrea; Penelope, m. to Alexander Dickie; Gawin; and Mary, d. Gawin Adams, the pioneer, erected the first grist and saw mills at what is now known as Porterfield's mills. The Adams homestead was willed to Gawin Adams, jr., whose only daughter, Penelope, was married to C. C. McLain. Their son, Gawin Adams McLain, is the present owner.

ROBERT WIGGINS was born on the farm now owned by William Ackerson, White township, in 1810, and was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Wiggins nee Lytle. The former was a son of Samuel and Margaret Wiggins, natives of Ireland, who located on the above named farm in the latter part of the last century. Their children were: William, m. to Jane Ramsey; Andrew, m. to Rebecca Lytle; John, m. to Hannah Brady; Thomas, m. to Elizabeth Lytle; James, m. to Mary Ramsey; Margaret, m. to John Brown; and Jane, m. to James Armstrong. John was a soldier in the war of 1812. All of the above are deceased. Thomas Wiggins' children were: Samuel, m. to Mrs. Eliza Ebey; Robert, m. first to Eliza Coulter, d., and second to Lydia Steetle; John, d.; Andrew, m. first to Sarah R. Houston, d., and second to Margaret Dick; and Margaret, m. to Robert Martin. The children of Robert, (a son of Thomas Wiggins,) were: Melinda C., d.; Coulter, attorney, m. to Adalaide M. Craigen; Jane E., m. to William Krosen; Ellen, m. to Henry Kellar; Margaretta, m. to Harry Bryan; Jemima, m. to Frank Detwiler; and James W. Thomas Wiggins made the first improvement on the Robert Wiggins homestead, about 1814.

JONATHAN S. AGEY was born in what is now White township, in 1811, and was a son of John and Nancy nee Dunwoody, who were natives of Maryland, and located in the county in 1810. John died in 1855, at the age of seventy-eight. The latter died in 1864. Jonathan and Mary Agey, the parents of John, died in Adams county; the former in 1804, at the age of fifty seven; and the latter in 1806. Their children were: Hannah, d., m. to Bleany Adair, d.; Nancy, d., m. to Stewart Henry, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Kerr, d.; John, d., m. to Nancy Dunwoody, d.; Robert, d., m. to Mary Gordon, d.; Jonathan, d., m. to Rebecca Matson, d.; and Eliza, d., m. to Samuel Trimble, d. John Agey's children were: Jonathan S., m. to Mary T. Clark; Mary, E., d.; and Nancy J., m. to Andrew Allison, d. Jonathan S.'s children were: Nancy Ann; John Sloan; Joseph C., m. to Sarah Springer; Robert T.; and Quincy A., m. to Catharine Wyke. John S., was a soldier in the war of 1861.

MRS. MARY T. AGEY nee CLARK was a daughter of Joseph and Ann Clark nee Todd, daughter of William Todd, who located in Westmoreland county in 1780, and died in 1810, at the age of sixty-eight. He served in the state legislature, in 1783, and for several successive years. He was also a member of the state senate for one term. He was an associate judge for several years. In 1787, he was a delegate to the convention which ratified the Federal constitution, and in 1789, to the convention which framed the first constitution of Pennsylvania. The Agey coal banks in this township, exhibit a six foot vein of good coal. They are situated about half a mile above "Upper Two Lick." They are self-draining. These strata underlie all the land in this vicinity.

DAVID RALSTON was born in Armstrong county, at the forks of Plum and Crooked creeks, in 1804, and was a son of David and Nancy Ralston nee Sharp. The former was an early settler at this tract. In 1870, a stone was taken out of an oak tree which had blown down upon this tract, on which was inscribed "D. R. 1798." Our subject served as sheriff of Indiana county, for which see official tables. His children were: Elizabeth, m. to Hon. A. W. Taylor; Nancy, m. to J. P. Carter, d.; Isabella, d.; J. S., m. to Maria A. Bleakney; and T. Elder, m. to Clara Sutton. The children of J. S. Ralston were: Edwin, Mary, Isabella, Elizabeth, William, and Frank. The "Frankstown and Kittanning trail" passed through the farm about twenty rods above the mouth of Plum creek. From this tract it was seven miles distant to "Blanket hill," on the same trail. There was a large deer and elk-lick on Plum creek, about ten rods above the forks, and on Crooked creek—another lick was situated about forty rods above the forks. The Kittanning path or the above named trail passed between these licks. The Indians had a camping ground on the east side of Plum creek, near these licks long after the settlement of the whites in this section.

NATHAN HILANDS was born in 1806, on what is now known as the Waterson farm, in this township, and was a son of Nathan and Isabella Hilands nee Mark. The former was born in Ireland in 1749. He removed from the Conecocheague valley to Indiana county, in 1805. He died in 1828. He was a son of Nathan Hilands, who remained in Ireland. The latter's children were: Elizabeth, d., m. to Robert Leeper, d.; Nathan, d., m. to Isabella Mark, d.; and William, d., m. to Rebecca Stuart, d. Nathan and Isabella Hilands' children were: Elizabeth, b. in 1798, m. to John S. Simpson; Samuel, b. in 1801, m. to Ann Stuchell; and Nathan, m. to Esther Trimble. Our subject's children were: Ann, b. in 1854, m. to Enos Dorr; Samuel, b. in 1856; Lizzie J., b. in 1860; and Sarah B., b. in 1858, d. The father of our subject served in the Revolutionary war, and was wounded.

JOHN S. SIMPSON was born on what is now the William Moorhead farm, Cherryhill township, in 1800, and was a son of Robert and Mary Simpson nee Shearer. The former was a son of James Simpson, who migrated to America in 1775, first locating in the "Path valley," subsequently removing to Westmoreland county, and in 1785 or '6 settling on the land now owned by the Lydick heirs, Cherryhill township. The latter's children were: Charity, d., m. to Thomas Craven, d.; Robert, d. in 1856, seventy-nine years of age, m. in 1800 to Mary Shearer, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Moses Gamble, d.; Nathaniel, d., m. to Catharine Leasure, d.; James, d., m. to Jane Shearer, d.; John, d., m. to Sarah Kirkpatrick, d.; David, d., m. to Nancy Coulter, d.; Isaac, d. in 1879, at the age of eighty-nine, m. to Mary Lewis, d.; and Samuel, d., m. to Phebe Lewis, d. Robert was a scout in the Indian wars. Isaac was a soldier in the war of 1812. Robert's children were: John S., m. to Elizabeth Hilands; Jane, m. first to George Hayes, d., and second to Samuel White; Martha, d., m. to Michael Bonar, d.; Elizabeth, m. to Peter Wimer; James, m.; Nathaniel, d.; Margaret; and Mary, d., m. to Absalom Arnold. Our subject settled on present homestead in 1833. His wife was the daughter of Nathan Hilands, a Revolutionary soldier, who located in what is now White township in 1804. Their children were: Nathan, m. to Matilda McCardle; Mary, m. to A. S. Pattison; Sarah J., d.; Charlotte, d., m. to James A. Stephens, d.; G. W., m. first to Martha J. Stephens, d., and second to Martha J. Jones; Caroline, d., m. to James Stephens; and Margaret J., d. G. W. was in the Pennsylvania militia during the Chambersburg raid. His children were: Robert Stephens, James Milton, Lizzie Bell, James Alvin and William Fulton. The children of Nathan (a son of John S. Simpson) were: Albert T., John F., m. to Mary C. Johnston; Mary Elizabeth, Samuel H., George E., Sarah C., Carrie Bell, Harry S. and Martha J. The Nathan Simpson homestead was warranted to James Elder.

JAMES ST. CLAIR was born May 4, 1774, in what is now Adams (then York) county. He was the son of James St. Clair, a Revolutionary soldier, a native of eastern Pennsylvania, whose parents migrated from the north of Ireland. The latter's wife was a Miss Miller. They removed to Washington county at a very early period, where our subject was married to Jennie Slemmons, a native of Lancaster county, whose parents had removed to Washington county about 1800. The latter was a daughter of William Slemmons. His wife was a Miss Boggs. In 1809, our subject removed to Brush Valley, locating on the farm now occupied by Captain Daniel McFarland. In 1816, he settled on the land now occupied by George Coltebaugh, White township. He died in Centre township in 1855. His wife died in the same year, at the age of seventy-one. Their children were: Margaret, d., m. to Jacob Stuchal, d.; William S., d., m. to Jane Lewis; Mary W., d., m. to Abram Stuchal, d.; James, m. to Margaret Mitchell; Samuel, m. to Catharine Miller; Isaac, m. to Sarah Miller; John, m. to Nancy Miller; Robert, d.; Thomas, M. D., m. first to Charlotte D. Patton, d., and second to Sarah A. Walker; and Hiram, m. first to Margaret Johnston, d., and second to Emily Loomis, d. The children of Samuel (a son of our subject) were: James Miller, m. first to Margaret McGee, d., and second to Sarah Rebecca Wallace; Isaac, m. to Martha Myers; Nancy J., m. to E. M. Evans; Alexander, m. to Sarah Watt; Thomas, d.; Sarah E., m. to J. H. Stewart; Caroline; Samuel A., m. to Mary Householder; Mary Ann, d.; Catharine, d.; and Margaret Rebecca. Alexander was a soldier in the war of 1861. The children of Isaac (a son of our subject) James, m. to Amanda J. Anthony; and John M., M. D., m. to Mary A. Wright. The children of John (a son of our subject) were: William A., m. first to Catharine Fulman, d., and second to Harriet Wharrey; Jane; Harry, m. to Clara Lowry; and Mary Agnes. Dr. Thos. St. Clair, a son of our subject, was educated at the Indiana Academy. In 1843, at the age of nineteen, he commenced to read medicine with Dr. John W. Jenks, of Punxsutawney. After a year's study, he removed to Indiana, where he entered the office of Dr. James M. Stewart, with whom he remained three years as a student and two as a partner. He graduated in 1847, from the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and after a career of thirty-two years as an active practitioner, is still a working member of the profession. He was connected with the "Surgeon General's volunteer surgical corps" during the war, and attended the wounded after the "Seven Days" and the "Gettysburg" battles. He served in the state senate two terms, one in 1864, and the second in 1877–'78 and 1878–'79. His children were: John P., m. to Martha Daugherty; James H., Charles M., M. D.; Lottie D., Jennie Slemmons, d.; Mary L., m. to Griffith Ellis; and Sallie Josephine. The children of Hiram (a son of our subject) were: Robert J.; Thomas S.; Nancy J.; Frank, d.; Amanda Kate, Walter Hall, and Hiram Chalmers. The Hiram St. Clair farm, White township, was warranted to James Rannels in 1804, and patented to the same in 1806. It was called "Ardee," and described as situated in "Centre" or "Oconomy" township.

WILLIAM T. HAMMILL was born in Fairfield township, Westmoreland county, in 1830, and was a son of Robert M. and Jane Hammell nee Trimble. (See sketch of Robert M. Hammell.) Robert M. located in Centre township, on the farm now occupied by him, in 1831. His children were: William T., m. first to Keziah Beck, d., and second to Mary Ann Ray; Margaret Jane, m. first to David Lytle, d., and second to William Douthet; Samuel, d.; Mary Ann, d.; Susan, d.; Elizabeth, m. to R. C. Carson; Sarah, m. to William Carson; Washington, d.; and Rachel, m. to William Stanley. Washington was a soldier in the war of 1861. William T. served as justice of the peace for six years. The latter's children were: William Penn, d.; Franklin; Plymouth; Jane; Quincy Adams; Clara Josephine; Robert, and Matthew Wilson.

MICHAEL KAUFMAN was born in Juniata county, in 1839, and was a son of Samuel and Sarah Kaufman nee Hickman. The former was born in Juniata county in 1812, and died in 1871. The latter was born in 1811 in Juniata county. Samuel was a son of Joseph and Nancy Kaufman nee Myers, who died in Juniata county. Their children were: Samuel, d.; William, d.; Joseph, d.; Abraham, d.; Isaac, m. to Margaret Bothel; Fannie L., m. to J. S. G. Wine; Solomon, d., m. to Barbara Most, d.; and Nancy, m. to William Seiber. Samuel's children were: Michael, m. to Pauline Smith; Harrison H., m. to Margaret E. Young; Mary Jane; Sarah Ann; Margaret E.; and Samuel. All the family, except Harrison H., remain on the old homestead. Harrison H., was educated at the Indiana Seminary, and Covode Academy. Our subject's children were: William S.; Samuel E.; Cora L.; Ada Gertrude; Joseph L.; and James Alvin. Harrison H.'s children were: Samuel A.; Harry Elmer; Ella B.; George W.

WM. L. MAHAN was born in 1829, on the McCune farm, and was a son of Patrick and Nancy Mahan nee Laughlin. The former was born in 1792, in county Donegal, and the latter in 1797, in county Tyrone. They located on and opened up what is now known as the McCune farm in 1819. Three of Patrick's brothers came to America. John settled near what is now Newville, in 1814, and was married to Margaret Hunter. Robert was never heard of after his arrival in America. William died near the homestead of Patrick, and was married to Isabella Ross. Patrick's children were: Eliza, d., b. in 1817, m. to Moses Miller; Rebecca, d., b. in 1819, m. to Andrew McFeeters; Lillie, b. in 1821, m. to Samuel Stuchell, d.; Nancy, b. in 1823, m. to Christopher Stuchel, d.; Margaret, b. in 1824, m. to A. A. Lydick; Jane, b. in 1826, m. to John R. Carnaham; William L., b. in 1829, m. to Mrs. Sarah Duncan nee Walker; John, b. in 1831; Angeline, b. in 1834, m. to John S. Flemming; Isabella, d., b. in 1836, m. to Andrew Weamer, d.; and Martha, d., b. in 1839. Our subject's children were: Harry Elmer, d.; William Meade; Clara May; and Minnie Laura. He served three years in company K., 67th Pennsylvania volunteers.

JOHN CARSON settled, in 1864, on what is known as the Montgomery farm, White township. He was born in Ireland in 1815, and migrated to America in 1826, locating on the Peter Shepler farm in Washington county, walking from Philadelphia to that county. (See sketch of Dr. T. Carson, Saltsburg.) He lived in Pittsburg in 1827 and '28, and saw the first two boats that passed from the basin to the Allegheny City dock.

He was married, in 1840, to Hannah Henderson, daughter of William and Margaret Henderson nee Paul.

ROBERT PATTISON was born in county Derry, Ireland, in 1799, and was a son of Robert and Jane Pattison nee Houston. The former died in Ireland. Our subject came to Philadelphia in 1819, and in the same year located in Armstrong township. In 1825, he purchased his present homestead. In 1827, his mother and children, William and Jane, arrived and settled on the farm now occupied by her grandson, William S. Pattison. She died in 1838, at the age of seventy-five. Our subject was married first in 1825, to Martha Stewart, a sister of Archibald Stewart, and second, in 1837, to Margaret Barr, born in Ireland in 1803. His children were: Archibald S., m. to Mary Simpson; Margaret J., m. to John A. Barr; Mary, m. to John S. Barr; Robert, killed in the late war; Martha, m. to William Berry; John D., m. to Martha Sharp; and William B. John D. was a soldier in the war of 1861. The first settler on the Pattison farm was William Hall, who got the warrant in 1820. The patent was issued to Archibald Stewart in 1823.

JOHN B. CAMPBELL was born in Butler county in 1818, and was a son of William and Jane Campbell nee Beatty. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a son John and Ann Campbell nee Christy. John Campbell was killed while building his cabin, at an early day in Butler county. He was also among the early settlers on "Poke run," Westmoreland county. His house or cabin was fortified, making it a sort of block-house. At one time he defended it single handed, and drove the Indians away. Our subject was married first in 1846, to Nancy R. Reed, who died in 1848, at the age of twenty-three, and second in 1853, to Esther Kealear. His children were: James Reed, d.; Herschel L., graduate of Allegheny College, in the class of 1878, law student; Jane, m. to Joseph D. Dickey; William B., m. to Annie Hadley; Mary Evaline; Nancy M.; Anna A; Elmer Guthrie; and Shields Ansley. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Esther Campbell, a son and a daughter, were massacred by the Indians in or near Hannastown. A son twelve years old, shot an Indian while he was scalping his father. Our subject's grandfather, (maternal,) a brother and sister, were also massacred in or near the same place. The Campbell farm of one hundred and sixty-four acres, is a part of the old McCartney homestead on the Saltsburg road.

WILLIAM WATERSON was born in county Fermaugh, Ireland, in 1822, and was a son of John and Margaret Waterson nee McFadden, who migrated to America in 1841. Our subject was married in 1853, to Catharine Waterson, daughter of David and Jane Waterson nee Gault, of county Fermaugh, Ireland, and in 1857, located on the farm on the Kittanning pike, now occupied by him. James and Noble, brothers of our subject, were soldiers in the war of 1861.

WILLIAM BRATTEN was born in Plum township, Allegheny county, in 1804, and was a son of George and Mary Bratten nee Carson. George was a native of York county, and settled in Allegheny county in 1786. He died in 1857, at the age of eighty-one. He was a son of William Bratten, a soldier in the Revolutionary war. The former's first wife, Mary, died in 1825 at the age of forty two. His second wife, Elizabeth, died in 1856. Our subject's first wife, Susan Beham, died in 1876, in her fifty-ninth year. His second wife was Isabella Collins. His children were: Mary E., m. to Hugh McCready; Margaret, m. to David Boyce; George, d., Jane H.; George W., d., member of company E, 155th Pennsylvania volunteers, killed at the first Fredericksburg battle; James C.; Amanda, m. to Samuel Lucas; Sarah; John B., m. to Sarah Grier; Isabella, d.; William S.; Susan F., m. to A. A. Hazlett; Robert C.; and Joseph C. William Bratten located in White township in 1864.

ALEXANDER LOUGHRY was born in Indiana borough in 1815, and was a son of James and Ann Loughry nee Wilson. (See sketch of John W. Loughry, East Mahoning township.) Our subject's children were: Mary Ann, m. to Alexander Fair; James McLain, killed at the second Bull Run battle, while a member of company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps; Thomas Clark, m. to Mary Clara Bruce; and John Wilson, d., m. to Sarah Barnhart.

THOMAS C. REED was born in 1832, in Black-lick township, on the farm now occupied by Samuel Reed, and was a son of Samuel and Jane Reed nee McCracken, a second wife. The former came, when a young man, from the Ligonier valley where he was born, to the farm now occupied by Archibald Coleman, Burrell township. He died, in 1859, at the age of seventy-seven. His first wife was Mary Wilkins. His second wife died in 1852, at the age of forty-five. Samuel was a son of Joseph and Ruth Reed nee Wilkins. The former was a native of Ireland, and an early settler of the Ligonier valley. His children were: John, James, Mary, David, Joseph, Samuel, William, Elizabeth, Nancy, and Sarah. Samuel's children were: James, d.; Joseph, m.; Mary, m. to John Scott; Sarah, m. to Joseph Myers; and John, d., by the first wife. By second wife, were: Joshua McC., m. to Nancy Allison; Samuel, m. to Elizabeth McCracken; Jane, d; Thomas C., m. to Jane Wachob; Ruth Ann, m. to David F. Fleming; John A., m. to Mary Wilson, d.; and Charles McC., m. to Samantha Long. John was in company F, 76th Pennsylvania militia for ninety days, and in company G, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year. Charles M. was in company F, 76th Pennsylvania volunteers, for ten months, and in company F, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, about one year.

HUGH M. CANNON was born in 1811, on the farm now owned by John K. McElhoes, about a mile and a half above Kellysburg, and was a son of Hugh and Martha Cannon nee Thompson. The former was a son of William Cannon, who settled in Westmoreland county, about 1790. Hugh came to the tract where our subject was born, in 1796. He died in 1859, about eighty years of age. His wife died in 1852, about seventy-five years of age. His children were: William, d., merchant, m. to Eliza Dillis, d.; Robert, d., postmaster, home postoffice, nineteen years; Fergus, d., m. to Letitia Cromwell; James, d.; John, d.; Joseph, d.; Hugh M., m. to Mary Rankin; and Mary, d., m. to Robert Park. Fergus was prothonotary, &c., see official tables. Hugh M., was justice of the peace for White township, for five years. The latter's children were: Matthew R., d.; James M., m. to Mary E. Worthington; Jane Swisshelm, d., m. to Clark Loughry; Hugh Johnston; Mary Elizabeth; and John Rankin. Jas. M. was in company K, 105th Pennsylvania volunteers about four years.

MRS. MARY CANNON, wife of Hugh M., was born in Centre township, in 1817, and a daughter of Matthias and Elizabeth Rankin nee Johnston. The former was a son of John and Rebecca Rankin nee Wilson, who were early settlers of Indiana county. The former died in 1816.

J. L. B. MCALLASTER was born in Oxford county, Maine, in 1823, and settled in Indiana county, in 1864. In early life he was a school teacher in Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. For some years he was in the "shook" business in Cambria county, and West Indiana. He was also engaged in merchandising in the latter place from 1870 to 1877, in the store room now occupied by Captain J. L. Nesbit. In 1875, he located on his present farm at Reed Station. He was married in 1863, to Caroline Clapp, daughter of Rev. Ralph Clapp, a Methodist Episcopal minister, of Venango county, and proprietor for some years of a furnace at President, in that county. His children were: Ralph C., Eugene L., Clinton P., Edwin Emmett, and Emma Janette. Our subject was the son of John and Nancy McAllaster nee Perham. The former died in Indiana county, at the age of eighty-four. He was the son of Joseph McAllaster, a soldier in the Revolution. J. L. B., served for sixty days in Captain Litzenger's Independent company, from Ebensburg, Cambria county, during the Lee raid into Pennsylvania.

SAMUEL CONRAD was born in Huntingdon county in 1842, and was a son of Samuel and Anna Mary Conrad nee Heckendorn. The family settled in Rayne township in 1862. Samuel came to the county in 1865. He served in company B, 192d Pennsylvania volunteers for eighteen months. He was married in 1866, to Mary A. Boucher. His children are: John A. and Ida M. Since 1877 he has been the miller of the Fiscus & Cook, formerly St. Clair mill, at the Upper Two-lick.

JOSEPH SHEPHERD was born in Bedford county in 1824, and was a son of Joshua and Mary Shepherd nee Wilson, who located in 1844, at the Upper Two-lick. The former died in 1877, at the age of eighty-two; the latter in 1862, at the age of sixty-nine. The children were: William W., m. to Sarah A. Beatty; Ann, d., m. to Joseph Mayers; Samuel, m. to Hannah Cresswell; Joseph, m. to Catharine Decker; David, d.; and Mary. Joseph's children were: Lucinda, m. to G. W. Smith; Barbara A., Isabella, Adaline; Mary, m. to Henry Smith; Carrie E., Laura, and Elsie. Our subject has been connected with the Two-lick woolen mill since 1844.

JAMES HOOD was born at the old Hood homestead, now occupied by Thomas and John Hood, Young township, in 1810, and was a son of Thomas and Jane Hood nee Henderson. The former was a native of Ireland, and settled on the above named tract in 1799. His wife was a native of Ireland. Their children were: Robert, d., m. to Sarah Cruikshank, d.; Mary, m. to Daniel Divers; Veniza, d. m. to Samuel Trimble, d.; James, m. to Margaret Trimble; Joseph, d.; Thomas C., m. to Elizabeth Lytle; and Jane, d. James served as county treasurer and coroner. James's children were: William T., d.; Thomas B., m. to Nancy J. Henderson; Jane H., d., Samuel M., United Presbyterian minister, m. to Mary Marshall; George W., attorney, m. to Sarah E. Ehrenfelt, d.; James A., m. to Emma E. Edwards; Susan M.; Mary; and Robert. Samuel M., George W. and Robert were graduates of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Lawrence county, respectively in the classes of 1866, 1870 and 1879. Thomas B., Samuel M. and George W. were soldiers in the war of 1861. Major Ramsey was the first settler upon the tract of which the farm of our subject is a portion. His cabin stood at the head of Ramsey's run, about one hundred rods northeast of Mr. Hood's residence.

Joseph Griffith was born in 1829, on the farm now occupied by his father, in White township, and was a son of Jesse and Susannah Griffith nee Pilson. The former located on the tract now occupied by him when a young man, having migrated from Bedford county. He was married in Indiana county in 1827, to Susannah Pilson. Their children were: John, m. to Agnes Y. Craig; Joseph, m. to Alice Mullen; Jesse, d., m. to Sabina Erhard; Lydia Elizabeth; Nancy Jane; Susan; Mary, m. to Joseph Uncapher: Lewis, Johnston S., Juliet and Estella. Lewis was in the three months' service. Joseph served as county auditor for one term. The latter's children were: Annie S., Lizzie F., Charlotte N., John M., and Jesse.

Robert Thompson was born on the homestead now occupied by his widow, in 1816, and was the son of John and Mary Thompson nee Stewart. He was married in 1872 to Mary J. Knox, a daughter of James Knox, a native of Ireland, who located in Indiana county in the fall of 1848. The former was a son of John and Mary Knox nee Jamison. The Knox family are lineal descendants of John Knox, the Scotch reformer. Robert Thompson died April 5, 1877. His only child was Anna Mary.

John H. Cunningham was born in White township in 1817, and was a son of Archibald and Rosanna Cunningham nee Hutchinson. Their children were: Jane, d., m. to Andrew Patterson, d.: Elizabeth, m. to William Cochran, d.; Mary, m. to William McAdo; George, m.; Ruth, m. first to Joseph Palmer, d., and second to John Lucas; John H., d. in 1871, m. to Mary P. Thompson, daughter of James Thompson, d, in 1873, fifty-three years old; Archibald, m. to Nancy McGaughey; Martha, m. to Rev. Mr. Chapman; and Rosanna, m. to Lewis E. Freet, d. John H.'s children were: A. S., m. to R. J. Repine; John M., m. to Maggie McCune; V. M., m. to Mary E. McHenry; Joanna M., m. to J. T. Gibson; Phebe J., m. to Wesley W. Lockard; and Laura C., m. to Charles Wood.

Robert Kinghorn was born in Bunch, near the river Tweed, in Berwickshire, Scotland, in 1792. He was there married to Ann Littster, daughter of Alexander Littster, a soldier in the army of Lord Cornwallis, in the American war in the Revolution. He returned to Scotland, where he died in 1840, at the age of seventy-eight. Our subject migrated to Westmoreland county, in 1850, and to White township in 1852, where he resided till his death on the farm now occupied by his son Alexander. He died in 1876, at the age of eighty-four; his wife in 1870, at the age of seventy-nine. Their children were: James, d., m. first to Ellen Johnston, d., and second to Allison Dodge; Alexander, b. in 1818, m. in 1843 to Janet Wood; Robert, d.; William, d.; and Elizabeth, m. to Nathaniel Middlemiss. The children of Alexander were: Robert, d.; Ann, m. to John Isenberg; Thomas, m. to Rose Zeigler; Robert, d.; James, d.; Elexinea; Alexander; and Janet. The Kinghorn farm was patented to Daniel Stanard, February 11, 1814.

Frederick Wegley—General Store, Fairview—Engaged in merchandising and buying grain at the Point since 1875. The store is situated on the Indiana and Shelocta pike, about one and a half miles from the former postoffice. He located in the county in 1856.

William M. R. Lytle, clerk at the above-named establishment, was born in West Mahoning township in 1847, and was a son of William and Sarah Lytle nee Reed. He served in company B, 2d battalion three months volunteers, and Captain J. K. Weaver's independent company of cavalry for one year.

Valentine Bowers was born in 1817, on the farm now occupied by John Paige, Cherry Hill township, and was a son of Adam and Martha Bowers nee Hart. The former's father, John, came to Brush Valley when Adam was a young man. He died in 1873, about eighty years of age. His wife died when Valentine was a young child. The family removed from Brush Valley to what is now Cherry Hill township, a few years before our subject was born. Valentine was married in 1849 to Sarah Campbell, daughter of Andrew Campbell. Their children were: Margaret A., m. to C. H. Hamilton; Nancy J., m. to Sutton Lewis; Emma, m. to Perry Wallace; Marina; Laura M., and Tirzah.

A. H. Hopkins was born in what is now East Mahoning township in 1822, and was a son of John and Margaret Hopkins nee Jameson. (See Hopkins' sketches, East Mahoning township.) Our subject served in company D, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. He was married in 1846 to Nancy A. Smith, daughter of William and Anna Smith. Their children were: Clarissa C., m. to Clark Weamer; Anna M., d., m. to C. J. Corbin, publisher; Sarah B., m. to F. M. Smith; Mary H., m. to Robert Bruce; Frank S., d.; Russell H., and Ella J.

Capt. George E. Smith was born in 1821 in Unity township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of William T. and Elizabeth Smith nee Henderson. The former was a daughter of George and Elizabeth Smith nee Todd. The latter was a daughter of William and Anna Todd nee Rambo. The "Rambo" apple originated with the latter's family. William T. Smith's children were: Nancy J., m. to Thomas J. Laughlin, d.; George E., m. first to Sarah Stewart, d., second to Sarah Hill, d., and third to Margaret Waddell; Elizabeth T., m. to A. M. Turner; and William T., M. D., m. to Sue Reynolds. Our subject's children were: Susan E., William A., D. D. S., and George H., d. in 1855. For two years he was a clerk in a forwarding and commission house in Philadelphia. From 1840 to 1843 he carried on a tannery in Blairsville. In 1865 and '66, he represented this county in the state house of representatives. He served seven years in the U. S. revenue department, four as assistant assessor, and three as deputy collector and surveyor. Of late years, he has been in the insurance business at Indiana, locating in the latter in 1868. His first residence in the county commenced at Blairsville in 1835.

Thompson Records.—The children of James Thompson, a brother of Judge Joseph Thompson, were: Robert Nixon; James; Mary Ann, m. to G. W. Bodenhamer; and Hugh Sylvanus, m. to Sarah Munshower. The children of Robert Thompson, a brother of Judge Thompson, were: Martha, m. to Josiah Kooser; Jane, m. to Dr. J. K. Thompson, of Marion; Caroline, m. to H. K. Shields; Catharine, m. to Samuel McQuilkin; Mary, m. to J. Wilson Shields; Sarah, d., m. to Sydney Marlin; Lucetta; Sylvester C., m. to Mary E. Griffith; and Margaret, m. to John K. McElhose. The children of John Thompson, a brother of Judge Thompson, were: Joseph, John, Benjamin, James, Robert, and one daughter. The children of William C., a brother of Judge Thompson, were: Hugh F., d.; Alexander. Elizabeth, Harriet, John and Effie, d. The children of Hugh Alexander, a brother of Judge Thompson, were: Catharine, m. to W. J. Sterrett; Martha; George, d. m. to Nannie J. Hill; Hugh Alexander; William E., d.; Henry, d. while a soldier; and Edward. The children of Samuel H., a brother of Judge Thompson, were: Hugh S., m. first to Harriet M. Work, d., and second to Melissa M McAnulty; J. Stewart, m. first to Maggie Moorhead, d., and second to Fannie Smith; Archibald S., m. to Mary C. Owen; J. Wilson, m. to Virginia Kesler; T. St. Clair, m. to Marietta Brady; Reynolds E., d.; R. Alexander, m. to Josephine Brady; Elizabeth, m. to Dr. J. W. Simpson; and William Laird.

Alexander W. Cochran.—Our subject is a grandson of William Cochran and wife, Ruth Gray, who settled in this county in 1800. (See sketch of Mrs. Martha Pettigrew.) Our subject's parents children were: Ruth, m. to James Miller; Archibald, m. to Margaret Campbell; Alexander W., our subject, m. to Mahala Snyder; Rosanna, m. to John Nesbit; Jane Elizabeth, d.; Stewart; John C., m. to Caroline Slocum; Nancy; Lewis Cass, m.——; Martha, m. to Samuel Hays; and George, accidentally shot near Peelor's mills. The children of our subject are: Charlotte, m. to Rankin Fairman; and Alexander Scott, yet at home. Charlotte Rankin, daughter of our subject, has five children: Jennie May, Ida Bell, Menorah Myrtle, John Alexander, and Mahala Maud. Our subject was born in the county in 1831, in Armstrong township, near Peelor's mills.

William Dougherty was born in Allegheny township, Westmoreland county, in 1830, and was a son of Jesse and Esther Dougherty nee McLaughlin. He was married first in 1854, to Olive J. Loomis, of Elizabethtown, Allegheny county, who died at the age of forty-four; and second in 1876, to Jane M. McLaughlin. His children were: Florence W., m. to a Miss Gailey; Frank, Charles, and Joseph T. P. He enlisted in company G, 101st Pennsylvania volunteers on the 16th of October, 1861, for three years, and was promoted to first sergeant in 1863. He re-enlisted January 1st, 1864, at Plymouth, N. C., for three years. He was wounded at Plymouth on the 20th of April, 1864, and taken prisoner. He was exchanged from Libby prison on the 17th of October of that year. He was discharged on the 10th of February, 1865, at Pittsburgh, by reason of wounds received in action. From March 17th, 1865, to September 3d, 1867, he was employed in the cavalry bureau under Gen. James A. Ekin. On the 6th of August, 1867, he was appointed superintendent of the soldiers' cemetery at Beaufort, S. C., and after a period of nine months was transferred to Newbern, N. C., having there charge, till October 31, 1870, of a similar cemetery. Subsequently he was a clerk in the treasury department at Washington for three months. In July, 1871, he located at "Upper Two-lick," his present residence. He was elected county commissioner in 1878, to serve three years.

J. H. HOOD was born in 1844, on the present William Bratton farm, White township, and was a son of T. C. and Elizabeth Hood nee Lytle. (See Hood sketch.) T. C. Hood's children were: J. H., m. to Lizzie T. Work; Mary, m. to Isaac Kinter, d.; Margaret, d.; Isabella, d.; John L., m. to Mattie McQuade; Venizah, d.; Theodore C., d.; and Carrie M. J. H. served in company B, 23d Pennsylvania volunteers about four months. Our subject's only child is Dora M.

DANIEL MCCOY was born in 1821, in Plum Creek township, Armstrong county, and was a son of Daniel and Nancy McCoy nee Smith. (See sketch of C. S. McCoy.) The former's children were: Deborah, d., m. to Alexander Beatty, d.; Sarah, m. to Thomas McGaughey; Joseph, d., m. to Susan McAdoo; William, m. to Mary Fox; Jane, m. to Robert McAdoo; Daniel, m. to Abigail McAdoo; Nancy, d., m. to James Kennedy; and Mary, m. to Patterson McAdoo. Daniel, for five years, was the proprietor of the McKee mill, Rayne township. Our subject's children were: William Mahan, John Norris, Presbyterian minister, graduate of Marietta College, Ohio, student for some time at Elder's Ridge Academy; Thomas J., m. to Josephine Carroll; Albert, d.; Robert S.; Margaret J.; Elizabeth E., and Daniel S.

THOROUGH-BRED SHORT HORN CATTLE, sold by G. Shropshire, in Indiana County.—Plumwood, O. O.; present owners, T. B. and A. J. Cummins. Prairie Queen, and one calf not named; present owners, T. B. and A. J. Cummins. Red Duke; Dido; present owner, Archibald Stewart. Olympia the first and two calves; present owner, C. W. Sweeny. Mr. Shropshire arrived in Indiana, in December, 1879, having brought with him a herd of registered thorough-bred cattle from Barbour county, Ky. He is an experienced cattle dealer, his father, B. N. Shropshire, being the first to introduce the "short horns" into Kentucky. We refer the reader to the "American Herd Book" for special data in relation to this subject.

INDIANA FIRE COMPANY.—From the organization of the town till the year 1834, the citizens depended upon the "bucket brigade," to stop any conflagration which might occur. In the year above mentioned a small hand fire engine was purchased. When it arrived, it looked so small and insignificant, that the town council refused to pay for it, and the makers sued for the price and the suit went against the borough. No one having any confidence in the "machine," it was taken apart and stored in the attic of the court house. After the burning of the Ephraim Carpenter house, it was thought prudent to put the engine in order, and it was taken to the wagon shop of Mr. Boucher, on South seventh street, and set up. Fires were not of frequent occurrence, and when the hatter's shop, on the site of A. W. Taylor's law office was discovered to be on fire, no one appeared to know where to find the fire engine. After the fire it was hunted up and brought to the scene of conflagration, and under the superintendence of Captain Earl, it was demonstrated that the engine would throw all the water the people could supply it with. After this, a small house was built on the jail lot and the engine was properly cared for and has performed admirably ever since. In 1865, the council purchased a second hand engine in Philadelphia, for $1,000. When brought here, it deemed proper to send it to Pittsburgh, in order to make a "suction" engine of it. This cost some five hundred dollars. When it arrived here, it was discovered that it would not work, and after some years, it was dismantled and sold for old iron. During this time, several fire companies were organized, but as fires were not frequent, the organizations soon fell to pieces. In 1879, another company was organized, and bids fair to live. At the first meeting, officers were elected; Captain Sloan being made chief marshal. A constitution and by-laws were adopted and a complete organization formed. The citizens contributed five hundred dollars for the purpose of uniforming the company. The borough council erected a fine two-story engine house, the first floor being used for the engine and the second for a place of meeting for the company. In addition to erecting the house, the borough purchased a first-class chemical engine, a hook and ladder truck, (with hooks and ladders,) buckets, &c., &c. The town is now supplied with a very good fire department, well equipped and efficient. The total cost of buildings and apparatus will amount to about seven thousand dollars. A fire alarm bell has been put on the building, and is to be operated by electricity from a dozen or more boxes, located in different sections of the town. The present company is composed of one hundred and twenty-five active members. The Association is officered as follows: President, Jos. R. Smith; Vice-president, T. M. Coleman; Secretary, Harry W. Wilson; Chief Marshal, H. K. Sloan; Captains, S. A. Smith, John Weir and John Hill. The Association meets on the 1st Saturday evening of each month. No more efficient fire department can be found in any town of the same size in the state.

WEST INDIANA FIRE ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of the citizens was held in the council chambers in West Indiana, January 25, 1876, for the purpose of organizing a Fire association and buying an engine. A chemical engine was brought from New York by Mr. Botsford, agent for A. F. Spawn & Co., and after being sufficiently tested, was purchased April 27, 1876. The first officers, elected May 9, 1876, were: President, Robert Williard; Vice President, C. U. Gessler; Secretary, A. S. Cunningham; Assistant Secretary, B. F. McClusky; Trustees, David Ellis, I. McFarland, and James Clark; Directors, I. McFarland, A. S. Cunningham, W. P. Younger, P. H. Burns, John McGaughey, and H. S. Thompson. The officers elected by the Directors, May 23, 1876, were: Chief Director, W. P. Younger; Secretary, A. S. Cunningham; Chemicals, J. S. Stuchell and John A. Bell; Axemen, A. S. Thompson, S. S. Cruikshank, and D. H. Lucas; and Hosemen, C. M. St. Clair, Griffith Ellis, and Henry Everett. The first parade was made May 30th, 1876. The present officers are: President, T. B. Hood; Vice President, H. J. Fulmer; Secretary, John A. Bell; Assistant Secretary, John T. Anderson; Treasurer, H. M. Bell; Fire Marshal, John McGaughey; and Directors, P. H. Burns, A. T. Taylor, and R. F. Walker. The appointments made by the latter were: Chemicals, Robert Williard and Jacob S. Stuchell; Assistants, do., David Ellis and W. P. Younger; Axemen, Frank Hoffman and P. A. Muller; Hosemen, Griffith Ellis, W. J. Gompers, Henry Livingston, and W. C. Wine; Nozzlemen, A. S. Cunningham, R. K. Gasten and S. G. Hartman.

JONATHAN ROW.—In preparing the present history of Indiana county, the author has been permitted the use of, and has gained very much valuable information from, the writings of Jonathan Row, who, from 1852 to '59, had editorial control of The Indiana Register; and without which a large amount of interesting data must have been wholly lost. Although Mr. Row was not one of the "oldest inhabitants," yet, while he lived in Indiana, he did very much, by his writings and personal influence, in developing the resources of the county of his adoption, and for the enlargement of intelligence amongst the people. It is, therefore, appropriate and just, that a brief sketch of his life find a place in these annals. Jonathan Row was born in Westmoreland county, some four miles northward from Greensburg, June 2d, 1802. His father, Andrew Row, the son of the early emigrants to this country, who first settled in the vicinity of New York, was born in Northumberland county, Pa., and was thrice married. Elizabeth Heintzelman, the second wife of Andrew Row, bore him ten children, six sons and four daughters, Jonathan being the fifth of the sons. Elizabeth Heintzelman was of the family of that name, then and since dwelling in the eastern and southeastern parts of the state. Her father, George Heintzelman, came from Germany and settled in Northampton county, where he raised his family, four sons and two daughters. One of the sons was the grandfather of Gen. S. P. Heintzelman, who won distinction and honor as a Union officer in the great war of the Rebellion, and is well remembered by many of the soldiers from Indiana county. In the early years of the present century, the dwellers in the western counties of Pennsylvania, outside of a few prominent towns, did not have very large opportunity for the education and improvement of their families. Andrew Row, being a poor man, could not afford any other means of educating his children than the meagre facilities afforded by a small school, which was occasionally, for a few months in a year, maintained in the neighborhood. Under these circumstances, the whole period of the school life of Jonathan Row was comprised in one term of less than three months, when he was some eight or nine years old. In the brief period of his school days he learned, however, to read; and thenceforward he became his own educator. In the summer he worked what he could for his father, and in winter he spent much of his time in reading and study. In those days the old-fashioned, large fireplace, was part and parcel of every house; and in the winter evenings, when the log fire was aglow, and the children were busy with amusements and play, Jonathan Row would have some book in hand, and intensely peruse its pages in quest of knowledge. His father had but few books, and those were soon read through. Then he borrowed from some of the neighbors; and oftentimes he would walk three to five miles to borrow some book of which he had heard in conversations amongst the people with whom he came in contact. He would also, many times after his days work was done, walk several miles away from home to visit some of the old pioneers, from whom he learned so many of the facts of the early history of this section of country, and which gave point and value to his writings, and publications afterwards. When about seventeen years old, he learned the trade of bricklaying, and for a number of years, he and several of his older brothers followed this branch of mechanical business. In 1821, towards the close of the year, he was married to Maria C. Miniam, whose father was a Franco-Prussian emigrant from the Rhine country, and who came hither while he was a young man, and was here married. Mr. Row died on the 22d day of February, 1866, being then nearly 64 years of age, and leaving his wife, (who still lives,) and eleven children surviving. Jonathan Row began in early life to take a prominent part in public affairs. He had scarcely reached his majority, when he was chosen captain of a military company which was organized in the vicinity of Salem, Westmoreland county. About the year 1825, he removed to the village of Adamsburgh, Westmoreland county, where he engaged in the mercantile business, having saved from the earnings of his previous labors, a few hundred dollars as the basis of his enterprise. His adventure was a successful one. For several years he prospered well, and steadily increased his business, and gained an influence as a citizen. About 1831 or 1832, however, he became afflicted with cataract of both eyes, rendering him wholly unable to attend to his business, which had then to be submitted to the care of employees. Dr. James Spur, of Pittsburgh, twice operated upon Mr. Row's eyes—once in 1832, and again some years later—removing the cataract, and enabling the patient, by the use of suitable glasses, to see with reasonable clearness during the remainder of his life. Notwithstanding the painful character of the surgical operations necessary in the case—penetrating the outer surface of the eye with a needle-shaped instrument, and breaking down the opaque lens—Mr. Row would not submit to be put under anæsthetic influences, nor to be in any manner confined, but with resolution and confidence seated himself in the surgeon's chair, and endured the operation without flinching. His business, in the hands of employees, did not prosper as when he was able to attend to it, and by the time that he had sufficiently recovered from his afflictions to permit his giving attention to his business, he found himself a broken merchant, minus assets, but with abundant debts standing against him—all of which however, in after life he liquidated by payment. Some of Mr. Row's friends, and his largest creditors, having full faith and confidence in his integrity, combined and secured his appointment, by Governer Ritner, as register and recorder of Westmoreland county—his commission bearing date 26th January, 1836. He was re-appointed to a second term in the same office, by Governor Ritner, by commission bearing date January 1, 1839. In the latter part of the year 1837, or probably in 1838, Mr. Row began at Greensburg, the publication of a German newspaper, the Republikaner, which he conducted with ability for several years. In the winter of 1839-40, he discontinued the German publication, and commenced a new English newspaper enterprise,—the Sentinel—in the interest of the Whig party of that day. In the Presidential campaign of 1840, the Sentinel did yeoman's work in furthering the principles and interests of the old Whig party. In the spring of 1842, Mr. Row was induced, by what seemed sufficient consideration, to dispose of his newspaper enterprise, and go to farming, on the farm of his father-in-law, Mr. George Miniam, in Salem township, Westmoreland county. But the staid occupation of farming did not prove satisfactory to him, and in the fall of 1842, with his family, he removed to Somerset, where he purchased the Herald, (English,) and Republican, (German) newspapers, and entered upon a new term of editorial labors. In 1847, he was elected treasurer of Somerset county. In the political campaign of 1848, Mr. Row labored zealously for the success of his party, and contributed, to the extent of his ability, to the elevation of General Taylor, to the presidency. In consideration of the services thus rendered in this and preceding campaigns, Mr. Row's name was favorably considered by President Taylor, for appointment to the consulate of Hamburg, Germany. But health failing, by reason of a paralytic stroke, Mr. Row at once relieved President Taylor from the promise of an appointment, and betook himself to a course of medical treatment, if perchance he might regain health and vigor. The prompt treatment had resulted in a few months, in the restoration of his health to such a degree that he again resumed his wonted editorial duties. Subsequently, correspondence was resumed between President Taylor and Mr. Row, in reference to some public position, and the place of representive of the United States government at the Sandwich Islands, was suggested as the only one then probably available. But before the meeting of the coming session of Congress, when such appointment could be made to, and ratified by the Senate, Mr. Taylor died, and the suggestions which had been made, went for naught. In the spring of 1850, Mr. Row again had recourse to farming—locating upon a beautiful tract of land in Fayette county, some five miles from the town of Donegal, Westmoreland county. Here he remained two years, and having by this time fully recovered from the paralytic affliction of three years previous, he again hungered and thirsted for the more congenial, exciting and interesting labors of newspaper editing, and soon looked out a new field of employment. Early in 1852, he purchased the Indiana Register newspaper establishment, and in the spring of that year, removed, with his family to Indiana. Being now in the prime and vigor of life, he lent his best efforts to the develpoments of the country, and in stimulating enterprise, education, temperance, and morality amongst the people. In looking over the files of papers issued from his press, the reader will observe, everywhere, the evidences of originality, intelligence, thought, prudence, and uprightness, as conspicuous characteristics of the editorial management. The defeat of Gen. Scott for the presidency in 1852, swept away the last hope of success of the old Whig party, and left the Democratic party in the ascendency as the only national organization then existing in the country. The people who were opposed to the policy of the Democrats, were miserably divided into Whig, Abolition, Free-soil, Anti-Catholic, Native American, and other associations. Amidst the confusion of factionalism which had, for a quarter of a century, perhaps, been growing and developing, until in 1852 to 1856, it amounted to wide-spread demoralization, and thus characterized the politics of the country, it was but reasonable that such men as Jonathan Row—earnest and zealous advocates of freedom, and firm believers in the declaration, that all men are created equal, and endowed by their creator with the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness—should have turned their attention, somewhat, to the consolidation of all these diverse elements, each striving for the promotion of some specialty, into a great, harmonious, national party, in opposition to the proscribed Democratic party of the day, for the upbuilding of the best interests of the whole people, so eminently, afterwards, manifested in the struggle for supremacy of the Republican party, in its first national contest, in 1860. In 1858, Mr. Row having again been prostrated by paralysis, involving the whole of the right side of his body, and also very seriously affecting his head, he finally, in 1859, retired from business, and left the conduct of his newspaper to several of his sons who were then residing at home, and who had been for a long time, employed in the mechanical department of the establishment. And, although unable longer to perform duty as a worker, Mr. Row continued a most earnest and anxious observer of public affairs. And when the great southern rebellion burst upon the land, the old man's enthusiasm burned with intense arder for the salvation of his country, and, at all times and under all circumstances, his voice was for maintaining the unity of the states, and upholding the supremacy of the national authority.

Prof. J. H. Young, occupying the chair of languages of the State Normal School of Indiana, Pa., is of Scotch-Irish extraction, having come to the United States in 1857, when a small boy. He is the youngest of a family of eight, all of whom are yet living. Two of his boyhood years were spent as an apprentice to the jewelry business in Philadelphia. But impelled by the desire of a better education, his indentures were cancelled at an expense of $150. During the next ten years, from 1853 till 1863, he was a constant and earnest student. The first period of three and a half years was spent at the Presbyterian Institute at Ninth and Market streets. From that he entered the Sophomore class of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, graduating with the valedictory in the class of 1859. Having been reared religiously it was deemed advisable by his friends, by reason of his natural love of letters and readiness of speech, which he has always possessed in an eminent degree, that he should devote himself to the Christian ministry. Accordingly in the fall of the same year of his college graduation, he repaired to the Theological Seminary of Princeton, N. J., where he took the usual course, being noted for his knowledge of Hebrew, and graduated in the class of '62. A very flattering future immediately opened up to our young theologian, being favored with quite a number of calls from churches, some of which offered tempting salaries. Too late, however, the subject of our sketch discovered that his tastes and profession were not agreed. Though strongly religious both from education and conviction, he conceived that ministerial functions were incompatible with his love of freedom. At the earnest solicitation of his friends, however, he accepted a call, but resigned it to engage in the duties of the Christian commission during the war. After some fifteen or eighteen months, another and better charge was afterward accepted, and it also was resigned after a trial of more than three years. In 1869 he came to Indiana, Indiana county, where his brother, R. A. Young, had already preceded him some years. With him he entered into a partnership in the watch and jewelry business—a partnership which, both pleasant and profitable, lasted for eight years. During this business period of his life, the idea of a state normal school at Indiana had its inception, rise and progress, till it resulted in the noble institution which is now justly the pride of the county. His old love of letters having reasserted itself after a four or five years' rest, Mr. Young sent in his name as a candidate for a professorship. He was immediately accepted, and appointed to the chair of languages, which he has occupied from that time—May 17, 1875—till the present.

CHRISTOPHER BORLAND, son of William and Mary A. Borland nee Harold, was born in 1813, in what is now White township, on the place now owned by his brother's sons, John and James Borland. His grandfather Harold settled about eight miles from Indiana, on the Blairsville road, at a very early day. His father William Borland, settled in the county about 1795. He raised a family of ten children: Elizabeth, d., m. to William Beatty; John, d., m. to Rebecca Beatty; Nancy, d., m. to Robert Beatty; Catharine; William, m. to Sarah Alford; Sarah, m. to Abraham Lowman; Daniel, d.; Mary A., d., m. to Harold Laird; and Martha, m. to John Smith. Our subject married Jane, daughter of James Miller, of Indiana county, in 1850. They have a family of four children: Mary A.; Lottie, m. to Gilpin McHenry; James A., and William H.

FREDERICK DEFFENBAUGH was born in 1800, in Chambersburg, Franklin county, and was a son of Frederick and Susan Deffenbaugh nee Doctorman. The former was a native of Virginia and died about sixty years old. In 1850 our subject located in Westmoreland county, and in 1867 came to Indiana borough, his present home. He was married in 1829 to Catharine Stanley, born in 1809. Their children were: Phebe Ann, m. to Benjamin Crosby, d.; John; Adaline, d., m. to Cyrus Beker; Elizabeth, m. to John Thompson; Ellen, m. to George Sinseley; Jemima, d.; Daniel, d.; and Eliza, d. Our subject works regularly every day. His business has been brickmaking and well sinking. When seventy-nine years old he walked, in the winter time (part of the way snow was two feet deep), from Indiana to Chambersburg, a distance of one hundred and eighteen miles.

WILLIAM HADDEN was born in Green township in 1821, and was a son of William and Jane Hadden nee Adams. Their children were: Bartholomew, d.; Nancy, m. to David Martin; Gawin, m. to Sarah Martin; Catharine, m. to James McCune; and William, m. in 1845 to Mary A. McKisson, daughter of John McKisson. Their children were: Sarah J., m. to William Hoffman; John, d.; Hannah; William I., d.; Mary C., d.; and James A., d. When William was ten months old, his windpipe (trachea) was opened and a bean taken therefrom.

JOHN WILSON came from Ireland before the Revolution and settled in Franklin county. He served in the Revolutionary army as one of Washington's life guards for three years. He was married to Martha McKee in Eastern Pennsylvania, and in 1786 located near the site of Denniston's town, Westmoreland county. In 1795 he removed to the late R. W. Allison, now Arthur Sutton, farm, White township. While residing in each of these localities, they were troubled by the Indians, and forced to retire to more safe habitations. He died in 1827, at the age of seventy, and his wife in 1817, at the age of sixty. Their children were: Mary McKee, d.; m. to Robert Allison, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Ann, d., m. to James Loughry, d.; Alexander, d.; Robert, d.; and Martha, d.

J. A. MCANULTY was born at the mouth of Chess creek, Clearfield county, in 1850, and was a son of James S. and Sarah Ann McAnulty nee Armstrong. (See sketch of McAnulty family.) He was married in 1871, to Miss E. A., daughter of William T. Hazlet. His children were: Ambrose Hazlet, Frank DeWitt; and Alice Celia, d. The McAnulty Elevator and Conveyor and Horse Hay Fork, patented March 7th, 1876, is the invention of J. A. McAnulty. He sold a part interest to Schwan, Clouse, Grosscup & Co., of Columbus, Ohio, who are manufacturing the machines for the trade. Their office is at No. 71, North High street. In 1877, eight machines were sold; 1878, 24; 1879, 1100; and for 1880, 4000 are being manutured.

JAMES S. MCCRACKEN, son of William and Elizabeth McCracken nee Smith, was born in 1808, in county Derry, Ireland. Their children were: William, d.; John, d.; Solomon, d., m. to a Miss Mann; Joseph, d.; Wilson, Caldwell, d., m. to Ann McCracken; Jennie, and James S. The latter was married to Mary A., daughter of Andrew Pollock. Their only child is Martha J. Our subject came to the United States in 1845, and located in Indiana county. After residing for five years in Montgomery township, he removed to Indiana. He learned the trade of a linen weaver, and worked at it for twenty years. When quite young, he labored at wheeling sand from the sea at ebb tide in order to make land. This was a government contract, and the wages —— cents per day of twelve hours.

JEREMIAH SEXTON, son of Daniel and Julia Sexton nee Donavan, was born in county Cork, Ireland, in 1817, and came to the United States in 1835, locating in Boston. After residing in other localities he removed to Indiana county in 1856. He worked at the White and Shryock paper mill for a number of years, and is now engaged in farming. He married Mary J., daughter of Bryan McSweney, in 1856. Their children are: Daniel, Cornelius, d.; Jeremiah, Dennis, Thomas, d.; Timothy, Julia A., and Peter and Maggie, twins.

MRS. MARGARET KELLY SLOAN was born in Indiana county, in 1815, and was a daughter of Meek and Jane Kelly nee Moorhead. The former was a son of James Kelly, the pioneer, and the latter was a daughter Fergus Moorhead, the pioneer. (See Kelly notes in Shelocta, and Moorhead notes in general history.) Major Meek Kelly was born in Franklin county, in 1770 and was married in 1809. He was appointed deputy surveyor of Indiana county in 1833, by surveyor general Jacob Spangler, and was at one time state senator from this district. He died May 14th, 1843. His children were: James, d., m. to Eliza Taylor; he enlisted in the Mexican war in 1847, and died in 1848, in the city of Mexico; Sarah, d. in 1856; Margaret, m. August 31st, 1837, to James M. Sloan, of Armstrong county; Euphemia, m. in 1844, to John Barge; Pauline, m. in 1839, to Joseph Clark; Ann, d., in 1859; Pliny, practiced law in Indiana county, enlisted in Mexican war in 1847, and served in the Union army during the late civil war; Jane, d. in 1863, m. in 1850, to Zachariah Laird, of Indiana county; Fergus M., killed by Indians in California; and Louisa M. The children of Fergus Moorhead, the father of Mrs. Meek Kelly, were: Joseph, m. to Jane McElhoes of Indiana county; Euphemia, m. to a Mr. Anderson, of Ohio; Fergus, m. to Esther McElhoes; Thomas, m. to a Miss Moorhead, of Indiana county; Jane, m. to Meek Kelly; James; Margaret, m. to William Hutchison, of Butler county; and Samuel, a soldier in the war of 1812.

ARCHIBALD WEIR, of Indiana, who died in 1859, at the age of fifty-four, was a son of Robert Weir of Brush Valley. (See sketch D. C. Weir, of Centre township.) Archibald's wife was Jane Coleman, deceased. Their children were: Mary Jane, d.,

m. to James Fenton; Robert Henry, d.; John, m. to Jemima George, daughter John George, of Armstrong county. Elizabeth, d.; and Mary Margaret, d. John Weir's children were: Mary Jane, Sarah Elizabeth and Cordelia. He established the Domestic Sewing Machine office in Indiana, in June, 1872. Up to the spring of 1880, over five hundred machines had been sold from this office. Two men are now employed, and Mr. Weir, as heretofore, retains the management of the county for the Domestic.

Hon. Hannibal K. Sloan was born in the borough of Indiana, in 1838, and was a son of James M. and Margaret Sloan nee Kelly. James M. Sloan was a son of Walter Sloan, who was born in Cumberland county, in 1780, and migrated in 1794, with his parents, to what is now Armstrong county. He served in the war of 1812, as first lieutenant in a company commanded by Captain James Alexander. He was married in 1811, to Margaret Mateer, also a native of Cumberland county, who died October 3d, 1820. Walter Sloan died July 1st, 1867, at the age of eighty-six. His children were: James M., d. May 25th, 1878, m. to Margaret Kelly; Eliza, m. in 1832, to Samuel Sloan; Jane, m. in 1843, to James Gibson; Samuel, d. in 1867, m. to Susan Peart. James M. Sloan's children were: Hannibal K., m. in 1868, to Lauretta F. Bonner; Margaret J., m. to J. A. Bonner; Sarah, m. to William F. Carnahan; Pauline C., m. to Samuel G. Crawford, of Clarion county; Virginia G.; J. Meek; and Anna Mary. Our subject was educated in the common schools and the Indiana Academy. He was mustered into the service of the United States, June 10th, 1861, as second lieutenant company B, 11th regiment Pennsylvania R. C., promoted to first lieutenant; July 2d, 1861; to captain, Aug. 13th, 1863; was mustered out of service, June 13th, 1864, and was brevetted major, on the 13th of March, 1865. He was an assistant in the U. S. Internal Revenue Service, read law, and was admitted to the bar of Indiana county, at the September term of court, 1867. He was nominated in 1870, by the democrats of the legislative district of Indiana and Westmoreland counties, and was elected, serving as a member of the house of representatives during the session of 1871. He was nominated by the same party in Indiana county, for congress, in 1874, and selected in 1876, by the democratic senatorial conferees of the 37th district for the state senate, and at the ensuing election was defeated, though largely reducing the republican majority. On the 1st of June, 1880, he was nominated by the democrats of Indiana county, for the state senate. He is now actively engaged in the practice of his profession.

Daniel Stanard was born in 1784, near Bennington, Vermont, and died in Indiana on the 4th of March, 1867. He was a son of Daniel and Ruth Stanard nee Brushnell. He was well-known as an attorney. (See notes on the Bar of Indiana county.) He was married first in Indiana, in 1809, to Miss Mary McAnulty, d., and second, in 1850, to Miss Ann Irwin McAnulty, d. His children were: Ruth, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Sylvester Welch, d.; Martha, d.; Ruth, m. to Andrew Porter: Isabella, m. to Augustus Drum; David, d., m. to Margaret Repine; and John. Andrew and Ruth Porter's children were: Robert, m. to Sarah Morehead; Anna Mary, d., m. to John D. McClaran; and Daniel S., m. first to Sarah Clark, d., and second to Mary Butler.

Edmund Paige was born near Dartmouth, Devonshire, England, in 1820, and was a son of Edmund Paige and Elizabeth Dunn, born in 1792. The former died in September, 1865, at the age of seventy-three. The latter died in October, 1879. (See sketch of John D. Paige, Cherry Hill township.) Our subject has been engaged in surveying for thirty-four years. He served two terms as district attorney, and is now acting as county surveyor. He was married, in 1855, to Emma Pegg, daughter of Richard Pegg, of Nottingham, England.

S. A. Douglass was born in Indiana. His parents were Woodroe and Mary Douglass, whose maiden name was Mary Truby, who was born at Greensburg, Westmoreland county, June 12, 1801. The settlement of the family was first made by the grandparents, Samuel and Lydia Douglass nee Adams, at Newport, on the Conemaugh, near the mouth of Black-lick, Indiana county, in 1805. The children of grandparents were: John, d.; William, d.; Samuel, d.; Woodroe, b. at Newport, Indiana county, March 15, 1799, m. to Mary Truby in 1826, appointed justice of the peace by Governor George Wolf, February 3, 1832, and clerk of the orphans' court, register of wills, by Governor Joseph Ritner, January 3, 1836, and elected county treasurer in 1843, d. March 15, 1850; James, d.; and Rachel. Woodroe Douglass' children were: S. A., attorney at law; Mary A., d. July 14, 1830; Lydia A.; Simon W.; Washington, d. May 2, 1835; Henrietta; John, printer; Elizabeth A., m. to M. F. Shanetts; William Quay, d. November 16, 1851; and James, d. November 27, 1851.

Henry Coleman was born in Indiana borough in 1840, and was a son of W. H. Coleman, of whom see sketch. He was married, in 1876, to Louisa Cresswell, daughter of Samuel Cresswell, of Indiana county. His children were: William Alexander; Orphanora; and Susan Abigail. He served in company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps, for three years. His farm of one hundred acres is a part of the original Moorhead homestead. The "Kittanning trail" passed through his land, and in the woods the traces of it can still be seen.

Alexander Taylor (the elder), prior to 1790, located on a farm, on the Saltsburg road, four miles and a half southwest of the borough of Indiana, then Westmoreland, now Indiana county. He was a land surveyor and made surveying his principal business. For the times in which he lived he was a very good scholar, and from him his family, in the absence of schools at that early day, received such education as he could find time to devote to that object. He removed to this locality from Bedford county. He died on the 8th day of March, 1815, aged fifty-nine years. His ancestors, in the time of Oliver Cromwell, emigrated from England to Scotland. John Taylor, the father of Alexander Taylor, was a native of Scotland, of the Scotch Presbyterian stock, and came to America prior to the war of the Revolution, locating near Philadelphia, from whence his descendants scattered abroad over the country. He lived to the advanced age of one hundred years. Three of his sons served in the army of the Revolution. One, who served under General Wayne, was killed at the massacre at the Paoli, in Chester county, on the night of the 20th of September, 1777. Lieut. Mathew Taylor fell at the battle of Long Island, at the age of eighteen years. Alexander came out of the war without serious injury. Alexander Taylor left, surviving him, five sons, to-wit: Robert, John, William, Alexander and James, all of whom, except Robert, were born in Indiana county. Robert, the eldest, was born in Bedford county. He was a farmer by occupation, and died in Indiana in 1860, at the age of seventy-two years. His descendants, except Mrs. Eliza Hill, are residents of the western states. John took up the pursuit of his father, that of land surveyor. In 1813, he married Miss Mary Wilson, who was born and reared in the Presbyterian congregation of Rev. Snodgrass, Hanover, Dauphin county. John Taylor was full six feet in height and remarkably active and strong. During the war of 1812, President Madison offered him, then a young man of twenty-one years, the appointment of lieutenant in the army. In these days the mails were at best very slow, and the letter informing him of the offer had been so long delayed in reaching young Taylor, that he immediately started from his father's house, on foot, for Bedford, then the nearest point at which he could reach a public conveyance to Washington City, making over sixty miles in a single day. When he reached Washington, he was too late, the place had been filled. John Taylor filled many public positions with great satisfaction to the people, among them, county treasurer, deputy surveyor, prothonotary, member of the legislature, associate judge, and surveyor general of the state. He, from his youth, took a decided part in politics, and was a democrat till the formation of the anti-masonic party, and with that party he united with the whigs. For several years he was the editor and publisher of the Indiana Free Press newspaper, and for his opportunities, he was a very ready and forcible writer. He died 5th October, 1846, aged fifty-six years, leaving surviving him two sons: A. Wilson Taylor, a practicing lawyer, and J. Madison Taylor, M. D., both residing at Indiana. William was by trade a hatter, and for many years carried on that business at Indiana. Afterwards he engaged in mercantile pursuits. He died on the 24th September, 1853, aged fifty-eight years, highly respected. He left surviving him, three children: Alexander, Mrs. A. M. Stewart and Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman. Alexander Taylor (the younger), in 1821, established the first democratic paper published in the county of Indiana, under the name of the Indiana and Jefferson Whig. He filled the office of deputy surveyor and prothonotary of the county at the time of his death, on the 6th of September, 1828, aged thirty years. He was most highly esteemed by all who knew him. His widow is still living. R. Cromwell Taylor, late postmaster at Indiana, is his only surviving son. James Taylor was a merchant. He filled the offices of sheriff of the county and member of assembly. He died on the 27th of May, 1851, unmarried, aged fifty-two years. He was endowed with an inexhaustible fund of humor, which attracted all classes of people to him, not only the mirthful but the serious and sedate. His was fun and wit, without vulgarity. Alexander Wilson Taylor, eldest son of Hon. John Taylor, was born at Indiana, on the 22d of March, 1815, and resides on the spot where he was born. He was educated at the Indiana Academy and at Jefferson College, Cannonsburg, Pa. He left college in the spring of 1836, to fill an appointment as clerk in the office of his father, Hon. John Taylor, surveyor general of Pennsylvania. He held this appointment for three years, and then entered the law school at Carlisle, Pa., where he remained one year and after continued his law studies in the office of Judge White, at Indiana. He was admitted to the bar in 1841, and entered immediately upon the successful practice of his profession. In 1845, he was elected prothonotary and clerk of the several courts of Indiana county, and was re-elected in 1848. On the 8th of May, 1849, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Ralston, eldest daughter of David Ralston, Esq., of Indiana. Mr. Taylor was a whig during the existence of the whig party. Being anti-slavery in his sentiments, he took an active part in the organization of the republican party from its inception, and has been actively identified with that party ever since. He was a member of the legislature of Pennsylvania in 1859 and '60. Although not a practical farmer, he has been interested in the subject of agriculture, and for five years served as president of the Indiana county agricultural society, among the most flourishing organizations of the kind in the state. On two occasions, in 1856, and in 1866, he delivered the annual address before the society. In 1873, he was elected one of the trustees of the agricultural college of Pennsylvania. In 1872, he was elected a representative in the forty-third congress, as a republican, from the counties of Indiana, Westmoreland and Fayette, by a majority of 693 votes over Hon. Henry D. Foster, democrat. He served on the committee on railways and canals.

RAYNE TOWNSHIP

Was formed from Washington and Green, in 1845, and received its name from Robert Rayne, an early settler on the run which bears his name. The block house on the John Thompson (now David K. Thompson) farm was erected in 1790, and torn away in 1811. The names, as far as known, of those engaged in its construction were: Jacob Hess, Henry and Jacob Shallenberger, Ezekiel and Elisha Chambers, James McKee, John Stuchell, Timothy O'Neil, Shoenbarger, and a few others. The building was originally about eighty feet long*, thirty feet wide, and two stories in height, and small round logs were used in its construction. It had two ranges of port-holes, the brush and lumber were cut off, and was surrounded by a stockade made of sharpened poles driven in the ground, about ten feet in height. The building was nearly a ruin when John Thompson came to it in 1801. He removed the stockade, and used a part of the house to repair the remaining portion. We cannot learn that this block house was ever attacked, and we have learned from competent sources that the Cornplanter tribe of Senecas assisted in building the Shoenbarger house on the present Robert Little farm. This evidence is conclusive, and we have yet to learn of any murders committed in this neighborhood by this band after the Revolution.

JAMES MCKEE was born in Ireland in 1753, and came to what is now Indiana county about the close of the Revolutionary war. He first located at the head of Cherry Run, subsequently removing to the farm now occupied by McLain Davis, White township, and the farm now owned by the McKee heirs, in Rayne, where he died in 1821. He served as a scout for a number of years, during the Indian troubles which occurred in the latter part of the last century. His first wife was Elizabeth McGara, and his second Nancy Morrow. His children were: William, d., m. first to Mary Shields, d., and second to Phebe Wilson; Jane, d., m. to David Fairman, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Chas., d., born on the homestead in 1792, m. first to Julia Snyder, d., and second to Hannah Adams; Joseph, d., m. to Elsey Hicks, d.; James, d., m. to Anna McClusky, d.; Ann Simmons, d., m. to James Thompson, d.; John d., m. to Elizabeth Harrold; Samuel, d., m. to Rotetia Thomas, d.; Mary Morrow, d., m. to A. T. Moorhead, sen.; Alexander Bleakney, d., m. to Margaret Tate; Nancy, d., m. to Abram Hicks, d.; and George Trimble. The McKee farm was warranted to William Todd, February 2, 1781, was sold May 2, 1791, to Andrew Sharp, whose deed to James McKee is dated May 16, 1794, though the latter had resided on the tract for about three years prior to the purchase.

The McKee Mill on McHenry Run.—The first mill, one and a half story (14x16) log building, was erected some years prior to 1806, as several persons* yet living speak of its being in operation in that year. It had an overshot wheel, sixteen feet in diameter and two feet wide, and one set of country stone. The bolting was done by hand, and in a common sieve. This mill could grind three bushels of wheat per hour, in season. The second mill was a frame structure, and the present is the third mill, and also a frame building. The latter is now the property of Conrad Bley.

*These notes were furnished by Joseph, a son of "Block-house" John Thompson.

KELLYSBURG, HOME P. O.

This village was called for Meek Kelly, who platted it in 1838 for Daniel Stanard. The first settler on the site of the place was Michael Stump, who built, in 1838 or 1839, a cabin and blacksmith shop on the forks of the road, where H. L. Kinter's store is situated. John Sutor made the next improvement. He was the first carpenter. His house was situated on the site of Keller's hotel. The first store was established by James Bailey and James Sutton in 1842. They were succeeded by Sutton & Prothero in 1845, John P. Prothero, and Henry L. Kinter, a present merchant. In the spring of 1878, James H. Prothero started a store, which he still continues. Home post-office commenced in 1840, at the house of Hugh Kennon, who resided between Kellysburg and Marion. After its removal to the village, John P. Prothero was the first postmaster. The second blacksmith was Samuel McQuilkin, who has been engaged in his avocation since April, 1850. The second carpenter was Josiah Korser. The shoemakers have been: Thomas and William Dodson, 1858; Ira Bouton, Joshua Wilson, Isaac Secrist, and William D. Bash, the present workman. The hotel keepers have been: Jacob Baylor, 1850; Foster Davis, Geo. Detwiler, John A. Silvis, and Henry Keller, 1875. The first minister was Rev. D. D. Christy, Presbyterian, 1861. The second was Rev. Charles Duncan, 1877, Presbyterian. The town hall is 32x54 feet, and was erected in 1872, at an expense of $2,000. Religious services are held in this hall. The Union Sabbath School has held its sessions there since 1872. The first superintendent was John P. Prothero, and the present is H. L. Kinter. The population of the village is about thirty.

CHAMBERSVILLE

Was named in honor of Elisha Chambers, who purchased the tract which includes the site, in 1789. The village was laid out by William Swan, in October, 1848. David Peeler was the surveyor.

The first building was erected by M. C. Getty, in 1847. He was the first merchant. His successors were William Swan & Brother, John D. Cummins & Brother, S. A. Allison, S. A. Allison & Wm. Cummins, James Bothel, John T. Kinter, Hezekiah Crissman, and Wm. Kimple, and Captain Wm. Kimple, the present merchant.

The blacksmiths have been—1856, Joseph McIntire, George Henderson, Solomon Hankinson; and at the present, J. C. Downey. The shoemakers have been James Adams and Lewis Pierce and sons.

The shook factory is owned by Doctor Andrews, and managed by Jacob Moose. The hotels have been conducted by George Swan, 1851, James Adams, A. C. Reed, David McConaughey and Mrs. Margaret Stuchell.

The first and only physician was Dr. William Anthony, in 1858.

*A. T. Moorhead, sen., David K. Thompson, Judge Joseph Campbell, and others.

KINTERSBURG, GILPIN P. O.

This village of about twenty-five inhabitants, received its name from Isaac Kinter, who opened the first store in 1854, and continued in business over twenty years.

The first improvement on the site of the village was made early in the century by John Buchanan, who disposed of the tract to John Kinter, through whom Isaac obtained the property.

Isaac Kinter was succeeded in the store by his son, Jacob F. Kinter, who has continued the business. Peter Kinter started a store in 1853, and was succeeded by David Laughlin, and in 1867, J. T. Kinter, the present occupant of the store.

P. K. Jameson, after the first lots were sold, erected a cabinet and furniture shop, and continued in business several years. He built several houses in the village. Marshal McDermott was the first blacksmith. He was followed by John Smith, John Faith and Hugh R. Morrison, the present smith.

Henry Craig commenced a shook shop in 1861, and conducted it for several years.

The first located minister was Rev. Forthman, a Lutheran.

The postoffice was established in 1861, and was so called for the Gilpins—the owners of large tracts of land in the vicinity. The postmasters have been, David Laughlan, J. T. Kinter and J. F. Kinter.

John Kinter was born in 1786, on the site of Alexander, Huntingdon county, and was a son of John and Isabella Kinter nee Findley. The former was a soldier in the Revolution, enlisting three times and serving two months at each call. John was a son of Philip and Barbara Kinter nee King. Philip was an emigrant from Holland. In 1808, John Kinter, the elder, and family, removed to Indiana county, and located on the farm now occupied by Alexander Walker. He died in his eighty-second year. His wife died in her ninetieth year. Their children were: Margaret, d., m. to William Borland, d.; John, m. in 1807, to Sarah Ross, d. in 1866, about eighty years of age; Henry, d., m. to Christiana Heater, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Jas. Coulter, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Judge Peter Dilts, sr., d.; William, d., m. to Mary Speedy, d.; Peter, d., m. to Agnes Craig, d.; Findley, d., m. to Catharine Heater, d.; Isaac, m. to Hannah Myers, d. Henry served in the war of 1812, and was sheriff of the county. Isaac served one term as county auditor. The children of our subject were: Isabella, d., m. to Isaiah McElhoes; William, d., m. to Elizabeth Simpson; Henry, d., m. to Dorcas McElhoes; Elizabeth, d., m. to George Myers; James, R., m. to Nancy Trimble, d.; John, m. to Elizabeth Ray; Sarah Ann; Mary, d.; Findley, d.; Margaret, m. to Joseph Mears; and Alexander C. The children of Isaac Kinter, a son of John, the pioneer, were: David M., Christian minister, m. to Margaret P. Dabney; Sarah Bell, m. to James McLaughlin; Peter C., d. in the army while a member of company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers; John, m. to Elizabeth Lingenfelter; Christiana, m. first to Peter W. Dilts, d., second to George Gourley; Jacob Foster. m. to Ida M. Campbell; Martha J., d.; and Isaac N. Jacob F., was drum major of the 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. He was the first lieutenant, and subsequently the captain of company F, 74th Pennsylvania volunteers about nine months. John was also a captain in the war of 1861.

David K. Thompson was born on the 8th of July, 1798, one mile above the site of Saltsburg, and was a son of John (called Block-house) and Rachel Thompson nee White. The former was a native of Philadelphia, and served five years in the Revolutionary army. He was married in Chester county, his wife above named, being a daughter of Thomas and Rachel White nee Liggett. He removed to Westmoreland county in 1783, and ten years later, located on the tract where our subject was born. In 1801, he removed to the farm now occupied by David K. He died in 1838, at the age of seventy-seven; his wife in 1853, at the age of ninety-three. Their children were: William, d., m. to Rebecca Taylor, d.; Rachel, d., m. to John Williams, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Hannah Thompson, d.; John, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Weir, d.; Joseph, m. to Maria Culbertson, d.; David K., m. in 1826 to Mary McHenry, b. in 1800, d. in 1879; Sarah, d.; Thomas W., d.; and Margaret J., m. to William Williams. Thomas and John were soldiers in the war of 1812 for six months. Thomas W. was a soldier in the Florida war and died there. Joseph's children were: Nancy, Rachel John, William, Thomas, Joseph, Margaret, Samuel, James, and Maria. David K.'s children were: Margaret, m. to Abel Findley; Rachel; Sidney; John; William, d.; David, d.; Thomas, who served three years in the 14th Pennsylvania cavalry; and Mary, d.

Robert Thompson was born on the John Thompson homestead, Rayne township, in 1817, and was a son of John and Mary Thompson nee McCluskey. The former died in 1859, in his seventy-eighth year; the latter in 1845, sixty-two years old. John was a son of Robert and Mary Thompson nee Cannon. John Thompson often made maple sugar on the Little Mahoning while the Senecas were still denizens of the vicinity. His children were: Mary Jane, d.; Matilda, m. to Thomas Williams, d.; Eliza Ann; Robert, m. in 1857 to Sarah T. Hamilton, d. in 1875, forty-four years of age; and Mafgaret, d., m. to Robert Park. Our subject's children were: Margaret Ann, John, Thomas H., d.; Mary, Elizabeth, Matilda Jane, Effie, George C., Robert, and James T.

Isaiah McElhoes was born on the farm now occupied by him, in 1815, and was a son of John and Jane McElhoes nee Van Horn. The former was a son of Isaiah and Nancy McElhoes nee Scott. Isaiah, the pioneer, was a native of Philadelphia. He migrated to the farm now occupied by the widow of James McElhoes about 1793 or '94. This place was well known on account of the block-house erected thereon. He died in 1823, about eighty years of age; his wife died some years prior, at the age of seventy. Their children were: Susan, d., m. to Abraham Lowman, d.; Esther, d., m. to Fergus Moorhead, d.; Ann, d., m. to George Trimble, d.; Jane, d., m. to Joseph Moorhead, d.; John, d., m. to Jane Van Horn, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Martha McCluskey, d.; and James, m. first to Nancy Anthony, d., and second to Elizabeth Kerr. John came to the tract now occupied by our subject in 1813. His children were: Isaiah, m. to Isabella Kinter, d.; Nancy, m. to William Dilts, d.; Dorcas, m. first to Henry Kinter, d., and second to William Houk; and Susan, m. to Johnston Lightcap. Isaiah has served as justice of the peace for eight years. He erected the woolen factory in 1864 on the foundation of the old grist mill. His children were: Jane; John K., m. to Margaret Thompson; James S.; and Sarah Isabella. John K. served in the 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. He is now acting as county auditor. The children of William and Nancy Dilts nee McElhoes, a daughter of John McElhoes, were: Peter Watson, d., m. to Christeana Kinter; John Scott, d.; James Coulter, m. to Martha McCall; William C., m. to Dora Cooper; Jane, d.; Agnes, m. to Benjamin McCluskey; Samuel, Tabitha, and H. M. Peter W. was in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. He was a prisoner for three months. James C. and William C. were soldiers in the war of 1861. The children of Samuel, (a son of Isaiah McElhoes, the pioneer,) were: James M., d.; Agnes; Robert, m. to Lavinia Prothero; and John, who served in the 135th Pennsylvania volunteers for nine months. Robert's children were: Samuel E., Martha H., William C., Mary I., Sarah, Charles J., Harvey J., and Ephraim.

Samuel McQuilkin was born in Armstrong township in 1824, and was a son of John and Sarah McQuilkin nee Wahab, who was married in the county in 1812. The former was a blacksmith, and settled in the aforenamed township in 1810. He served as coroner of the county for three years. Mrs. McQuilkin died August 21, 1878, at the age of eighty six years, seven months and sixteen days. Mr. McQuilkin died May 9, 1871, at the age of eighty-six years four months and eighteen days. He was the son of James and Martha McQuilkin, who lived and died in Westmoreland county. James served for nearly two years in the Indian wars of 1794 and 1795. John McQuilkin's children were: Anna, m. to Solomon Lightcap; John, m. to Margaret Orr; James, m. to Julia A. Lightcap; Robert, m. first to Catharine Weaver, d., second to Eliza Stewart, d., and third to Lizzie Porter; Rebecca, m. to George Aul; and Samuel, m. March 8, 1853, to Catharine Thompson, b. in 1832. Samuel's children were: Robert T., d.; Sarah T.; Mary C., d.; Sarah W.; Martha R., d.; Mary Edith; Nettie Blanch; Anna; John R., d.; Mabel C., and Lee Early.

Elisha Chambers was a son of Ezekiel Chambers, and was among the early settlers of the county, north of what is now the borough of Indiana. He purchased the tract which included the site of Chambersville, in 1789, and made his first improvement in 1790. His wife was Margaret John, whom he married in 1793 or 1794, near the forks of Yough, in Westmoreland county. In 1824, he married for a second wife, Jane Swan, who died in 1847. The children by the first marriage were: Ezekiel, who went to Texas, where he d.; and Elizabeth, m. to Alexander Irwin. He died in 1850, about eighty years of age.

JAMES SWAN was born in Plum creek township, Armstrong county, in 1810, and was a son of Thomas and Jane Swan nee Spence. The former was a native of Ireland. His father died while the family were en route for America, in 1801. Mr. Swan purchased in 1826, of Mrs. Elizabeth Irwin, the land upon which Chambersville is situated. He died in 1845, over sixty-three years of age. His children were: James, m. to Jane Fleming, d. in 1878; Mary, m. to Samuel McGara; William, d., m. to Isabella Getty; Jane, d., m. to William McGara; and George, m. to Martha McGara. James' children were: Mary Jane m. to Andrew Gibson; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Lightcap; Thomas, d.; Isabella, d.; Samuel, m. to Sarah J. Lightcap; Margaret, d.; William Franklin; and Nancy.

J. P. PROTHERS was born in Herefordshire, England, in 1813, and was a son of William and Ann Prothers nee Nash. The former died in 1863, in his eighty-seventh year, the latter in 1866, in her eighty-eighth year. Our subject was a tailor by trade, and after working four years in that occupation, came to America with William Hiles. After working in Philadelphia and vicinity for a short time, he arrived in Indiana, in the spring of 1834, and worked at his trade for nine years. He was a partner with James Sutton, in the mercantile business at Kellysburg, from 1845 to 1854, and in the succeeding eighteen years conducted the business himself. He was married in 1836, to Sarah Clark. Their children were: William N., was in the war of 1861; Henry; Lavinia, m. to Robert McElhoes; Elizabeth Ann, m. to Joseph M. Laughlin; Isabella, d.; George, m. to Lona Ake; Mary, m. to James S. Hart; Silas C., m. to Emma Kinter; Olive, m. to M. C. Woodward; James H.; Ada; Emma Louisa; and Helen Jane.

SAMUEL LEWIS was born on what is now the Lowry farm, Young township, January 18, 1801, and was the son of Samuel Lewis, who died in September, 1800, about thirty years old, and Lydia Kelly, who married for her second husband John Niel. She died in 1857, over eighty-eight years of age. Samuel Lewis settled on the Lowry farm about 1790. He was of Welch descent, and a native of Franklin county. His wife was a member of Bethel church over fifty years. The children by the first marriage were: Nathaniel, d., m. to Rachel Gossage, d.; Stephen, d., m. to Ann Hopkins; and Samuel, m. in 1826 to Mary Graham, b. in 1808. Our subject has resided on his homestead since 1826. His children were: William G., m. to Margaret Davis; John K., d.. m. to Ruth Thompson; A. B., attorney at law, d. in the war of 1861; Rachel, d.; Lydia, d.; Hugh P., m. to Ellen B. Ansley; Parr, d.; Rachel A., m. to Moses Lemon; and S. Clark, m. to a Miss Rankin. A. B. was a lieutenant in an Iowa regiment. He died from wounds received at the battle of Iuka. Hugh P. was a soldier in the war of 1861. The children of S. Clark Lewis were: Ida E., and Alexander P.

REV. A. T. BELL, pastor of Rayne and Washington Presbyterian churches, was born in 1845, in Washington county, and was a son Robert and Susannah Bell nee Tidball. Mr. Bell was a soldier in company G, 28th Pennsylvania volunteers. He graduated from Washington and Jefferson College in the class of 1870, and from the Western Theological Seminary in the class of 1872. He was ordained and installed pastor of Rayne church on the 31st of December, 1872. He was married to Mary J. Watson, of Young township. Their only child is Sarah Emma.

JAMES B. PIERCE, proprietor of flouring mill, was born in 1825, in what is now South Mahoning township, and was a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Pierce nee Colkitt. The children of his grandfather were: John, Joseph, Job, David, and Jacob. The latter made the settlement of the family in the county. His children were: Lydia, m. to Hiram Williamson; Rachel, m. to Abram Pierce, d.; Edward, m. to Elizabeth Pierce; Joseph Jacob, m. to Dorcas A. Patton; Sarah Anna, m. to Jacob Pierce; James B., m. first to Jane Cathcart, d., and second to Rachel L. Reeves; and Jesse, m. to Nancy States. Our subject's children were: Harriet, m. to David Schrecongost; Nancy J., m. to D. Penrod; Clark I.; and Henry; and by second marriage, Edson P. and Frank A.

JOSEPH MEARS was born in 1825, in Derry township, Westmoreland county, and was a son of Joseph and Mary Mears nee Smith. The former located in the county in 1837. He was a son of Samuel Mears. The latter's children were: Joseph and David. Joseph's children were: David, d., m. first to Matilda Barclay, d., and second to Martha Calhoun; Ellen, m. to Joseph Burkholder; Elizabeth; Joseph, m. to Margaret Kinter, daughter of John Kinter, sr.; Lydia, m. to William Lomison; Margaret A., m. to John D. Cummins. Our subject's children were: Mary A., m. to William Rager; Irwin K. and Lucy B.

MRS. EMILY A. KINTER was born in 1828, in what is now South Mahoning township, and was a daughter of William and and Mary Warden nee Higby. The former was a son of William and Mary Warden nee McElwany. The latter's children were: John, d.; Robert, d.; and William, d. The children of the parents were: Emily A., m. to H. B. Kinter, d., enlisted in March, 1862, in company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, and died February 9th, 1864; and Agnes Jane. Our subject's children were: Wilson P., enlisted in the fall of 1863, at the age of sixteen, and served till the surrender of Lee, m. to Josephine Batson in West Virginia; Henry S., m. to Francis M. Brown; William L.; Emma Margaretta, m. to Silas Prothero; Mary Belle, d.; and H. F. M. Hiram Closson made the first improvement on this tract in 1855.

MATTHEW B. WYNEKOOP was born in 1841 in Rayne township, and was a son of Matthew B. and Mary Wynekoop nee Van Lear. The former was a son of Matthew and Thomarzine Wynekoop nee Stockham. Matthew Wynekoop located in the county about 1804. His children were: Matthew B., m. first to Elizabeth Work, d., and second to Mary Van Leer, d.; William, d.; John, d.; David, m. to Jane McCune; Henry, m.; Gerrardus, m.; and Maria, m. to Samuel Potts. The children of the parents were: Agnes M.; Jane T.; John W., m. first to Lucinda Van Leer, and second to Elsie Evans; Elizabeth J., d.; and by the second marriage: Robert C., d., m. to Margaretta Coulter, d.; Lucinda V., d.; Matthew B., m. to Ellen Lydick; William M., d.; James S., m. to Rebecca W. Clark; George S., m. to Jane Lightcap; Emily, d.; Gerrardus, m. to Elizabeth Hamilton. Matthew B. served in company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, and in company A, 2d battalion, Pennsylvania volunteers. James S. served in company A, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, and in the signal corps. George S. was in the three months' service. Our subject's children were: Amanda A., d; Ida M.; Edgar C.; and Harry S.

J. T. KINTER was born in 1831, about one mile from the present site of Kintersburg, and was a son of Peter and Margaret Kinter nee McCall. The father (Peter Kinter) of the former located in this section in 1808. His first wife was Mary Findley, and the second Elizabeth Jackson, all of whom are now deceased. The children of the grandparents were: Sarah, d., m. to Josephus Osburn, d.; Archibald, d., m. first to Catharine Hess, d., and second to Mary Colkitt, d.; Peter, d., m. to Margaret McCall, d.; Mary, d., m. to John Leasure, d.; John, d., m. to Margaret Riddle, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Robert Warden, d.; Isabella, d., m. to John Jameson, d.; and by the second marriage: Samuel, m. to a Miss Layton; Catharine, d., and Jane, m. to Samuel Knox. The children of the parents were: Hugh B., d., (see sketch of Mrs. Emily A. Kinter, his widow); Jane, d., m. to William Buchanan; J. T., m. to Sarah McGara; Mary; Henry L., m. to Annie E. Shields; Margaret A., m. to Samuel Stevens; and Peter W., m. to Elizabeth Carney. Our subject served in company I, 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, and was a second lieutenant in company B, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers. Henry L. was in company F, 74th Pennsylvania volunteers. The children of J. T. Kinter are Horace, Nettie, and Burton. He engaged in 1864 in the mercantile business at Chambersville, and in 1867 located in the same line at Kintersburg, where he has since continued merchandising.

JOSEPH MYERS was born in Rayne township, in 1829, and was a son of Joseph and Barbara Myers nee Byers. The former settled in the county in 1810. (His only brother was David Myers.) His children were: Daniel, d., m. to Sarah Waddel, d.; John, m. first to Ferniah Piper, d., and second to Mrs. Jane O'Hara; Hannah, m. to Samuel Helman; Elizabeth, d., m. to Henry Houk; David, m. first to Catharine Fisher, d., and second to Nancy Green; George, d., m. to C. Fisher; Sarah, m. to Henry Houk; Joseph, m. to Sarah Fulmer, daughter of Simon P. Fulmer.

CAPTAIN JACOB CREPS was born in 1836, on the farm now occupied by Lewis Rhodes, Rayne township, and was a son of Samuel and Eleanor Creps nee Wolf, daughter of John Wolf. Samuel Creps came to the county about 1830, and to the above-named farm in 1835. He and his wife were natives of Centre county, and were married in Indiana county. He died in 1859, in his fifty-second year. His widow is living, at the age of sixty-five. Their children were: Jacob, m. to Christiana Bookinmyre; Susan, d., m. to John Lowman; and John W. Jacob's children were: Mary E., d.; Ida, Jacob Augustus, John Forney, and Florence. Our subject has served as sheriff of the county, and as member of the state house of representatives in the sessions of 1877 and '78. He commenced his military career when only nine years old, as a drummer boy in the old "Washington Guards." At the age of thirteen, he joined the "Washington artillery," as leader of their martial band, and at sixteen, was first lieutenant in the same company. At the time of the Utah war, he offered the service of his company to the Government, but its acceptance was declined. At the commencement of the war of 1861, he was connected with a military organization out of which grew company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers. He tendered the services of his men to the Government at the first three months' call, but the quota of the state being full, the company was not received. His career as captain of company A is given in the history of the company. Twice he was elected colonel of the regiment, but the state authorities would never grant the commission. Jacob, the grandfather of our subject, was a soldier in the war of 1812.

JAMES MCLAUGHLIN, son of James and Margaret McLaughlin, was born in Indiana county, in 1832, and is a son of one of the early pioneers of the county. He married Sarah J., daughter of Isaac Kinter in 1859. They have a family of three children: Lottie H., Florence M. and Alice A. He was raised on a farm and purchased the property which he now owns (one hundred and forty acres) in 1860. A vein of coal underlies the farm but is not worked at present. John Buchanan was the first settler on the tract now owned by Mr. McLaughlin.

C. R. LONG, son of John and Ann Long nee Crawford, was born in November, 1828, near where he now lives. His father settled in the county about 1820, and reared a family of six children: William J., m. to Catharine Lininger; John C., m. first to Sarah Lewis, and second to Mary A. Hileman; Charles, m. to Margaret Moore; Mary A., m. to David A. Short; and Jane, d. Our subject was married to Martha, daughter of Evan Lewis, in 1857. They have a family of four children: Ann, Evan, Martha J., and Mary M., d. Mr. Long owns a part of the old homestead.

GEORGE HOUCK, son of Anthony and Sallie Houck nee Miller was born in Germany in 1826. His parents migrated to the United States in 1828, and landed in New York. They came from there to Somerset county, were there some eleven years, then moved to Indiana county and settled in Rayne township. They reared a large family: Henry, m. to Elizabeth Myers; William, m. to Mary A. Knupp; Peter, m. to Catharine Wheeler; John, m. to Ann Swiers; Catharine, d., m. to George Swank; Catharine, m. to David Fitzons; Elizabeth, d., m. to Michael Spingler; and George, m. to Hannah, daughter of Peter Mock, of Bedford county. Their children are: Salina, d.; Charlotte, d.; George W., d.; Daniel, d.; George A., d.; Elmira, m. to William Long; Sylvester L.; James N., and Levi E. Mr. Houck purchased the farm in 1857. It is six miles north of Indiana, on the new state road. In connection with his farm he has been engaged for the last nineteen years in a general mercantile trade.

WM. B. BRYAN, son of John M. and Mary B. Bryan nee Allison, was born in 1841. His grandfather settled in the county at a very early day. His children were Samuel d.; Joseph, d.; Nathaniel, m. to Martha McPheters; and Hannah, d., m. to Robert Allison. Our subject's parents reared a family of six children; Sarah J., m. to Thomas Abey, Rebecca A., m. to Samuel Row, Samuel, m. to Rebecca Row; John, m. to Mary Dumb; Harry, m. to Maggie Wiggins; and Taylor, m. to unknown. Mr. Bryan married in 1862, Deborah A., daughter of Levi Berkeypile. They have a family of five children: Mary C.; Ann Della; Maggie E.; Frank B.; and Flora M. He purchased his farm of one hundred and thirty-six acres, in 1838. His brothers. John and Taylor, served in the late war. John was taken prisoner, and lay in prison three months.

JEREMIAH PETERMAN, son of Michael and Sarah Peterman nee Fisher, was born in Somerset county, Pa., in 1829. He settled in this county in 1857. His brothers and sistere were: Michael, m. to Jane Wiggins; Jacob, m. to Margaret Beer; George; Elizabeth, m. to John C. Weaver; Harriet, m. to Samuel Groff, d., and our subject, m. in 1864, to Mary, daughter of Noah Clark, of Armstrong county. They have four children: Eliza, Clara A., James H., and Henry E. Mr. Peterman purchased the property he now owns, near Chambersville, in 1868.

HUGH BRADY, son of Robert S. and Margaret Brady nee Weaver, was born in 1842. (The ancestors of the former were relatives of the noted captain Samuel Brady.) He learned the carpenters' trade, and worked at the business about five years. He married in 1862, Mary A., daughter of John Smith, of Berks county, Pa. He was in the late war—first in company A, 61st regiment Pennsylvania volunteers for thirteen months, and was wounded three times in the battle of Fair Oaks. He also, was in the 57th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, and 206th Pennsylvania volunteers. While in the 206th, he was sergeant-major of the regiment. He was discharged at the close of the war, at Richmond. Soon after he came out of the army, he engaged in mining coal. In 1867, he purchased an interest in the coal vein on the Steffey farm, and commenced working the same. He is now engaged in the coal business.

JOHN SHANNON, son of Robert and Nancy Shannon nee McGuire, was born in Westmoreland county, September 5, 1817. He settled in this county in 1841. His uncle, Robert McGuire, served in the war of 1812 under Gen. Harrison, and was captured by the Indians near Fort Meigs. Mr. Shannon married Mary, daughter of Abraham Frantz, of Armstrong county. Their children were: James, m. to Hettie Baker; Abraham F.; Cyrus; John C.; Chambers; Josephine, m. to James Hazlett; and Jennie. He purchased the property he now owns near Chambersville, in 1870. On his farm is a vein of coal which he is working.

SAMUEL F. SPEEDY, son of Thomas and Jane Speedy nee Bell, was born on the farm where he now lives, in 1829. His grandparents, Andrew and Margaret Speedy nee McKee, settled in the county, at a very early day, on the property now owned by Samuel D. Bell. The children were as follows: Elizabeth, d., m. to John Shields; Mary, d., m. to William Kinter; Margaret, m. to James McLaughlin; James, d. m. to Martha Foster; Thomas, m. to Jane Bell; Hugh, m. first to Mary Shields, and second to Mrs. Margaret Dunlap nee McCreary. Samuel's brothers and sisters were as follows: Mary; William, m. to Mary Getty; Jane, m. to Robert Little; Matilda, m. to William Craig; Elizabeth, d.; Andrew, d.; Caroline, m. to Joseph Sutton; Clark, m. to Isabella Wolf; Samuel, m. in 1879, to Catharine, daughter of John Lytle. Clark served in company E, 148th regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, was wounded at Gettysburg, lay in Summit House hospital, Philadelphia, nearly one year, and was discharged on account of disability. Samuel served in company A, 67th regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, and was discharged at close of war. He (Samuel) learned the carpenter's trade and pursued it for fifteen years. He is now engaged in farming and stock growing.

JOHN A. JOHNSON, son of George and Harriet Johnson nee Tucker, was born near Plumville in 1839. His brothers and sisters were as follows: Henrietta, m. to Hugh Morrison; Phebe; Mary; Jane; William, m. to a Mr. Shaffer; Joseph; and George, m. to Elizabeth Scott. John A. was married to Elizabeth, daughter of William Hall, in 1871. Their children are: Jessie M., Mary E., and George W. In 1864, he went to Venango county, and engaged in the oil business. He was there for eight years, then purchased the farm he now owns, and is now engaged in farming. A valuable limestone quarry is located on his farm.

THOMAS J. MCCOY, son of Daniel and Abigail McCoy nee McAdoo, was born in 1853. He married Joanna, daughter of Jas. M. Carroll, in 1875. They have two children, Montie Z., and Harry P. Our subject was raised on a farm, and was engaged with his father in the general milling business at McKee's mill for five years. In March, 1880, in connection with his brother William, he purchased a steam saw mill near Kintersburg, and is at present engaged in the lumber business.

JOHN STEETLE, son of Andrew and Margaret Steetle nee Ross, was born in Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, in 1830. His father settled in Brush Valley township, near Mechanicsburg, in 1830. His children were: Lydia, m. to Robert Wiggins; Mary, d., m. to Jacob Baylor; Margaret, d., m. to Fred. Jacoby; Sarah, m. to Chas. Gompers; Jacob, d.; Catharine, m. to Miner Brown; David, m. to Jane Lower; Crissie, m. to John Dick; and John, m. in 1854 to Delilah, daughter of John Crisswell. David was a soldier in the late war. They have six children: Joseph R.; Catharine, m. to Robert Kerr; Margaret L., Minerva, Charles C., and Lina A. He purchased the farm he now owns of G. Owens in 1871.

JOHN L. HALL, son of William and Sarah M. Hall nee Lucas, was born in 1841. His grandfather married a Lucas and settled in the county at an early day, about two miles west of Indiana. William's children were as follows: Nancy, d.; Mary, d.; Thomas, d.; Esther A., m. to William Shaffer; Elizabeth, m. to John A. Johnson; James, m. to Margaret McCracken; Susanna, d., m. to Jacob Wells; Samuel, B., m. to Harriet A. Jacocks; Hugh C.; Sarah E., m. to William Strasler; and John L., m. to Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh Laney. The latter have three children, George M., Harry and Inez F. He served in company B, 11th regiment Pennsylvania reserves for three years and then re-enlisted in company B, 190th Pennsylvania volunteers or 1st veteran rifles. His brother James served in company A, 78th Pennsylvania volunteers for three years. Mr. Hall has been engaged in mining coal for a number of years, and in connection with his coal business is manufacturing lime.

SAMUEL D. BELL, son of William and Margaret Bell nee Clark, was born in Washington township, in 1844. His brothers and sisters' names were as follows: William C., m. to Catharine Kinter; Joseph H., d.; Mary A., m. to A. C. Reed; Jane W., m. to W. H. Lydick; and Elizabeth, d., m. to J. R. Lightcap. His brother William C. served in the 103d Pennsylvania volunteers for four years, was taken prisoner and lay in rebel prisons for eleven months Samuel D. married Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel McGaughey, in 1871. Their children are: Harvey, Virginia F. and Lottie J. Andrew Speedy was the first settler on the farm now owned by Mr. Bell.

ISRAEL MOORE, son of James and Ruth Moore nee Thomas, was born in 1827. His grandfather settled in what is now Indiana county, about 1800. His children were as follows: Margaret, d., m. to a Mr. Brown; Abraham, m. first to Mary Loughry, and second to Phebe Sutton; and Henry, m. to Rebecca Sutton. James and Ruth Moore's children were as follows: Abraham, m. first to Margaret Abey, and second to Mary A. Short; Margaret, m. to Charles Long; John, m. first to Elizabeth Turner, and second to Mary Sidley; Mary J., m. to Matthias Coleman; Phebe, m. to Thomas Hopkins; James, m. to Malinda Shaffer; Susanna, m. to John Jones; Nancy, m. first to Daniel Fitzhugh, and second to Bradford Donahue; and Israel, m. in 1854, to Susanna, daughter of Samuel Fetterhoff, of Huntingdon county. They have a family of nine children, as follows: Ruth A., m. to Andrew Fisher; Sarah B.; Phebe S.; Nettie N.; Clarissa J.; Minnie M; Israel T.; Margaret O.; and Ida F. Mr. Moore, purchased his farm in 1866. An Indian trail passed through his place. He served in company K, 67th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, in the late war, and was discharged at Philadelphia, in July, 1865.

MRS. MARGARET L. MCLAUGHLIN was born on Cherry run, near Indiana, in 1808, and was a daughter of Andrew Speedy. She married James McLaughlin in 1830, and with him settled in the woods, on the property she now owns. They reared a family of nine children: David, m. to Margaret Kinter; James, m. to Isabella Kinter; Johnson B., m. to Ida Hatton; Wesley, m. to Maria Rankin; John F., m. to Louisa Ansley; Mary, d.; Martha; Hester A., m. to Johnson Loughry; and Eliza C., d. Johnson B., served in the 14th regiment, Pennsylvania volunteer cavalry for three years. Wesley was also in the army. Her husband died August 31st, 1858.

SOLOMON LIGHTCAP, son of Godfrey and Jane Lightcap, was born in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, in 1809. His father came to Indiana county about 1845, and settled near where Washington church now stands. Our subject was married to Ann, daughter of John McQuilken. His children were: Wilson, m. to Lillie Baird; John R., d., m. to Elizabeth Bell; Foster, m. to Cordelia McGeary; Sarah J., m. to Samuel Swan; Mary A., m. to Archibald Earhart; Godfrey, d.; and Samuel G. His brother John served in the late war.

JOSIAH KOOSER was born in Somerset county in 1818, and was a son of John and Susannah Kooser nee Fredline, The family settled, in 1829, on a farm now the property of George Tucker. Their children were: Lydia, m. to Robert McCloskey; Daniel, m. to Amanda Kimple; Rebecca, m. first to Thomas Davis, d., and second to Joseph Stewart; Jacob, m. to Annie Rorbaugh; Maria, d., m. to Thomas Robinson; Hiram, m. to Ruth Warden; John A., d.; Sarah, m. to Sanford Robinson; Elizabeth, m. to James Kelly; and Josiah, m. to Martha, daughter of Robert Thompson. Hiram served in the war of 1861, in an Illinois regiment. Our subject's children were: Mary, d.; Sadie; Clara, d.; John, m. to Jemima Munshower; Lucetta T., d.; Maggie T., d.; Martha E., d.; Emma J., and Charles. Four of the children died of diphtheria in a single month, in 1871. After working at the carpenter trade for twenty years, he purchased his farm in 1857. The first settler on the tract was Arthur Nugent, about 1800. John Kooser purchased the property in 1833.

SAMUEL MCGARA, son of Clements and Polly McGara nee McLaughlin, was born in Westmoreland county, in 1816, and settled in this county in 1844. He married Mary, daughter of Thomas Swan, in 1843. Their children are as follows: Sarah, m. to John T. Kinter; Thomas B., m. to Sarah J. Dodson; Caroline, m. to John Thomas; Cordelia, m. to Foster Lightcap; John B., m. to Clara Shields. Mr. McGara, during his early business life, was engaged in the mercantile, lumber and milling occupation. He purchased, in 1848, the farm upon which he now lives, of George Swan. He also owns the Steffey farm, near Chambersville. A six-foot vein of coal underlies his property.

WILLIAM MCHENRY, son of William and Sidney McHenry nee Gordon, was born in 1812, on the Moore farm, about two miles from Indiana. His father was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and was in the Indian war under Gen. Wayne. He died in 1855, aged eighty-four years. William married Eleanor, daughter of William Sebring, in 1838. Their children were as follows: Deborah, d.; Scott, d.; William S., m. to Mary Lotz; Julia A., d.; John, d.; Jackson, m. to Marian Stuchel; Samuel R.; Franklin, m. to Margaret McHenry; Milton; Sarah J.; Clara, d.; and Anna L. William S., served in the late war.

JAMES J. BELL was born in 1806, near the site of the old McKee mill, and was a son of Samuel and Jane Bell nee Welsh. The former was a pioneer of the county. He resided at the McKee mill, and managed it for five years. He was a son of Robert and Jane Bell nee Minor, natives of Ireland, who located south of the site of Greensburg, prior to the Revolution. Robert Bell's children were: Joseph, d.; Jane, m. to a Flemming; Elizabeth, d.; John, m. to Elizabeth Welsh; Samuel, d., m. in 1792, to Jane Welsh, d.; James, d.; William, d.; and Margaret, m. to James McLaughlin. Samuel's children were: Robert, d.; John, d., m. first to Margaret McGara, d., and second to Jane Johnston; Mary W. d.; Jane, m. to Thomas Speedy; William, m. to Margaret Clark; Joseph, d.; Margaret, m. to John McGara; Elizabeth, d., m. to Thompson McKee; Nancy D., d. m. to William McKee; Samuel, m. to Martha Adams; and James J., m. in 1835, to Catharine, daughter of Samuel McHenry. James J.'s children were: Thompson M., d.; William W., m. to Sarah Raymond; Samuel M, m. to Annie McKee; Joseph M.; Mary J., m. to John Catchcart; Melinda C., d.; and Margaret E., m. to Arias Cooper. Thomas M. and William W., served in the 78th Pennsylvania volunteers. Joseph M., was also a soldier in the late war. Thompson M., was killed at Murfreesboro, Tenn., in 1863. Our subject located on his present farm in 1837, making the first improvement.

D. F. MCHENRY, son of James G. and Sarah McHenry nee Lutz, was born in the county, in 1849. The former was a native of the township, being born about a mile from McKee's mill, and died in 1880, at the age of seventy-four. His widow is living with the children on the old homestead. Their children were: Hannah A., Matilda, m. to Frederick Reider; Emeline, Malinda, Ellenetta, d.; Gilpin, m. to Charlotte Borland; Samuel T., George M. and D. F.

PINE TOWNSHIP

was formed from Wheatfield, in 1850, and was thus named for the extensive forest of pine within its borders.

STRONGSTOWN

was patented in 1823, by John Evans for James Strong and James Hill. The first three houses were erected by Mr. Strong. The first is occupied by Thomas Stophel, as a cabinet shop; the second is used by Mrs. Fannie Douthard as a residence, and the third is owned by T. H. Cresswell.

NOLO.

This village was called the "Stone House" till 1858, when the postoffice of Nolo was established, with W. F. Lydick as postmaster. For several years prior to 1858, there had been a store kept at the stone house by Samuel Todd, James Sutton, Watts & Thompson, and S. Golden & Co. The present merchant, W. F. Lydick, commenced in that year.

James S. Lewis.—Our subject is a son of Tobias Lewis, d., of Welsh descent, who settled in the county, near Two-lick creek, six miles from Indiana, in 1840, and died in 1845. He was married to Elizabeth Shimer, who was reared in Berks county. She lived till 1879, and died at the age of eighty-five years. This couple came from Bedford county, when they settled here in 1840. Their children were: James S., our subject, b. in Bedford county in 1824, m. to Christiana Longwell, b. in Westmoreland county in 1828; Mary Ann, b. in 1816, m. to William Howe; Elizabeth, b. in 1826, m. to J. L. Hazlett, dentist, Indiana, Pa.; Tobias A., b. in 1828, dentist, m. to Jennie Alexander, and now settled in Ohio; Abner W., b. in 1830, settled in Ohio, and m. to Mary Warner, of Ohio. Our subject settled in Pine township in 1858, on a tract of 200 acres on Laurel run, upon which there is a three-foot vein of ore undeveloped, and a four-foot vein of coal underlying a large body of the land. He built a sawmill on the premises in 1872. This land was first settled by a Mr. Palmer, about 1830, who it is said, worked at shoemaking and hunting. The children of our subject were: Sarah M., m. to Jacob Fisher; Annie, m. to Smith Harold; Luther L., now in Kansas; Emma D., and Adam B.

George Orner was born in Adams county, January 1, 1801. He learned the shoemaking trade when a young man, and followed that as his occupation for ten years. He married in 1832 for his first wife, Elizabeth Weaver, born in 1805 in Adams county. Their children were: Anna M., m. to Henry Bellinger, d.; Christiana, d., m. to Samuel Reed; Eliza, m. to William Simmons; Ephraim, born December 28, 1838, m. to Mary C. Rhodes, December 15, 1851, daughter of Wm. Rhodes, who bore him four children, three sons and one daughter; Harriet, m. to Silas Stephel, d.; Susannah, m. to David S. Brallier; and Nancy E., m. to John Stophel, d. His wife died January 12, 1840. He married for his second wife Maria Dickson, December 31, 1840. He and family migrated to Indiana county in 1847, and located on the farm where he is now living with his son Ephraim. His wife died September 19, 1877. After he gave up his trade he engaged in farming and lumbering, and has made that his business. When he came to Indiana county he invested in timber land. In 1853, he and his son Ephraim erected a sawmill on their timber land in Pine township, on Dutch run, and have since been manufacturing all kinds of lumber. At this date they are engaged in farming and lumbering. He is still living, but a few years since lost his sight.

Paul Hammell, a son of Peter Hammell, was born in Westmoreland county June 24, 1834. He married Julia Ann Short, of Westmoreland county, October 15, 1861. In the spring of 1862, they moved to Indiana county, and settled on the farm where they are now living, in Pine township, district No. 4. They have a family of eight children, three sons and five daughters.

William Griffith, a son of John Griffith, was born in Indiana county, Pine township, March 13, 1836. He was educated at Pine Flat Academy. He taught several terms of school in Pine and adjoining townships. His principal vocation has been farming, sawing and lumbering. He was elected justice of the peace in 1873, and was re-elected in 1878. His second term of office expires in 1883. He married, in 1870, Mary Ann Stephens, born in 1839, daughter of Alexander Stephens. They settled where they are now living, near the Griffith saw mill.

Lewis Coy, a son of John Coy, was born in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, in 1812. He was brought to Indiana county in 1820 by his father, who settled in Brush Valley township, remained about two years, then moved on a farm in Pine township, where he remained until 1853. Our subject married Margaret Sleppey, born in 1810, daughter of Abraham and Ann Sleppey, in 1834. They settled on the farm in Pine township where they are now living. They reared a family of nine children, three sons and six daughters.

Evan Griffith, son of Isaac Griffith, was born in Bedford county, Pa., Nov. 19th, 1795. He married Dec. 3d, 1818, Sarah Stephens, born Sept. 2d, 1799, daughter of Samuel Stephens, of Indiana county. They settled near where Dilltown is now located in Buffington township, resided there several years, and then moved on what is now the Monestery farm. They remained a short time, and in about 1827 or 1828, located on the farm in Pine township, now owned by his son Stephen B. Griffith, where they passed the remainder of their days. He deceased February 27th, 1845. His companion survived him until Aug. 8th, 1862. They reared a family of twelve children: Samuel, b. Dec. 6th, 1820; Isaac, b. Oct. 25th, 1822; Sarah A., b. July 27th, 1825; John, b. July 6th, 1826; Bendego, d., and William, twins, b. Aug. 22d, 1828; Miriam, b. June 14, 1821; Martha, b. Oct. 10th, 1832; Samson, d., b. July 8th, 1834; Mary, b. Sept. 14th, 1836; Stephen B., b. Nov. 6th, 1839; and Jane, b. Jan. 9th, 1842.

Stephen B. Griffith, Son of Evan and Sarah Griffith, was born in Indiana county, Nov. 16th, 1839. He married Ann C., daughter of Joseph Griffith, in 1864. They settled on the Griffith homestead, where they are now living. They have five children, two sons and three daughters.

William J. Thomas, son of John Thomas, was born in Wales, county of Cardigan, June 18th, 1815. He migrated to America in 1840; located in Pittsburgh, Pa., remained one year; then came to Indiana county. He married in 1841, Catharine Thomas, daughter of William Thomas, of Indiana county, born in 1811. They settled near Cookport, Green township, Indiana county, remained a few years, and in 1846, moved on the farm in Pine township, where they are now living. He has followed farming as his vocation. Their union resulted in four children, one of which is deceased.

Hugh Roberts was born in 1827, in Wales, and was a son of Robert Evan and Grace Roberts nee Hughes. The former died when our subject was an infant. Our subject and a brother came to the United States in 1851, Hugh locating in Green township, Indiana county, in 1854. In 1856, he settled on his present farm. He was married in 1855, to Catharine Roberts, daughter of John Roberts, a native of Wales, and a resident of Green township. He has been a deacon in the Pine Flat Baptist church for ten years. He was a carpenter by trade, and labored for a few years in Philadelphia. He has farmed since 1856. There is a three foot vein of coal in this tract, and the improvements are very desirable.

BURRELL TOWNSHIP

Was formed from Black Lick, in 1853, and was thus designated for Judge Burrell. The assessment lists of Wheatfield, Armstrong and Black Lick, present the names of its first settlers, and its principal events are given in connection with the general history or sketch of Blairsville.

The first school houses were on the old McCrea and Philip Altman farms, and these were erected prior to 1800, but their date of construction and their first teachers are unknown. Master Thomas Wilkie, was an early teacher in both these buildings.

The first school in the north-eastern part of the township, was situated on the Daniel Smith farm, where Black Lick Station now is. Among the early teachers was William Faloon.

OAKE'S POINT

Is one of the most picturesque places in Western Pennsylvania. From its elevation of twelve hundred feet, a view may be obtained which well repays the traveler for the weariness of the trip. The "Point" and the "Pack-saddle" hills stand as watch towers for the Conemaugh valley.

BELL'S MILLS.

The first improvement at this point on Black-lick creek was made by Walter Bell, whose lands lay on both sides of the creek about one mile from present Indiana railroad. The first mill erected was a saw mill which was used to cut lumber to build the grist mill. The grist mill was built in 1839, probably not fully completed until 1841. The village lots were laid out in 1848 by David Ralston, then owner of the mill.

Black-lick Manufacturing Company.—Among the manufacturing interests of Indiana county the above named company deserves especial mention. Its works are located about seven miles north of "Black-lick Intersection" on the Indiana branch of the West Penn Railroad, one and one-quarter miles east of Black-lick station and connected with the station by a tram railway. They were erected in 1869 for the purpose of making fire brick and tile. The firm was composed of E. Robinson, C. Hadley and F. McKinter. The works at this time consisted of a clay mill driven by an engine of thirty-five horse power, and a yard capacity of four thousand brick per day, with two kilns of each thirty thousand capacity. In May, 1872, Mr. Robinson sold his interest to J. M. Guthrie, of Indiana, and in July of the same year E. W. Giddings and E. J. Mildren, of Johnstown, Cambria county, bought the establishment. They immediately doubled the size of the yard, also the capacity, by running day and night. In November, 1873, Mr. Mildren, the present proprietor, purchased the interest of Mr. Giddings, and in addition to the manufacture of brick and tile, commenced making "Bessemer Tuyers," on what is known as the "Ostrander machine." In 1874, Mr. Mildren added another clay mill driven by a twenty-five horse power engine and a powerful steam "Tuyer machine." In connection with fire brick he manufactures nozzle stoppers, chimney tops, fire clay dust, gas retorts and settings. In 1875 the two old kilns were removed and two crown kilns were built with a capacity of forty-five thousand each. At these works are employed upwards of one hundred men and boys. The pay roll amounts to about nineteen hundred dollars monthly. In the fall of 1872, Messrs. Kinter, Thompson & Carter built the works located at the Black-lick station. These are now owned by E. J. Mildren and are run by a twenty-five horse power engine. They have a capacity of four thousand brick and three hundred "Tuyers" a day. This company has a well stocked general store in connection with their works. This is under the able management of Mr. C. Moore and is doing a prosperous business. It will be readily seen by the above that the Black-lick Manufacturing Company's works are among the leading industrial interests of Indiana county, and under the able management of the present proprietor, and his corps of assistants are gaining a state and even national reputation.

HENRY BARNES.—The early ancestors of this family were among the most rigid dissenters, or non-conformists of England, and several of them suffered martyrdom for their adherence to their faith, notably among whom was Dr. Barnes, of ————, England, who was burned at the stake. Several members of this family were among the first Puritan fathers who settled at Plymouth, Massachusetts. Richard Barnes was born in England, and while yet a young man migrated to Massachusetts, and participated in all the trials and labors incident to the establishment and improvement of the colony of Massachusetts Bay. In the year 1636, he enlisted in a company of Massachusetts volunteers, who assisted their brethren in Connecticut in driving the warlike and treacherous Pequods from the Mystic river. Like many of his comrades in arms, he was attracted by the beauty and fertility of the Connecticut valley, and resolved to make it his future home. Accordingly, in the year 1638 or 1639, he removed his family from Massachusetts and settled on a part of the site of the city of New Haven. His occupation was that of farmer. He raised a large family of children, attained a ripe old age, and lived to see a considerable portion of the land from which he had removed the pristine forests, covered with substantially built houses, forming the capital city of the colony, and himself one of its most wealthy citizens. His son, Gilbert Barnes, was born in Massachusetts, A. D. 1636. When Gilbert was but a child of two or three years of age, his father removed from Massachusetts and settled on the land where New Haven is built. His youthful years were spent upon his father's farm, but when he attained his majority he engaged in merchandising, in which he was very successful, until the loss of a vessel and its cargo at sea compelled him to resume his early occupation, that of farming. He raised a family of seven sons and three daughters. He at all times took an active part in the struggles of the colony of Connecticut against the usurpations of the vassals of the mother country. His son, Stephen Barnes, was born in New Haven, A. D. 1677. He did not manifest much of the sturdy and active energy that characterized his father and grandfather. He led a quiet life, diligently following his occupation, that of a weaver, in one of the factories which, even at that early day, had sprung up in his native city. He had two sons and two daughters. His son, Timothy Barnes, was born in New Haven, A. D. 1700. He learned the trade of weaver, but subsequently left his native city and settled on a tract of land on the Connecticut river, thirteen miles below New Haven. He raised four sons and three daughters. Names of sons, Timothy, Stephen, Israel and Michael; names of daughters, Prudence, Faith and Hope. His son, Stephen Barnes, was born A. D. 1736, on the farm on the Connecticut river. He served three months in the provincial militia at the first outbreak of the war with England; then three years as a volunteer, after which he came home and recruited a company and remained at its head until the close of the Revolutionary war. He married Miss Ezudia Kellogg. In 1787, he left Connecticut and settled in Northampton county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in lumbering and farming. He had three sons, Joseph, Stephen Gilbert, and Timothy, and four daughters, Ruth nee Atherton, Margaret nee Prescott, Elizabeth nee Bailey, and Clara nee Jameson. At one time no less than four of his grandsons were members of the Pennsylvania legislature at the same session. His son, Jos. Barnes, was born on the farm on the Connecticut river June 3, 1777. His father removed to Northampton county, Pa, when he was ten years of age. He learned the millwright trade, and in 1799, when he was twenty-two years of age, he started for the Connecticut reservation in Ohio. He traveled on foot until he reached the Conemaugh river, at a point some two miles below where Blairsville now stands. He had crossed the mountains on a new road, called the Frankstown road. This was the direct route from the central and northeastern part of Pennsylvania to Pittsburgh and the West, and also from Connecticut to her reservation in Ohio. He had seen an immense amount of immigrant travel on this road, and when he came to the Conemaugh river and saw that the only way for all this travel to cross this river was to ford it, with thorough Yankee foresight, he concluded that there would be a fortune for the man who would start a ferry at this point. He secured the titles for tracts of land on both sides of the river, and extending for over half a mile both up and down the stream from the point where the road crossed the river. Having no money to pay for his land, he took a contract for erecting a mill, and secured the necessary funds. By the time the autumn rains set in and rendered it impossible for teams to ford the river, he had his mill built, a flat on the river, and a new road made to render it easy for teams to reach his ferry. His hopes were more than realized, and for months he had the pleasure of ferrying from twenty to forty teams per day, at the low price of $1 for each span of horses. During the first year of his sojourn in this section of the state he formed the acquaintance of Simon Beck, a native of Switzerland, a man of rare mechanical ingenuity, and of considerable literary attainments, and on the 3d day of April, 1801, he married Mr. Beck's daughter Barbara. Miss Beck was born April 15, 1781. He continued running his ferry, keeping a hotel, opening up his farms, running a sawmill and a flouring mill that he had built for himself, as well as building flatboats and contracting for running iron, salt, &c., to Pittsburgh, and other points, for at that time all the iron and salt used west of the Allegheny mountains were hauled in wagons across the mountains to the Conemaugh river and from thence transported in boats to Pittsburgh and elsewhere. He was one of the managers of the "Dennistown and Conemaugh turnpike," and for some years was superintendent of a division. In 1816, he removed to the Indiana side and kept the "Conemaugh Inn and Ferry," which had hitherto been called "Williams' ford," or "Williamsport" or ferry. On the Westmoreland side, it was called Barnes' ford or ferry. He died at Sharpsburg, Allegheny county, in 1855, at the age of seventy-eight. His first wife, Barbara, married in 1801, died in Westmoreland county in 1839, at the age of fifty-seven, His second wife, whom he married in 1840, was Mrs. Elizabeth Leer, after whose decease he married for a third wife Mrs. Clarissa Griswold. His children were: Henry, b. in 1802, m. in 1827 to Mary Chapman, daughter of Francis Chapman, of Green township; William, d.; Stephen, d., a missionary in Africa; John B., m., at one time attorney general of the republic of Texas; Elizabeth, m. to John Davis, d.; Simon P., d., served in the Texan war, as well as John B.; and David, m. to a Miss Coleman. Henry learned the millwright trade with his father, who had erected many mills. He is a general machinist, and has made over one hundred and fifty inventions and improvements, among them being a saw stretcher, a propeller for boats, water wheels, water regulator for sawmills, &c. His children were: Joseph F., m. to Mary McClaran; Sarah J., m. to J. H. Haughton; Barbara E., d.; Stephen A., m. to Carrie C. George; Mary Lucinda, missionary among the Indians, Ottoe agency, Nebraska; John C., d., m. to Louisa Logan; Phebe A.; and Lydia E., m. to John H. Martin.

J. P. LINTNER.—Our subject is a grandson of Conrad Lintner, intermarried with Margaretta Nicholson, who came from Mifflin county to this county and for many years kept a tavern near the point now known as "Smith's Station." It was on the old Frankstown road, then the great thoroughfare to the east. David, a son of Conrad, settled on a farm on old Frankstown road, near present Smith's station, on part now owned by his son, our subject. The land was called "Walnut Ridge," and was surveyed by Moses Stewart, April 3d, 1769, and warrant issued March 20, 1788. It was first settled by a Stewart, but Mr, Lintner made first improvement on part bought by him. The children of David, by his first wife, were: Margaret, d.; Elizabeth M., d.; by second wife: John; Martha, d., m. to Alex. Wilson; William, m. to Agnes Scott; by third wife: J. Porter, our subject, m. to Violet Turner; and Matilda J., m. to J. C. Moorhead. Our subject served in the late war as sergeant in company B, 56th Pennsylvania volunteers and was severely wounded at second battle of Bull Run. Hir children are: James Edgar, Mary Ellen and Jesse Bard. There is coal and iron ore and lime on the farm. The ore is in an eighteen inch vein, and the coal a six foot vein of excellent quality, now developed, employing five miners in winter, and two in summer months; the product, 45,000 to 50,000 bushels per annum, sold at retail, and taken from the mine in wagons. The town of Blairsville is largely supplied from it.

David R. Jenkins.—Our subject is a grandson of David Jenkins and Phebe Davis, who came from Wales, and first settled at Beulah, Cambria county, and about 1820 located on "ridge" in Burrell township, where he remained till his death, and was succeeded in possession by his son John, who also remained on the homestead till his death, in 1854. The children of David were: John, b. in 1809, d. in 1854, m. to Sarah Reed, a daughter of David Reed, who settled in the township in 1825; Hannah, d.; and Amy, who was drowned. The children of John, were: Phebe, d.; David R., our subject; William, m. to Catharine Rumbach; Thomas, d.; Lemuel, m. to Anna Livingston; Harrison, d.; Mary Elizabeth, m. to John R. Berry, d.; and Samuel Edwards, d. David R., our subject, served twenty-two months in company I, 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th reserves. Thomas served in company E of same regiment, and was killed at Fredericksburg, Va., December 13th, 1863. Lemuel served full three years in company I, same regiment. The widow of John now resides at Bell's Mills with her son David R. and daughter, Mrs. Berry.

Adam Sides.—Our subject is a grandson of Adam Sides, the elder, married to Ann Stevely, who came from York county, and settled in what is now West Wheatfield township, about 1800, in part known as "Germany." Their children, most of whom settled in this county, were: Elizabeth, m. to Andrew Cline, d.; Catharine, d., m. to George Brentlinger, d.; Adam, d., m. to a Miss Glass; John, d., m. to Catharine Clinefelter, d.; Ann, d., m. to Michael Wagoner, d.; Joseph, d., m. to Eve Walbeck; Jacob, d., m. to Elizabeth Walbeck, d.; Lydia, m. to Frederick Mulburgh, d.; and Jane, m. to Peter Mikesell. The children of Joseph were: Adam, our subject, b. in 1829, m. to Nancy Daugherty; b. in the county in 1830; Catharine, m. to Joseph Duncan; Annie, m. to Thomas Wakefield; Samuel, m. to Margaret Brentlinger; Elizabeth, m. to Daniel Hendricks; Jacob; Lydia, m. to Daniel Winebrenner; Sarah Jane, m. to John Huston; Charles, d.; and Joseph, d. Adam, our subject, served in the late war in company H, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers. Samuel served in company D, 4th Pennsylvania cavalry about four years. Charles died at Point of Rocks hospital, while in six months' service. Our subject settled on present farm, on pike, about three miles from Blairsville, in 1871. His children are: Sophia, m. to Jacob Gearhart; Sarah Ellen, m. to Joseph Mack; Joseph, m. to Della Miller; Elizabeth, d.; Eva Jane, d.; John, Charles, Flora and Stuart.

Philip Altman.—Our subject is a grandson of Philip Altman and Louisa Kepple, both natives of Westmoreland county, who settled on Black-lick creek, near its confluence with the Conemaugh river, at a very early day, and were living on the banks of the creek when Capt. Andrew Sharp, in 1794, passed down the creek in his boat, with his family. The children of our subject were: James M., b. 1833, m. to Nancy Munshower; Margaret, b. 1834, m. to John Clingenberger; Mary E., b. 1836, d.; Louisa and Susannah, twins, b. 1838, the former m. to Louis Fair, of Illinois, the latter to Benjamin F. Henry, of this county; Martha Ann, d.. b. 1840, m. to Noah H. Hunt, of Ohio; Jane, b. 1842, m. to John Hile; Jacob A., d., b. 1844; Emanuel R., b. 1846, settled in Kansas; Maria Cordilla, b. 1848, yet at home; Samuel, b. 1851, m. to Olive Cribbs, and settled in Kansas; John L. S., b. 1855, d. The homestead of our subject was part of lands taken up by Wilkie's grant. James M., son of our subject, served in late war in 206th Pennsylvania volunteers, over eleven months.

James Donahey was born in 1802, in what is now Indiana county, near the site of Blairsville, and was a son of William and Mary Donahey nee Caldwell, The former was drowned in 1806. Their children were: Joseph, d., m. to Mary Cox; John, d., m. to Mary Kelly; William, d., m. to Sarah Clawson; Robert, d., m. to Susan Moorhead; Mary, d., m. to Benjamin Clawson; Nancy, d., m. to Richard Clawson; Annie, d., m. to Charles Reddin; Jane, d., m. to Robert Clawson; and James, m. first to Hannah Clawson, d., and second to Maria Bills. Our subject's children by first wife were seven in number, three of whom are living: Mary, m. to Hugh Rager; Richard, m. to Nancy Duffy; and William J., m. to Margaret Davis. By his second wife, his children were: Evaline, d., m. to John Sarver; Electra A., m. to Jacob Snyder; Hannah A., m. to John Forsha; James M., m. to Sarah Livingston; Emma, m. to Andrew P. Baker; McLure, m. to Savannah Rhodes; Frank, m. to Lucinda Getty; Margaret E.; and Eliza, m. to Nichol Bennett. He settled about 1829, on the farm now occupied by him.

McConnel Moore was born in 1837, in Butler county, and was a son of Hugh and Fannie Moore nee Shryock. Their children were; John S., d., m. to Elizabeth Gibson; William, d., m. to Elizabeth Conrad; James, m. to Eliza Henry; Thomas H., m. to Nancy McCleary; Lavinia, d., m. to Barney Hydrick; George H., m. to Annie Thomas; Sarah Jane, m. to Captain Samuel Nicholson; Margaret A., m. to John Adams; Curtis S., d.; and McConnel, m. in 1862, to Elizabeth Mildren, daughter of Jacob L. Mildren, of Armstrong county. Our subject's children were: Fannie J., Annie K. J., Edward J., Melda A., Lavinnia M., Charles, Alice; Lorry M., Frank and Ralph R. Our subject was engaged as a clerk in the Brady's Bend Iron Co's store, for several years, and was inspector of one for six years. In 1873, he located in Black Lick, as manager and superintendent of the Black Lick Manufacturing Co.'s store and works.

Peter Barron, our subject, is a son of Nicholas Barron, of Somerset county, Pa., who married Fannie Barclay, of same county, and settled in 1830, in Black Lick township. The issue of the above marriage were: Sarah, d., m. to George Howard; Rebecca, m. to Isaac Howard; Jacob, m. first to Sarah Willis, d., and second time name not known; Peter, our subject, b. in 1824, m. to Elizabeth Hendrickson, b. in 1830; Nicholas, m. to Mary Barclay; Catharine, m. to Joseph Barclay; and Emma Jane. All except Jacob, located in this county. The children of our subject were: Elmira, m. to Alexader Lyon; James; Margaret J., d.; Marshall M.; Ida, d.; Minta, d.; and Albert. Our subject settled in Black Lick township, in 1830, and about twelve years ago, located on present farm, one mile from Bell's mills—the "McCrea farm," This farm was settled by the McCrea's, when the Indians were still troublesome. They were once driven off by the aborigines, and remained away for some years.

David Berry, first lieutenant company I, 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th reserves. Our subject was born in Blair county, Pennsylvania, in 1819, and married Olivia Shepherd, born in Pittsburgh in 1824. He settled in this county, at Blairsville, in 1840, and one year later, moved to Bell's mills, in Burrell township. His father, John Berry, d., was married to Catharine Karns, d., and also settled at Blairsville in 1840; of their children, none except our subject ever located in this county. Our subject is a blacksmith by trade, and has a residence and shop in the village at Bell's mills, and a farm on the ridge one mile from the same point. The farm was first improved by a Mr. Waddle. It is said other early settlers objected to the location selected as it spoiled a good hunting ground. Our subject enlisted in the late war, in company I, 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th reserves, and was commissioned second lieutenant, and during his service was promoted to first lieutenant. His children were: John R., d., b. in 1844, who also served in the late war about three months, m. to Mary Jenkins; Robert Newton, d., b. in 1845; David A., d.; James M., d.; Freeland, d.; Frank, b. in 1850, went west; Theodore, b. in 1853, went west; Elizabeth, b. in 1855, m. to Philip Sullinger; Arabella J., b. in 1856, m. to Adam Dunnire; Mary Matilda, b. in 1857; Annie L., b. in 1859; Emma K., b. in 1860; Olivia B., b. in 1865. Messrs. Sullinger and Dunnire both located in this county.

Isaac Earhart.—Our subject is a son of William Earhart, d., and was born in Conemaugh township in 1829, and in 1862, married M. E. Gordon, b. in Black-lick township in 1844, a daughter of James Gordon, d. After marriage he settled in Black-lick township, and in 1868, having, in company with his brother Sam'l, bought the Bell's mill property, moved to it, where he now resides. The firm is now Earhart & Dickson.

(See sketch of Bell's mills.) The children of our subject were: Mary Louisa, d.; John G.; William Cummings, d.; Ella Todd; Margaret Alice; and Charles A.

E. J. MILDREN, son of Jacob and Jane Mildren nee Jennings was born in Cornwall, England, March 11th, 1838. His parents migrated to the United States when he was ten years of age, and settled at Brady's bend, Armstrong county, Pa. His advantages for obtaining an education were limited. He worked at farming for the most of the time until he was twenty-one. At the age of twenty-three, he went to Chattanooga, Tenn., and engaged with the Tennessee Iron Company, and was placed in charge of the mines and coke yard. He remained with that company until the breaking out of the war, and then came to Johnstown, Pa., and engaged with the Cambria Iron Co.," in mining, track-laying, &c., for about one year. He then contracted for the delivering of ore for the above company, and continued in that business for some fourteen years. He also operated some in oil, in the Brady's bend and Parker district. In 1872, he purchased the "Fire-Brick works" at Black Lick Station, and has been successfully operating them up till the present time. He was married to Mary, daughter of Richard and Alice Davis, of South Wales, England, in 1860.

JAMES H. BELL, M. D., a son of John and Rebecca Bell nee Hanson, was born in Westmoreland county, in 1826. His grandparents were John and Martha Bell nee Kilcrease. They raised a large family of children, whose names were as follows: John, d.; Walter, d.; James, d.; Jane, d.; Elizabeth, d.; and Martha, d. Our subject's parents had ten children: John, James H., Samuel M., Alfred M., Margaret M., Martha K., Sarah, Elizabeth, Mary, and Aligan, d. James H. was educated in the common schools, and at the Blairsville Academy. He read medicine with Dr. J. W. Blackburn, of New Derry, Westmoreland county, and attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and Castleton Medical College, Vermont, graduating from the latter in 1852. He commenced practice at Clarksburg, Indiana county, and was there about four years. He then removed to Elder's ridge, and was there about five years. He then went to Butler county, Pa., and engaged for seven years in the general drug and medicine business. In the spring of 1868, he came to Black Lick, and engaged in the general mercantile business, where he still remains. The doctor was appointed postmaster in 1868, and still holds the office. He married Mary, daughter of G. M. and Jane Doty, of Indiana county, August 31st, 1852. His children are: Rebecca, d.; Gillis, M.; John H.; Sarah E.; James H., d.; Samuel Milton; and Alfred M.

JAMES GARDINER was born in Blair county, Pa., April 30th, 1834. His father, Robert Gardiner, served in the war of 1812, and died in 1874, aged ninety-eight years. His grandfather, Moses Gardiner, settled in the county in 1839, at Black-lick. The children of the grandparents were as follows: Jonathan H., d.; Joseph, d.; John, d.; Samuel, d.; Alexander, d.; Frederick, d.; Rebecca, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Christina, d.; and Rachel, d. The children of the parents of our subject were as follows: Joseph, John, Robert, d.; James, Charles, Ann, d.; Jane and David. The latter served in the late war as lieutenant, captain, and lieutenant colonel in the 1st Pennsylvania cavalry. John served in the Mexican war; as lieutenant in company B, 2d Pennsylvania volunteers, and captain of an independent company of rangers in Kansas in the late war; he was thirteen years in the Indian department in New Mexico, as scout, interpreter, &c. Charles served in the medical department, in the army of the Potomac. Robert died in the service in Missouri. Our subject was educated in the common schools, and was engaged in railroad contracting for a number of years. He married Hester, daughter of Joseph Cassell, of Lebanon county, Pa., in 1857, and settled in Black-lick in 1861. They have six children: William T., Philip L., Rebecca T., Kate, Hester and Sallie. He is now engaged in farming and the real estate business.

HANNIBAL ROGERS was born in Washington county, Pa., in 1861, was educated in the common schools, and came to Black-lick with his parents in 1868, and is now engaged with the "Black-lick Manufacturing Company" in their works at Black-lick.

SAMUEL L. WIGGINS, M. D., son of James and Eliza Wiggins nee Lowry, was born March 6, 1849. His grandparents were James and Mary Wiggins nee Ramsey, who settled in the county at an early date. The children of the parents were: Samuel L., Albert, and Elizabeth, now living, and four deceased, in infancy. Our subject, Samuel L., was educated in the Elderton Academy, Armstrong county, and graduated in 1868. He read medicine with Dr. Marlin, of Shelocta, about two years; attended lectures at Jefferson College, Philadelphia, and graduated in 1873. He commenced practice in Livermore, Westmoreland county, with Dr. Banks, and was there about two years. He located in Black-lick in 1875, where he is now engaged in the practice of his profession. He was married to Mary, daughter of Captain James and Amanda Shannon, of Indiana county, in 1879.

R. H. DUNCAN, son of James and Letitia Duncan nee Cook, was born in Canada, March 12, 1827. The names of parents' children were as follows: Mary J.; Thomas, d.; Charles, d.; Letitia, d.; Robert H.; William, d.; Andrew, d., and Samuel. Our subject was educated in the common schools, worked on a farm in early life, and has been engaged in railroad work for the last twenty-seven years. He settled in the county at Black-lick station in 1860, and is section foreman on the Indiana branch of the West Pennsylvania railroad. He was married to Mary, daughter of Joseph Gray, of Westmoreland county, in 1852. They have a family of ten children: Josephine, Thomas M., Mary, Andrew, John, Sarah, Letitia, Ella, Hettie, and Charles.

ALBERT M. WEIR, a son of Aaron and Sarah Weir nee Clapsaddle, was born February 9, 1856. His grandfather, George Weir, settled in the county about the year 1800, and raised a large family of children, as follows: James, d.; Aaron, d.; Jemima; Keziah; McKee, d.; Sallie, d.; John; Hugh; and Samuel, d. His father was born in Indiana county in 1804, and was married to Sarah Clapsaddle, of Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1844. They had three children: George, John C., d., and Albert M. Our subject received a common school education, was raised on a farm, and is now living at Black-lick station. He is engaged in the livery and general agency business.

JAMES WILEY.—Our subject is a son of John Wiley, d., b. in 1775, m. to Margaret Mateer, d., who came from Franklin county about 1800 and settled in Burrell township, near Black-lick creek, remained at this place till his death in 1837. He had one brother, Hugh, who also located near him, and remained till his death. The children of John and their consorts, with one exception, settled in the county, and were: Jane, d., m. to John McCracken, d.; Robert, d., m. to Jane Repine, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Sarah Wiley, d.; Margaret, d., m. to John Grant, d.; John, d., m. to Sarah Altman, d.; Susan, d., m. to William Forsha, d.; Sarah, d.; Hugh, d., m. to Rachel Forsha, d.; James, our subject, b. in 1816, m. first to Jane Patterson, of Franklin county, d. in 1869, and second to Mrs. Elizabeth Stevenson nee Fought, of same county; Elizabeth, m. to Elrod Johnston, of Westmoreland county; Mary, m. to Joseph Lindy; and Martha. Hugh served in late war over three years. One of Hugh's sons was killed in the battle at Fredericksburg, Va., December 13th, 1863. The children of our subject were: Milton M., d.; Martin Page, m. to Annie Still; Sebastian A.; and Melinda, m. to Henry Robinson. His step-daughter is Laura Stevenson. Milton M. served in 206th Pennsylvania volunteers and died at Point of Rocks hospital, December 2, 1864. John Wiley, sr., was miller at Campbell's mills in 1813, when they were burned. Our subject succeeds his father in possession of the old homestead, in Burrell township. The tract was first settled by a John McCready, date not known.

SAMUEL L. KERLIN was born in 1857, in Louisville, Ky., and was a son of Henry T. and Margaret Kerlin nee Carbis, a daughter of Captain Samuel and Mary A. Carbis nee Logan. Captain Carbis, since 1836, has been steamboating on the Mississippi and western waters. Henry T. Kerlin was a pilot between Cincinnati and St. Louis. He died in 1858, at the age of twenty-two, and his wife in 1872, at the age of thirty-one. The latter's second husband was John Joyce. Henry T.'s only child was our subject and he was a second pilot on the western waters. In 1877 he located on a farm, in Burrell township, where he is also engaged in dealing in country produce.

BENJAMIN ORR.—Our subject was a native of Ireland, who migrated to this country in 1801, and was married to Mary Henderson, now deceased, also a native of Ireland. Came from Huntingdon county to this county in 1816, and settled in Burrell township, on pike, two miles from Blairsville, on lands taken up by the Wilkies, upon which there was a cabin built by a Mr. Reed, but the land was patented by Mr. Orr. His son Samuel Orr, born on the farm in 1816, the only child now living, remains on the homestead, and he also has but one child living—his daughter Mary Lida, who also remains with him at this time (1880).

Murders on Pike.—A man named Campbell was killed by a sheriff's possee who went to remove him from the house. He fired on the men and the fire was returned, killing him. The house was near present residence of Rev. Dr. Hill. John Grant was killed by Henry Palmer in a drunken fight about political matters. Daniel Smith was stabbed by William Brown in a drunken quarrel. These last two occurred at or near an old tavern on the pike, on Lintner farm.

Samuel Earhart, our subject is a son of Anthony Earhart, jr., the son of Anthony Earhart, sr., an early settler in Conemaugh township. Anthony, jr., the father of our subject was born in Westmoreland county, in 1799, and died in this county, in 1874, having located in Burrell township, in 1830, on farm first settled by James McGure, in 1815. Anthony married Mary McGuire, and both are now deceased. Their children were: Samuel, our subject, b. in the county in 1829, m. to Martha Johnson, b. in Westmoreland county, in 1836; and Sarah, m. to John B. Moorhead, who settled in Iowa. Our subject is the only member of the family now living in the county, and resides on part of the homestead of his father. He served in the late war in detachment of unassigned men, accounted for by 101st Pennsylvania volunteers, whose duty was guard of camp, &c., in vicinity of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Daniel Smith, our subject, came from Carlisle, Cumberland county, Pa., to this county, at an early day, and settled on the tract, now the site of Black Lick Station. He was of German descent, and was married, first to a Miss Kiskaddew, and second to a Miss Copely. His parents came also, but our subject was the settler. He was a blacksmith by trade, and a man, who in that day, was considered wealthy, yet we do not learn that his possessions exceeded a thousand dollars. Of his children and their consorts, Joseph, Robert, Daniel, Elizabeth, Jane, and Harriet, settled in this county. Robert purchased part of the Moses Stewart tract, now Smith Station, about 1825, and his sons Daniel and Robert, still occupy it.

J. McKinnie Turner, our subject, is the proprietor of Turner coal mine, on line of Indiana Branch R. R., two miles north of Blairsville. The annual product of these mines is about 150,000 bushels of excellent quality of bitumnious coal. Mr. Turner's business is exclusively wholesale, the coal all being shipped by railroad, Indiana receiving largely of its supply from this mine. Our subject is of the family of James Turner, d., whose children were: Elizabeth, m. first to Samuel McCora, d., of Indiana county, and second to Dr. Turner, of Alledo, Illinois; Joseph G., m to Alice Megrew; was missionary to Choctaw Indians, then to Indians in Michigan, and now a resident of this county; Mary, m. to R. G. Laughlin, M. D., d., of Indiana county; J. McKinnie, our subject, m. to Matilda C. Lintner, Margaret P., m. to Harman Eveland, of Ohio; Catharine, m. to John Wakefield, of Illinois; William, settled in Illinois, m. to Emma Hill, of Ohio; M. Porter, settled in Ohio, m. to Sarah Lowe of Rhode Island; Eleanor, m. to Wm. P. Ramsey, settled in Kansas; Lydia J., m. to Theodore Baughan, settled in the State of Indiana; Richard B., settled in Ohio, m. to Maggie Buckingham; and Violet L., m. to J. P. Lintner, of Indiana Co. The farm of our subject has evident marks of Indian camps and graves. Skull bones have been found in this and his Smith farm, adjoining.

Washington Butler, our subject, is a son of James Butler, d., b. in Crawford county, Pa., who married Martha Clark, d., daughter of Geo. Clark, a pioneer, on Black Lick, in the neighborhood of ahe point, afterwards known as 'Black Lick furnace.' The father of James was an old Revolutionary soldier, and settled in Crawford county. James and wife settled on Black Lick creek, near the "furnace," in 1803 or 1804. They had eight children: William, m. to Mary Sena, and settled in Cambria county; Caleb, m. to Catharine Carnahan, and settled in Johnstown, Pa.; Washington, our subject, b. in 1830, m. to Caroline Palmer, b. in county in 1832, and settled in the county, and located on present farm, threee miles from Blairsville, on the pike, in 1870; Jesse, m. to Mary Oakes, and settled in Westmoreland county, Pa.; Ellen, m. to John Spires, d., who settled in this county; Ruth, d., m. to Samuel Pershing, settled in Kansas; Solomon, d.; Abner, d. Mrs. Sena, the mother of the wife of William, lived in Cambria county, Pa., and died at the age of one hundred and three years. Our subject served in late war, in a Mississippi squadron, naval service, about ten months, in Mound City. His children are: Sarah, Henry, Ida, Ella, George and Ellzora.

Alexander McCune was born in Westmoreland county in 1832, and was the son of John and Ann McCune nee McIntyre. The latter's children were! John; James; Mary, m. to John Getty; Elizabeth, m. to Dr. C. McCune; George, and Alexander. The latter learned the wagon-maker's trade, and worked at it for some fifteen years. He purchased the farm he now owns in 1878, and is engaged in farming and sheep growing. He enlisted in company K, 1st Kansas volunteers, in the late war. His brother George was in the same company, and was killed by accident before the battle of Springfield. A Mr. McCrea made the first settlement on Mr. Cune's farm.

CHERRY HILL TOWNSHIP

Was organized from Green and Brush Valley, in 1854, and derived its name from the "Cherry Hill Manor," surveyed to the Penns. In the assessment lists of Wheatfield and Green are presented the names of its first settlers, and in the family records are given as much individual matter as could be ascertained.

GREENVILLE, PENN RUN P. O.

The first building on the site of the village was the dwelling house of William Evans. He laid out the lots in 1838, and called the embryo village "Greenville," for the township of Green, in which it was then situated. The second house was the "mud building," or "clay house" of David Davis, situated on the lot west of the Mansion House. William Evans and Samuel Wiggins erected the first salesroom. This was situated near the site of J. C. Rugh & Bro.'s building, and here they inaugurated the first store of the village. The second mercantile establishment was managed and owned by Samuel and Andrew Wiggins.

DIAMONDVILLE, MITCHELL'S MILLS P. O.

The tract upon which the village is situated contained four hundred acres, and was purchased by Dr. Robert Mitchell, because it was the "nearest pine tract to Pittsburgh." Thos. Barr pointed out the timber land to the Doctor about 1822. The first improvement was made by Dr. Robert Mitchell in 1823. He and A. T. Moorhead, sen., erected a saw and grist mill sometime during the season of 1824. Mr. Moorhead was the first miller, and was succeeded by Thomas Lockard. The grist mill was built of logs, 20x30, two stories in height, had one run of country stone, and used a "rye fly," something like a tub wheel. It was enlarged in 1825, and was then supplied with an undershot wheel, and two run of stone. The second mill was erected by Dr. Mitchell, in 1838. It was a two-story frame building, 50x50, had two setts of burrs, and an overshot wheel, twelve feet in diameter.

The village was called, by Doctor Mitchell, "Diamondville," because the property was the diamond, or had the greatest value, of all the pine tracts in this section. The first birth was that of Joseph McCloud Moorhead in 1825. He was a son of A. T. Moorhead, sen., and is now a practicing physician in Missouri.

HUSTONVILLE.

The commencement of this village was the building, in 1850, of a smith shop and house for the smith by Robert Huston, in 1850. Other mechanics moved in, and there are now eight houses, store, and postoffice, shops, &c. The first store was established by Elijah Cresswell in 1855; the present one by J. H. Elwood, in 1879. The first blacksmith was Henry Truxell, who came from Cambria county, Pa., in 1850; the present one, Mr. David Dougherty, came from Blair county, Pa., in 1858. The resident minister is Rev. John G. Conover, Baptist, a native of Montgomery county, New York. They came to this county in 1871, and settled in the village in 1875. At the time of Mr. Huston's settlement here in 1822, there was no house eastward on the road for thirty miles.

James Lydick was born in 1799, on what is now the James McGaughey farm, Cherry Hill township, and was a son of Jacob and Mary Lydick nee Stuchell (or Stuchal). Jacob was the son of John Lydick, who settled on the McGaughey tract at a very early day. He was driven away by the Indians three times, and the last time was gone seven years. He and his wife were natives of Ireland, who migrated to America with the Penns. John Lydick's children were: John, m. to Pina Rice; Jacob, m. to Mary Stuchell; Patrick, m. to Mary Gordon; James, m. to a Miss Boyles; Elizabeth; Barbara; Margaret; and Catharine. Jacob and Mary Lydick's children were: John, m. to Mary Lydick; Jacob, m. to Nancy Alexander; Abram, m. to Nancy Adams; James, m. to Rebecca Fowler, d. in 1863, at the age of sixty-seven; Christopher, m. to Catharine Stuchell; Patrick, m. to Elizabeth Evans; Mary, m. to Stephen Talkington; Catharine, m. to Samuel Lydick; Elizabeth, m. to John Lydick; and Margaret, m. to John McAnulty. All are dead save James, Patrick and Elizabeth. Our subject's children were: Mary Ann, m. to Matthew Loughery; William, m. to Margaret A. Ray; Josiah, b. on the James Lydick farm in 1832, m. to Belinda Todd; and Andrew, m. to Margaret Sleppy. Josiah's children were: Emerson Field, d.; Harry, d., and Margaret Rebecca.

FRANCIS CHAPMAN was born in county Donegal, Ireland, in 1773, and migrated to Pennsylvania in 1796. He settled near what is now Greenville, in 1804, and in 1814, on Two-lick, about ten miles below the "Diamond." He died in 1847. His wife was Jane Drummond, of County Tyrone, Ireland, who died in 1847, at the age of seventy-two. Their children were: Margaret, d., m. to John Conner; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Lydick; d.; Mary, m. to Henry Barnes; Sarah, d., m. to James Lydick, d.; Catharine, m. to S. L. Davis; John, d., m. to Sarah A. Geary; Lydia, m. to Jacob R. Buterbaugh; and Jane, d., m. to George Kneedler.

JAMES MOORHEAD was born in 1816, on the Moorhead homestead, and was a son of Samuel and Ann Moorhead nee Gibson. Samuel was a son of William Moorhead, whose father was the pioneer, Fergus Moorhead. William's children were: Samuel; Effie, m. to Thomas Reid; Martha; John; and Jane, m. to John Johnson. All except Samuel, returned to Franklin county, and the entire families, except Effie and Jane are deceased. Samuel's children were: William, m. to Elizabeth Matthews; James, m. first to Jane Bell, d., and second to Kate Gettes; Margaret, m. to William Evans, d., (sheriff); Mary, d., m. to Jno. Kirk, d.; Jane, d.; John, m. to Margaret Clark; Samuel, d. m. first to Mary Churchill, d., and second to Margaret Lapsley; George W., d.; and Miriam, m. to John Black. Samuel Moorhead, about 1816, settled on the farm now occupied by his daughter, Mrs. William Evans, for which Arthur Donaldson obtained a warrant in 1773. The farm occupied by our subject was first settled by Francis Lockhard (or Lockhart) about 1810. It is on the Kittanning trail, one mile west of Greenville. It is the site of one of the first school houses of the township. The spring was an Indian watering place, as the trail deviates from its course to the spring. The tract was surveyed to Joseph Bisphan, April 11th, 1787. Our subject's children were: Lizzie Anna, m. to Milton Johnston; Laura Bell; William Edgar; Mary; Gertrude; Maggie Jane; Harry; Charles, d.; Frank and Mabel,

WILLIAM M. MOORHAED, Insurance Agent, was married in 1876, to Sadie A. Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Martha Wilson of Centre township. His children were: W. C., and Mattie.

JAMES M. BARR was born in 1810, on the farm now owned by Rev. Thomas Stephens, Cherry Hill township, and was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Barr nee Evans. Thomas' second wife was Mrs. Catharine Coleman nee Gordon. Thomas was the son of Robert and Sarah Barr. Their children were: Mary, m. to William Frazer; Nancy, m. to Robert McDowell; Sarah, m. to Andrew Allison; Jane, m. to Robert McAmish; Catharine, m. to Thomas Donnell; and Thomas, m. to Elizabeth Evans; all of whom are deceased. Thomas was a soldier in the war of 1812. His children were: Jane, d., m. to John Hamilton; John, d., m. to Hannah Gibson, d.; Sarah, d., m. to Daniel McCormick, d.; Thomas, m. to Martha McKillip; James M., m. to Mary Lucas; Elizabeth, d., m. to Jacob Darr; Margaret, m. to Samuel Todd, d.; William, m. first to Ellen Davis, d., and second to Mahala Redmond; and Robert, M. D., m. to Cordelia Elder. James M.'s children were: Emma, Anna Mary, Myrtilla, m. to Adam Empfield; Celia Elizabeth, d.; and Harry Ashbel, d. Our subject taught one of the first schools after the passage of the free school law, in what is now Cherry Hill township.

JOHN EVANS, PIONEER.—Our subject was born in 1772, was married to Elizabeth McFarland in 1804 and soon after settled where the village of Greenville now is. He lived there till his death in 1844, when his son William succeeded him in possession of the homestead. The children of our subject were: Nancy, d., b. in 1804, m. to George Lapsley, d.; Elizabeth, d., b. in 1806, m. to Patrick Lydick; William, b. in 1808, d. in 1875, m. to Margaret Moorhead, b. in 1818, daughter of Samuel Moorhead, early settler; Jane, b. in 1811, m. to Christopher Stuchel; Mary, b. in 1814, m. to David Myers; Robert, b. in 1819, d.; John M, b. in 1817, m. to Elizabeth Mock; Rhoda, b. in 1821, d., m. to Washington Hufnagle; Martha, b. in 1824, m. to Alexander Stuchel. William was sheriff of the county one term, served in state legislature three terms; was county surveyor several years, and clerk in the land office at Harrisburg for ten years preceeding his death. His widow and unmarried childred now live on the Samuel Moorhead homestead, near Two-lick creek, settled by him in 1818. The land was surveyed to Arthur Donaldson November, 1773. The children of William Evans were: Angeline, b. 1838, m. 1861, to John Sebring, d.; Mary Elizabeth, b. 1840, m. 1866, to Andrew W. Evans; James, b. 1842, d. same year; Louisa, b. 1843, m. to N. W. Stewart; Albert R., b. 1845; William G., b. 1874, d. same year; Miriam, b. 1850; Alonzo, b. 1852, d. 1853; Helen, b. 1854, m, 1876 to Christ Rugh; Ida J., b. 1857; John M., b. 1847. A. W. Evans, John Sebring and N. W. Stewart all served in late war, and Sebring was killed at Cold Harbor, Virginia.

W. H. COLEMAN was born in 1815, on the "Manor" in what is now Cherry Hill township, and was a son of Henry and Catharine Coleman nee Gordon. The latter was a daughter of Robert Gordon, an early settler of what is now Cherry Hill township, and a Revolutionary soldier. Henry Coleman was a son of John and Elizabeth Coleman. Mrs. Coleman was a Widow Evans, her maiden name being McClellan. John Coleman had been a Revolutionary soldier. He was a native of Ireland, and migrated to Bedford county. He was a shoemaker by trade, and came, accompanied by his family, to the site of the borough of Indiana a year or two before the village was surveyed. He removed to the Manor a short time after the county seat was established. He died in 1829, at the age of one hundred and four. His wife died at an advanced age. Their children were: Henry, d. in 1819, at the age of thirty-two, m. to Catharine Gordon, d. in 1836, at the age of forty-eight; and Nancy, d., m. to John McDowell, d. Henry was among the early teachers of the county seat. Henry's children were: Jane, d., m. to Archibald Weir, d.; John W., d., m. to Lydia McBroom; Robert G., d., m. to Elizabeth Spires; Wm. H., m. to Susannah Moorhead, and Elizabeth, d. William H.'s children were: W. H. H., m. to Louisa Criswell; T. M., m. first to Elizabeth Dunmoody, d., and second to Elizabeth Harrison; Theodore; Alexander, killed by lightning, July 8th, 1879; Albert, m. to Margaret Lucas; Catharine; and Robert L., d. W. H. H. was in company B, 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps for three years. T. M. was in the same company for nearly two years, and was wounded at South Mountain. John E., for nine months, was in the same war. Our subject has resided in Indiana borough since 1837, and has been known as a carpenter and contractor.

CHRISTOPHER LONG, SEN.—The Long family, now an extensive connection in the county, we trace to Christopher Long, and Elizabeth his wife, parents of: William, m. to Jane Pittmann, d.; John, d., m. to Rachel Bagley, d.; Jacob, d., m. to Elizabeth Gordon, d.; David, d., m. in the West; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Lockard, d.; Ann, d.; Susan, d., m. to Samuel Bagley, d.; all of whom settled in this county about 1820 or 1821. After the death of his wife, Elizabeth, Christopher was again married, to Margaret Lockard, and had eight children: Samuel, Thomas, Isaac, d.; Jane, d.; Ellen, Margaret, James, and Jesse; all of whom; except James and Jesse, settled in Bedford and Cambria counties. Of the first family of children, William was born in Bedford county in 1791, still survives, m. first to Jane Pittman, of Fulton county, Pa., by whom he had thirteen children, and second to Mrs. Mary Stelser nee Dick. He settled at or near the present village of Greenville in 1820 or 1821, where he remained five or six years, and then moved within one and one-half miles of Diamondville, where he has lived since. His children were: John, m. to Sarah E. McGaughey; Samuel, d.; Christopher, our subject, b. in 1817, m. to Elizabeth Long (cousin); Frances, d., m. to Mary Wymer; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Stout, and settled in the west; Mary, m. to Christopher Dick, settled in Ohio; Jacob, m. first to Hannah Engle, d, and second to Mrs. Elizabeth Long nee Stelser; William, d., m. to Elizabeth Stelser; Benjamin, m. to Susan Burnham, d.;

Jeremiah, m. to Catharine Fetterman; Sarah Ann, m. to Daniel Engle; Lucinda, d.; Fannie, m. to Adam Myers. We know of fifty-three granchildren of William Long still living, and there may be more.

Christopher Long, Jr.—Our subject is a son of Wm. Long., a living pioneer of Cherry Hill township, whose grandchildren and great-grandchildren are being reared near him. Christopher was born in 1817, and was married to Elizabeth Long, his cousin. Their children were: Hezekiah, M. D., m. to Mary Jordan, settled in Illinois; W. Templeton, m. to Lavinia Burnham, settled in county; Samantha, m. to Ellis Buterbaugh; Lemuel L., settled in Illinois, and Emma, at home. W. Templeton Long settled on Two-lick, near "Shawanee bottoms" in 1886. He married to Lavinia Burnham, daughter of Charles Burnham, of Clarion county, Pa., a soldier in the war of 1812. Their children are: Gertie, Lizzie, and Blanche.

George Spalding was born in Scotland in 1809, and was a son of John Spalding, who removed to the vicinity of Economy, Beaver county, in 1817. Our subject taught school in both Westmoreland and Indiana counties. He was married in the former county to Sarah Paul, who died at the age of sixty-one. After his marriage, he removed to Indiana county, locating in Diamondville in 1843, where he died in 1855. He was a well known anti-slavery man, and an earnest friend of the "underground railroad." His children were: Mary E., m. to M. Y. Elder; John P.; Joanna; Samuel P., d.; Sarah J., m. to Dr. William D. Henderson, and Emma C., d.

James C. and Samuel Rugh were sons of Michael Rugh, who was a son of Christian Rugh, the pioneer, who settled on what is now Rugh station, I. B. R. R., in the latter part of the last century. Michael Rugh's children were: Jas. C., m. to Mary Truby; Samuel, m. first to Margaret Truby, d., and second to Nancy E. Stuchell; Christian, m. to Helen Evans, and Susan, d. Samuel was in company E, 115th Illinois volunteers for three years. James C.'s children were: Agnes, Elizabeth, James, John, Truby, d.; and Nancy, d. Samuel's children were: William N., Edgar H., and Samuel T.

Andrew Wiggins was born in 1814, on the farm now occupied by William Ackeson, White township, and was a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Wiggins nee Lytle. The former was a son of Samuel and Margaret Wiggins. Samuel Wiggins settled on the above named land in the latter part of the last century. (See Wiggins' sketch, White township.) Our subject was married first to Sarah R. Houston, d., and second to Margaret Dick. His children were: Martha J., m. to G. W. Findley; Caroline H., m. to W. H. Adams; and R. L., m. to Mary Adams. Our subject has been a justice of the peace for twenty-eight years. He was the first postmaster in Greenville, the office being established in 1839. He has served as township clerk and auditor, and in other capacities.

Archy Fowler.—The first settler of the Fowler family in the county, was William, the grandfather of our subject, who settled in 1806 on lands adjoining the "Manor," and was married to Rebecca Gibson. He came from Cumberland county. He and his wife are dead. Their children were: Ann, d., m. to Matthias Bartlebaugh, d.; Rebecca, d., m. to James Lydick; Margaret, d., m. to Christopher Lydick; Archibald, father of our subject, b. in 1807, m. to Mary McBeth; Rachel, d., m. to William Hise, d.; Agnes, d., m. to Giles Stephens; William, d., whose descendants live on the old homestead, m. to Elizabeth Coy; and Susanna, d. The present homestead of Archibald, was settled first by Wm. Frazier, in 1806, and is midway from Greenville to Diamondville. The children of Archibald were: William, d.; Sarah, m. to John Kirk, d.; Rebecca, m. to Hugh McMullen; James, m. to Elizabeth Houston; William, d. Libby prison during the late war; Margaret, m. to John Beringer; Archy, our subject, m. to Belle Lytle; and John. The children of our subject were: Clarence, d.; and Elder.

John O'Neal.—The parents of our subject were: Edward O'Neal, b. in 1800, and reared in Centre county, Pa., and his wife, Catharine Kneedler, b. in Huntingdon county, Pa., December 14, 1803. They settled in this county about 1834 near Shelocta, and about 1836, moved to Diamondville. Mr. O., d. in 1870. Their children were: James, killed at the battle of the Wilderness, Va., was in the 40th P. V. 11th reserves; John, b. 1836; our subject, m. to Nancy Walker; Eliza, m. to George Flemming; Nelson, m. to Mary Rice; Edward, m. first to Margaret Moorhead, d., and second to Jane Lydick. Our subject is interested in the lumber business, and has a saw mill near the Shawanee bottoms, in Green township. His children are: Belle, James A., Edward, Maggie C., John W., and Eliza J. Edward O'Neal, sr., had two brothers, Daniel and James, who settled in Franklin county, Pa.; and one, Charles, settled in Centre county, Pa. The wife of our subject, Nancy Walker, is a granddaughter of Benjamin Walker, a frontier scout in the Indian wars.

John Martin.—Our subject was born in county Donegal, Ireland, and migrated in 1800. He married Mary Campbell, of Westmoreland county, and settled in Cherry Hill township, in the spring of 1814, on the farm now owned by W. J. Hadden. He died in 1874, in his ninety-fifth year. His children were: Mary; Robert, b. in Westmoreland county, in 1810, d. in 1879—he was an elder in Harmony church for forty years, was. m. to Margaret Wiggins; John, Esq., m. first to Sarah McDowell. d., and second to Eliza Hamilton; David, m, to Nancy Hadden; James, m. first to Mary Ralston, d., and second to Ann E. Park; William, m. to Martha McCauley; Sarah, m. to Gawin Hadden; Isabella, d.; George, killed at Spottsylvania, Va., member of the 12th Pennsylvania R. V. C.; Nancy, m. to Jonathan Dickey; and Elizabeth, m. to Thomas McDowell. All except Nancy, settled in this county. Robert had two sons in the late war: John, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers, died at Fortress Monroe, Va., and Thomas, died in the hospital of 67th Pennsylvania volunteers. Sarah had one son, John M. Hadden, in 67th Pennsylvania volunteers, in the late war. David and John were pioneer settlers in the south end of Green township, locating in the woods near the Cambria county line, in 1838, and Kimmel postoffice was established at the residence of the latter, in 1865.

William Stephens.—As early as 1805 Shadrach Stephens, a brother of our subject, settled on Yellow creek, on land now owned by Peter Coy. He was a millwright by trade. Some of his descendents still live in Green township. In 1813 he was followed by his brother, our subject, who settled on the "Manor," on lands, part of which are still occupied by Rev. Thomas W. Stephens, his son. The lands were settled by Wm. Johnston in 1805. He was a blacksmith, and carried on a shop for several years, using coal packed on horseback from the mines to the shop; most of it was carried five miles. Early settlers frequently carried coal along with them when they went to the shop to get work done. His purchase included three hundred acres, upon which he lived till his death, in 1849. About the year 1820, he built a saw mill on Yellow creek, on site of present mill of Peter Coy. In going back and forth to the mill he carried his rifle and by twenty-one shots killed nineteen deer. His sons Thomas W. and Giles, both of whom are yet living, will remember going to school in buckskin pants and bear-skin caps, and having no shoes till they were young men. Our subject and his wife, Nancy Weston, were both born in Huntingdon county, and the three eldest children were born in same county. Their issue were: Rev. Thomas W., b. in 1808, m. first to Ann Eliza Newport, d., and second to Mary Rank, b. in county in 1836; Mary, d., m. to Robert Dunwoody, d.; Giles, b. in 1813, m. first to Agnes Fowler, d., and second to Catharine Craig; Elizabeth, d., m. to Joseph D. Gibson, d.; Abraham, d., m. to Hannah Greer; Tipton, d., m. to Eliza Lockard; John, d., m. to Letitia O'Neal, d.; Rebecca, d.; and Rachel, m. to John Engle. All the family with their consorts settled in this county. Thomas W. was ordained to the ministry in Methodist Protestant church in 1839, but dissolved his connection with that body in 1846, then uniting with the Wesleyan Methodist church, which he has served since that time. He is now seventy-two years old, and active, superintending his own farm, preaching frequently, and performing the general duties of a minister in his own neighborhood; his youngest child is but an infant. His children by first wife were: Virginia, d.; Indiana, d.; Newport, d., m. to Clara Churchill; Fremont, m. to Ann Barber; by second wife: Thomas W., jr.; Samuel, d.; Maria, George, Dan, Zenas, and Sarah Elizabeth, infant. Giles and his sons own several farms in the township, and his own present homestead is near Harmony Church. His former one, now occupied by his son, is the same as settled by Robert McKesson before 1813, for which a warrant was issued to Peter Cress in 1773, and was located as six miles from "Two-licks." The children of Giles, ten of whom are still at home with him, were: by first wife, James, m. to Mary Lovelace; William, m. first to Martha Lapley, d., and second to Elizabeth Moorhead; Nancy, m. to Wm. J. Hadden; David, m. to Belle Dixon; Rebecca, d.; Ann Eliza, d.; Melinda; G. Wesley; Archibald, d.; Thomas, d.; by second wife: Ida, Benjamin, Charles, Laura, Harry, Edward, Milligan Wolf, and Blanche.

James served in the 40th Pennsylvania volunteers, 11th reserves, and was wounded.

ARCHIBALD STEWART.—Our subject is the third of the name in the line of descent in the county, the record of whom is: Archibald Stewart, the eldest, came from Ireland to this country to buy flax and flaxseed, but the Revolutionary war commencing prevented him carrying out his design, and he enlisted in the army. After the war he settled in Bucks county, and married Nellie Allison, of the Centre county Allisons. He afterwards settled in Centre township, Indiana county, moving to Cherry Hill township, in 1857 or 1858. His children were: John, d., m. in Centre county, and settled in this county, afterwards; Archibald, d., m. to Jane Cummins, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Susan Cummins; Jane, d.; Mary, still living, 1880; and Nellie, d. Of these, Archibald, the father of our subject, was born in Centre county, July 16th, 1796, and his wife, Jane Cummins, born in this county, Sept. 1st, 1802. Their children were: John C., b. May 5th, 1823, d.; Archibald, our subject, b. Dec. 5th. 1824, m. to Elizabeth Johnston, who d. in 1854; William, b. Dec. 22d, 1826, d. in California, in 1851; Samuel T., b. 1829, d.; Frank, b. 1830, m. to Augusta Kirk, settled in the county; Margaret E., b. 1833, m. to Emanuel Grumbling, settled in the county; David M., b. 1835, is in California; James, b. 1838, settled in Arizona; Jane, b. 1842, m. to Wm. H. Guthrie; Elizabeth, b. 1843, d. Our subject has but one son, Archy, and daughter, Marinda. Thus the name is continued to the fourth generation. This farm is supposed to have been settled first by the Morgans.

JOHN MCKENDRICK.—The father of our subject, Samuel McKendrick, was born in Ireland, and migrated to Philadelphia, and from thence to this county, in 1828, and settled on "clay pike," near Lapsley tavern. He married Jane McBeth, also a native of Ireland. He died in 1835, but his wife lived till 1877, when she died at the age of eighty-six. Their children were: John, our subject, b. in Philadelphia, in 1826, m. first to Amanda Gibson, d., second to Anna Douthett, d., and third to Emma Short; James, settled in Philadelphia; Martha, m. to Allison Gibson, settled in the county; Mary, m. to James Nickle, settled in the county. The children of our subject by his first wife, were: Eliza J. m. to George Ainsley; Mary Ann, and James H., both in Philadelphia; William, a teacher; Margaret; John A.; Joseph; Durill; Rosana; Amanda; and by second wife, Joseph D. Samuel McKendrick, settled on the farm now owned by our subject, in 1839. It was surveyed as vacant land in 1795, by John Evans, for James Simpson, and contains 400 acres. It is near Two-lick creek, on the Indian path diverging from the Kittanning trail, at the Brown farm—was a wild place in 1839, there being only a cabin built by the Lockard's, and a small clearing. A panther killed McKendrick's dog, after they came on the place.

WILLIAM HOWE.—Our subject is a son of Samuel Howe, an early settler in Black Lick township, who married Elizabeth Smith, and afterwards settled in Cherry Hill township, near the present "new state road." His children were: William, our subject, b. in 1815, m. to Mary Ann Lewis, b. in Bedford county, in 1816; Eliza, d.; Daniel, m. to a Miss Widdewson and settled in Colorado; John, m. to Susanna Lewis and went to Texas; Catharine, d., m. to Wm. Fair; Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Davis, settled in Arizona territory; Mary Jane, m. to Jacob Wyrock, settled in Montana territory; Margaret, d.; Joseph, m. to Mary Davis, and settled in Colorado territory. The children of our subject are: Alexander C., m. to Harriet Harold, settled in Kansas; Elizabeth, m. to Harrison Mock; James, m. to Margaret Stahl; Silas D., m. to Mary Harold; Joanna, m. to Scott McCuHough, settled in Colorado; Dilla; and Jennie, m. to William A. Groft. Alexander C., served in the late war, in compana A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers.

HUGH CAMERON, SR.—Our subject and Phebe his wife were natives of Scotland, migrated to this country and settled at Denniston's town, Westmoreland county, in 1779, and removed to this county about 1789, and settled on farm now subdivided. The first improvement was on part since known as Davis' farm, two miles from point afterwards known as Black-lick furnace. It is not known that any of Mrs. Cameron's relatives ever came to this country. Their children were: Daniel, who went west and was never heard from; John, last heard from in state of Indiana; Findley, d., m. first to Ruth Carney, d., second to Nancy Killen, d., and third to Mattie Findley; Hugh, d., m. first to Nancy Makins, d., and second to Elizabeth Pershing, d., Annie, d., m. to John Carney, d.; Phebe, d., m. to Jacob Craig, d.; and one daughter, m. to Solomon Longstreth, went west and was never heard from. Findley and Hugh settled in this county. Hugh served in war of 1812. Findley remained on old homestead till his death, and Hugh also remained some years and afterwards settled near Strongstown. Nearly all the children of both these men settled in this county. The children of Hugh by first wife were: John, m. to Eliza Wilson; Findley, d., m. to Pernilla Neff; by second wife: Hugh, b. in 1818, m. to Miriam Graham; Frederick, b. in 1822, m. to Elizabeth Grow; Eliza, d., m. first to John Neff, d., and second to David Orner; Daniel, m. first to Margaret Bartlebaugh, d., second to Mrs. Dresilla Bartlebaugh nee Cribbs, d., and third to Mrs. Cordella Repine nee Neal; Jacob, m. to Mrs. Eleanor Grow nee Williams; William, b. 1831, m. to Catharine Lapsley, b. 1832; Joseph, m. to Nancy Bartlebaugh; Nancy, m. to George Rink; Phebe, m. to Milton Carney. Of these, Frederick, Jacob and William settled in Cherry Hill township, and Hugh, Daniel and Joseph in Green township. Findley Cameron's children were: Daniel, d., m. to Nancy Stephens; Findley, d., m. to Annie Clark; William, d., m. to Elizabeth George; Abraham, d., m. to Ann Stephens; Jennie, m. to William Bracken; Mary, d.; Elizabeth, m. to John Bracken; Phebe, m. to William Stephens.

FREDERICK CAMERON.—Our subject is a son of Hugh Cameron, jun., (the second one of the name resident of the county), was born in the county in 1822, and married Elizabeth Grow. Their issue is: Sarah J., d.; Jennie, d.; Lowry, m. to Emma Moorhead; Albert, m. to Kate M. Hare; Mary E., m. to Zachariah Paul; Amos, d.; Mattie A.; Laura Belle. He settled on the present farm on clay pike, near Yellow creek, in 1848, and now owns and manages about one thousand acres in Cherry Hill township. The homestead was first settled by Nathaniel Cravan, date unknown. Our subject served one term as county commissioner, and is an extensive farmer and stock grower; also interested in the lumber business, having a saw mill. William Cameron lives on lands of Frederick, and his children are: Lloyd, m. to Jennie Williams; Jas. E., d.; Mira F., and Nancy.

GEORGE RAY.—Our subject is a son of John Ray and Mary Moon, who came from Ireland and settled on the "Manor" about 1816, and lived on the homestead till the death of John, in 1865. Their children were: Matthew, b. in Ireland, m. to Jane McCunn, native of Ireland; Jane; James, m. to Margaret Elwood; Thomas, d., m. to Hannah Reese, d., native of Wales; Robert R. (the babe when emigrated), m. to Agnes Dick; John, m. to Mary Ann Dick; George, m. to Ann Lydick; Mary, m. to Jesse Saltsgiver; Elizabeth, m. to John R. Kinter; William, d., m. to Ellen Myers. William was justice of the peace in Rayne township one term. John settled in Tennessee, and all the others in this county. Our subject settled first in Rayne township, and then near the old homestead. His children were: Mary, m. to James McCoy; Isaac, John C., James, Margaret, Jane, Samuel, Ann E., Tillie, Emma, Mattie, and George.

WILLIAM D. RAY is a son of Robert R. Ray, of Rayne township, and was born in the county in 1850, m. to Mary C. Myers, and in 1876, started a store at a point on the "clay pike" known as "Lapsley tavern," and in the spring of 1880, removed to "Misner Mills," in Pine township. He is an industrious business man and a good citizen. His children are: Aggie C.; Carrie, d., and Mary Blanche.

SAMUEL RALSTON.—The family to which our subject belongs, first settled in this country, about Philadelpha, and in the pioneer days, in Westmoreland county. David, the father of our subject, settled there, and first married a Miss O'Harra, d., by whom he had two children: Sarah, d., m. to George Graham, d., of Westmoreland county, Pa.; and Jane, d., m. to Richard Flemming, of Butler county, Pa. He then married Elizabeth Lewis, d., and the issue of this marriage was: Robert, b. 1810, m. to Jane Loughrey, of Westmoreland county, Pa.; Samuel, b. 1812, m. to Nancy McFarland; William, d., m. to Mrs. Ann Duke nee McFarland; Mary, d., m. to James Martin; Eliza, d., m. to Robert Flemming; David, m. to Jane Dodson; Rebecca, d.; John, m. to Catharine Myers—all these with their consorts, settled in Indiana county. David Ralston, sr., moved to this county, in 1821, and located five miles north of Indiana township, on the farm now owned by Robert, his son. He was a school teacher in early days, and is said to have been a good one; was blind about seven years before his death, and died at the age of eighty-two, and his wife Elizabeth, at seventy-seven years of age. Of his brothers, we gather the following notes:

These were Robert, John, Wliam and Samuel. John settled in Mercer county, Pa., and b lt a large mill on Slippery Rock creek; William was drownedn the Youghiogheny river, while swimming it to reach his fanly, in the vicinity of the present town of McKeesport. Our suject settled on the present farm, in 1850. It is on the pike, fie miles east of Indiana, and the property first settled by Wm. McSweeny, who built and kept a hotel at this point for many ears. The building was erected about 1830, and for many yeas was well patronized by drovers and wagoners. The Kittanning war trail passes nearly the entire length of the farm, and upon it, horse shoes were found, half a dozen fastened together of peculiar make, and evidently dropped by early traders if nt by the Indians. Other relics of the days of the "red man have been found. Our subject was married to Nancy McFarland, of Armstrong county a daughter of Wm. McFarland, native of Ireland, who deposited his first vote in this county, for Washington, for president—was one of first jurors drawn in Indiana county. He settled in this county, near the village of Newport, (now deserted,) and was a resident of this countyfor many years, but removed to Armstrong county, where helied at the age of one hundred and five years, and his wife ninety-six. Mrs. Ralston is the youngest daughter, and the only one resident of the county. When he settled at Newport there was no house on the path from there to the Stewart farm, near the present Reed Station, on branch railroad. David Ralston, sr., and Wm. McFarland both, were in the war of 1812. The children of our subject are: Eliza Jane; Margaret Ann, m. to Christopher Knee; Nancy Stewart, d.; McFarland, d.; Isabella; Mary Catharine, m. to Adolphus Kesler; Martha Matilda, m. to C. B. Tibbetts; Sam'l M., m. to Mary Barr; James Stewart; and Ella Manett. All of these living, are residents of the county.

William J. Hadden.—Our subject is a son of Garvin Hadden, and grandson of William Hadden, b. in this county, in 1788, near Cherry run, in Centre township, and died in 1872, in Cherry Hill township. The oldest of the name in the county, was Bartholomew, the father of William, who came from Ireland, and settled in this county before 1788, at same time as Garvin Adams. William married Jane Adams, and their issue were: Bartholomew, d.; Nancy, m. to David Martin; Garvin, m. to Sarah Martin; Catharine, m. to James McCunn; and William, jr., m. to Mary McKesson. Garvin and William both, settled in the county. Garvin's children were: William J., our subject, m. to Nancy Stephens; John, m. to Jennie Johnston, and settled in Illinois; Garvin, jr.; Jane; Belle; George; and Ellsworth. Our subject located on the old Martin farm at his marriage, in 1868. His children are: John; Sallie A.; Ira Clark; Wesley Stephens; Thomas, and two unmarried. His wife Nancy, is a daughter of Giles Stephens.

James M. Campbell.—Our subject is a son of John Campbell and wife, Flora Morrow, of Westmoreland county, who came from Franklin county in 1803. Their children were: James M., our sudject, b. in 1801, m. to Sarah B. Hamilton; Annie, m. to Samuel Fair, d.; Martha, d.; Isabella, m. to Samuel Patterson. Mark died in the state of Indiana, and Mr. Patterson and wife settled in same state. The others settled in this county, Martha living with James M. until her death. Our subject came to the county in 1843 and settled in Burrell township, and in 1847 came to White township and in 1865 removed to present homestead on "Kattanning trail," settled by —— Ferguson about 1803. Upon this tract a log hotel was erected in 1805 or 6. This was 20x33 feet with "lean to" on one side. Samuel Reed kept the hotel and had a smith shop. Drovers used to drive early and late to reach this point, which was on an old state road, located nearly on the line of the Kittanning trail. There were two or three cabins on the tract prior to Reed's settlement in 1805. A storm in the winter of 1879–80 unroofed the old tavern, which is still standing. In early days it was a good hunting ground, part of which was called "plum thicket," and there were evidences of an Indian battle on the ground. The orchard on this farm was planted in 1805–6 and a part of it is still bearing. The tavern was noted for the fights that occurred at it. In dilapidation it has since been occupied by a family who used the "lean to" for a stable, and the principal rooms for dwelling. Mrs. Campbell is a daughter of Robert A. Hamilton, tanner. The children of our subject were: Finetta J., a teacher; Sarah Florinda; John H., and Annie Laura.

The Askin Family.—Joseph and Thomas Askin emigrated from Ireland and settled in Cherry Hill township about 1805, on farm now owned by T. Askin jr. Thomas never married, and worked in brick yard in Philadelphia until he paid for the farm as well as assisting others of his friends to migrate. Joseph, we believe, returned to Ireland for his wife, Lavina Pigot, bringing her to the farm. A third brother, James Askin, emigrated about 1833, bringing with him his grandson, Thomas, and his own daughter, Nancy. He was married in Ireland, but his wife died there. His son, George Askin, had preceded him, emigrating in 1820. His son Joseph and wife, parents of Thomas, afterwards came, in 1848. These were all settlers in the township. The children of Joseph Askin, sr., were: Thomas, William and Joseph, d. in Ireland; Nancy, m. to Robert Dunwiddie, sr., d.; Eliza, b. in 1809, m. to Thomas Askin, jr.; and Lavina, d. The children of James who came to this country were: George, Joseph, jr., and Nancy; his son James being yet in Ireland, if alive. His son Joseph, jr., married Eleanor Huston, and their children were: Thomas, jr., m. to Eliza Askin, daughter of Joseph, sr., as above noted; Nancy, m. to James Wilson, settled in county; Sarah, m. to John Askin; Eleanor J., d., and Mary. Thomas, jr., and his wife Eliza are now in possession of the old Askin homestead, and their only living child, Maria, is m. to John D. Mrtin; the other daughter, Eleanor, is dead. All of the old stock are now dead. Thomas Askin, sr., built a saw mill on the tract in 1822, and the third one is now erected on the site.

68—I. CO.

William Murphy.—Our subject is the oldest son of John Murphy, who was born in Ireland, and married Mary Hare, also of Ireland. He emigrated in 1801 and located in Germantown, Philadelphia, and settled in this county in 1836. His children were: William, our subject, b. in Philadelphia in 1815, m. first to Sarah Frazier, d., and second to Mary Creps, b. in 1821; John, enlisted from Philadelphia in the Mexican war, and died in marine hospital at Louisville, Kentucky, on his way home; Mary Ann, d., m. to William Moore, d., parents of Mrs. Henderson, d., who was postmistress at Blairsville for about fifteen years; Eliza, m. to William Frazier, settled in county; Margaret, m. first to Robert Dunwiddie, and second to Robert Young. Our subject served three years in the 54th Pennsylvania volunteers, and in 1870 started the woolen factory on Two-lick, below Diamondville, in building erected for a foundry by Spaulding and Farren.

John S. Amond.—Our subject is a son of Frederick H. Amond and Elizabeth Lessick, both natives of Westmoreland county, who came to this county in 1850 or 1851, and settled on Yellow creek. Frederick was a wagonmaker by trade. He died in 1867, aged about sixty-six years, and his wife died in 1870, aged fifty years. Their children were: Mary E., m. to Daniel Golden, who settled in Kansas; John S., our subject, born in 1841, m. to Martha Simpson; Levi J., m. to Barbara Dick. John S. is a farmer, and Levi J. a carpenter and farmer. The former sometimes writes the news of the township for the press.

James Simpson.—Our subject settled in the county, in East Mahoning township, in 1819, and in Cherry Hill township in 1823. In 1827, he permanently located on the tract settled by McManemum about 1800. He was m. to Mary McBeth, d. He died in 1866, ninety years old. His children were: Robert, b. in 1807, m. first to Margaret McCunn, and second to Mrs. Eleanor Lapsley nee McCaffrey; Rosanna, d.; Hugh, d., m. to Mary Creps; Mary J., m. to John Simpson, of Armstrong county, Pa.; Martha, m. to John S. Amond; Esther, m. to John Gilmore. Robert, and Mrs. Amond still remain on part of the old homestead.

Jacob Darr, Esq.—Our subject is a son of John Darr and his wife, Sarah Johns, both natives of Dauphin county, Pa., who moved to this county in 1824, and settled in the house known as the "old toll house," at Indiana, on the site of the house now occupied by John Sutor, and afterwards moved to Diamond Mills, and from thence to near Brookville, Jefferson county, Pa., where Mr. D. died, in 1859. Of a large family of children, none but our subject remain in this county. They were: Jacob, our subject, m. to Elizabeth Barr, d.; Sabina, d., m. to Samuel H. Johnston, d.; George, m. to Sarah Garner, settled in Jefferson county, Pa.; Henry, died in California; Sarah, d., m. to Joseph Festbinder, settled in Jefferson county, Pa.; Joseph, m. to Margaret Burket, settled in Jefferson county, Pa.; John, d.; Ann, m. to Miles Pearce, of Jefferson county, and Robert, d. Our subject served one term as county commissioner, 1870 to 1873, during the stormy time investigating the bond robbery business. His children are: John Steele, m. to Ellen Diamond; Robert S., m. to Josie B. Young; others died young. He settled on present farm in 1876.

JOHN CAMERON.—Our subject is a son of the third Hugh Cameron in the county (for which see notes on Hugh Cameron). His children were: John, our subject, m. to Jane Wilson; Stewart, m. to Crissie Cleice, settled in Ohio; Martha, d.; Elizabeth, d.; Joel M., m. to Eliza Craig; Miles, d.; Norris, M. D., a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, second in a class of 196, and is now located at Greenville, Indiana county; Horace, and Emily. Our subject is solicitor for "Cherry Hill Township Fire Insurance Co.," and farmer. He is located on the tract settled by McManemum about 1800, and by James Simpson in 1827. The father of Mrs. C., George Wilson, served in the war of 1812. The children of our subject are: Clara D., Crissie E. and Cora May. Mr. C. is a young man yet, born in 1842, but an influential man in the township.

GEORGE WIKE.—The first of the Wike family settled in Cherry Hill township, about 1819. The oldest pioneer of the name, of whom we get notes, was Henry Wike. His children were: David, father of our subject, b in the county in 1816, m. to Sarah Coulter; George, m. to Kate Empfield; Jacob, m. to Margaret Makin; Isaac, m. to Ellen Knoll, d.; Abram, m. to Mary Bowers; William; Alexander, went west; John, d.; and Peter, d. Abram served three years in the 78th Pennsylvania volunteers. David, Jacob and Abram settled in this county. The children of David were: George, our subject, m. to Pleasant Clawson: Ellen, m. to Isaac Slippy, of company F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers; Catharine, m. to Caldwell Clawson; Mary, m. to Daniel Brickley; Rachel, m. to Warfield Stineman; and David, m. to Elizabeth Putt. Our subject served in 55th Pennsylvania volunteers, and lost a leg near Chapin's Farm, Virginia, September 29, 1864. His children are: Phebe Elvira, Sarah, David, Lucy A., Mary A., William G., and Jas. C.

MRS. MARY COY is a daughter of Abraham Dehaven, and was born in Centre towlship in 1807. Mr. Dehaven came from Northampton county, Pennsylvania, to the "forks of Yough," and married Catharine Shaffer, and moved to this county prior to 1807. He had a family of eight children, all of whom, except our subject and one sister, Mrs. John Jamison, settled in Jefferson and Clearfield counties. Our subject is the second wife and relict of John Coy, who settled in the county in 1819, and whom she married in 1834. She is now seventy-three years old, and in apparent good health. Her own children are: Caroline, m. to George Light, settled in Kansas; Abraham, d., and Jemima, m. to James Knabb, with whom she now resides.

JAMES KNABB.—Our subject is a son of David Knabb and Diana Rhodarmiel, of Berks county, Pa., who settled in this county in 1859, whose children were: James, our subject, m. to Jemima Coy; Amos, now in Colorado, m. to Sarah Altimus, d.; Hannah; Albert, m. to Mary Sebring; Sarah, Susan, John, Joseph. Mrs. K., with Hannah, Sarah and Susan, returned to Berks county. Albert, John and Joseph are in Jefferson county, Pa. James served in the late war in the first three months' service in company E, 6th Pennsylvania volunteers; Amos served ouer three years in Durell's battery; Albert served nearly three years. The children of our subject are: Ambrose; Elmira and Annie, twins; John, and Lizzie Araminta. Our subject is on the farm first settled by Jacob Schlocht in 1818, and afterwards owned by John Coy. In 1870, our subject built a sawmill on the premises on Laurel run, in the edge of Pine township, on the site of the one built by John Coy in 1841.

JOHN D. PAIGE, ESQ.—Our subject is a son of Edmund Paige, born near Dartmouth, Devonshire, England, and was married to Elizabeth Dunn, of Devonshire. They migrated to this country, in 1831, and the same year settled in Brush Valley township. Their children were: John D., our subject, b. 1818, m. to Florinda Fair; Edmund, m. to Emma Pegg, b. in England; Nicholas, m. to Elizabeth Stewart: Elizabeth; Amelia, m. to Samuel Kennedy, settled in Kansas; and Susan. Nicholas, Susan, and Elizabeth, live on the homestead near Mechanicsburg. Edmund has been a county surveyor for several years, and has served as district attorney, etc. Our subject is justice of the peace in Cherry Hill township. He settled on the present farm in 1845. It was probably first settled by Adam Boners. The Edmund Paige homestead, Brush Valley township, was warranted in the name of John Fulleton. It included the Beaver Dams, according to the survey. John Paige, the father of Edmund Paige, sr., was in his day, one of the largest farmers in Devonshire. He died over one hundred years old.

THOMAS LAPSLEY.—Our subject settled in Cherry Hill township, as early as 1801. He had two sons, George m. to Nancy Evans; and James, m. to Eleanor McCaffrey; and one daughter, Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Reese. These are all dead, except Eleanor McCaffrey, who has sinc married Robert Simpson. George had four children: Eleanr, m. to Prter Risinger: Eliza, m. to John Newman; Mary, d.m. to Robert McBeth; and Thomas, m. to Elizabeth Munshow. James, who succeeded his father, and built the Lapsley tavrn, had thirteen children: Mary, m. to Peter Keller; Elizabe, m. to Thomas Wakefield; Thomas, settled in Missouri; Catarine, m. to William Cameron; Eleanor, m. to John Robinn, d.; Sarah, m. to George Wilson; James, E., Presbyterian minister, d. in Baltimore, Md., was m. to Carrie Tarr, of Alleghey City; William, settled in Missouri; Margaret, m. James Sapson; Martha J., d., m. to William Stephens; Lucy, m. to Va Wilson, settled in Illinois; Nancy, d.: Agnes, d. Five of the aughters still remain in the county. George Wilson, husbanof Sarah, eame from Huntingdon county, and is now settledin Cherry Hill township.

WILLIAM BOUCHER.—Our subjeis the son of Henry Boucher, a native of Bucks county, Pa., oGerman descent, who was adopted and raised by Jacob Haze who moved to Centre county, Pa. Henry married Elizabet Wolf, b. in Hanover, Pa., and moved to Frankstown, and out 1806, settled in Rayne township, this county, on farm no owned by Wm. Wolf. His children were: John, b. 1803, m.) Elizabeth Darr, d., settled in this county, and in early days o "staging" drove stage from Kittanning to Ebensburg: Henryd., m. to Catharine Dodson, d.; Elizabeth, d., m. to John Walrs, d., of Blair county, Pa.; Margaret, d., m. to George Darr, d.; David, m. to Catharine Hicks; Eve, d., m. to Laurence Kdar; Andrew, d., m. to Amelia Creps; Catharine, d., m. to Samuel Myers; Jacob, d., m. to Margaret Myers, d.; William, ou subject, b. in 1822, m. to Phebe Lewis, b. in the county, 182; Susan, d. All this large family, with their consorts settledin this county, except one. John, the oldest, now twenty-seven years old, has removed to Jefferson county. Our subject setled in the town of Indiana, and for many years worked at his rade of wagon-making. He now keeps a hotel in Greenville. His children were: Anna M., m. to J. T. Mahan; Elizabeth m. to Henry Gross, of Clarion county, Pa.; Martin, m. to nie Shaffer, and settled in Jefferson county, Pa.; Olive, d., m. to Alonzo Singer; Clara, d.; and William A., m. to Sadie Hoovr.

ALEXANDER STUCHELL (or Stucal) was born on the farm now occupied by William B. Stuchll, White township, in 1821, and was a son of Jacob and Margat Stuchell nee Fairman, d. (See sketch of Wm. D. Stuchell, White township.) Alexander was in company I, 206th Pennsyl ania volunteers, about one year. He was married to Martha, aughter of John Evans, the surveyor. His children were: Florinda, m. to William A. Evans; Nancy E., m. to Samuel ugh; Evan R., m. to Adelaide Stewart; E. B.; and Mary Bla. Our subject located in Greenville, in 1847, and since has been engaged in the furniture, undertaking and cabinet business. He has used a water wheel for power, for six years, intending to introduce a fifteen foot over-shot wheel.

REV. B. SHIELDS SLOAN, Presbyterian, was born on the site of Green Oak, Armstrong county, in 1831, and was a son of William and Mary Sloan nee Thomas. The former was a native of Armstrong county and a son of Samuel Sloan. John, a son of the latter, was the father of the Sloan children who were abducted in the last Indian war, by the Indians. Our subject graduated at Glade Run Academy, in 1858, and at Washington College in 1860. He graduated from the Theological Seminary of Allegheny City, in 1864. His first location was in Rock Island, Illinois, where he was pastor of Pleasant Ridge, and Edwards churches for seven years. In January, 1872, he removed to Greenville, his present home, and has been the pastor of Harmony and Bethesda congregation. He for three years was in charge of the Mechanicsburg church. He was married in 1860, to Cynthia S. McComb, a granddaughter of Gen. McComb. His children were: Mary E., d.; James H., B. Shields, and Grace Helen. Mrs. Shields was a daughter of George and Elizabeth McComb nee Marshall. The former was a soldier in the war of 1812. George McComb's children were: Margaret T., d., m. to John Pool; James H., m. to Martha Calhoun; Nancy J., m. first to Archibald Marshall, d., and second to Peter Pence; John C., m. to Nancy P. Sloan; Eliza J., d., m. to Archibald Findley; Maria E. m. to Jacob Guyer; Martha E., m. to John Cochran; Sarah A., d., m. to Hugh Taylor; Robert N., m. to Margaret Miller; and Cynthia S., m. (see above). Robert N. was a soldier in the war of 1861.

GEORGE WAGNER was born in Cowan, Shannock township, Armstrong county, in 1850, and was a son of Daniel and Susan Wagner nee Blatchford. The former was a native of Franklin county, and of German, and the latter of Irish descent. Their children were: William Wallace; John, m. to Nancy McMillan; Lenora, m. to Jeremiah Cook; George, m. first in 1870, to Elizabeth Dorning, d., and second to Anna Rager; Johnston J., Methodist Protestant minister, m. first to Letitia Ballantine, d., and second to Miss Anderson; Narcissa J., m. to Charles Triece; Amanda; and Lorenzo, d. William W., was in company A., 11th Pennsylvania reserve corps for over three years. He was wounded, losing an arm, and a prisoner. He re-enlisted as a bass drummer in the invalid corps. Daniel located in Cookport, in 1859, and since 1873, has resided in Cowanshannock.

W. T. Garroway was born near Kittanning, Armstrong county, in 1849, and was a son of Samuel and Jane Garroway nee Gardner, natives of Scotland. Our subject was educated at Slate-lick and Worthington Academies and Westminster College, entering the latter in 1869, and remaining three years. He was the principal of the Leechburg schools in 1874 and 1875, and later of the Chartier's Station and Shearsburg schools. He located in Greenville in 1878, and has since been the principal of the schools, and precepter of the academy for two sessions. He was married in 1873 to Delilah E., daughter of Michael Hawk of New Salem. Their only child is Bertha May.

Thomas McMullen, M. D., was born on what is now the W. H. McMullen farm, Centre township, in 1826, and was a son of Alexander and Catharine M. McMullen nee McKennie. (See sketch of Dr. James McMullen, Brush Valley township.) Our subject was educated in the common schools, and in the Blairsville Academy. He read medicine with his brother, James McMullen, M. D., and graduated from the Jefferson Medical College in 1856, taking his first course in the session of 1852–3. His first location was at Bell's Mills, Black-lick township, in June, 1853, where he remained a year and a half. His next location was in Monmouth, Warren county, Illinois, and after a stay of five months, returned to Mechanicsburg, locating in 1857, in Greenville. His practice extends about ten miles from the village. He served in the state house of representatives in the sessions of 1871–'72. He was married, in 1858, to Rebecca J., daughter of Rev. Samuel Swan. Their children were: Samuel S., d.; Sarah C.; Mary, d.; Alexander, Elizabeth M., Blanch G., James Wallace, Charles Bell, Richard Bard, Jeannet Craig and Jessie P., twins.

Rev. J. Warren Smouse, German Baptist, was born in Blair county in 1848, and a son of Michael and Dora Smouse nee Loose, a daughter of William Loose, who was the first teacher in Blair county. Our subject was educated in the Blair county schools, and has been an evangelist for four years of the German Baptists or Brethren. His first residence in the county was at Smicksburg, where he was married to Molly J. Smith. In a short time he removed to Greenville, his present home. His children were: Dora E., and Edgar Monroe. He has a bible printed in 1622.

George Shellito was born in Franklin county in 1819, and was a son of John and Beverly Shellito nee Henchey. The former was of Irish, and the latter of German descent. John was the son of John Shellito, a Revolutionary soldier. Our subject came to the county in 1851, and worked at the blacksmith trade at the stone house in Pine township. In about two years later he removed to Greenville, using what is now his shop for his residence. He was married, in 1843, to Elizabeth Johnston. The children were: Mary, d.; Thomas, William, John, Austin, Elizabeth, and Alice.

Thomas C. Mardis was born in what is now Buffington township, in 1852, and was a son of Jacob and Eliza Mardis nee Clark. The former was a member of company G, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year. His children were: Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Dresser; Sarah J., d.; Caroline, d., m. to Henry Bracken; Winfield S., d.; Thomas C., m. to Ella Bowen; Sedena, d.; John S.; Elmer E.; and Annetta B., d, Our subject is a dentist, having been in this vocation for several years. He located in Greenville in 1872.

John P. Kennedy was born in Cherry Hill township in 1853, and was a son of Samuel and Amelia Kennedy nee Paige. He came to Greenville in 1878, and purchased the D. R. Hare carpenter, furniture and undertaking establishment. He was married in 1876, to Hannah E. McKesson, their only child being Edmund Afton. Our subject has been orderly sergeant of company H, 10th Pennsylvania militia since June, 1876.

Robert Mitchell, Jr., was born in Indiana, in 1826, and was a son of Dr. Robert and Jane Mitchell nee Clark, who were married in 1824. Dr. Mitchell was a native of Ohio county, West Virginia. He studied medicine with Dr. McGehan, of West Alexander, Washington county, Pa., and graduated from Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, during the times of Dr. Rush. His first location was in Indiana. His anti-slavery and philanthropic career, is portrayed in other articles. He was a member of the legislature for six years, and associate judge for several years. He died in 1864, at the age of seventy-six. His wife is over seventy-five years of age, and resides at the county seat. Their children were: Mary Ann, d.; Robert and Matthew, d., twins, the former m. to Margaret Burnham; Isabella, m. to Simeon Mitchell; John, d.; James, m. to Louisa Thompson; Anna Mary; Jane, portrait painter; and William. John was a graduate of Oberlin College, Ohio, and was a principal of the Indiana Academy, for several sessions. He went to Kansas, and participated in all the early troubles of that state. He was one of the party of seventeen, captured by the notorious Fred. Emery, and taken to Lecompton, where they were rescued by Gen. James Lane. He was one of the party of four who recaptured Dr. Dory, confined in the St. Joseph, Missouri jail, for aiding in the escape of slaves. He is buried in Walthena cemetery, Doniphan county, Kansas. Our subject's only child is Flora Jane.

James Furguson was born in Erie county, Pa., in 1800, and was a son of William Furguson. He had charge of the Indiana jail, from 1826 to 1841, and was a court crier for many years. He died in 1850. He was married in 1825, to Eliza Williams Stiles, who is living, in her seventy-third year. Their children were: Lavinia, m. first to Charles Hart, d., and second to F. C. Weaver, d., a justice of the peace for three terms; William, m. to Mrs. Sarah A. Myers; Elizabeth, m. to James L. Whitman; Ann Maria, d., m. first to Richard McNiel, d., second to John Clark, d., and third to Dr. A. S. McClure; E. C., m. to Jane E. Myers, d.; Julia, d.; Isabella, m. to E. K. Wright; and Mary Ella, m. to B. F. Ray. William was in company F. 6th U. S. cavalry, for three years, and was twice a prisoner, escaping both times. Mrs. Lavinia Weaver's children were: by her first husband, Wm. F., d.; Mary E.; John C.; Laura Bell; and Emma A.; and by her second husband, Harry S., and Jeanette. William was a wagon and coach maker, for twenty-nine years. His children were: Margaret May, Ellen Agnes, Charles, and Emma Dell. E. C. Ferguson's children were: Mitildy, d.; William C.; and Earnest Benton. The children of J. C. Weaver, a son of F. C. Weaver were: Albert and Iola.

S. W. McCollam was born in Butler county in 1851, and was a son of Silas M. and Sarah A. McCollam nee Leonard. The former resided in Indiana for ten years prior to his death, in 1878, at the age of sixty. His widow is residing in the county seat. Our subject learned his trade as a moulder in Indiana. He was married, in 1873, to Maggie L. Young, of Indiana. Their children were: Maud, d.; John H., and Flora Estella.

Mrs. Adaline Crisswell was born in Butler county in 1843, and was a daughter of William and Hannah Hutchinson nee Sumney. The former died in 1878, at the age of seventy-seven; his wife in 1845. His second wife was Elizabeth Lindsey. William was the son of James Cornelius Hutchinson, one of the early settlers of what are now Wheatfield townships. Our subject was married, in 1858, to Sherman M. Criswell, son of Alexander and Sarah Criswell nee Kelly. He was the third sergeant of company B, 103d Pennsylvania volunteers, and was in Florence prison from April 20, to November 10, 1864, when he died, at the age of twenty-nine. The children were: Clarissa Elvira, m. to J. A. Rettew, and Malvina Viola.

J. S. Rodkey was born in Williamsburg, Blair county, in 1822, and was a son of Jacob and Anna Rodkey nee Higgins. The former came to the county in 1837, and purchased sixteen hundred acres of land in what is now Cherry Hill township. He died in 1859, at the age of sixty-two. Our subject was married in 1850 to Martha Ann Clapper, born in 1832, in Blair county. Their children were: William N., m. to Anna Tarr; Mary Lucinda; Asbury Worth, d.; Luella V., d.; Thomas Barnhart, Emma Alice, Silas Elmer, Olive E., Milton S., and Josiah M.

H. C. Sickenberger was born in Blair county, in 1843, and was a son of Henry and Mary Ann Sickenberger nee Newman, who removed to the county in 1846, and located on the tract now occupied by our subject. Their children were: Sebastian, m. to Elizabeth Fetterman, d., Peter, m. to Maria Piper; H. C., m. to Catharine Putt; F. M., m. to Mary Altman;

Mary Ann, m. to Andrew Shank; E. L., m. to C. W. Tuck; John, m. to Laura Weir; and J. N. H. C.'s children were: William H., Lottie A., Elenora, Birdie and Millie, twins.

BENJAMIN LONG was born on the farm now owned by Jacob Dick, Cherry Hill township, in 1830, and was a son of William and Jane Long nee Pitman. (See sketch of Christopher Long, sen.) Our subject was married to Susan Burnham, d. Benjamin's children were: Joan, m. to Norman Tuck; Nettie, Cardie, and Ellsworth.

Fanning Mills and Threshing Machines.—He began the manufacture of threshing machines in 1858 with Charles Burnham, and continued for five years. Until 1873, he conducted the business. At this time H. C. Sickenberger became the junior member of the firm, and the making of fanning mills was added. In 1876, they manufactured 140 fanning mills, and in 1878, they made eight single and double strap threshing machines. They have produced ten threshing machines in one season. The "Keystone fanning mill," invented and manufactured by them, is well and favorably known in this section.

MICHAEL SICKENBERGER was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1824, and was a son of Michael and Mary Ann Sickenberger nee Miller, both of whom died in Germany. Our subject served in the Bavarian army from 1846 to 1852, and participated in the revolution of 1848 and 1849. He was married in 1852 to Augusta Rentz, and in the same year migrated to Diamondville. He worked at shoemaking for ten years, and then farmed till 1877. In the latter year he engaged in merchandising in Diamondville, and also entertains travelers. His children were: Sophia, d.; Anna; Charlotte; Margaret, m. to Henry Laudermilch; and Clara.

LUTHER MYER was born in New Jersey in 1811, and was a son of Jacob and Martha Myer nee Fassett. He was married, in 1848, to Margaret Lovelace. Their children were: Rachel, d.; Clinton, d.; Ambrose H., medical student, m. to Ida Moore, and George L. Mr. Myer has resided in Diamondville since April, 1878, and is the proprietor of the saw mill, grist mill, a store-house, &c.

SAMUEL L. DAVIS was born in Huntingdon county, in 1813, and was the son of Rev. James Davis, a Baptist minister, and Elizabeth Grady. The latter was of Irish descent, and died in 1825, about fifty years of age. The former was a native of Wales. He served in the closing years of the Revolutionary war. He died in 1823, at the age of sixty-seven. Our subject came to the vicinity of Diamondville in 1835. He was married in 1836 to Catharine, daughter of Francis Chapman, an old settler of what is now the Greenville neighborhood. His children were: Ella Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Howe; Francis, m. to Margaret Kirkland; Sarah J., m. first to Orren Clark, killed in the war of 1861, and second to Harrison Howe; Mary Catharine, m. to Joseph Howe, John Henderson and Lucy Ann, twins, the latter m. to Rev. R. H. Singer, a Christian minister; James William, and Joseph B. Francis was in the war of 1861, serving in company F, 55th Pennsylvania volunteers, and being wounded. Our subject has been a deacon in the Christian church for three years. J. H. D. Davis, a brother of Samuel L., was born in Huntingdon county in 1817. He came to the county in 1838, and to the Diamond in 1843. He was married in 1845 to Clarissa H. Couch. His children were: Samuel C., d.; Benjamin, d.; Jasper, d.; Noble; Sarah Bell; Laura J., d.; Henry Butler, d.; and Clara, d.

REV. JOSEPH HOLSOPPLE was born near Scalp Level, Somerset county, in 1835, and was a son of Isaac and Christina Holsopple nee Hoffman. The latter died in 1878, at the age of seventy-four. The former is living, at the age of seventy-nine, near Scalp Level. He was the son of Henry and Susannah Holsopple. The former removed from York county about 1810 to Greenbrier county, Virginia. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. His widow, in 1816, removed to Somerset county. Our subject removed to Indiana county in 1862, locating on a place made from the Fry and Burkeypyle farms, of this township. He was married in 1860 to Catharine Lehman, daughter of Christian Lehman, a bishop in the German Baptist Church in Cambria county. His children were: Christina, William W., Franklin F., Enoch, d., and John d., twins; Ira Calvin and Harry Alvin, twins; Caroline Elizabeth, Oliver Joseph, and Jacob Egbert. Our subject was educated in an old log schoolhouse, and has taught twenty-six terms of school. He has been preaching since June, 1866. His charge, in connection with his associate ministers, David Ober, Levi Fry, Daniel Brallier, and J. W. Smouse, includes congregations at Manor Church, and Schoolhouse No. 2, Cherry Hill township; Bumble Bee Hollow Schoolhouse, Rayne township; Purchase Line, Green township, and Belsano Church, Cambria county.

JAMES W. HOWEARTH.—Our subject is a son of John Howearth, who was born in England, April 28, 1799; emigrated to this country, and married Elizabeth Kuhns, of this county, b. in 1812. They settled in Cherry Hill township in 1837, at a point on Two-lick creek known as Howearth's Mills. Mr. H. died July 18, 1853. Their children were: James W., our subject, born in 1835, m. to Sarah A. Barnett, b. in 1847; John, b. in 1838, m. to Caroline Barnett; Jacob, b. in 1841, lost an arm in a threshing machine when a boy; Mary E., b. in 1845, m. to William Barnett; and Robert, was hit with a stone while at school, in 1862, and died November 22, 1862, a day or two after the injury. Our subject served in company B, 40th Pa. vols., 11th reserves, in the late war, and was wounded at Fredericksburg, Virginia, December 13, 1862. John served in the 55th Pennsylvania volunteers, and was wounded in an engagement near Drury's Bluff, Virginia. The children of our subject are: Eliza E., Margaret A., Mary C., Elmira H., Estella O., Flora May, and Sarah A. The sawmill of our subject was built in 1866, on the site of the one built by Samuel Howe. The Barnett family are descendants of David Barnett, b. in 1811, and d. in 1852, and his wife Eliza Croft, b. in 1817, and who came from Bedford county, Pa.

J. W. DAVIS.—Our subject is a son of Samuel L. Davis, of Diamondville, and was born in the county in 1849. He is married to Eveline Harold, born in the county in 1852. Mr. D. is a blacksmith, and has a shop near J. W. Howearth's sawmill, on Two-lick creek.

MRS. DORCAS HOUK nee MCELHOSE.—Our subject is a daughter of John McElhose, of Rayne township, and was married to Mr. Houk, by whom she had one child, John, now residing with her at the mill property, owned jointly. This mill was built by Joseph Widdowson, and bought by the present owners in 1877. It was the place of settlement of the Widdowson's about 1820. The mill is now run by steam power, having a forty-horse power engine, two runs of burrs, and a capacity of one hundred bushels per day.

REV. J. R. BAIRD.—Our subject is of Scotch descent, a native of Canada, born in 1828, in the township of Lanark, Canada West. He was married first to Louisa Clements, d., of English descent, and second to Eunice Scott, of New York state, daughter of Rev. James Scott, a Baptist minister. His children by his first wife were: Eliza Ann, b. in 1853, m. to Henry H. Matthews, of Ashtabula county, Ohio, a soldier in the late war; Robert, b. in 1855, is in Canada; Silas J., b. in 1858, a miller at Brady's Bend, Armstrong county, Pa.; and Louisa, d. The mother and child last named are in Canada. Our subject was ordained a minister in the Wesleyan Methodist Church at Wayland, New York, in May, 1864; was pastor in Tioga county, Pennsylvania, in 1863–'64; in Steuben county, N. Y., 1865; and after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, took out his naturalization papers. His next move was to Cataraugus county, N. Y.; thence to Venango county, Pa.; thence to Western Reserve, Ohio, and for five years preached in Ohio, while a resident of Jamestown, Mercer county, Pa.; thence he removed to Trumbull county, and preached on Greene Center; thence to Templeton station, Armstrong county, Pa., and settled in this county in 1878. He is now a resident at Houk's Mill, has ceased to itinerate, and is now a local elder, working at his trade as miller, and preaching as occasion requires for his brethren within reach of his home.

J. H. CHAPMAN.—Our subject is a grandson of Francis Chapman, born in county Antrim, Ireland, 1771, who migrated to this country a young man, and married Jennie Drummond, born in Scotland, 1773, and who migrated when eighteen years old. She was a daughter of Lord Drummond, of Drummond Castle. They were early settlers in the township. He died August 21st, 1845, and his wife died September 2, 1845. John, the only son, was married to Sarah Garee. He settled in Cherry Hill, about 1836. His children were: Joseph H., our subject, b. in 1840, m. to Mary Patterson; James, married to Annie Mitchell; Mary, m. to Prussia McComish: Sarah, m. to D. P. Bell; Elizabeth, m. to David Byers; and Margaret, m. to Henry Spicher. The children of our subject are: Lottie, John, Sarah M., and Lizzie J. Our subject served in the late war, in 177th Pennsylvania volunteers; is now owner of a saw mill on Yellow creek, on the site of the one built many years ago by a Mr. Loyster. Its capacity is 1,200 feet of boards per day.

BUFFINGTON TOWNSHIP

Was separated from Pine township, in 1867, and was named in honor of Judge Jos. Buffington.

The first settlers were, Joseph McCartney, on the place now occupied by Benson Dill; Michael Campbell, where William Wachol now resides; John McPherson; John Stewart, where John G. Stewart resides; Charles Stewart, on the present property of Joseph Baird; Thomas Bracken; William Clark, who lived not far from David Tombs; the Dills, Hugh Cameron, Glassford, McFeaters, Misner, Strong, and others.

Campbell, McPherson, and the Stewarts, had been soldiers in the army of Lord Cornwallis, in the Revolutionary war. They were natives of Scotland, and long after the cessation of hostilities, wended their way to what is now Buffiington township.

DILLTOWN

was laid out in 1850, and was at first called Franklin. It received the name of Dilltown, from the pioneers, as Matthew Dill laid it out.

The William Stephens saw mill was erected in 1840, Jacob Gamble being the millwright. His grist mill was built in 1843, by Mr. Gamble.

Black Lick furnace was built in 1845, by David Stewart, of Cambria county, and has not been in operation for several years.

STUMPF'S MILLS

have been known for years as the Keller Mills. The grist mill was built by Christian Keller, jr., in 1838, on Laurel run, a tributary of Yellow creek, and at the corner of four townships as now divided, viz: Pine, Buffington, Brush Valley and Cherry Hill. Mr. Keller built the saw mill prior to building of the grist mill, date not known, and sawed out the lumber for the latter. He owned and managed the property till his death, since which the heirs in 1879 sold it to the present owner. The capacity of the grist mill in good stage of water is about thirty bushels of wheat per day.

Mr. John R. Stumpf, the present proprietor of Stumpf's Mills, is a son of Jacob Stumpf, of Rayne township, who was born in Westmoreland county, in 1809, came to this county about 1820, married Elizabeth Row, d., and settled here. The issue of this marriage were: Belinda C., d.; Andrew J., m. to Martha J. Stuchel; Maria, d., m. to Reuben Stahl; Clarissa, m. to Thomas McQuown, settled in Jefferson county; John R., our subject, m. to Emily C Carney; Annie, d., Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Barrett, of company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers; Hannah J.; Agnes, d.; William P., m. first to Zora Sabens, d., and second to Susan Kuntz. Our subject served in late war in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers; Andrew J. in 135th Pennsylvania volunteers, nine months' service; Samuel Barrett served in company A, 61st Pennsylvania volunteers, and Thomas McQuown a short time in 74th Pennsylvania volunteers. The children of our subject are: Hulda J., Craig E., Violet M., Willis C., d., and Homer F.

Joseph McCartney was born near Chambersburg, Franklin county, in 1780, and was a son of Joseph and Sarah McCartney nee Galbraith. The former was a surveyor and school teacher and was a native of Ireland. He settled on the tract of which the Benson Dill farm is a part, some time previous to the Revolution, and was driven away by the Indians. He did not return till about the closing year of that struggle. He and his neighbors erected a blockhouse on this place, its situation being near the site of the old residence. He made the first survey of Armagh for the Grahams, was among the early magistrates, held the office of county treasurer one term, &c. His children were: Jeannet, d., m. to Nicholas Chapman, d.; Thomas, d., m. to Elizabeth Ross, d.; Margaret, d., m. to Matthew Dill, d.; Joseph, d., m. in 1814, to Jane Trimble, d.; John, d., m. to Sarah Bryan, d.; Catharine, d., m. to Samuel Stephens, d.; John, d., m. to James Galbraith, d.; Martha, d., m. to Richard Dill, d.; Rachel, d., m. to Alexander Galbraith, d. Jeannet used to watch at the portholes of the blockhouse, and ran bullets for the men while fighting the Indians. Thomas was the first sheriff of the county and served one tern. The first five of the children were born in Franklin county. Thomas McCartney, an uncle of our subject, accompanied the family to what is now Buffington township. Joseph and Jane McCartney's children were: Margaret; George, d.; Samuel, d.; Martha, m. to Joseph Bryan, d.; Mary J., d.; Joseph, d., U. P. minister, graduate of Jefferson College in the class of 1858, m. to Maria Frasier; Sarah; and Nancy T., m. to Charles T. Allison, d. Margaret has a Bible which was printed in Dublin, Ireland, in 1722.

Major James Stewart was born on the place now occupied by John Stewart, in 1796, and was a son of John and Margaret Stewart nee McFarland. The pioneer was a native of Scotland, and came to what is now Indiana county, (in company with his brother Charles, a soldier in Lord Cornwallis' army,) sometime after the close of the Revolution. He served in the Indian wars, being wounded severely in the breast, and made a settlement at an early date, on the tract where our subscriber was born. He died in 1844, at the age of ninety-two—his wife in 1796. John Stewart's children were: Mary, d., m. to William Wilson, d.; James, d. in 1879, m. first to Mary Graham, d., and second to Elizabeth Galbraith, d. James Stewart held the office of captain, major, &c., in the militia, over forty years. His children were: John, m. to Sarah Grove; and James, m. to Elizabeth J. Cole. The warrant of the John Stewart place was dated February 13th, 1797, and the patent, March 28th, 1799. The tract was called "cornfield." There are some mounds on this farm, which the old settlers pointed out as Indian graves.

Samuel Stephens, the father of William S. Stephens, was a native of Kentucky, where his father, Benjamin Stephens, a Revolutionary soldier had settled, about the time of his birth. Samuel located on the present site of Mechanicsburg, about 1800, and nine of his children were born on this tract. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. He died in the state of Indiana, at the age of seventy-two. He was thrice married—his first wife (the mother of William S.) was Miriam Pitman, a native of New Jersey, whom he married in what is now Indiana county; his second wife was Catharine McCartney, and the third was Fannie Thompson. His children were: Rebecca, d., m. to John Graham, d.; Nancy, m. to Jacob Stevens; Samuel S., m. to Rebecca Elkins; Sarah, m. to Evan Griffith; John, d., m. to Eliza Williams, d.; Benjamin, m. to Elizabeth Ginter; Abendigo, d., m. to Rebecca Elder, d.; William, m., first to Mary Mattern, d., and second to Sarah Ann Skiles; Joseph, m. to Mary Stephens; Sampson, d.; Miriam, m. to George Matteson; Thomas, d.; Nicholas, d.; Martha, d., m. to Samuel Wilson; Estep, m.; Jane, m. to William Wilson; two children died in infancy; David, Jonathan, Jethro, and six children names not ascertained. William S. Stephen's children were: Samuel Shadrach, d., m. to Mary Myers, d.; Jacob M. d.; George Miles, m. to Catharine McFarland; William Asbury, m. to Isabella McFarland; Gilbert L. d.; Mary J.; Cynthia Ellen; Miriam Catharine; James Estep; Marlin Bingham; John Harris; Olive Francis; and Anna, d. Gibert L., George Miles and Wm. Asbury, were in the war of 1861. The William Stephens' saw mill was ereected in 1839—the grist mill some years prior.

John Graham was born on the farm now occupied by him in 1835, and was a son of William and Mary Graham nee McFeaters. The former was a son of John and Ann Graham nee Henry. John Graham, the pioneer, was an early settler of the township, and made the first improvement on the tract occupied by our subject. His children were: James, d.; Samuel, d., m. to Mary Marshall, d.; John, d. m. to Rebecca Stephens, d.; Jane, d., m. to William Duncan, d.; Ann, m. to John Duncan, d.; Mary, d., m. to Major James Stewart, d.; Margaret, d., m. to John Lemon, d.; William, b. in 1805, d. in 1853, m. to Mary McFeaters, d. in 1871, in her sixty-third year; and Sarah, m. to Samuel Duncan, d. Wm. Graham's children were: William, d., m. to Jane Duncan, d.; James, m. to Zilla Lyda John, m. to Ann Davis; Andrew, d.; Samuel, m. to Sarah Blade; Jane, d., m. to Wm. H. Robertson; Hannah, d.; Robert, m. to Jemima Empfield. William was in company I, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers about fifteen months, and was killed at the Wilderness. James was in company I, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers nearly three years; he was a prisoner for eight weeks at Belle Island. John was in company K, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers nearly three years; he was a prisoner for thirty-four days at Belle Island. Robert was in the 2d battalion of Pennsylvania six months' volunteers. Our subject's children were: Harry H., Thomas D., Allen S., Elbert S., and Mabel P.

James Benson Graham was born on the farm now occupied by James Altimus, in 1847, and was a son of Samuel and Elizabeth Graham nee Brown. Samuel was a son of John and Rebecca Graham nee Stephens. The latter's children were: Samuel, m. to Elizabeth Brown; James, d., m. first to Nancy Gibson, d., and second to Oma Lyda, d.; John, d.; Joseph, d.; Benjamin, d.; Ann, d., m. first to Robert Woodside, d., and second to John Saddler, d.; Rebecca, m. to Mark McFeaters; Miriam, m. to Hugh Cameron; and Jane, m. to James Dick, d. while a member of company E, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers. James was a soldier in the war of 1861. Samuel's children were: Mary Magdalene; Rebecca, m. to William Sides; Amos L., m. to Marinda Dick; James Benson, m. to Lizzie J. Gibson; Susan A., m. to J. T. Griffith; and Watson. Amos L. was in company E, 67th Pennsylvania volunteers for twenty-seven months. He was wounded twice and was a prisoner at Belle Island and Libby for twenty-seven days. James Benson was in company I, 206th Pennsylvania volunteers about one year.

JOHN CALDWELL was born in Half-moon valley, in 1784, migrated to Indiana county in 1800 and settled in Brush Valley township. In 1807, he married Jane Repine. They reared a family of eleven children: Charlotte, d., b. 1809; Rebecca, b. March 20th, 1811; James, d., b. march 4th, 1813; Jane, b. April 22d, 1815; Margaret, d., b. July 26th, 1817; William, b. July 27th, 1820; Sarah, b. 1824; Elizabeth, d.; Mary A., John R. and Joseph L. They moved to Buffington township in 1834, remained a few years and then returned to Brush Valley township, where they spent the remainder of their days. He deceased in 1856, and his wife in 1877, at the age of 94 years. William Caldwell, a son of the above named John Caldwell, d., was born in Indiana county, July 27th, 1820. He married Sarah Clark, March 16th, 1842, daughter of George Clark, d. They settled in Buffington township, on the farm where they are now living. Their children were: James K.; George C., d.; Emily C., d.; Pauline, d.; and Gilbert L. His son James K. served six months in the war of 1861.

FLETCHER BRACKEN, son of Thomas H. and Elizabeth Bracken, was born in Indiana county December 28, 1835. He married Sedena, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Clark, March 23d, 1858. They settled in Buffington township, on farm where he is now living. His wife died October, 1878. Their only child was Laura E., married to Albert Young.

JAMES MAHON was born in 1773 in the county of Antrim, Ireland. He married Elizabeth Herron, of Ireland, in 1792 or 3. They migrated to America, settled in Westmoreland county in 1793 or 4, and remained until 1807. They then moved to Indiana, Pa., where he built the first jail in the county. They remained in town one year and in 1808 removed to West Wheatfield township, where they passed the remainder of their days. His wife died in 1846, aged seventy-four years, and he died in 1856. He was a stone mason by trade and followed that as his principal trade. They reared a family of ten children, viz: Margaret, d.; David, d.; Mary, d.; Robert, d.; Herron, d.; Jane, d.; Samuel; John, d.; Elizabeth, d.; and Sarah, d. Samuel Mahon, son of James Mahon, was born in Indiana, May 12th, 1807. He is a brick layer and stone mason and worked at that trade for twenty-five years. Of late years he has been turning his attention to farming. In 1834, he married Sarah Blaire, of Westmoreland county. They settled in West Wheatfield township, remained a few years, moved to Brush Valley township, and in 1864 they removed to the farm in Buffington township, where they reared a family of five children, three sons and two daughters. Two of his sons, James and Alexander B., served in the 211th Pennsylvania volunteers.

JAMES ALTIMUS, son of Nicholas Altimus, was born December 27th, 1832. He married in 1853, Mary E. Darney, daughter of Benjamin Darney. They lived on the home farm with his father until in 1857, when they moved on the farm where they are now living, in Buffington township. They have a family of six children, five sons and one daughter.

MATTHEW DILL was born in what is now Buffington township; October 17th, 1785. His father, Matthew Dill, was born in Centre county, Pa. His grandfather, Matthew Dill, was a colonel in the war of 1776. His father settled in Indiana county, Pa., sometime prior to 1784, where he remained until deceased. Our subject was a wheel-wright by trade, and his make of spinning wheels can still be found in use in the neighborhood with his stamp "M. D." on them. He, in 1810, married Mary McCartney, born Nov. 13th, 1784. They settled on the land now known as the "old Dill farm," in Buffington township, where they remained until he deceased, March 25th 1847. His wife lived with their son James, until her death, June 28th, 1871. They reared two children: George, b. 1819, m. to Elizabeth Conrad, Jan. 16th, 1840, and reared a family of eight children, four sons and four daughters; and James C., b. June 22d, 1825, m. to Rebecca Conrad, b. 1830, daughter of Samuel and Catharine Conrad. Their children were: one son and four daughters. He has followed farming as his principal vocation. He filled the office of county auditor one term, and justice of the peace two terms. At present, they are living in Dilltown.

DAVID ALTIMUS, JR., a son of Nicholas and Mary Altimus, was born in Indiana county, April 19th, 1831. He married in 1856, Susan Dick, born May 19th 1834, daughter of Daniel and Susan Dick, and settled in the same year, on the farm where they are now living, in Buffington township. They have a family of eight children, five sons and three daughters.

JOHN DUNCAN was born in Dauphin county, Pa., in 1790, and migrated to Indiana county, prior to the war of 1812, and served several months in the war. He followed farming and wagoning as his vocation. He wagoned for fourteen years, between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, and farmed during the remainder of his days. He was married in 1817, to Miss Ann Graham, born in 1794, daughter of John and Ann Graham. They settled in Buffington township, and lived in same township until he deceased, in 1857. His wife is in Marshall county, Illinois, and is eighty-six years of age. Their children were: William J.; James J.; John J.; Joseph J.; Jane, d.; Margaret; and David, d.

JAMES J. DUNCAN, son of John and Ann Duncan, was born March 27th, 1823, in Indiana county. He married Eliza Bracken, in 1844, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Bracken. They settled near the Black Lick furnace, and remained until 1868, when they moved on the farm in Buffington township, where he is now living. His wife deceased, May 8th, 1878. They reared a family of eight children, three sons and five daughters. His son John, served nearly three years in the 13th Pennsylvania volunteers, in the war of 1861—came home at the close of the war, went west, and deceased in 1868.

DAVID GRAW, son of Jacob and Mary Graw, was born in Franklin county, Pa., Dec. 8th, 1838, came with his father to Indiana county, in 1840—married in 1859 Ann M. Hamilton, daughter of William and Jane Hamilton. They have a family of seven children, four sons and three daughters.

JAMES DOWNEY was born in Ireland in 1812. He migrated to America with his parents, Michael and Mary Downey nee O'Neil, in 1819. They settled in Lancaster county where they remained until in 1821. They moved to what is now Pine township, Indiana county. He followed farming as his vocation until in 1848, he moved to Johnstown. His wife died in 1821, while in Lancaster county. He died in 1854, in Johnstown. Our subject married in 1837, Eliza McKinzie, of Cambria county, who was born in 1819. They settled at "Plane No. 4," on the old Portage railroad." At that time he was filling the position of principal engineer of that Plane. In 1839, he met with the misfortune of losing one of his legs. The engine which he was running passed over it just above the ancle, and caused amputation above the knee. In 1840, the moved to Johnstown, Pa., where he was employed as a machinist, and worked in the shops until in 1852, he gave up the position. In 1863, he removed to his farm in Buffington township. In 1874, he moved to Strongstown, engaged in the hotel and mercantile business and remained until in 1879, he moved back to his farm. He has a saw mill on his place, and employs a part of his time in sawing lumber. They reared a family of seven children, two sons and five daughters. Two of the daughters are deceased.

WILLIAM DUNCAN was born in Dauphin county, in 1796. He migrated to Indiana county, with his father, William Duncan, 1810 or 1811, and located on the farm now owned by James W. Duncan, in Buffington township. He married Jane Graham in 1817 or 1818. She was a daughter of John and Ann Graham. They settled in Buffington township, where they remained until death took them away. His wife deceased in 1864, and he in June, 1874. His occupation was that of a farmer. They reared a family of six children: Elizabeth, d.; Jno. W.; William, d.; Anna; James W.; Samuel, d.

JOHN W. DUNCAN, a son of William and Jane Duncan, was born in Indiana county, May 9th, 1831, on the farm now owned by James W. Duncan. He married on the 7th of March, 1843, for his first wife, Sarah Weagley, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Weagley. They settled near Duncan mills, in the edge of Cambria county, Pa. They remained three years, and in 1846, removed to Indiana county, where they are now living, near the same mills. He is the owner of the grist and saw mill, known as the "Red mills," located a few rods from the Indiana county line, in Cambria county, on the old state road. They reared a family of seven children, three sons and four daughters. His wife deceased in 1856. He married March 30, 1858, for his second wife, Miriam Griffith, daughter of Evan and Sarah Griffith. Their children were six sons and three daughters. He owns a farm in Buffington township, and has made farming, lumbering and milling, his occupation.

Andrew Campbell was born in Brush Valley township, Indiana county, August 20th, 1808. His father, William Campbell, was born in 1773, migrated to Indiana county, in about 1802 or 3, and made a settlement in Brush Valley township. He married Martha McCormick in 1803 or 4. She bore him ten children, viz: John; William, d.; Andrew; Elizabeth; Aster; Margaret, d.; Isabella; Martha; Jane; and Ellen. He deceased in 1865, and his wife in 1877. Our subject married in 1830, Phebe Carney, born 1813, daughter of John and Anna Carney. They settled in Brush Valley township, remained until 1843 and then moved on farm where they are now living, in Buffington township. Their children were five sons and five daughters; two sons and one daughter are deceased. His son John W. died in the late war. His occupation has been farming and lumbering. He has a saw mill on his land and prepares all kinds of lumber.

Samuel Graham, son of John Graham, sr., d., was born in 1794, migrated to Indiana county with his parents and settled in 1804 on land now owned by Samuel Graham, in Buffington township. He married Mary Marshall in 1820, and settled on farm now owned by their son James Graham, where they remained until he deceased, in 1860, and his wife in 1871. Their union resulted in four children: Mary A., m. to James Grove; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Shultz; Sarah J., m. to Joseph Duncan; and James Graham, born August 4th, 1825, married to Susan Mock, daughter of John Mock. They settled on the old home farm. Their children are three sons.

Jacob Grow was born in Franklin county in 1792. He married in 1820, Mary Miller, of Franklin county. In 1840, they migrated to Indiana county and settled in what is now Pine township. He was a carpenter and wagon maker by trade. He served eighteen months as a volunteer in the war of 1812. He deceased December 18th, 1865. His wife is still living at the age of seventy-eight years. They reared a family of ten children: James, Barbara A., Elizabeth, Sarah J., John R., William R., d., Jemima, Eleanor, Martha and David. John R. served as a volunteer in the Mexican war.

Abraham S. Coy, son of Lewis Coy, was born in Indiana county, August 27th, 1839. In 1861, he enlisted in company F of the 55th Pennsylvania volunteers and was mustered into service October 9th, at Camp Curtin, Harrisburg. He served two years and then re-enlisted for three years more or during the war, and remained in the service until the close of the war and was mustered out August 25th, 1865. He was taken prisoner in the spring of 1862, kept until October 12th of the same year, and was released on parole. He married in June, 1866, Elizabeth Stephens, daughter of Alexander Stephens, of Pine township. Their issue is two children, daughters. They are now living at the "Spruce Grove" woolen and saw mills, which he is now operating.

George Strong, a son of Michael Strong, was born in Indiaa county, August 1st, 1829, on farm where he is now living. He married in 1858, Harriet Mentch, daughter of Alexander and Mary Mentch. They settled on the Strong homestead, Buffington township. He has followed farming and lumbering as his vocation. They have one child, Amos W.

William Wachob, son of James Wachob, d., was born in Indiana county, Pa., March 15, 1815. His father was born in Ireland in 1781, migrated to America in 1795, with his parents, settled in Huntingdon county, Pa., remained a few years, removed to Indiana county, where he resided until in 1819, he moved to Jefferson county, Pa., where he died in 1853. Our subject went with his parents to Jefferson county. He married, in 1842, Nancy McFeaters, daughter of William and Margaret McFeaters, b. in 1823. They settled in Jefferson county, remained until 1856, and then moved to Mechanicsburg, Indiana county, where they lived one year. In 1857, they moved on the farm in Buffington township, where they are now living. They reared a family of five children, four sons and one daughter.

Robert M. Barkley was born in Baltimore in 1783. He married Elizabeth Marlin, of Cumberland county, Pa., in 1813. They migrated to Indiana, Pa., in the same year. He was a shoemaker by trade. In 1825, they moved to Laurel Hill, on the "stone pike," near the Cambria line. In 1832, he leased the farm now known as the John Stewart place, in Buffington township, and engaged in farming. In 1843, he purchased, made improvements, and moved on the farm now owned by his sons, J. and R. M. Barkley, where he remained until he died, in November, 1858. His wife died in 1863. They reared a family of seven children: Joshua, d.; Sarah; Agnes, d.; Joseph; Robert M.; Mary, d.; and Hugh A., d.

Nicholas Altimus, son of Adam and Eve Altimus, was born in Indiana county, Pa., in 1800. He married, in 1821, Mary Wolf, b. in 1802, daughter of John Wolf. They settled in Brush Valley township, where they remained, living on the same farm, until deceased. The farm and mill is now owned by C. R. Weaver. The first mill on the farm was built by his father, and the present one by him. He followed farming, lumbering and milling as his vocation. February 23, 1872, while riding a horse on the ice, it fell with him, his head striking on the ice, caused his death in a few hours. His wife is still living. They reared a family of thirteen children: Martha, d.; Margaret; Adam; Elizabeth; Susan, d.; David; James; Ebeline; Sarah A., d.; Mary A., d.; Charlotte L.; William W., and Matthias S.

Michael Strong, a son of James Strong, was born in York county, Pa., October 4, 1794. He migrated with his father's family to Indiana county, Pa., in 1810, and located in Buffington township. He entered the land in Buffington township now owned by his sons George and James, and walked to Harrisburg to get the patent for it in 1817. He made improvement on his land by clearing away the forest trees and erecting a log house. In 1819, he married Hannah Reed, born in 1797, daughter of Samuel Reed. They moved in the house he had erected and lived on the same farm until he died, September 8, 1862. They reared a family of ten children: Catharine, Christian, Moses, Samuel, Michael, George Saunder, Henry, Sarah and James.